New law brings changes to school testing

By MARC VALERO STAFF WRITER

SEBRING - Many changes in school assessments, accountability and student progression are coming this year due to House Bill 7069, which lawmakers passed during the 2017 legislative session.

In a Dec. 29 memo to school superintendents, Florida Department of Education Chancellor of Public Schools Hershel Lyons presented an outline of the changes, which included a requirement for paper-based testing at some grade levels.

The bill requires that the statewide, standardized English language arts and mathematics assessments in grades three and six be administered only in a paper-based format, starting from the 2017-18 school year so that all such assessments are paper-based no later the 2018-19 school year.

Also, the legislation removed the provision for the algebra 2 end-ofcourse (EOC) assessment. The last time the test was given was in spring 2017.

With this change, the requirement that the exam count as 30 percent of the student's final course grade for Algebra 2 has been deleted. Also, deleted is the requirement that a student must pass the algebra 2 EOC assessment in order to earn a "scholar diploma" designation.

Along with specifying the earliest dates for statewide testing and the test date window, HB 7069 requires the Department of Education to move up its publication date of the statewide assessment calendar from August to January of each year, beginning this year.

By Jan. 1, the Department of Education was required to publish the assessment calendars for the 2018-19 and 2019-20 school years.

A new, more comprehensive student score report for the statewide assessments will be implemented explaining the student's results, including information identifying the student's strengths and weaknesses.

The report will include actions that can be taken and resources that can be utilized for improving areas of weaknesses.

It was the first time for Kaylee and her mother, Julie, and father, Nathan, who moved to Sebring two years ago from Loxahatchee.

The family went over to the car show first and "then we came over here because everybody was hungry," her husband said.

Church Service Center Director John Jeffo offered a list of thanks Thursday in the cramped shed.

Students from Avon Park's public schools collected and donated 6,000 cans of food, which were delivered to the center by the Avon Park Noon Rotary Club, he said.

"Highlands Ridge did three tons of food for us," Jeffo said. "The students from Avon Park Lakes Baptist Church delivered one ton of cans."

The Florida Flywheelers donated 1,000 cans that were delivered by the Avon Park Fire Department.

Avon Park Council to consider contracts for Fisher, Batz

By MARC VALERO STAFF WRITER

AVON PARK — The City Council will consider employment contracts today for two department heads — one who was hired in December 2016 and the other who was hired last month.

Councilors will consider three-year employment contracts for both Fire Chief Brad Batz, who started working for the city in December 2016, and Administrative Services Director/City Clerk June Fisher, who joined the city staff last month.

According to the contracts, Batz's base annual salary is $65,000 and Fisher's base annual salary is $90,000.

According to the proposed contract, Batz and Fisher will serve at the "will and pleasure" of the city manager and may be terminated with a 21-day notice

"at any time for any reason subject to applicable law."

Should they be involuntarily terminated, they will get fivemonths severance pay except under certain coniditions, the proposed contract states.

City Manager Julian Deleon noted on the agenda that Batz's and Fisher's contracts are based on "the standard city employment contract," which has been used in the past for other department heads.

The majority of city employees are entitled to "due process" for any disciplinary matter, he said. This can even include arbitration for immediate reinstatement with back pay. This means more employment stability when compared to the city's administrative staff.

At Avon Park, department heads are considered "entirely at-will," which means the employee can be terminated without cause or reason, he said. These positions can be more "volatile and unstable."

The City Council will meet for its regular meeting at 6 p.m. in the Council Chambers, 123 E. Pine St., Avon Park.

The Community Redevelopment Agency Board will have a special meeting at 5:30 p.m. today to consider approval of the Martin Luther King Day festivities as approved by the South Side CRA Advisory Board.

Mullins went through the police academy and joined the Lake Placid Police Department as a reservist in 2006 after retiring from a successful banking career at Wauchula State Bank. Mullins said that he enjoyed that so much that he wanted to make the leap to full time work before he got older. Mullins wears many hats for the department. He is a business tax official, teaches CPR, and educates the public on car seat and bike safety, assists in self defense classes, assists with evidence and property and he is also the code enforcement officer.

"I feel like this job was catered to fit me," Mullins said. "James doesn't micromanage me, he lets me help others wherever I can. The best part of my job is helping people, especially kids. I love seeing gratitude in the eyes."

Not everything in law enforcement is glamorous. Mullins said seeing people hurting is the worst part of his job.

"The part of my job that is not great is seeing crimes against people, especially the young and elderly," Mullins said. "You can see people at the worst moments of their lives; that can chip away at you."

Mullins' wife of nearly 30 years, Tammy, is very proud but not surprised at her husband's promotion, although the early years were a little hard to get used to.

"Mostyn was in banking, so the shifts were hard to get used to at first," Tammy Mullins said. "He also gets a lot of calls to translate Spanish, so I have to share him. I am very proud of what he has accomplished. He has increased the car seat and rodeo programs. He is always willing to help individuals and the community. He always wants to be there for everyone." Mullins has no regrets in his second career choice. "The only regret I have is that my father was not here to see me get promoted."

Mysteries of the cold snap on house plant

It has been a chilly start to the new year, one that not many of us were expecting, considering how warm the last few months have been.

But, this is Florida, and we are known for having a tropical weather system with extreme variations of whatever weather we receive.

Since the cold snap, I have been very worried about my plants. I have no pets, so the plants I care for are the only living things I am responsible for. I have five plants, and most of them have names. I tell them goodbye when I leave for work in the morning, and even decorate some, according to the holiday or season.

So, obviously, my plants are very important to me.

Probably the funniest aspect of this all is that I definitely don't have a green thumb. I have been killing plants since I started owning them, all the way back to eight grade. I can specifically remember buying Heathers for a science fair. And then when one of the plants died, rather than admit I was responsible for the death, I asked my mother to buy me another of the same plant so I could take it to school for the presentation. This does not mean I do not like plants. It is clear that I must have some fondness for them. Since the weather has changed, I have been bringing my plants in and out of my house, depending on whether I think it is too cold for them.

NEW TEMPORARY LOCATION Now Accepting New Patients

M.D.

They sit snug in an Amazon box near my window, looking like they belong there in the cardboard. Of course they do not, but they add a niceness to my home, I like to pretend. One thing that I do not understand about my plants is their adaptability to conditions outside of their norm. For instance, I have one plant that is starting to lose some color at the end of the leaves.

I cannot tell if this is from the cold, or if I am doing something wrong with the light and water. Someone told me that it is because of the weather, since the plant has been outside a few days in a row now. There hasn't been any frost, so I thought it was OK to leave the plant outside.

After being told the issue was the weather, I did some research on my plant to figure out its origin. I found out that the plant is from the Northwestern region of the United States, where it gets much colder than it does here.

This makes me wonder if my plant has grown accustomed to Florida weather and its abundance of sunshine? But is that how it works with plants? Genetic factors must come in somewhere, right?

A plant originally grown in another location that has been grown in Florida will do what — adapt to Florida weather or be OK with weather from the other location, too? I am still yet to find out, and only time can tell.

Here is a Ouestion for you to consider today. WHY DO PEOPLE LISTENTOTHE RADIO?

They either listen to be entertained or simply to have background noise while driving or doing household chores. For those who listen to be entertained, advertising is considered an interruption. For those who have the radio on simply for background noise, the advertisement goes completely unnoticed.

The radio industry itself recognizes listeners don't want to have their music interrupted by advertising, which is why many stations promote themselves as the station that "plays more music, less commercials."

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Newspapers have had their fair share of ups and downs since the emergence of digital media, but despite this, they have steadily maintained their local readership base and strength for local marketing.

Let's take a look at the many advantages of newspaper advertising:

- Advertising in a newspaper is not seen as an interruption. In fact, numerous surveys have shown one of the reasons people buy newspapers is to view the ads for their local stores and businesses. Consumers do want and need to be exposed to advertising; they simply want ads on their own terms.
- 2. A newspaper ad can be cut out and saved for later. This means your coupon or contact information can and usually will land on someone's refrigerator or in their wallet or purse.
- 3. Unlike radio, whose market share is often far less than first calculated, local newspapers consistently deliver to households 365 days out of the year.
- 4. Unlike radio, which is often playing in the background and not really heard, newspapers can deliver true consumer engagement. When a person reads an advertisement it's because they choose to do so. They give their full attention to your message and will remember you when they need your product or service.
- 5. You've probably heard newspaper subscriptions and readership have dropped in the last five years or so, and that's somewhat true, but not to the extent that many would like you to believe. The other side of that coin is, the readership of the online versions of newspapers is growing rapidly, much faster than the 7% or so losses in the physical subscriptions.

The Highlands News-Sun, your hometown newspaper since 1919, not only delivers the news but also delivers major returns on your advertising dollars.

Kenilworth Lodge's storied beginnings

George Sebring's Kenilworth Lodge is all boarded up and permanently closed, according to a sign on the door. The hotel built in 1916 in the style of the grand resort hotels in Florida was for wealthy northern tourists. It was the most impressive building erected in Sebring before the Florida Land Boom. It was also the city's first example of Spanish style architecture

The Kenilworth featured a long central block with two truncated wings. The wings were extended to their present length in the early 1920s. The building has a wood frame structure covered in smooth stucco that contains 125 guest rooms, a large lobby with a large fireplace, lounge area, dining room, kitchen, barber-shop and steam laundry.

Originally, the Kenilworth and other local hotels remained open only three months out of the year — from January 1 to April 1. The tourists were from the Mid-Atlantic and Mid-Western states. Many came by train every year to Sebring to escape the cold northern winters.

Under the direction of experienced hotel managers from summer resorts in the Northeast, the Kenilworth's large staff, averaged one hotel employee for each guest.

They offered a range of recreational services on the 320 acre grounds that surrounded the hotel. Visitors could play a round of golf on an 18-hole championship course that was considered one of the finest in Florida, stroll through the hotel's orange grove, or relax on a large terraced lawn that sloped gracefully to Lake Jackson, no Lakeview Drive at that time. Sailboats and motor launches were available. The nearby lakes and the untamed wilderness that surrounded Sebring offered excellent hunting and fishing opportunities. At the height of the Boom in 1924 the Kenilworth gained national attention when it played host to the annual Governor's Conference.

Some 40 state leaders from throughout the nation attended the conference. Escorted by Governor Cary A. Hardee of Florida. the party made a grand tour of the state, stopping in Sebring for two days. The event was highlighted by a grand banquet at the Kenilworth where the governors were toasted by George Sebring and other local dignitaries.

George Sebring sold the hotel in the early 1920s to a group of investors from New York. In September 1925, Vincent Hall and Lewis Harder, developers of Lakewood Terrace and Harder Hall, purchased the Kenilworth Lodge and several of the other hotels in Sebring. The sale was accompanied by a promise to renovate the hotel and upgrade its facilities.

Before much could be accomplished, the Boom collapsed, bringing the Lakewood Terrace Corporation to financial ruin. In 1927 the Kenilworth was purchased at auction by David Tuttle, who operated it throughout the Great Depression.

The Kenilworth is listed on the National Register for Historical Place -June 15, 2000.

A real need for affordable housing

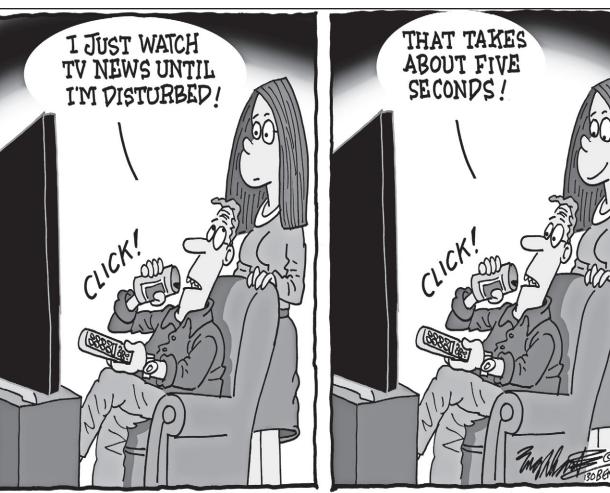

If Monroe County doesn't help build housing that restaurant servers, fast-food workers, hotel staffers and supermarket managers, to say nothing of cashiers can afford, its tourism-based foundation will crumble.

After Hurricane Irma swept through the Lower Keys in September — and swept up homes and boats and mobile homes in its path — service workers left Florida's southernmost county in droves. Given their salaries, their housing options were tenuous to begin with. After Hurricane Irma, those options were wiped out. That means jobs have been slow to return, and much of the Keys' economic base remains in peril.

We commend state Rep. Holly Raschein, R-Key Largo, for stepping up to file a request for $20 million to buy property in the Keys to rebuild affordable and workforce housing. Raschein also is requesting $2.85 million for a pilot program that would provide 30 pre-manufactured units for displaced Monroe residents. Raschein says that the units could be installed in hours rather than weeks or months, as is the case with traditional construction.

According to the Florida Keys Keynoter, almost 1,200 buildings, both residential and commercial, were destroyed by the hurricane, a Category 4. And this statistic does not include mobile homes. More than 1,000 structures received damage beyond 50 percent of the building's value; almost 40,000 households have applied for assistance through the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Keep in mind, there are about 55,000 housing units in the entire county.

So Raschein has a strong case to make to her colleagues to come through for the Keys. It remains in crisis mode. But money is not the only resource that's desperately needed. There needs to be an abundance of political will, too. As the push for workforce housing gets started, so has the pushback. Many residents, understandably, are concerned about high density and the pressure it can add to public services and infrastructure. Officials should be clear that they are looking to replace lost, often unstable housing, not add to the population. There's another challenge against which elected officials should stand firm. They are in charge of a waterfront asset that developers are drooling over. In South Florida, counties too often acquiesce to the temptation of attracting more affluent residents, walling off public assets and — pocketing those cam-paign donations — at the expense of housing for people who provide basic, and vital, consumer services. Virtually every county in the state is struggling with a scarcity of affordable housing. Unfortunately, Gov. Rick Scott himself has been of little help. As of November, his proposed budget would pilfer $92 million from Florida's affordable-housing trust funds and use them for other priorities. The shame of it is that diverting these funds has become a short-sighted tradition in this state. Monroe officials should be resolute and not waver. Nor should they give in to any potential "them vs. us" hostility, as some affluent residents intimate that affordable and workforce housing will invite less desirable — to their minds - residents.

A wonderful year in office

I recently marked one year since being sworn in as sheriff, and I wanted to take this opportunity to thank everyone in Highlands County for helping to make that year a success.

We have accomplished a lot here since I was sworn in, but I can take none of the credit. That belongs to all of the members of the Highlands County Sheriff's Office and the public that have helped us make improvements to your sheriff's office. I could not be more proud of the people I work with for all of their efforts on things like:

• Earning re-accreditation in both law enforcement and detention;

• The acquisition of Animal Services and the improvements to the facility;

Moving into the new headquarters building;
Dementia awareness training to make us the first dementia-friendly county in the state of Florida;

FROM THE SHERIFF Paul Blackman

Hurricane Irma. And all of that doesn't include the excellent dayto-day work that has taken place in order to make key arrests that have kept a lot of drugs and dangerous criminals off the streets of our county, kept our detention facility safe and secure and kept our part of the justice system functioning at a high level of success.

None of this could be things law enforcement officers deal with every day has nothing to do with criminals?

Every time a deputy or another first responder steps out of their car during a traffic stop, at an accident scene or to help a motorist in a disabled vehicle, they are taking one of the biggest risks associated with their profession. They are putting their lives in the hands of the drivers that will be passing that scene.

January is "Move Over" month in Florida, highlighting the state law that requires motorists to either move over a lane or slow down to 20 mph under the posted speed limit when authorized law enforcement, emergency or service vehicles displaying any visible signals while stopped on the roadside, including Road Rangers, sanitation vehicles and tow trucks. law. That's likely because younger drivers have grown up with the law, which went into effect in 2002.

To comply with the Move Over law drivers must (in a multi-lane highway):

• Move out of (while using a turn signal) the lane closest to the stationary emergency vehicle, sanitation vehicle, utility service vehicle, Road Ranger or wrecker;

• Slow down to 20 mph under the posted speed limit if moving over is not possible; and

• be prepared to allow those who are attempting to move over into the next lane.

On a two-lane road, the law says drivers must slow down to 20 mph under the posted limit (if the limit is under 20 mph, then you should drive 5 mph). If you can safely move

Nonsense. "Those" people make the Keys the tourist mecca that it is, serving dinners, working the cash register, answering 911 calls — everything vital to a robust quality of life.

Surprisingly, it is not younger drivers that are the biggest culprits. The FHP says that drivers ages 30-60 are the ones who are least likely to heed the into the other lane, that is allowed, providing there is no solid yellow line on that part of the road.

Once there was a tree

Once there was a tree. She loved a little boy. And the tree was happy. She gave all she could to this boy. As the boy grew up, the tree finally had nothing left to give ... and the tree was happy, but not really. Until the boy became an old man and needed only a place to sit and rest. And the tree could provide such a gift. And the tree was happy. (Paraphrased from Shel Silverstein's "The Giving Tree".)

Whether you focus on the selfless and certainly undeserved giving by the tree throughout this story, life lessons to all. Life is not easy. Life is not always happy. Success does not necessarily bring fulfillment. Yet shouldn't we strive to give a little more? Can we share more of ourselves with others? And we all benefit from the reminder to be more polite and grateful.

The Champion for Children Foundation's logo of children dancing around a tree represents childhood joy, safety, and strong families. Our vision is for all local youth to mature into responsible adult members of a global society. With the generous support of our partners and active service of our volunteers, we are able to help provide encouragement, stability, safety, and most importantly protect, train and support our children who are our future. And we are certainly happy and extremely blessed to do so.

The Champion for Children Foundation is able to give to families in our community based on the needs of the children and family such as shelter, food, gas, health, counseling, parent support, and more. Our tree is happy, in spite of the realities of life, as we strive to protect our children from neglect and prevent further trauma.

Champion for Children Foundation Founder and Chairman of the Board Kevin J. Roberts is known to share this challenge from his own heart: "No life is complete unless it includes service to others."

So give, then give some more. And be happy.

Today, the 18 member ensemble continues to play many of the original Miller arrangements both from the civilian band and the AAFB libraries. Additionally, it also plays some more modern selections arranged and performed in the Miller style and sound. Just as it was in Glenn's day, the Glenn Miller Orchestra today is still the most sought after big band in the world!

This was their first time in the barbecue event and they will be better prepared next year, Delaney said.

As it seems every year, this year's festival occurred during a cold snap.

Dave Travers, of the Sebring Firemen, said around noon Saturday that it was starting to warm up and it was looking good with many classic cars assembled and everybody having a good time.

The barbecue teams prepared for the competition on the first day of the festival Friday.

Sgt. John Lott was confident Friday that his team of Highlands County Sheriff's Office jailers would produce the best barbecue, But Todd Turner had the same confidence about his team of court bailiffs, who also work for the Highlands County Sheriff's Office. "Everyone thinks they're the best," Lott said.

Regardless of who makes the best barbecue, both Lott and Turner said the competition involving law enforcement, firefighters and emergency medical responders isn't a cut-throat competition.

"We're just here for fun," Lott said.

Lott said they would be barbecuing ribs, chicken and pork all night long as they had to submit the finished product to judges at 10:30 a.m. Saturday.

While Lott and Turner spend their days in law enforcement-related duties, other people cooking barbecue at the event do that for their living.

Jeffo will be looking at architectural drawings soon to construct a new 5,000-square-foot building on nearby land on Rowe Street, which the city owns.

Land that is now home to a rarely used skate park will be donated by the city to the Ministerial Association, he said.

Wheln Engineering Cadillac DPi sets best time in Saturday evening session

Special to Highlands News-Sun

Throughout the first two days of the Roar Before The Rolex 24 test at Daytona International Speedway, the four Cadillac DPi-V.R race cars have resided at or near the top of the time charts. In fact, through Saturday night's fifth IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship practice session, a Cadillac has led every session, topped by a best overall lap of 1 minute, 36.973 seconds (132.154 mph) by Felipe Nasr in the No. 31 Whelen Engineering Cadillac DPi in the fourth session on Saturday afternoon. Defending series and race champion Jordan Taylor was able to pinpoint why Cadillac has been so strong prior to the Saturday night session. "Obviously, we're coming back for a second year with our car," said the driver of the No. 10 Konica Minolta Cadillac DPi. "As a team, we've been racing here for 10-15 years, so we have a lot of experience here at Daytona and with this package, so we expected SEBRING — There are few guarantees in life, but one may be that the Harder Hall Women's Invitational golf tournament will bring out the worst in Florida weather. This year's running of the 63rd annual event produced a record four-day low in temperatures in the tournament's history, coupled with a blustery wind.

Through it all, it was Yujeong Son, a 16 year old from Norman, Oklahoma, who was best able to solve the riddle of the elements to overcome a one-shot deficit after two rounds to win the tournament by a convincing six shots, shooting an even par for a three day total of 216.

"I stuck with my game, I did not play great either," said Son on whether she made any major adjustments to account for the weather conditions. "But I trusted my game, it has been solid all week."

Son admits that the weather conditions caught her off guard, thinking Florida would be warm and sunny.

"Oh my goodness, the first day was so bad," said Son smiling. "I wanted to cry it was so bad, when they canceled the first day I was so happy. It has been windy all week, I did not expect it to be like this. It was a surprise but I think it was good, fun and a challenge."

Son also noted that the wind and the cold affected her yardages, which made the course play a lot longer due to the wind and slightly influenced her game.

"I think I was wearing like five layers every day, so I did lose some

De Angelis, Masson take Prototype Challenge wins

Special to Highlands News-Sun

In a weekend of firsts for the IMSA Prototype Challenge Presented by Mazda, 16-year-old Roman De Angelis scored an historic first of his own Saturday, winning the series' inaugural race at Daytona International Speedway in his series debut in the No. 4 Ligier JS P3 for ANSA Motorsports.

The season-opening race — which took place on the annual Roar Before the Rolex 24 weekend — was the series' first one hour, 45-minute endurance race. The newfor-2018 format allows teams to run a single or two-driver combination with a required minimum-time pit stop.

While the format was new to everyone, the entire experience was new to De Angelis who, despite winning the IMSA-sanctioned Ultra 94 Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge Canada by Yokohama Gold Cup class championship and nearly the Porsche GT3 Cup Challenge USA by Yokohama series in 2017, had never been in a high-downforce car.

"I did a test with ANSA at Sebring and the Daytona test last month, but this is my first race in a prototype in general," said De Angelis. "I can't be happier, I'm speechless. I don't know how many times winning at Daytona is going to happen, so it's pretty remarkable."

De Angelis started the race from the eighth position and quickly moved through the field. It wasn't until a series of pit stops with 53 minutes remaining that he took the lead and never looked back.

The No. 47 Forty 7 Motorsports Norma M30 of pole winner Austin McCusker and David Droux finished second, 4.511 seconds back. McCusker led the entire first stint before losing

Briscoe with late start

Weather has made national news throughout the first week of 2018, and made things difficult – if not impossible – for some in the Northeastern United States to travel anywhere. In fact, a midweek snow storm did delay No. 67 Ford Chip Ganassi Racing Ford GT driver Ryan Briscoe's travel to the Roar, before Friday, a day later than expected.

'We got about a foot of snow where I live in Connecticut," Briscoe said. "The day I was meant to be here at the track, I was actually at home plowing snow and working pretty hard out in the wind and stuff, but I enjoy that. Thankfully, the airport opened up in Hartford and I was able to get down here. I only missed the first one-hour session, so I didn't really miss too much. It's been really good to get back in

The late start to the weekend hasn't hampered his on-track performance, though, as the Australian posted the quickest lap of the test in the WeatherTech Championship GT Le Mans (GTLM) class Saturday afternoon before teammate Sebastien Bourdais eclipsed it by approximately two-tenths of a second in Saturday's evening session at 1 minute, 43.798 in the No. 66 Ford GT. Briscoe is still pleased with the car's performance, though.

of 74 propelled her into a second-place tie with Bettel, both finishing six shots behind Son.

Griffin, who is used to the weather difficulties that the Harder Hall tournament can bring, noted that was the usual Harder Hall weather.

"I thought I did pretty good," Griffin said. "On No. 1 I hit it over the green, which I normally do not do, but overall I did pretty well. It's tough (the cold weather) but in tournaments, once we start, I do not really feel the cold that much. I am really focused and there is no getting out of it, so I just try to zone it out." Griffin said it's more important to be able to swing properly than it is staying warm.

"I try to put as many layers as I can on without affecting my swing and as I start to warm up or feel OK, I will start to take layers off," she said. "I'd rather be cold than not be able to swing, so you have to find that perfect mixture.

"I just want to thank everyone who worked on the tournament and I just want to give all the glory to God."

Griffin is attending her first year of college at LSU, majoring in business and mentioned that she has been to four tournaments, doing better at each one.

They either listen to be entertained or simply to have background noise while driving or doing household chores. For those who listen to be entertained, advertising is considered an interruption. For those who have the radio on simply for background noise, the advertisement goes completely unnoticed.

The radio industry itself recognizes listeners don't want to have their music interrupted by advertising, which is why many stations promote themselves as the station that "plays more music, less commercials."

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Newspapers have had their fair share of ups and downs since the emergence of digital media, but despite this, they have steadily maintained their local readership base and strength for local marketing.

Let's take a look at the many advantages of newspaper advertising:

- 1. Advertising in a newspaper is not seen as an interruption. In fact, numerous surveys have shown one of the reasons people buy newspapers is to view the ads for their local stores and businesses. Consumers do want and need to be exposed to advertising; they simply want ads on their own terms.
- 2. A newspaper ad can be cut out and saved for later. This means your coupon or contact information can and usually will land on someone's refrigerator or in their wallet or purse.
- 3. Unlike radio, whose market share is often far less than first calculated, local newspapers consistently deliver to households 365 days out of the year.
- 4. Unlike radio, which is often playing in the background and not really heard, newspapers can deliver true consumer engagement. When a person reads an advertisement it's because they choose to do so. They give their full attention to your message and will remember you when they need your product or service.
- 5. You've probably heard newspaper subscriptions and readership have dropped in the last five vears or so, and that's somewhat true, but not to the extent that many would like you to believe. The other side of that coin is, the readership of the online versions of newspapers is growing rapidly, much faster than the 7% or so losses in the physical subscriptions

Stick-and-poke body art worries health experts

By ALLIE SHAH

STAR TRIBUNE (MINNEAPOLIS)

About this time last year Madie Ley did something daring. Or foolish — depending on whom you ask. She lay on a couch while a friend gently stuck a sewing needle dipped in ink into her arm. Over and over, the friend poked the needle into her skin until, at last, six small but meaningful letters appeared: GRLPWR.

Ley, 22, has been proudly sporting her homemade tattoo ever since.

"I like the look," the St. Paul woman said. "Some people say it looks dirty or uneven. But I think that's part of the whole experience."

Call it homemade, DIY or stick-and-poke, this kind of body art has always had an air of danger to it. Long associated with criminals in prison who had only primitive tools to ink themselves with, stick-and-poke tattoos were an underground practice. But like tattoos in general, they've the inventive designs of a growing number

Ask Edith Smith, a proud 103-year-old, about her friends, and she'll give you an earful.

There's Johnetta, 101, whom she's known for 70 years and who has Alzheimer's disease. "I call her every day and just say 'Hi, how are you doing?' She never knows, but she says hi back, and I tease her," Smith said.

There's Katie, 93, whom Smith met during a long teaching career with the Chicago Public Schools. "Every day we have a good conversation. She's still driving and lives in her own house, and she tells me what's going on."

Then there's Rhea, 90, whom Smith visits regularly at a retirement facility. And Mary, 95, who doesn't leave her house anymore, "so I fix her a basket about once a month of jelly and little things I make and send it over by cab." And fellow residents at Smith's Chicago senior community, whom she recognizes with a card and a treat on their birthdays.

"I'm a very friendly person," Smith said, when asked to describe herself.

That may be one reason why this lively centenarian has an extraordinary memory for someone her age, suggests a recent study by researchers at Northwestern University highlighting a notable link between brain health and positive relationships.

For nine years, these experts have been examining "SuperAgers" — men and women over age 80 whose memories are as good or better — than people 20 to 30 years younger. Every couple of years, the group fills out surveys about their lives and gets a battery of neuropsychological tests, brain scans and a neurological examination, among other evaluations.

"When we started this project, we weren't really sure we could find these individuals," said Emily Rogalski, an associate professor at the Cognitive Neurology and Alzheimer's Disease Center at Northwestern's Feinberg School of Medicine.

But find them they did: Thirty-one older men and women with exceptional memories, mostly from Illinois and surrounding states, are currently participating in the project. "Part of the goal is to characterize them — who are they, what are they like," Rogalski said.

Previous research by the Northwestern group provided tantalizing clues, showing that SuperAgers have distinctive brain features: thicker cortexes, a resistance to age-related atrophy and a larger left anterior cingulate (a part of the brain important to attention and working memory).

How to simplify gluten-free cooking

When deciding to go gluten-free, people often ask, "How am I going to eat anything if I can't have gluten?' Gluten is found in many convenience foods and in the majority of items at restaurants.

How can people find delicious foods that don't cost a fortune? After all, gluten-free bread is often double or triple the cost of regular bread, and it comes in a smaller package.

The answer to an affordable, gluten-free diet is to prepare your own foods as much as possible. Many processed foods contain gluten, so check the labels.

Some simple precut fresh fruits and vegetables can be helpful to have on hand when the urge to snack on something strikes. For an even cheaper option, spend a few minutes chopping fruits and vegetables and store them in the refrigerator. Nuts, gluten-free pretzels, and gluten-free wraps are also great options.

For a quick sandwich, Boar's Head meats, cheeses, condiments, and hummus are all gluten-free. If you buy another bread of condiment, check the label and make sure it doesn't contain gluten.

If you continue to buy bread as often as you did before becoming glutenfree, the cost begins to rise considerably. Instead of bread, try naturally gluten-free products such as potatoes and rice. Gluten-free pasta noodles are a fraction of the cost of frozen gluten-free bread. Gluten-free wraps are cheaper than the frozen bread, and corn tortillas are a tremendous value. Wrap a sandwich in a gluten-free corn tortilla shell and enjoy the flavor and the extra change in your pocket.

Since time and money are considerations in any diet, the simplest way to eat a glutenfree lunch is often to prepare an extra portion at dinner. Eating leftovers for lunch is less expensive than buying prepackaged glutenfree specialty items. Cooking dinner doesn't have to be intimidating. Fresh meat, fruits, and vegetables are naturally gluten-free. For a starch, add potatoes, rice, or gluten-free pasta. Ditch the prepackaged frozen items unless they say gluten-free. In addition, frozen vegetables that have a sauce often contain gluten. Buy frozen fruits and vegetables without added ingredients.

Gluten-free baking and frying take extra preparation. We will tackle that subject in the next article.

When you want a break from cooking, there are restaurants that are sensitive to gluten-free customers. Here are a couple you can try.

Bob Evans has a special gluten-free menu. If a customer requests gluten-free food, the meal is usually cooked by the manager or assistant manager to make sure that the food is prepared in a manner which minimizes gluten exposure. Waiters and waitresses are given special training, and they wash their hands before bringing a beverage to a customer with a gluten allergy.

Five Guys Burgers and Fries cooks hamburgers on a grill separate from gluten-containing ingredients. Their French fries are the only fried foods, so they don't become contaminated by other breaded items. It's reassuring to hear the cashier yell, "Glutenfree," and see the team members change gloves as they prepare food.

Other restaurants are also sensitive to glutenfree customers. The key is to tell your waiter or waitress that you have a gluten allergy. Don't just pick an item off the menu that should be gluten-free. The kitchen staff members can take precautions against cross contamination if they are told about the allergy ahead of time.

Why get a hearing test?

Why get a hearing evaluation? Well, first of all, it is the beginning of a new year and as long as you are making resolutions to better yourself and your health you might as well throw hearing into the bucket. After all, it is an important part of your body, life and happiness.

What can a hearing test tell you? Beginning with the initial consultation, you will get to see inside of your ear with video otoscopy. You receive an explanation of what you are viewing and it will be determined if ear wax is causing you any hearing difficulty.

If necessary, the ear wax can be removed. You will also know at that point if there are any holes in your eardrum that may need to be addressed or any type of infection or fungus. Tympanometry will be done to access the health of the middle ear, which can not be seen with video otoscope, making sure the middle ear is free of fluid and that the smallest bones in your body have the ability to perform properly. If the tympanometry results have abnormal results, you may be referred to an ENT (Ear, Nose, and Throat doctor).

As we then move on to the hearing evaluation and your listening profile, important information is discovered.

For instance, perhaps you have ringing, clicking, or buzzing in your ears (tinnitus)? During the test we will want to determine the frequency and intensity of those head sounds. How long have you had it, and did it come on suddenly? Does it bug you? There are instruments that help to manage tinnitus and provide you with relief. That can be demonstrated to you during the visit.

During the hearing evaluation you will be tested in a sound treated room or booth to determine how well you can hear sounds.

You will be tested in quiet to determine know well we can make you understand speech. Then you will listen to speech in noise to enable us to determine the best options for helping you to understand conversations in noise. After all, you want to go out to dinner with your friends and family in noisy restaurants and busy clubhouses, and you would like to carry on a conversation at the same time.

These special speech tests in noise provide the information necessary to make this happen. Your degree of understanding difficulty will be accessed.

Once all the testing is completed and it is determined that there are no correctable medical issues, approximately 45 minutes to an hour, then you will receive a comprehensive explanation of your hearing results.

It is always recommended that you bring a spouse or a friend or other family member with you to this appointment as there is a lot of information that will be presented. If you have a hearing loss, then a demonstration of technology will be the next step. During this phase of the visit, you and your accompanied party will be able to be put into a live "noisy" restaurant so that you can experience truly better speech understanding in noise.

Over the next 30 minutes or so you will get to determine how much you really have been missing. Your spouse will get to enjoy a conversation without stress or confusion. It really is a wonderful thing to have the best hearing you are capable of having. This is why you get a hearing test. You do it for your family. You do it for your friends. You do it to make sure you're healthy.

Everyone over the age of 50 should have a baseline hearing test, whether or not you are having any hearing difficulties. Do it for yourself.

Sick teen gets her wish, spends a day as medical student

By NASEEM S. MILLER Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO — Hannah Culler of Ohio has an immune disorder that lands her in the hospital frequently, but recently she was able to come to Orlando and have her dream come true: to be a medical student at the University of Central Florida's College of Medicine for one day.

Kevin Petersen, a first-year medical student at UCF, had just finished midterm exams last week when he learned that Make-A-Wish Foundation had arranged for Culler, 18, to come to the school.

So he took to Facebook to try to figure out how to make the day special for her. He was exhausted and so were his classmates, but before he knew it, his post blew up with responses and ideas. The class eventually decided to hold a White Coat Ceremony for their temporary classmate.

"It's the most important event in the life of medical students, aside from Match Day," Petersen said of the ceremony, which welcomes first-year medical students.

So, medical school dean Dr. Deborah German broke away from a meeting and officiated the ceremony, helping Hannah put on her short white coat in front of a lecture hall filled with cheering medical students.

Her mom sat on the first row along with her dad and brother, quietly dabbing her tears with a tissue.

"I want to be just like Hannah when I grow up," Karen Culler said later. "She doesn't complain with the portion that God has put in her cup."

Hannah has Mast Cell Activation Syndrome, an immune disorder that's not well-known and has no cure.

"You've heard of people who have peanut allergy and if they're exposed to peanuts they can go into anaphylactic shock and can die?" said Karen Culler. "So for Hannah that trigger is everything. It's being upright too long. It's food. It's medication. It's heat. It's temperature change. It's perfumes. It's anesthetics."

Usually a traumatic event triggers the first episode of the disease. For Hannah, it was the moment the HPV vaccine entered her body when she was 11.

"That second, she fell off the exam table and it was hard to revive her," her every day. Her dream to become a pediatric emergency physician.

mother recalled. "Hannah's world changed literally overnight. In a moment."

It took several years before she was diagnosed by one of three experts in the disease. And although she's doing better, her parents are always on edge.

"We just don't know when's the next (episode)," said Karen Culler, who is trained as a critical care nurse.

It took the family two years to arrange the trip to Orlando after Make-A-Wish granted Hannah's wish. Her wish was specific: she wanted to spend that one day of medical school not just anywhere, but at UCF.

She's a junior in high school and takes classes online in Ohio. It's too risky for her to be outdoors every day. Her dream is to become a pediatric emergency physician.

Yoga: Creating a new you for 2018

Yoga teacher, Baron Batiste, says in Yoga Magazine, "Yoga made me realize a human being can grow, let go and alter their whole context of living, if they choose."

We come into the world in a small curled posture seeking the light with the first gasp of the life-giving breath. Throughout life, we are presented with many choices to develop and practice healthy survival habits.

Whatever path we follow, the muscles record these habits internally and express them outwardly.

For example, if we have unwitting and unconsciously chosen to hold our posture in a slumped position, it creates "muscle memory" that over time we accept unconsciously as normal but may result in irreparable spinal injury and nerve damage in the extremities.

Next time you go shopping, observe the posture of people at the check-out. Are they standing tall or do they appear to carry the weight of the world on their shoulders? It takes focus/ awareness and practice to create a healthy body. Establishing a dedicated yoga practice provides a pathway to internally view our mind/body/ emotions and choose a way to transform ourselves into a healthy lifestyle easily observed in how we carry ourselves. Our "carriage" can alter the image we put forth into the world.

Energy travels through the spine and extends to all body parts. If we look in the mirror, we can see a reflection of our thoughts. Do we drop our head from long periods of depression that eventually becomes part of our "muscle memory" and feels normal? Do we allow a frown to borough into our brow as we absorb negativity? Yoga offers a solution:

Let's practice: lengthening the spine and strengthening the extremities.

1. Stand sideways in front a mirror and see if the ears are in alignment with the shoulders or is the head jutting forward like a pigeon? To correct, pull the neck back, not up, into alignment with the shoulders. Now, take a strap or belt and hold it in front of your thighs with each hand stretched shoulder width apart. Raise the belt evenly with arms straight up the front part of the body until both arms and the strap are stretched overhead. Keep the strap tight and pull sideways; observe tightness in the biceps/triceps releasing tension. Keeping the legs straight and the arms wide holding the strap, bend to the right side and breathe. Come back to center, both arms tight and straight, repeat on the left side. Come back to center. Then with strap tight and legs straight, supported by a wall, gradually bend forward very slowly and hold the deepest back curve. If you feel you are losing balance at any time, slowly come back to center so no dizziness occurs. During all moves, keep the feet firmly locked into the Earth, shoulder width apart.

2."Downward Dog" On a sickly yoga mat, stretch the arms forward, parallel with each other, palms flat and open, fingers widely separated. Lengthen the arms. Keep the head and neck between the upper arms as you stretch both legs back and press the heels towards the floor. Notice the spine — is it lengthened with your butt pushed to the sky and your abdominals pulled in tight? Keep the arms parallel to each other about a foot apart, do not put weight on the wrists; lengthen backwards. Hold this posture and breathe. Keep lengthening the spine in a straight line and keep pulling in the abs and pressing the hips high into the sky. Now walk the legs, in place, very slowly one at a time, bending the knee and firmly replanting each foot back into the Earth. Yoga is slow and precise to gain the most health benefits.

3. Repeat this pose three times. To come out of the pose, slowly bend the knees and rest in "child's pose" with the arms and palms beside the curled upper body just as when you first came into the world. Rest and breathe.

This pose relives pain and stiffness, strengthens the legs and arms. It helps relieve shoulder pain and stiffness in the neck when correctly executed. Keep breathing when you slowly come back into a standing posture in front of the mirror. It is also important to work with a holistic physician who can corroborate medical findings and practices for solutions.

Celebrate 2018 with great optimism and fortitude! Fold your hands into "Namaste, "and with a little smile, bend forward and thank yourself for creating a new vibrant "you!"

A new research suggests that drinking soda or pop could also cause health problems for the child later in life.

Study: Pregnant women who drink soda could cause health problems for child

By KAITYLN ALANIS The Wichita Eagle

While it is already common knowledge that pregnant women should not drink alcohol while pregnant, new research suggests that drinking soda or pop could also cause health problems for the child later in life.

The study conducted through Harvard Medical School found that expectant mothers who drink an average of two sugary drinks a day are 63 percent more likely to have kids diagnosed with asthma when they are 7 to 9 years old.

"Increasingly we're understanding that the processes that put a kid on a trajectory for obesity and asthma start in pregnancy," Rosalind Wright with Icahn School of Medicine told Medline Plus. "This may give us some clues to how early life programming of asthma starts in utero, and how we might intervene more directly to give children a healthy start."

The researchers said lungs.

However, the research team also looked at the effects of fruit juice because it contains naturally occurring fructose.

"We don't see evidence for the same strength of adverse effects from fruit juice," Harvard nutrition professor Emily Oken told Medline Plus. "That may be perhaps because fruit juice also contains vitamins and other antiinflammatory factors."

For the study, the team analyzed data from 1,068 mother-child pairs. The women were asked about the quantity of beverages they consumed daily, including sugarsweetened drinks and fruit juices.

By mid-childhood, one out of five kids born from moms who drank sugary beverages had developed asthma.

The researchers also note that they cannot prove sugary drinks cause asthma, but rather that there is a correlation between the two.

The study was published online on Dec. 8 in the Annals of the American Thoracic Society.

Does your child	d
have ear pain?

MAYO CLINIC NEWS NETWORK

Is your child complaining of an earache? It could be an infection. Children are more prone to ear infections than adults, and they can be painful. Dr. Nipunie Rajapakse, a Mayo Clinic pediatric infectious diseases specialist says, "Ear infections can be caused by both viruses and bacteria. Some of the common cold viruses can cause inflammation of the middle ear.

"There are common bacterial causes of ear infection, as well, says Dr. Rajapakse. "The most common is called Streptococcus pneumoniae." These bacteria are spread through coughing, sneezing, and close contact with an infected person.

To prevent ear

infections in children, you should:

•Practice good hand-washing. •Ensure your child is up to date on vaccinations. •Avoid secondhand smoke. •Breast-feed your baby. If you bottle-feed, hold your baby in an upright position. Ear infections can be uncomfortable. If your child is having painful symptoms, there are ways to help. Dr. Rajapakse says, "If the child is having pain, medications like ibuprofen or acetaminophen can help to alleviate some of that pain." Many ear infections will get better on their own without needing an antibiotic — even if they are caused by bacteria. You should talk to your health care provider to see if watchful waiting is a good option for your child especially if he or she is generally healthy and his or her symptoms are mild.

Dr. Rajapakse says to always take your child to a health care provider if you are concerned or if symptoms persist.

it's not as clear with humans. Though several population-based studies do suggest higher rates of leukemia, non-Hodgkins lymphoma or multiple myeloma in women who use hair dyes, the highest risk is actually seen in hairdressers who experience more bladder and blood-related cancers (like those listed above) but remember, they work with these chemicals all day long, so exposure is high.

Low thyroid levels affect a woman's fertility

Agreed, this very topic was covered in one of my books in 2010, seven years ago. It just made headlines in 2017. Low thyroid can definitely contribute to infertility, miscarriage and premature births. It's easy to test for and repair.

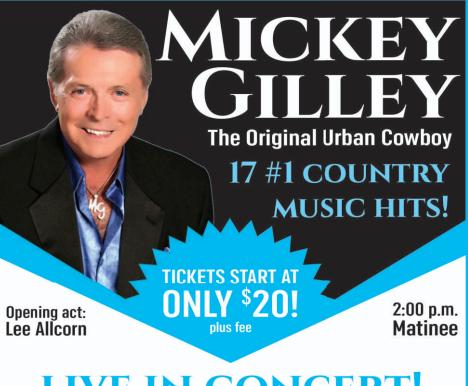

Weird health benefits of stress

It's true that a little stress can temporarily improve your mental sharpness, but chronic stress can deplete your adrenals, so I'd say it's best to minimize your stress levels as much as you can. Stressful situations increase bonding with friends, relatives and your spouse. That's why if you're stuck in an airport overnight, you might make new friends after sharing the experience. The reason is short-term stress boosts oxytocin, a bonding hormone. Further, people are forced to rescue you, if not physically then emotionally. The trouble with this is some people thrive on stress in their life because it victimizes them, provoking others to give them attention and affection. It can even become the glue in an otherwise bad marriage.

Improved balance

While working muscles in the hips, abdomen and back, core strength training is training these muscles to function as a more cohesive unit. This can improve balance, which can prove especially beneficial to aging men and women who may feel like they are losing some of their coordination.

Uniformity of muscles

Men and women who adhere to more traditional strength training workouts may notice certain muscle groups develop more than others, perhaps naturally or because they are willingly or subconsciously focusing on certain areas more than others. For example, a person who enjoys doing bicep curls might develop especially large biceps but may not focus as much on the muscles in his or her back. That can lead to muscular imbalances. Proper core strength training reduces the likelihood of such imbalances because the exercises focus collectively on a group of muscles, training these muscles to work together and developing them at the same pace.

Better posture

According to the online medical resource WebMD, corestrengthening exercises are the best way for men and women to improve their posture. That's because some of the muscles worked during core training move the torso by flexing, extending or rotating the spine, while other muscles worked stabilize the pelvis and spine in a natural, neutral position. The Premier Sports and Spine Center notes that some of the benefits of good posture include lower injury risk, better alignment that can lower risk for arthritis and improved muscle aesthetic and in the intimacy shared between friends who give them to each other.

For those under 18, there's one more lure: Getting a stick-and-poke tattoo is a trendy end-run around state laws that prohibit tattoo parlors from inking minors.

Step-by-step instructions for how to give yourself or a friend a tattoo are easily found on the internet. It requires only a few supplies namely a bottle of India ink, a sewing needle and rubbing alcohol - and those, too, are easy to track down.

From there it's a matter of patience and a steady hand. Oh, and a healthy dose of pain tolerance. It also helps to have a fearless side, because doctors and professional tattoo artists say the DIY trend is downright scary.

The biggest risk is contracting an infection from a dirty needle.

"If they're not sterilized properly, you have hepatitis B and C, as well as HIV," said Dr. Stacene Maroushek, a pediatrician at Hennepin County Medical Center and a specialist in pediatric infectious diseases.

There's also the chance of getting lead poisoning from the ink.

"If we see kids with those tattoos, we talk to them about the risks," Maroushek said. "We make sure they're fully vaccinated for hepatitis B. We look to see if they're infected, and we'll culture to see if they have staph or strep. Sometimes they need antibiotics."

Earlier this year, the American Academy of Pediatrics (aap.org) issued its first-ever safety recommendations on tattooing and piercings. The guidelines are an acknowledgment of the proliferation of tattoos among millennials.

The pediatrics group urged parents to make sure young people are up to date on their immunizations and to talk to a pediatrician first. The academy also stressed the importance of going only to a reputable professional who strictly follows hygienic practices, including using sterile needles, new disposable gloves and fresh ink. Stick-and-poke tattoos are not recommended by the doctors group.

in Hopkins, he remembers the thrill he felt at 18 when he got his first tattoo.

"My parents were quite shocked," he said. "It was exciting and maybe a little dangerous. Now it's become so mainstream and acceptable."

He's been tattooing for 30 years and is the former president of the Alliance of Professional Tattooists. He calls the stick-andpoke trend dangerous, and says the results often are disappointing.

"You are taking a risk by doing this on your own," Anderson warned. "If it's done improperly, even if no disease is transferred, it's difficult to do one properly."

Emma Kopp, 23, the friend who gave Ley her "grlpwr" tattoo, is pretty pleased with her handiwork. In fact, she liked it so much she gave herself a matching one.

Ley and Kopp were part of a group of friends — all women — at the University of St. Thomas who gathered for a Thanksgiving potluck party last year. They vowed to give themselves 'grlpwr" tattoos to celebrate their friendship and work on feminist causes together.

But in the end, only Ley and Kopp went through with it.

Kopp's tiny, handpoked tattoo is on her foot. She admits the writing is hard to see. It looks kitschy, even tacky, she said, laughing. But she likes it — and besides, the appearance isn't really the point.

"Sitting around a kitchen table with a bunch of women who are really important to me and who were integral to me becoming who I am as a woman and a feminist is something that is memorable to me, Kopp said.

But brain structure alone doesn't fully account for SuperAgers' unusual mental acuity, Rogalski suggested. "It's likely there are a number of critical factors that are implicated," she said. For their new study, the researchers asked 31 SuperAgers and 19 cognitively "normal" older adults to fill out a 42-item questionnaire about their psychological well-being. The SuperAgers stood out in one area: the degree to which they reported having satisfying, warm, trusting relationships. (In other areas, such as having a purpose in life or retaining autonomy, they were much like their "normal" peers.)

"Social relationships are really important" to this group and might play a significant role in preserving their cognition, Rogalski said.

That finding is consistent with other research linking positive relationships to a reduced risk of cognitive decline, mild cognitive impairment and dementia. Still, researchers haven't examined how SuperAgers sustain these relationships and whether their experiences might include lessons for others.

Smith, one of the SuperAgers, has plenty of thoughts about that. At her retirement community, she's one of nine people who welcome new residents and try to help make them feel at home. "I have a smile for everybody," she said. "I try to learn someone's name as soon as they come in, and if I see them it's 'Good morning, how do you do?"

"Many old people, all they do is tell you the same story over and over," she said. "And sometimes, all they do is complain and not show any interest in what you have to say.

Good friends might be your best brain booster as you age.

That's terrible. You have to listen to what people have to say."

Brian Fenwick, administrator of the Bethany Retirement Community where Smith lives, calls Smith a "leader in the community" and explains that "she's very involved. She keeps us in line. She notices what's going on and isn't afraid to speak out."

Fifteen years ago, Smith became a caregiver for her husband, who passed away in 2013. "All the time he was ill, I was still doing things for me," she recalls. "You cannot drop everything and expect to be able to pick it up. You can't drop your friends and expect them to be there when you're ready."

William "Bill" Gurolnick, 86, another SuperAger in the study, realized the value of becoming more demonstrative after he retired from a sales and marketing position in 1999. "Men aren't usually inclined to talk about their feelings, and I was a keep-things-inside kind of person," he explained. "But opening up to other people is one of the things that I learned to do."

With a small group of other men who'd left the work world behind, Gurolnick helped found a men's group, Men Enjoying Leisure, which now has nearly 150 members and has spawned four similar groups in the Chicago suburbs. Every month, the group meets for two hours, including one hour they spend discussing personal issues — divorce, illness, children who can't find jobs, and more.

"We learn people aren't alone in the problems they're dealing with," Gurolnick said, adding that a dozen or so of the men have become good friends.

'Bill is the glue that holds the whole group together," said Buddy Kalish, 80, a member of the group in Northbrook, Ill., a Chicago suburb. "He's very, very caring — the first one to send out a thank-you note, the first one to send out a notice when there's been a death in the family."

Activities are another way of cultivating relationships for Gurolnick. On Mondays, he bikes 20 to 30 miles with more than a dozen older men many of them from his men's group — followed by lunch. On Tuesdays, he's part of a walking group, followed by coffee. On Wednesdays, he goes to the Wenger Jewish Community Center in Northbrook for two hours of water volleyball. On Thursdays, it's back to the JCC for pickleball, a racquet sport.

Without her best friend, Grayce, whom she's known since high school, and friends who live in her condominium complex, Evelyn Finegan, 88, might have become isolated. Another SuperAger, Finegan is hard of hearing and has macular degeneration in both eyes, but otherwise is astonishingly healthy.

"It's very important to keep up with your friends - to pick up the phone and call," said Finegan, who talks to Grayce almost daily.

Today, the staples of Finegan's life are her church; a monthly book club; volunteering at a resale shop in Oak Park, Ill.; socializing with a few people in her building; attending a club of Welsh women; and seeing her daughter, her son-in-law and grandchildren, who live in Oregon, whenever she can.

"It's so nice to spend time with Evelyn," said her upstairs neighbor, June Witzl, 91, who often drives Finegan to doctors' appointments. "She's very kind and very generous.'

32 missing, oil tanker on fire after collision off China

BEIJING - An Iranian oil tanker collided with a bulk freighter and caught fire off China's east coast, leaving the tanker's entire crew of 32 missing and causing it to spill oil into the sea, authorities said Sunday.

Chinese authorities dispatched police vessels and three cleaning ships to the scene after the collision, which happened late Saturday. The South Korean coast guard also sent a ship and a plane to help search for the missing crew members — 30 Iranians and two Bangladeshis.

The Panama-registered tanker Sanchi was sailing from Iran to South Korea when it collided with the Hong Kong-registered freighter CF Crystal in the East China Sea, 257 kilometers (160 miles) off the coast of Shanghai, China's Ministry of Transport said.

All 21 crew members of the Crystal, which was carrying grain from the United States, were rescued, the ministry said. The Crystal's crew members were all Chinese nationals.

It wasn't immediately clear what caused the collision. State-run China Central Television reported Sunday evening that the tanker was still floating and burning, and that oil was visible in the water.

It was not clear, however, whether the tanker was still spilling oil. The size of the oil slick caused by the accident also was not known.

Earlier Sunday, Chinese state media carried pictures of the tanker on fire with large plumes of smoke.

The Sanchi was carrying 136,000 metric tons (150,000 tons, or nearly 1 million barrels) of condensate, a type of ultra-light oil, according to Chinese

Israeli PM backs Trump critique of Palestinian UN aid agency

By ARON HELLER ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said on Sunday that he "completely agrees" with President Donald Trump's critique of the U.N. agency aiding Palestinian refugees, saying that UNRWA only perpetuates the problem and should cease from operating in the region.

Speaking at his weekly Cabinet meeting, Netanyahu also reiterated his support for Trump's threat to cut aid to the Palestinians. The remarks came after Israeli media reports indicated that despite its public declarations, Israel was actually concerned about the ramifications of such a move.

Critics say an aid cut could lead to a humanitarian crisis and that in the absence of UNRWA, Israel, as an occupying nation, could get stuck with the bill for providing services to Palestinians. A collapse in

Bannon tries to make amends as aides defend Trump's fitness

By HOPE YEN ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON -President Donald Trump's U.N. ambassador said Sunday the administration isn't changing its conditions regarding talks with North Korea amid growing tensions over the North's nuclear and missile programs.

Nikki Haley made clear that North Korean leader Kim Jong Un would first need to stop weapons testing for a "significant amount of time."

Trump had said on Saturday that he was open to talking to Kim. It appeared to be a softening of rhetoric, given that Trump lectured Secretary of State Rex Tillerson last year that it would be a waste of time "trying to negotiate with Little Rocket Man," Trump's nickname for Kim.

But Haley insisted that Trump was reiterating his past position in his comments from Camp David over the weekend.

"There is no turnaround," she said. "What he has basically said is 'yes, there could be a time where we talk to North Korea,' but a lot of things have to happen before that actually takes place. They have to stop testing. They have to be willing to talk about banning their nuclear weapons."

"It's a dangerous situation," Haley added.

WASHINGTON - Steve Bannon is trying to make amends.

President Donald Trump's former chief strategist released a statement Sunday reaffirming his support for the commander in chief and praising Trump's eldest son as "both a patriot and a good man."

Bannon infuriated Trump with comments to author Michael Wolff describing a June 2016 meeting at Trump Tower in New York between Donald Trump Jr., Trump campaign aides and a Russian lawyer as "treasonous" and "unpatriotic."

Bannon said his description was aimed at former Trump campaign chairman Paul Manafort, who also attended the meeting, and not Trump's son.

"I regret that my delay in responding to the inaccurate reporting regarding Don Jr. has diverted attention from the president's historical accomplishments in the first year of his presi-dency," according to the statement, first obtained by the news site Axios.

Bannon said his support for Trump and his agenda was "unwavering."

Hours before the statement came out, administration officials used appearances on the Sunday news shows

FINANCIAL Mortgage ratios and commodities ear Dave, Do you have a guideline ratio for mortgage debt to income?

Levon

Dear Levon, When it comes to buying a home, I always tell people to get a 15-year, fixed rate mortgage, with monthly payments that are no more than 25 percent of their take home pay. This type of mortgage is the only debt I don't beat up people for having. Still, I urge folks to pay off these loans in less than 15 years.

The average person following my plan pays off this type of loan in about seven or eight years. That's a pretty big deal in terms of your financial security. And paying extra on your mortgage doesn't have to be a strain. You can start by simply rounding up your payments. If the payment is $770, make it $800 instead, and apply the extra to the principal balance. If you want to get more intense, you could make an extra house payment each quarter, or go the route of bi-weekly payments. To do this, simply make half a monthly payment every two weeks. By the end of the year you'll have made 13 payments instead of 12. This will knock years off the length of your loan. Remember, your income is your largest wealth building tool. It's so much easier to save, invest, and give when all your money isn't flying out the door to make payments! — Dave

No commodities

Dear Dave, Do you recommend having gold and silver as part of your investment portfolio?

Dear Don,

No, I do not. I also don't recommend oil or corn futures. All of these are examples of commodities, and the commodities market is extremely volatile. In addition to the market being wildly volatile, the prices on commodities isn't based on actual production. It's based largely on a supply and demand curve. If there's a shortage on one of them, the price shoots up.

For example, when you're talking about gold and silver, there's more demand than supply when the economy is bad. In this kind of scenario. people are fearful and lots of them run to buy gold. This drives up the price to unrealistically high levels. Again, the price on a commodity isn't based on anything other than fear or greed, and a supply and demand curve. The prices aren't based on an actual production of income, like it is with stocks or real estate. I don't buy commodities at all, especially gold and silver. I don't recommend you buy them, either.

2 former ministers in Zimbabwe face corruption charges

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Two former Zimbabwean cabinet ministers aligned with a faction loyal to ousted leader Robert Mugabe face corruption charges.

Samuel Undenge, a former energy minister, and Walter Mzembi, a former foreign affairs and tourism minister, were released on bail Saturday after spending a night in detention in the southern African nation.

Undenge is accused of corruption in connection with the awarding of energy contracts while Mzembi allegedly misused resources earmarked for a tourism conference in 2013.

They are among a number of former ministers and top officials in Zimbabwe arrested or questioned over corruption allegations since the military helped President Emmerson Mnangagwa take over from longtime leader Mugabe in November.

Many of those arrested are aligned with a ruling party faction associated with the former president's family.

Takata adds 3.3 million air bag inflators to massive recall

DETROIT (AP) -Japanese air bag maker Takata is recalling another 3.3 million faulty air bag inflators as it continues to expand the largest automotive recall in U.S. history.

The latest recalls cover frontal air bags in certain 2009, 2010 and 2013 vehicles. They're made by Honda, Tovota, Audi, BMW, Daimler Vans, Fiat Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, Jaguar-Land Rover, Mazda, Mercedes-Benz, Mitsubishi, Nissan, Subaru and Tesla.

Automakers will provide specific models in paperwork that will be filed later this month with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Notices of the expanded recalls were posted Saturday on the agency's website.

Takata air bags can explode with too much force and hurl shrapnel into drivers and passengers. At least 20 people have been killed worldwide and more than 180 injured.

Dominion-SCANA merger could mean pipeline expansion

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Both supporters and opponents of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline say Dominion Energy's proposed merger with a South Carolina energy company could open the door to making the natural gas project even bigger.

Dominion CEO Tom Farrell said in a conference call announcing the deal this week that SCANA Corp. is a "natural fit" for Dominion, which already operates natural gas transmission pipelines in South Carolina.

Farrell said the deal could "open new expansion opportunities" for the proposed Atlantic Coast Pipeline, which is currently slated to run for 600 miles through West Virginia, Virginia and North Carolina and cost about $5 billion.

The massive infrastructure project has the support of business leaders and a bipartisan group of politicians in all three states. Environmental groups are strongly opposed.

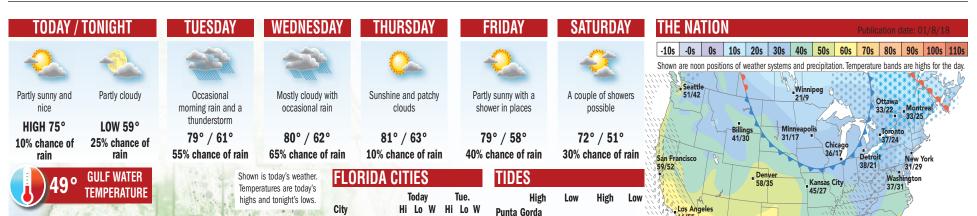

Saudi king orders payouts and bonuses to soften price hikes

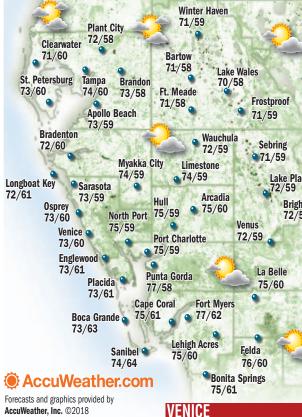

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — Saudi Arabia's King Salman has authorized a range of bonuses and payouts for citizens, including a monthly payment of 1,000 rivals ($267) for civil servants for the coming year.

The measures are aimed at softening the impact of price hikes as the government works to restructure its economy amid lower oil prices.

In a series of royal decrees issued overnight Saturday, the king ordered a 5,000 riyal ($1,333) payout to military personnel serving on the front lines of the kingdom's war with Yemen, as well as a 500 rival ($133) allowance for one year for retirees and those receiving social security.

Students' monthly stipends will be boosted this year and the government will bear the cost of the new tax for some services and the purchase of a first home.

Dog snatched by eagle, found alive 4 miles away

Michael Rubinkam The Associated Press

BOWMANSTOWN – Felipe Rodriguez says he thought he was hallucinating when an eagle snatched his sister's little white dog from her yard, flapped its massive wings and disappeared over the trees.

Did he really just see that? He had. Zoey the 8-pound bichon frisé was gone, taken by a hungry raptor Tuesday afternoon not 50 feet from his sister's house on the banks of the Lehigh River in Pennsylvania, Rodriguez said.

"It seemed like something from the 'Wizard of Oz,'" he said Wednesday. "I'm a city boy. This doesn't happen in my world."

Rodriguez said he was by himself at his sister's home in Bowmanstown, about 80 miles north of Philadelphia, when he heard a loud screech, hurried to the French doors leading to the deck and saw the eagle with its talons in Zoey, who had been playing in the fenced yard.

"The bird was holding onto the dog. There was flapping of wings, and then it was gone," said Rodriguez, a 50-year-old health care executive visiting from Chicago.

Heartbroken, she and her husband scoured the woods for Zoey's body. Little did they know their little bichon would be found later that afternoon -4 miles away.

Zoey's rescuer was Christina Hartman, 51, of Palmerton, who said she was driving on a snowcovered back road when she spotted a furry white lump ahead and pulled over to investigate.

"I notice this little frozen dog, icicles hanging from all over. It could hardly move," Hartman said.

It didn't take long for Hartman to find the dog's owners. She spotted Newhard's public Facebook post Wednesday morning — Newhard had uploaded a photo of Zoey — and made an excited call.

"I said, 'It's a miracle! I have your dog!' " Hartman said.

Zoey had some bruising and a few missing patches of fur. It's not clear how far the eagle might have carried the dog, but Rodriguez said he can't believe Zoey survived.

"She is not really herself, but she is getting lots of love," his sister, Newhard, texted the AP late Wednesday. "She doesn't want to go out. ... I really can't blame her."

UNRWA could also open the way for the Hamas militant group to gain influence.

Netanyahu suggested UNRWA's budget should be transferred to the more far-reaching United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, where it would be allocated to those truly in need.

"UNRWA is an organization that perpetuates the Palestinian refugee problem. It also perpetuates the right of return narrative in order to eliminate the state of Israel. Therefore UNRWA must become a thing of the past," he said.

Netanyahu voiced a common Israeli criticism that UNRWA was created specifically for the Palestinians, while the UNHCR deals with the rest of the world's refugees.

"This of course creates a situation where greatgrandchildren of refugees who are not refugees are treated as such by UNRWA. And 70 more years will pass and they will have greatgrandchildren, so this absurdity must be stopped," he said.

Hundreds of thousands of Palestinians either fled or were forced from their homes during the war that surrounded Israel's establishment in 1948. Today, there are an estimated 5 million refugees and their descendants, most scattered across the region in Jordan, Lebanon, the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Trump, along with his U.N. Ambassador Nikki Haley, has been railing against aid to the Palestinians as part of the fallout of his recognition last month of Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. The Palestinians have strongly protested the decision, and Trump has threatened to take action against those who challenged him.

The United States, which provides hundreds of millions of dollars a year for the Palestinians, could inflict great pain on the Palestinians by cutting off aid.

Yet it could also have a negative effect on Israel, which also relies on the Palestinian Authority to help maintain calm. Israel captured the West Bank, Gaza Strip and east Jerusalem — areas claimed by the Palestinians for a future state — in the 1967 Mideast war.

The U.S. is the largest donor to UNRWA and ending its aid could have a particularly damaging effect in Gaza, where the majority of residents are eligible for its services. Critics have warned that thousands of children could turn to Hamas schools, for example, if UNRWA schools are forced to close. The U.S. donated $355 million to UNRWA in 2016, nearly 30 percent of its total funding. A large portion of the organization's activity is focused on providing health care, education and social services to Palestinians in the West Bank, Gaza Strip, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. UNRWA spokesman Chris Gunness said it had not been informed of any changes to U.S. funding at this time and responded to Netanyahu by saying that only the U.N. General Assembly could alter their mandate. "What perpetuates the refugee crisis is the failure of the parties to deal with the issue. This needs to be resolved by the parties to the conflict in the context of peace talks," he said. Also Sunday, an Israeli rights group said that local authorities have only brought indictments in about one in 10 ideologically-motivated attacks against Palestinians in the occupied territories.

to rally behind Trump and try to undermine Wolff's "Fire and Fury: Inside the Trump White House" which portrays the 45th president as a leader who doesn't understand the weight of his office and whose competence is questioned by aides.

Chief policy adviser Stephen Miller, in a combative appearance on CNN, described the book as "nothing but a pile of trash through and through."

He also criticized Bannon, who is quoted at length by Wolff, saying it was "tragic and unfortunate" that Bannon "would make these grotesque comments so out of touch with reality and obviously so vindictive."

CIA Director Mike Pompeo, who said Trump was "completely fit" to lead the country, said he paused before answering because it was such "a ludicrous question."

"These are from people who just have not accepted the fact that President Trump is the United States president and I'm sorry for them in that," Pompeo told "Fox News Sunday." He gives Trump his regular intelligence briefings.

Nikki Haley, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said that she is at the White House once a week, and "no one questions the stability of the president."

"I'm always amazed at the lengths people will go to, to lie for money and for power. This is like taking it to a whole new low," she told ABC's "This Week."

To Miller, "the portrayal of the president in the book is so contrary to reality, to the experience of those who work with him."

Trump took to Twitter on Saturday to defend his fitness for office, insisting he is "like, really smart" and, indeed, a "very stable genius." He pressed the case again on Sunday as he prepared to depart Camp David for the White House.

"I've had to put up with the Fake News from the first day I announced that I would be running for President. Now I have to put up with a Fake Book, written by a totally discredited author," he tweeted.

Wolff's book draws a derogatory portrait of Trump as an undisciplined man-child who didn't actually want to win the White House and who spends his evenings eating cheeseburgers in bed, watching television and talking on the telephone to old friends.

The book also quotes Bannon and other prominent advisers as questioning the president's competence.

Chatter about Trump's mental fitness for office has intensified in recent months on cable news shows and among Democrats in Congress.

of denuclearizing the Korean peninsula.

"The president has made very clear that were going to do everything we can to do that in a way that doesn't involve military action," Pompeo said, "but has equally made clear that we're not going to stand for allowing Kim Jong Un to hold Los Angeles, or Denver, or New York at risk.'

MORGANTOWN, Miss. (AP) — A 99-year-old hunter in Mississippi wants to know why people are making a big fuss about her recent kill. It was a doe after all, not a prized buck.

The Clarion Ledger reports that Bertha Vickers used a .243 Winchester rifle to kill a doe recently a few miles from her rural home. Relatives posted pictures of Vickers and her kill on Facebook, and people sent messages of congratulations.

Vickers says she doesn't know "why everybody is making such a big deal about it" because it was "just a doe" and not a buck.

Vickers lives near the farming community where she grew up in northern Mississippi, outside Starkville. She still mows her own yard and enjoys squirrel hunting.

Parents fight to record school day of son with disabilities

By ALANNA DURKIN RICHER Associated Press

BOSTON — A Maine teen with autism and a rare neurological syndrome that affects his speaking ability cannot talk to his parents about his school day the same way other students can. So his family is fighting for the right for him to carry an audio-recording device to ensure he's being treated properly when they aren't watching.

A novel case heading Monday to the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston, which hears most New England cases, pits the student's parents against his southern Maine school district, which says the recording device would infringe on other students' privacy rights. His parents say they need a glimpse into his day so they can better advocate for him at a school they don't trust isn't always telling the whole story.

"Most kids can come home and tell their parents what happened at school or what the teacher had done or not done. He can't do that," said Matthew Pollack, the father of the now 18-year-old Ben.

The teen, who is nonverbal, uses a device at school and at home that allows him to answer some questions or request things, but he cannot discuss events from his day, his father said.

The parents argue that laws prohibiting discrimination against people with disabilities require the district to allow him to record his school day. Because their son largely cannot communicate with them, they say he cannot benefit from his education the same way non-disabled students can.

The parents, who are both lawyers, first pushed for the recording device in 2012, after the boy was unusually upset one day. They suspected something happened at school, but got no explanation from administrators, they say. The student's mother told the district they would start recording his days to "have some semblance of peace that he is safe at school."

The school told the couple the recorder would violate a ban on students using privately-owned electronic devices. Since then, two administrative hearing officers, a lower court judge and a jury have all rejected the family's request.

"The plaintiffs have tried a number of legal theories under which to attach a recording device to the child and they have lost at every round and on every theory," said Daniel Nuzzi, an attorney for Regional School Unit 75, which includes Ben Pollack's school in Topsham.

Attorneys for the district say teachers and administrators have gone above and beyond to provide the parents with information about the student, who they say loves school. A hearing officer concluded last year there is "simply no demonstrable benefit" to allowing the parents to record his day and that it would actually be "disruptive and detrimental" to his education.

In other states, parents of special education students have secretly placed audio recorders on their children to expose abuse, which have led to firings or settlements. And Texas recently began requiring school districts to install cameras in certain special education classrooms.

But opponents say such actions raise serious privacy concerns.

If parents can assert a right to "send an always-on listening device to school with their children, what would this mean for students who wished to report abuse or neglect at home to a school counselor, or for students with disabilities who are LGBT?" asked Samantha Crane of the Autistic Self Advocacy Network.

Arlene Kanter, director of Syracuse University College of Law's Disability Law and Policy Program, said she believes the family has a strong case.

The Americans with Disabilities Act requires schools make accommodations unless doing so would pose an undue burden or fundamentally alter their program. The family here is not asking, for example, the school to spend extra money or move him to another class, Kanter said.

"From what I've seen, there wasn't any showing that it was an undue burden," Kanter said.

A decision in favor of the parents could impact other children in his situation, which Pollack said is part of the reason why he and his wife have been fighting this case for so long.

"It has bothered us that the district's position has been that we don't necessarily have a right to know what happens to our son in school unless they decide it's important for us to know," Pollack said. "That's very disturbing."

TECHNOLOGY Technology seeks to preserve fading skill: Braille literacy

By PHILIP MARCELO Associated Press

BOSTON — For nearly a century, the National Braille Press has churned out millions of pages of Braille books and magazines a year, providing a window on the world for generations of blind people.

But as it turns 90 this year, the Boston-based printing press and other advocates of the tactile writing system are wrestling with how to address record low Braille literacy.

Roughly 13 percent of U.S. blind students were considered Braille readers in a 2016 survey by the American Printing House for the Blind, another major Braille publisher, located in Louisville, Kentucky. That number has steadily dropped from around 30 percent in 1974, the first year the organization started asking the question.

Brian Mac Donald, president of the National Braille Press, says the modern blind community needs easier and more affordable ways to access the writing system developed in the 1800s by French teacher Louis Braille.

For the National Braille Press and its 1960-era Heidelberg presses, that has meant developing and launching its own electronic Braille reader last year — the B2G.

last year — the B2G. "Think Kindle for the blind," Mac Donald said as he showed off the portable machine — which has an eightbutton keyboard for typing in Braille as well as a refreshable, tactile display for reading along in Braille — during a recent tour of the press' headquarters near

New technology has allowed people with visual impairments to live more independently than ever, but they're also playing a role in eroding Braille's prominence, said Cory Kadlik, a 26-year-old Massachusetts native who lost his sight as an infant.

Kadlik said he is "not the strongest Braille reader," in large part because of what technology allows him to accomplish.

Computer software reads aloud emails and other digital documents for him, and his smartphone helps him complete everyday tasks like sorting the mail.

"I have an application that can read the print on the envelope to me," said Kadlik, a technology specialist at the Braille & Talking Book Library in Watertown, part of the Perkins School for the Blind, the nation's oldest such school, where Helen Keller was educated.

You paid a ton for your new phone — how much protection does it need?

By JIM ROSSMAN Dallas Morning News

Not long after buying a new iPhone 8 Plus, a friend posted on Facebook asking for a recommendation to fix the broken back glass after a drop.

I answered that since the iPhone 8 models had only been out a few weeks, she likely wouldn't find any independent shops offering to replace the back glass; no one but Apple would have the parts yet.

To include wireless charging, Apple changed the back of the iPhone 8 and 8 Plus to one made of glass. The iPhone 6 and 7 models had backs made of aluminum.

A day or two later, she told me Apple quoted her a price of $400 to fix it.

Yikes. Phones like the Apple iPhone X or Samsung Galaxy Note 8 are marvels of engineering - using the latest in glass and metal - and their screens are bigger than ever. With handset prices punching through the $1,000 mark this year, I'm sure everyone who's shelled out big bucks is wondering if and how to protect their investment.

I purchased it for the last three iPhones I've owned.

For my iPhone 8 Plus, I bought AppleCare Plus for $149 to add extra insurance coverage.

The regular Apple warranty is for one year, but it only covers hardware repairs due to manufacturing defects. Adding AppleCare Plus covers accidental damage for two years.

Repairs are not free, though. Screen repairs costs $29 and other repairs are $99 for up to two incidents.

So my iPhone is covered against damage, but I still had a new case waiting for my iPhone 8 Plus when I bought it.

I don't keep it in a huge case, but I use a magnetic mount in my car that requires a metal plate on the phone, so I slip the plate inside a very thin case. It also keeps the back and sides scratch-free.

I usually go without screen protection — but that bit me already on my new iPhone.

I scratched the heck out of my new iPhone's screen by putting two phones in my pocket. The glass over the lens of another phone scratched my phone's screen.

Northeastern University.

The venerable press, which started as a Boston newspaper for the blind in 1927, has also looked beyond printing Braille versions of popular books and magazine titles.

Educational materials like school textbooks and standardized tests, as well as business-related publications like restaurant menus, instruction manuals and business cards, comprise an increasingly larger share of revenues, Mac Donald said.

"Braille isn't dead by any means," he said. "But it needs technology to adapt and evolve."

Waning interest in Braille has been a challenge since the 1970s, when school districts started de-emphasizing it in favor of audio learning and other teaching methods, said Chris Danielsen, spokesperson for the National Federation of the Blind in Baltimore.

"That's crazy. That's unheard of."

But while technology has opened up a new world not dependent on Braille, it also presents its best chance at survival, said Kim Charlson, the library's director.

Electronic Braille computers allow users to digitally store hundreds of Braille materials that would otherwise be large and unwieldy in print, not to mention access the internet and complete other computer-based tasks in Braille.

Such machines have been around for years, but their average cost of $4,000 to $5,000 has so far kept them out of reach for most, says Charlson.

That is starting to change. The Perkins Library, for example, will soon start loaning out 200 devices that normally retail for about $475, and the National Braille Press' Braille AP PHOTOS computer costs $2,495.

"Technology is the key to making Braille more relevant by getting it into the hands of more people," said Charlson, who began losing her vision as a child and is now totally blind.

Another key is overcoming perceptions that Braille is hard to learn and inefficient to use, said Joseph Quintanilla, the vice president of development at the National Braille Press. Quintanilla, who has been legally blind since age five, said he regrets shunning Braille growing up. He started to appreciate its role in imparting crucial grammar and communication skills only when he entered the working world and had to play catch up.

"I don't think we would ask sighted people to go through life without reading," Quintanilla said. "So we shouldn't do that for blind people." Should you keep that beautiful phone in a case?

What about the screen? Does it need extra protection?

How about an extended warranty?

All valid questions. I tend to be an over-protector, and it's worked out well for me so far.

I've owned cellphones for more than 25 years, including six different iPhones starting with the original model. I have yet to break one despite my fair share of drops (knock on wood). I've gone back and forth on buying AppleCare Plus for my phones, although So I could take it to Apple and pay them $29 to replace it, but I opted to install a glass screen protector.

The glass protector covers up those scratches completely, so I'll hang on to my $29 screen replacements in case I do break the phone's screen.

Of course, everyone has a comfort level. You can choose protect your phone or not, but my comfort level is not wanting to pay $400 to fix my $900 phone less than a month after I bought it.

If you don't have an iPhone, you can still get insurance, from your carrier or a third-party warranty company such as SquareTrade.com.

SAN FRANCISCO

(AP) — Home device maker Nest Labs is adding Google's facial recognition technology to a cameraequipped doorbell and rolling out a security system in an attempt to end its history of losses.

The products announced Wednesday expand upon the internetconnected thermostats, smoke detectors and stand-alone security cameras that Nest has been selling since its inception six years ago.

Although Nest has been among the early leaders in the effort to make home appliances as intelligent as people's smartphones, it hasn't been able to make money to the frustration of its corporate parent, Alphabet. In an attempt to shake things up, Alphabet brought in cable industry veteran Marwan Fawaz to replace Nest founder Tony Fadell as CEO after Fadell stepped down 15 months ago.

Nest had been supplementing its existing product line with slightly different choices until Wednesday's move into entirely new categories.

The Hello doorbell comes with a built-in video camera and speakers that will make it seem like it can recognize and talk to people.

The doorbell will draw upon Google's facial recognition technology so it can warn a home's occupants when a stranger approaches. Google bought Nest for $3.2 billion in 2014 and then spun it off after it hatched Alphabet as its parent company.

Nest is now lumped into a group of risky companies venturing into new areas of technology that have collectively lost $10.6 billion during the past three-and-half years alone. Alphabet hasn't disclosed how much Nest has contributed to it the losses in its "Other Bets" segment Nest isn't announcing a price for its new doorbell until it hits the market sometime during the first three months of next year.

Google's facial recognition technology is coming to the doorbell a few months after Nest introduced a more sophisticated indoor security camera featuring the same tool. Nest also announced Wednesday that the same facial recognition tools will be deployed on an outdoor security camera that will cost $349.

PAC without symptoms needn't raise an alarm

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am a 72-year-old man in excellent health and physical condition. I ride a bicycle 60 miles a week, and I generally feel good. I have an irregular heartbeat in the form of a premature atrial contraction, which showed up years ago for the first time on a routine EKG. I have had this for many years, and I do not have any effects from it that I am consciously aware of. My family doctor is concerned and wants further tests. A cardiologist told me not to worry about it unless I start to have symptoms like chest pain or dizziness. My question is whether it is OK to just have this sort of irregular heartbeat for many years, or if I should look into it with further testing? – M.M.B.

ANSWER: Premature beats come in two different types: those that originate in the atria, the smaller upper chambers of the heart (called premature atrial contractions, or PACs); and those from the thicker, larger ventricles (PVCs). Both of these are common, and the vast majority of people with them have no problems. My training and experience correlate to what your cardiologist says.

Further, although there are medications and procedures to reduce them, there is no good evidence that the treatment will reduce your risk of a bad event like a heart attack, so treatment would be purely for those few people who are noticeably symptomatic from the premature beats.

The booklet on abnormal heart rhythms explains the more common heart rhythm disturbances in greater detail. Readers can obtain a copy by writing:

profession? — B.J.P. ANSWER: There has been a shift. Physicians are trying to prescribe fewer antibiotics overall in order to address the problem of antibiotic resistance. Antibiotics are effective against bacteria, and many times they have been prescribed for viral infections, for which they are ineffective.

Penicillin is active against many types of bacteria, but it is considered the best treatment only for a relatively few infections. I seldom prescribe actual penicillin.

Erythromycin also is effective against many types of bacteria. It is used less often now because newer antibiotics (azithromycin and clarithromycin in particular) are as effective or more effective and have fewer side effects.

I hope you find a physician you trust as much as your former physician.

DR. ROACH WRITES: A recent column on bad taste in the mouth (dysgeusia) generated some interesting letters, which I wanted to share. One person noted that her symptoms seemed to be from eating a certain type of pine nuts, and disappeared when she switched to Italian pine nuts (pignoli). I also heard from a person who said that eating a small amount of peanut butter solved the problem, while a clinician wrote to say he had good results prescribing probiotics. I don't know if any of these suggestions will help, but I doubt they will hurt. Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual letters, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Eighth-grader issues warning after friend shares nude photo

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing to you about an experience I had that might be useful to girls my age and older. I'm in eighth grade and I'm friends with more boys than girls. Because I'm a tomboy, fitting in with them is easier.

Today in manufacturing class, I was hanging out with my friend "Ian." We were in a larger group of boys and he started bragging about how this girl had sent him a topless photo. He then proceeded to pull up the photo and pass it around.

I was a little shocked, but I realize people my age don't always make smart decisions (sharing a nude photo). Adults around us always tell us not to send photos to people you don't know and never to send inappropriate pictures. That lesson sure hit home with me when Ian showed around the one he has.

I want to caution other girls not to do this. Pictures don't stay as private as you might think. I feel bad for that poor girl! — SAW TOO MUCH IN PENNSYLVANIA

DEAR SAW TOO MUCH: Thanks for a great letter. Nobody likes to be lectured to, and adults already do enough of that. I hope your message will resonate with other young women because it's an important one.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question about etiquette. I recently encountered a counselor I had gone to for many years. We exchanged the normal social amenities, and nothing was said about any therapy issues.

Abby, she holds a special place in my heart. I hadn't seen her in five years. She didn't look well at all. In fact, she looked awful. I was shocked.

Although I was concerned, I said nothing because I didn't know the correct way to handle the situation. What can I say to her to let her know I care? — APPROACHING IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR APPROACHING: Drop your former therapist a note, telling her what a difference she has made in your life and that she will always hold a special place in your heart. Explain that you were concerned when you saw her - and ask if there is any way you can be helpful, because you would very much like to be. Do not go into detail about how awful she looked, and don't expect her to start a social relationship with you. If she's well enough to practice her profession, doing so might be considered unethical.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's older brother comes over every few weeks to do his laundry. While he's here, he helps himself to my snacks. My husband's younger cousin also comes over every now and then to do his laundry and eat (at our expense or my labor).

We are better off financially than both of them, but I think the way they mooch off us is inconsiderate. My husband says it's normal and that's how family is. But we don't do that in MY family, nor do we arrive anywhere empty-handed. Are his family using us, or is this normal? - TIRED OF IT

DEAR TIRED: It's normal for your husband's family. Make an attempt to schedule these clothes-washing sessions at your convenience, and stash your snacks someplace you know the relatives won't find them.

The thief in the lunchroom

Dear Readers: Today's sound off is about stealing people's lunches from the employee refrigerator:

"Dear Heloise: I work in a large office where we bring our own lunch. We either write a name on the lunch or we tag it so it's identifiable. Someone has been taking food that doesn't belong to them. Two employees found that someone had taken their lunches the other day. We can't seem to catch the person responsible. Any suggestions?" -Lois L., Bonne Terre, Mo.

Oh my, the old "Who took my lunch?" dilemma. This is not new at all. Try to keep a close eye on the lunchroom, and mention it in an employee meeting. Posting a sign on the refrigerator might help.

I was at a radio station in Washington, D.C., once and commented to the program director that the "break room" was the cleanest I had ever seen in a radio/TV station. His reply was that since they had put in a camera to prevent items from "going missing," employees were cleaning up after themselves! Maybe

With the opponents passing, you open one spade and partner raises to two spades. What call would you make?

A - This hand is too good to make an invitation. Bid four spades.

WEST NORTH EAST SOUTH Pass Pass

*Transfer to spades What call would you make?

A - Any bid you make, other than three spades, shows a hand that loves spades. This hand loves spades! Bid four clubs

Q 3 - East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:

▲ A ♡ A 10 7 6 4 2 ◊ A 6 5 ♣ K 8 5

NORTH EAST SOUTH WEST Pass 1♣ 1NT Pass 1♡ ? Pass What call would you make?

A - In modern bridge, three hearts would be invitational and four hearts would be a sign-off. Slam is possible, so bid two diamonds, the "new" minor, looking for three-card heart support.

Q 4 - Both vulnerable, as South, you hold:

▲ Q 2 ♡ Q 6 5 ◊ A 9 8 6 4 ♣ K 8 6

Right-hand opponent opens one heart. What call would you make?

A - Overcalling at the two level in a five-card minor suit and a poor overall hand is losing tactics. Pass.

Q 5 - North-South vulnerable, as South, you hold:

4 3 \heartsuit A K \diamond K Q 8 7 5 4 4 A J 7

As dealer, what call would you make?

- Opening one no trump with this distribution is acceptable in modern bridge, but this hand is worth more than 17 points. Open one diamond.

Q 6 - East-West vulnerable, as South, you hold:

A 3 \heartsuit A K 5 2 \diamondsuit A 7 6 2 A A 6 3 2

Partner opens one diamond and right-hand opponent overcalls one heart. What call would you make?

A - Don't even think about penalties. You'll never get enough at the one level compared to the game or slam bonus you have coming. Bid two hearts, showing a diamond raise with at least invitational values. The real problem will come later.

GOOD NEWS TODAY/STATE NEWS Farm team: Minor league Yard Goats offering yoga with real goats

By PAT EATON-ROBB

AP SPORTS WRITER

HARTFORD, Conn. — What to do with a new $71 million minor league baseball stadium during the winter?

If you're the Hartford Yard Goats, the Double-A affiliate of the Colorado Rockies, you turn to real goats. Time for goat yoga class.

Talk about a farm team.

The national phenomenon of goat yoga began in Oregon just over a year ago when students would assume poses such as downward dog while small goats would crawl around — and often on top of the participants.

"You're really connecting with the animals," said Tracy Longoria, who partnered with the baseball team and also offers the classes on her Aussakita Acres farm in nearby Manchester, Connecticut. "The goats are just so therapeutic. It's such a great stress reliever. Many of the people who do it have never done yoga before. They are just there for the interaction with the animals."

Mike Abramson, the team's general manager, said the club was looking for marketing opportunities. Yard Goat Yoga seemed the perfect match.

"It was an easy yes," he said. "My expectation is that this is going to become a regular thing. Hey, if it's popular enough, maybe we'll just ditch the baseball and run a goat yoga park."

The 6,100-seat Dunkin' Donuts Park, which opened last spring, has a large indoor batting facility, which will be converted into a studio for the monthly classes. If things work out, Abramson said, and the team can persuade the groundskeepers to go

Told their treehouse must go, owners appeal to Supreme Court

By JESSICA GRESKO

ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Lynn Tran and Richard Hazen built a Florida beachfront treehouse that would be the envy of any child. It's got two levels, hammocks and windows looking out on the Gulf of Mexico.

But the hangout has cost the couple a handsome sum: about $30,000 to construct and probably five times that in legal fees as they've fought local authorities over it, Tran said. Now, they're at their last stop, the Supreme Court. Unless the high court intervenes, the treehouse must be torn down.

The justices had their first opportunity to consider taking the case at a closed-door conference Friday, and a decision on whether they will weigh in could come as early as Monday.

The couple's lawyer,

The Australian pine treehouse Thursday, Jan. 4, in Holmes Beach.

David Levin, acknowledges the case is unlikely to be accepted by the justices, who only hear argument in about 80 of the thousands of cases they're asked to take each year. But he argues that his clients' rights were violated when a Florida court "rubber stamped" a ruling proposed by the city of Holmes Beach without any evidence of independent consideration.

Tran and Hazen haven't been willing to give up on the structure she calls their "getaway."

"Part of me still believes there's got to be justice out there and we didn't do anything wrong," Tran said in a telephone interview.

Tran and her husband run a rental property called Angelinos Sea Lodge on Anna Maria Island on Florida's west coast. They have a house on their property and four rental units.

Before they began constructing the treehouse around an Australian Pine on their property in 2011, Hazen asked the city whether they needed a permit. The answer: No.

So, with some help from the internet, Tran dreamed up the structure, which took six months to build.

Soon, however, the city got an anonymous complaint about the treehouse. After an investigation, the city found the couple did actually need to go through the permitting process. And it turns out the treehouse was in an area where building is prohibited because of a city setback. The couple hoped to get around that by having local voters weigh in, but courts told them no.

Holmes Beach Mayor Bob Johnson noted in a telephone interview that courts have sided with the city and he called the continued legal wrangling "quite honestly a waste of time."

"For some reason these people have this fixation on it," he said.

Tran says she never expected such a drawn-out fight and that in hindsight the couple could have taken the money they've spent on the treehouse, gone somewhere else and built an actual house.

It's still costing the couple. They're accumulating a $50 a day fine for not taking down the treehouse, a fine that's now tens of thousands of dollars.

Tran says she's afraid to think about it. Until the high court acts, she's enjoying the treehouse on sunny days, meditating there or napping in a hammock. The couple doesn't have any children of their own enjoying the treehouse and renters aren't allowed up for liability reasons, but Tran says guests and beachgoers often admire the structure.

"It's kind of fun to have around," she said.

If the treehouse ultimately has to go, there's a lurking irony for the couple. To take down the structure, they'll need the one thing they didn't have before they began putting it up: a city permit.

Lightning top Red Wings to snap skid

By LARRY LAGE Associated Press

DETROIT – Dan Girardi scored and assisted on a goal in the first period before blocking a shot above the shoulders in the second period and leaving the Tampa Bay Lightning's 5-2 win over the Detroit Red Wings 5-2 Sunday night.

Girardi turned his head to the left when Detroit's Martin Frk took a shot on a power play and the puck appeared to hit the defenseman in the neck. He lay face down on the ice while a doctor evaluated him on the ice and was eventually able to sit up. Girardi later skated slowly off the ice with teammates at his side and walked toward the dressing room. The team confirmed in the second intermission that Girardi would not return to play, adding initial reports were he was OK.

Girardi assisted on Tyler Johnson's goal that put Tampa Bay up 2-0. Yanni Gourde and Nikita Kucherov restored twogoal leads in the second and third periods. Gourde added a second goal of the night late in the game, putting the Lightning ahead 5-2.

Louis Domingue stopped 34 shots for the NHL-leading Lightning, who avoided losing three straight for the first time this season.

Detroit had won a season-high four straight. Gustav Nyquist and Justin Abdelkader scored in the second and third period to pull the Red Wings within a goal.

Detroit's Petr Mrazek made 19 saves, filling in for Jimmy Howard, who was out with a lower-body injury.

NOTES: The crowd roared when Lightning general manager Steve Yzerman, a former Red Wing star, was shown on the videoboards in the third period. ...

NFL: Saints 31, Panthers 26 Brees, defensive stand, help Saints survive Panthers

By BRETT MARTEL Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS Drew Brees passed for 376 yards and two touchdowns, and the New Orleans Saints held off Carolina's late comeback bid to seal a 31-26 victory in their NFC wild-card game on Sunday.

The Panthers had a first down on the Saints 26-yard line with 58 seconds left, but heavy pressure by All-Pro defensive end Cameron Jordan a couple plays later induced an intentional grounding penalty on Carolina quarterback Cam Newton, making it third-and-25 on the Saints 34 and a required 10-second runoff left 22 seconds on the clock.

After an incompletion blitz, ensuring the Saints (12-5) swept all three meetings with Carolina (11-6) this season, in addition to winning their first playoff game in four seasons.

"We wanted it more," Jordan said. "I mean they've been to their Super Bowl, let 'em go to another one next year. We want our run."

Brees' touchdowns went for 80-yards to Ted Ginn and 9 yards to tight end Josh Hill. Fullback Zach line and running back Alvin Kamara each ran for short touchdowns, the latter set up by Michael Thomas 46-yard reception.

Thomas caught eight passes for 131 yards on a day when the Saints needed the passing game to compensate for a ground game that struggled to get going.

Jags hold off Bills in defensive battle

By MARK LONG Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE – Blake Bortles never had a game like this.

Not in college. Not in high school. Not in peewee football. Not even in the backyard against family and friends.

Bortles put together one decent drive all day, doing as much with his legs as his arm, and the defensive-minded Jacksonville Jaguars eked out an ugly and sometimes unwatchable 10-3 victory against the Buffalo Bills in an AFC wild-card game Sunday.

Bortles became the second starting quarterback in the past 25 years to win a playoff game with more rushing yards (88) than passing (87). Atlanta's Michael Vick also did it against the St. Louis Rams in the 2004 playoffs.

"That's usually not ideal for a quarterback," Bortles said.

It was enough to help the third-seeded Jaguars (11-6) get to the next round against No. 2 seed Pittsburgh.

The sixth-seeded Bills (9-8) will head home after ending the longest, current playoff drought in North American professional sports.

"We had bigger goals," Buffalo linebacker Preston Brown said. "Once we got in the dance. we didn't want to be one and done. We didn't want to treat this like a bowl game, go down to Florida and everybody relaxes. We wanted to move on.

"This really stings to lose in this way when you hold them to 10 points. We just didn't find a way to hold them to zero points to win the game."

Bortles was a big reason Jacksonville won its first playoff game since January 2008. He was big reason it was so close, too.

CORAL GABLES – Miami 5-foot-7 freshman Chris Lykes scored a season-high 18 points, and the No. 15 Hurricanes withstood a late rally by No. 24 Florida State to win 80-74 on Sunday.

Bruce Brown scored a season-high 23 points and Dewan Huell had 20 points and eight rebounds for the Hurricanes, who took the lead for good in the early minutes and made 13 of their first 14 shots.

Florida State cut a 16-point second-half deficit to four with 24 seconds left. Braian Angola then made a backcourt steal but missed a 3-pointer that would have left the Seminoles trailing by one. Brown made five of six free throws in the final 45 seconds and finished 12-for-14 at the line.

Angola had 16 points for Florida State, which shot a season-low 36 percent. Miami, ranked second nationally in scoring defense, held the Seminoles below their season average of 85.4.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Big 10 Ohio State upsets No. 1 Michigan State

By MITCH STACY Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio – After missing the NCAA Tournament the last two seasons, roster shake-ups and a coaching change, Ohio State surged back toward national relevance with a signature win over the country's top-ranked team.

Keita Bates-Diop scored a career-high 32 points, and the surprising Buckeyes stunned No. 1 Michigan State 80-64 on Sunday, bringing the fans at Value City Arena streaming onto the court to celebrate.

"This is a moment our fans and our players will remember for a long time," first-year coach Chris Holtmann said. "It feels really good."

Ohio State (13-4, 4-0 Big Ten) put together an electrifying 12-0 run to finish the first half and then kept its foot on the gas to win its third straight and take down the best team it is likely to see this season.

NHL ROUNDUP Anderson lifts Blue Jackets past Panthers in shootout

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio -Struggling to score goals and with several important offensive players sidelined, the Columbus Blue Jackets pulled out a gritty win - just the way coach John Tortorella wants his team to play.

Josh Anderson scored the deciding goal in the eighth round of the shootout, lifting the Blue Jackets to a 3-2 victory over the Florida Panthers on Sunday night.

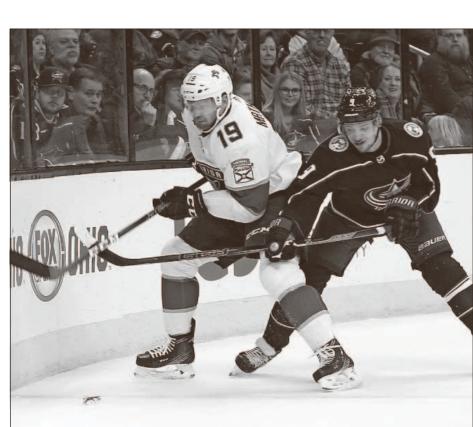

"That scratching, clawing, spitting, biting doing everything you can to win the game, we did it," Tortorella said. Goalie Sergei Bobrovsky stopped Jared McCann's attempt to secure the win for the Blue Jackets, who also got goals from Artemi Panarin and Jack Johnson in the tiebreaker. Aleksander Barkov, who tied the score with 1:34 left in the third period, and Mike Matheson scored in the shootout for Florida.

"It was a good point," Panthers coach Bob Boughner said after his team lost its third straight. "It was a hard fought point against a real good hockey club. Both teams had good goaltending. We've just got to take this and move on."

Nick Foligno and rookie Pierre-Luc Dubois scored powerplay goals for Columbus - just the second time this season the NHL's worst man-advantage unit has come through twice, and both against Florida. Bobrovsky, who took an errant stick under his chin in the final period, had 42 saves through overtime to help the Blue Jackets win for just the fourth time in 11 games (4-6-1).

"We threw a lot of pucks at them and we were able to get a couple big power play goals," Columbus forward Boone Jenner said. Jonathan Huberdeau also scored for the Panthers and James Reimer stopped 46 shots. Florida's streak has followed a five-game winning streak to close December. Reimer was clutch in the third period, keeping his team within one goal while making several tough saves in the opening few minutes and later turning aside a breakaway by Dubois. "He gave us a chance and he definitely was a big part of us getting a point," Boughner said of Reimer, who made his 14th straight start. "You score a third goal," Tortorella said. "And you knew it was going to happen (that Florida would tie the game)."

Foligno opened the scoring at 9:47 of the first period, wristing a rebound from the slot over Reimer's glove for his first in 11 games.

Huberdeau made it 1-1 just 31 seconds into the second period on the power play with his 15th, a redirection near the crease on pass from Barkov, Huberdeau has Neuvirth stopped 30 shots, Shayne Gostisbehere and Ivan Provorov also scored, and Jakub Vorack had two assists to give him an NHL-high 43. Ryan O'Reilly scored for Buffalo. The Sabres finished a sevengame trip 1-4-2.

BLACKHAWKS 4, OILERS 1:

Anton Forsberg made 32 saves, and Nick Schmaltz and Alex DeBrincat scored in the first period in Chicago's victory over slumping Edmonton. Brandon Saad and Jordan Oesterle also scored to help the Blackhawks win at home for the first time since Dec. 17. Jonathan Toews extended his point streak to four games. It was Forsberg's first win since Nov. 11 and just the second of his first season in Chicago. Forsberg had been the backup all year, but his role had come into question after Jeff Glass came up the minors and played well with starter Corey Crawford sidelined by an upper-body injury. Darnell Nurse scored for the possession in Washington's end late in overtime, Backstrom headed down ice, received a long pass from T.J. Oshie and beat goalie Carter Hutton for his ninth goal of the season. Ovechkin tied it at 2 on the power play 8 eight minutes into the third with his 27th goal, and Lars Eller gave the Capitals the lead with 9:11 left. The lead did not last long, with Carl Gunnarson credited with a goal after his shot into pack of players evaded goaltender Braden Holtby with 4:09 remaining. Holtby made 30 saves. The Capitals have won four in a row overall and nine consecutive home games. Vladimir Tarasenko had a goal and an assist for the Blues, and Alexander Steen also scored. They have lost two in a row and six of their last seven road games.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL ROUNDUP No. 19 Cincinnati topples SMU

By JOE KAY Associated Press

HIGHLAND HEIGHTS, Ky. - Cincinnati showed that in a matchup of stingy defensive teams, a lot of effort overcomes a lot of missed shots.

Jacob Evans III scored 18 points, and Gary Clark had a big second half as the 19th-ranked Bearcats pulled away to a 76-56 victory over SMU on Sunday, extending the longest active home-court winning streak in the country.

The game matched the American Athletic Conference's top defensive teams, and it showed in the first half as they went a combined 15-for-52 from the field and the Bearcats led 34-20.

"We're not always pretty at times, but our effort's tremendous and as a coach, you appreciate that," Cincinnati's Mick Cronin said.

Cincinnati (14-2, 3-0) broke it open with a 12-point run late in the first half featuring Evans' 3-pointer. Clark scored 13 of his 18 points in the second half as the Bearcats finally got the ball inside and pushed the lead to 20. Instead of allowing SMU to double-team him, Clark started heading for the basket as soon as he got the ball.

"It was more me taking too long," Clark said. "I'm allowing them to come and trap. In the second half once they got it to me, I was going."

SMU (12-5, 2-2) shot only 35.7 percent from the field and had 18 turnovers that set up 26 of Cincinnati's points. Jarrey Foster led the Mustangs with 16 points.

NBA ROUNDUP Knicks edge Mays to end losing streak

By DAVE JACKSON Associated Press

DALLAS – Kristaps Porzingis scored 29 points and Jarrett Jack made the tiebreaking basket with 31.2 seconds left as the New York Knicks beat the Dallas Mavericks 100-96 on Sunday night.

Kyle O'Quinn had 15 points and 11 rebounds, and Enes Kanter added 13 points and 18 boards for the Knicks, who ended a three-game losing streak and sent the Mavericks to their third straight loss – all at home.

Harrison Barnes scored 25 points and Devin Harris had nine of his 11 in the fourth quarter as the Mavericks made yet another rally on the night they honored their long-time point guard Derek Harper by retiring his jersey.

Dallas never led in the game, and after coming up just short in furious fourth-quarter rallies against Golden State and Chicago earlier in their homestand, the Mavericks made another run after falling behind 90-77 with 4:48 to go.

Harrishit 3-pointers to start and end a 15-2 run over a 2:20 span to tie the score at 92. After Porzingis made two free throws and Barnes hit a short jumper, Jack used a screen to penetrate into the lane and drop in a floater.

J.J. Barea missed a long 3 that would have given Dallas the lead, and Courtney Lee hit four free throws in the final 16.6 seconds to seal it.

Kanter and Porzingis combined for 24 points in the first half. New York took a 56-52 halftime lead on the strength of 56 percent shooting, despite a sequence where Kanter missed a short hook shot and then four consecutive tips.

New York built its lead to 73-63 midway through the third quarter before the Mavericks closed the quarter on an 8-2 run.

This was far from a passing clinic. It was more like a painful exercise in overcoming poor passing.

Bortles made up for it with his scrambling ability. He had several long runs, with the highlight coming in the fourth quarter when he fumbled a shotgun snap, picked it up and outran two defenders for an 18-yard gain.

The play prompted a Bills assistant to slam his clipboard to the ground, which left Bortles smiling as he flipped the ball to an official.

"We weren't sharp. We made some bad plays and did some stupid stuff," Bortles said. "But we found a way to win, and that's all that matters."

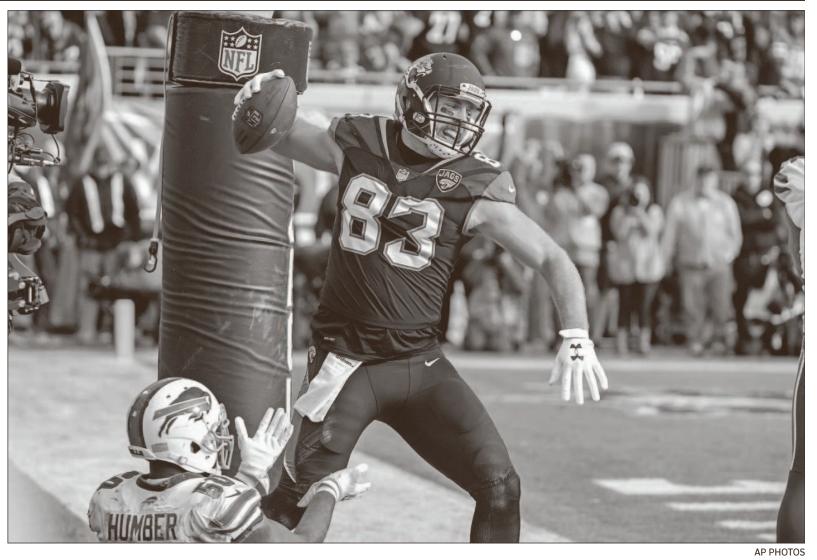

He completed 12 of 23 passes for 87 yards, with a touchdown. His TD pass to backup tight end Ben Koyack late in the third quarter was his best throw of the game. It also was a gutsy call on fourth-and-goal from the 1.

Bortles did the rest on the ground, picking up first downs and helping Jacksonville win its first playoff game at home since the 1999 season.

"He found a way," cornerback Aaron Colvin said. "You've got to find a way. Whatever it takes, we've got to get to these goals we talked about. All this work we put in in the offseason is for moments like this. For him to find a way and do it with his legs, I have the utmost respect for him."

The Bills had plenty of chances down the stretch, but a huge penalty against tight end Charles Clay, a dropped pass by Zay Jones and then a tackle that knocked quarterback Tyrod Taylor out of the game ended any threat of a comeback.

Taylor's helmet slammed hard against the ground after getting thrown down by Dante Fowler Jr. He had to be helped off the field, forcing backup Nathan Peterman into the game play from the Jacksonville 48-yard line. Linebacker Myles Jack sacked Taylor on the next play, forcing a punt.

INJURIES

Bills: Safety Micah Hyde left the game in the third quarter and was being evaluated for a concussion. Cornerback Tre'Davious White went to the locker room in the fourth to be treated for cramps. Safety Colt Anderson injured his right shoulder in the fourth trying to make a diving interception.

Jaguars: Linebacker Paul Posluszny (hip) left, tried to return and then headed to the locker room. He did not return. Receiver/punt returner Jaydon Mickens (hamstring) also left the game.

UP NEXT

The Jaguars will play at second-seeded Pittsburgh next Sunday, a rematch from Week 5. Ben Roethlisberger threw five interceptions, and Jacksonville won 30-9. The Steelers have won 10 of 11 since, the lone loss coming against New England.

with 1:27 remaining.

All-Pro cornerback Jalen Ramsey tipped and then intercepted Peterman's third pass, and the Jaguars ran out the clock. "I don't care what people call it, we got a playoff win," Ramsey said. "We're going to come to work for another week while other teams are sitting home."

HUGE SWING

Trailing 10-3 with about six minutes to play, the Bills looked as if they picked up a first down on an 11-yard pass from Tyrod Taylor to Clay. Jacksonville players standing on the sideline pointed to Clay's feet, and coach Doug Marrone threw the challenge flag. Officials overturned the completion, saying Clay was out of bounds and setting up a third-and-10

"I'm sure they're thinking that game was a fluke," Ramsey said.

Helped by the presence of tight end Greg Olsen – who did not play in the teams' previous two meetings – Newton marched Carolina into Saints territory more often than not. But the Panthers stalled four times from inside the New Orleans 25, settling for four field goal attempts on those drives, one of which kicker Graham Gano surprisingly missed.

Olsen had eight catches for 107 yards and a touchdown. Newton finished 24 of 40 passing for 349 yards and two touchdowns, the other a 56-yard scoring strike to Christian McCaffrey that pulled the Panthers within a touchdown with 4:09 left.

But Newton was also sacked four times, once each by Bell, Jordan, Jonathan Freeney, and David Onyemata. The sack by Onyemata came as Newton tried to spin away from Tyeler Davison and slammed his head into Onyemata's chest. Newton was checked for a concussion, but missed only one play before returning to the game.

"We had to finish out the game and put it on our defense, put it on me, put it on our secondary, our D-line," Jordan said. "I mean, everybody responded the way we were supposed to."

Still, the Panthers were in striking distance for the win after a failed gamble by Saints coach Sean Payton, who elected to keep the offense on the field on fourth-and-short with two minutes remaining. He hoped to run out the clock on Carolina, which was out of timeouts. It backfired when Brees' pass as he scrambled to his right was intercepted by Adams, giving Carolina the ball at its 31 with 1:51 to go.

"This win is special," Jordan said. "They came back late in the fourth quarter, made this a game."

Even a hand to the face couldn't stop Lykes, who was hit as he made a basket — with no foul called — and briefly had to leave the game.

The acrobatic guard made two highlight plays in the first half. He drove into the lane and scooped in a shot from knee level, and in the final seconds he weaved past two defenders for a reverse layup to give Miami its largest lead of the half, 45-32.

His jumper to beat the shot clock with 4 minutes left slowed Florida State's rally.

SLUMPING WALKER

Highly touted Hurricanes freshman Lonnie Walker IV started for only the second time this season, but that didn't help him shake a slump. He hit a 3-pointer on the game's first possession but finished with only five points in 15 minutes.

BIG PICTURE

The Hurricanes beat a ranked team for the second time this season. They won at then-No. 12 Minnesota on Nov. 29.

The Seminoles, who made 45 3-pointers in their three previous games, went 5 for 24 from beyond the arc.

UP NEXT

The Hurricanes began a stretch of three consecutive games against ranked teams. They play at No. 25 Clemson on Saturday and face No. 2 Duke at home on Nov. 15.

Florida State hosts Louisville on Wednesday.

The mistake-prone Spartans (15-2, 3-1) lost for the first time in their last 15 games, dating back to a seven-point loss to then-No. 1 Duke on Nov. 14.

The Buckeyes thumped a Michigan State team that was leading the nation in most offensive categories but shot poorly and committed a dozen turnovers.

"We all knew we could do it," said Ohio State forward Jae'Sean Tate, who scored 13 points. "And that's where it all started. You can't go into a game against a team like Michigan State not believing that it's possible to win. I think that's the biggest factor of us winning tonight, just the belief that we could do it."

The Buckeyes blew some big leads last season, and Tate said they didn't feel safe until the last minute of the game, despite being up by 14 at the half and leading by as many as 25 in the second half.

"We just kept saying, don't fold," he said.

The Spartans, who came in leading the nation with a 53.3 field-goal percentage, shot just 39 percent. Joshua Langford and Miles Bridges each scored 17 points.

Michigan State coach Tom Izzo said a confident Ohio State team ran into the Spartans on an off day. The Buckeyes were ready for them. It was a simple as that.

"Don't go searching now," Izzo said. "We're 15-2 and we had great practices. There was no thinking that we were better than we are. We ran up against a team that played awfully well, and the place was hopping."

Bates-Diop hit 12 of 21 attempts from the floor, including 2 of 4 from the 3-point line. He had tied his career high with 27 points against Iowa three days ago. C.J. Jackson added 14 points for Ohio State.

Kam Williams opened up the second half with a slam, and the Buckeyes never trailed again. Michigan State pulled to within 14 points with 6:25 left but couldn't get closer.

Ohio State last beat the No. 1 team in the country in 2007, when the then-No. 2 Buckeyes beat Wisconsin 49-48.

Keys for Georgia

Chubb and Michel at their best. For starters, it's difficult to imagine Georgia's tailback tandem of Nick Chubb and Sony Michel doing much better than they did in the Rose Bowl against Oklahoma. Part of that is because they combined for 316 yards and five TDs on just 25 carries. Part of it is because Alabama's defensive front is superior to Oklahoma's. When Georgia lost its only game (Nov. 11 at Auburn), the duo mustered only 48 yards on 20 carries. They need to be effective for the Bulldogs' offense to accomplish much against Alabama. Man in the middle. Georgia coach Kirby Smart knows a thing or two about great linebackers. He had three eventual Butkus Award winners while serving as Alabama's defensive coordinator (Rolando McClain, C.J. Mosley and Reuben Foster), and each of them started on a national title team. This year's Butkus winner is Roquan Smith (left), and he's already collected SEC defensive player of the year, SEC title game MVP and Rose Bowl defensive MVP honors. If he's as active as he was in the latter stages of the defeat of Oklahoma, Georgia will have a fine chance of silencing Alabama's offense.

Keys for Alabama

Teacher against the pupil. Much was made about Alabama's Labor Day weekend date with Florida State, when Crimson Tide coach Nick Saban (left, top) faced one of his former assistants, then-Seminoles coach Jimbo Fisher, in the showcase game of the opening week. Alabama won that game, and Saban improved to 11-0 against his former assistants. That has more to do with having more talent on hand than just about anyone, but there's also value in knowing how an opposing staff is likely to think. Saban is plenty familiar with Smart, who coached under him with Louisiana State, the Miami Dolphins and then Alabama for 11 total seasons.

Control the trenches. No one does this better than Alabama, and it will be vital to do so if the Crimson Tide is to claim a fifth national title in nine years. For Alabama's purposes, it is better to simply be adequate on the ground on offense while being impenetrable on defense. That's how the Sugar Bowl victory over Clemson worked out. The Crimson Tide had a respectable 141 yards on 42 carries against the Tigers' superb defense, but held Clemson to 64 yards on 33 carries. If Alabama can similarly suffocate GeorGeorgia tailback Sony Michel

Prediction

Alabama 20-17. Georgia's probably not scoring 54 points on Minkah Fitzpatrick and Alabama. And the Crimson Tide probably isn't going to hold the Bulldogs to less than 100 yards on the ground — not with only a week to get ready rather than nearly a month like it did against Clemson. Smart has done everything he could over the last two years to replicate the Saban blueprint in Athens, and the Bulldogs own an exceptional defense and a strong rushing attack. The same goes for Alabama, which will play in the national title game for the third year in a row. That experience could prove to be the difference if the Crimson Tide is to deny Georgia the chance to celebrate a title in Atlanta for the second time this season.

CFP SEMIFINAL STARS • TB Sony Michel, Georgia: Rushed 11 times for 183 yards and three TDs against Oklahoma, including a 27-yard scamper in double overtime to seal the Bulldogs' 54-48 victory. • DT Da'Ron Payne, Alabama: Recorded an interception and a TD pass in a span of less than four minutes as the Crimson Tide stymied Clemson 24-6. • LB Roquan Smith, Georgia: The Butkus Award winner had 11 tackles (including one for loss) and turned in a stellar second half to help the Bulldogs rally past Oklahoma. LB Mack Wilson, Alabama: Had six tackles and returned an interception 18 yards for a game-sealing TD to lead the Crimson Tide back to the national title game.

Jalen Hurts came within a single second of leading Alabama to a national championship in his freshman season. Now, Jake Fromm is on the cusp of a title in his first year at Georgia.

Long gone are the days when a young quarterback needed to ride the bench for a season or two, getting up to speed on a college system much more intricate than what he ran in high school. Even the most successful programs in the land are willing to turn their offense over to an 18-year-old as soon as he steps on campus. Hurts and Fromm are the most prominent examples of the potential rewards far outweighing the ever-dwindling risks.

"There's a completely different mindset now about playing young players," Alabama coach Nick Saban said.

Jamelle Holieway remains the only true freshman quarterback to lead a team to the national title in the modern era, taking over at Oklahoma in 1985 after Troy Aikman was injured.

Hurts came achingly close a year ago, when Alabama lost to Clemson 35-31 on a last-second touchdown pass in the championship game. Fromm has a chance to match Holieway's feat on Monday night, but he'll have to get by Hurts – a grizzled ol' sophomore this time around – when the Bulldogs (13-1) meet the Crimson Tide (12-1) in an all-Southeastern Conference title game .

Saban points to an increased emphasis on passing games and spread offenses at the high school level, which has fast-forwarded the development of top quarterback prospects.

"They're not coming up in some hand-the-ball-off I-formation," he said. "Their knowledge and experience is a lot greater than maybe in old-fashioned football."

Fromm threw for 12,745 yards and 116 touchdowns during his four years at Houston County High School in central Georgia, a football hotbed that prepared him well for what he would face with the Bulldogs.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Wichita State 95, South Florida 57

No. 9 Wichita State crushes South Florida

By JEFFREY PARSON Associated Press

WICHITA, Kan. - His team had just been blown out, and South Florida coach Brian Gregory grabbed the stat sheet to make sure his players saw a small number that stood out to him.

Landry Shamet, the star guard for No. 9 Wichita State, took just two shots in a 95-57 victory on Sunday.

"Two shots the whole game," Gregory said. "He don't care. I mean, All-American, NBA first-round pick, and he doesn't care about any of that. That's because of the type of high-level program they've built."

Shaquille Morris led the Shockers (13-2, 3-0 American Athletic Conference) with 15 points. Zach Brown had 13 points, and Markis McDuffie scored 12 for Wichita State. Darral Willis finished with 11.

Morris, Brown and McDuffie were a combined 16 of 19 from the floor, helping the Shockers shoot 62.7 percent.

Wichita State coach Gregg Marshall pointed to Shamet's unselfishness and seven assists as a catalyst.

"We had 28 assists on 37 baskets," Marshall said. "Look around college basketball, and you won't see many teams getting 28 assists. I liked our ball movement."

Malik Martin led South Florida (7-10, 0-4 AAC) with 15 points. David Collins scored 12 points, and Terrence Samuel added 10 for the Bulls.

South Florida played without leading scorer Payton Banks because of illness.

Wichita State made 16 of its final 18 shots in the first half to build a 51-20 halftime advantage. The Forcing 13 first-half turnovers and turning them into 21 points helped the Shockers' offense click.

"We knew South Florida was a man down and not deep to begin with," Marshall said. "We wanted to push the defense and force a transition-type game."

FRANKAMP OUT

Wichita State was without starting guard Conner Frankamp, who had with a stomach virus. Frankamp, a senior, entered third on the team in scoring at 11.8 points per game.

South Florida guard Stephan Jiggetts shoots while Wichita State center Rauno Nurger defends during the first half of an NCAA college basketball game Sunday in Wichita, Kan.

He was replaced in the starting lineup by sophomore Austin Reaves, who finished with eight points and seven assists.

"It was great to get the start," Reaves said. "I just tried to be aggressive."

THREE FROM THE 3

Marshall said all the small-forward minutes were split between McDuffie and Brown, who each played 20 minutes.

"Those two combine to go 7 of 8 from the 3-point line," Marshall said.

"That will win you a lot of games."

BIG PICTURE

South Florida: The Bulls got another tough lesson as they rebuild under first-year coach Brian Gregory.

Wichita State: Missing a starter, the Shockers cruised and were able to spread the minutes before playing three of their next four games on the road.

Richardson's layup lifts Heat past Jazz

By TIM REYNOLDS Associated Press

MIAMI – The last Miami play was designed by Heat coach Erik Spoelstra to put the ball in Josh Richardson's hands, and with it came the right to decide who would take his team's biggest shot of the game.

He chose himself. It was the right call.

Richardson's layup with 5.1 seconds left capped a Miami rally from eight points down in the fourth, Donovan Mitchell missed a jumper for Utah at the buzzer and the Heat simply stole one in the final moments to beat the Utah Jazz 103-102 on Sunday.

"He drew it up for me and I was kind of surprised," Richardson said.

So surprised, in fact, that Richardson

"We obviously did a few things right," Jazz coach Quin Snyder said. "It doesn't feel like it right now."

Miami improved to 2-14 when trailing after three quarters.

The Heat led for 20 of the 24 first-half minutes, but their lead was only 49-47 at the break.

Mitchell was 3 for 12 in the opening half, after going 5 for 14 against the Heat when the teams met in November. It was like he was due to break out – and did just that, needing only 3 minutes to score Utah's first 11 points of the second half.

He made his first five shots of the third, ended up 6-for-8 for 13 points in the quarter and Utah took a 75-74 lead into the fourth. Mitchell put the Jazz up 93-85 with 6:28 left, but Miami finished on a 18-9 spurt.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Central Florida 60, Temple 39 UCF defense shuts down Temple

Associated Press

ORLANDO-Dayon Griffin scored 15 points and UCF's top-10 ranked defense smothered Temple 60-39 on Sunday.

Griffin made a trio of 3-pointers with Ceasar DeJesus adding 13 points and Tacko Fall nine rebounds to go with seven points for UCF (12-4, 3-1 American Athletic), which won for the eighth time in nine games.

Nate Pierre-Louis led Temple with 13 points. The Owls shot only 32 percent and made just 4 of 22 3-point tries against a Knights defense that came in ranked sixth nationally, holding opponents to 60.2 points per game. Temple had just one free-throw attempt.

The Owls trailed 36-31 in the second half before going without a point for over 101/2 minutes, dropping behind by 19 points with 4:41 to go. The Knights' lead grew to as many as 23 points late.

Temple led for a sevenminute stretch in the first half before a 3-pointer by Griffin started a 14-0 run that ended with UCF leading by 10 on its way to a 29-22 advantage at halftime.

Temple (7-8, 0-4) has lost five straight.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Arizona State 80, Utah 77 Evans scores 21 as No. 4 Arizona State downs Utah

By KAREEM COPELAND Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY -Shannon Evans scored 22 points, and No. 4 Arizona State held on for a choppy 80-77 win over Utah on Sunday night to end a two-game losing streak.

Mickey Mitchell hit two free throws with 21.7 seconds remaining after being fouled on a drive to give Utah a 79-77 lead. Justin Bibbins missed what could have been the game-winning 3-pointer with 6 seconds left.

Kodi Justice scored 20 points and carried the offensive load most of the night for Arizona State (13-2, 1-2 Pac-12), but Evans found a groove late, scoring 10 straight points down the stretch.

Utah guard Kolbe Caldwell (2) walks off holding his head as Arizona State's Kodi Justice (44) and teammate Tra Holder (0) celebrate in the final minute of the second half during an NCAA college basketball game Sunday in Salt Lake City.

Tra Holder, the league's leading scorer, added 11 points.

Bibbins had 22 points and six assists to lead the Utes (10-5, 2-2), who also lost to No. 14 Arizona on this homestand. Sedrick Barefield added 21.

The teams went back and forth throughout a second half that no flow as Arizona State committed 31 fouls and Utah shot 36 free throws. Three Arizona State players fouled out as coach Bobby Hurley fumed on the sideline.

Utah erased an 11-point deficit to go into halftime with a 36-35 lead, sparked by Bibbins' strong play. Back-toback steals and baskets from Justice gave ASU a 19-8 lead, but the Utes responded with a 16-4 run.

BIG PICTURE

Arizona State: The Sun Devils are likely to take a significant fall in the polls after losing to Arizona and Colorado and struggling against Utah.

Utah: Once again, the Utes hung in against a ranked opponent but couldn't finish it off. Utah isn't athletically blessed, so they have to grind out games defensively and shoot well from the perimeter.

emerged from that huddle telling Wayne Ellington and Tyler Johnson to get ready for his pass. But a lane opened to the rim, Richardson laid the ball home and the Heat won their fourth straight - all by single digits, Miami's longest stretch of such wins since November 2012.

"Utah played a very good basketball game," Spoelstra said. "In many ways, they deserved to win this one. But we've got to make up some ground. We've given up some games that we wish we could have had back, so quite frankly we need to steal some."

Tyler Johnson and Goran Dragic each scored 16 points for Miami. Richardson and Hassan Whiteside each had 14, James Johnson 13 and Kelly Olynyk had 12.

Mitchell scored 19 of his 27 points in the second half, but couldn't save Utah from dropping its seventh straight on the road. He went into the backcourt to take the final inbounds pass and wound up taking a jumper from the right side that missed as time expired.

Mitchell kicked himself afterward, realizing too late Rodney Hood might have been open.

"I should have made the right read instead of shooting it," Mitchell said.

Hood scored 17 points, Thabo Sefolosha added 13 and Derrick Favors 11 for the Jazz, who fell to 3-17 on the road.

"Find a way at the end," Spoelstra said.

TIP-INS

Jazz: The 3:30 p.m. EST tip is the earliest for Utah this season. ... The Jazz scored 74 points in the teams' first meeting this season; Joe Johnson's jumper with 1:09 left in the third gave Utah 75 on Sunday. ... Utah is off until Wednesday, which means the Jazz – who had time for exactly one non-gameday practice in December – will get one during this trip.

Heat: Miami plays seven of its next eight, and 11 of its next 14, on the road. ... There's been no change yet in the status of Dion Waiters, who sought a second opinion on his sprained left ankle last week. Waiters missed his sixth consecutive game.... The Heat sent Derrick Walton Jr. to Sioux Falls of the G League over the weekend, after he appeared in 12 games with Miami.

SILVER WATCHES

NBA Commissioner Adam Silver watched the game from the stands. He's in Miami for league marketing meetings scheduled for this week.

UP NEXT

Jazz: Visit Washington on Wednesday night, as their trip continues.

Heat: Visit Toronto on Tuesday night, then visit Indiana on Wednesday.
