SEBRING — The fun begins Friday at the fair! The gates open at 5 p.m. for the Highlands County Fair at the fairgrounds at the intersection of Kenilworth Boulevard and Sebring Parkway.

Reithoffer Shows returns to the Midway with spectacular rides, thrill rides and kiddie rides and attractions.

The letter "F" means "fun" on the Midway and includes funnel cakes, fried Oreos and rides like the Full Tilt, Fireball, Freak Out and the Ferris wheel.

Reithoffer Shows General Manager Gary Alberty said many of the classic rides are back like the Giant Ferris Wheel and the Ring of Fire.

They have some new kiddie rides and the new Air Race ride, he said.

"We have the 'Freak Out'; it is the first time it has been here," Alberty noted. "We have a brand new lighting package for the Giant Ferris Wheel, which is all LEDs and it will be spectacular; it is a real nice light show."

Admission to the fair is $8 with children 10 and under free with a paid adult.

The arm band for the Reithoffer Shows is $22 for Friday, Saturday and Sunday and most other days.

Check for admission specials and variations on the arm band at the Highlands County Fair website: www.hcfair.net. Click on the schedule of events.

The Jr. Miss Highlands County Pageant will be held 7 p.m. Friday in the Highlands News-Sun Center.

the world.

Ben Ridriguez said the exhibit will feature zebras, camels, lemurs, a miniature Sicilian donkey and more.

"It's a free exhibit; you can come in and walk around, but you can pay to feed the animals, he said.

"We offer camel rides and a bird exhibit where you can feed 100 to 130 parakeets with birdseed," Rodriguez said.

The Eudora Farms website states that its camel rides provide a once-in-a-lifetime experience many will not soon forget.

"Bubba," the camel, has made a name for himself doing over 30,000 rides in the past three years and entertaining crowds by drinking his Diet Coke. He has been so popular that two other camels have been added to assist him with his days.

Sebring considers recycling

SEBRING — Sebring City Council members are looking at two ways to afford more recycling opportunities for the city's residents.

At a workshop meeting Tuesday evening, City Council members said they want to find out the costs of curbside recycling and also look at providing additional recycling bins as an alternative.

Some Council members said that if recycling would force the city to raise garbage pickup rates, they would want to hold a referendum on the issue.

Representatives of Republic Waste Services, which operates a recycling processing center in Lakeland, said that curbside recycling would most

Hearings set for Parkway, fire assessment

By PHIL ATTINGER

SEBRING — Highlands County officials will hold hearings this month for both the countywide fire assessment and Sebring Parkway Phase III.

However, the hearings won't decide whether or not to go ahead with either project. Commissioners have already decided to go ahead. These hearings will take public input, as obligated by law, on details of the plans.

A hearing on the Parkway will be at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20 in county commission chambers, 600 S. Commerce Ave., Sebring.

Highlands County Clerk of Courts Bob Germaine expressed confusion Tuesday over the need for more hearings.

Public ponders Hammock proposals

By KIM LEATHERMAN

SEBRING — Highlands Hammock State Park is home to a wide variety of flora and fauna, which attracts day-visitors and campers from all over the world.

Some 9,250 acres are planned and protected on a daily basis by Park Manager V. Morgan Tyrone, Assistant Manager Caleb Nail and a staff of rangers and volunteers. Equally important, more remote planning comes from the Florida Department of Environmental Protection in the Division of Recreation and Parks out of Tallahassee. It was this combination of local rangers and state officials who held a 10-year unit planning meeting Tuesday evening, which was open to the public.

The meeting illustrated the proposed improvements to the public through maps of the park and a slide show presentation given by Holly Cramer, park planner from Tallahassee. The majority of the meeting was an open house-style forum so visitors could ask rangers specific questions.

"The mission of the Florida Park Service is to provide resource-based recreation, while at the same time, conserving and saving our natural resources," Cramer said.

The long-term plan takes about one and a half to two years to compile the appropriate data. Writing a draft is the next step. Plans include a resource

Veterans drug house all cleaned up

Sebring man gets help with drug-contaminated house

By JAY MEISEL
STAFF WRITER

SEBRING — Until the last several days, World War II veteran Glenn Rieben has been living in a travel trailer, despite owning a house.

That's because tests at the house adjacent to his travel trailer location disclosed the presence of methamphetamine contamination.

Rieben was advised to vacate the house until the methamphetamine could be removed.

But as of last Thursday, the situation changed and Rieben was able to return to his house.

"Everything is fine," he said.

That's after Miller's Central Air employees decontaminated the home at no cost to Rieben, who had faced paying $3,000 to get the work done.

After Rieben's plight was disclosed in a Highlands News Sun article, Scott Dressel, public information officer with the Highlands County Sheriff's Office, arranged to meet with Rieben. Sgt. Jeff Fennell, who is over the Sheriff's Office's Crime Scene Investigation Unit, was also involved.

Dressel said they took test kits and could not find methamphetamine traces in the house. However, the problem was apparently primarily in the air-conditioning ducts, he said.

Dressel said he contacted Miller's and talked with Rick Miller. "Miller didn't hesitate to say that he would do whatever he could do to help without any charge," Dressel said.

Miller couldn't be reached immediately for comment, but according to a WFTS-TV online article, Miller said his employees cleaned the house's duct system, sanitized the evaporator coil and used chemicals to eliminate any methamphetamine trapped in the air-conditioning system.

Rieben, 91, bought the house to live closer to Walmart. Shortly after he moved in, neighbors told him the house had been used for methamphetamine sales.

He had the house tested and the test results showed the presence of the drug.

He bought the house "as is" so the seller had no obligation to pay for the cleanup.

Top secret onions

KIM LEATHERMAN/STAFF

An entire orange grove was removed several months ago at the Lykes Brothers Inc. property on Lake Francis Road and U.S. 27. The Lykes branch manages the citrus portion of the organization. The new plants that cover half of the field have been confirmed as onions. However, when asked about the change in the product, Highlands News-Sun was directed to corporate offices. Council approves Sebring race-related events

By JAY MEISEL

SEBRING — Last year, a lot of Sebring residents wanted to know what happened to the Circle of Speed, which was typically held in the downtown Circle just before the race.

The explanation was the difficulty in getting the historic cars to the Circle that year.

But, this year it will return on Friday, March 16, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Sebring City Council approved street closures for that event plus a new one, the 12 Hour Fan Fest, which is designed to celebrate the 12 Hours of Sebring Race.

The Circle of Speed will feature a disk jockey in Circle Park and the opportunity to see historic race cars. Most of the food available will

Olivia Drive temporarily closed

AVON PARK — Crews will temporarily close North Olivia Drive just north of State Road 64 starting Feb. 7, for approximately one week. Motorists should detour using Bradley Road and North Newton Road to access North Olivia Drive, including access to the Dollar General and VFW Post 9853.

This project includes adding a westbound turn lane onto northbound North Olivia Drive, widening the turnout and adding a paved shoulder, striping a bike lane between the westbound travel lane and turn lane, and extending side drains and modifying drainage ditches. Expected completion is spring 2018. The contractor is Watson Civil Construction Inc.

1. The Ferris wheel was an engineering marvel designed by American engineer George Ferris for the 1893 Chicago World's Fair.

2. In just 6 months the Ferris Wheel Invention attracted over 27 million visitors from all over the world.

3. The first Ferris wheel was 264 feet tall, equivalent to a 26 story building. The entire steel structure weighed 4,100 tons. It was 825 feet in circumference and rotated on a 45-foot axle that was 82 inches in diameter and weighed 56 tons.

4. It carried 36 cars, referred to as gondolas, which were 13 feet wide, 27 feet long and 9 feet high. It could carry 60 passengers in each of the 36 gondolas, each fitted with 40 revolving chairs, with a total capacity of 2,160 passengers per rotation.

5. Each ride lasted about 10 minutes making two complete circuits.

or not to build it," Germaine said. He is right, said County Attorney Joy Carmichael. However, when the county fired its contractor and decided to do the project in-house, Florida law requires public hearings on whether or not to build in-house or get another contractor, she said. Commissioner Don Elwell said the Parkway generated "a great deal of interest and discussion" at his last town hall meeting, held Jan. 30 at South Florida State College. Elwell told County Administrator Randy Vosburg, County Engineer Clinton Howerton Jr. and Road and Bridge Supervisor Kyle Green to "anticipate a good turnout." Aside from one resident adjacent to the route, Elwell said most comments looked at cost, suggested the county not build the road at all and pave residential roads, instead. Both the county and Florida Department of Transportation have committed funds to build the $12.7 million four-lane, 4.29-mile road connecting the current Parkway from the 90-degree turn to Memorial Drive and College Drive in Avon Park. FDOT committed $3 million of the cost, and has given one more extension — just one,

Howerton said — to finish by Dec. 31, 2019. The county started a $6.36 million design/build contract with Preferred Materials of Orlando in 2014 for a two-lane road, and at one point paid $12,000 per month for environmental issue delays. Howerton said the contractor recently asked for another $3 million, and both he and Green balked at the cost. Commissioners voted to let the contractor go, based on assurances that county crews could finish a four-lane road with $1.32 million added to the county's $8.37 million commitment. Green told commissioners last month how his department has surplus funds to supply the $1.23 million. Howerton said he would make all the project's financial and design documents available to the public. Since then, however, county residents who want their roads paved have asked why, if surplus exists, have they had to wait years for paving. Meanwhile, a proposed fire assessment will have three hearings, three days in a row, starting with one at the 9 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 20 county commission meeting. Other meetings will follow at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 21 in Lake Placid and 9 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 22 in Avon Park, places to be announced. The last action commissioners took on the issue was Jan. 16, to set a local law to levy assessments against property and establish a method to collect them. They did not, yet, set exact amounts of each assessment. That's reserved for later meetings. Commissioners need to make that decision no later than June to have a roll of assessed properties to the Highlands County Tax Collector by Sept. 18, said Jeff Rackley, senior project manager with Government Services Group. He proposes rates of $91 per year per house/apartment, $24 per year per vacant residential parcel, and as follows: • 15 cents per square foot for commercial. • 5 cents per square foot for warehouse/industrial. • 18 cents per square foot for institutional. Funds would supply full-time personnel, operating expenses, engines, facilities and equipment for paid fire protection to unincorporated areas and the town of Lake Placid, currently protected mostly by county-run volunteers. Revenue is estimated at $6.48 million per year, but Commissioner Jim Brooks has said exemptions for government buildings, agriculture land and institutions could cut revenue to $5.71 million, or $4.85 million, since not everyone pays assessments. The shortfall could drop as low as $1.5 million below estimated budgets, Brooks said.

management component, land use component and implementation component. Tuesday's meeting was the next step in the process; receive public input. The park is home to many endemic and endangered species, including Florida scrub jay and Florida panthers. The preservation of these habitats are important to these species and is taken into consideration when improving, expanding or building new features or structures in the park. One major proposed change is to move the ranger station to the east of its current location. The planners are looking at other designs but would like to see a station that has an entry lane approaching from one side and a departing lane on the other side of it. The current ranger station would be used as a nature station and visitor center.

"Surveys show that after clean bathrooms and showers, people want more nature stations and visitor stations," Tyrone said. Cramer would like to see the campground renovated or redesigned for a "more natural experience." It would separate tent and R.V. camping. The primitive group camping area would be expanded by 30 spots along with a restroom, outdoor shower and picnic pavilion.

open and a large pavilion added to it. Talk of the equestrian campsite brought out the ire of many attendees. They all spoke in favor of the opening of the site, which has been in the works for at least eight years. The sticking point is Vaughn Road. Until the road is vacated by the county, the park cannot use it. Tyrone is hopeful that the new county administrator, Randy Vosburg, will look more favorably on the project. This is not an exhaustive list of the prospective projects. View the complete Highlands Hammock Advisory Group Draft Unit Management Plan at floridadep.gov/parks/public-participation. According to Cramer, the plan goes to an advisory council where it is reviewed and eventually passed or not.

She pointed out that just because a project is passed does not mean it has funding to execute the proposed item. It is placed on a funding priority list by the park's manager where it awaits funding.

OUR VIEW

CarFit is a smart fit for all drivers

Last week's CarFit event was one that should have been mandatory for anyone driving a vehicle on our roads in Highlands County.

Not because all of the drivers need to have the basics reiterated, but because of the real safety features that were reinforced.

Joe Filice, a Florida Highway Patrol Auxiliary trooper, volunteered at the event. He wasn't there in any kind of official capacity, but instead was there to join other volunteers in giving advice on seat, steering wheel, and mirror placement, among other things.

Filice pointed out that where it used to be common practice to angle side view mirrors down the back fender of the car, drivers are now told to angle their mirrors to get a panoramic view of the road behind them.

Heather Turco, an employee of the Lee County Sheriff's Office and mother of two teenagers, also volunteered at last week's event. She looks forward to bringing big CarFit events to her area.

Local organizers – Retired and Senior Volunteer Program at South Florida State College, American Automobile Association, the Association of American Retired Persons and the American Occupational Therapy Association – reintroduced this type of safe driver event after a nearly eight year absence.

Kris Juve, RSVP coordinator, said similar events were done on a regular basis until her help moved away. Mary Jane Lloyd stepped in to help her bring them back.

Some of these new cars are just like a new computer or a new smartphone. They come with a lot of bells and whistles and sometimes a little instruction as to how to use them, or guidance as to where to find them is needed.

One driver last week didn't realize that the height of the driver seat could be adjusted. Another came and thanked the volunteers for helping her find things in her car.

Many of the late model vehicles have hazard light switches on the dashboard rather than on the steering column, making it easier for passengers to activate them. Steering wheels also tilt and telescope so that the driver can make sure it, and the airbag, are in the best position. Drivers can be injured if sitting too close when the airbag is deployed.

Other driver benefits and safety features were also gone over, including where a driver's blind spot actually is.

They may be things we as drivers have thought about from time to time, but who has actually taken time to make the proper adjustments. And when buying a new car, who really listens to the salesperson? Aren't we all a little anxious to get behind the wheel and drive away?

This inaugural event drew 23 vehicles and more than 20 motorists to learn how to better fit the driver's seat for comfort and a commanding view of the road. Juve and Lloyd were both pleased with how many people attended and hope to see drivers of all ages attend future events.

We hope the next event will draw even more people to it. All of us should do whatever we can to make sure we are safe, as well as our passengers, along with all others sharing our roadways.

A horse with handlebars

Our college student has joined her university's equestrian team — did you even know colleges offer such delights — and has been showing her skills at regional horse shows. While horses are indeed beautiful, powerful animals, it's the powerful part that gives me pause.

As she has gotten back into horsing around, I realized I had forgotten that large equines are potentially dangerous. Over the years, she has experienced several squashed toes — black, grapelike protrusions that slowly healed. Then there was the time or two when a particularly troublesome horse bit her in the stomach.

Have you ever seen a horse bite? Those critters can be testy. Ponies are supposed to be worse, but what do I know? I almost posted on Facebook that Clydesdales have mustaches. Perhaps I should explain the facial hair foolery.

Mr. Harris had purchased car seat covers for the child and a delay in shipment meant we would have to either mail them or drive them to The Swamp. Then she told us about a horse show about halfway between us.

Mr. Harris took the seat covers and during a lull he went out to the child's car to install them. Horses were everywhere and a small herd watched him work.

One, able to reach over the fencing, proceeded to lick the front of our truck several times. Was it in search of nutrients from the dust? Perhaps it was merely showing brand loyalty or perhaps loving on its own reflection? Regardless, I got closer and very cautiously offered my hand for a sniff.

Horses are enormous animals in general and while my gal is all equine all the time, I'm more of the feline fanatic. Horses scare me a wee bit, but not in a fearful way. It's more of a you-outweigh-me-by-a-ton, so I'll just stay on this side of the fence.

So, as I carefully made nice with nosy neigh, what I thought was a Clydesdale sauntered over and regarded me. This boy was stunning. Very regal, muscular and by golly, this horse had a mustache. I just couldn't believe it. A bonafide handlebar mustache adorned his furry lips.

"Did you see this," I inquired of Mr. Harris who was at that moment lying on the ground, calling forth the words of a troubled car seat installation. In his current state of half in, half out of the gal's ride, he had not seen this dapper horse's facial fancy. I took pictures and even worked up the courage to stroke his thick-whiskered wonder.

Later I shared my delight with the horse expert in the family. "I saw that too," she recalled. "I'm not sure what that's all about but they must have done that because Clydesdales don't usually have a mustache." Thus the mystery of the mustached horse began and I learned something new.

Gypsy Vanner horses, the draft horse starlets of the equine world, have beautiful piebald coats, flowing manes, hoof feathering and muzzle hairs that curl up like a mustache. You've got to see it to believe it. Google this horse breed and be amazed. Mr. Harris also requested I add the disclaimer that his mobile car seat installation services are not currently for hire, even if your horse has a mustache.

Community not represented

After much research into ownership, plats, deeds, commission meetings and minutes, it appears that there is an unrecorded, and non confirming to Florida Statutes, homeowners association within Highlands Park Estates. Multiple requests of recorded association documents, minutes, meetings, votes, etc. have been denied by not only the "supposed association," but also the county commission.

There has been an uproar of a mobile home being put up, but this subdivision is not a deed restricted, "upscale" community. The subdivision has neglected buildings within it, ATV trails over some of the undeveloped properties, abandoned homes, vehicles, boats etc. There is even an article dated 8-12-2017 from Rick Ingler stating that the mobile home is a "cheesebox". He, however, neglects to say that he has a recorded Designation of Homestead of a 1992 Homes of Merit Mobile Home. He is not a current or former owner in HPE.

There is also another writer who sold his waterfront home on Lake Anthrope for almost $600K and bought a non waterfront home in HPE for under $130K. Then you have his neighbor that bought a waterfront vacant lot in 1994 for $55K, which now has a home valued at almost $250K on it.

If these people want deed restricted, gated communities, then they need to sell and move to their dream neighborhoods. This community has not been represented by a majority of owners with regards to a clubhouse rebuild, or mobile homes being put up.

Trump's election interrupted plan

Make no mistake, the current Democrat party is not the party of John F. Kennedy. It's an anti-American party that is full of goats just as God told me during my death experience. He told me that the goats of the left would be separated from the sheep on the right and that the goats would grow wilder while the sheep are coming home.

Look at the evidence and you will see that the current Democrat party does not believe in the United States Constitution and in fact, wants to see the United States become part of the old world government. This can never happen as long as we have the first, second and fourth amendments. Had Hillary Clinton been elected, it would have been accomplished by now or we could be in the midst of a civil war.

Donald Trump's election interrupted the progressive left's plan. Is it not any wonder they hate him?

People, wise up. Donald Trump is the greatest thing that could have happened to save this great nation. God blessed us by convincing him to run for president. For those of us who love God and country, Donald Trump will go down in history as the greatest of all presidents. He has accomplished more in one year than the last five presidents combined. They were all globalists, so what they did accomplish was designed to create the one world government.

No human-being alone could have accomplished what President Trump has accomplished during his first year. God picked him long ago for this time and God deserves the glory.

The State of the Circus

Two submissions

published on Feb. 3 caught my attention and hit close to home. The first addressed hypocrisy by religious figures who invented new ways to excuse the tarnished behavior of the current occupant of the White House. Tony Perkins and Jerry Falwell Jr. are charlatans in their own right and aren't in position to excuse the actions of another. Hypocrisy reigns supreme.

For the first time in a long time, I passed on this week's State of the Circus address. Political grandstanding by either party is not my thing. Tuesday's speech was highlighted by both parties making fools of themselves. The Democrat Party behavior and disrespect was childish and out of line. The grandstanding by the president of the Republic Party was equally tiresome and unacceptable.

Our government has become a glorified circus where focus has been lost. We've dissolved into a chaotic maelstrom of name calling and accusations. Facts are annoyances that interfere with a good story. With the many problems that face our nation and the world, I could give a rip whether Hillary had email or whether Mr. Trump is faithful to his third wife.

Lake Jackson study continues

Cool: Not just rain; it's seepage

By PHIL ATTINGER
STAFF WRITER

SEBRING — Lake Jackson water levels fluctuate heavily. Officials still want to know why, and have agreed to finish a study on it.

Highlands County commissioners took no action Tuesday to end a hydrology study of Lake Jackson, after hearing about the matter from Lakes Manager Clell Ford and Carl Cool, a former county engineer.

Ford and Cool said it's not just rains — it's seepage — and finding the leak is the whole point of the study.

Ford told commissioners all lakes seep water into the soil under and around them, but the Southwest Florida Water Management District, which is helping to fund the project, believes Lake Jackson may have more than most — certainly more than suspected.

The water district wants more data on how much water the lake gets, uses and loses.

If the county cancels the project, however, it would have to pay back more than $28,200 that SWFWMD already reimbursed to the county.

To date, the county has only put in $6,400 of its own money. Canceling the project, Commissioner Don Elwell estimated, would cost the county $34,600, but the county's total share of the project is $50,000, a $15,000 difference.

Rather than pay

"We've identified the problem. We know there's a problem. I would just ask you to consider: Let's just go ahead and get as much data as we can from the study, and go from there."

Carl Cool

$35,000 for no data, commissioners stayed with the project.

Meanwhile, Ford said vendor bids to install monitoring wells have exceeded the project budget. He said SWFWMD plans to do fewer wells to hold costs.

Commissioner Jim Brooks, who's seen the lake up and down in 60 years, didn't support the study at first and said he wouldn't again.

Commissioner Ron Handley noted SWFWMD previously said water levels depended on rain, then said seepage is a factor.

However, he favored finishing the study.

Lake Jackson, bordered by U.S. 27, is one of the county's more visible lakes, often used to promote outdoor tourism. When lake levels drop, boat ramps become useless and few people on the lake can access it, Cool said.

Seepage was apparent, he said, after a 1967 canal project installed by a former commission in cooperation with the U.S. Soil and Water Conservation District and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

It improved drainage problems for septic tanks in Sebring's "Snob Hollow" and the Lake Josephine communities using canals and water control structures with 7- to 8-foot high drops.

Right after it was built, Lake Jackson water levels dropped and stayed down. None of the structures leak, Cool said, but a study measured 2 million gallons per day running down the canal during a dry period.

"That's the seepage flow that we're talking about. There is a seepage flow," Cool said. "Only no one knows where it starts."

If officials can find where it is, they may be able to stem it, Cool said.

"I just think that we have gone so far. We've identified the problem. We know there's a problem," Cool said. "I would just ask you to consider: Let's just go ahead and get as much data as we can from the study, and go from there."

get some of the money back.

At least for now, he said, the money returned would not equal what the city or county would pay.

The ultimate costs are also affected by the distance the recycling materials must travel to the processing center, he said.

Councilman Lenard Carlisle Jr. said people have told him they don't want to pay more for recycling. But he added that some people question why the city doesn't have curbside recycling.

"We have both sides," he said.

The city would save some money since it would end up hauling less garbage to a landfill, Councilman Charlie Lowrance said. But, he said, residents should be consulted about any increase in garbage rates, as even if it's only $7 more per month, some people may have trouble paying for it.

City Council members said an additional upfront cost would be educating people about what materials they should recycle.

As for adding public recycling bins, those would cost less, but they also have a downside, Republic representatives say.

For the recyclables to be sold, contamination must be sufficiently removed, Warner said. Public recycling bins often have a lot of contamination because people dump non-recyclable materials into the bins, he said.

likely result in increased costs for the city.

Debbie Mullen, a manager with Republic, said market prices for recyclable materials have dropped. Six months ago, they would receive $80 per ton for recycled paper. Now it's $20 a ton, she said.

The end result is that Republic has to raise the price it charges cities for handling recycling material, Mullen said.

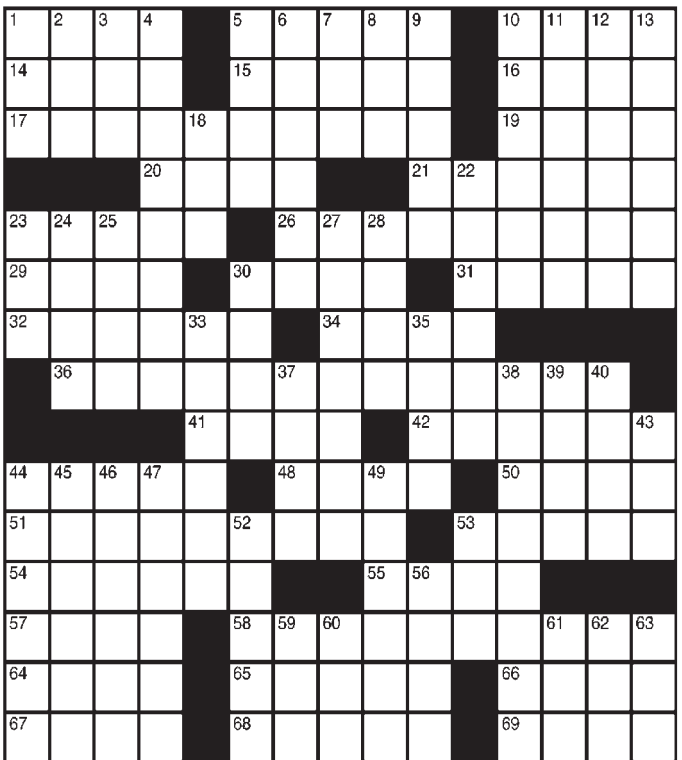

James Warner, who is controller for Republic, said as a result of the market situation, "We have to charge more. We have to charge upfront what we need to keep the doors open."

Typically, he said, Republic negotiates a price with the city or county. Once the recyclable materials are sold, the city or county would

Heartland Games swimmers make a splash

Ages range from 62 to 89 in event for ages 50 and over

By NEIL SIMPSON

SPECIAL TO HIGHLANDS NEWS-SUN

Monday started out as a cold dreary day with very heavy cloud cover. By the time the Heartland Games For Active Adults swimmers were ready to plunge into the Highlands County YMCA pool, the sun was out and the weather was near perfect for an outdoor meet. Swimmers from Bradenton, Hudson and Sun City Center joined locals from Avon Park, Lake Placid and Sebring, looking for a ticket to compete in the Florida Senior Games which will be held in Clearwater in December.

The men ranged in age from 62 to 89 and the ladies from 65 to 80 which should serve as a good indication to others that all comers 50 and older should consider joining the Heartland Games.

Competition took place in 50, 100, 200 and 500 yard freestyle, the last being the most grueling event of the day. Competitors also faced off in the 50, 100 and 200 yard back stroke and breast stroke. Only the very brave took the 100 yard individual medley challenge completing 25 yards each of

Avon Park plays Tenoroc for district title on Friday

By MARK PINSON

AVON PARK - Tuesday night's Class 5A-District 8 semifinal game between Avon Park and Mulberry was a great example of why a shot clock should be used for high school basketball games.

Mulberry, which lost twice to Avon Park during the regular season, decided to use a stall offense for a good portion of the first half. The result was no action on the floor for minutes at a time since Avon Park had the lead and was content to stay in its zone defense.

The No. 1 seeded Red Devils ultimately used their size advantage and superior athleticism to beat the fourth-seeded Panthers by a score of 55-42.

The win improved Avon Park to an impressive 22-3 on the season and sends the Red Devils into the district championship game against Tenoroc on Friday night.

"We didn't play as well as we can but we were able to get the win," said Avon Park head coach Paulette Daley. "Mulberry surprised us with a couple of things in the first half and we seemed a little nervous, but we made some adjustments and executed better in the second half. We had a lot of turnovers and missed a lot of layups, but we'll work on that in practice and be ready for Tenoroc on Friday night."

Mulberry came out strong in the first quarter as Daisha Maldonado scored eight points and the Panthers' man-to-man defense gave Avon Park problems.

Mulberry, which ran clock with each possession, scored in the paint to take a surprising 12-11 lead heading to the second period.

Avon Park kept its composure and took control as senior forward Alisha Walker dominated inside to score four of her game-high 29 points and junior guard Tajenay Vassell added four of her nine points to give the Red Devils the Norm Grubbs is a native Hoosier who followed the exploits of Ernie Banks and the Cubs in his youth and the Celtics' Larry Bird later in life. A three-sport athlete in high school, he made the Army his career and left his mark on the athletic trail. In 1978 Norm set the U.S. Army Europe record in the 880 run and was Athlete of the Year in 1987 at his Italian base. He now competes and wins medals in the Heartland Games for Active Adults and will run in the 75-plus group next year. He moved to Lake Placid to be with his mother in her declining years and found the Lake Placid league, which he considers "the best group of guys I've ever been around."

SPECIAL TO HIGHLANDS NEWS-SUN

On Monday, Norm's Wedgwood's team lost to Miller Air 17-3. John Kloet's outstanding pitching got hitting support from Kyle Saunders with four and a septet of hitters with three. No Wedgwood hitter notched more than two hits.

In another low-coring game by senior standards, Central Security defeated Seminole Tire 13-10. Bill Todd, Jeff Stanley, and Ron Gary had three hits each for the winners. Paul Stephenson (double), Dan Rasmussen, and Chet Johnson tallied three hits apiece for The 'Noles.

Yates Insurance bested Lake Placid Marine 15-9. Fine pitching by Mo Pier was supported by the bats of Don Cunningham, (double, home run), John McCallum (double) and Ron Kilburn (two doubles) with three hits each. Kilburn's leaping snag at shortstop of a liner was the play of the game. Jim Nicolet (two triples), Tom Trapman and Dana Amundson had three hits apiece for The Mariners.

In Wednesday action, the league front-runners met with Central Security (7-1) scoring a 22-12 victory over Miller Air (6-2). Dick Cook slammed a home run, Ted Griffith (double) had five hits, and Ron Gary (two doubles), Ross Anderson, and Mitch Dallen all logged four hits in the win. Bill Scrase had four hits for Miller, while Cliff Bluml (double) and Paul Marcellus (double) added three each.

Yates Insurance (4-4) slugged its way to a 32-22 win over Wedgwood's (3-5). Leading the hit parade for Yates was Bill Gallagher (three doubles, triple) with five. CORE'S Braun, Bennett competent in Prototype

Special to Highlands News-Sun

DAYTONA BEACH - Jon Bennett makes no secret of his longstanding passion for Prototype racing.

"Personally, I've always been drawn to those types of cars from the time I was a kid, and then as I was able to begin to afford to pay for my own racing," said the owner/driver of the No. 54 CORE autosport ORECA LMP2 machine that finished third in last month's Rolex 24 At Daytona. "I've always been in cars that looked a bit like prototypes, and there's different varieties.

"As I pulled through the tunnel at Daytona, it was pretty awe inspiring to have climbed so high in motor-sports - something that means very, very much to me - and not competing for a class win at Daytona, but actually competing for the overall. The opportunity is pretty incredible."

The move to the IMSA WeatherTech SportsCar Championship Prototype class is the last step in a process that began in the 1990s in Sports Car Club of America (SCCA) competition for the owner of South Carolina-based Composite Resources. The company is described as "a leading-edge design, prototyping and composite manufacturing facility" in Bennett's bio on the CORE autosport website.

Bennett progressed through what now is known as the IMSA Prototype Challenge Presented by Mazda and into the 2014 and 2015, and raced a Porsche in the GT Daytona (GTD) class last year.

Bill Todd and Ross Anderson each notched four hits, while Manager Doran Quigg chipped in with three. Terry Austin paced Wedgeworth's with four hits including a home run.

Miller Air remained tied for the league lead with The Securitymen by defeating Lake Placid Marine 26-15. Ian McCuaig (two doubles) and Bill Scrase (two triples) were part of a seven-player onslaught that registered four hits each. Dave LeHue tallied four hits for The Mariners.

Yates Insurance broke up a close game with a 12 run eighth inning to score a 31-16 win over Seminole Tire. Jeff Lindskoog (two doubles), Pat Lowe, Bill Gallagher (double), Ron Kilburn (two home runs), and Don Cunningham (two doubles) had five hit days for Yates. John McCallum legged out a long triple on his two new artificial knees. Elston Hedges (three doubles) had four hits for The 'Noles.

Monday's games were rained out and will be made up with two six inning doubleheaders on Valentine's Day.

Wednesday, Jan. 31 games witnessed Central Security upend Lake Placid Marine 27-13. Ted Griffith and Lee Maule stroked five hits apiece for the winners, with Jeff Stanley adding four and Dick Cook slamming a home run. Bob Roth (two doubles) had four hits for The Mariners, and Richard Rucker went deep in the loss.

Miller Air kept pace with The Securitymen by defeating Yates Insurance 23-19. Paul Marcellus homered for the winners, while Gary Steeves, Bill Scrase (triple), Ian McCuaig (double, triple) and Phil Lucas (two doubles) formed the Four Hit Club for the winners. Lucas added a dazzling running catch to extinguish a Yates rally. Don Cunningham (three triples), Bill Gallagher (double), Paul Brand (double), and Mo Pier each notched four hits for Yates.

Seminole Tire squeaked past Wedgeworth's 23-22 as an eight-run Wedgeworth rally fell one short. Duane Wilson (two doubles) had five hits for the winners and received help from Ron Wickman, Ken Elston (two doubles), Chet Johnson (double), Paul Stephenson and Jeff Lindskoog with four hits apiece.

Jim "Laser" Lauzon, Skip Raller, and Don Bucher each tallied five hits for Wedgeworth's, and Norm Grubbs added a homer.

lead. Mulberry ran most of the clock out in the second quarter, but failed to score much as Avon Park took a 23-15 lead at the half.

Mulberry decided to play at a faster pace in the third period and traded baskets with Avon Park.

Walker poured in six points and Asiah Dewberry drained a jump shot from the baseline to give the Red Devils a 33-25 lead heading into the final eight minutes.

Mulberry employed a full-court press which forced Avon Park turnovers. The Panthers took advantage and pulled within 48-42 with 1:45 remaining to play.

Avon Park worked the ball up the floor against the press and was able to get the ball to Walker for a basket in the paint to stem the Mulberry rally.

The Panthers missed their next shot and were forced to foul.

Avon Park's Jarcaria Dennis scored four points and Walker swished a pair of free throws to seal the win for the Red Devils.

"The stall kept our girls from getting tired and that helped us at the end of the game," said Daley. "We have to play better and break the press if we want to win the district title."

Avon Park will host Tenoroc on Friday night and the Red Devils swept both games from the Titans during the regular season.

Tenoroc beat Lake Placid by double digits in Tuesday night's other district semifinal.

"Tenoroc is a solid team and has a good point guard and an inside game," Daley said. "We have six seniors and they've worked very hard to get to this point. We just have to take care of the ball and play our game and we'll be fine." No matter the outcome of Friday night's district championship game, both teams will advance to compete in a regional quarterfinal game next week.

The district champion will host a game, while the district runner-up will be on the road.

the GT Le Mans (GTLM) class.

But as the 2017 season wound down, Bennett knew what he wanted to do next, which was to return to Prototype racing. He also knew it would take a significant commitment to take that step.

"I began to create this concept towards the end of the season last year, and I knew that the cars were quite a bit more physical to drive," he said. "I really began to step up my personal training and getting stronger and building my endurance back in August-September of 2017, and I haven't stopped.

"I think that plays an important role in terms of staying sharp and quick as the hours progress in these long races. I'm very thankful that I took the time to sort of reimagine my training and step it up. I think that's really part of the lifestyle going forward. These cars are not for kids. They're very quick, they're very, very physically demanding and it's important that you keep up with the car."

Braun believes Bennett did a fine job of keeping up with the car in their first outing at Daytona, which clearly played a role in the team finishing on the podium.

"One of the biggest things that impressed me was Jon's pace in the race," Braun said. "I mean, he did an amazing job. Not only as a team, we kept up with Penskes and the Joests and all these teams, but Jon as a driver was able to keep up with those pro-level guys as well. That's what really kept us in the mix and allowed us to contend at the end of the race."

Bennett pointed out a few other key contributors to the team's success at Daytona, namely his full-season co-driver, Braun, their Daytona co-drivers, Loic Duval and Romain Dumas, and the team's overall preparation. In a class that includes teams like Acura Team Penske, Mazda Team Joest, Action Express Racing, Wayne Taylor Racing and many others, preparation is key.

butterfly, breast, back and freestyle.

At the end of the day, 52 gold medals were awarded in 10 age/gender categories. Susie Buelow of Avon Park and Geraldine Fabb from the Bluffs of Sebring each took home six gold medals. Dave Drach from Lake Placid and Tom Stadler of Tanglewood each captured four golds. Sebring's Earl Bosley and Walter Herbruck, the oldest swimmer at 89, each swam away with three gold medals.

Lee Hughes, Cliff Ables, Judy Granger, Harold

Smith and Audrey Smith, all from Sebring, walked off with two golds each. Hughes also added two silvers while Ables and Granger added one silver to their collection. Jeff Parent took silver in all four of his events. All of the above have qualified to swim in the State Games.

The meet coordinator, Megan Wolfe, did a fine job of keeping the meet moving smoothly, often timing three swimmers at a time. She has been working at the YMCA for six years and became a full-time staff member in December when she was appointed as head lifeguard. She is currently getting certified to take on the job of Aquatics Director. Wolfe is a graduate of Sebring High School where she twice placed third in the state in the 50-yard freestyle. She attended college at Daytona State and Florida Gulf Coast where she continued her swimming exploits doing well in national competitions.

Megan has already agreed to take charge of the next Heartland Games swim meet which she has booked for Monday, Feb. 25, 2019.

The Heartland Games are organized by South Florida State College. For more details about the Games and results of all events, visit www.southflorida.edu/heartlandgames.

Great LEGO Race opens in March

New attraction to feature virtual reality roller coaster

Special to Highlands News-Sun

Brick fans, start your engines! LEGOLAND Florida Resort has announced Friday, March 23 as the grand opening date for its newest attraction, The Great LEGO Race. It's the first virtual reality (VR) roller coaster experience designed for kids and represents the first time the LEGO brand and mini-figure characters have been integrated with VR technology in a theme park attraction.

With animated action taking place on the ground and in the air, the wild and wacky race pits guests against a pirate, wizard, surfer and pharaoh as they steer LEGO-built vehicles like a rocket-powered windsurfing rig, a stylish scooter fueled by espresso and an ornately canopied bed (called a "litter") carried by mummy servants. Wearing optional VR headsets, riders will experience the action from every direction up, down, forward, backward and all points in between while riding the roller coaster — in a dazzling environment where everything is made of LEGO bricks.

In November, reporters received a sneak preview of the 360-degree adventure during the annual International Association of Amusement Parks and Attractions (IAAPA) trade show in Orlando.

"Just previewed the new Great LEGO Race VR coming to LEGOLAND Florida [in 2018]," tweeted Banks Lee, Attractions Magazine

Golf and other 4-letter words

By ALLEN MOODY
HIGHLANDS SUN EDITOR

If you happened to read Sunday's Highlands News-Sun story on the Florida Hospital Golf Tournament, you saw where Mike Gilpin hit a hole-in-one. If you read a little bit farther down, you saw where the team of Jeff Cornelius, Clay Stanphill, Paul Roberts, Jamie Fones placed third in the Third Flight on the basis of matching cards.

What you didn't see was the team they tied with was the Highlands News-Sun team, which consisted of Pat Dell, Chris Dunn, Cliff Yeazel and myself. Had you seen Yeazel and I on the golf course that day, you'd realize that finishing with the same score as the third place team was quite a miraculous result.

Since I'm sports editor, people naturally assume that I'm good at golf, which doesn't make a whole lot of sense to me. I'm also editor of our entertainment weekly and do the two entertainment-themed B sections we have in the daily, yet nobody assumes I'm a good actor or musically inclined.

In fact, it's the very threat of belting out a couple of stanzas of the Dead Milkmen's "Punk Rock Girl" that frequently allows me to get my way around the house.

But I was the logical choice when players were needed to fill out our golf team. After all, I hit a hole-in-one when I was in junior high school and more recently finished second behind the dastardly Erica White in the paper's Christmas putt-putt competition. White's clutch 15-foot putt on the final hole deprived me of $50 worth of free beer in the form of a grocery store gift certificate bought by our publisher Tim Smolarick.

There was one minor problem, though. I hadn't played golf in 23 years.

Knowing I had to at least look like I knew what I was doing out there, a friend bought me a golf shirt and shorts, which embarrassingly became known as "my little golf outfit," much to the amusement of my mother.

I ran into Cliff in the parking lot before the tournament and our conversation quickly turned to who was going to be the worst player on the team. Turns out it was me, as Yeazel hit more good shots than I did. He also hit more bad shots than I did, but it wasn't due to lack of effort on my part. The sad truth of the matter is that I simply lacked the distance on some shots for them to find their way into the woods.

That's not to say I didn't get hold of several shots out there. I did — the first of which landed in somebody's front yard a good 100 yards from the fairway.

After spending 30 minutes at the driving range the day before the tournament I knew I needed to set my expectations pretty low, so my goal was for us to use two of my shots in the scramble. To my amazement, we used two of my shots on the first two holes. But it wasn't until 14 holes later when I badly shanked a 20-foot putt that ended up 18 inches from the cup that we used another.

Sometime around the third hole, Cliff and I came the horrible realization that we only had 10 or 11 golf balls between us. But thankfully, after one par 3 we were each given a sleeve of three balls, all six of which were safely deposited in the bottom of water hazards or lost in the woods somewhere during our remaining holes.

On one hole, we noticed several people had wandered in the vicinity of one of the greens to watch. They didn't stray too terribly close and elected to stay back a safe distance. Or so they thought.

Yeazel hit his ball in their direction, but had flubbed his shot a bit and the ball fell a good 50 yards short of them.

I, on the other hand, got hold of my second ball of the day and it was flying right at them. Cries of "fore!" finally got them to run at the last second, as my ball missed them by a couple of yards.

"You might want to stand by the pin," Dunn shouted. Wise words indeed.

The group realized there was no safe place on the course with Cliff and I in possession of golf clubs and wisely left the premises.

The rest of the round was pretty uneventful, as we took turns either hitting balls out of bounds or nowhere near the pin, as Dell and Dunn carried the team to the clubhouse, which is when we found out we had just been edged out for third place.

It's now been five days since the golf outing and my blisters are healing and the back isn't quite as sore as it was the day before.

There's also another Friday golf tournament coming up and I've already been enlisted to represent the paper again on Feb. 23 when the Chen Dental Golf Tournament takes place.

Now, if you're playing in the tournament it's in your best interest to know where I am at all times. It doesn't matter if you're two holes away. My ball can find you.

And if — God help you — I happen to be shooting in your general direction, just go stand by the pin. It's the safest place out there.

Speaking out for 'Dreamers'

AP PHOTO

Pelosi stages 8-hour speech to push for vote for 'Dreamers'

By STEVE PEOPLES and ALAN FRAM
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi staged a record-breaking, eight-hour speech Wednesday in an attempt to force a House vote on protections for the "Dreamer" immigrants — and to prove to an increasingly angry wing of progressives and activists that she has done all she could.

Wearing four-inch heels and forgoing any breaks, Pelosi spent much of the rare talkathon reading personal letters from the young immigrants whose temporary protection from deportation is set to expire next month. The California Democrat quoted from the Bible and Pope Francis, as Democrats took turns sitting behind her in support. The Office of the House Historian said it was the longest continuous speech in the chamber on record.

"You see, these people are being deported," Pelosi said around hour six of her speech. "We can do something today to at least make whole the children."

The performance had no immediate impact on Republican leaders who have not agreed to a vote. But it was perhaps equally aimed at the liberal wing of Pelosi's own party, who seethed Wednesday as Democrats in the Senate cut a budget deal that could quickly steal the momentum behind the effort to resolve the Dreamers' plight.

While she spoke on the House floor, immigration activists rallied in Washington and threatened political retribution against the congressional Democrats who abandoned the strategy of demanding that a budget deal be paired with an immigration deal. The fresh threats exposed deepening divisions within a Democratic Party struggling to address a liberal priority in Republican-controlled Washington.

"I'm not a loyal Democrat," Linda Sarsour, a political activist who co-chaired the 2017 Women's March, declared during a fiery rally near Capitol Hill. "We will be joining primaries this year and we will primary Democrats who did not have the spine or the courage to stand up for our undocumented family."

The activists who filled a Washington church Wednesday, like liberal leaders nationwide, called out Pelosi and Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer by name. Some scoffed at Pelosi's speech, intended to elicit a promise from House Speaker Paul Ryan to allow a vote on subsequent legislation to protect the younger immigrants. Ryan's promise, activists noted, was far from a guarantee.

"What are they thinking? They're giving up their leverage," said a frustrated Angel Padilla, policy director for the liberal group Indivisible. "All of these votes will matter come November."

Pelosi started her remarks just about 10 a.m. and yielded the floor at 6:11 p.m.

By the end of the marathon, the clearest signs of weariness were an occasional quiver in her voice, a stumble over her words and a case of the sniffles. At one point she interrupted herself to read a note from the House historian alerting her that she delivered the longest continuous speech, besting Rep.

AP count: Nearly 11.8M enroll for Obama health law in 2018

By RICARDO ALONSO-ZALDIVAR and KEVIN S. VINEYS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Call it the political equivalent of a death-defying escape: former President Barack Obama's health care law pulled in nearly 11.8 million customers for 2018, despite the Republican campaign to erase it from the books.

An Associated Press count found that nationwide enrollment was about 3 percent lower than last year. California, with more than 1.5 million sign-ups, was the last state to report, announcing its numbers on Wednesday.

Sixteen states increased their enrollment from last year, according to AP's analysis. Six of those were carried by President Donald Trump in 2016, while 10 went for Democrat Hillary Clinton.

However, of the total number of people signed up this year about 6 in 10 live in states that went for Trump, according to the AP's analysis.

"If you had asked me a year ago whether enrollment for 2018 would be almost equal to 2017, I would have laughed at you," said Larry Levitt, who follows the health law for the nonpartisan Kaiser Family Foundation.

Total enrollment remained remarkably stable despite Trump's disdain for "Obamacare," and multiple attempts

How Trump plans to make Mexico pay for the wall. Yes, really.

By FRANCO ORDONEZ and ANITA KUMAR

McCLATCHY WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON — Mexico will never cut a check to the U.S. Treasury, but President Donald Trump is zeroing in on a plan so that the president can argue America's southern neighbor will indeed fund the border wall, according to multiple sources familiar with the discussions.

The plan aides are piecing together would force Mexico to pay for the wall in indirect ways, including through remittance fees and tapping Mexico's trade surplus with the United States.

"He will find a way," said a former Trump adviser who is in close contact with the White House. "The wall will be funded partially or all by an additional revenue stream."

Publicly, the priority is getting the $25 billion or so that Trump says is needed to fund the wall as part of a package deal that would protect so-called Dreamers and reduce family migration.

Privately, the White House is mulling over various proposals to ensure U.S. taxpayers are reimbursed for the wall's initial costs — or at least some of the price tag.

While Trump's team has not reached a consensus, leading proposals include adding a small percentage fee on money sent by individuals in the United States to recipients in Mexico. Another is directing a surplus in revenue from a revised trade agreement with Mexico and Canada. White House Director of Legislative Affairs Marc Short has also spoken favorably of a proposal presented by Republican members of Congress to have foreign tech workers, though largely not Mexican, pay for part of the wall, according to a U.S. source familiar with the conversations.

Kushner, Trump Jr. may escape public hearings with help from GOP

By STEVEN T. DENNIS

BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON — Top Republicans may end up shielding the president's son and son-in-law from facing tough questions on-camera from Democrats eager to press them over their contacts with Russians during the 2016 campaign.

Democrats on two Senate panels are demanding to hold public hearings with Donald Trump Jr. and Jared Kushner in a fight that could determine whether any of the congressional Russia probes come to a bipartisan outcome.

Senate Intelligence Committee

Chairman Richard Burr and Judiciary Committee Chairman Chuck Grassley have resisted the Democrats' calls for months, saying that the younger Trump and Kushner already answered questions during closed-door interviews last year.

Democrats say the pair should be questioned in public because of their key roles in the campaign, with a particular focus on the controversial meeting they attended in Trump Tower in 2016 with several Russians after being told they had dirt on Democrat Hillary Clinton. But Republicans have sought to avoid a "show trial" with the president's son and son-in-law being sworn in for public testimony.

Special counsel Robert Mueller — who's running a separate investigation into Russia's meddling in the campaign and whether anyone close to Trump colluded in it — is also looking into the Trump Tower meeting. Mueller's team met with Kushner last year to discuss a limited set of questions, but they haven't interviewed Trump Jr.

Burr, who has led the most bipartisan of the three major congressional probes into Russian campaign interference, said in several interviews in recent weeks that he doesn't

Women at Brazil Carnival push back against harassment

By PETER PRENGAMAN ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO — Ana Lobo, who is six months pregnant, was at a pre-Carnival street party last weekend when a man started yelling and calling her names.

"Whore!" she remembered him saying, apparently because she was wearing a revealing top. "Some men have this feeling that they can do whatever to your body," said Lobo, a 29-year-old artist who later that night attended one of the many feminist-themed parties.

"It's time for women to take advantage of this moment" to push back. Many women in Latin America's largest nation are doing exactly that during this year's Carnival celebrations, with block parties of all-female musicians, shirts, necklaces and crowns with messages like "my breasts, my rules" and several campaigns to report and crackdown on harassment.

The (hash)metoo movement against harassment that is roiling the U.S. has yet to catch on in Brazil, which has one of the world's highest homicide rates for women, according to the Brazilian nonprofit Mapa da Violencia.

But while women's groups say that Brazil has a long way to go to address inequality and ingrained machismo, they see glimmers of a potentially bigger movement in the public dialogue about harassment during Carnival and what authorities and several organizations are doing to crack down on it.

The massive party officially begins Friday and goes through Wednesday, but in some cities, such as Rio de Janeiro, it's a multi-week event. The hundreds of block parties often include heavy drinking and round-the-clock samba dancing and they come during the Southern Hemisphere's sweaty summer month of February, when the heat drives many to wear fewer clothes.

Debora Thome, who in 2015 co-organized a block party called "Mulheres Rodadas," or "Women Who Get Around," says Carnival is a good time to focus on fighting harassment because it forces the question of respect amid scantily dressed partygoers.

"A woman can be naked in the street and nobody should be allowed to touch her," said Thome, a former reporter currently working on a doctorate on female participation in Brazilian politics.

Mulheres Rodadas began as a reaction to a photo that went viral on Facebook of a man holding a sign in Portuguese saying he "didn't deserve a woman who gets around."

Thome and co-founder Renata Rodrigues announced plans for a block party protest as a joke, and within 24 hours more than 1,000 women said they would attend. They knew they had struck a nerve.

"Carnival is just a small piece of a much larger problem," said Rodrigues.

Since then, several other feminist-themed street party groups have been formed in cities nationwide.

They include all-female bands and edgy themes that push back at traditional gender roles and even make fun of derogatory names. At one recent feminist-themed block party, hundreds of women dressed up as animals they said they had been called on the streets: cows, piranhas, hens and cobras, among others.

Roma Neptune, a 29-year-old high school sociology teacher, says learning to play the agogo — a percussion instrument that, like all others during Carnival, is usually played by men — has been empowering. However, she is disillusioned by men who claim to be supportive but are not.

"They say they are against machismo but won't put their hands in the fire when a woman is in a dangerous situation," said Neptune, who dressed as a cow and played in the band.

Anderson Semme, one of a few dozen men at the same block party, agreed.

"Men's role is to recognize we were wrong for a long time and now do the right thing," said Semme, a 34-year-old computer technician.

More than 300 child soldiers released in South Sudan

By SAM MEDNICK ASSOCIATED PRESS

YAMBIO, South Sudan (AP) — More than 300 child soldiers were released Wednesday by armed groups in South Sudan, the second-largest such release since civil war began five years ago. Over 19,000 children are thought to have been recruited by all sides.

The "laying down of the guns" ceremony for 87 girls and 224 boys was the first step in a process that should see at least 700 child soldiers freed in the coming weeks, the United Nations said. Putting down weapons and rejoining normal life is just the "beginning of the journey," said the head of the U.N. mission in South Sudan, David Shearer.

The U.N. has released almost 2,000 child soldiers so far. More than 10 percent of them have been under age 13.

Human rights groups say child recruitment continues, even as South Sudan's government says it has committed to ending the practice.

"The continued recruitment and use of children by the military and opposing armed groups points to the utter impunity that reigns in South Sudan, and the terrible cost of this war on children," Mausi Segun, Africa director at Human Rights Watch, said in a new report this week.

One 17-year-old who had been abducted and forced to fight attended Wednesday's ceremony while clasp his arms around his stomach and staring at the ground. He gave only his first name, Christopher.

"They told me to kill my mother," he said, his voice barely audible.

After being seized from his home by opposition soldiers at the age of 10 during a period of localized fighting, he said his mother came into the bush to plead with his commanders to set him free.

"When she came they told me to shoot her or I'd be killed instead," the boy said. "I had no option, I just asked God to forgive me." But he had never shot a gun, and when he pulled the trigger it jammed. His mother escaped.

Now freed, Christopher said his family has forgiven him.

The released children will be reunified with their families and given three months' worth of food assistance and psychosocial support, along with the opportunity to go to school.

Although aid workers were optimistic, they worried that renewed violence could force the children back into armed groups. A new round of peace talks began this week in neighboring Ethiopia, mediated by a regional bloc.

"If peace isn't sustained and people are forced to the bush, we'll lose these children," said Anne Hadjixros, a child protection officer with UNICEF.

Speaking at Wednesday's ceremony, South Sudan's First Vice President Taban Deng Gai called the release of child soldiers a sign of peace.

He also warned other countries, particularly the United States, against criticism from those in "glass houses." Some in the East African nation have responded angrily after the U.S. imposed an arms embargo last week.

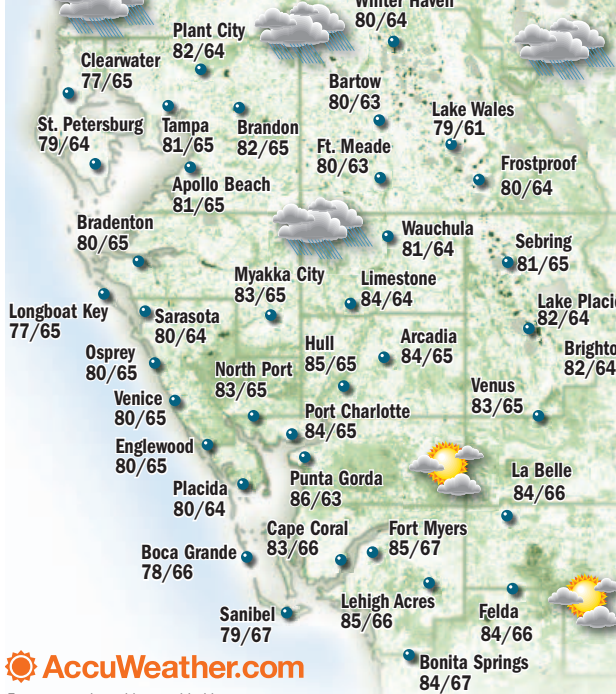

The vice president said the U.S. had had to learn from its mistakes and South Sudan would, too.

Trump aide Rob Porter resigns after abuse allegations

By BRIAN BENNETT
TRIBUNE WASHINGTON BUREAU

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump's White House staff secretary Rob Porter resigned Wednesday following abuse allegations from two ex-wives, but he won't be leaving the West Wing until a later date.

Porter's departure will leave a hole among the tight circle of staff members who see Trump on a near-daily basis.

Porter is close to White House chief of staff John Kelly, often traveled with Trump aboard Air Force One and was responsible for handling key documents and briefings that made it into Trump's hands.

White House press secretary Sarah Sanders confirmed Porter is resigning, but that his departure "won't be immediate," adding that Porter will stay on to ensure "there is a smooth transition."

Porter denied the allegations in a statement Sanders read to reporters Wednesday.

"These outrageous allegations are simply false. I took the photos given to the media nearly 15 years ago. And the reality behind them is nowhere close to what is being described. I have been transparent and truthful about these vile claims, but I will not further engage publicly with a coordinated smear campaign," Porter's statement said.

Sanders said Porter "was not pressured" to leave the White House, and his decision to leave was "personal" and "made on his own."

Porter's resignation came after photos circulated online of his first wife's bruised face and news stories reported an alleged pattern of physical abuse in two previous marriages. The Daily Mail reported Porter was dating White House communications director Hope Hicks, a close aide to Trump.

Report: Social media surveillance unfairly targeted Muslims

By ALANNA DURKIN RICHER
ASSOCIATED PRESS

BOSTON — A social media monitoring tool used by the Boston Police Department to identify potential threats swept up the posts of people using the hashtag (hash) MuslimLivesMatter and a lawmaker's Facebook update about racial inequality, according to a report released Wednesday by the American Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts.

The ACLU says in a report based on documents obtained through a public records request that the police department's use of Geofeedia to mine the internet appears to have had little benefit to public safety while unfairly focusing on groups such as Muslims. Boston police say the ACLU's conclusions are misguided and that the program helped police successfully monitor events that could lead to demonstrations or crowds and threaten security.

"Our main focus in all of this is public safety, not targeting speech, not targeting people's political affiliations," said Lt. Det. Michael McCarthy. "And quite frankly, to have the ACLU to even make that insinuation is not only insulting, but it's completely misinformed," he said.

Boston police used Geofeedia for two weeks in 2014 and again for more than a year starting in January 2015, according to the documents. The department's use of the program became public in late 2016 after it solicited bids to spend $1.4 million for another social media monitoring software.

Police later dropped those plans amid backlash from groups like the ACLU.

The now-defunct location-based program allowed officials to set up email alerts for when certain keywords were used on social media. The alerts were vetted by analysts in the department's Boston Regional Intelligence Center and the data was discarded once it was determined it wasn't a potential public safety issue, McCarthy said.

Geofeedia was used by police departments across the country until social media companies cut off access to its data after concerns raised by the ACLU of northern California in 2016. The software was also widely used by companies interested in what their customers were saying about them online, and news organizations for reporting.

The documents show Boston police searched for keywords they identified as "Islamic extremist terminology," including words like "ISIS" and "caliphate" as well as Arabic words such as "ummah," which means "community."

In the wake of the killing of three Muslim students near the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill, police also tracked the hashtag #muslimlivesmatter, according to the report. After unrest in Ferguson, Missouri, over the fatal shooting of a black man by a white police officer, police sought for the terms like "protest" and "Ferguson."

The ACLU and the Boston-based Muslim Justice League say the tracking of common Arabic words, like "ummah," is troubling. The ACLU said posts captured by the program that mentioned "ISIS" were either jokes or references to issues in the news.

"The Boston Police Department should never conduct surveillance targeting political speech or religious expression, but that's exactly what their own records show they did when they used this social media monitoring software," said Kade Crockford, co-author of the report and director of the group's Technology for Liberty Program.

McCarthy said police didn't target individuals, but those keywords in response to events happening around the country or based on information from federal law enforcement. In the wake of the Chapel Hill shooting, for example, there were concerns about possible demonstrations or backlash against the Muslim community, he said.

"If we weren't diligent in our efforts to provide safe events for those participating and attending ... then we wouldn't be doing our job as police officers," he said.

Among those whose social media use prompted an alert was then-City Councilor Tito Jackson, for a 2014 Facebook post about homelessness and poverty that mentioned Ferguson, according to the report. City council was unaware at the time that police were using the Geofeedia program, Jackson said.

"I spoke out about their 2016 plan to spend $1.4 million on a social media surveillance system in part because I worried that the tool would be used to track people not because they did something wrong but because of their political views," he said.

"Little did I know that that had already happened," he said.

Trump flirts with flashy military parade long eschewed by US

By JOSH LEDERMAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — For generations, as America's authoritarian rivals strutted their tanks, troops and jets through main thoroughfares in dramatic displays of strength, the United States watched from afar, but did not emulate.

Widely accepted as the world's mightiest, the U.S. military has no tradition of putting itself on parade like in Russia, North Korea or China. But President Donald Trump does not often stand on tradition. So Trump's directive to the Pentagon to draft options for a massive march reverberated across Washington on Wednesday like the thud of a discharged cannon, as lawmakers and military leaders mused about the cost, the risk and the purpose.

"People will wonder, 'Well, what are they afraid of now? What are they trying to prove?'" Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton, who represents the District of Columbia in Congress, said in an interview. "We don't have to show off to make a point."

It was a critique voiced by both Democrats and Republicans the day after The Washington Post revealed Trump wants an elaborate parade this year to rival the Bastille Day celebration in Paris that made a distinct impression on him in July. Democratic President Donald Trump listens during a meeting with law enforcement officials in the Cabinet Room of the White House on Tuesday in Washington.

Sen. Dick Durbin called it a "fantastic waste of money," while Republican Sen. Lindsey Graham told CNN that the parade risked being "kind of cheesy and a sign of weakness" if it's just about showing off military muscle.

The president did not seem deterred, although his aides rushed to downplay the notion that it was anything beyond an idea Trump had floated "in a brainstorming session" to help Americans express gratitude and pride for the military. White House spokeswoman Sarah Huckabee Sanders said there had been no final decision. And Trump's legislative director said it was too early to even guess about potential costs, though it's assumed it would cost millions.

"We've been putting together some options. We'll send them up to the White House for a decision," said Defense Secretary Jim Mattis as reporters peppered him with questions at the White House. "The president's respect, his fondness for the military I think is reflected in him asking for these options."

In the nation's capital, officials were scrambling to identify potential implications for such a parade, such as whether D.C. streets could even accommodate heavyweight tanks and other equipment. On its official Twitter account, Washington's city council openly trolled the commander in chief, declaring that despite wintery weather, "DC Public Schools will open on time today. Sadly, the Giant Tank Parade is cancelled. Permanently."

Holmes Norton told The Associated Press that she was already preparing steps to ensure that "if Trump wants a parade, he pays for it." Still, she conceded there was little chance of blocking a parade permit from being issued, given the First Amendment right to free assembly.

Although U.S. troops commonly participate in parades on the Fourth of July and other holidays, especially those honoring veterans, the United States has never embraced raw displays of military power, such as North Korea's parading of ballistic missiles. The idea is that the world's pre-eminent military is strongest when its might is inferred, not shown off in boastful fashion or in an implicit threat to foreign powers.

"We have avoided doing this kind of display, in part to emphasize that contrast because this has been so commonplace in authoritarian countries," said Julian Zelizer, a presidential historian at Princeton University. "For some presidents, it's sometimes a strategic act: Speak quietly while carrying a big stick," as President Theodore Roosevelt famously advised.

The last time Washington saw anything similar to what Trump is considering was in June 1991, after the Gulf War, as Americans gave veterans of Operation Desert Storm a triumphant welcome home. Some 8,000 veterans marched along with tanks that trudged down a flag-festooned Constitution Avenue as fighter planes roared over the National Mall.

Some 800,000 gathered in the crowd, the U.S. Park

Police said at the time. President George H.W. Bush declared it a "great day."

Although Trump's critics argued his parade idea was rooted in a need for self-aggrandizement, the White House said it was squarely an attempt to venerate America's military. Jonny Havens, a U.S. army veteran who said he served in Iraq, called that sentiment "right on."

"I trust President Trump, Defense Department, Secretary Mattis to do it in the right way, and do it in a way that makes sense and is cost effective," Havens said.

But Shaun Theriot-Smith, another Army veteran who served in Iraq and Afghanistan, said the idea smacked "of the very things we make fun of North Korea for."

"We had bombings in Kabul just last week," Theriot-Smith said. "We're not even sure what we're intending to celebrate here. We still have wars going on that we need to fight."

Trump first floated his idea last September at a meeting with French President Emmanuel Macron, as he reminisced about watching France's Bastille Day military parade. He said the two-hour parade was a "tremendous thing for France and for the spirit of France," and said he wanted one on Pennsylvania Avenue in Washington on July 4 — grander than the one he saw in Paris.

Museum testing if unearthed bones belong to feared pirate

YARMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — Researchers are examining whether human bones found in a Cape Cod shipwreck are those of the infamous pirate Samuel "Black Sam" Bellamy.

The Whydah Pirate Museum in Yarmouth, Massachusetts, says Wednesday that archeologists uncovered the remains in the wreck last year, near what they believe to be Bellamy's pistol.

They've enlisted forensic scientists from the University of New Haven in Connecticut to compare DNA from the bones to a DNA sample given by one of Bellamy's living descendants in the United Kingdom.

The Whydah Gally went down in stormy seas off Wellfleet in 1717, killing nearly all its 150-person crew, including Bellamy, and leaving its ill-gotten riches at the bottom of the ocean.

It was discovered in 1984 by Barry Clifford, an explorer who owns the pirate museum.

Sessions: Administration is working to stop opioid crisis

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Attorney General Jeff Sessions is praising the response of President Donald Trump, federal agents and prosecutors to the nation's opioid crisis, which he acknowledged has hit Florida hard.

In a visit to Tampa on Wednesday, Sessions highlighted several overdose cases in Central Florida. He said federal investigators continue to crack down on "darknet" marketplaces, a computer network used primarily for illegal file sharing through which people sometimes buy illegal drugs. He added that the Drug Enforcement Agency is now asking medical practitioners whether they have received continuing medical education on prescribing or dispensing opioids when they apply for a license or renew.

During remarks that lasted about 25 minutes, Sessions added that he thinks too many opioids are prescribed and people should "take an aspirin sometimes."

Sotomayor: Pay inequality among nation's biggest issues

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sonia Sotomayor says the pay gap between women and men for the same work is one of the biggest issues the nation faces.

Sotomayor spoke Wednesday at Brown University in Rhode Island. She was answering questions from the crowd when a student asked what she considers the top challenges women now face.

Sotomayor said the challenges haven't changed from when she was a college student. She started her career in 1979, and says she was told that over time, women would reach equality.

But she pointed out that today, women only make up about a third of the federal judiciary.

Sotomayor became the first Hispanic and third woman on the nation's highest court when President Barack Obama appointed her in 2009.

Champ Clark's five-hour, 15-minute stem-winder about tariff reform in 1909.

As Pelosi wrapped, she received a standing ovation from the Democrats. A bit punchy and clearly tired, she at times struggled for the words to express her thanks.

"Honor the House of Representative and give us a chance to have a vote on the floor," she said.

At issue is the fate of roughly 1.8 million immigrants brought to the country as children and living here illegally. Many of the so-called "Dreamers" could lose protection from deportation — granted by the Obama administration in 2014 and rescinded by Trump last fall — in the coming weeks.

No issue is more important to the Democratic Party's most passionate voters, who insist their party must reject any budget deal that doesn't protect the young immigrants — even if it means risking a second government shutdown this year. The federal government will shutter non-essential operations Thursday at midnight unless Congress passes a spending plan.

It's unclear whether the liberal outrage will sink the two-year, nearly $400 budget deal unveiled Wednesday that would provide Pentagon and domestic programs with huge spending increases. Schumer praised the agreement for providing needed funding for health, drug abuse and social service programs, having dropped his push to use the budget talks to extract concessions on immigration.

The criticism resonated with members of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, such as Rep. Nanette Barragan, D-Calif., who said the Latino community thinks Senate Democratic leadership "has turned their back on them."

"It's not being made a priority," Barragan said of the party's push to protect those enrolled in the program known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals, or DACA. "It's a mistake to not use every leverage point we have."

Hispanic caucus members and many other Democrats made clear to Pelosi earlier Wednesday that "we would not support a budget caps deal unless we had some clarity about what would happen to Dreamers," said Rep. Ruben Gallego, D-Ariz. They insisted, he added, on DACA language in the budget deal — or some guarantee that the issue would be addressed.

Yet there were no signs that Pelosi's leadership team was pushing rank-and-file Democrats to oppose the Senate deal without a DACA fix.

Rep. Joe Crowley, D-N.Y., a member of House leadership, did not answer when asked why Pelosi's team didn't have a "whip team" to defeat the Senate proposal. And at least some House Democrats indicated they would support it.

"As much as I believe in DACA, we shouldn't close the government when it looks like we're moving toward resolution of all of these problems," said Rep. Bill Pascrell, D-N.J., who said he was backing the budget deal and predicted it would pass.

The lack of a unified Democratic strategy infuriated liberal leaders, who have spent recent weeks intensifying pressure on Democrats to use what little leverage they had in the Republican-controlled Congress to protect Dreamers.

"It breaks my heart to hear the stories of the Dreamers," says Oviedo, "and for the politicians to call them lazy when they are such hard workers. These could be my kids."

"This is a moral fight that Democratic leadership is failing on. That's something that's going to have long-term implications," said Murshed Zaheed, political director for the progressive group CREDO.

Should Pelosi fail to unify House Democrats against the deal, he added, "it's going to be another strike against her effectiveness as leader of the caucus."

Democrats and Republicans "face a fundamental choice" on whether to protect Dreamers, said Ben Wikler, Washington director for the liberal group MoveOn.

"There will be a reckoning," he warned.

The disappointment extended to DACA recipients like 26-year-old Edwin Romero, of Dallas, who was born in Mexico and brought to the United States at the age of 6.

"So far we have seen that the Democrats failed the immigrant youth community," Romero charged. He added: "We are tired of false promises and words. We want action."

by the Republican-led Congress to repeal it. The Trump administration also cut the sign-up window in half, slashed the ad budget, and suddenly stopped a major subsidy to insurers, which triggered a jump in premiums.

"The Affordable Care Act and the landmark protections and affordable coverage it provides are here to stay," House Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi said in a statement.

"These results show that people recognize how important coverage is for their health and financial stability," said Kristine Grow of America's Health Insurance Plans, the industry lobby.

The Trump administration had no immediate reaction. Newly confirmed Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar is a critic of the health law but has avoided directly antagonizing Democrats over it. The White House line remains that "Obamacare" should be repealed and replaced, but Republicans in Congress don't have the votes.

Still, nearly eight years after the ACA passed, the debate isn't likely to go away. The outlook for next year is dicey. Starting in 2019, Congress has repealed the law's unpopular requirement that most people carry health insurance or risk fines from the IRS. That's expected to embolden some healthy people to go without coverage, which would raise premiums for those left behind.

People who are eligible for health law subsidies would be shielded from such increases, but those who don't get financial assistance would face another round of premium hikes.

The Trump administration is trying to address that by promoting lower-cost insurance alternatives that don't offer the comprehensive benefits available through the health law. But that also has drawbacks. If the lower-cost plans catch on with consumers, it could siphon healthy people away from the health law's comprehensive coverage.

Meanwhile, bipartisan legislation to help stabilize insurance markets across the country appears to be struggling in Congress.

a proposal on remittances with the White House.

"There are many, many proposals in the hopper," she said. "They're going through a process."

Politically, Trump needs to make good on his campaign promise before he begins stumping for Republican candidates this fall, not to mention when he runs for re-election in 2020. In each case, Democrats are likely to attack him for squandering taxpayer money on a needless border wall — a structure he insisted he would force Mexico to pay for.

Chris Chmielenski, NumbersUSA's director of content and activism, said it's probably not so much of an issue for Republicans running in the midterm elections, but that Trump likely wants to "save face" before his own re-election campaign.

"I could see from a political point — for 2020 — them saying, 'We may have to think of some ways,'" Chmielenski said.

Trump repeatedly promised during the 2016 campaign that he would build a wall along the southwest border and force Mexico to pay for it. But Mexican President Enrique Pena Nieto has made it clear Mexico would never fund the wall and efforts to get the funding from Congress have yet to materialize.

More than a year into his presidency, Trump has not backed down on the promise, although the size, cost and source of funds for the wall have shifted.

"The Wall will be paid for, directly or indirectly, or through longer term reimbursement, by Mexico," Trump tweeted on Jan. 18.

He raised the pressure Tuesday, saying he'd be willing to shut down the federal government this week if Congress does not approve his border security proposal, which includes the wall.

The White House didn't respond to specific questions about administration planning, but staff directed McClatchy to comments Trump gave last month about the wall to The Wall Street Journal.

"There are many forms of payment," Trump said, citing NAFTA trade agreement as an example.

"I could name 10 right now."

One of those is remittance money being sent to Mexico. Remittances sent to Latin America and the Caribbean rose to $74.3 billion, a 7.4 percent increase in 2016, according to the Pew Research Center. Mexico received the largest chunk of the money, $28.6 billion, which was a 9.3 percent increase from the previous year.

Vaughan of the Center for Immigration Studies has proposed a small fee similar to one being used in Oklahoma. The fee is refundable as a tax credit provided the person includes the payment in his or her taxes. According to the state of Oklahoma, the fee raises roughly $12 million a year from those who don't request a refund.

Vaughan said those here illegally, at least some of them, won't file their taxes and seek the refund.

The administration is also looking at a proposal floated by Republican Rep. Kevin Yoder of Kansas that could help raise $4 billion toward payment of the $25 billion border wall. Foreign tech workers here legally, largely from India, say they'd gladly kick in an extra $2,500 each or more in green card fees if it meant they could get their green cards faster.

Some of Trump's closest advisers said forcing Mexico to pay for the wall is less important than the wall actually being built. Trump's voter base would be ecstatic regardless of who paid for the wall as it's seen as the most visible sign of the border actually being closed down.

see any reason for public hearings with Kushner and Trump Jr. because they've already answered extensive questions from staff behind closed doors.

"The threshold is there has to be value for the American people to hear a public hearing, and I have yet to identify anything that I need to know that they haven't answered," Burr said.

He hasn't ruled one out, however. "I'll wait and see if somebody presents me a plausible reason to have one," he said.

Kushner and Trump Jr. testified separately last year behind closed doors before both the House and Senate Intelligence committees, and Trump Jr. also testified before the Senate Judiciary staff, though all of the transcripts of those sessions remain closely held so far. Grassley, the Judiciary chairman, has said that he intends to make his committee's transcripts public soon.

Grassley said recently that his committee's investigation into the Trump Tower meeting was over because Kushner was "spooked" out of providing a voluntary closed-door interview with the panel's staff. The chairman blamed ranking Democrat Dianne Feinstein's unilateral release of the transcript from an interview with another key witness — Fusion GPS founder Glenn Simpson, who commissioned an unverified dossier on Trump from former British spy Christopher Steele.

Feinstein, in turn, said the transcripts of the committee's interviews should be provided to Mueller and reiterated her calls for a public hearing.

"Transparency in congressional investigations is important. I hope this means Chairman Grassley will move forward with public hearings for Donald Trump Jr. and Jared Kushner, which we agreed to pursue last year," she said in a statement.

Grassley had threatened to subpoena Trump Jr., among others, to testify, before announcing an agreement in July of last year for a staff interview "prior to a public hearing."

The Iowa Republican hasn't yet ruled out compelling Kushner or Trump Jr. to appear in public through a subpoena, something Feinstein and other Democrats have been prepared to do for months. But he said he wants "to know what we would accomplish" by doing so. Instead, he said he hopes to get access to Kushner's staff interview with the Senate Intelligence Committee, though Burr has said he would share transcripts only with Mueller.

The top Democrat on the Senate Intelligence Committee, Mark Warner, who with Burr has strived to keep a bipartisan approach to the panel's probe, also continues to push for public hearings where lawmakers can question major figures, including Trump Jr. and Kushner.

"We'll keep working through this," Warner said. "The public has a lot of questions and equally important, a lot of senators need to talk to a lot of these principals."

Senate Intelligence Committee staffers have interviewed well over 100 people in that panel's yearlong probe so far. It's likely to take more months to conclude, with Burr and Warner planning to release an interim joint report in coming weeks on election security while there's still time to plan for November's mid-term elections.

Grassley has told the Judiciary panel that the transcripts he plans to release include interviews with those who attended the Trump Tower meeting with Russian lawyer Natalia Veselnitskaya. That will include the transcript of Trump Jr.'s interview, several other attendees, and a written response from Veselnitskaya.

Several Democrats, however, say there's no substitute for the key eyewitnesses appearing in public.

Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy. Deliver the poor and needy: rid them out of the hand of the wicked. — Psalms 82:3, 4.

Happy are the people who are a part of his provision for those who are near and dear to his heart.

Mexico: Someone tried to mail a tiger cub

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexican inspectors have found tigers in all sorts of situations: on leashes, in neighbors' yards and wandering the streets.

But the office for environmental protection announced a new twist Wednesday: Someone tried to express-mail a tiger cub.

The cub was sedated and packed into a plastic container. Nobody realized it was there until a sniffer dog looking for contraband detected it.

The cub was mailed in the western state of Jalisco to an address in the central state of Queretaro. It was dehydrated but otherwise well, and was handed over to an animal management center.

The tiger's papers were apparently in order, but it was seized because the mailing constituted mistreatment.

The agency says the case is under investigation.

US consumers boosted borrowing by $18.4 billion in December

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
AP ECONOMICS WRITER

WASHINGTON — American consumers stepped up their borrowing by $18.4 billion in December, a solid performance that followed a massive gain the previous month.

The increase reflects gains of $5.1 billion in the category that covers credit cards and $13.3 billion in the category for auto and student loans, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday.

The overall increase followed a $31 billion surge in November as consumers took on extra credit to finance holiday shopping.

Consumer borrowing is closely followed for indications about how confident households are in taking on more debt to finance spending, which accounts for 70 percent of economic activity. In the fourth quarter, the overall economy grew at a solid 2.6 percent rate. In recent months, Americans have been increasingly confident and willing to take on more debt.

The question is whether the sharp declines in the stock market last Friday and Monday could shake that confidence. Moreover, the Federal Reserve raised its benchmark rate three times in 2017 and indicated in December that it planned to boost rates another three times in 2018 to keep the economy from overheating now that unemployment has dropped to a 17-year low of 4.1 percent.

The five rate increases the Fed has approved over the past two years have left the central bank's key rate at a still-low range of 1.25 percent to 1.5 percent.

The overall increase in credit in December pushed the total to a record of $3.84 trillion. The monthly gain was a 5.8 percent increase in percentage terms, which followed the 9.8 percent surge in November. That had been the biggest percentage increase since a similar percentage gain in July 2011.

During the first few years of recovery from the Great Recession, Americans paid down or defaulted on debts that had been run up during the housing bubble that preceded the downturn. But in the past two years, Americans have increasingly been willing to borrow more, particularly for student loans and auto loans.

The Fed's monthly consumer borrowing report does not cover home mortgages or any other loans secured by real estate such as home equity loans.

Sports chain could get Eagles rush because of upset

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The shocking defeat of the New England Patriots by the Philadelphia Eagles could be a downfall for the sporting goods retailer (despite a headquarters squarely placed in Steeler Nation across the state), as closets in eastern Pennsylvania take on an even more greenish hue.

The same sales bump took place after the Chicago Cubs won their first World Series in more than a century.

Analysts with J.P. Morgan wrote Wednesday, "From a similarities perspective, both the Cubs and Eagles have rabid fans that have been starved for a championship for decades."

Shares of Dick's Sporting Goods Inc. are up more than 4 percent to $31.95 in afternoon trading, the second largest gain of the year.

Tesla's losses expected to grow

By DEE-ANN DURBIN
AP AUTO WRITER

The day after Tesla and SpaceX CEO Elon Musk blasted his Tesla Roadster into space, his electric car company's mounting losses are set to bring him back to Earth again.

Tesla Inc. is expected to post a net loss of $632 million in the fourth quarter, according to analysts polled by FactSet. That would be a record quarterly loss for the Palo Alto, California-based automaker, which is struggling to meet production targets for its first mass-market car, the Model 3 sedan. It's also spending heavily on future vehicles, including a semi that's supposed to go into production next year.

Tesla is expected to lose nearly $2 billion for the full year. The company has never made a full-year profit since it went public in 2010.

Tesla reports its earnings later Wednesday.

Musk is a masterful marketer, and the red ink may not stem investors' excitement. The company's shares jumped 2 percent to $341.01 in early afternoon trading after SpaceX successfully launched its Falcon Heavy rocket on Tuesday with Musk's cherry red Roadster as its cargo. The convertible, with a dummy in a space suit at its wheel, is now heading toward an asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. Tesla's shares are also in the stratosphere, up 8 percent from the start of this year.

While Tesla's true believers love these stunts, some analysts are questioning whether Musk should be spending more time fixing Tesla's woes. Clement Thibault, a senior analyst with the web site Investing.com, grumbled about Musk's recent fundraising efforts for The Boring Co., his new tunnel-drilling company.

"He appears to be more eager to sell hats and flamethrowers rather than meeting previously stated production targets for Tesla vehicles," Thibault wrote in a note to investors.

Here are some topics Tesla will likely address Wednesday:

Shifting targets

Tesla delivered 101,312 Model S sedans and Model X SUVs last year, up 33 percent over 2016 and ahead of its targets, according to preliminary figures released last month. But it fell woefully short on the Model 3, which went into production in July. Tesla made just 2,425 Model 3s in the fourth quarter, and has pushed back production targets multiple times. Musk said last month that Tesla wants to be making 10,000 Model 3s per month by the end of the first quarter and 20,000 per month by the end of the second quarter. Barclay's analyst Brian Johnson expects those targets to remain on track, but said Tesla may give more guidance on when it will reach production of 40,000 models per month. At one point, Tesla had 500,000 people on a waiting list for the Model 3, but it's not clear if all of them are continuing to wait.

CEO pay

This will be Musk's first earning call since last month's announcement of a proposed all-or-nothing pay package for him. The package requires Tesla, which is worth a little less than $60 billion now, to grow in $50 billion leaps to a staggering $650 billion market capitalization over the next decade. If Tesla doesn't meet those goals, Musk won't get paid. If it does, the package could vault him into the ranks of the world's richest people. The proposal must still be approved by Tesla's shareholders, who are scheduled to vote in late March.

Cash burn

Tesla has lofty targets, including building a plant in China and launching a small SUV in 2020. It's also on the hook to build charging stations for its network of semi trucks. All that costs money, which Tesla is burning through at a fast clip. Tesla had a cash balance of $3.5 billion at the beginning of the fourth quarter, and it expected to spend $1 billion during the quarter. Johnson forecasts a $1.3 billion decline in cash this year. Investors will want to know what Tesla is doing to stem that flow and whether the company will try to raise additional funds this year.

Some gifts from Miley help her celebrate 90

PALM SPRINGS — Huge silver Mylar balloons — hung against a black curtain in an event space at the Ace Hotel & Swim Club — spelled out the name Shirley Claire. They were a gift from singer and actress Miley Cyrus, on the occasion of Shirley’s 90th birthday.

Claire, a petite, feisty and limber nonagenarian who used to be a showgirl and a Palm Springs Follies dancer, performed in Cyrus’ Younger Now video.

Claire walked side-by-side with Cyrus during one part of the video and was kissed on the lips by the 25-year-old pop star. Shirley also appeared with Cyrus in a live performance of the song during the MTV Video Music Awards at the Forum in Inglewood last summer.

Cyrus, who was invited to the birthday bash but unable to attend, sent balloons and best wishes to her Younger Now dance partner.

They shared some intimate moments during the performances — some scripted, some spontaneous.

“She kissed me five times because we had to do five takes and she kissed me full on the mouth,” Claire said, laughing. “She’s a hell of a nice gal — she’s one of the nicest people you ever want to meet.”

Claire was “discovered” while hosting her Monday night bingo game at the Ace Hotel.

“I got a telephone call the next day from an agent saying, ‘We want you to do the Miley Cyrus video,’ and so I said, ‘Gee that’s wonderful, how come you’re calling me?’ and she said the producer came in and saw me during bingo last night and he was (interested in) hiring someone my age.”

“I couldn’t have been treated more like a movie star,” she said of the experience. “We were all older people — they treated me like I was some kind of rare thing that was going to break any minute and I’m kicking a-- with everybody over there.”

Claire performed on America’s Got Talent during its 10th season.

“No matter how old one is, one gets up every morning and they don’t think, ‘I’m going to be 90,’ you wake up and say, ‘What the (expletive) am I gonna do today,’ and you try to get through the day,” Shirley said. “There is no difference (between 80 and 90), except at 90 I have a strong, very impending knowledge that my time is ending. This is what happens at 90 because you know when it’s past a hundred the quality of life sucks, probably, so at 90, I’m looking at death, in my own way. ... There’s something about 90, you know you’ve only got 10 years and then, who really knows.”

'Black Panther' takes blockbusters to Africa, and the future

By LINDSEY BARR
AP FILM WRITER

This image released by Disney shows Chadwick Boseman in a scene from Marvel Studios' "Black Panther."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — For Ryan Coogler, the essence of "Black Panther" came down to one question: What does it mean to be African?

The Oakland-born filmmaker of both "Creed" and "Fruitvale Station" had been given the gargantuan task of shepherding Marvel's iconic superhero to the big screen, with a budget five times bigger than he'd ever had, Hollywood's most powerful studio behind him and the freedom to make "Black Panther" as personal as he wanted. Coogler had made his name creating films about the black experience, but both were about the black American experience. "Black Panther," which opens nationwide next week, was an African story and when Coogler signed on for the movie, he'd never been.

Now, he'd finally get his chance.

"This is the most personal film I've ever made, which is the strangest statement to say because I only make films that are personal," Coogler said. "This film for me started with this question of, 'What does it mean to be African?' It's a question that I've always had since I learned I was black, since my parents sat me down and told me what that was. I didn't totally understand what that meant. As kid you're like, well wait, why? Like, so wait we're from Africa? What's that?"

"I'm 31 years old and I realized I never really took time to grapple with what it means to be African. This film gave me the chance to do that," he said.

When the wheels touched down in Cape Town, South Africa, Coogler remembers being overcome with a visceral feeling that he still can't put words to. He went to Table Mountain and thought, "I could be buried here." In Nairobi he saw a Maasai man, wearing traditional clothes and speaking on a cell phone. "That's Wakanda," he thought. "That's Afrofuturism."

And that's what he set out to translate into the language of cinema in "Black Panther." It's the 18th film in the Marvel Cinematic Universe and based on 50-year-old Stan Lee and Jack Kirby-created material, sure, but this is far from being just another superhero movie.

Wakanda, a fictional African nation, is an insulated, un-colonized and technologically advanced country that's both deeply traditional and dazzlingly modern. "Black Panther" paints a multifaceted portrait of a nation in flux, as T'Challa/Black Panther (Chadwick Boseman) ascends to the throne following his father's death.

Actress Danai Gurira ("The Walking Dead"), who plays Okoye, the general of the Wakanda warriors known as the Dora Milaje, grew up mostly in Zimbabwe. She said she was "giddy" with "childlike joy" when she understood how Coogler intended to show Africa and its inhabitants like Okoye, the spy Nakia (Lupita Nyong'o) and the scientist Shuri (Letitia Wright) — and those are just the women.

"Black Panther" creates a precedent that kills the ability of folks to misrepresent and distort the continent," Gurira said. "The things that it checks off: Complex African female characters; African language on a big screen; African characters who are varied in many different ways and heroic; The heroism of Africans for themselves and not needing a white hero — go figure — to reach their goals; Celebrating so many specific African cultural-isms. No one can really now try to put forth some product where Africa is seen begging for a white superhero to come and save it."

"Black Panther" has the makings of an all-out a cultural event.

"It's the biggest, blackest movie that's ever been made," said veteran journalist and television writer Marc Bernardin.

And it's already signaling a seismic shift that that could make an impact big enough to change the entertainment industry — not that it hasn't taken decades to get the African King and warrior to the big screen. Wesley Snipes tried for years to get a "Black Panther" film off the ground, bumping up against antiquated thinking about how "black movies don't travel" (code for a film's potential to make money internationally). Even in the modern Kevin Feige-led superhero era, where seemingly every comic book character is fair game for a film, T'Challa was pretty far down on Marvel's list ("Ant-Man" and two "Guardians of the Galaxy" films came first). But Marvel had a plan, and introduced T'Challa in a small but impactful part in "Captain America: Civil War" to set up the stand-alone film.

Cosby lawyers: Delay trial if other accusers get to testify

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bill Cosby's lawyers say they'll need to postpone his April 2 suburban Philadelphia sexual assault retrial if some of his other accusers are allowed to testify.

The comedian's lawyers said in a court filing Tuesday they'll seek a delay to allow them more time to investigate allegations from the 19 women prosecutors are seeking to call as witnesses.

Prosecutors say they want to show that a 2004 case that led to Cosby's only criminal charges was part of a five-decade pattern of drugging and harming women.

Judge Steven O'Neill allowed only one other accuser to testify at Cosby's first trial, which ended in a deadlock last June.

The judge is expected to rule next month on whether any of them will be allowed to testify at the second trial.

Judge rules against heir who wanted Met to return a Picasso

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge in New York has dismissed a lawsuit that sought to force the Metropolitan Museum of Art to return a Picasso painting to the heir of a Jewish businessman who allegedly sold it under duress.

Judge Loretta Preska ruled Wednesday that the museum can keep the 1904-05 painting, "The Actor."

According to the lawsuit, businessman Paul Leffmann and his wife, Alice, sold the painting for $13,200 to finance their flight to Switzerland in 1938. Court papers say that's much less than the painting is worth. It was donated to the Met in 1952.

The judge said the Leffmanns' great-grand-niece, Laurel Zuckerman, couldn't show under New York law that the painting was sold under duress. Her lawyer says his client intends to appeal.

Queen Latifah, Anita Hill to speak at Rutgers ceremonies

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Queen Latifah and Anita Hill will give the commencement speeches at two Rutgers University campuses this year.

School officials announced Wednesday that Latifah, a Newark native who became an actress, hip-hop icon and social activist, will speak May 14 during the Rutgers-Newark ceremony. She will receive an honorary Doctor of Fine Arts degree.

Hill is the law professor who brought the concept of sexual harassment to national consciousness in 1991. She will speak May 17 to graduates at Rutgers-Camden and will receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19). No one succeeds alone. It may feel as though you are the only one putting in the big work and making the major sacrifices, but don't forget about those whose past work made all of this possible. TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The project will seem to drag on and on. Hopefully you'll find a way to be fine with that, since this is still the middle of the long slog. Things that are worthwhile definitely take time. GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You can't know what will make you happy in the next five years. The way the planets are today, you'll be lucky to predict what's going to make you happy in the next five minutes. But you have ideas definitely worth exploring today. CANCER (June 22-July 22). Everything you do today will take courage. It will take courage to express yourself honestly, to show your work when you're still learning and to take care of your many responsibilities. You're brave. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Before you act, consider inaction: It's a valid option today.

Of course, it's better if it's the kind of inaction that takes patience and restraint instead of the kind that happens out of laziness and apathy. VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). If you could travel back in time to talk with the younger you, you'd do more than give yourself hot investment tips or show up where history is in the making. You'd tell yourself to love more fully, too. So tell yourself now. LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). Considering that overconfidence leads to folly and disappointment is rooted in idealism, a little bit of negative thinking might actually steer you to a better outcome than you could find through strictly positive thinking. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Yes, your moods are catching. But this isn't just about mood. Everyone and everything you pass is affected by your energy. It is all changed by the subtle etheric pressure of your being. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Most people are dismissive of what they don't understand. Not you. You take the mystery and hold it to the light. Maybe understanding will happen; maybe it won't. But there's a possibility now where there wasn't before. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Have you ever left a letter unopened because just holding it made you uncomfortable? Though it's hard to say why, there are some things you just don't want to know. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You can learn from books, but what make a difference are mirrors. Not all mirrors are made of glass. Some are made of journal paper. Some are made of people who reflect back what they see in you. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It's not about doing this right; it's about doing the right things. To make sure you're on track, ask the expert. Ask three, and check their answers against each other. TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Feb. 8). This solar return you act on your gut feeling, instinct, intuition and passion, and your life reflects the vibrant uniqueness of who you are. The golden ticket will be yours in April as long as you are clear in your communication and you keep your commitments. You'll get close with special people in April. Leo and Scorpio adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 8, 30, 22, 19 and 45.

UNLIKELY CONTRACT

The bidding: SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST 1♣ 1♥ 1♠ 2♥ 3♣ 3♥ 5♣ All pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♥ Today's deal is from a recent tournament in Australia. North's five club bid seems remarkable to us, but it led to an interesting contract. Note that it would take an opening diamond lead to trouble a three no trump contract.

Five clubs would have been defeated had West led the king of spades, but that would be an unlikely lead in any case and even more so after North bid the suit. Declarer scooped up the opening heart lead with dummy's ace and quickly cashed the king to shed his spade loser. Playing on clubs would require a 2-2 split with the king inside — against the odds. South saw that if he could score a diamond ruff in dummy, he could handle any 2-2 club split, and also handle a 3-1 split as long as either the king or the jack were singleton. The problem was to keep East off lead so he couldn't lead a trump.

At trick three, South led a low diamond from dummy and covered East's card with the jack. West won with the king, but could do nothing to hurt declarer. South ruffed the heart continuation and then cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He crossed back to his hand with a spade ruff and cashed the ace of clubs, claiming his contract when the jack fell.

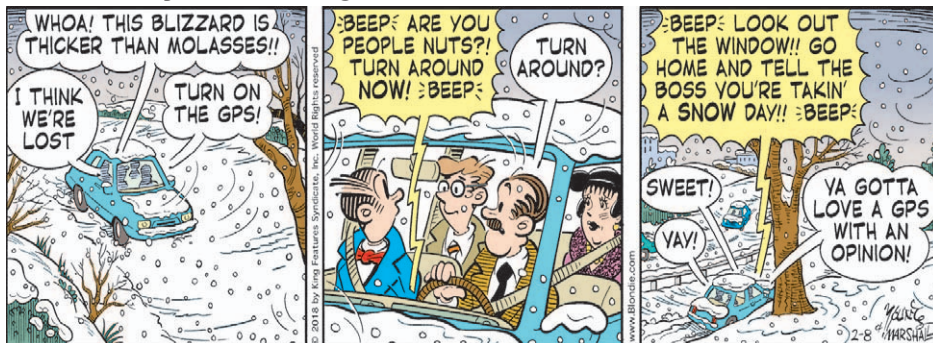

You might think that East could defeat the contract by playing the queen of diamonds on the first round of the suit, but South can still triumph by winning with the ace and exiting with the jack.

NFL: Super Bowl parade

Philly gears up to shut down for parade

PHILADELPHIA — The city is gearing up and shutting down for its first-ever Super Bowl parade, with universities, schools and government offices all shuttering and mass transit being shifted to serve the needs of parade-going Eagles fans. Museums, city courts and even the Philadelphia Zoo will close as Philadelphia focuses on Thursday's celebrations.

Visitors who might be in town for reasons other than feting Sunday's 41-33 win over the New England Patriots will still be able to visit places like Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell. The parade starts near the team's stadium and ends its 5-mile trek at the art museum steps that Sylvester Stallone climbed in the "Rocky" movies — a fitting finish for a team seen as the underdog, just like the fictional fighter. Organizers said they're preparing for as many as 2 million people to jam the parade route. No official estimate was released for the parade after the Phillies won the World Series in 2008, but crowd assessment experts have said that likely didn't exceed 750,000. The city doesn't plan to make any crowd estimates for this parade. Mayor Jim Kenney called on fans to celebrate with passion and pride, again referring to those who committed violence and vandalism late Sunday as "knuckleheads." "Now remember — act responsibly, don't ruin this for the fans who have waited decades for what will be a historic day as the Eagles finally parade up Broad Street. We are after all the city of brotherly love and sisterly affection." The parade has also touched off a bit of a beer war. Bud Light will offer

SIGNING DAY

Georgia No. 1 in recruiting

After title game loss, Smart, Bulldogs put together 'ridiculous' 2018 class

By RALPH D. RUSSO

Georgia was not about to blow this lead. The Bulldogs, who let a 13-0 halftime advantage get away in a national championship game loss to Alabama, finished their 2018 recruiting class with a flourish and laid claim to the No. 1 ranking on national signing day. Georgia loaded up in the new early signing period and came into Wednesday's start of the traditional signing period with the top-rated class, according to 247 Sports' composite rankings. Coach Kirby Smart and the Bulldogs put the finishing touches on the recruiting championship by flipping a pair of four-star linebackers, one who had been committed to Michigan (Otis Reese) and another who had been committed to Alabama (Quay Walker), and grabbing a highly touted wide receiver from Texas (Tommy Bush). Georgia also beat Miami and Alabama for star cornerback Tyson Campbell from American Heritage High School in Plantation, Florida. "It's ridiculous," said

Mike Farrell, the national recruiting coordinator for Rivals. "The average star ranking is near historic levels." National champion Alabama had finished on top of the recruiting rankings each of the last seven years, but the Tide finished outside the top three this year. No, coach Nick Saban is not slipping. The Tide had a relatively small class (18 signees), which kept down its ranking. Alabama also landed the top-rated uncommitted recruit left in the country entering the second signing period when cornerback Patrick Surtain Jr. picked the Tide over LSU early in the day. It's the first time that major college football has had two signing periods, thanks to changes to the recruiting calendar. The vast majority of top prospects signed back in December and most FBS schools had signed the bulk of their classes. That made for a quiet signing day for most schools. Northwestern coach Pat Fitzgerald tweeted "6:34 a.m. ... that's a wrap on #NSD18 and #NUView18." The Wildcats signed two more players and called it a day.

Where are top QBs going? What competition awaits in college?

By RALPH D. RUSSO

In the past three years Georgia has signed a five-star quarterback who started as a freshman, a four-star quarterback who started as a freshman and led the Bulldogs to the national championship game and a five-star quarterback who is considered the best prospect of them all. The first five-star has already transferred from Georgia. As fans get giddy for the latest wave of blue-chip quarterbacks to enter college football it is important to remember, life moves fast. Who would have thought Jacob Eason would be old news in Athens by 2018 back on signing day 2016? A look at where the top-10 quarterbacks as rated by 247 Sports' composite rankings are headed, what kind of competition awaits and how the new arrival might affect the QBs already on the roster (year is eligibility in 2018).

Norovirus has officials scrambling, worried

By FOSTER KLUG
Associated Press

PYEONGCHANG, South Korea — Signs posted around the Olympic venues urge extreme caution. Nine hundred troops stream into the area to help. Worried organizers sequester 1,200 people in their rooms. Officials are scrambling on the eve of the biggest planned event in South Korea in years — not because of anything related to North Korea and national security, but in an attempt to arrest the spread of norovirus at the Pyeongchang Games.

Local media are fretting over a "virus panic." South Koreans, always quick to air their views online, have poured scorn on the government's response and preparations. Are the games hygienic? What will people think about South Korea? Could this spread to the athletes? Norovirus fears may turn out to be much ado about nothing. But with a national reputation on the line, officials are scrambling to contain its spread. No one here wants these games associated more with disease than athletics

Harden, Rockets rout Heat

Associated Press

MIAMI — James Harden scored 41 points and the Houston Rockets beat the Miami Heat 109-101 on Wednesday night for their sixth straight victory and 10th in 11 games.

Chris Paul added 24 points, seven assists, and seven rebounds for the Rockets.

Goran Dragic and Josh Richardson each had 30 points for Miami. The Heat have a five-game losing streak, their longest slide of the season.

Harden eclipsed the 40-point mark for the eighth time this season. He was 13 of 25 from the field, going 5 of 12 from 3-point, and hit 10 of 12 free frees. He also had six assists and rebounds.

Harden scored 13 points in the fourth quarter and the Heat were unable to get any closer than 94-90 with five minutes left.

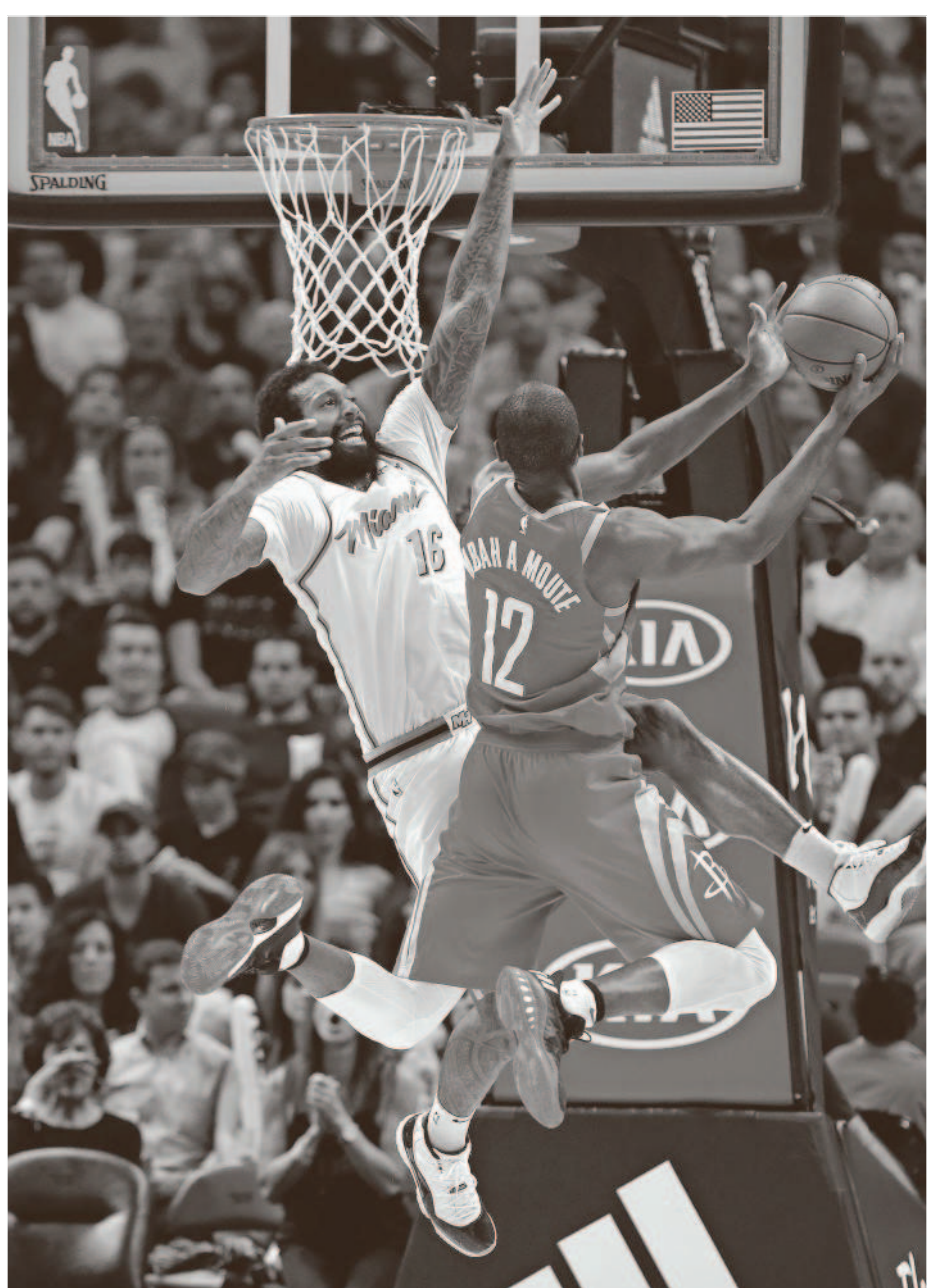

Clint Capela added 13 points for the Rockets, who are 24-1 when Harden, Paul, and Capela play.

Harden scored 16 points in the opening quarter to help the Rockets take a 35-24 lead.

The Rockets led by as many as 17 points in the first half at 53-36, but Dragic scored Miami's final 10 points of the half to help cut it to 61-57 lead at the break.

St. John's gets first win over No. 1 team since '85

Associated Press

St. John's took down another of the nation's elite, and stunned No. 1 Villanova 79-75 on Wednesday night for its second win over a top-five team this week — and first over the top-ranked team in 33 years.

Shamorie Ponds scored 26 points to spark the Red Storm (12-13, 1-11 Big East) to its first conference win of the season and easily their best week since Chris Mullin was in uniform, not the coach.

Mullin played for St. John's when it beat No. 1 Georgetown 66-65 on Jan. 26, 1985. And he was on the sideline exhorting his players in the final minutes of this shocker.

St. John's beat then-No. 4 Duke Blue Devils 81-77 at Madison Square Garden on Saturday, snapping an 11-game losing streak.

NO. 2 VIRGINIA 59, FLORIDA STATE 55: Devon Hall scored 17 points, Ty Jerome added 15 and No. 2 Virginia rallied in the second half to beat Florida State. Kyle Guy scored 10 of his 13 points in the final 20 minutes as the Cavaliers fought back from a 32-22 halftime deficit to remain unbeaten in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Virginia was 5 of 10 on 3-pointers in the second half and committed just one turnover.

NO. 25 MIAMI 87, WAKE FOREST 81: Lonnie Walker IV scored 19 points to lead No. 25 Miami to a victory over Wake Forest. Walker's 3-pointer with 5:01 remaining capped a 10-2 run and gave the Hurricanes a 66-56 lead. Miami withstood a late Demon Deacons comeback attempt fueled by consecutive 3s from Bryant Crawford in the final minute. Crawford's second long-range shot with 31 seconds left pulled Wake Forest to 82-79.

St. John's guard Shamorie Ponds (2) moves around Villanova forward Dhamir Cosby-Roundtree (21) and guard Collin Gillespie (2) during the second half Wednesday in Philadelphia.

NFL: Super Bowl seat heist

Eagles fan to pay for stadium chair stolen after Super Bowl

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — A man who stole a seat from U.S. Bank Stadium after the Philadelphia Eagles beat the New England Patriots in the Super Bowl has agreed to pay for its replacement.

Stadium manager SMG says it plans no further action against the Eagles fan. That seat and two other damaged seats were replaced

Tuesday, according to a release.

Video of the man with a purple seat in the stadium's coat check generated more than 190,000 views on Facebook as of Wednesday afternoon.

According to the Star Tribune, a traveler later snapped a photo of him at the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport, with the seat strapped to his carry-on suitcase.

Minnesota Sports Facilities Authority spokeswoman Jennifer Hathaway said the fan regrets his actions.

The stadium keeps extra seats, so the estimated cost to replace it, including labor, is $125. Hathaway said stadium officials don't believe that removal of stadium seats is a widespread problem or that the man used any sort of tool.

free beers to revelers at two dozen bars along the parade route, thanks to a promise its brewer made to Eagles offensive tackle Lane Johnson before the season.

Not wanting to be upstaged by an out-of-town, Philadelphia-based Yards Brewing said it will offer fans a free Philly Pale Ale on parade day in the brewery's taproom.

"We might not be able to get everyone a beer but we can try," they tweeted.

The city's two subways will be free all day, but groups coming in from the suburbs might have a trickier time getting into the city.

All 50,000 special parade day tickets for the regional railroad lines were sold out as of 1 p.m., said Andrew Busch, a spokesman for Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority. Weekly and month passes are valid, however.

The rapid-transit system connecting Philadelphia and southern New Jersey planned to stop selling tickets by early Wednesday night for those wishing to take the commuter line to the parade.

PATCO also said having a ticket wouldn't necessarily mean fans will get a ride, and suggested people also consider walking across the nearly 2-mile-long Benjamin Franklin Bridge.

Meanwhile, working off surveillance video, social media posts and eyewitness accounts, police announced Wednesday they had made at least eight arrests stemming from the violence and vandalism that occurred during street celebrations late Sunday and early Monday.

GAMES

2002 Olympics.

The committee's 140-page report, which includes a budget estimate of $1.35 billion, will be sent to the U.S. Olympic Committee and the International Olympic Committee, said Fraser Bullock, Utah panel co-chairman. Bullock will be in Pyeongchang this month and plans to meet with officials.

Utah's bid would focus on Salt Lake City being a reliable, experienced Olympic city that could host at a lower cost than other places, which state officials believe aligns with the IOC's "Agenda 2020" blueprint for future Olympics. It calls for fewer billion-dollar projects and more venues already in place.

Salt Lake City could face competition from Denver and Reno, Nevada, which are considering bids. Internationally, cities weighing the move include Sion, Switzerland; Calgary, Canada; Stockholm, Sweden; and Sapporo, Japan.

Salt Lake City, which prefers the 2030 Winter Games but is open to 2026, has a "reasonable" chance because of its history of hosting alpine events and the success of the 2002 Olympics, but the IOC would prefer a European city for at least one of those slots, according to Chicago-based sports-finance consultant Marc Ganis.

European voters have consistently rejected Olympic plans since Russia spent $51 billion on infrastructure for the 2014 Sochi Games. Voters in Austria last year rejected a proposed 2026 bid by two-time host Innsbruck. Only two cities bid for the 2022 Winter Games.

Utah organizers will have to overcome the stigma from a bidding scandal that marred the buildup to the 2002 Games and resulted in several IOC members losing their positions for taking bribes, Ganis said. Mitt Romney came aboard and helped turn things around.

"It's a reminder of a period of corruption at the IOC, which they'd like to forget," he said.

Utah organizers insist that they salvaged their image by putting on successful games.

The state plans to tout the fact that its bid, whose estimated budget excludes security costs covered by the U.S. government and spectator transportation, has widespread support from residents and top leaders.

"The report affirms what we've always kind of believed: That we are in a tremendous position to host the Winter Olympics again," Gov. Gary Herbert told reporters Wednesday.

The 2030 Winter Olympics wouldn't normally be awarded until 2023, but Salt Lake City prepared years in advance in anticipation of a possible dual award by the IOC next year for 2026 and 2030, said Bullock.

That's what the IOC did for the first time last year, scrapping its traditional rules and awarding the 2024 Summer Olympics to Paris and the 2028 Summer Olympics to Los Angeles.

It's not clear yet if the U.S. Olympic Committee will pick a U.S. city for the 2026 Games, a decision expected by the end of March. USOC chief executive Scott Blackmun said officials believe 2030 is more realistic for the U.S.

Spieth tries to keep his thinking to a minimum

By DOUG FERGUSON
Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Jordan Spieth is trying to get back to the point that he stops thinking when he gets over a putt, and the AT&T National Pro-Am might provide the ideal environment for him.

Sure, it helps that Spieth is the defending champion. He seized control by taking only 10 putts on the back nine in the third round at Pebble Beach to build a six-shot lead, and he cruised home from there.

He also has the right attitude for the poa annua greens that get plenty of footprints. He worries only about the right speed, and if the putts happen to bounce into the hole, then great.

The real advantage might be the other pro in his group. His partner for the fourth straight year, Dustin Johnson, rarely thinks at all.

"He sees a light pole out there and he just hits it at the light pole, and he normally hits the light pole," Spieth said Wednesday.

"And I'm out there going, 'OK, I'm going to work a draw there because if I miss it right it's in a better spot.'"

Of all the issues Spieth should battle, putting would seem to be the least of his worries. He still doesn't consider it a big concern.

Over time, typical of most players, the way he sets up over a putt has gotten a little out of sync.

He found he was getting on hitting putts into the ground with his hands more forward than usual, which he said was opposite from his natural tendency that dates to when he first started playing as a junior.

"I just kind of got into a place that I hadn't been before, and I've just got to get back into a comfortable setup position, and then everything will fall through from there," he said.

In this Feb. 10, 2016, photo taken with a fisheye lens, fans line the seventh hole of the Pebble Beach Golf Links to watch the inaugural $1 million celebrity hole-in-one event of the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am in Pebble Beach, Calif.

"The idea is just to stop thinking and just putt, and not having to worry about things. But that's not the reality for a little while going forward here until I get to where when I set up over the putter, I'm seeing my lines."

The proof is more in the statistics than the results.

Spieth said all week at Royal Birkdale that he wasn't comfortable with his putting, and while it showed early in the final round when he lost a three-shot lead, he managed to deliver big moments down the stretch — birdie-eagle-birdie-birdie — to win the British Open.

He also had a stretch late last season of seven consecutive top 10s.

But going into Pebble Beach, he ranks 195th in the key putting statistic out of 206 players

So there is work to do.

NFL: Detroit Lions

Lions hope Patricia ends their search for winner

By LARRY LAGE
Associated Press

ALLEN PARK, Mich. — Matt Patricia's unlikely path to becoming an NFL coach began with his buddies, setting up miniature players on a vibrating, metal field for fierce games of electric football.

"I knew at a very young age the strategic part of the game was something that I just loved," Patricia said Wednesday after being introduced as coach of the Detroit Lions.

"I thrived on it. We would try to just out plan each other all the time and we'd have huge games that would roll into weeks at a time."

Years later, Patricia took a pivotal step toward his dream job after earning an aeronautical engineering degree at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute by being a graduate assistant at his alma mater. The former offensive lineman — who is from Sherrill, New York — coached up one of the players at RPI and saw him do what he was taught during a game.

"The success that we had and his joy that he showed from being able to do that, that's really when it clicked for me as a coach," Patricia said with his previously bushy beard trimmed and a pencil over his right ear. "At that point, the strategic part of the game along with my coaching aspirations just kind of put things in motion."

The Lions desperately hope Patricia takes full advantage of his first opportunity to lead a football team and ends their decades-long search for a coach who can lead them to elusive success in the playoffs.

Since winning the 1957 NFL title, Detroit's only postseason victory was more than a quarter-century ago.

"Our goal is to win and to compete for championships," team president Rod Wood said. "I believe that we are taking the next step in meeting those expectations."

Lions general manager Bob Quinn fired coach Jim Caldwell last month with a 36-28 mark over four years and two playoff appearances.

The Lions went 9-7 last season and missed the playoffs, ranking among the NFL's worst rushing teams for the fourth straight year.

"I wanted to find a leader that could take us to the next level and I am confident we have found that in Matt Patricia," Quinn said.

The 43-year-old Patricia helped New England win three Super Bowls over 14 years. He was the Patriots' defensive coordinator the past six seasons.

Detroit's search was focused on Patricia right from the start because he worked with Quinn for a dozen years in New England.

"We sat next to each other in a lot of team meetings in New England for many of our years together," Quinn recalled.

"We also spent a great deal of time together on the road scouting college prospects, traveling around the country trying to find new players."

McDaniels stay gives Pats possible Belichick successor

By KYLE HIGHTOWER

BOSTON — Josh McDaniels sent ripples throughout the NFL with his decision to pull out of an agreement to become the Indianapolis Colts' head coach.

He has yet to speak publicly about what factored into the 11th hour about-face. But McDaniels' return as New England's offensive coordinator keeps a possible successor for Patriots coach Bill Belichick in coach.

Belichick gave no indication after the Super Bowl loss to Philadelphia on Sunday night that he plans to exit in 2018. And just last month he said that it was "absolutely" his intention to be back for his 19th season with the Patriots.

But at age 65 he's also the second-oldest coach in the NFL, behind only Seattle's Pete Carroll at 66.

McDaniels has been one of the hottest names in coaching searches every offseason over the past three years.

At 41, he's considered one of the NFL's brightest young minds. What's more, McDaniels is someone whom Patriots quarterback Tom Brady trusts and recently called "a great coach and a great friend."

It's unclear how McDaniels' decision will affect him regarding future opportunities with other NFL teams, a gamble should he never get the opportunity to lead the Patriots.

Colts general manager Chris Ballard said Wednesday that the assistants that McDaniels had already hired to be on his staff would have their contracts honored.

MLB: Girardi

Girardi joins MLB Network

By Casey Musarra
Newsday

Former Yankees manager Joe Girardi is heading back to TV, but he eventually wants to get back in the dugout.

"I would like to, yes," Girardi said when asked in a conference call Wednesday if he expects to manage again.

"That's the one that's going to worry me," said Rob McGarry, president of MLB Network, which announced its hiring of Girardi as a studio analyst Wednesday.

Girardi will make his debut as a studio analyst at 6 p.m. Wednesday on "MLB Tonight" with Mike Lowell, Billy Ripken and Greg Amsinger.

The four-time World Series champion (three as a player, one as a manager) spent time as a broadcaster with the YES Network and Fox before becoming the Yankees manager in 2008.

Girardi said he had discussions with other entities before landing with MLB Network but ultimately decided it was "the best fit."

Girardi said it took some time for him and his family, who he always diligently consulted when his contract was up, to move past the Yankees' decision not to bring him back after 10 seasons with the club.

"You know, I've really tried to put it behind me because I understand I could probably think about this for a long period of time, but it really doesn't do me any good," Girardi said. "I need to move on with my life, what I would expect someone else to do when there's change, you need to move on and you need to grow as a person and everything that's important to do, so I've probably been through all those moments, so now I'm focusing on what's next, 'What's next?'

you know, I think it's important as a person you've got to focus on what's next, not what has happened, and just move on."

NASCAR: New season

Truex reigning while series rebuilds

By JENNA FRYER
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Martin Truex Jr. has been all over the country during his brief reign as NASCAR's newest champion.

Since winning his first Cup title in November, Truex has celebrated in Las Vegas, New York, Denver, Charlotte, Toronto and last week, Minneapolis, where he watched his beloved Philadelphia Eagles win the Super Bowl.

It was the final party for Truex, who goes back to work this week along with the rest of NASCAR to get ready for the 2018 season. The season-opening Daytona 500 is Feb. 18, and qualifying for "The Great American Race" is Sunday.

Truex will get back behind the wheel of his No. 78 Toyota at Daytona International Speedway and race in an exhibition all-star event Sunday. It will be the first look at the Colorado-based Furniture Row Racing team since it manhandled the competition most of last year.

Truex led nearly every statistical category in 2017, including notching a series-leading eight victories.

"I feel zero pressure about starting the new season," Truex said. "We're comfortable in what we are doing and having a lot of fun at the same time."

Truex doesn't have a teammate this year as Furniture Row moves back to a one-car operation. The change is one of the small ripples in a major wave that affected the NASCAR landscape.

Erik Jones, who had been on loan to Furniture Row, moved to Joe Gibbs Racing. To make room for Jones, JGR had to bounce Matt Kenseth from his ride even though the two-time Daytona 500 winner didn't really want to retire.

Kenseth wasn't alone: Danica Patrick lost her ride, making the Daytona 500 her final NASCAR race, and Kasey Kahne was forced out at Hendrick Motorsports and took a lesser job with Leavine Family Racing that created decent upheaval among the mid-pack racers.

Dale Earnhardt Jr. retired at the end of last season, but will still have a very heavy NASCAR presence.

He will serve as grand marshal for the Daytona 500, will be part of NBC's broadcast team and has been very clear he wants to be part of NASCAR's future in a non-driving role.

The on-track attention will focus on NASCAR's young drivers. Hendrick Motorsports hired Xfinity Series champion William Byron to replace Kahne and slid Alex Bowman into Earnhardt's seat. Hendrick still has seven-time champion Jimmie Johnson in the stable as well as budding star Chase Elliott.

GYMNASTICS: Sexual assault

Missouri coach accused of molesting

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Mo. — A volunteer gymnastics coach in Missouri is accused of inappropriately touching three young female gymnasts, and police are concerned there are more victims.

David Schneider, 41, of Washington, Missouri, was charged

Tuesday with three counts of child molestation. The children alleged that Schneider touched their genitals while working with them as they practiced doing splits at the Kids in Motion gym in Washington, 50 miles west of St. Louis. Authorities said the crimes occurred between 2011 and 2014, when the victims were 7 or 8 years old.

Schneider, a married father, is jailed on $100,000 bond and does not have a listed attorney.

Parents of three additional girls have already contacted police alleging similar crimes, and it's possible the number of victims could grow, police Sgt. Steve Sitzes said Wednesday.

"At this point we haven't even begun returning phone calls from concerned parents," Sitzes said.

Franklin County prosecutor Robert Parks said it wasn't clear if the victims' decision to come forward was spurred by publicity surrounding Larry Nassar.

OLYMPICS: Sexual assault

Support for probe of Committee grows

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Six Republicans and 12 Democratic lawmakers have signed onto legislation to establish a special committee to investigate the U.S. Olympic Committee and USA Gymnastics handling of sexual abuse allegations against former sports doctor Larry Nassar.

Sen. Jeanne Shaheen, D-N.H., says she's hopeful Senate leaders will back the effort once the chamber has dealt with an array of critical issues, namely keeping the federal government running. But she has not yet received a commitment.

Nassar molested girls, including many gymnasts, who sought treatment for injuries. He is serving a 60-year prison sentence.

Sen. Joni Ernst, R-Iowa, says Nassar's conviction doesn't end the matter. She says lawmakers want to know why the U.S. Olympic Committee and USA Gymnastics didn't remove Nassar when abuse allegations were reportedly first brought to their attention.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: Tournament selection committee

NCAA selection chair: revamped evaluation a 'positive step' forward

By AARON BEARD
Associated Press

RALEIGH, N.C. — NCAA selection committee chairman Bruce Rasmussen figures the revamped way to evaluate quality of wins for determining this year's tournament field is an improvement.

Speaking during a teleconference with reporters Wednesday, the Creighton athletic director called the new quadrant system that gives more weight to wins on the road or neutral courts "a positive step."

"I think it's really helped us in sorting the teams and it has refined the discussion," Rasmussen said. "And we hope it's more transparent and gives the public a better idea as to what the committee is looking at."

The committee is holding its orientation meetings this week in Indianapolis ahead of Sunday, when it reveals a snapshot of the top 16 overall seeds with four weeks left until the field of 68 is announced on March 11.

In the past, the NCAA used a system that sorted wins based on RPI with no regard to game location. So wins against a team ranked 1-50 topped the resume, followed by wins against teams 51-100, 101-200 and 201 or higher.

Now the system grades wins differently based on location. For example, a Quadrant 1 win comes in home games against RPI teams ranked 1-30, neutral-court wins against 1-50 and road wins against 1-75. And a two-game season sweep of an opponent can show up in two categories, such as beating the RPI No. 75 team on the road (Quadrant 1) and at home (Quadrant 2).

"The tournament is played on neutral sites so obviously for the committee I think it has been important for us to look at how a team has performed either on a neutral site or away from home," Rasmussen said.

Note: Tanner McKee, a four-star from California, was the only highly rated quarterback to enter signing day uncommitted. He committed to Stanford, but will do a two-year church mission before enrolling in school.

1. Trevor Lawrence, Clemson.

Outlook: Bryant was very good in his first season as a starter and Johnson was last year's five-star signee. Lawrence is a more highly touted prospect than either and he is already enrolled. He could pass both on the depth chart by the start of next season. Keeping Johnson and Lawrence in Death Valley beyond the 2018 season will be tricky for coach Dabo Swinney.

2. Justin Fields, Georgia

Outlook: Fromm was great but Fields gets Cam Newton comparisons. That doesn't sound like the type of prospect who will be content sitting the bench for two years if he can't wrestle the job from Fromm. And why would a quarterback who almost won a national championship want to be content as a backup? This could get interesting quickly.

3. J.T. Daniels, Southern California

Outlook: Who will be Sam Darnold's replacement? Fink is a dual-threat, not your typical USC quarterback, who beat out Sears for the backup job last season. Daniels is a five-star who enters the mix after reclassifying to the class of 2018 and bypassing his senior high school season, a move that's becoming increasingly common for quarterbacks.

AP PHOTO

Southern California head coach Clay Helton speaking during a news conference for the Cotton Bowl against Ohio State in Dallas. Helton lead the way with the Pac-12's highest-rated recruiting class. The Trojans ranked No. 6 nationally after landing a quartet of five-star recruits.

4. Dorian Thompson-Robinson, UCLA

Outlook: Modster played five games and got two starts, filling in when Josh Rosen was injured last season. He went 51 for 79 for 671 yards, with four touchdowns and no interceptions, and will likely begin the first spring under Chip Kelly as the No. 1 quarterback. Carta-Samuels, a grad transfer from Washington, should get a legitimate shot to win the job. But Thompson-Robinson is the type of dual-threat that worked so well for the former Oregon coach in Eugene. He is the future and the future might not be far off.

5. Justin Rogers, TCU

Outlook: Robinson got a start as a freshman last season. The running is fine (6.9 yards per carry). The passing needs improvement (48 percent completions). Rogers is the most-touted quarterback recruit coach Gary Patterson has ever signed, but he is also coming off a knee injury that cost him most of his senior high school season. Rogers' health could be the biggest factor in how this plays out both short-term and long-term for the Horned Frogs.

6. Matt Corral, Mississippi

Depth chart: Jordan Ta'amu, senior; Jason Pellerin, junior.

Outlook: Shea Patterson's departure via transfer leaves Ta'amu as the starter for this season and a pretty clear path for Corral, a four-star Californian who the Rebels lured away from USC, to step into a starting role in 2019.

7. Jarren Williams, Miami

Outlook: Rosier capably held things down last season, but he will need to take a big step forward this spring to hold off Perry and maybe even Williams, who is already enrolled. Ideally, one of the young players emerges this offseason and locks the job down for a few years.

8. Phil Jurkovec, Notre Dame

Depth chart: Brandon Wimbush, senior; Ian Book, junior.

Outlook: Wimbush held the job most of last season, but Book came on in relief in the bowl victory against LSU. That leaves Notre Dame heading into the spring with a competition at quarterback. Jurkovec, though, is clearly the future and the future could arrive as soon as 2019.

9. Emory Jones, Florida

Outlook: Franks is the most experienced and nominal No. 1, but with Dan Mullen taking over at coach don't be surprised if Jones gets the opportunity to blow past the other players on the depth chart. That could lead to some departures from Gainesville as soon as this spring.

10. Colson Yankoff, Washington.

Outlook: The day before signing day Washington made the transfer of Eason, who went to high school in the Seattle area, official. In addition to Yankoff, the Huskies also signed Jacob Sirmon, another four-star quarterback in the 2018 class. So ideally, Browning stays healthy and locks down this season; Eason plays in 2019, lights it up and turns pro; and the 2020 competition is between Yankoff and Sirmon.

Clippers, Williams agree to contract extension

Lou Williams doesn't have to worry about the trade deadline — or free agency.

The Los Angeles Clippers signed Williams to a multiyear contract extension Wednesday, rewarding the NBA's best scorer off the bench with the long-term security he sought.

The deal was completed a day before the NBA's trade deadline, and Williams would have interested contending teams because of his scoring ability and affordable salary.

Instead, the Clippers decided he's been good to move.

"Both on the floor and in the locker room, Lou exhibits many of the characteristics that we value. He is professional, committed and very competitive," Clippers President Lawrence Frank said in a release.

Williams is averaging 23.3 points during the best season of his career and had been mentioned as a trade possibility in the final year of a contract that is paying him $7 million this season. But he wasn't looking to move again after doing it so often in recent years.

He was dealt from the Lakers to the Rockets last February, then sent back to Los Angeles in the summer as part of the deal for Chris Paul.

"I have been on a lot of teams and a lot of times these situations don't always go my way," Williams said. "This one did and I am thankful for that."

Williams was twice named the Western Conference player of the week in January, when he led the league in points scored in the month, including a career-high, 50-point performance in a victory at Golden State.

The 2014-15 Sixth Man of the Year has averaged 13.5 points in his 12-year career.

MLB: QB on the move

Rangers trade Russell Wilson to Yankees

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson has been traded — from the Texas Rangers to the New York Yankees.

The MLB's Rangers selected Wilson in the Triple-A portion of the Rule 5 draft during the winter meetings in December 2013, about two months before he led the Seahawks to a win over Denver in the Super Bowl.

On Wednesday, Texas traded Wilson to the Yankees for future considerations.

Wilson spent a day in uniform with the Rangers at spring training in Surprise, Arizona, in 2014 without appearing in a game, and made another cameo appearance at camp the following spring. An infielder, Wilson hit .229 in two seasons in the low minor leagues in Colorado's system in 2010-11.

The 29-year-old Wilson is expected to be in the Yankees major league camp in March, where he will participate in pregame workouts and watch games from the Yankees dugout while in Florida. He will be assigned to the Double-A Trenton roster.

"We've admired Russell's career from afar for quite some time," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said.

"This is a unique opportunity for us to learn from an extraordinary athlete who has reached the pinnacle of his profession. After talking to a number of our players, there is a genuine excitement in having Russell join us for a short time in camp."

Wilson issued a statement thanking the Rangers for giving him the chance to experience professional baseball again.

"Growing up taking grounders, hitting BP, and throwing deep post routes early in the mornings with my dad and brother is where my love of sports came from, and those memories stick with me every morning I wake up," Wilson said.

"I remember how excited I was when Texas selected me in the Rule 5 Draft in December 2013. During my two springs in Arizona with the Rangers, I was reminded just how much I love the game of baseball."

A two-sport athlete in college, Wilson graduated from North Carolina

State University in 2010. In 2011, he left the Rockies organization for football to be a graduate transfer at Wisconsin, leading to the Badgers to a share of the Big Ten title and a Rose Bowl appearance before the Seahawks took him in the third round of the 2012 NFL draft.

"While football is my passion and my livelihood, baseball remains a huge part of where I came from and who I am today," Wilson said.

"I've learned so much on the baseball field that translates to my game physically and mentally playing quarterback in the NFL. ... While I embrace the chance to be a New York Yankee, I will forever be grateful to have been a part of a world class organization like the Texas Rangers."

Knicks trade Hernangomez to Hornets

By BRIAN MAHONEY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Knicks were scouting Kristaps Porzingis ahead of the 2015 draft when they noticed one of his teammates in Spain.

Willy Hernangomez eventually joined Porzingis in New York, and after his promising rookie season both were considered key pieces for the team's future.

Now Porzingis is headed for surgery and Hernangomez is on his way to Charlotte.

The Knicks traded Hernangomez to the Hornets on Wednesday in a deal that brings back second-round picks in the 2020 and 2021 drafts, plus forward Johnny O'Bryant.

Hernangomez was an all-rookie selection last season and had been identified by team management during the summer as a one of the young players to build around. But the Knicks then acquired Enes Kanter from Oklahoma City in the Carmelo Anthony trade and Hernangomez fell to third in the center rotation behind Kanter and Kyle O'Quinn.

"He showed last season that he can contribute when given the opportunity and we believe that the added depth he provides will benefit our frontcourt rotation," Hornets general manager Rich Cho said in a statement.

The deal came hours after the Knicks lost Porzingis to a torn ACL. There was thought after the injury that Hernangomez could finally get back into the rotation in his friend's place, but the Knicks instead decided to deal him.

They were teammates in Seville and after the Knicks took Porzingis with the No. 4 pick, they acquired Hernangomez's rights after Philadelphia drafted him at No. 35.

Hernangomez averaged 8.2 points and 7.0 rebounds last season and was voted to the All-Rookie first team. But the Spanish national team player couldn't get on the floor this season, appearing in just 26 games and averaging 4.3 points and 2.6 rebounds.

O'Bryant averaged 4.7 points and 2.6 rebounds in 40 appearances with the Hornets.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL: UNC Tarheels

Maye thriving in leading role entering pivotal matchup against rival Duke

By AARON BEARD
Associated Press

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Luke Maye keeps handling everything thrown at him, from the pressure of taking a last-second shot to reach the Final Four to playing as North Carolina's new leading man.

The 6-foot-8 junior has grown from one-time unheralded recruit and role player to the 21st-ranked Tar Heels' most consistent performer entering Thursday's rivalry game against No. 9 Duke. The next challenge is daunting — help UNC handle the Blue Devils' possible one-and-done frontcourt of Marvin Bagley III and Wendell Carter Jr — but Maye won't change the approach that brought him here.

"I don't want to be viewed as somebody who is really caring all about their personal endeavors," Maye said in an interview with The Associated Press. "I could care less if I score 30 points or score two points. I just want to win."

"I don't want to be a part of a team that is remembered for, after winning a national championship, having a letdown. I think that's something that really drives me and drives my performance each and every night."

Everyone knew the Tar Heels (17-7, 6-5 Atlantic Coast Conference) needed Maye to thrive after losing Kennedy Meeks, Isaiah Hicks and Tony Bradley from the frontcourt. Few expected this.

He leads them in scoring (18.3) and rebounding (10.3) while ranking among the national leaders with 12 double-doubles. He's shooting about 52 percent and nearly 49 percent from 3-point range as a stretch-the-floor threat. He frequently battles bigger or stronger opponents, allowing UNC to lean on a small-ball lineup while freshman bigs Garrison Brooks and Sterling Manley deal with youthful inconsistency.

And he's on pace to become only the sixth UNC player to average a double-double in four decades, a list beginning with 1998 national player of the year Antawn Jamison and including Tyler Hansbrough, the program's career scoring and rebounding leader.

Not bad.

The son of former

North Carolina's Luke Maye, left, and North Carolina State's Omer Yurtseven (14) battle for a rebound during the first half in Chapel Hill, N.C.

UNC quarterback Mark Maye first committed as a preferred walk-on before a scholarship opened up ahead of his freshman season. He heard questions whether he was good enough or if his roster spot came "because of the name, because of the history."

These days, he can savor some told-you-so moments.

"I always knew that I could play at this level, and a lot of people did not think I could," Maye said, adding:

"I definitely have made some small remarks to some people that I probably should've kept to myself. It's kind of the nature of being human and trying to do the best you can to really stick up for yourself."

His teammates didn't need convincing.

They remember the composed guy who came off the bench to become the most outstanding player of last year's NCAA South Regional. The highlight was a play sure to live on in March Madness lore: a winning jumper with 0.3 seconds left to beat Kentucky in the Elite Eight.
