49 killed at New Zealand mosques

Country known for peace stunned by one of 'darkest days'

By Nick Perry and Mark Baker
The Associated Press

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand — At least 49 people were shot to death at two mosques during midday prayers Friday — most if not all of them gunned down by an immigrant-hating white supremacist who apparently used a helmet-mounted camera to broadcast live video of the slaughter on Facebook.

One man was arrested and charged with murder, and two other armed suspects were taken into custody while police tried to determine what role, if any, they played in the cold-blooded attack that stunned New Zealand, a country so peaceful that police officers rarely carry guns.

It was by far the deadliest shooting in modern New Zealand history.

"It is clear that this can now only be described as a terrorist attack," Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern said, noting that many of the victims could be migrants or refugees.

She pronounced it "one of New Zealand's darkest days."

The gunman who carried out at least one of the mosque attacks posted a jumbled, 74-page manifesto on social media under the name Brenton Tarrant, identifying himself as a 28-year-old Australian and white supremacist who was out to avenge attacks in Europe perpetrated by Muslims.

Repaired landmark bull statue returns home after Hurricane Michael PANAMA CITY BEACH — People usually drive down to Panama City Beach for a short trip before heading back home to Alabama, but Panhandle celebrity Big Gus recently did the opposite.

The famous 20,000-pound bull statue, usually found in the Angelo's Steak Pit parking lot, returned home Friday from repairs at Chad's Paint and Body Shop in Ashford, Alabama, for damage from Hurricane Michael.

The Beach landmark was knocked over and broken by the Category 4 October hurricane. Angelo's employees cheered when Gus arrived back at the restaurant and held signs saying "Welcome home Gus!" Motorists honked in approval while driving by and tourists and locals on social media hailed his return as a sign of restored normalcy and recovery.

Tyndall to share emergency funds in budget plan

Hurlburt Field also is slated to get more than $100 million for construction

WASHINGTON — The rebuilding of Tyndall Air Force Base is in line for a share of $9.2 billion in emergency funding included in the Department of Defense budget proposal for the upcoming fiscal year designated in part for "unspecified military construction to ... rebuild facilities damaged by Hurricanes Florence and Michael."

Budget documents don't indicate exactly how much of that funding might go to Tyndall, which was all but destroyed when Hurricane Michael made landfall in the eastern Panhandle on Oct. 10 and scored a direct hit on the installation. But in a recent hearing in front of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction and Veterans Affairs, John Henderson — assistant Air Force secretary for installations, environment and energy — put a nearly $5 billion price tag on rebuilding the base.

"Our initial estimate is that there is about a $4.7 billion cost to go back and rebuild what is one of our key fighter bases," Henderson told the subcommittee. Also, Henderson told lawmakers, the Air Force already is redirecting operations and maintenance funding in the current fiscal year's budget to recovery efforts at Tyndall.

International court personnel barred from US

By Matthew Lee
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The United States will revoke or deny visas to International Criminal Court personnel seeking to investigate alleged war crimes and other abuses committed by U.S. forces in Afghanistan or elsewhere, and may do the same with those who seek action against Israel, Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said Friday.

Pompeo, acting on a threat delivered in September by U.S. national security adviser John Bolton, framed the action as necessary to prevent the international body from infringing on U.S. sovereignty by prosecuting American forces or allies for torture or other war crimes.

“We are determined to protect the American and allied military and civilian personnel from living in fear of unjust prosecution for actions taken to defend our great nation,” Pompeo said.

U.S. officials have long regarded the Netherlands-based ICC with hostility, arguing that American courts are capable of handling any allegations against U.S. forces and questioning the motives of an international court.

The ICC and its supporters, including human rights groups that denounced Pompeo’s announcement, argue that it is needed to prosecute cases when a country fails to do so or does an insufficient job of it.

The visa restrictions would apply to any ICC employee who takes or has taken action

Secretary of State Mike Pompeo speaks during a news conference Friday at the State Department in Washington. [CAROLYN KASTER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

“to request or further such an investigation” into allegations against U.S. forces and their allies in Afghanistan that include forced disappearances and torture.

Pompeo said the restrictions “may also be used to deter ICC efforts to pursue allied personnel, including Israelis, without the allies’ consent,” he said.

The Hague-based court, the first global tribunal for war crimes, said it would continue to operate “undeterred” by the U.S. action.

The ICC prosecutor has a pending request to look into possible war crimes in Afghanistan that may involve Americans. The Palestinians have also asked the court to bring cases against Israel.

Speaking directly to ICC employees, Pompeo said: “If you are responsible for the proposed ICC investigation of U.S. personnel in connection with the situation in Afghanistan, you should not assume that you still have or will get a visa or will be permitted to enter the United States.”

That comment suggested that action may have already been taken against the ICC prosecutor who asked last year to formally open an investigation into allegations of war crimes committed by Afghan national security forces, Taliban and Haqqani network militants, as well as U.S. forces and intelligence officials in Afghanistan since May 2003.

The prosecution’s request says there is information that members of the U.S. military and intelligence agencies “committed acts of torture, cruel treatment, outrages upon personal dignity, rape and sexual violence against conflict-related detainees in Afghanistan and other locations, principally in the 2003-2004 period.”

The United States has never been a member of the ICC. The Clinton administration in 2000 signed the Rome Statute that created the ICC but had reservations about the scope of the court’s jurisdiction and never submitted it for ratification to the Senate, where there was broad bipartisan opposition to what lawmakers saw as a threat to U.S. sovereignty.

When President George W. Bush took office in 2001, his administration promoted and passed the American Service Members Protection Act, which sought to immunize U.S. troops from potential prosecution by the ICC. In 2002, Bolton, then a State Department official, traveled to New York to ceremonially “unsign” the Rome Statute at the United Nations.

This past September, Bolton said the ICC was a direct threat to U.S. national security interests and he threatened its personnel with both visa revocations and financial sanctions should it try to move against Americans. Pompeo said Friday that more measures may come.

The ICC said in a statement it was established by a treaty supported by 123 countries and that it prosecutes cases only when those countries failed to do so or did not do so “genuinely.” Afghanistan is a signatory.

“The court is an independent and impartial judicial institution crucial for ensuring accountability for the gravest crimes under international law,” the statement said. “The ICC, as a court of law, will continue to do its independent work, undeterred, in accordance with its mandate and the overarching principle of the rule of law.”

Supporters of the court slammed Pompeo’s announcement.

Human Rights Watch called it “a thuggish attempt to penalize investigators” at the ICC.

“The Trump administration is trying an end run around accountability,” it said. “Taking action against those who work for the ICC sends a clear message to torturers and murderers alike: Their crimes may continue unchecked.”

Amnesty International described the move as “the latest attack on international justice and international institutions by an administration hellbent on rolling back human rights protections.”

The American Civil Liberties Union, which represents three people before the ICC who say they were tortured in Afghanistan, called the decision “misguided and dangerous” and “an unprecedented attempt to skirt international accountability for well-documented war crimes that haunt our clients to this day.”

“It reeks of the very totalitarian practices that are characteristic of the worst human rights abusers, and is a blatant effort to intimidate and retaliate against judges, prosecutors, and advocates seeking justice for victims of serious human rights abuses,” it said.

Twenty people are confirmed dead in the school building that collapsed Wednesday, and most of them are children, an official said Friday. Man gets prison in hit-and-run death of Detroit officer

A man has been sentenced to up to 15 years in prison for the hit-and-run killing of a Detroit police officer.

Nineteen-year-old Jonathan Cole of Belleville was sentenced Friday. The Wayne County prosecutor’s office said he pleaded no contest last month to charges of reckless driving causing death and failure to stop at the scene of a crash that caused death.

Cole was accused of hitting 30-year-old Fadi Shukur as the officer helped disperse a crowd after a party in August. Shukur later died of his injuries. Cole was initially charged with second-degree murder, but a judge dismissed that charge in September after saying the evidence didn’t support it.

Ex-tenant pleads not guilty in blaze that killed firefighter

A former apartment building tenant accused of setting a blaze that killed a firefighter has pleaded not guilty to murder, arson and other charges.

Worcester firefighter Christopher Roy was a single father who is survived by his 9-year-old daughter.

He died Dec. 9 after he became trapped on the second floor of the six-unit building. He was rescued by fellow firefighters and died at the hospital of smoke inhalation.

Worcester District Attorney Joseph Early Jr. announced Friday that 21-year-old Momoh Kamara had been indicted on charges including second-degree murder and arson.

DOVER, DEL.

Prosecutors drop most cases in fatal prison riot

Delaware prosecutors dismissed all but three remaining cases Friday against inmate defendants charged in a deadly riot at the state’s maximum-security prison.

The decision came after earlier trials of seven inmates resulted in only one — who admitted planning the uprising knowing it could become violent — convicted of murder in guard Steven Floyd’s death at James T. Vaughn Correctional Center.

Prosecutors have opted to dismiss cases against six of the 18 inmates originally charged in the riot and will move forward only against defendants Roman Shankaras, Lawrence Michaels and Alejandro Rodriguez-Ortiz.

May tries to save Brexit deal after vote to delay UK exit

British Prime Minister Theresa May worked Friday to pull off an against-the-odds rescue for her European Union divorce deal, after Parliament voted to postpone Brexit to avert a chaotic U.K. departure in two weeks.

May planned to spend the next few days trying to persuade opponents in her Conservative Party and its parliamentary allies to support the withdrawal agreement, which Parliament has resoundingly defeated twice. That left Britain facing a disruptive “no-deal” exit from the bloc on March 29, when a two-year countdown to the country’s departure runs out.

Czech police: Ring smuggling migrants from Asia broken up

Czech police say they have broken up an international ring smuggling migrants from southeast Asia to western Europe.

They say 12 members of the group, nationals of unspecified former Soviet republics, were arrested during raids in the Czech Republic. Other raids in the case were conducted in Slovakia, Poland and Ukraine this week.

Police say the group was organizing transports of migrants who originated in Vietnam, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka, mostly to Germany, France and Britain.

The migrants had to pay up to $22,000 for the whole trip.

signals Bay County is coming back “one step at a time,” said Butchikas.

Amy Carinhas, who has worked at Angelo’s for several years, called Gus’ return “exciting” and said she did not expect the 20,000-pound statue to fall during the hurricane. “We’re happy he’s back and better than ever. He’s a symbol,” Carinhas said. “Every time at Angelo’s when people walked up to the desk, they don’t talk about anything else but Gus. Everybody has to come get pictures with him. He’s our mascot.”

Big Gus’ return shows the area can recover from anything, Carinhas said.

Jennifer Phipps celebrated Big Gus coming home while standing in the parking lot. Employees got excited when he pulled in, said Phipps, who works as a hostess.

“He looks good,” Phipps said.

Big Gus was scheduled to return Thursday but the trip was delayed because of high winds.

“Everyone out there, keep chipping away, get their Big Gus back,” said Butchikas.

and reduction in services Bay Medical has endured in recent months since the October disaster.

“We are excited about the future of Bay Medical and this opportunity to rebuild health care services to benefit all the residents of Bay County,” said Tom VanOsdol, president and CEO of Ascension Florida.

In Florida, Ascension operates Sacred Heart Health System based in Pensacola and St. Vincent’s HealthCare based in Jacksonville. Before Thursday’s deal, Bay Medical was a joint venture between Ascension and Arden, with Arden acting as the hospital’s operator. Arden announced in December that it would sell its controlling interest in the hospital to Ascension because of uncertainty following the hurricane.

Terms of the sale between Arden and Ascension were undisclosed.

“I’d like to say what an honor it is for us to complete this transaction and to be a source of hope and growth in the community,” VanOsdol said.

The Oct. 10 hurricane knocked out all but Bay Medical’s emergency room services. In January, the hospital reopened 75 beds, eight operating rooms and five cardiac catheterization labs. Still, in February the hospital laid off more than 600 employees because of the extensive damage and time needed to rebuild. Bay Medical also announced last month that it wouldn’t resume baby delivery services.

As part of the plan, the 144 additional beds will be opened in the hospital’s south tower. Improvements to the hospital will include upgrades to information technology and the creation of new space for physician offices and laboratory, imaging and pharmacy services.

Also, the hospital campus will undergo a major cleanup, requiring demolition of some of its buildings. Afterward, there will be more space for parking and potential future growth.

year at Tyndall, media reports indicate outgoing Air Force Secretary Heather Wilson believes the Air Force will need an infusion of $1 billion in the current fiscal year for recovery efforts at the base or the service will have to start deferring projects at other bases. At the recent House subcommittee hearing, Rep. Debbie Wasserman Schultz, who serves South Florida in Congress, urged Henderson to have the Air Force submit an emergency allocations proposal for the current fiscal year.

In other developments in the proposed defense budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, the Air Force’s proposed spending plan includes more than $100 million for construction projects at Hurlburt

The facilities listed in the proposed military construction budget for Hurlburt are an aircraft maintenance and weapons hangar listed at $72.9 million, a maintenance training facility listed at $18.9 million and a combined squadron operations facility listed at $16.5 million.

WASHINGTON SEC charges Volkswagen, ex-CEO with fraud

U.S. regulators charged Volkswagen and former CEO Martin Winterkorn with defrauding investors during its massive diesel emissions scandal.

The charges from the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission come two years after the German automaker settled with the U.S. over criminal and civil charges, as the company tries to distance itself from one of its darkest eras.

The SEC said that between April 2014 and May 2015, Volkswagen issued more than $13 billion in bonds and asset-backed securities in U.S. markets when senior executives knew that more than 500,000 vehicles in the country grossly exceeded legal vehicle emissions limits.

BEIJING Premier denies China tells companies to spy

China's No. 2 leader denied that Beijing tells its tech companies to spy abroad and promised Friday to treat foreign and domestic competitors equally in an effort to defuse tensions with Washington and Europe.

Premier Li Keqiang's rejection of spying accusations at a news conference was the Communist government's highest-level effort yet to put Western security concerns to rest. They threaten Chinese access to lucrative markets for telecom and other technology.

WASHINGTON Job openings outnumber unemployed by 1 million

U.S. employers posted nearly 7.6 million open jobs in January, near a record high set in November, evidence that businesses are still hungry for workers despite signs the economy has slowed.

The Labor Department said Friday that hiring also rose and the number of people quitting their jobs picked up. Quits are a sign of a healthy economy, because people typically leave a job for another, usually higher-paying, one.

In this March 4 photo, Jamie Adams shows some intact beer bottles recovered from the shipwreck of the SS Oregon at his St. James Brewery in Holbrook, N.Y. Adams created an ale called Deep Ascent using the yeast from the bottles recovered from the Liverpool-to-New York luxury liner that sank off Fire Island in 1886. [SETH WENIG/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Taste of history

Yeast from bottles in 1886 shipwreck makes new brew

By Mary Esch
The Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y. — The most distinguishing feature of Jamie Adams' new ale isn't its hoppy bite but its compelling backstory — brewed from yeast in bottles of beer that went down on a doomed steamship and languished on the ocean floor for 131 years.

Some who lined up to sample a swig of the new Deep Ascent ale at a craft beer festival last weekend say it provided a refreshing taste of another era.

"Just the concept that they could bring a beer bottle up from the bottom of the ocean ... then be able to extract the yeast from it, that kind of chemistry is fascinating," says beer enthusiast Peter Bowe of Schenectady. "And the beer is absolutely fantastic."

Adams, a former Wall Street trader who opened Saint James Brewery in Long Island nearly two decades ago, says his beer grew out of his love of scuba diving. It was brewed with yeast extracted from bottles he and fellow divers salvaged from the SS Oregon, a luxury liner from Liverpool to New York that collided with a schooner and sank off Fire Island in 1886.

It lies 135 feet deep in an underwater cemetery known to local divers as Wreck Valley.

"It's a wonderful, wonderful shipwreck to dive," says Adams, 44, "I came up with the idea to make some beer if we came up with some intact bottles."

He enlisted a team of divers in 2015 to search for bottles but didn't hit pay dirt until 2017, after storms shifted sands and made the first-class dining room accessible. They dug down 15 feet in the sea bed to gain access, and then another six feet inside the ship to find a half-dozen bottles upside-down, corks intact. Later dives found 20 more bottles.

Adams cultured the yeast in test tubes with the help of a microbiologist friend and then spent the next two years brewing test batches to get just the right taste.

Along with hops and malted barley, yeast is a key factor in producing a beer's flavor and character. During fermentation, the microorganism eats sugar and creates alcohol as well as chemical compounds called esters that impart distinct fruity and floral flavors.

Adams believes the yeast from the SS Oregon is descended from the lineage used by Bass Brewers in England to make a brand called King's Ale, which is no longer produced.

His said his new beer, which has a slightly fruity taste with a hoppy finish, is a "replication of what would have been served on that ship in 1886. We want people to have a small taste of what life was like as a passenger on this ship."

It may seem like a lot of effort to come up with a new beer, but shipwrecks have long held a special fascination for craft brewers eager to recreate a taste of history. In 1991, a British brewer used yeast salvaged from a barge that sank in 1825 in the English Channel to create Original Flag Porter. Last summer, Australian craft brewer James Squire released The Wreck-Preservation Ale, crafted using yeast from the merchant ship Sydney Cove, which ran aground in Tasmania in 1797.

For some craft beer enthusiasts, the real appeal of shipwreck ale is the tale more than the taste.

"I spoke to the brewer and he said he was the one who did the dive," said Calvin MacDowell, sampling Adams' ale at the New York Craft Brewers Festival in Albany. "Knowing that it's from such a long time ago and getting a taste of history, it's exciting."

FAA's close ties to Boeing under scrutiny after 2 deadly crashes

By Tom Krisher,
David Koenig and
Dee-Ann Durbin
The Associated Press

For more than six decades, the Federal Aviation Administration has relied on employees of airplane manufacturers to do government-required safety inspections as planes are being designed or assembled.

But critics say the system, dubbed the "designee program," is too cozy as company employees do work for an agency charged with keeping the skies safe while being paid by an industry that the FAA is regulating.

"There is a potential conflict of interest," said Todd Curtis, a former Boeing Co. safety engineer and creator of airsafe.com, a website that focuses on airline safety. "They (the FAA) don't have the money to do all of the oversight. It's a question of being practical."

The FAA's oversight duties are coming under greater scrutiny after deadly crashes involving Boeing 737 Max jets operated by airlines in Ethiopia and Indonesia, killing a total of 346 people. The U.S. was nearly alone in allowing the planes to keep flying until it relented on Wednesday after getting satellite evidence showing the crashes may be linked.

The FAA concedes that it doesn't have resources to keep up with a growing aviation industry, and experts say it lacks the personnel to inspect every component, especially those made in other countries. But the agency says the designee program's results speak for themselves. The U.S. has the safest skies in the world. Until April of last year, U.S. passenger airlines had not had a fatality since 2009, while carrying several billion passengers.

But safety experts say it's time to look into the agency's relationship with Boeing, based in Chicago. The FAA's ties to the company were revealed when Boeing and the agency released similar messages shortly after the Indonesian airliner crashed in October and again this week, when the FAA announced that Boeing would upgrade the Max's flight-control software, said Mary Schiavo, a former Transportation Department inspector general.

With the messages, the FAA "revealed that they were just parroting what Boeing told them," she said.

Finances before, and after, the wedding

Dave Ramsey

Dear Dave,
I'm getting married this summer, and I'm on Baby Step 4 of your plan. My fiancée is getting onboard with your advice, too, and she's currently in the process of paying down her student loan debt. Would it be a good idea to go ahead, and put most of my emergency fund savings toward helping pay off her debt now?

Aaron

Dear Aaron,
You've got a generous heart, and I know you love this lady, but I wouldn't recommend being involved in paying any of her debt until after the wedding. At that point, you two are joined together as one, and the concepts of "mine" and "hers" and "his" disappear. It all becomes "ours," and you can adjust your money situation to reflect your marriage and your financial makeover as a couple.

Make sure that "we" have an emergency fund of at least $1,000 in the bank at that point. Then, if you're both in agreement on the issue, you can throw the rest of what you previously had in your emergency fund at the debt. Both of you also can pile up cash between now and the big day, so that when you're "official" you'll have even more cash on hand.

Congratulations, and may God bless your lives together!
Dave

Length of coverage?

Dear Dave,
My husband and I are 24, we're debt-free, and we're just a few weeks of saving away from having a fully-funded emergency fund. Each of us has a 401(k) plan at work, and right now we're concentrating on life insurance purchases. You always recommend term insurance, but how long should the coverage last?

Jenny

Dear Jenny,
Congratulations on being super smart with your money! It sounds like you two are starting out on the right foot.

Generally, I recommend 15- or 20-year level term policies — unless you have children. Since you didn't mention any kids, I can only assume they're not in the picture at this point. However, if you two decide to grow your family in the future, I'd advise converting those to 30-year term policies. You'll want the insurance there to protect everyone in the family, until the kids are grown and out on their own. In the years after, continued saving and wealth building will lead you to a point where you're both self-insured.

You two have done an excellent job with your finances. Keep up the good work!

Welcome change on water quality

Whether it's the severe impact red tide has had on tourism, or a sudden realization that environmental issues are crucial for Florida, a fresh breeze seems to be blowing through Tallahassee. As GateHouse Media's Zac Anderson reported this week, environmental bills that would increase water-quality regulations are gaining momentum in the Legislature.

One bill would impose fines on municipalities for sewage spills. Another would improve regulations on the spreading of biosolids, the human waste left over from municipal sewage treatment. Nutrients in sewage can fuel toxic red tide and other algal blooms.

What's interesting is that the bills are sponsored by Republicans and backed by Democrats and environmental groups.

What a difference a year makes.

Prior to last November's election, then-Gov. Rick Scott and the Republican-dominated Legislature had long been focused on cutting funding for environmental programs while minimizing regulations and government oversight of potential polluters.

The devastating impact of lingering blooms of red tide, blue-green algae and brown algae — causing massive fish kills and a choking stench along both coasts — seems to have gotten everyone's attention.

That, and a shrinking bottom line.

While Florida's economically critical tourism was up overall in 2018, the fourth quarter (which included the months following Hurricane Michael) was another story.

From October through December, Sarasota County, for example, suffered its steepest year-over-year decline in hotel occupancy for that period since the 9/11 terrorist attacks of 2001 crushed the travel industry.

The number of visitors to the county was down by almost 9 percent compared with the same time in 2017, according to tourism officials. The money visitors spent for accommodations fell 7.5 percent, a $20 million drop-off.

Red tide was largely to blame for a decline in the percentage of surveyed visitors who said they would recommend Sarasota County as a destination.

Those are scary numbers for the state's tourism-dependent economy. And they're at least partly the reason the new Republican governor, Ron DeSantis, has made water quality a top priority.

In 2017, Hurricane Irma overwhelmed sewage systems across Florida and led to discharges in 39 counties. About 30 million gallons of sewage were dumped into the Indian River Lagoon alone, according to Florida Today.

The revenue resulting from those fines, as Sierra Club lobbyist David Cullen has proposed, should be devoted to helping local governments improve their sewage-treatment infrastructure.

The bill regulating biosolids — also known as sewage sludge — would tighten the permitting process that governs their use as fertilizer on farms and their disposal by burning or dumping in landfills.

The water-quality legislation so far targets municipalities in this nutrient-pollution crackdown, rather than corporate suspects such as Big Agriculture and the phosphate industry. But it's a start — and a welcome change.

A version of this editorial first appeared in the Herald-Tribune, a News Herald sister paper with GateHouse Media.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Williams column meanders

Walter Williams needs a better copy editor. The title of his regular Sunday column on March 10 was "The Myth of Climate Change," but that topic consumed only two short sentences. The rest dealt with his interpretation of the phrase "a fragile earth" by environmentalists, so he discussed volcanic eruptions and collisions by meteors and asteroids, topics that have nothing to do with the current discussions of climate change.

I would have thought that a professor of economics could stay focused on one topic in a short column, even if the topic has nothing to do with his expertise.

Into the Quadragesima

Thematically, the early church knew 40-day periods had significance. Christ spent 40 days in the desert. Noah spent 40 days of rainfall on the ark. Elijah spent 40 days traveling to Mount Horeb. The early church decided it would train and educate potential converts for the 40-day period leading up to Easter. On Easter, those who understood what they were getting into would be baptized and welcomed as brothers and sisters into the church.

This all started before wide circulation of the letters that would become the New Testament. In some cases, churches had copies of Paul's letters before the gospel letters. Mark wrote Peter's account possibly around A.D. 40, though some put it after A.D. 70. There is consensus that John wrote his gospel letter around A.D. 90, well after Paul's letters had begun circulating. But no one had yet put them all together.

The earliest creeds, including the Old Roman Creed, which evolved into the Apostles' Creed, became chief instruments of teaching when the apostolic letters were unavailable. Each line became a point of study over the 40 days. "I believe in God, the Father Almighty" would be studied for a week. "And in Christ Jesus His only Son, our Lord" would be the next week and so on. The Old Roman Creed — which left out the descent into hell but otherwise was the basic Apostles' Creed — became a foundation of faith. By about A.D. 200, the creed was fully in the form we have today.

New Christians would study what the creed meant and rely on the oral histories spread through the church. Within about 100 years of Christ's death, the apostolic letters that would form the New Testament entered wide distribution through the Empire.

After A.D. 324, the great troubles went away, and anyone could become a Christian. In fact, many claimed to be converted just to have access to the emperor. Some, without the tests and turmoil of persecution, wanted to show their true commitment to the faith. They abandoned their urban existence, sold their possessions and lived as hermits in the wilderness — like Christ did for those 40 days. They were called "monachos," or monks.

The church itself kept that 40-day period and called it the "Quadragesima," meaning 40th. As the traditions of Christianity spread north into Germanic-speaking territories, the Quadragesima became associated with springtime, the season of study and baptism. The Germans called this season Lenz, and it evolved into Old English and Dutch as the Lenten season, or Lent.

Though many American Protestant denominations do not actively practice Lent in the way Catholics do, it is worth remembering where it comes from. The early church, before Bibles and book publishing, needed converts to know their faith and honestly commit to it. Converts needed to understand why they might be persecuted. Given the shallowness of most American Christianity these days, perhaps it is worth considering.

Christianity in America has become increasingly superficial. Liberal Christians want to steer orthodoxy toward popular culture. Every denomination that has done so has begun to rapidly decline. Others have turned Sundays into feel-good pep talks. The increased superficiality of Christianity corresponds to its decline. Perhaps churches need to go in the other direction and actually do as the early church did — train up new believers in what Christianity really means.

CAIR, BCIS hold vigil

The Council on American Islamic Relations of Florida and the Bay County Islamic Society hold a vigil Friday for the victims of massacres by a white supremacist at two mosques in Christchurch, New Zealand. The vigil was held at the temporary location of the BCIS in Panama City. CAIR-Florida regional director Hiba Rahim asked people of all faiths in attendance to not only remember the dead from Friday's attacks, but also the victims of last year's shooting at the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh and the victims of the 2015 shooting at the Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, South Carolina. Rarely seen rough-toothed dolphins being studied for unique whistles

PANAMA CITY BEACH — Before the show, there was work to be done.

As an excited audience of elementary school students filed in to the seats at Gulf World Marine Park on Wednesday to watch a performance of rarely seen rough-toothed dolphins, a team of researchers was wrapping up a scientific quest to determine if the marine mammals have their own names — specifically, unique signature whistles by which they identify themselves to others.

As the dark-skinned dolphins cavorted in a smaller pool separated by a gate from the main facility, comparative psychologist Megan Broadway donned a headset and listened to their chirps and whistles captured by a hydrophone lowered into the water and recorded on a digital recording device.

"We're trying to determine if this particular species used signature whistles," Broadway said, as research associates Blair McGuffie and Lindsey Johnson monitored the dolphins milling around in the smaller pool. "Such signature whistles have been found in bottlenose dolphins

Birthday bash to benefit Food4Kidz program

By Tony Simmons
tsimmons@pcnh.com

PANAMA CITY BEACH — When local real estate broker Karen Smith turns 60 later this month, she means to make it count for something. So she's inviting the public to come out for the party and raise funds to benefit the Food4Kidz charity.

"I thought the best way to celebrate my Big Six-0 was by bringing together our community for one cause: to raise money for our kids, and especially for storm relief," said Smith, who serves on the charity's Community

Leadership Council. "Feeding local hungry children and their families has always been the mission of Food4Kidz. Now, since Hurricane Michael, there are more displaced families than ever who have serious food needs, and Food4Kidz is here to feed anybody who needs food assistance since the storm. We accept walk-ins and don't turn away anyone."

The Birthday Bash & Pop-Up Art Show will be from 6-9:30 p.m. on March 29 at Beachy Beach Real Estate, 17500 Panama City Beach Parkway, one mile west of State 79. The goal is to raise $60,000, so the effort is using the hashtag #60for60 to spread the word on social media. Tickets are $25 per person in advance from Eventbrite.com, or $35 at the door.

A dozen local artists will showcase and sell their works under the big tent and throughout the building. Paintings, watercolors, jewelry, sculpture, photography and a few other surprises will adorn the walls, and artists will donate a portion of their sales that evening to Food4Kidz. Artists on hand will

21 pets discovered dead at home near Crestview

By Kaylin Parker and Ashleigh Wilde
 Northwest Florida Daily News

CRESTVIEW — Animal control officers assisted by law enforcement are investigating the death and possible abuse of more than 20 pets at a home just north of Crestview.

They were called to the house on Woodcliff Drive after an Okaloosa County sheriff's deputy noticed the smell and saw dead animals while checking on the welfare of a woman believed to be living there.

The deputy did not find the woman, but called the Panhandle

Animal Welfare Society for animal control assistance.

The woman's father, who had called for the welfare check, arrived at the home. He said he didn't live there, but all the mail in the house was addressed to him, according to Panhandle Animal Welfare Society animal control officer Ashley Lacey.

"We got a call out here to assist the police because they smelled and were able to see animals wrapped in blankets in the woodland, so I came out based on that," Lacey said.

Because the man operates Danny's Dog House

pet boarding facility in Niceville, PAWS officials asked for the Niceville Police Department's help to obtain a search warrant for the boarding facility. PAWS Director Dee Thompson said that animal control officers could see the animals standing in a "week's worth of feces," but were told that there wasn't enough evidence to gain a warrant.

The man told officers exactly how many animals they would find at the home in Crestview.

Nine dogs, six cats and two rabbits were found in a garbage can in various stages of decomposition. Another four dead dogs were found wrapped in blankets in the treeline.

"He said that he didn't know about (the deaths); that they were his babies," Lacey said. "He said that had he known that they were in that condition, that he would have beat the hell out of his daughter on his own."

The animals were placed in the trash in the past 48 hours, she said. The cats and rabbits had been placed in storage containers.

Lacey said she could tell where many of the animals had died because fur and other signs of decomposition in kennels at the home matched the animals found in the that are unique for each one. It does broadcast their identity because it is unique for each one."

Most dolphin signature impulses are very brief, spanning only a fraction of a second.

The lack of confirmed evidence that rough-toothed dolphins use this communication skill like other dolphin species stems in great part from the fact that so few of them are living in shore-based habitats, said Lee Ann Leonard, marketing director for Gulf World. Most are living in deep water offshore far from researchers' reach. The six rough-toothed dolphins at Gulf World all were stranding victims and constitute the only ones in North America available for research.

For their research, Broadway had Gulf World trainers briefly separate each dolphin in a smaller pool that is still connected in water with the holding area for the remainder of the group.

"That is when it is most likely they will use their signal to communicate with the group," she said.

Had the team reached success in its acoustic search for signature whistles?

"We've found the whistle for one of the dolphins," Broadway said with a smile. "It takes quite a while to do recordings have been thoroughly analyzed.

After several hours under study by the researchers, a team of Gulf World trainers came out and led the dolphins through a dazzling series of trained behaviors before the enchanted students.

"They're very social animals," said lead trainer Kelsey Fisher.

Mrs. Davelyn M. Capley, 87, of Panama City, Florida, passed away on Wednesday, March 13, 2019.

She was born Davelyn Edith Meadows in Westover, Alabama, on March 27, 1931, to David R. and Clara E. Meadows. Davelyn was the youngest of her three siblings. During her younger years, she was a majorette and the homecoming queen of Vincent High School. She was the Queen Mother of Davelyn's Darlings Red Hats, a group of fun-loving precious friends she loved dearly. Davelyn was a lady, and the queen of all our hearts.

She was married to Albert Ray Capley. After World War II, they moved to Panama City Beach, helping her parents establish the Plaza Motel and Cafe in the late 1940s.

After Ray died in 1967, Davelyn sold her partnership with the Plaza and purchased the Little Birmingham on Panama City Beach where she finally retired in the 1970s.

Davelyn loved and adored all of her large family and friends. For many years she dedicated herself to the daily care of her aged parents and aunt. Mrs. Capley was preceded in death by her parents and her husband. She also was preceded in death by a daughter, Marilyn Simons. She was blessed with the beloved companionship of Leo Baker (deceased) and Joe Romack (deceased). Mrs. Capley is survived by three daughters, Tina Rowe (Marvin), Sharlyn Capley and Tammy Hess (Stockton); and son-in-law, Jerry Simons. She loved her nine grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

JAMES EDWARD STEHLE

James Edward Stehle, 69, of Panama City Beach, died on Thursday, March 14, 2019.

Those left to cherish his memory include his wife, Nancy; his daughter, Kelly; his sister, Judy; and his many friends whose lives were made better by knowing Jim. Waiting for him in heaven are his dad, Richard; and his mom, Gertrude.

Jim loved his friends and family, but he lived to "wheel and deal" — Jim worked and thrived in the steel industry for more than 50 years.

God saw you getting tired so he put his arms around you and whispered, "Come to Me."

Jim's life will be remembered with a "celebration of life" at his home on the beach at a later date.

Skyborne Technology acquires Costin Airport

Will manufacture drones, train pilots at facility

By Tim Croft
The Port St. Joe Star

@PSJ_Star | tcroft@starfl.com

PORT ST. JOE — The developer, designer and manufacturer of manned and unmanned aviation systems that established its first United States facility last fall in Gulf County has purchased Costin Airport in Port St. Joe for an undisclosed sum.

The airport will be used by Skyborne for flight operations, manufacturing and training pilots in unmanned systems, according to a news release.

And, along the way, Skyborne Technology found a partner in Unmanned Systems Inc., a manufacturer of unmanned systems and drones which will be moving a portion of its manufacturing and training to Gulf County.

“Skyborne Technology and Unmanned Systems will help build employment in Gulf County to further develop the educational needs in high-tech manned and unmanned systems,” said Don Bintz, president of Unmanned Systems.

The airport purchase is just another step in the expansion of Skyborne, which after Hurricane Michael has become something of the “good news people for our county,” said Jim McKnight, executive director of the county Economic Development Coalition.

McKnight said that earlier in the week he had visited the Skyborne facility at the Dalkeith Industrial Park, which the company opened last September, and noted three Gulf County employees already at work building drones.

“Skyborne Technology staying the course of developing facilities and operations in both ends of the county has been a beacon of hope during our community’s response to and recovery from Hurricane Michael,” McKnight said.

There also is a strong link between Skyborne’s efforts, along with the partnership with Unmanned Systems, and educational programs in the county’s public schools and Gulf Coast State College.

Gulf District Schools has received Triumph Gulf Coast Inc. funding to establish a high school program path toward certification in operation of unmanned systems, or drones.

Officials with Skyborne have indicated their interest in being part of getting that program off the ground, seeing it as a source for training opportunities and adding to its workforce.

Gulf Coast State College, with a new technology building arising in recent years, also has focused considerable attention on training students for advanced aviation systems.

The college has become a formal educational partner of Skyborne.

“The co-location in our community of these two manufacturing leaders in the unmanned aerial vehicle arena provides an unprecedented opportunity for the citizens of Gulf County,” said John Holdnak, president of Gulf Coast State College.

“In conjunction with the related training opportunities under development in the local high schools, and underway at Gulf Coast, these companies are poised to fully develop and deploy these transformational technologies, becoming a magnet for high-tech opportunity in the region.”

Skyborne chose Gulf County as the site for its first U.S. facility for a variety of reasons.

The use of the aviation technology dovetails with the military missions in the region and political support, state and local, as well local assets, particularly plenty of water, were in place to facilitate the move for a company that has facilities in Central America and South America.

The expansion to Costin Airport has from the outset seemed a natural fit.

“We are looking forward to the upcoming airship and drone test flights at Costin Airport, as this is strategic for our customer base in Central America and the Caribbean as a one-stop shop for inspection of the technologies,” said Dr. Carlos Arzu, president of Skyborne Central America.

Skyborne is at the cutting edge of aviation systems, designing and developing manned (tethered) and unmanned technology with underwater applications.

Through a series of mergers the company was able to marry varying technologies, with the potential for integration, under one roof and process, Lawson said.

“The uniqueness of our design is that we’ve combined multiple designs,” Lawson said. “The technology is proven. It just needed to be organized into a company that can use that technology (at its potential).”

In considering the products, Lawson said, conjure to mind a mother ship in the air on a tether or extremely long line.

That mother ship, in turn, contains any number of drones which can be deployed, in the air and underwater, for a variety of applications.

One major application is agricultural assessment, and the technology also is used in assessing power grids and a host of monitoring applications.

Lawson said the company also is working on applications to create a drone which would identify and eliminate “bad drones” other companies and countries are developing.

Shorebird nesting season begins at Gulf Islands National Seashore

Special to The News Herald

GULF BREEZE — Late last week, Gulf Islands National Seashore officials discovered the first shorebird nest of the season.

Nests and chicks are so well camouflaged that they can be accidentally affected by unsuspecting beachgoers. When beach-nesting birds are forced to fly or run from their nests, their eggs and chicks are left vulnerable to the elements and to predators. While enjoying the park, visitors can help protect shorebirds by:

- Avoiding posted shorebird nesting and resting areas and using designated walkways and trails.
- Keeping pets on a leash and away from areas where birds might be nesting.
- Properly disposing of trash that can entangle birds and other wildlife and not feeding animals to keep predators away.
- Keeping food scraps away from predators such as raccoons and crows to the beaches. Observing posted speed limits and watching carefully for birds flying across or feeding along the road.

Each year, beginning in February/March and ending in late summer, the seashore provides critical habitat for several species of ground-nesting shorebirds, including least terns, snowy plovers, Wilson’s plovers and black skimmers. Adult birds and tiny chicks sometimes are struck by vehicles as they cross the road, look for food near roads or fly low across the road into the path of oncoming vehicles. To decrease the number of road kills, posted speed limits along State 399 on Santa Rosa Island will be temporarily reduced to 25 mph in the next month.

The reduced speed limit is one way the National Seashore tries to reduce speeding, including adding speed bumps and enhancing enforcement along the road. The normal use of roads will resume by September when nesting season is over.

Visitors and locals can show their support for shorebird chicks and help remind others to slow down to 25 mph by proudly displaying the Gulf Islands Chick Magnet. Visitors can pick up their free chick magnet at the Fort Pickens and Perdido Key entrance stations, Fort Pickens Discovery Center and park headquarters at the Naval Live Oaks Area.

“With the help of our community and those who enjoy the National Seashore every day, we can ensure these nesting shorebirds have the best opportunity to welcome and fledge their next generation,” Superintendent Dan Brown said.

The park’s staff will monitor beaches for nesting activity and close areas as needed.

Closed areas represent a very small percentage of the seashore, and park officials request visitors divert activities to other areas. If visitors find themselves besieged by birds, it means that you are near an unmarked nesting area or young chicks. Please leave the area by back-tracking your steps; the eggs are very small, well camouflaged and difficult to see.

FORT LAUDERDALE Man finds iguana in toilet, calls 911

A man called 911 after finding a bright green iguana swimming in his toilet.

Fort Lauderdale Battalion Chief Stephan Gollan said the man “freaked out and didn’t know what to do.”

He said firefighter Jeff Kurus put on a sterile glove, reached in and grabbed the iguana. He took it outside and released it into the wild.

Gollan said the department “is the end-all-be-all” when it comes to unique calls.

The department tweeted pictures of the iguana, adding “can you imagine lifting the toilet lid and finding this?”

MIAMI FIU honors bridge collapse victims on anniversary

Florida International University held a moment of silence Friday to mark the one-year anniversary of the collapse of a pedestrian bridge that killed six people.

School officials live-streamed the ceremony honoring the victims at 1:47 p.m. Friday. The collapse crushed cars below the bridge on Southwest Eighth Street.

The construction company that built the bridge has filed for bankruptcy. Magnum Construction Management LLC — also known as MCM — is being sued for wrongful death.

DAYTONA BEACH Dad of student who died in plane crash sues Piper

The father of a student pilot who died when his plane crashed during his commercial pilot lesson is suing Piper Aircraft.

Navy veteran Zack Capra, 25, and Federal Aviation Administration pilot examiner John S. Azma were killed April 4, 2018, when the left wing came off the Piper PA-28 they were flying west of Daytona Beach International Airport.

GateHouse Media reported that Capra was a student at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, which has since stopped flying Piper PA-28s.

Capra’s father, John Charles Capra, said in the wrongful death lawsuit that the “horror and fear of impending death for pilots of an in-flight breakup of their aircraft cannot be overstated.” He called it a “pilot’s worst nightmare come true.”

MIAMI Jury mulls fate of officer who shot at man but hit another

The fate of a police officer accused of shooting and wounding a severely autistic man’s caregiver is in the hands of a Miami jury.

North Miami police officer Jonathan Aledda is accused of attempted manslaughter. He testified this week that he thought Arnaldo Rios Soto had a gun and was holding his caregiver, Charles Kinsey, hostage.

It turned out Soto was holding a toy truck.

Aledda insisted he never heard another message on police radio that it wasn’t a gun.

ACES ON BRIDGE: BOBBY WOLFF

"For want of a nail the shoe was lost."
— Benjamin Franklin

This week's deals are all linked directly or indirectly to the use of the cue-bid in modern bidding.

In days of yore, cue-bidding the opponents' suit was typically the first step in a slam try, and the call promised a control in their suit. These days, as jump raises of partner's suit are used to pre-empt rather than to show values, the cue-bid must be subverted to promise fit and values. Hence the use of the term "unassuming cue-bid" — the call does not promise a control in the opponents' suit.

Today's auction sees North promise fit and values, and when South denies any extras, the partnership can stop in two hearts. However, even that may prove to be too high after the lead of the diamond five.

Imagine declarer ducking East's diamond 10 at trick one. He wins the diamond return with his ace and next crosses to dummy with a trump to lead a club toward his king. Whether East plays high or low, South can establish the 13th club without letting West on play for the killing shift to the spade jack.

That looks straightforward enough; can you see the defensive wrinkle that might lead to the defeat of the contract if you aren't careful? If you play the diamond four from dummy at trick one, East can figure out to play low. (His partner has either the doubleton five or his actual holding.) Now you can no longer keep West off play, and if he can find the top spade shift, it will defeat the contract.

ANSWER: When is it right to open light in third seat? Normally, with an obstructive call or a lead-directing suit, you can step out of line — either a little or a lot, depending on your temperament. For me, this hand meets neither requirement, since I don't really want clubs to be led, and such a call hardly gets in my opponents' way. So I'd pass here.

DEAR ABBY

Huband's about-face on adoptions has wife unsure of their future

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: When I first started dating my boyfriend seven years ago, I told him that I wanted to someday adopt a child. He said he would like his own children first, but adoption would be "cool."

We now have two children, 5 and 3, and I'm ready to adopt. We're financially able to support another child, and we both have great careers.

When I recently mentioned adoption to him, he said he has changed his mind and doesn't want to adopt. He says because we have our own children, he wouldn't want the adopted baby to potentially feel like the "odd one out."

Is this something to end an otherwise happy marriage over? Or should I give it one more shot and hope maybe he'll want to adopt? I have wanted to do this since I was a little girl, and it is important to me. — PRO-ADOPTION IN OHIO

DEAR PRO-ADOPTION: You and your husband may need professional mediation to reach an agreement that will work for both of you. Bringing a child who needs a loving family into your home can be managed if everyone is on the same page with it — including your biological children.

Your husband may not want the responsibility of another child because he has experienced parenthood twice and knows how much is involved in raising them, but the reason he gave doesn't strike me as valid.

That said, leaving your husband would be no guarantee that you would be in a position to adopt a child alone. There may be other options for you if you want to help children waiting for adoption — including fostering, mentoring or volunteering with the Big Brothers Big Sisters program.

HOROSCOPES BY HOLIDAY MATHIS

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Stealing attention is an act of real theft. Attention is the true value of life. Surround yourself with honest people, not robbers who will devalue your efforts by drawing attention away from you and toward them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Trust and keep working. The change is coming. Your process will go from weeks of fearful, uncertain struggles to a new era of fully informed, powerfully purposeful, smooth and meaningful days.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21) — People who ask you questions and get really interested in how you are may also have big news to share themselves — news you'll never learn until you boomerang the conversation.

CANCER (June 22-July 22) — While you know that your work matters, and that you matter, you'd like a little more in the way of daily signals around you to remind you of this. There's something wholesome you can do to get better mojo flowing through your life.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Your money is the absolute cheapest thing you can put "where your mouth is" today. Your work is worth way more than that and so is your attention and time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — The principle of inertia suggests things will maintain their current state of activity (or nonactivity) until something stronger comes along. In today's case, you'll keep buzzing along until overtaken by a profound need for sleep.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — There are the lucky few who get encouraged along life's path before they do anything of merit. Mostly though, it happens in reverse. Most must do many, many things of substance before the rest of the world finally catches on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Why be quietly ashamed or try to hide your mistakes when you can call them out, examine them and learn from them? Everyone makes them, even those regarded as the best among us.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You may have an inner child, but you also have an inner babysitter today. Maybe it's not as strict as the parental units, but it's still in charge of making sure you hit all the basics.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — The hard and dirty work is something to do yourself because it also happens to be the work that will most keep you aware, awake, strong and on-purpose.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — The day's events will remind you how your decisions affect others. You don't always want them to, but that's just how it works for someone as connected to the fiber of your community as you are.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — You'll find the amusement and levity of life. This won't be hard, because there's a sympathetic resonance in you that rings out when you're anywhere near funny people.

The truth about St. Patrick's Day

James Farrelly
University of Dayton

THE CONVERSATION — In 1997, my students and I traveled to Croagh Patrick, a mountain in County Mayo, as part of a study abroad program course on Irish literature I was teaching for the University of Dayton. I wanted my students to visit the place where, each July, thousands of pilgrims pay homage to St. Patrick, who, according to lore, fasted and prayed on the summit for 40 days.

While there, our tour guide relayed the story of how St. Patrick, as he lay on his death bed on March 17 in A.D. 461, supposedly asked those gathered around him to toast his heavenly journey with a “wee drop of whiskey” to ease their pain.

The mention of whiskey left me wondering if St. Patrick may have unintentionally influenced the way most of the world celebrates the holiday today: by drinking.

It wasn't always this way. The Festival of St. Patrick began in the 17th century as a religious and cultural commemoration of the bishop who brought Christianity to Ireland. In Ireland, there's still an important religious and cultural component to the holiday, even as it has simply become an excuse to wear green and heavily drink in the rest of the world.

The legend of St. Patrick

Because historical details about St. Patrick's life remain shrouded in speculation, scholars are often stymied in their attempts to separate fact from legend.

In his spiritual memoir, “Confessio,” St. Patrick describes how he was brought to Ireland as a slave. He eventually escaped, rejoining his family in Britain, probably Scotland. But while there, he had a recurring dream, in which the “Voice of the Irish” called to him to return to Ireland in order to baptize and minister to them. So he did.

The Irish revere the account of this dream described in the “Confessio”; they accept the simplicity and fervor of his words and feel a debt of gratitude for his unselfish commitment to their spiritual well-being.

St. Patrick's efforts to convert the Irish to Catholicism were never easy. Viewing him as a challenge to their power and authority, the high kings of Ireland and the pagan high priests, called Druids, resisted his efforts to make inroads with the population.

But through his missionary zeal, he was able to fuse Irish culture into Christianity, whether it was through the introduction of the Celtic Cross or the use of bonfires to celebrate feasts like Easter.

Again, many of these stories could amount to no more than myth. Nonetheless, centuries after his death, the Irish continue to show their gratitude for their patron saint by wearing a spray of shamrocks on March 17. They start the day with mass, followed by a daylong feast, and prayer and reflection at night.

St. Paddy's Day goes global

From 1820 to 1860, almost 2 million people left Ireland, many due to the potato famine in the 1840s and 1850s. More followed in the 20th century to reunite with relatives and escape poverty and joblessness back home.

Once settled, they found new ways to celebrate St. Patrick's Day and their Irish identity in their new homes.

Irish-Americans, especially, were quick to transform March 17 into a commercial enterprise. The mandatory “wearing of the green” in all its garishness is a far cry from the original tradition of wearing a spray of shamrocks to honor St. Patrick's death and celebrate Irish solidarity. Parades famously sprung up — especially in New York and Boston — revelry ensued and, sure enough, even the beer became green.

Children of Irish-Americans in the United States have absorbed Irish culture at a distance. Many probably know that St. Patrick is Ireland's patron saint. But they might not fully appreciate his mythic stature for kids growing up on the emerald isle.

Ask children of any age in Ireland what they know about St. Patrick, and they will regale you with stories of his magical abilities, from his power to drive the snakes out of Ireland to his use of the three leaves and one stem of the shamrock to demystify the Trinity doctrine of the Catholic Church.

They see St. Patrick as a miracle worker, and as adults, they keep the legends alive in their own ways. Some follow St. Patrick's footsteps all around Ireland — from well to hill to alter to chapel — seeking his blessing and bounty wherever their journeys take them.

Raising a glass

Of course, in America, the holy day is really a party, above all else.

This year, Americans are expected to spend US$5.61 billion celebrating, with 13 million pints of Guinness consumed. Some parts of the country plan a pre-celebration on Sept. 17 — or, as they call it, “Halfway to St. Patrick's Day.”

Where all of this leads is anyone's guess. But beginning in the 1990s, Ireland seemed to grasp the earning potential of the Americanized version. Today, March 17 remains a holy day for the natives and a holiday for tourists from around the world, with pubs raking in the euros on St. Patrick's Day.

But I've always wondered: What if St. Patrick had requested a silent prayer instead of “a wee drop of whiskey” to toast his passing? Would his celebration have stayed more sacred than profane?

GLORY SIGHTINGS

Volunteers making friends with Gators!?

Jack Stanley

I haven't been a fan of the Tennessee Vols since the Peyton Manning days, but I am once again. According to “Appalachian Magazine,” Tennessee is the Volunteer State “because of the willingness of the state's residents to volunteer for military service;” starting with their most famous volunteer, Davy Crockett, whom all Texans hold dear.

So I get a message from Matt, my area UMCOR coordinator, asking if I can put a volunteer team from Tennessee to work. Then he proceeds to give me the contact info for Jim Carey. I'm like “Jim Carey is coordinating a team to come help out down here!?” Of course it wasn't that Jim Carey, but the one I met is my Glory Sighting of the week.

After my first contact with Jim, he soon rang me telling me he's been told to coordinate through a different source. So I figured that was over.

Jump two weeks, and I get a call from Jim, saying they are in town and it appears the work they were assigned was completed. He asked, “So, do you still have anything for us?”

Did I have any work for them!? ... Funny.

They first removed Dawn's tree from her pool. They removed a destroyed building from Elaine's (a dear 88-year-old widow) backyard, cut down/cut up her trees, and helped her with insurance. The building and yard debris covered most of the front yard road access. They shared their thanks that Elaine fixed them lunch and snacks and helped them outside as she could.

Wednesday afternoon they went to Sarah's, cutting down and clearing trees that were in a power line right of way behind her property that were down and blocking her fence gate.

Lastly, they went to help dear Mary and Clara, who live in a trailer off Old Bicycle Road. This is the third team to help them, but the work isn't still done. It's one of those many sites you'd have to see from the beginning to know how much progress has been made. A good story for life there, isn't it?

On Friday, they brought a little dog that was abandoned at the shelter (which one of our folks was taking home and couldn't leave at the shelter). They called

Volunteers from Kingsport, Tennessee, including a mixture of retirees and working folks from either the Cassidy or Wheeler United Methodist Churches, cut down trees and cleared debris for several Bay County families. [CONTRIBUTED PHOTO]

Mary and Clara to check and they really liked having the dog around. Trees were down all around their house and they cut up as much as could be handled and hauled the wood out to the street. The team is standing in the photo with Mary and Clara with a much clearer yard.

Mary and Clara are devoted Gator fans. They were very appreciative and thankful for their help. Jim kidded them that God was testing them by helping Tennessee folks help folks with a Florida Gator sign in their yard!

These teams came all the way down from Kingsport, Tennessee, with a mixture of retirees and working folks from either the Cassidy or Wheeler United Methodist Churches, who had taken vacation with no real professional training on the big machines they used.

This team even helped fix up “The Ark” on Panama City Beach where they stayed. It also was beat up by the storm. Instead of complaining about its condition, they gave it a hand to make it better.

In addition, this small group from small churches in small towns donated items to the Panama City Rescue Mission, paid for all their trolley rides, and donated money to UMCOR while promising more to come.

Lastly, Jim recalled a comment from the Rev. Jon Laughlin (pastor of the destroyed Trinity UMC in Millville) that really struck home. After expressing their disappointment they couldn't do more, Pastor Jon told them, “Focus on the work you can do, not the work you can't.” They don't call them volunteers, for nothing! Those Tennesseans wear that title with honor.

When you catch a Glory Sighting, let me bring it into the light by sharing it with this column via jack@jackstanley.org, Facebook at ParkerPastor, or on the web at mypumc.org. The Rev. Jack Stanley serves as pastor of the United Methodist Church of Parker.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Florida Gators finally figured out how to avoid overtime against LSU.

Andrew Nembhard hit a 3-pointer with a second left, and Florida rallied from a 13-point deficit in the second half to upset the ninth-ranked Tigers 76-73

Friday in the Southeastern Conference Tournament quarterfinals.

Freshman Keyontae Johnson had the ball when he saw LSU forward Naz Reid sliding into position to take a charge and passed to Nembhard, who was open at the top of the key.

PANAMA CITY — Newcomer Hannah Cardon spent the start of the season recovering from a stress fracture that sidelined her almost six weeks, but that didn't stop her from claiming first place in both the pole vault and the 100-meter hurdles on Friday at the Bay County Track Championships.

"She's a competitor," Mosley girls' coach Angi Ansley said. "She likes to be out there."

Cardon also took third place in the 300-meter hurdles, but it was hardly a one-woman show for the Dolphins. The Mosley girls dominated the competition as a team on Friday to finish with 211.5 points.

Mosley's Hannah Cardon pole vaults at the Bay County Track Tournament on Friday. Her highest vault was 8 feet, 6 inches.

Meanwhile, North Bay Haven and Arnold took second and third place, respectively, to finish with 121 and 99.5 points.

Bozeman (88), Bay (68) and Rutherford (32) rounded out the team standings.

It was a much closer race on the boys' side of things where Arnold scored 217.33 points to edge out Mosley's total of 198. Bozeman (96.33) finished third followed by North Bay Haven (83), Rutherford (22) and Bay (16.33).

"Coming into this year, winning the county meet was our first big goal," Arnold coach Allen Gibson said.

Gibson credited both Mason Bennett and Bilal Mohamad for strong finishes when the two placed first and second in the 3,200-meter run shortly after finishing the 800-meter run fifth and third, respectively.

"I mean, they're seniors, and they really stepped up in that aspect," Gibson said. "You could attribute

FSU upends No. 2 Virginia 69-59

By STEVE REED
The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Florida State coach Leonard Hamilton said his team's goal this season has been to establish itself among the hierarchy of the Atlantic Coast Conference largely dominated the past several years by Duke, North Carolina and Virginia.

While that has been a challenging task for what he called his "unknown team," the 12th-ranked Seminoles took a big step toward gaining some national notoriety on Friday night with 69-59 win over No. 2 Virginia.

David Nichols scored 14 points as the Seminoles (27-6) advanced to the championship game of the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament for the first time since 2012. Phil Cofer had 11 points and 7-foot-3 center Christ Koumadje added nine points and nine rebounds for the Seminoles, who'll play the winner of No. 3 North Carolina/No. 5 Duke on Saturday night.

"Sometimes you may not get the proper respect," Hamilton said. "But one thing about respect is you have to go earn it. And hopefully this gives us a little bit more respect."

Meanwhile, the Charlotte jinx continued for the boys from Charlottesville.

The Cavaliers loss comes on the same floor where they became the first No. 1 seed in the NCAA Tournament to lose to a 16 seed in Maryland-Baltimore County last year. It's also the same court where Virginia lost a second-round game as a No. 2 seed to seventh-seeded Michigan State

GC Diamond teams face PC foes away from home

The News Herald

The Gulf Coast baseball and softball teams will be back in action Saturday, with the GC baseball team heading to Niceville and the Lady Commodores to Marianna for Panhandle Conference competition.

Gulf Coast's baseball team

(18-7 overall, 0-1 in conference) will play a doubleheader against No. 11 Northwest Florida State (23-6, 4-1) with the first game starting at 1 p.m.

The Raiders took the first game of the series 5-2 on Thursday at Frazier Field, with Matt Boswell pitching seven strong innings to get the decision for Northwest. Gulf Coast ace Brett Wisely took the loss, just his second of the season.

The No. 15 Lady Commodores (26-8, 3-1) will take on No. 2 Chipola (27-3, 2-0) in a doubleheader starting at 1 p.m. with a chance to take over first place in the Panhandle Conference standings.

After dropping its league opener to Tallahassee, Gulf Coast has won three straight league games. The Lady Commodores took the second of two against TCC 10-3 and swept Northwest Florida State at Joe Tom King Field on Thursday.

Gulf Coast won the first of two over Northwest 3-1 thanks to a two-run walk-off home run by Kristina Warford in the bottom of the eighth inning. Hannah Poole tossed a complete game shutout with 15 strikeouts in the second game, a 3-0 Lady Commodores victory.

Izzo reaches 600th Victory against Buckeyes

The Associated Press

CHICAGO - NO. 6 MICHIGAN STATE 77, OHIO STATE 70: Casius Winston scored 18 points, Foster Loyer provided a lift off the bench with a career-high 14 points and No. 6 Michigan State gave Hall of Fame coach Tom Izzo his 600th career victory, beating Ohio State in the Big Ten quarterfinals. Seeking a sixth conference tournament title, the Spartans (26-6) pulled away in the second half for their third victory over the Buckeyes (19-14) this season. They will face No. 19 Wisconsin in the semifinals Saturday. Izzo improved to 600-231 in 24 seasons. Winston, the Big Ten Player of the Year, also had seven rebounds and five assists. Keyshawn Woods scored 16 points for Ohio State.

MINNESOTA 75, NO. 13 PURDUE 73: Jordan Murphy scored 27 points, Amir Coffey added 21 points and Minnesota beat No. 13 Purdue to advance to the Big Ten Tournament semifinals. Murphy drove for a go-ahead three-point play and hit two free throws in the closing minutes, and the Gophers (21-12) beat the Boilermakers (23-9) for the second time in 10 days when Carsen Edwards missed a 3 as time expired. Murphy finished three points shy of his season high. He also had eight rebounds.

NO. 19 WISCONSIN 6, NEBRASKA 62: Nate Reuvers and Khalil Iverson each scored 14 points, D'Mitrik Trice hit a 3-pointer with 58 seconds left and Wisconsin beat pesky Nebraska to advance to the Big Ten Tournament semifinals. The Badgers (23-9) won for the sixth time in seven games despite a shaky performance by Ethan Happ. The 6-foot-10 forward had a season-low four points and committed seven of the team's 17 turnovers. Glynn Watson Jr. scored 23 points for Nebraska (18-16).

SEC

NO. 4 KENTUCKY 73, ALABAMA 55: Tyler Herro scored 20 points and the fourth-ranked Kentucky Wildcats started their quest for a fifth straight Southeastern Conference Tournament title by beating Alabama in the quarterfinals. With a heavy contingent of Big Blue Nation on hand, the Wildcats (27-5) improved to 17-2 all-time at this tournament against Alabama, and they got a measure of revenge for opening SEC play with a 77-75 road loss to the Crimson Tide back on Jan. 5.

NO. 22 AUBURN 73, SOUTH CAROLINA 64: Jared Harper scored 27 points to help Auburn beat South Carolina in the Southeastern Conference quarterfinals. Auburn (24-9) went 13 of 34 from 3-point range and broke the SEC record for 3-pointer in a season with 368. Bryce Brown had 19 points, and Samir Doughty added 10. Chris Silva led South Carolina with 27 points and 11 rebounds.

Kyle Busch eyes historic 200th NASCAR victory

By Greg Beacham
The Associated Press

FONTANA, Calif. — If Kyle Busch earns his landmark 200th victory across NASCAR's three major series this weekend in Southern California, don't expect him to do much to celebrate the achievement.

"Maybe a hat or something in Victory Lane," Busch said Friday, his indifference obvious in his voice. "Other than that, we go on to the next one."

Although he has opinions about his place in NASCAR history, Busch will allow others to debate it after his victory odometer rolls over to zeros and he ties Richard Petty's career wins mark.

The 33-year-old Busch arrived at Fontana in no mood to do much reflection on a racing career still in its prime, even while others debate the significance of the list he is likely to top soon.

"It doesn't change anything," Busch said. "We've entered in both races (at Fontana). We come out here and try to do the best we can to win. If we win on Saturday and that's win 200, then so be it. I am certainly not going to sandbag a race or throw a race away to try to win 200 in a Cup race. That's not my way of going about things."

After he moved to the brink of the record by sweeping two races in Phoenix last weekend, Busch could tie Petty's mark as soon as Saturday in his dominant Xfinity Series car. With an additional win in the Cup race in his Joe Gibbs Racing Toyota on Sunday, he would be the winningest driver in NASCAR history.

Or not, depending on how you measure it, of course.

Petty's 200 victories all came at the Cup level, while Busch has 52 Cup wins.

Busch has spoken on it all before. He previously said he doesn't consider his wins to be equal to Petty's achievements solely on the top level, but he also realizes Petty didn't face the same level of competition in many of his Cup races as Busch faces every week.

What's clear is that Busch has cemented a place as one of the greatest drivers of his era, in any car and any series. Other experts believe he's one of the best of all time.

"I read what Richard said the other day, which was cool," Busch said. "He talked about how if I was thrown back in their era, with (David) Pearson and Petty, I could compete with those guys. That's very respectful, and I appreciate that. I am honored he said that. I feel I'd like to think the same way that I could do it. It doesn't matter. It's a different time and place."

Busch's success in the other two series will always be a part of his story, but he doesn't shy away from it.

Many drivers share the view of Denny Hamlin, who believes Busch couldn't reach his lofty marks in any racing circuit without a combination of outstanding cars and incredible talent.

"People can argue about the competition going down in different series, and especially in this day and age, equipment is a large factor," Hamlin said. "JGR right now has probably some of the best Xfinity equipment, and when you put one of the best Cup drivers in the best Xfinity equipment, you're going to have a lot of success. In the truck series, we know (Kyle Busch Motorsports) has got tremendous trucks. They outqualify everyone pretty much every week, and then when you put a top Cup guy in a truck that's super-fast, you're going to have the success that you're going to have.

"But I think he's extraordinary on the Cup level. I gauge myself (against) his accomplishments by what he does in the Cup series, and to me, he's the best out there. There's just no one better."

Busch is almost always good on the weathered asphalt east of Los Angeles, winning three Cup Series races — including the first of his career in 2005 — and six Xfinity races. He also has two Truck Series wins here, although the trucks aren't racing this weekend in Fontana.

If Busch wins on Sunday, he would join Jimmie Johnson, Jeff Gordon and Matt Kenseth as the only three-time winners at Fontana. Joe Gibbs Racing has only won two Cup races at the former California Speedway, both by Busch — in 2013 and 2014.

"I watched him when I was growing up, and he was dominating races then, and still is," 25-year-old Ryan Blaney said. "I feel like he is just getting better as years go on. I hear a lot of people giving grief of how he has just mainly won in Xfinity and Trucks. But yeah, he is deserving of it. It almost makes me mad how good he is. As a competitor, I don't like seeing him win. It frustrates me how he is able to find a way to be better than everybody else a lot of weekends."

CUP QUALIFYING: Austin Dillon won the pole for the NASCAR Cup Series race in Auto Club Speedway on Friday after no drivers completed a lap in the final round of qualifying. Dillon got his fourth career pole essentially by default after a bizarre scene that left fans booing the drivers. "I have seen it in other sports, but never seen it in ours," Clint Bowyer said. "We just got booed, and it is disappointing." With all 12 final-round drivers determined to go out as late as possible in a drafting group, every car idled near the front of the pit road from the start of the session until roughly 44 seconds remained. The cars had barely exited Turn 4 when time ran out, which meant none of the final laps counted. Dillon got the pole for turning the fastest lap in the previous session in his Richard Childress Racing Chevrolet. He won each of the two rounds of qualifying in which drivers actually drove, and he thought his pole was deserved. "I'm happy for our team to get the pole that no one ever ran a lap for in qualifying," Dillon said with a laugh. "I think it's pretty cool. It might be the last time you ever see that kind of qualifying." Kevin Harvick will start second Sunday, followed by Aric Almirola, Kyle Busch and Joey Logano.

McIlroy, Fleetwood share lead at Players Championship

By Doug Ferguson
The Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — The easy way out was to go low under a tree 20 feet in front of Rory McIlroy.

He was looking up. Coming off a 10-foot eagle and a 20-foot birdie that tied him for the lead Friday in The Players Championship, McIlroy risked wasting that great finish with a bold shot. His caddie, Harry Diamond, tried to talk him out of it. McIlroy instead opened the face of a pitching wedge and sent it straight up in the air, letting the right-to-left wind carry it onto the green 15 feet away.

"I stepped over it a couple times like, 'No, I think I can do this,'" McIlroy said. "I just opened up a wedge as much as I could and just took a swipe at it, and the ball sort of came out the way I thought."

He got his par for a 7-under 65 and was tied Tommy Fleetwood, who had a better start than McIlroy finished. Fleetwood opened birdie-eagle-birdie on his way to a 67, giving him a share of the 36-hole lead for the second straight week.

They were at 12-under 132, three shots clear of anyone else.

And they were nine shots ahead of Tiger Woods, who played solid golf except for one hole — the wrong hole. Woods put two balls into the water on the notorious par-3 17th, leading to a quadruple bogey that wiped out a good start and forced him to settle for a 71.

Given the nature of this golf course — and a forecast for a different wind — the fun might just be starting.

And that's as far as McIlroy was willing to look.

"Winning is a byproduct of doing all the right things, and I feel like if I can continue to do those things well, hopefully I do end up with the trophy on Sunday," he said. "But there's a lot of golf to play before that."

The biggest surprise from the group three shots behind might be the 48-year-old Furyk, mainly because he didn't think he would be at Sawgrass. After devoting two years as Ryder Cup captain, his world ranking plunged 194 spots to No. 231. But a great finish at the start of the Florida swing to tie for ninth moved him high enough in the FedEx Cup to get into the strongest field in golf at the last minute.

And then he delivered his best score in 80 rounds over 25 years, a 64 that put him in the group at 9-under 135.

Embiid has big night, leads 76ers past Kings

The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Joel Embiid had 21 points and 17 rebounds and made some big plays on both ends of the court late in the fourth quarter, Jimmy Butler scored 22 points and the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Sacramento Kings 123-114 on Friday night.

Tobias Harris and JJ Redick each added 19 points and Ben Simmons contributed 18 for the 76ers, who won their third in a row to pull even with idle Indiana for the No. 3 seed in the Eastern Conference. Philadelphia holds the tiebreaker with the Pacers and is trying to maintain hold of home court in a first-round playoff series, something coach Brett Brown said he coveted before the contest. Fifth-seeded Boston is two games behind the 76ers and Pacers.

Harrison Barnes and De'Aaron Fox had 16 points apiece for Sacramento, which lost its third in a row and seventh in the last nine to further hurt its playoff push. The Kings, who last made the postseason in 2006, entered ninth in the West, five games behind the Clippers.

BUCKS 113, HEAT 98: Giannis Antetokounmpo scored 33 points, and the Milwaukee Bucks rallied from a 20-point halftime deficit to beat the Miami Heat. Antetokounmpo also had 16 rebounds and nine assists for the Bucks, who became the first team in NBA history to trail by at least 20 points at the half and win by more than 11. Khris Middleton scored 21 and Eric Bledsoe had 17 for the NBA-best Bucks, who improved to 52-17. Milwaukee outscored Miami 71-36 in the second half.

ROCKETS 108, SUNS 102: James Harden had 41 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds, and the Houston Rockets outlasted the Phoenix Suns. The Rockets had trouble putting away the Suns, who have won just 16 games this season, and trailed for much of the night as they struggled from long-range, making just 11 of 40 3-pointers. It's Houston's franchise-record 10th straight win over the Suns, and the Rockets have won 10 of their last 11 games overall.

PISTONS 111, LAKERS 97: Andre Drummond had 19 points and 23 rebounds, and the Detroit Pistons took advantage of LeBron James' absence, beating the Los Angeles Lakers. The Lakers, who have fallen well off the pace in the Western Conference playoff race, have been managing James' minutes, and he sat out this game entirely. Los Angeles played at Toronto the previous night. The Lakers were also without Lonzo Ball (left ankle), Tyson Chandler (neck), Brandon Ingram (right arm) and Lance Stephenson (toe).

HORNETS 116 WIZARDS 110: Kemba Walker scored 28 points and the Charlotte Hornets beat the Washington Wizards in a matchup of teams chasing the final Eastern Conference playoff berth. Jeremy Lamb added 18 points and eight rebounds, and Nicolas Batum and Tony Parker had 16 points apiece for Charlotte, which defeated Washington for the second time in eight days. Jabari Parker had 17 points and 11 rebounds for Washington.

Virginia coach Tony Bennett tried to keep that in perspective, saying, "I got to live out my dream of playing in the NBA (in Charlotte), I met my wife here, and we got to play a good game Thursday — so I think I'm pretty blessed."

De'Andre Hunter had 13 points for Virginia (29-3), which had its nine-game winning streak snapped and suffered its first loss to a team other than Duke.

Florida State was in control from the start.

The Seminoles built a 35-31 at halftime behind the inside play of Koumadje, who had seven points and nine rebounds in the first half after registering just two points and two rebounds in a 65-52 loss to Virginia earlier this season.

The 35 points were essentially an offensive explosion for the Seminoles, who didn't score their 35th point against Virginia until 2:34 remained in the previous matchup.

Florida State broke open the game midway through the second half with a 13-1 run led by Nichols, a graduate transfer who scored on a drive, a low post move, and a turnaround jumper during the stretch. While Nichols was heating up, the Cavaliers couldn't score, going nearly 6½ minutes without a field goal.

Virginia's Kyle Guy said Florida State's length and athleticism proved to be an issue.

"It did disrupt us a little bit, and we'll watch the tape and I think it was very evident what we needed to fix and we'll be ready come next week," Guy said.

JEROME STRUGGLES
Ty Jerome had another tough outing in Charlotte, shooting just 4 of 13 from the field and 2 of 9 from 3-point range.

But he's staying positive about the future.

"I remember we cut down the nets in the ACC tournament last year and we still didn't like the way our season ended," Jerome said. "So this isn't the end all, be all by any means."

DEFENSE WINS
Florida State only forced eight turnovers, but it made things difficult for the Cavaliers to get into a rhythm all night long.

"Just ball pressure, being able to just get down and dirty on defense and the main thing with us is our junkyard defense and we kind of take it in each and every practice," Cofer said. "Being able to just have high hands, long arms, a lot of times try to get steals and deflections, and those are the main things that win games for us."

him," Johnson said. "I'm glad he hit it."

The SEC regular-season champs had one last chance as Will Reese threw the ball deep to Reid, who couldn't catch it while defended by a pair of Gators before the buzzer. That avoided the third overtime this season between these teams.

"We did just enough to beat a very good team," Florida coach Mike White said.

Eighth-seeded Florida (19-14) now will play either No. 22 Auburn or South Carolina in the semifinals Saturday after a thrilling comeback that firmed up the Gators' chances for an at-large NCAA Tournament berth.

LSU (26-6) was a 3½-point favorite and had won five straight without coach Will Wade, who remains suspended indefinitely despite asking Thursday to rejoin the Tigers for the postseason. LSU quickly squashed that idea with a statement noting Wade will remain suspended until he speaks to school officials about the reports of an FBI wiretap that led to his suspension March 8, noting Wade has yet to "deny any wrongdoing to us or publicly."

The Tigers did have freshman Javonte Smart back after LSU announced a couple hours before tipoff Friday that the guard has fully cooperated in a "joint inquiry" with the school and the NCAA.

They accepted their trophy as the league's regular-season champs from SEC Commissioner Greg Sankey before tipoff in a subdued ceremony. Then LSU led 35-25 at halftime and as much as 42-29 with 16:52 left.

Florida clawed back into the game by hitting eight straight shots and 10 of 11. Jalen Hudson made a pair of free throws with 6:05 left to give Florida its first lead of the game at 58-57, setting up a frantic finish. LSU led 63-60 when Johnson hit a 3-pointer, officials called a foul on LSU and the LSU bench was assessed a technical also a technical for arguing. KeVaughn Allen hit a pair of two free throws, and Kevarrus Hayes hit one for a six-point play.

that number of points to the points that we won it by."

At an individual level, it's hard to find someone who stole the show like Bay High senior Denise White did on Friday afternoon. She placed first in the 100-meter dash, 200-meter dash, 400-meter run and the high jump.

"It's a blessing," Bay coach Adrianna Hill said. "It's amazing because not many people can do that and to put the work in that she put into it and see results."

White beat her closest competitor by almost 1.5 seconds in the 200-meter dash, but she frowned when she heard her time of 25.15 seconds. That was a whole second behind her personal record and it didn't even break her Bay County Championship record time of 24.69.

Hill actually owned that record with a time of 24.9 before White erased her name in the record books as a freshman.

It was White's first goal when she started training freshman year and it's a moment that is still special to White four years later.

"As a freshman running a 24, that's insane," White said.

White said many of the times she set earlier in the season have been slower than usual since Hurricane Michael shortened the cross country season she would normally use to get ready for track.

Despite that, her time of 58.25 seconds in the 400-meter dash added yet another Bay County Championship record to her collection. With any luck, she'll have a few more records to break before she wraps up her high school career.

"This year is like grind time," Hill said. "We gotta go, state titles on our mind."

When Mosley sophomore Autumn Goffigan first volunteered to give the javelin a try she was imagining something a little more cinematic.

"I'm thinking it's a long pointy stick that I'm just going to have to throw like a Spartan," Goffigan said. "Like, that's what I think. It's not like that."

The javelin is a new field event for the state in 2019, and as such did not count towards team scores on Friday. Mosley and Rutherford were the only schools to compete in the event.

Michael Vancil and Jaice Jensen took first and third for the Dolphins, while their teammates Keyana Phillips, Kristen Vancil, and Goffigan locked up the top three spots on the girls' side in that order.

"Not as weird as you think," Michael Vancil said. "It's just, it's really light, so it's pretty similar to just throwing a football."

Mosley's coaching staff hopes this season will put the Dolphins in position to succeed when the event begins counting toward team points and becomes more widespread.

"It's not more raw power, it's a little bit more of how you do it and more technique," Michael Vancil said. "So anybody can do it."

ATLANTA NCAA finds 'severe' violations at Ga. Tech

The NCAA has informed Georgia Tech it has found major recruiting violations committed by former assistant coach Darryl LaBarrie and a former friend of coach Josh Pastner.

The school released the notice of allegations from the NCAA on Friday. Of the three allegations, the NCAA says two are considered a "severe breach of conduct," considered the highest "Level 1" violations.

In a statement that accompanied the notice of allegations, most names were redacted. However, Pastner's former friend, Ron Bell, identified by the NCAA as a "representative of the institution's athletic interests," was said to have provided more than $2,000 in impermissible benefits to players in 2016 and 2017.

The NCAA says LaBarrie gave $300 to a recruit for a visit to an Atlanta strip club and provided false or misleading statements to the NCAA about the visit. The NCAA also says LaBarrie attempted to influence a team member to provide false information about the visit.

TAMPA, FLA. Yanks ace Severino to miss all of April

New York Yankees ace Luis Severino will miss all of April because of right shoulder inflammation.

Severino had been scheduled to start on opening day on March 28 but was scratched from his first planned spring training appearance on March 5. He felt discomfort after throwing his first slider in a pregame bullpen session.

"He's going to have to start from scratch and have his spring training," general manager Brian Cashman said Friday. "If it needs to be more, we've got to make sure we don't have a problem with it."

Severino is set to resume playing catch next week.

"I feel nothing right now," Severino said. "I want to deal with this issue and be 100 percent."

OAKLAND, CALIF. Board approves Raiders lease to remain in 2019

The Coliseum Authority approved a lease agreement Friday to keep the Raiders in Oakland for at least one more season.

The board voted unanimously to approve the lease for 2019 with an option for 2020. The deal still must be approved by the Oakland City Council and the Alameda County Board of Supervisors, but no hang-ups are expected.

The Raiders will pay $7.5 million in rent for the Coliseum and the practice facility in Alameda in 2019 and have a $10.5 million option for 2020 in case their new $1.8 billion, 65,000-seat stadium in Las Vegas isn't ready by then. The rent will drop by $500,000 each year if the Raiders decide to play one of their two home exhibition games at another site.

Real change in baseball is yet to come

Five seconds hardly seems worth talking about, and in a way it's not. Trimming the time between innings might save a minute or two over the length of a game, but the real heavy lifting toward solving baseball's many issues is still to come.

Eliminating one mound visit for the upcoming season isn't going to suddenly make baseball America's Pastime once again, either. America has moved on, even as a dedicated core of fans keeps baseball propped up and keeps profits flowing to owners.

Actually, the changes announced Thursday in an agreement between Major League Baseball and the players' union don't do much of anything to make the game better in 2019. If anything, they are merely Rob Manfred's way to show that he's trying to do something — anything, really — to keep baseball from growing too stale.

Still, it's a start in a sport that in normal times resists changes like no other. And it's a signal that there is a might just be a new willingness among owners and players to make the game great once again.

Baby steps at best, but that's what baseball is. Keeping things like they have been in the past is part of its charm and a big part of the reason it has been around and is still relevant after more than a century and a half.

And, really, were you expecting more?

Maybe next year when Manfred is free to introduce rules requiring relievers face at least three batters. Maybe a few years from now after issues like the shift and the declining number of balls put in play are finally tackled.

Hopefully never when it comes to the DH, which has no place in the National League despite the best efforts of the union to get it implemented.

The agreement announced Thursday was unprecedented if only because both management and the union found enough common ground to make a deal. That it got made was groundbreaking in a way because the two sides rarely agree on anything, but the reason it got made was largely because neither side was forced to give up much. The owners got superficial changes that will make it look like they're trying to speed up the game. The union got a chance to reopen contract negotiations, three years before the current collective bargaining agreement expires.

That's important for players because they took their eye off the ball in the last negotiations. While they asked for things like more days off and private chefs in every clubhouse, owners got increases in the luxury tax that prompted more teams to cut veterans who cost them money and chilled the free agent market.

Beginning contract talks not even halfway through the current agreement doesn't mean players will get the changes they want or that there will be labor peace beyond 2021. But it does mean both sides can begin exchanging ideas that might lead toward a longer agreement.

"How things manifest themselves moving forward remains to be seen," union chief Tony Clark said.

Under the agreement, breaks between innings will be five seconds shorter this season and teams will be allowed only five visits to the mound each game without a pitching change instead of six. The union agreed not to fight new rules that make a reliever face at least three batters or end an inning next year, while owners agreed not to try and implement a pitching clock until 2022 at the earliest.

Again, baby steps. But baseball fans should cheer the fact the two sides are at least talking so baseball doesn't get sucked into the labor disputes that ruined the sport for many fans in the 1990s.

What comes next will determine just how serious players and owners are in making desperately needed changes to the game itself.

The bigger problems have little to do with the length of time between innings or how many conferences are held on the mound. They have everything to do with the way baseball is being played in the analytical age, which is the greatest threat facing the game.

Starting pitching has been devalued, as has batting average. The front office doesn't care if players strike out three times a game, as long as they can produce an occasional home run. There are long breaks between balls put into play, and the shift not only looks out of place but artificially limits hitting chances.

Shaving five seconds off the break between innings doesn't change that. Neither does taking away one trip to the mound.

The good news is the conversation has officially been started. There seems to be a growing realization that baseball is in a funk and needs to find a way out.

But save the cheering until someone hits a home run.

Browns' Hunt banned 8 games

By Tom Withers
The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Kareem Hunt promises to change. The NFL will hold him to his word.

The league suspended the Cleveland Browns running back for eight games on Friday for two "physical altercations," one in which Hunt shoved and kicked a woman in a hotel hallway while he played for Kansas City.

Hunt

Hunt will not be eligible to play until November as part of his penalty for violating the league's personal-conduct policy. The 23-year-old, who quickly became a star player with the Chiefs before his conduct prompted the team to cut him during a Super Bowl push last season, will not be paid during the half-season suspension, which will be lifted on Aug. 31. He can practice and will be eligible to play in Cleveland's pre-season games.

Hunt will not appeal the league's findings, which came following an investigation into the hotel incident and a fight in June at Put-In-Bay island, a resort area in Ohio.

"I want to again apologize for my actions last year," Hunt said in a statement released by the Browns. "I know that my behavior hurt a lot of people, and I again apologize to them. I respect the league's decision on discipline, and I appreciate the time I spent with Commissioner Goodell last week. I'm grateful for my time with the Browns over the last month and thankful to all the people in the organization that have welcomed me."

"I also appreciate all of the support I received from my union through this process. My commitment to earning the trust of the league, my teammates, the organization and this community through my actions will continue, and I understand there is a lot of hard work ahead of me before I'm able to fully return to playing the game I love."

The league recently completed its investigation that included a review of law enforcement records, video and electronic communications and interviews with witnesses as well as Hunt.

In November, surveillance video taken in February in a Cleveland hotel where Hunt stayed during the off-season. The disturbance involved several people, and Hunt was seen shoving the woman before kicking her as she scrambled to get off the floor. Police investigated but the woman did not file charges against Hunt.

The bigger problems have little to do with the length of time between innings or how many conferences are held on the mound. They have everything to do with the way baseball is being played in the analytical age, which is the greatest threat facing the game.
