Reception for the Mayor

The city of Williston will host a retirement reception for Mayor R. Gerald Hethcoat at 6 p.m. Thursday, April 5 in the fellowship hall of the First United Methodist Church.

Levy County Fair opens tonight

BY CAROLYN TEN BROECK

Popcorn, cotton candy, the ferris wheel and more are all part of the allure when the Levy County Fair opens today (Thursday) at Williston's Industrial Park, across from Horseman's Park.

The gates open at 4 p.m. with opening ceremonies at 6:30 p.m. on the main stage.

This year's fair began last July when the fair association held its annual meeting. From then until now, a team of volunteers has planned, scheduled and negotiated to bring the best in family entertainment to Levy County and the surrounding area.

In addition to the thrill of the midway, local favorite Butch Batts and the SouthBound Band will entertain on the main stage and Saturday night Confederate Railroad will be in the spotlight.

A new Miss Levy County Fair will be crowned, in addition to Jr. Miss Levy County Fair, Little Miss Levy County Fair and Mr. and Mrs. Tiny Tot.

The gate fee is $5 and does not include rides, which may be purchased separately. Armbands, for unlimited rides, are $15 per person, except tonight and Sunday when they are discounted to $10.

Making economic development work is up to the people

BY CAROLYN TEN BROECK
EDITOR

In six to eight weeks, Williston City Council will find out just what its grant money paid for when Alison Megrath and Dr. Lynn Patterson make their presentation on the city's Comprehensive Plan.

Monday night, Patterson presented the culmination of months of research and planning on economic development to some of the people whose input is included in the final product.

She said implementation is not solely up to the council, but must involve the people if it is to work and be an accurate portrayal of what Williston will become.

Patterson said her goal is to stay true to the vision mandated by the people by focusing her efforts not just on those who live here, but also for the tourist who is drawn to the city.

Redevelopment, job creation, infrastructure and affordable housing are among the top priorities in the plan, she said.

However, Patterson also zeroed in on what is already here and how to redevelop it or market it better to enhance the assets the city already boasts.

Tourism should play an even bigger part in Williston's growth, and several recommendations will be in the plan on how business owners and residents can help bring about changes.

She also said she and Megrath spoke with people at FDOT about lane reduction downtown to once again allow street parking. While no commitments were made, she said they were receptive to the idea. This will be critical to the Main Street area to make it a place people want to stop at rather than just pass through.

And while bringing new business to town is always in the forefront, Patterson said Williston cannot forget

Since taking office two years ago, Williston Councilwoman Nancy Winger has been known for hosting her own town hall meetings.

It's an opportunity for people to ask questions in a casual atmosphere and also share information with her that she needs to know as their elected representative.

Next week, April 12, Winger will host another such meeting but this one with a twist.

Concerned that many Williston residents are facing code violations that they may not be able to correct due to finances or physical limitations, Winger wants to help match people who can help other people.

Deputies coming to the schools

Program funding is still the question

BY SEAN ARNOLD

STAFF WRITER

Levy County Sheriff Bobby McCallum says all 15 public and charter schools in the county will have a deputy on campus for the remainder of the school year, but he's concerned about the financial viability of the program going forward.

At the Levy County Commission meeting April 2, McCallum announced the plans his office finalized the previous day to send deputies to each campus. The move was in response to the state law passed in March that includes provisions for increasing school safety and security in the wake of the mass shooting that killed 17 and injured 17 more at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland.

Part of that bill includes the Aaron Feis Guardian Program, which gives school districts – in consultation with law enforcement – the option to either hire deputies or other outside security or train school staff and faculty to carry weapons and act as campus "guardians." The state is reimbursing school boards for funds deployed toward that end, but McCallum, as well as superintendents and sheriffs from around the state, have noted that the Classroom laptops, notetaking and Laguna Beach

"I was so broke I couldn't pay attention."

Southern Colloquialism

Margaret McDowell

Arbor Outlook

Innovative communication devices are wonderful. Until they aren't. While searching for a restaurant in Laguna Beach, Calif. last summer, my husband and I pulled over in a parking lot and asked a lady if she knew the whereabouts of the eatery. She assured us that she had lived in Laguna her whole life and knew the town well. Then she pulled out her phone, punched at it for five minutes and provided difficult, lengthy instructions.

We said thanks and left. Ultimately, we drove about a hundred yards, took one turn and went up a hill, and found the restaurant sitting in plain view of the parking lot. You could actually see the eating establishment from the very spot where we had inquired about its location. All that was required of our guide was for her to turn and gesture and say, "There it is. Turn right and drive up the hill."

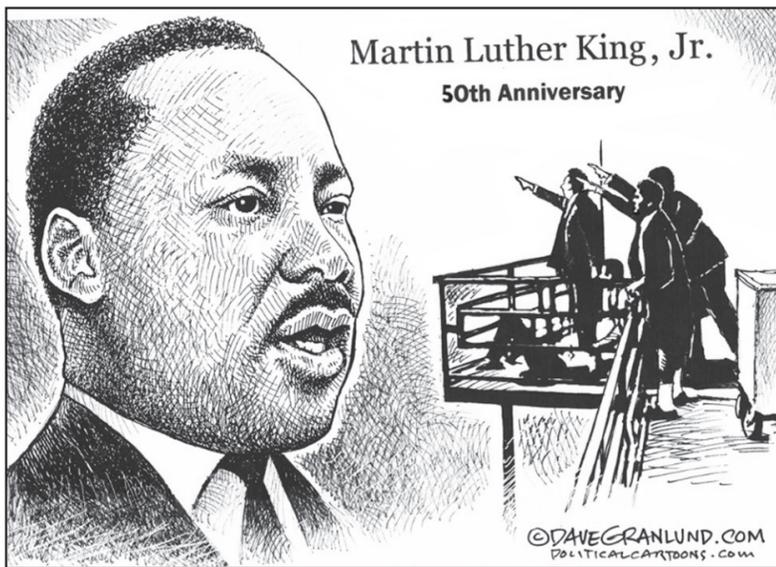

It's as if folks have forgotten how to point without assistance from a smartphone. So I was not surprised to read recently that college professors all over the country are banning laptops as note-taking devices. The digital age is fascinating, and there's no denying that technology has revolutionized many businesses, including my own. On a personal level, I love texting with relatives and friends. But I am not joined at the hip with my phone. It's disconcerting and rude when people can't converse, watch a movie or outdoor event or engage in a business discussion without staring at a tablet or screen. We need human linkups in addition to technical ones.

Professors are weary of staring at the back of laptops in lieu of actually connecting visually with their classroom compatriots. The students hidden behind those screens may be focused on the lecture or they may be surfing the internet, but the teacher can't know without seeing those faces.

Early returns are in from the students. They're complaining that taking notes by hand is tiring and that afterwards, sometimes they can't read their own writing. News flash: no one ever died from a hand cramp. Advice for the students with unreadable hieroglyphics instead of notes? Write more neatly. Develop your own shorthand. And organize your notes in outline form. They can serve as an effective study guide. Many students are recording their classes with cell phones instead of taking notes. What ever happened to paying attention?

One thing that classes without laptops may inspire is actual interaction and discussion among and between students and teachers. Listening to my classmates express themselves was part of our college education. I cannot imagine a more isolating and boring experience than sitting silently in a group where every individual is hidden behind a small computer screen.

Bob At The Movies

Ready Player One

It's no accident that "Ready Player One" opened on Easter weekend, as this movie is obsessed with Easter Eggs. Not the kind one paints and puts in a basket, but little bonuses hidden in various forms of media.

The characters in the film are on the hunt for an Easter Egg that gives them control over a virtual reality empire, but more importantly the film itself is full of Easter Eggs designed to delight those nostalgic for pop culture from the late 70s through 90s.

The film takes place in a future where the real world is bleak, but a virtual world called The Oasis is thriving.

The Oasis allows users to do whatever they want as whoever they want. You can be a better version of yourself or take on the persona of an existing character.

Wade Watts, aka Parzival (Tye Sheridan), spends most of his time on a quest to collect the ultimate Easter Egg, one hidden by The Oasis' late designer (Mark Rylance) and attainable by gathering three keys.

Nobody has ever gotten even one key, but Parzival has studied the life and the interests of the designer well enough that he knows he's on the cusp of solving the riddles protecting the keys.

Of course, not everyone is as pure of heart as Parzival.

A corporation led by the greedy Sorrento (Ben Mendelsohn) wants to take the keys and The Oasis by force.

The corporation employs a few nerds to try the riddle-solving route, but also a number of soldiers and assassins tasked with stopping Parzival and anyone else who's not in their pocket.

Luckily, Parzival has help. His hulking friend Aech (whose actor I will not spoil) is one of the biggest, toughest beings in The Oasis. His buddies Sho (Philip Zhao) and Daito (Win Morisaki) are also among its most skilled users.

Then there's Art3mis (Olivia Cooke), whose prowess is legendary. You're not supposed to fall in love in The Oasis, but Parzival forgets this rule the second he lays eyes on her.

The battle for The Oasis is entertaining enough, but it's the Easter Eggs that are bringing people to this film.

I don't want to give away too much, but the film has been heavily pushing an appearance by The Iron Giant, no doubt to let the cult hero appear in a film that people actually see. There's also an extended sequence where the characters go inside a character created by the dysfunctional duo of Stephen King and Stanley Kubrick. One

The value of acknowledgment cards

As a funeral director, I am often asked about acknowledgment cards. One of my funeral arts classes, while attending college, focused on the traditions and etiquette surrounding funerals, so acknowledgment cards are an easy subject to explain.

Tracy Renee Lee

Pushing Up Daisies

Acknowledgment cards are merely thank you cards addressing services performed by those who participated in any way at a funeral or assisted in relieving the mourner's burdens. They should be written on card stock, rather than plain paper, and sent out in a timely fashion. Funeral homes offer funeral specific cards for your convenience.

Personally, I have always thought the cards offered by the funeral industry were a little lacking. Therefore, when asked about acknowledgment cards, I always offer an alternative: blank cards from the dollar store.

This past week I had the daunting task of writing and sending acknowledgment cards to those who assisted with my grandson's funeral. My daughter and her family have suffered emotionally over his loss and as they have experienced exhaustive travel, I volunteered to take on the task.

I am a stationery collector. I have drawers and shelves full of beautiful stationery for every occasion. I love the different designs, weights, sentiments, etc. of each individual set. I do not usually purchase stationery at stationery specific stores. I search out lovely boutiques in towns that focus on appealing to shoppers with unique and discriminating appreciation.

As I approached my task of writing my grandson's acknowledgment cards, I chose a box of cards that I have treasured for decades. They were lovely - elegant peacocks in a grand display, poised before pure white Grecian columns, painted in beautiful hues by the impressionist's brush and accented with swirls of gold embossing. I purchased these cards when I was a missionary in the south of France in the early 1980s. I have held on to these cards for a very long time, holding them in reserve for a very special purpose. I never suspected that purpose would be to express my deepest gratitude for services rendered to my family by those who care and love us most.

As with most things related to my profession, I felt adequately qualified for the task. I sat down at my desk and began putting pen to card. Suddenly, I realized that the experience would be very different than I had anticipated.

Writing an acknowledgment card is nothing like writing a thank you card. A thank you card is usually written about something wonderful; either a gift received, or a kind act performed in your favor. An acknowledgment card is written to thank someone for serving you on the worst day of your life. A day when life is broken, when breathing takes a conscious effort, and when nothing else in the world matters to you. How do you put that; the magnitude of someone's kindness and service to you, on a little three and a half by five card? You cannot.

For three days, I would approach my desk, take my pen in hand and attempt the task. For three days, I was unable to accomplish it. As I would touch the lovely cards, purchased so long ago and treasured for a special purpose, my heart would be so full that I could not wipe the tears away from my eyes swiftly enough to keep them from spilling down my face. The words within my heart inadequately represented my soul's expressions.

Finally, on the fourth day, I had an epiphany. Those plain, pre-printed acknowledgment cards offered by the funeral industry, perhaps were not so lacking after all. I rose from my desk and went to my arrangement room. I reached into the secretary drawer and pulled out a box of plain white cards with black script embossing. I realized a new appreciation for their simplicity and fulfillment of purpose.

I looked at those cards that I so often told clients were not worth their cost and realized that they were worth more than the elegantly printed stationery that I had treasured for so many decades. The simple sentiment, embossed in bold contrast, eloquently expressed all that I needed to say. "Thank you for your kindness and sympathy. It was received with deepest appreciation."

As I signed my and my daughter's names to the cards, I remained unable to reign in my emotions as I recalled with great love and appreciation, each act of kindness received from our friends and family. I will never forget their service and love to us on that sad and dreadful day.

Our signatures are barely legible on those cards, but I know that our friends and family realize that I was signing them blindly through tears of sorrow and pain. Preprinted acknowledgment cards may be simple and basic, but they are offered in thanksgiving for the most simple and basic needs known to man, the rendering of love and empathy. The anguish within my soul would have crushed me that day had it not been for the love and support with which my friends and family attended me - that dreadful day that we buried my beloved grandson, Mikey Joe.

For that, I remain everlastingly in their debt.

My name is Tracy Renee Lee. I am a Certified Grief Counselor (GC-C), the Managing Funeral Director (FDIC,) and owner of Queen City Funeral Home in Queen City, Texas.

Rotary's Easter Gifts

Kicking around bubbles is a favorite pastime before hunting eggs.

The Easter Bunny delighted young and old alike – well, except Mary Beth Weatherly who has an inside track with her.

Kohle Angel, 16 months, does a double-fisted hunting style.

Looks like Sabri Jones hit the jackpot. Her egg had money inside. A greenback, no less.

Rotarians Dave and Mary dish up lunch to scores of people.

It's every hunter for himself in the mad dash to the lawn.

►Deputies

proposed reimbursement figures do not nearly cover the costs of putting deputies on every campus.

The School Board of Levy County has yet to finalize how it will handle the issue, but based on his consultation with Superintendent Jeff Edison and the district, McCallum says he expects it to opt for deputies rather than training school staff or hiring third-party security. The program is ultimately optional for districts, as confirmed by Rep. Charlie Stone at that same Commission meeting.

McCallum said it would cost $1.4 million to install resource officers at each school, but Levy is currently only slated to be reimbursed at around $580,000. McCallum said that total would be enough to hire five or six more deputies.

"I don't think the School Board will get that kind of money (to hire 11 more deputies), so I don't know what we're going to do," McCallum said. "The last 44 days of school we hopefully will have a deputy in every school in the county. We're just trying to get by for the remainder of the school year."

The other issue McCallum raised at the meeting was the difficulty in hiring new deputies, both due to the shrinking labor pool for potential law enforcement officers, and the Levy County Sheriff Office's struggle to compete for personnel with local counties, which would presumably also begin looking to hire more deputies, and which can offer higher pay.

"Even when I'm assured of the funding, I've got to find these folks," McCallum said. "And I don't know how we do it on what we start them at. Fewer and fewer people are going into the profession."

"We've got to get our schools safe and our students protected."

McCallum said the start-up cost for hiring a deputy is more than $118,000.

He says the school resource program costs around $550,000, according to the 2016-17 budget, and the School Board recently raised its funding for the program to around $94,300.

Easter Egg I found disappointing was a certain weapon used during a battle scene. How dare this film use this weapon without counting when the need to count has been famously overexplained. Other appearances and references are mostly left to the most momentary of glimpses. There are sequences in this movie that you'll need to watch frame by frame if you want to catch everything.

That's the problem with "Ready Player One," it moves too fast. I'm not necessarily talking about all the Easter Eggs because I'm sure their brevity is deliberate so as not to distract from the story. What I mean is that the rules and history of this world go by so quickly that I felt lost at several points. I found myself repeatedly saying "I'm sure they explained this" without remembering what that explanation was. This movie is 140 minutes long, and I couldn't help but wonder how much more fleshed-out it would have been at 200. The fact that I want more of this movie speaks to how much it does right, because this is indeed an exciting thrill ride from blockbuster extraordinaire Steven Spielberg. It's a highly enjoyable movie, but it requires your full attention.

Grade: B

"Ready Player One" is rated PG-13 for sequences of sci-fi action violence, bloody images, some suggestive material, partial nudity and language. Its running time is 140 minutes.

►Town hall

In her Councillor's Column in last week's Williston Pioneer, Winger called for anyone with ideas or skill to attend so Willistonians can help others.

Tuesday night at the city council meeting, City Manager Scott Lippmann announced the city had collected $4,800 in fines on a property that was in non-compliance and in March corrected the violation and paid the stiff fine.

Winger said the networking she hopes that will be created at the town hall meeting will help alleviate some fines as neighbors help neighbors to make Williston look better and fines will no longer be necessary. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the MP Building on the campus of the old Williston High School. If you have a skill set you're willing to donate or have ideas to help further initiative along, Winger wants you there.

The Easter bunny that got away

After any holiday the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage and myself enjoy taking a day or two off and just relax. We like to sit around and tell stories.

James Snyder

Out to Pastor

could get into the church unless he is elected to the board.

There was such a rumpus in the church auditorium that we really couldn't go forward with the service. I didn't quite know what to do because we had not taken the offering yet. Whatever happens after the offering is okay.

At this point I couldn't get the attention of the children because they were standing on top of the pew looking backward, wondering where in the world the rat was or where it came from.

I got one of my elders to go back and try to take care of the situation. I never had a rat in the church before.

After a few minutes my elder found the "rat" and caught him. The "rat" turned out to be the little bunny I was supposed to have in the hat that I was going to surprise the children with.

How that Bunny got out of the box where I put him is still something that puzzles me to this day.

The elder held up the little white bunny and told everybody, "It's okay, it's not a rat, it's a little bunny. A little bunny can hurt nobody."

All of the congregation, including Mrs. Steward, sat down in their pew and laughed and laughed while clapping their hands for the elder who saved the day. I was even laughing and clapping myself.

I didn't know what to do now that my magic trick was out the window, it was hard to get the attention of the little ones. I finally dismissed them to their classes and tried to bring the congregation back to some level of sanity.

I can't remember what my sermon was that day, but I do remember there was a lot of chuckling throughout my sermon. I'm not sure anybody was even listening to my sermon. I was tempted to preach the sermon the next Sunday, but it wasn't Easter Sunday. I could keep it until next year, which is probably what I did.

Sometimes things are not always what they seem to be. The challenge is in the midst of turmoil to find what is really true.

Perhaps this is what Solomon was thinking of when he said, "There is a way which seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of death" (Proverbs 14:12).

There's a big difference between a bunny and a rat. Sometimes we confuse the two and in that confusion, we cause alarm. I want to be able to differentiate between the Bunny element and the rat element in my life so that I can have peace and tranquility.

Dr. James L. Snyder is pastor of the Family of God Fellowship, Ocala. He lives with his wife in Silver Springs Shores. Phone 352-687-4240 or e-mail jamesnyder2@att.net. The church web site is www.whataffellowship.com.

My wife usually starts by saying, "Hey, remember the time when..." And she goes on with a story that I had forgotten about. When she's done, we laugh together.

Then it's my turn and I begin, "Hey, do you remember the time when..." And I go on and tell a story that she may have forgotten about, I really don't know. When I'm finished, we laugh together as though it was the funniest thing we've heard all day.

It's just our way of relaxing and unwinding after a holiday. Holidays are very busy times for us, we like them, but they do take a little bit out of us. It seems that the older we get, the more it takes out of us. I'm not exactly sure what that means. Just don't tell me what it means!

We usually go on with our stories until we're too tired to tell a story or to laugh.

This last holiday the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage came up with a story I had long ago forgotten. In fact, I'm not sure the details of her story matched the truth, but who am I to contradict her.

"Remember the time," she said rather soberly, "when the Easter Bunny got away?"

I had to stop and think a little bit because it was not in any of my memory files.

Then she began to unwind the story.

As it goes, according to her recollection, I was going to do a little magic trick for the children before they were dismissed from the morning service. I was going to pull a little bunny out of a hat. I practiced for quite a bit and thought I had everything covered.

I should know by now that the time you know you got everything covered there's one little bit that defies your observation.

I had all of the children come up front so that they could see the wonderful magic trick I had in store for them. I began by telling them the story of the resurrection of Jesus.

According to my wife, I was in the middle of telling them the story when in the back of the congregation Mrs. Steward screamed, "There's a rat in the church." With that, she jumped on top of the pew and did her famous afraid dance. You don't want to see it. All the while she was screaming, "Rat, rat, rat."

It was enough to bring the whole congregation to their feet yelling, "Where's the rat?"

Having a rat in the church is not a good thing. I don't know how a rat

"The Original Roberts Downtown Chapel"

THE REAL STORY

Roberts of Ocala

FUNERALS & CREMATIONS

Downtown Chapel

1898
Roberts Funeral Home began as Smith and Roberts undertakers which they ran in conjunction with their furniture mattress factory in downtown Ocala on South Magnolia.

1909
Mr CV Roberts bought out Mr Smith and the name was changed to CV Roberts and Sons.

1919
They moved to our present location and brought the first ever hearse to the Ocala area.

1937
When Mr CV Roberts passed his funeral business to his son Edgar Roberts he changed the name to Roberts Funeral Home. Roberts Funeral Home also provided ambulance service for Marion County residents until 1970s.

1964
The Roberts Family brought the first Crematory to North Florida.

1992
Mr Edgar Roberts handed down the business to his son Terry Roberts.

1998
Terry Roberts sold Roberts Funeral Home to a large corporation known as Stewart Enterprises.

2013
Stewart Enterprises was bought out by Service Corporation International.

2014
Stonemor partners bought the Roberts name from Service Corporation International.

2017
Stonemor closed the original Roberts Downtown location, and Terry Roberts along with his new partners decided to bring back to the community a Roberts owned funeral home again. Hence Roberts of Ocala Funerals and Cremations was born.

We Look Forward to Serving You!

We are all invested in this community. It is our home. Our roots run deep here. We shop where you shop, Our families attend local churches you attend, we go out to eat where you go out to eat. The money you spend at Roberts of Ocala Downtown Chapel stays in Ocala. It is no longer sent to a corporate bank account. We are involved in many charitable organizations, and are always looking for a way to make a positive impact on our community.

At Roberts of Ocala Downtown Chapel its important to us to make sure your loved one is taken care of and we have been doing that with the same care and compassion for three generations now in Ocala. Our Family Serving Yours is more than our motto. Family owned and operated makes it Our Life.
