School district maintains 'C' grade

Cedar Key has highest scores in county

BY SEAN ARNOLD

SEAN.ARNOLD@CHIEFLANDCITIZEN.COM

For the third year in a row, the Levy County school district scored a C in the latest Florida Department of Education accountability report.

Despite earning the same grade, the district saw small gains in most of the 11 categories that go into the final tally. Items that factor into the grades include achievement and learning gains measures in English Language Arts, mathematics and science as well as achievement in social studies, as rendered by various standardized tests. The scores also incorporate graduation and acceleration rates, which take into account students receiving credits in dual enrollment college courses or earning industry certifications.

The district's biggest gains were in the areas of "college and career acceleration" and mathematics assessments. The district is two percentage points from a B.

Eight of the 10 eligible district schools kept their same grade from a year ago, while Yankeetown School went from a C to a B, and Bronson Elementary dropped to a C. Chiefland Middle High School and Cedar Key School retained the highest two scores in the district to keep their B averages. The remainder of the schools that qualify for testing received a C.

CKS fell within one point of achieving an A. Superintendent of Schools Jeff Edison said the district is considering an appeal because the school's graduation and acceleration data weren't included in the grade, data that would have put it over the top for an A, he says.

"If either one of those two sets of data is included in it, it would have been an A," Edison said.

The Williston Chamber of Commerce will host David Peaton from Levy County Emergency Management Agency Thursday, July 12 at 12:30 p.m. in the MP Building on the campus of the old Williston High School (temporary city hall).

Peaton will discuss what to do before, during and after a storm.

Sheriff's budget requests come up short

BY LORI PREVATT

SPECIAL TO THE PIONEER

Sheriff Bobby McCallum addressed the Levy County Board of County Commissioners in a long discussion on July 2 in an attempt to secure additional funding for the fiscal year and left the meeting short of his goal.

McCallum sought additional funds to pay for full-time security on campuses during school hours, meeting a new state law requirement that came in the wake of the school shooting at Stoneman Douglas High School in Parkland in February.

If the county had provided McCallum the funding requested, it would have generated a deficit of $300,000.

McCallum requested $1.2 million additional funds more than the prior year, in addition to the $550,000 the county is already providing each year for school resource officers.

"We have currently spent $515,000 through May of this year," McCallum said. "We currently have six school resource officers and one part time agriculture deputy covering schools for us. We need to hire seven brand new deputies. Ten other schools need deputies. That would give us three extra deputies in case someone had to be off, or leave a school."

Sheriff Bobby McCallum

This would allow McCallum the manpower needed to meet the Safe Schools mandate, which requires every school in the state to have a school resource officer or school guardian present at all times.

In addition to the strain on the budget for the resource officer program, McCallum also expressed the need for additional funding for additional overtime hours paid to the deputies covering the schools, insurance costs for his employees, FICA and new vehicles for deputies. He also mentioned the need for a new forensic investigator.

"One of my forensic investigators has to be on call 24/7 every other week," McCallum said.

McCallum and the commissioners discussed School Board funding for Safe Schools. The School Board had provided $409,496 to the Sheriff's Office to go toward the safe schools program. The School Board is also committed to $510,000 per year.

Commissioner Lilly Rooks asked McCallum if he were to receive the $1.2 million increase, less the $550,000 already promised, would he be able to approach the School Board for more funding.

"I just feel like we are holding a whole lot of the bag right now," Commissioner Matt Brooks said. Commissioner Rock Meeks also commented: "We are in this

Underground wonder serves as haven for cave-diving enthusiasts

Dive into Devil's Den

Editor's note: This is the first in a series on outdoor water activities available in northwest Florida.

Devil's Den, located just a few miles northwest of Williston, has become a cave diving destination for enthusiasts who want to explore nature in one of its most primitive settings.

Visitors can peer into the den through a karst window—a portion of the earth that has collapsed over the river, which is 50 feet deep and a constant 72 degrees year round.

In winter, when the outside temperature is cooler, gentle mists of vapor rise through the earthen window giving an appearance of the biblical fire and brimstone hell wafting through a chimney.

Today, divers, snorkelers and swimmers have easy access to the water, which rises and falls with the water table.

Gas prices steady

Gasoline prices in Florida are unchanged in the past week, averaging $2.71/g yesterday, according to GasBuddy's daily survey of 8,237 stations in Florida. This compares with the national average that has fallen 0.3 cents per gallon versus last week to $2.85/g, according to GasBuddy.

Average gasoline prices on July 9 in Florida have ranged widely over the last five years:

- $2.14/g in 2017,
- $2.19/g in 2016,
- $2.66/g in 2015,
- $3.57/g in 2014 and
- $3.43/g in 2013.

Including the change locally during the past week, prices yesterday were 56.7 cents per gallon higher than a year ago and are 9.0 cents per gallon lower than a month ago. The national average has dropped 6.1 cents per gallon during the last month and stands 60.0 cents per gallon higher than a year ago.

"As gas prices saw their highest level on July 4 in four years, President Trump continues to try to push OPEC to produce more crude oil, but so far, it hasn't materialized into much of anything. Gas prices have inched up in a majority of states and oil prices remain comfortably above $70 per barrel, with no significant relief any time soon," said Patrick DeHaan, head of petroleum analysis for GasBuddy.

Mosquito threat looms over Levy

BY C.L. WATSON

SPECIAL TO THE PIONEER

The possibility of the bite of an infected mosquito killing a person seems more like fiction than reality.

Unfortunately, mosquitoes carrying the Eastern Equine Encephalitis Virus (EEEV) deliver a 33 percent mortality rate to those they infect. In 2013, a person from Bronson lost his life to EEEV, also occasionally referred to as Triple E. With those harrowing facts in mind, Matt Weldon, the director of Levy County Mosquito Control delivered a much-needed PSA to the Chiefland Rotary Club June 27 on an invitation by Levy County Commissioner John Meeks. The topic of presentation was the EEEV and how it has affected Levy County.

Recently, Weldon, along with other Mosquito Control employees, had to euthanize a herd of emus in Bronson. The flock consisted of 28 emus that blood tested positive for the virus. Employees were required to wear hazmat suits to prevent exposure to EEEV. Weldon stated mosquito eggs have the capability to lie dormant in soil for 8 to 10 years. The egg cycle only takes three days and a female mosquito has the potential to lay 4,000 eggs. Five horses and a mule have also been euthanized in Levy County during 2018.

Currently, the state of Florida has Levy County under a Health Alert for the Eastern Equine Encephalitis Virus – the best practice is prevention. Residents are urged to dump any standing water containers that could harbor a mosquito hatchery.

A person infected with EEEV would experience the onset of symptoms 4 to 10 days after contraction. Severe cases could cause inflammation of the brain, sudden onset of headache, high fevers, chills and vomiting. Untreated symptoms could progress to disorientation, seizures or coma.

Meridian plans move to Chiefland this fall

BY LORI PREVATT

SPECIAL TO THE PIONEER

Meridian, a North Central Florida non-profit mental health and addiction treatment provider, is nearing the final phases of preparations to open its Chiefland office, reported President Maggie Labarta at the Levy County Board of County Commissioners meeting July 2.

Labarta said Meridian purchased two buildings across from Chiefland City Hall, which are currently being renovated, and Meridian hopes to have the new office open by the end of this summer. Meridian's Levy County base is currently in Bronson.

"The plan is to move operations from Bronson to Chiefland," Labarta said. "We will have to wait and see what happens before we decide to close the Bronson office."

The commissioners were concerned about the Bronson office closing due to the frequency of court-ordered counseling. The topic of the new office was raised while Meridian was negotiating its yearly budget during the County Commission's budget workshop.

"We are hoping to increase our budget from $75,000 to $78,050," Labarta said. "The funding requested would all go toward patient care. This would be a 5 percent increase from last year."

Labarta illustrated Meridian's budgeting needs by sharing statistics about mental needs currently in Levy County. "We have seen 987 people from Levy already this year," she said. "There was a 60-percent increase in the number of Levy residents seen last year – 20 percent of these clients are school-aged children. Most patients are below the poverty line. Eighty-two Levy patients used Telehealth for treatment, which is a phone treatment option; 177 of the Levy patients used our acute care center."

Labarta said Bipolar Disorder, addictions and opioid addictions are major issues in Levy County.

"In the last five years, there has been a 16 percent growth in the amount of patients from Levy County. In 2017, we saw 1,035 Levy residents."

The County Commissioners approved a 3 percent budget increase instead of the requested 5 percent, putting total funding provided by the county at $77,750.

Unemployment declines but wage growth stalls

"Hundred dollar car note, two hundred rent; I get a check on Friday, but it's all ready ready spent." "Workin' for a Livin'" as performed by Huey Lewis and the News

Margaret McDowell

Arbor Outlook

In spite of low unemployment and a consensus that an economic recovery has taken place, wage growth continues to stall. If the economy is good, where are the high-paying jobs which can support a family?

Unemployment is at its lowest level in 17 years and is likely to remain below four percent for the foreseeable future. Wage growth has often been a byproduct of tight labor markets: employers have to pay more to get good employees, or for that matter, any employees, because there is such competition for labor. But while wages have grown at over three percent per year since 2015, the rate of growth has stalled significantly. Wage growth was at its lowest level since the Great Recession (under two percent) in 2010, and has increased somewhat since then, but remains far below the five percent growth level achieved by the economy in 2000.

The Federal Reserve is raising interest rates periodically this year based partly on these low unemployment numbers. Simply stated, wage growth has traditionally accompanied low unemployment, and raising interest rates is a hedge against inflation.

So why aren't paychecks getting considerably larger? Let's consider two aspects of our current economy: an aging populace and hyper-globalization.

A large number of potential employees out there are growing older. But many business owners and employers are hesitant to hire and pay large salaries to older workers. We have shorter runways than our millennial peers. The median age in the U.S. is now over 38, more than a year older than it was only four years ago. The alternative, of course, is to hire to a younger person, a person with less experience but who may be willing to work for less. So unemployment remains low, but actual wage growth is stymied.

Secondly, international business competition is exerting forces on our economy that we haven't experienced since the late 1800's. When a foreign company makes a competitive product, while paying its workers far less than U.S. workers are paid, it's difficult for American businesses to compete on price. So business owners save money by paying employees less and then pass those savings on to consumers in order to remain competitive in the international marketplace.

There's always been international business competition, but increasing hyper-globalization is creating a larger impact on our economy, and on the level of our wages, than at any time in American history. There's just no way around it.

It's complicated and confounding. The economy continues to improve; wages remain relatively flat.

Ant Man and the Wasp

We last saw Scott "Ant-Man" Lang (Paul Rudd) in 2016's "Captain America: Civil War" where he fought on Cap's side, lost, and went to prison.

It was briefly mentioned in this year's "Avengers: Infinity War" that he took a plea deal where he was released in exchange for promising not to do any more superhero work, making him one of the few MCU heroes not to appear in the film.

Now we're getting "Ant-Man and the Wasp", where we find out what's been going on in his neck of the woods. Like a response you'd expect from a laid-back casual friend, the answer is "not much."

We join Lang as he's just three days away from the end of his mandated house arrest.

It's not so bad - he's had time to transform his house into a most impressive playground for his daughter.

But his plans to peacefully serve out his sentence are threatened when he's abducted by his old friend Hope (Evangelina Lilly).

She and her father, the brilliant scientist Hank Pym (Michael Douglas), have created a device that will allow them to enter the quantum realm, previously thought to be basically a death sentence, to rescue her long-lost mother (Michelle Pfeiffer). They need Lang's help because he's survived the quantum realm himself and because he saw the mother in a vision and might be able to pinpoint her location.

Of course there are complications. For starters, Lang can't be away from his house or he'll go back to prison.

Also, his relationship with Hope and Hank is pretty much shot because he absconded with the Ant-Man tech in "Civil War". More importantly, other parties want the quantum tech for themselves.

A black-market tech dealer (Walton Goggins) wants it to make money, and the molecularly unstable Ghost (Hannah John-Kamen) wants it to continue living.

A lab accident from when she was a child causes her to fade in and out of existence, making her simultaneously vulnerable and dangerous. An old colleague of Hank's (Laurence Fishburne) can help her control her powers, but without energy from the quantum realm, she won't survive much longer.

It's up to Lang, reunited with his Ant-Man suit, and Hope, donning the similar Wasp suit with very little fanfare, to keep the quantum tech from falling into the wrong hands.

We are the same

I've been gone longer than I lived there but there's no doubt my roots are tied deeply to the mountains of Appalachia and the people who live there.

Carolyn Ten Broeck

Editor

This past weekend, I made a 12 1/2 hour trek back as those vibrant verdant hills beckoned me once more.

They are not the mountains of my childhood where narrow two-lane roads were crammed with heavy trucks carrying even heavier loads of coal.

Once impressive homes are now in a state of disrepair and kudzu blankets abandoned properties.

More mobile homes are precariously perched on steep hillsides not far from $300,000 manors.

And yet it is home; a home I left in 1988 but yet have carried with me everywhere I have gone.

I have not been back as often as I should - usually only for a funeral, but this weekend was a happy occasion with some built-in time for exploration and visiting. It was my 40th high school reunion.

We were a small class; a small school. Only 85 graduates marched down the narrow aisles of an auditorium in a school built by the WPA in 1939.

Once it housed grades 1-12, but when high winds toppled the elementary building the summer after I was in first grade, a new elementary school was built and the solidly built main building became home to grades 7-12.

Because of its size, we just didn't know our class - we knew practically everyone in the entire school - all 800 plus students who came from as far away as 30 miles to learn at one of the 10 high schools in the county.

In seventh grade, another elementary school joined those of us from the new school and in ninth grade, yet another elementary school partnered with us to become the graduating class of 1978.

Last week close to half of those who graduated came together for four brief hours to reconnect, reminisce and share our lives in ways we never would have 40 years ago.

Admittedly, I was a bit apprehensive as I pulled into the parking lot of the restaurant where the festivities were held. My heart raced and I was assailed by what ifs.

However as soon as I saw Ricky Jones, the first arrival, those unwaranted apprehensions vanished and 40 years melted away. Suddenly it was German class and Ricky and I were playing chess while speaking German, and sharing our deepest and darkest secrets.

With each arrival, the hugs, kisses and genuine smiles eradicated everything but the moment.

The cliques that once were disappeared as classmates came together and discovered new commonalities - even things we had in common back then but never even thought about discussing.

For many who thought they had nothing in common at age 17, they discovered now, four decades later, that there are more similarities than differences.

Marriages, children, grandchildren, unemployment, the deaths of loved ones - these are the things that bind us now.

During the self introductions, we listened intently as some described the death of a child, the loss of a husband, the pain of addiction, the joy of a grandchild, the happiness of retirement, the thrill of a long marriage.

Envy and jealousy were non-existent. Only the sheer blessing of being together in the same place, healthy and whole, was present.

As the evening drew to a close, there were promises made to stay better in touch, to visit more often and to come together in two years, rather than wait longer.

As I drove back to the hotel, I grinned like I had not in years.

My heart was full and while many chose not to join us, I knew the 1,472 mile trek in a beat up 10-year-old sun blistered car with questionable air conditioning was worth it.

Forty years! How could it be? In those four hours we were again the 17 and 18-year-olds we once were.

There was no gray hair, no wrinkled faces, no aching joints.

We were, however, extensions of our former selves: the unfiltered talkers, the sweet good girls, the rough-and-tumble boys, the rebels and the conformists.

We are the same, but different.

Wiser, classier, more tactful, more loving, more nurturing, more sympathetic, less judgmental, less selfish.

We are the Virgie High School Class of 1978 and I am proud of us.

CDC releases alarming suicide rates

The Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) released staggering suicide facts last week. In all but one state (Nevada which saw a 1 percent drop in suicide rates), the overall rate increased across the board since 1999 with over half of the states seeing an increase of 30 percent or more. Furthermore, over half (54 percent) of those deaths had no reported "mental health conditions." They had, however, recently experienced relationship problems (42 percent); a crisis in the past or upcoming two weeks (29 percent); substance abuse issues (28 percent); a physical health problem (22 percent); a job/financial problem (16 percent); a criminal/legal problem (9 percent); or a loss of housing (4 per-

The woman on the other end of the line introduced herself as a psychiatrist who had dined with my youngest daughter the previous evening. Along with a panel of professional leaders and other psychiatrists, this woman had been tasked with evaluating a severe productivity failure in a workforce of over 70,000. The members of the task force had met on numerous occasions to discuss, organize, and compile their findings. They would be presenting their final report that very afternoon.

She explained that the day prior, she had received a call from the pre-

Enough is enough and I've had enough

I have had enough of some things. There are, however, some things I can never have enough. Apple fritters and coffee are things of which I can never have enough. I would never use the word "enough" with these words.

Some things are in this category of "I've Had Enough."

Recently, the Gracious Mistress of the Parsonage said, "Your birthday is coming up. What do you want to do for your birthday?"

I looked at her like I have never looked at her before and said, "Enough, I've had enough of birthdays I don't want another birthday."

She looked at me, laughed like usual and said, "Silly boy, everybody has a birthday."

In a way, I guess she is right, but I have had enough birthdays and I do not want another birthday.

I think birthday celebrations are rather silly when you get to be a certain age. Sure, when you were young and full of energy, you looked forward to birthday celebrations. You looked forward to all the birthday presents you were going to be getting. Nothing is more exciting than celebrating your birthday.

That certainly is one stage of life. However, that stagecoach has left the ranch. I have had enough birthdays.

One of the aggravating things about a birthday is that you have to disclose your age. You know when you say, for example, "I'm 60," people will always respond by saying, "You don't look 60."

Everybody knows that is the code for saying, "You sure do look old."

Or, somebody will say,

"60 is the new 40." I have no idea what that means, but I certainly do not want to live 40 again.

Mind you, I have nothing against birthday cakes and such. I have had enough birthday cakes throughout my life that I probably do not need anymore. If only I could get a birthday cake without all of the hullabaloo and the singing, "Happy birthday to you..."

But there is a main concern I have about my birthday. I have given this some rather deep thought and I have come to my ultimate conclusion.

That conclusion is, I really do not know when my birthday is.

That may sound silly, but I have good reasons to question the actual birth date.

Unfortunately, I cannot remember anything about that day. I do have a vague memory of being hung upside down by my feet and somebody slapping my backside. That is all I remember.

I do not know the actual date and year.

My wife one time said to me, "Well, your parents told you what your birthday was. You should trust them."

And that is the problem. It is a problem of trust. In the beginning years of my life, whenever it started, my parents had the habit of lying to me.

For instance. It took me years to discover that they had been lying to me about Santa Claus and the Easter Bunny. For many years, they assured me there was a real Santa Claus and a real Easter Bunny. Can you imagine the heartache I experienced when

Out to Pastor

I discovered that they were not being truthful to me?

If they were not truthful to me about Santa Claus or the Easter Bunny, how can I be sure they were truthful to me about my actual birth date?

Someone once pointed out that I had a birth certificate, but I do not know the validity of that birth certificate. I do not remember being present when that certificate was signed. How do I know it is not fake?

It took me a long time to realize that even the Tooth Fairy was not actually true. When they told me about the Tooth Fairy, I could hardly wait to yank a tooth out of my mouth and put it under my pillow.

Imagine the disappointment I felt when I discovered there was no such thing as a Tooth Fairy.

If I would take the time to investigate, I probably would find a lot more things my parents told me that turned out not to be true. So, when it comes to my birth date, how can I really believe that that is my actual birth date?

What, if I am not as old as my parents say I am?

So, with all the information I have not found, how can I celebrate my birthday again? I think I should just put it aside as I did Santa Claus, the Easter Bunny and the Tooth Fairy. I should put it in the same category, laugh it off and say, "Ha, ha, ha, none of this is true."

"What do you mean," my wife queried, "you're not going to celebrate your birthday anymore?"

I explained to her that I celebrated enough birthdays, birthday I'm not quite sure is my actual birthday, so I don't need to celebrate anymore. Enough is certainly enough.

"What about my birthday?"

I simply looked at her and said, "We sure will be celebrating your birthday at least once a year." She smiled and I left it at that.

Later that night I thought of some Scripture I had read in the morning. "The Lord our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount" (Deuteronomy 1:6). God was trying to get Israel to move on.

Like Israel, sometimes we can stay "long enough" at a certain place and then we need to move on.

Outdoor Truths

At the top of my list right now is becoming proficient with my bow. Nothing would be worse than to travel for hours to hunt a nice buck and then miss it because I wasn't comfortable with my bow. Those are the things sleepless nights are made of.

I can remember when I first became interested in bow hunting. I went to a local archery shop that a friend of mine owned. I hinted to him about the uncertainty I had about my ability to hunt with such a complex piece of equipment.

He assured me of my ability by setting up a bow for me and giving me a few pointers. It took only a few minutes for me to know I could hit what I was aiming at.

What I remember most was his admonition for me to "Let the bow do all the work."

He was letting me know that if a bow is tuned correctly, all I had to do was hold the pin (sight) on the target, slowly squeeze the trigger on my release, and the arrow would go where I aimed. If my bow was tuned right, my practice sessions would be geared toward holding the pin steadier on the target and judging the distance between me and my target. After that, just let the bow do all the work. This is also a great truth for us to know about the Christian life.

It seems today, there is a great frustration among those of us who call ourselves Christians. It comes from our inability to live the truths we hold dear. We want to do what's right but it seems we keep failing and failing.

Cake auction proceeds help breast cancer patients

BY SEAN ARNOLD
SEAN.ARNOLD@CHIEFLANDCITIZEN.COM

The Levy County Horse Club raised more than $10,000 for Breast Cancer Awareness (BCA) last year, culminating its efforts with the 17th Annual Breast Cancer Awareness Trail Ride in the Goethe Forest last October.

The Club is back at it again, raising funds for breast cancer patients. On July 13 and July 14, in conjunction with Chiefland cupcake shop Marie's Sweets, the group is holding its Cake Auction for Breast Cancer Awareness online. All of the funds will go towards breast cancer patients at Shands Hospital in Gainesville.

"(Levy County Horse Club) sets a goal every year to raise enough money to help out breast cancer patients. The money helps (patients) with gas, bills, medication or anything else they might need help with," said Marie of Marie's Sweets, which is facilitating the delivery of the treats from bakers to bidders. "We all know someone, either in our family, one of our friends or elsewhere, that has been diagnosed with breast cancer. It's awful what these ladies have to go through."

Anyone wishing to help can either donate a cake to Marie's Sweets on East Park Avenue, Chiefland or go to @ Mariesweets15 and search Cake Auction for Breast Cancer in Events to purchase cakes. The auction starts at 12 p.m. Friday, July 13, and lasts until 3 p.m. Sunday, July 15.

Marie's Sweets is posting on Facebook photos of the treats, which may include cakes, cookies, bundt cakes, cheesecakes, brownies or other items, before the auction on Facebook. Marie encourages everyone to share the event on social media with as many friends as possible to attract more bidders and bakers.

The Levy County Horse Club is holding its 18th Annual Breast Cancer Awareness Trail Ride this October. The Club president is Dave Wilson, and the Club secretary is Bonnie Wilson.

Construction burglar nabbed

BY SCOTT TUMMOND
LCSO PUBLIC INFORMATION

Construction of a new home can be exciting and frustrating for the owner as well as the construction company, all within a single day. Delays caused by weather and supply shipments are always an issue.

However, theft of the very tools and supplies you do have will push the frustration level to the limit. This was the case of one local man just trying to get his home built.

On June 16, deputies responded to theft to a home under construction and met with the victim, who discovered approximately $860.00 in tools and supplies had been stolen from the construction site. Deputies returned to the site on July 4 and on July 5 for two additional reports of theft. An additional $1380.00 in tools and construction supplies were stolen in these consecutive days.

David Lee Runion, 35, of Williston, was later arrested by the Levy County Sheriff's Office Criminal Investigations Division (CID) for perpetrating these thefts. Investigators received information that Runion was responsible. Runion was located at a home outside of Williston and confronted. He admitted to these thefts and directed investigators to a stash of stolen property, some of which had already been sold to unsuspecting buyers. Investigators also recovered a stolen four-wheeler and other items linked to additional reports. These cases are still under investigation and more charges are expected to be filed soon. Many of the stolen tools and supplies recovered have been returned to the owners.

Runion was booked in to the Levy County Detention Facility. He has been charged with two counts of burglary, three counts of grand theft and one count of dealing in stolen property. His bond has been set at $160,000.00.

situation with a partially funded mandate. We have been funding school resource officers for years."

The commissioners also suggested the Sheriff may want to approach the School Board about implementing the school guardian program, at least in some schools. The program is a Safe Schools option whereby staff on campus are trained to use weapons in case of emergencies.

"The School Board does not want to take that approach," McCallum said. "Safe Schools officers have to have 132 hours of firearms training, in addition to 600 hours of other types of training. They would just assist with active threats. There are no doubts in the language in the Safe School Act. Guardians can't do anything else but respond to an active threat. They can't transport students and arrest students. Guardians can be any school personnel but teachers.

The School Board would be required to pay for guardians' training as well.

Commission Chairman John Meeks noted how difficult it is for school guardian applicants to pass the psychological evaluation. "I hear that one out of seven people can't pass the psych evaluation," he said.

Superintendent of Schools Jeff Edison said all sides responsible for funding Safe Schools are struggling to find funds, but remain committed to keeping a deputy at every school.

"This is a mutual problem that we have," Edison said. "We'll mutually solve this problem. I can tell you that myself, the school board, the sheriff and the county commissioners are committed to making sure that resources are allocated to make sure we have a deputy at every school. Exactly how that happens – the budget is a process, it is what it is. If we or the county were flush with a bunch of money, it wouldn't be an issue."

Edison noted that the school district is limited in how much it can levy for additional revenue. He said the state has provided $350,000 for Safe Schools as well as additional funding that must be spent on mental health. He said enrollment is not predicted to increase this year, so no additional funding is expected.

"Our people would like an increase in salary, and that hasn't happened in a couple years," Edison said. "On the school board side, we got, from the state of Florida, a 47 cent raise."

McCallum suggested that the commissioners possibly consider giving him the funding previously marked for building the new 911 call center, an amount of $293,402.

"Maybe we could make some of the funding back in years 2, 3, and 4," McCallum said. The commissioners were not in agreement to give that funding up. The funding for the center has been put away for a few years now.

After a couple of hours of deliberation, the commissioners concurred that the $1.2 million increase, less the funding already promised per year, was all the county could absorb. This left the county paying around $800,000 in additional funding.

Commissioner Rooks made a motion to fund the Sheriff's Office $13,577,299, which would still leave the sheriff's office short for operating costs at around $275,000 for the school resource officer program. The motion passed unanimously.

"We will have to continue using our regular deputies in the schools and paying them overtime," McCallum said. "This may affect the raises I planned to give my deputies. I may have to come back to request more money later on," McCallum said.

Undersheriff Brett Beauchamp said the consequences for not being in compliance with the Safe Schools Act is not known. "I would think we could be sued by the state if we don't follow the protocol," he said.

Sean Arnold contributed to this report.

"Overall, our performance was close to the same as last year. We're a little better this year than we were last year. We're making some strides, but by no means are we where we're going to be next year."

Edison noted the challenges schools face around the state in dealing with teacher shortages while also having to sustain training for the new standards and assessments.

siding authority over this workforce. He asked her to meet and interview my daughter. She followed through with the request and exclaimed that she, as well as the other members of the task force, now found themselves in a state of uncertainty.

Over the past year, each member of the task force had traveled the globe, surveying, interviewing, and analyzing a large sampling of workers to identify their weaknesses and compile a workable plan to restore productivity levels. She expounded that their conclusions were relative to millennial preferences and needs.

She requested a few moments of my time to investigate my daughter's history, her personality, her accomplishments, disappointments, education, family dynamic, etc. I agreed and the interview began.

During our conversation, she stated that the employer had cut training hours from four to three weeks, the workers suffered performance anxiety, separation anxiety (from their devices), were required to utilize and work through social media, were unable to focus on tasks, delved into pornography and fraternization during work hours, and battled perfectionism. The task force's suggestions for remedies were to increase training, introduce problem-solving skills, and allow each worker his/her personal devices.

The psychiatrist's dinner with my daughter unsubstantiated their findings because although she is a member of this workforce and a millennial, she is self-motivated, organized, confident, able to analyze failure and restructure methods for success, manages her time effectively, excels in her work, and is responsible. The panel was perplexed.

The psychiatrist wanted to know what had made my daughter different. The answer is that she was never given a trophy nor received praise for something she did not accomplish or deserve; she was never shielded from the realities of life while growing up, and she was responsible for her assigned tasks knowing that if she failed, the consequences were hers.

I am sure that problem-solving and coping is very complicated for the mentally ill and thereby makes suicide a very real and dangerous threat. The CDC however, has plainly stated that over half the suicides in America (54 percent) are not illness related; rather, they are issue related. If over half of the suicides are issue related our society is suffering from a lack of problem-solving and/or coping skills.

Shielding your child from pain, disappointment, and responsibility does not make him/her a functioning adult. The baby steps of pain and disappointment toward adulthood strengthen our children and prepare them for the internal battles of emotional nightmares, excruciating betrayals, bigotry, unfair disappointments, and everything else that will hit them in life. Without these skill-building experiences as children, your adult child will be unable to cope and recover from the realities of life.

As a mortician who sees the sad reality of suicide upon her embalming table far too often, I plead with you to stop this insanity of shielding children when they should be developing life coping and life-sustaining skills. Allow them to learn good sportsmanship, the joy that comes from sacrifice and service, and the exhilaration that replaces disappointment after a skill has been mastered. In so doing, it is my fervent prayer that your child will not be the next suicide victim lying on an embalming table somewhere in America because he/she recently experienced relationship problems (42 percent); a crisis in the past or upcoming two weeks (29 percent); substance abuse issues (28 percent); a physical health problem (22 percent); a job/financial problem (16 percent); a criminal/legal problem (9 percent); or a loss of housing (4 percent).

Instead, prepare your child to be a well-functioning adult able to handle disappointments and problem solve their way to recovery.

This leaves us discouraged and doubtful.

The problem is not our sinfulness; the Bible says we are all sinners.

The problem is in our understanding of "tuning."

You see, when we focus on "doing" and "not" doing, we fail. But when we focus on staying "in tune," we succeed.

We must understand this truth. Jesus is our perfectly tuned tool for life. He will do the work for us.

Jesus put it this way. "Abide in Me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abides in the vine, neither can you, unless you abide in Me."

Our job is not in the doing or not doing but in abiding. It is in letting Jesus live out His life through us. Today, make sure you're in tune and then rest in His ability to make you into what He wants you to be.

are of course known as small superheroes, so perhaps it's appropriate that this is a film of small aspirations.

There's no fate-of-the-universe stakes here, it's just a squabble over who gets to use the unproven quantum tech to save, at most, one life.

That's not to say that the characters won't engage in fights, chases, or other action set pieces to achieve those ends, but everybody is unofficially okay with not letting the action get too far out of hand (relatively speaking, there's still a skyscraper-sized ant suit and an actual skyscraper that can pop up at will in play).

I can sort of understand the MCU wanting to go low-key with "Ant-Man and the Wasp" to balance out the enormity of "Infinity War", but in the process we're losing significance. Aside from getting Ghost and the Pfeiffer and Fishburne characters into the equation, what reason does this movie really have to exist? Part of my problem with "Ant-Man and the Wasp" is that Ant-Man is a silly superhero and we're not far enough removed from the aggressive silliness of "Deadpool 2" (which is still in the top ten at the box office), not to mention the character's more consequential MCU brethren in "Infinity War" (still in the top 15) for the film to feel like a breath of fresh air.

This movie should have waited until, say, November, where it would have been more effective as a bridge between "Infinity War" from April and "Captain Marvel" next March. As it is, we're getting an occasionally fun, but ultimately flimsy superhero movie that falls noticeably short of its contemporaries.

Grade: C-

"Ant-Man and the Wasp" is rated PG-13 for some sci-fi action violence. Its running time is 118 minutes.
