

Easter shooting leaves LP man dead

LAKE PLACID — Markie Kelajawan McCray, 20, of Lake Placid was shot during an Easter celebration around 11:15 p.m. Sunday in Highway Park. McCray died from his injuries Monday morning, despite being flown Sunday to Tampa General Hospital after the shooting.

Highway Park is well known for its Easter celebration. This year was no different with hundreds of family and friends pouring in from neighboring counties, like Hendry and Okeechobee. Local officials say the event's large crowds bring in the need for sheriff's deputies to be present for crowd and traffic control.

The large crowds usually mean a lot of cars, authorities say, and a lot of complaints about people parking in yards are received.

Officials also thought the specialized COPS ADAPT [Community Oriented Policing Services to Achieve Diversity

And Public Trust] unit was probably mixed in among the revelers while leaving the other deputies to oversee traffic enforcement and crime prevention.

The neighborhood celebration begins early in the afternoon and goes through the evening. According to the Sheriff's Office, the incident happened near the intersection of Vision Street and Williams Avenue. Investigators cleared the scene at 1:55 a.m. Monday. Dan Coomes was McCray's [Lake

New District Strategic Plan ready for board

By MARC VALERO
STAFF WRITER

SEBRING — The 2018-2021 District Strategic Plan that the School Board of Highlands County will consider today, focuses on the collective efforts in "transforming today's students into tomorrow's leaders."

The new 28-page plan is much more comprehensive than the one it will replace that was developed under the previous superintendent, Wally Cox.

The plan begins with a message from Superintendent Brenda Longshore who outlines the district's five goals in the plan:

- Accelerating academic achievement to ensure high levels of learning for all students.
- Development of the whole child while ensuring a safe learning environment.
- Recruiting and retaining highly qualified staff.

Consolidated dispatchers honored with mural

By KIM LEATHERMAN

SEBRING — The calm voice that stands between an emergency situation and first responders are 911 dispatchers. Dispatchers are often the first of the first responders to make contact with the victim of crime, a medical crisis or a fire.

Dispatchers are the voices on the phone giving emergency first aid instructions or calming fears. They are described as gold and hold everyone together.

Heather Carr, director of Consolidated Dispatch, would agree that the staff who work with her all have hearts of gold. She and others on staff decided to show their appreciation for the dispatchers during the annual spring cleaning.

While the dispatchers were temporarily working out of a different office, others were painting the beige walls a refreshing blue.

"We had lunches and things for appreciation week," Carr said. "We have given out coffee mugs and other trinkets. We wanted to do something different this year. We started brainstorming."

Carr said they thought of a picture with a collage of the first responders' insignia. Those staff members who were in on the secret found out they had a connection to muralist Keith Goodson.

"I asked Keith how much it would cost for him to do the project," Carr said. "I couldn't believe when he said he would donate it. I was super excited."

"It's awesome; I love it. I was very surprised when I stepped in here this morning."

Goodson is a well-known muralist, especially in Lake Placid. He has painted more murals than anyone in the tiny town and just finished a large mural on the side of the Lake Placid Memorial Library.

"I wanted to donate my time and materials," Goodson said. "It was for a good cause."

Goodson was thrilled when they let him take their ideas and created a design that is uniquely their own.

"I started the painting on the 15th [of April] and finished it on the 16th."

The mural was painted during National Public Safety Telecommunicators Week, also known as Dispatcher Appreciation Week, which was marked April 14-20.

Registration renewal snafu explained

By KIM LEATHERMAN

SEBRING — A mix up in the mail has many in the county confused. The May and June vehicle registration renewals were mailed to Highlands County residents inadvertently with the Hendry County letterhead and envelopes.

According to Tax Collector Eric Zwayer, the data was taken by the mailing vendor from the state and somehow entered into the Hendry County system. The vendor serves both counties.

"People can shred the notice from Hendry County," Zwayer said. "We weren't even ready to send our June renewals out. We were still waiting for them to be approved."

According to the tax collector, in an effort to stem confusion, the Highlands County office has released the mailing of the corrected renewals and residents should have them by the end of this week.

The mail vendor will have to absorb the cost of the mailing, which Zwayer said is usually 9-10,000 renewals per month at over 50 cents an envelope.

"That's thousands of dollars," Zwayer said.

Zwayer said he split up the tax billing and registration renewals between companies because it was less money and he wasn't happy with some of the service. The new vendor sent out

DeSantis asks Trump for boost in storm aid

By JIM TURNER

NEWS SERVICE OF FLORIDA

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Ron DeSantis wants President Donald Trump to increase federal assistance for Hurricane Michael recovery after the strength of the deadly storm was upgraded to a Category 5.

DeSantis requested in a letter Friday that a federal share of costs be bumped from 75 percent to 90 percent. The letter came the same day the National Hurricane Center's post-storm analysis determined the Oct. 10 hurricane had an estimated peak intensity of 160 mph, 5 mph stronger than previously listed.

The change made Michael a Category 5 storm — the most-powerful classification on the Saffir-Simpson Hurricane Wind Scale — just before landfall in Mexico Beach.

The governor's office said Monday that the increased federal reimbursement level would "save the state and Northwest Florida communities hundreds of millions of dollars."

"In the city of Mexico Beach alone, over 93 percent of all buildings were reported damaged and just under 50 percent reported as destroyed," DeSantis wrote in the letter to Trump. "The cost for Northwest Florida to recover and rebuild from this storm will definitively exceed our threshold."

As of early Monday afternoon, the White House had not responded. Helen Ferre, a DeSantis spokeswoman, said the White House was reviewing

In this Thursday, Oct. 11, 2018, file photo, rescue personnel perform a search in the aftermath of Hurricane Michael in Mexico Beach. Weather forecasters have posthumously upgraded last fall's Hurricane Michael from a Category 4 storm to a Category 5. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced the storm's upgraded status last week, making Michael only the fourth storm on record to have hit the U.S. as a Category 5 hurricane.

DeSantis said in the letter that Michael's impact will exceed $2.6 billion, with state agencies already reporting more than $1.1 billion in costs. Legislative leaders have said the state costs have exceeded $1.6 billion.

"The counties declared (in the disaster declaration) for Hurricane Michael continue to experience the catastrophic results that only a Category 5 hurricane could produce," DeSantis wrote. "Similar Category 5 hurricanes have resulted in an increased cost share, with Hurricane Andrew (in 1992) being adjusted to a 100 percent federal cost share. Hurricane Michael should be no different."

In January, DeSantis received a commitment from the White House for 100 percent reimbursement for 45 days' worth of debris collection. The state was initially approved for 5 days of 100 percent repayments.

After making landfall in Mexico Beach, Hurricane Michael caused massive damage as it tore through communities such as Panama City, Port St. Joe, Blountstown and Marianna.

The largely rural region has been waiting more than six months for the state Legislature to approve additional disaster relief funding and for Congress to approve what is expected to be a much larger federal package.

"Hopefully the release of this (Category 5) designation will help our local, state and federal elected officials in their quest to get support for funding legislation needed at the federal level for us to recover," Bay County Emergency Services Chief Mark Bowen said in a statement Friday.

However, Bay County Commission Vice-Chairman Robert Carroll cautioned that the change in designation won't automatically spell additional aid.

"This is only the fourth time our country has had a Category 5 hurricane," he said in a statement. "The federal government has historically provided major disaster funding; we anticipate and expect the same treatment, and we need them to step up and provide some funding and some relief."

With housing and insurance issues outstanding, Bay County officials on Friday noted the county's costs exceed $661 million. It has borrowed $250 million to pay for cleanup, which includes removing more than 8.5 million cubic yards of debris in just the unincorporated areas.

Michael created 72 million tons of debris across the Panhandle, about 10 times more than was left by Hurricane Irma in 2017, and most of the debris remains on the ground, raising the threat of wildfires.

The Legislature is heading into budget negotiations, with the House and Senate each proposing about $225 million in additional Michael-related funding for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Indivisible group attends School Board meeting

Opposes gun sales near Sebring High

By MARC VALERO

SEBRING — Karen Emery, who is new to Florida, said she is feeling unsafe with the recent events in Highlands County.

"With the slaughter at the bank and kids feeling free that they can carry guns to school and the attempt of the two 14-year-olds up in Avon Park, my little idealistic image of Sebring is fading," she said. "Everybody here seems to be attached to their guns with little or no education.

"I am OK with guns, but I am not OK with the fact that they are selling them across the street from the high school," she said. Emery is referring to gun sales at the Highland County Fairgrounds, which is across the street from Sebring High School.

Emery, James Upchurch and at least four others who are part of the Indivisible movement plan to speak at today's School Board meeting about moving gun shows away from the Highlands County Fairgrounds.

Upchurch wrote: "When we began our efforts to get gun sales away from our schools, we politely and quietly asked the board of the Highlands County Fair Association to stop leasing to gun shows and offered to meet with them to help them find other revenue. They declined on both counts.

"The School Board has no authority over the Highlands County Fairgrounds Board, but you do have moral authority because you were elected to oversee our public-school education and the safety of our school children," he stated in his planned presentation to the School Board.

Lynn Payne said she will be part of the Indivisible presentation.

Kirstin Heads said she will be with Upchurch at today's School Board meeting. "There is between 12 and 20 of us going to the meeting," she said.

Michele Backus will also be at the meeting to support Upchurch and James Reid signed up to speak at the School Board meeting in opposition of the gun show.

Upchurch said, "There has been a huge problem with the periodic slaughter of children in school and every community needs to do everything it can to address that. Certainly having the sale of these weapons of mass destruction right across the street from a high school is sending the kind of message that is inappropriate."

1. Dandelion is a common meadow herb of the Asteraceae or sunflower family. There are about 100 species of dandelion.
 2. The name dandelion comes from the French "dent de lion" — lion's tooth, which refers to the serrated leaves.
 3. The dandelion flower opens to greet the morning and closes in the evening to go to sleep.
 4. Dandelion flowers do not need to be pollinated to form seed. Dandelion seeds are often transported away by a gust of wind and they travel like tiny parachutes.
 5. Every part of the dandelion is useful: root, leaves, flower. It can be used for food, medicine and dye for coloring.

Annual Blueberry and Bluegrass Festival Saturday

AVON PARK — The ninth annual Avon Park Rotary Blueberry and Bluegrass Festival comes to Donaldson Park in downtown Avon Park from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

No admission charge (it's free admission and free parking) for the family-friendly event that includes bluegrass entertainment, 60 vendors, barbecue chicken dinner, blueberry lemonade, freshly picked local blueberries, and Free Kids Zone.

Avon Park Noon Rotary festival chairman Alice Oldham said blueberry lemonade is the event's signature drink. "We did it the first year when it was just a start-up festival in the Rotary Building and we have done it every year since then," she said. "Aljoe Hinson's wife, who is known at the 'queen of the Tin Can Tourist, Oldham said. The raffle for Willy's civilian model army Jeep will help send local veterans on the May 4 Freedom Flight to Washington, D.C.

The Tin Can Tourist was a term used for travelers in 1919 when Ford Motor Company and another company made the only pickup trucks at the time and the owners used whatever they could to enclose the back of the pickup to travel to national parks. Later, the Tin Can referred to the metal travel trailers that the tourists pulled with their vehicles.

There is a national Tin Can Tourist organization with one of its officers from Cape Coral who will be bringing a group of campers to the Blueberry and Bluegrass Festival to provide information on the history of these early automobile tourists, Oldham said.

The blueberry-related goodies include blueberry ice cream and there will be other food items available such as hot dogs and hamburgers.

The festival's 60 vendors have original arts and crafts, Oldham said. There are no mass produced items made overseas.

"We want to focus on local and regional artists and craftsmen," including handmade leather belts and jewelry and the best cottage industry jams, jellies and pickles, she said.

A festival favorite, Highway 41 South bluegrass band, returns performing between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Texting and driving should become primary offense

Back in 1986, Florida first implemented an adult seat belt law, which made driving without buckling up a secondary offense. That meant police could cite motorists only if they saw another (primary) offense first.

A year after it went into effect, estimated seat belt usage jumped from pre-law 22 percent to more than 50 percent. Usage decreased again slightly, then climbed steadily thanks to various “soft” tactics — ad campaigns like “Operation Buckle Down” and eventually “Click It or Ticket.”

As the years went by and the advertising and law enforcement measures increased, seat belt usage climbed slowly. It was up above 80% when, finally, in 2009 the Florida Legislature got around to making the failure to use a seat belt a primary offense. Accordingly, if a cop saw you driving without a belt, he could pull you over and give you a ticket.

Usage swung up. Today, it's above 90%. (And, still, it's hard to believe one in 10 people don't buckle up. Refresher: Anyone in a front seat must use a seat belt; anyone under 18 in any seat must be buckled in.)

Our seat belt history lesson is a guide for what could and should happen with another highway safety measure: texting. It took 23 years for this state to move from the secondary to primary offense stage for those avoiding or refusing to secure themselves with a belt while in a motor vehicle. We shouldn't have to wait two decades for the texting-and-driving law to change.

After years of close-but-no-law failures, the Legislature in 2013 finally passed a texting law whose primary sponsor was Sen. Nancy Detert, now a Sarasota County commissioner.

It made texting while driving a secondary offense.

It helps dissuade texters, but it is too weak. We see texting occur every day on the roads — a car or truck weaving while the driver types on his/her i-Phone. It's dangerous: The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration estimated that 3,450 people died from distracted driving in the U.S. in 2016.

Texting is a major distraction. But last year in this state, only 1,671 citations were issued for texting while driving. As reported in the Sun last year, enforcement issues were so difficult that the Charlotte County Sheriff's Office cited a mere eight drivers for texting in 2016; Sarasota County cited only 17.

That's pathetically low, and the problem should be rectified.

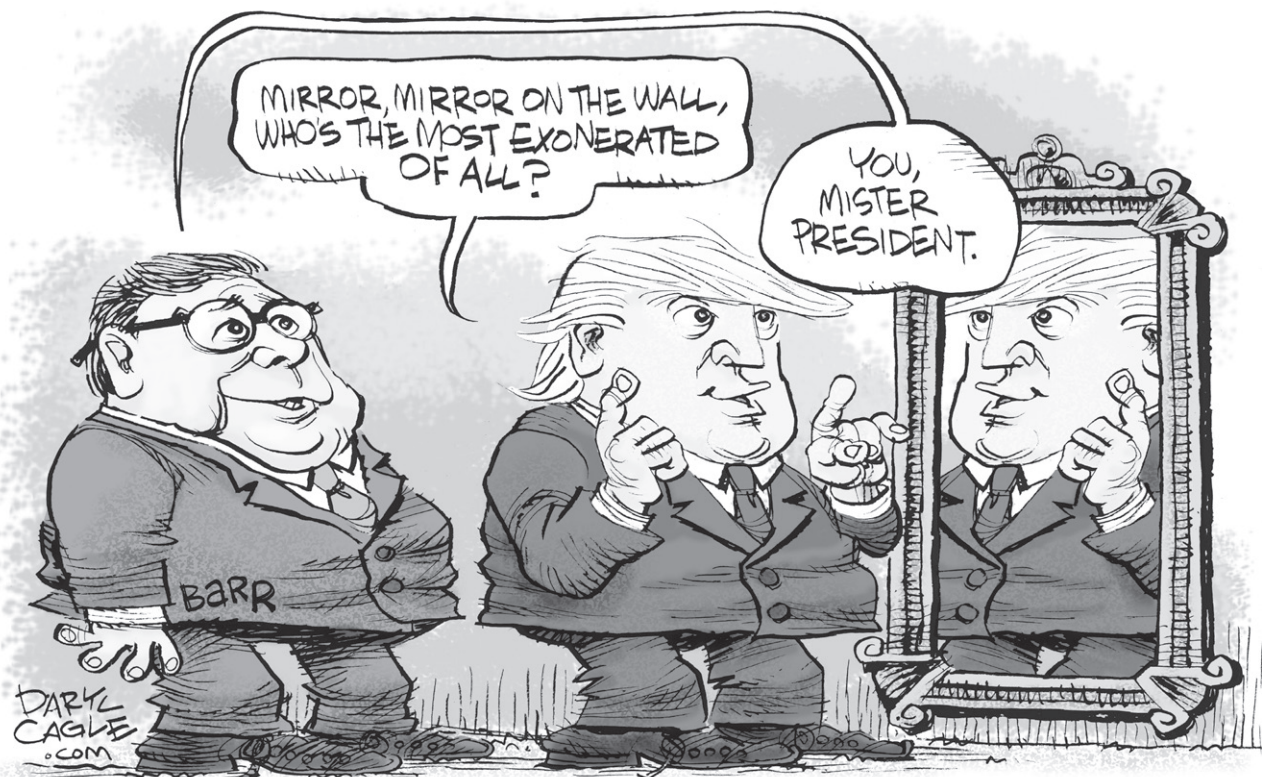

This year, bills that would make texting a primary offense have advanced in various House and Senate committees, and passage in the full Legislature appears promising.

In recent weeks, the Senate stripped language from Senate Bill 76 that would have included distractions like combing hair, applying makeup, reading a book or petting a dog. It also would have banned talking on a cellphone. The revisions brought the Senate bill in line with House Bill 107, which is due up for a full House vote soon.

The broader bill faced too many objections, so this cleaner version may clear the way for the next, inevitable step forward.

We know texting is extremely unsafe. We also know it's done all the time. It causes accidents. It costs lives. It's time for something stronger to stop it.

Earth Day 2019: Since moon landing, global population has doubled

GUEST COLUMN

Joe Guzzardi

Fifty years ago, in 1969 when astronaut Neil Armstrong became the first person to walk on the moon, the world's population was 3.6 billion; in 2019, it's 7.7 billion. A half a century ago, the U.S. population stood at 208 million; today, it's 329 million and growing at the unsustainable rate of one net person every 17 seconds, a total calculated by the sum of births minus deaths, plus net migration.

April 22, 2019, marked the 49th anniversary and 50th observance of Earth Day intended to raise awareness and appreciation for the earth's natural environment. A massive oil spill off the Santa Barbara, California, coast that generated a slick large enough to encompass Chicago provided the catalyst for the first-ever Earth Day, celebrated in 1970, and currently recognized in 193 countries.

At the time, there was an understanding of the impacts of polluting and overpopulating our planet. While the former continues to be the driving element for environmentalists and climate change activists, such is not the case for overpopulation. But the challenges to achieve U.S. population stabilization remain, and they are daunting, even if unmentionable and not addressed.

To the exclusion of a sustainable country, the U.S. government is committed to endless growth, a policy that congressional leaders have embraced for decades, and is perhaps the most significant roadblock to population stabilization.

Nobel laureate Steven Chu of the University of Chicago's Energy Policy Institute said at a recent forum that “the world needs a new model of how to generate a rising standard of living that's not dependent on a pyramid scheme,” a reference to increasing immigration.

The former Secretary of Energy under President Obama also referred to the idea of replacing aging persons with younger immigrants as an ecological Ponzi scheme that leaves future generations to deal with the life-altering consequences. Young immigrants will eventually grow old, and true to a Ponzi scheme's formula, another immigrant wave will be needed to replace the aging migrants, etc. ad infinitum.

An inconvenient truth in the effort to achieve sustainability is that immigration policy is the leading single factor in the destruction of open space. Each year, the U.S. admits more than 1 million legal immigrants who, over time, petition an average 3.5 of their family members to join them. The blame lies not with the immigrants, but with Congress for refusing to defend the natural environment of America. Logically, immigrants, just like most Americans, want and need more urban development for housing, schools, health care, governmental services, streets, parking, waste handling, workplaces, shopping, arts, recreation and worship.

In a 2001 interview with the Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel, Earth Day founder Sen. Gaylord Nelson said that the larger the population, the more serious problems become. From crime and health care shortages to infrastructure issues, no problem is helped by adding ever-more people. To no avail, Sen. Nelson during his lifetime urged Congress to responsibly address the population issue.

Americans will have to wage the fight for environmental stability on their own. Congress is determined to raise immigration levels, and the President seems to be plotting to join them in the name of economic growth. Environmental groups long ago abandoned reducing immigration as the first step toward ecological constancy. Journalists also refuse to connect the dots between immigration-driven overpopulation and the loss of key, irreplaceable natural resources in a discouraging failure from the Fourth Estate.

The nation's battle should begin with cutting carbon emissions which have reached record highs. The International Energy Agency reported that U.S. oil demand grew at its fastest pace in a decade while China and India burned more coal. The “spectacular growth” of the U.S. economy is, according to the IEA, the main culprit in the carbon emissions spike.

Since population stabilization is crucial to America's future, and will determine how residents live, a thoughtful conversation that includes immigration as a crucial variable must take place soon. Refusing to engage intelligently means the status quo will continue, as will the loss of America's precious land and resources.

Best education is life lessons

GUEST COLUMN

Bruce Tooker

Nearly two years of investigations by special counsel Robert Mueller turns up, yep, turns up nothing. No Trump collusion with Russia. Yes, millions of taxpayer dollars spent and yes, Hillary lost because of Hillary.

Some of Hillary's 85 reasons for losing: former FBI Director James Comey, sexism, the electoral system, WikiLeaks, “Minions,” right-wing media, mainstream media, Democratic National Committee, 1,000 Russian agents, Vladimir Putin, Donald Trump, Citizens United, “millions” of Twitter bots, Netflix, Bernie Sanders, suburban women, bad polling, colluding Trump campaign officials, stupid

Americans who can't tell the difference between real and “fake news,” technology, deplorables, etc. Liberals blame everyone or everything for their problems and yes, the American people pay for their problems with tax dollars.

The liberal media was wrong with the Casey Anthony case, the George Zimmerman case, most all cases against police officer shootings, the Smollett case, the confirmation of Brent Kavanaugh, the Covington Catholic high school kid, etc. If you listen to liberals, they are supposed to be educated. So why are they so silly? That word ‘educated.’

What does ‘educated’ mean today? It doesn't mean they know a lot about the world. It means they have been injected with the views and assumptions of their teachers.

They have been taught by people who themselves have little experience of the real world. They have been indoctrinated with certain ideas. They have been taught that capitalism is inherently bad. It is something to be controlled at every turn by an altruistic government or else reduced to a minimum. Liberals are taught to reason with their emotions and not by fact and truth.

So, how good is education today? I say the best education today is life experiences and not some test tube called a university, where one receives a piece of paper telling you that you are ready for the world and its problems.

SpaceX suffers serious setback with crew capsule accident

By MARCIA DUNN
AP AEROSPACE WRITER

CAPE CANAVERAL — SpaceX has suffered a serious setback in its effort to launch NASA astronauts into orbit this year, with the fiery loss of its first crew capsule.

Over the weekend, the Dragon crew capsule that flew to the International Space Station last month was engulfed in smoke and flames on an engine test stand. SpaceX was testing the Dragon's abort thrusters at Cape Canaveral, Florida, when Saturday's accident occurred.

The company said the test area was clear and no one was injured.

This Dragon was supposed to be reused in a launch abort test in June, with another capsule making the first flight with a crew of two as early as July. The SuperDraco abort thrusters are crucial to protect astronauts in flight; they're designed to fire in an emergency and pull the capsule safely away from the rocket.

NASA said Monday it's too early to revise the target launch dates, given that the accident is still so fresh.

"This is why we test," NASA Administrator Jim Bridenstine said in a statement over the weekend. "We will learn, make the necessary adjustments and safely move forward with our commercial crew program."

The University of Southern California's Garrett Reisman, a former NASA astronaut who directed space operations for SpaceX until last year, said it was a "tough day ... not good" for SpaceX. "But thankfully no one got hurt and with everything we learn from this anomaly Crew Dragon will be a safer vehicle for all her future crews," he tweeted.

"He loved to play. He brought the fun to the game, whether it was practice or a game, but he worked hard," Coomes said. "He was one of our better defensive players."

McCray, who has had run ins with local law enforcement over the last few years, was released from jail on April 19, just two days before being shot.

Bill aims to cure balloting woes, streamline counts

By ELLIS RUA
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Florida lawmakers are considering several measures to address the state's long documented election woes.

Problems with ballot counting — from the controversial 2000 presidential election to the 2018 statewide election — prompted Spring Hill Republican Rep. Blaise Ingoglia and two House committees to draft a bill to streamline the absentee balloting schedule.

One bill aims to streamline the absentee balloting schedule and require more training for verifying ballot signatures.

The bill would extend the period that absentee ballots can be requested from 35 days ahead of the election to 40 days. It also would move up the deadline for requesting such ballots from 6 days ahead of the election to 10 days.

Elections officials would have until eight days before the election to mail out the ballots.

The deadline for returning the ballots would remain the same — they must arrive by mail by 7 p.m. on Election Day. However, the legislation also would call for additional drop-off facilities for voters to bring ballots in person.

Okaloosa County Supervisor of Elections Paul Lux said Ingoglia's bill addresses concerns that people continually miss the deadline for mailing ballots back.

"The postal service has been telling us: 'You need to mail your stuff sooner,'" Lux said. "They cannot guarantee first class delivery any sooner than five days."

Although voters requested more than 3.4 million mail-in ballots during the 2018 general election, nearly 850,000 were not returned, according to state data. More than 6,600 ballots that were mailed ahead of the election in 65 counties were not counted because they were not received by Election Day, according to the Department of State.

An employee at the Broward County Supervisor of Elections office runs ballots through a machine as he counts ballots from the mid-term election in November 2018 in Lauderhill.

Despite seeming advantages to voters, Democratic Party of Florida said the bill was tantamount to "voter suppression" because it would confuse voters and represent "a significant disruption in how Floridians vote by mail in the critical days before an election."

Still, the bill received bipartisan support from Florida State Association of Supervisors of Elections, comprised of election supervisors from the state's 67 counties.

To decrease the workload at the tail end of an election, the bill allows for starting the count of mail-in votes one week earlier than in current law, in which it can start no sooner than 15 days prior to an election.

"Getting towards an election you see a bottleneck," Ingoglia said. "There's no reason not to start canvassing those ballots earlier and getting those ballots knocked out."

Lux said he does not believe an election would be compromised by word leaking out of what candidate held a lead, because the vote's integrity already is protected by law. Releasing results prior to the closing of polls is a third-degree felony.

Brenda Snipes, who received harsh criticism from Republican politicians for her handling of the recount in Broward County and who later resigned as elections supervisor, said the bill would benefit heavily populated counties that receive large amounts of mail-in ballots.

One of the motivating factors for the legislation was the chaotic 2018 election, when the governor and U.S. Senate races were too close to call and prompted recounts.

Federal lawsuits mounted as officials raced to count and recount ballots by mandated deadlines while dealing with faulty machines, in some cases, and with allegations that ballots were mishandled. President Donald Trump suggested in tweets that Democrats were stealing the election. Protesters alleged fraud and massed at vote-counting centers in South Florida.

Eventually, Republicans Rick Scott in the Senate race and Ron DeSantis in the governor's race were declared winners, and police said there were no allegations of electoral wrongdoing.

Criticism and lawsuits in 2018 that focused heavily on the Broward operation, where post-election vote-counting dragged on longer than in most counties, and on Palm Beach County, which suffered breakdowns to outdated machines. That drew comparisons to the unruly 2000 election when lawyers for Republican George Bush and Democrat Al Gore squared off in high-stakes challenges over Florida balloting.

Ingoglia's bill also calls for mandatory training in signature verification among election staff and requires election supervisors to immediately contact voters if a problem with a signature is discovered.

Dr. Daniel A. Smith, a University of Florida political scientist who specializes in voting rights and elections, said the signature training mirrors what several other states have as uniform standards.

"To have 67 different standards on how an absentee ballot is going to be verified by the supervisor and the canvassing board is a recipe for disaster," Smith said.

Liza McClenaghan of government watchdog group Common Cause Florida said lawmakers should mandate what are called risk-limiting audits prior to the certification of election results.

These audits — already implemented in Rhode Island, Virginia and Colorado — require poll workers to manually spot-check portions of the ballot and audit trail, and use statistical analysis to detect anomalies in the vote tally.

"This gives more confidence to the election process as observed by the voters," McClenaghan said.

Current Florida law requires an audit only after the certification of election results.

Blue Streaks host regional tennis

Sebring boys, girls at Thakkar Tennis Center today

By MARK PINSON
SPORTS EDITOR

SEBRING — The Sebring boys and girls tennis teams enjoyed excellent regular seasons and continued their outstanding play by winning their Class 3A-District 8 tournaments last week.

The Sebring boys won the district title over two days of play in Winter Haven, while the Blue Streak girls finished first in their district tournament in Auburndale.

The Sebring boys and girls will host regional semifinal matches beginning at 3 p.m. today on the clay courts of the Thakkar Tennis Center at the Country Club of Sebring.

The Sebring boys play the Edgewater Eagles (Orlando), while the Blue Streak girls take on the East River Falcons (Orlando) at 3 p.m.

The Sebring boys are trying to follow up last year's historic season. The Blue Streaks cruised through the regional competition and qualified for the FHSAA State Tennis Championships for the first time in school history.

Inaugural Earth Day 5K held at state park

SEBRING — Highlands Hammock State Park held its inaugural Earth Day 5K on a chilly Saturday morning at Highlands Hammock State Park.

The fifty participants competed on a new course that featured a sandpit and beautiful scenery, but unfortunately most of the runners took a wrong turn and ended up doing the course backwards. Resulting in the runners taking on the sandpit at the end of their run instead of the beginning as intended, making the course more difficult.

"This is a new race on a tough trail and it proved to be a difficult one," said Chet Brojek. "There is a quarter mile of loose sand that they had to run through, that was supposed to be at the beginning but ended up being at the end. It was double trouble. This was to benefit the park and runners were given shirts from the camp store and awards were patches. It was a unique award instead of just a medal. Everyone seemed to be happy and had fun. My goal is to get people running and to encourage youngsters to try it. It was a small race and I hope to make it a yearly event that will benefit the park."

Crossing the finish line first overall was Sean Brown with a time of 19 minutes, 44 seconds. The first female to finish the race and placing fourth overall was Regan Davenport who clocked a 22:36.

"It was good to come in first even though I did the path in reverse," said Sean Brown. "I led everyone else the wrong way but it was still the same distance so it all worked out. I like doing these races that Chet puts on and I love Highlands Hammock State Park. It's Earth Day and it's good to help out. The new course was good. I like trail runs more than concrete. It was early enough that it was cool and the sand was a nice challenge."

The female 9 to 13 age group was won by 13-year old Madysen Truax with a 28:16. Placing second was 12-year old Carlie Stockenberg who clocked 33:00, and in third was 10-year old Emma Browning with 35:03.

In the female 20 to 24 group, Salina Walker placed first with 27:44 and Jenna Miller claimed second with 33:18.

Kansas City head coach Andy Reid made several changes during the offseason to help the Chiefs become better on defense.

Chiefs will have new look this season

Kansas City undergoes several defensive changes

By VAKE GREGORIAN
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — As he chatted with coach Andy Reid the other day at the Chiefs' training complex, general manager Brett Veach took notice of a thick stack of index cards that Reid called ... "my new Pat plays."

Veach shared that with a smile on Thursday, and why not? The diabolical prospects of what Reid is concocting for NFL MVP Patrick Mahomes in his second year as a starter should accelerate pulse rates for Chiefs fans and send shudders around the NFL.

But that's hardly the only intriguing and energizing proposition the Chiefs are engaged in amid their offseason training program and preparation for the NFL draft next week.

Because all the "Pat plays" were only going to go so far if the Chiefs stood pat on defense.

And seldom has a team so tantalizingly close to the pinnacle made more profound changes in that pursuit.

With Mahomes now a known and infinitely promising commodity, the rejuvenating part of this offseason is how they went all-in on trying to maximize his potential. They purged defensive staff, with Steve Spagnuolo taking over with a time of 28:17, in second was Shannon Markland who clocked 28:52, third was Julia Roberts with 31:56.

The female 40 to 44 winner was Joanna Cruz at 34:04, second was Jeri Browning with a 35:03, third was Kelley Cooper with 53:14, and fourth went to Katherine Wilson at 53:15.

In the male 45 to 49 group, Andre Vanrooyen was first with a 25:16, second was Joe Stockenberg at 31:30, Ron Bednosky was third in 33:53. The female first-place winner was Karin Vanrooyen with 28:00, second was Terry Hoops at 28:22, third was Leslie Fernandez with 30:22.

The 50 to 54 male winner was Jon William with a 20:50, second was Anavatti Raghuvvera who clocked 31:54, third was Dean Gerber with a 42:11. The female winner was Michelle Bednoshy at 36:11, second went to Judy Gerber in 43:37, third was Penny Herman at 45:56, fourth was Helen Burton in 50:16.

First in the 55 to 59 female age group was Kimberly Phillips with a 35:27, second was Robin Gonzalez at 43:25, third was Nancy Christensen in 45:55. For the men Eric Jennings won in 25:34, Trey Flemer was second in 34:04.

Finishing first in the men's 60 to 64 group was David Hoops in 33:21, John Nicholson placed second at 43:02. On the women's side, Leesa Skipper was first in 35:48, second was Martie Brooker at 38:17.

In the 64 to 69 age group, Jeff Tuneberg was first for the men in 35:23. The female winner was Debbie Smith with a 37:15, second was Bettye Hart at 47:24.

The 70 to 74 female winner was Duffy Ladenberger in 49:35. "This was a fun little trail run and it was something different than the regular course through the Hammock," said Regan Davenport. "Trail runs are always tougher and we did go the wrong way but it still worked out. The sand was at the end so it was a little bit tougher. I like the new course. I recently ran in the Boston Marathon so I wasn't sure how I was going to do today. Boston was a lot different than last year. We had numbingly cold temperatures last year and this year it was warmer. We were pouring water over our heads to stay cool. I was really able to enjoy it this year. There were more people out and the crowd was invigorating and that feeling of it is Boston. It was something I've always wanted to do and I was able to cross that off my bucket list. I will be doing the Chicago Marathon in October so I am going to take some time to recover and then really train hard. It was fun coming in first today and I love everything Chet puts on. He is amazing and a good guy. He does a lot for this community."

for defensive coordinator Bob Sutton, churned out aging favorites Justin Houston and Eric Berry and ushered in a galvanizing force in safety Tyrann Mathieu.

The Chiefs will have at least five new defensive starters from season's end and, in fact, just one (Chris Jones) who started the 2017 opener at New England.

Instead of tweaking or tinkering, Veach, in conjunction Reid and their staffs, absolutely is "daring greatly," to borrow from Teddy Roosevelt's "Man in the Arena" speech.

As in, "If he fails, at least fails while daring greatly."

As it should be. Yes, on the surface, they were so close to a Super Bowl with the 37-31 overtime loss to New England in the AFC Championship Game.

Yet they were so far away considering the defense too often was a slapstick act, a trap door ever-looming that sprung loose spectacularly in the moment of truth.

But the loss ultimately was about this: a woefully porous defense of stale strategies and schemes that depended on too many players who were too old, too young, injured or seemingly misfits for the fundamental change.

Streaks boast plenty of talent and experience.

The Sebring girls, who went 10-1 on the season, are also fairly young, but possess a lot of ability and are looking forward to playing East River today.

"We've had an excellent season and we're excited about playing East River," said Sebring girls tennis coach Janie Hollinger. "We don't know a thing about their tennis team because we didn't play them during the season or any school that played them. We're going to go out and play the best we can play and see what happens."

The winning team advances to the regional finals, which are scheduled for Thursday.

Technology Update

Take advantage of the latest hearing science and cutting-edge digital technology. These sleek and modern products are specifically designed to:

- Help you hear and understand conversations better in noisy environments like restaurants
- Make loud sounds more comfortable while boosting soft sounds
- Allows you to hear TV, phone calls and more, directly through your hearing aids

Hearing aids have an average lifespan of 3-4 years. Some of the reasons to consider new hearing aids:

- Your hearing has changed
- Your hearing aids are not operating as effectively as they once did
- Your hearing requirements are no longer being met by the level of technology you're currently using
- YOU WANT TO REAP THE BENEFITS OF NEW TECHNOLOGY!
- Each year manufacturers invest MILLIONS of dollars into research & development so we can help you hear to the best of your ability in any environment!

MAYO CLINIC

Feeling stressed at the workplace is common.

Know your triggers for stress

By MAYO CLINIC

The kids are screaming, the bills are due and the pile of papers on your desk is growing at an alarming pace. It's undeniable — life is full of stress. Understanding the types and sources of stress — short term and long term, internal and external — is an important part of stress management. So what stresses you out?

Main types of stress

Stress is your body's reaction to the demands of the world. Stressors are events or conditions in your surroundings that may trigger stress. Your body responds to stressors differently depending on whether the stressor is new or short term — acute stress — or whether the stressor has been around for a longer time — chronic stress.

Acute stress

Also known as the fight-or-flight response, acute stress is your body's immediate reaction to a perceived threat, challenge or scare. The acute-stress response is immediate and intense, and in certain circumstances it can be thrilling. Examples of acute stressors include having a job interview or getting a speeding

Longing to be home for the holidays

With the passing holiday from this weekend I had a somewhat troubling realization. That is I work nearly every holiday. I suppose this is just something people have to deal with. If you work in a service job you are pretty much resigned to the fact that you will work on at least some holidays.

This means missing family events, meals and ultimately memories. Personally, I am very familiar with this feeling.

I have worked every New Years Eve, Valentine's Day, Easter and the rest, for multiple years now. Sometimes this is because these are days where I will be able to make more money as a server (i.e Valentine's Day). Other holidays that I work are just because someone had to do it and apparently it was my turn to be scheduled.

Someone recently asked how I split up my holidays as a vegan. I realized that since I work most holidays I rarely have the choice. Sometimes I am able to have a late, cold plate from my vegan family's house, on other holidays I am only able to stop by for maybe a quick coffee at my dad's.

The two celebrations are both very different and very similar. Of course I am together, with people I love, during both celebrations. However, the traditions are different, the food is different and even the points of conversation are different.

At Easter with my grandparents, parents, and siblings, there might be swimming, children playing, maybe a card game or just general chatter about each individual's life. There will be a few foods I can eat, and many that I cannot. Afterwards there might be dessert, and then coffee. We will sit around the table listening to each other tell stories, sharing their perspectives.

At vegan Easter there will be dogs. At least three who run in and out of the house, looking for food scraps in the kitchen and the romping in the yard. Time would be spent in the kitchen, everyone cooking together. One person reading the recipe, another measuring ingredients. The food is usually something special, that we don't all get a lot. Afterwards there might be a nap, or just watching cartoons, lazing about.

Holidays are an important time for everyone. This includes service workers. I currently do not understand why retailers might close on holidays but restaurants do not. I'm not sure if it just has to do with the company's abilities to make money, or if there's a deeper message about human rights and wants that should be looked into.

Either way, I have come to know that I am someone who values spending time with people I love on holidays. I often feel bad about not being able to spend time with family. After all, they make it clear that they want me there. However, my schedule causes many conflicts. I only hope that in the future I will be able to make up all the holidays I have missed.

Highlighting the new tram truck donated by MidFlorida Credit Union to the Friends of Highlands Hammock, Laura McMullen shared how the organization benefits park operations.

Laura McMullen, Florida State Park Ranger

By DOROTHY HARRIS
CORRESPONDENT

SEBRING — A Florida State Park Ranger since 2013, Laura McMullen grew up in Illinois, but never cared for cold weather. Receiving her bachelor's in Biological Sciences from Northern Illinois University, after graduation she worked as a research assistant for Illinois State University.

"I studied Eastern lubber grasshoppers in Florida as part of a six-month research project," she said.

While deeply entrenched near Fakahatchee, she studied color variations of nymphs, endured plenty of mosquitoes and experienced Big Cypress and Everglades City. After returning home, she soon came back as a volunteer and then an AmeriCorps member.

During her 11-month deployment with this national service program she completed training as a certified prescribed burner. When she began working for the Florida National Parks Association in the Big Cypress visitor center, it sparked her love of environmental education.

At Big Cypress for three years, she considered pursuing employment with the National Park Service, but found the state level more to her liking. For two summers McMullen applied, hoping applications might be lighter off season and offer better chances.

"I've liked being outside since I was a kid and really enjoy working outdoors. I wanted to be part of helping people understand the environment and enjoy wildlife."

Hammock, McMullen and her 9-year-old son get to do just that. She's had opportunity to point out a black bear to a group enjoying a tour on a busy Saturday afternoon.

"It was 1 o'clock and the bear was slowly moving at the tree line." Then there was the time a large reptile had to be coaxed from the roadway. "Many visitors refer to this alligator by the name of the trail she frequents, the Fern Garden."

Protecting children from chickenpox infection

By MAYO CLINIC

Chickenpox is a highly contagious disease that once infected approximately 4 million people in the U.S. a year. "Chickenpox is an infection that's caused by a virus called the varicella virus," says Dr. Nipunie Rajapakse, a pediatric infectious diseases specialist at Mayo Clinic. "The symptoms of chickenpox usually involve itchy rash that looks like little blisters that can appear over the surface of the skin, fever, sometimes respiratory symptoms, runny nose, and cough associated, as well."

Cases of chickenpox declined after the chickenpox vaccine became available in the U.S. in 1995, but it remains a concern. "The important thing to know about chickenpox is that even though it used to be a common childhood infection, there are very serious complications that

With a Wild Orange pie in hand, Laura McMullen reminds visitors the Hammock Inn Camp Store has a variety of items to make their visit to the park more enjoyable.

From otters frolicking along the Richard Lieber Memorial Trail to baby owls peeking from giant oaks overhead, you just never know what you'll see each day, she said.

It's not all critters and handshakes however. There are trails to maintain, buildings and facilities to repair, plumbing and restroom cleaning to address and lots of trash removal. Then there are the resource management activities such as exotic plant removal and prescribed burning.

McMullen has completed several burn classes (S130, S190) and the I100 or Incident Command and Logistics training. On top of it all, she serves as the park's interpretive chair.

From school groups to off site talks, McMullen schedules nature walks, campfire talks and roaming interpreters to better interact with park visitors. "I also assist the Friends of Highlands Hammock with programs and special events." Working closely with fellow ranger Andrea Nelson and Park Services Specialist, Carla Kappymeyer-Sherwin, the team schedules activities and seeks more people for volunteering.

Educating the public about the diverse natural and cultural resources before them-a process referred to as interpretation-creates a sense of place and sparks wonder. The hope is that as visitors connect with the real Florida they will desire to protect and preserve sites for both future generations and the wildlife dependent on these resources for survival. McMullen shared she recently attended a state-wide workshop and is excited about a renewed focus on nature education and interpretive programming.

Surrounded by great staffers who work together on projects to enhance park operations and visitor experience, she enjoys the ongoing opportunity to share her love of nature with the public.

"A lot of people, even in Sebring, don't know about the park," she said. She hopes the community knows Highlands Hammock State Park is a place you can go to have those elusive moments of peace we all seem to search for. "I'm spoiled," she admitted. "I get to be here all the time."

Soon to come are new trails to explore as McMullen and staffers reveal historic, long mileage trails from the park's early beginnings.

"We are taking visitors out on the original 1930s trails with the help of the Friends of Highlands Hammock," she said.

Whether you visit the camp store for a cup of Wild Orange ice cream or creamy slice of pie, take a tram to view dozens of alligators or enjoy one of the Music in the Park evening concerts, there is something for everyone. McMullen encourages a visit and don't forget the park is home to the state of Florida's Civilian Conservation Corps Museum.

"It is the only one in the state," she said.

Mistaking withdrawal for relapse with psychiatric drugs

By UCLA HEALTH

Withdrawal symptoms following the practice of discontinuation, or abruptly “coming off,” of psychiatric drugs in randomized clinical trials may be mistaken for relapse and bolster the case for continued use of medication, according to two new studies by UCLA researchers published in the journal Psychotherapy and Psychosomatics.

Principal investigator David Cohen, professor of social welfare in the UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs, said that clinical trials employing a drug discontinuation procedure had not previously been studied systematically.

“For years, observers have asked whether people getting more symptoms when they came off their medication was their disorder returning or the withdrawal effects from drugs that could be reduced by more gradual, patient-centered discontinuation,” Cohen said.

In light of the difficulties that people have in discontinuing psychiatric medications, Cohen sought to answer that question, joined by co-author Alexander Récalt, a doctoral student in social welfare at UCLA Luskin who is also pursuing a master’s degree at the UCLA Fielding School of Public Health.

They looked at how and why antidepressants, antipsychotics and stimulants were deliberately discontinued from trial subjects in more than 80 randomized controlled trials from 2000–2017. The study also included benzodiazepines, a class of drugs such as Valium, upon which long-term users may become dependent and experience withdrawal symptoms.

In the first study, the researchers found:

In 67 percent of studies, no justification was given for a particular discontinuation strategy, which was abrupt or lasted less than two weeks in most cases (60 percent).

In 44 percent of studies that related to antidepressants, stimulants and antipsychotics, researchers used mainly abrupt discontinuation to test whether the drugs prevented relapse. Yet, researchers in most studies did not indicate that misclassifying a withdrawal reaction could occur.

UCLA HEALTH

Withdrawal symptoms following the practice of discontinuation of psychiatric drugs may be mistaken for relapse.

Most studies incorporating benzodiazepines used discontinuation differently. These studies recognized that withdrawal symptoms were common, and they employed longer drug-tapering periods (more than eight weeks in most cases) to help people successfully come off and stay off these drugs.

The pharmaceutical industry was involved in 70 percent of the 80 studies; in most of the relapse-prevention studies; but in few of the benzodiazepines studies with longer tapering periods, according to the researchers.

Cohen, who also serves as associate dean for research and faculty development at UCLA Luskin, observed across the 80 studies that, in addition to testing relapse prevention, drug discontinuation was employed to chart withdrawal effects and to compare different methods of managing older and frail residents in institutions, given the known damaging effects of drugs taken over the long term.

But only a single study out of the 80 actually employed the discontinuation procedure in order to distinguish clearly between “relapse” and “withdrawal symptoms,” the researchers noted.

“This suggests to us that sponsors or researchers of discontinuation studies are really uninterested in exploring this crucial question,” Cohen said.

“Distinguishing between them requires careful history taking, an open mindset from the clinician and a degree of suspicion that the discontinuation process itself may be contributing.”

In many first-person accounts, patients have complained that they were not warned about these effects or told how slowly they should come off, Cohen said. Instead, their prescriber told them that the effects confirmed that the patients were better off taking the medication and therefore should continue to take it.

“The disconnect continues to drive a wedge between patients and their prescribers and is increasingly discussed in the media, as about one in six adult Americans take — increasingly for years — psychiatric drugs,” Cohen said.

“Our findings, if confirmed by other researchers looking at this literature, contribute to helping decide whether industry-funded drug trials in psychiatry are — as critics have maintained for years — infomercials for drugs or credible scientific investigations,” he said.

In their second study, Cohen and Récalt focused on whether they could detect evidence in the relapse-prevention randomized control trials that an actual misclassification — a confound — of relapse with withdrawal was occurring.

“Most publications do not raise the issue openly, so they do not provide the data to examine this issue directly,” said Cohen, explaining that an indirect method to test their hunch was used. Because withdrawal symptoms are known to begin to occur within an interval of time after drug discontinuation, the researchers focused on the timing of symptoms for drug-continued vs. drug-discontinued participants. They looked for evidence that end-of-study symptoms might already have been present during the study at set discontinuation times. A 50 percent rate of occurrence was chosen to indicate a substantial, non-trivial possible misclassification, Cohen said.

Few studies provided the data to actually test the hypothesis, even indirectly. Among the 14 studies that did provide the necessary data, about three-quarters showed evidence that withdrawal may be mistaken for relapse.

Relapse prevention trials that use psychiatric drug discontinuation commonly conclude that drugs work because they help prevent relapse, Cohen pointed out.

In line with a stream of previous warnings in the literature, the two studies show that more justifications are needed for why and how these discontinuation trials are conducted. Clinicians and consumers should not accept conventional interpretations of what is actually occurring to deliberately drug-discontinued participants in the trials, Cohen said, “and what this could mean for long-term use of psychiatric medications by ordinary people around the world.”

Large majority of teen intimate-partner homicides are female

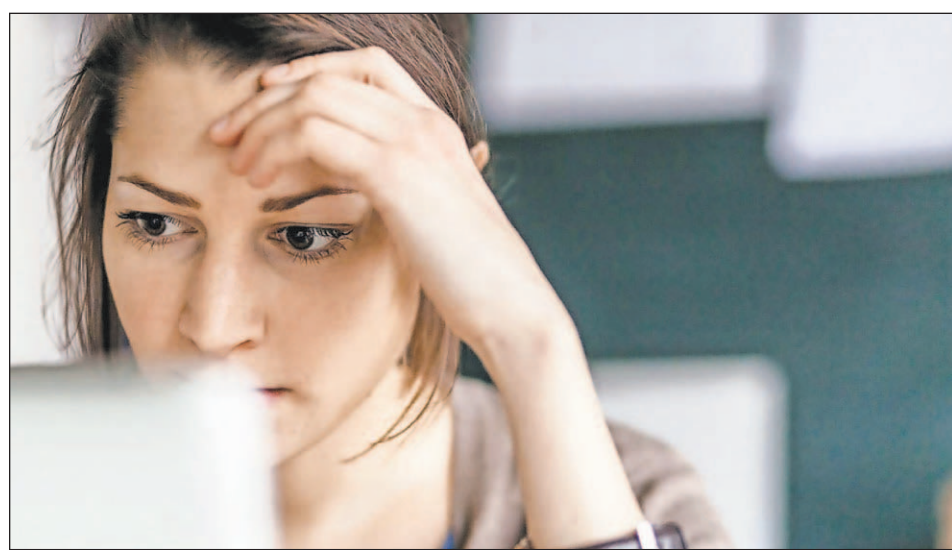

By UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Intimate-partner homicide among teens does occur and 90 percent of the victims are girls, according to a new study published in JAMA Pediatrics.

“This is a public health issue that should be taken seriously,” said lead author Avanti Adhia, a senior fellow at the Harborview Injury Prevention and Research Center at the University of Washington School of Medicine.

The researchers examined data from the National Violent Death Reporting System between 2003 and 2016. It encompassed 2,188 homicides of young people 11-18 years old in which the victim knew the perpetrator.

Of these homicides, 150 (6.9 percent)

UW HEALTH

Intimate-partner homicide among teens does occur and 90 percent of the victims are girls, according to a new study published in JAMA Pediatrics.

were classified as intimate-partner homicide.

“While not a common occurrence, it does occur more often than people realize,” Adhia said.

In those cases, 90 percent of the perpetrators were male, and guns were the weapon used most commonly, the researchers reported.

“The majority of the homicides occur in older adolescence between the ages of 16 and 18,” she said. “A common circumstance is when a victim ends a relationship with the perpetrator or there is jealousy over the victim dating someone new.”

Another common scenario, Adhia said, is a severe altercation or argument that ends in death by firearm or stabbing.

The data was collected from 32 states; states contributed data for a variable number of years, so no trend analysis was available. But the dataset has since been expanded to 50 states, and more incidents will be reported in future studies.

“Partly why I was interested in this topic is the perception that teen dating violence is less serious than intimate-partner violence among adults,” Adhia said. “It’s important to understand that things can escalate among teens, as well.”

She said evidence-based interventions should be implemented in school and community settings to build teens’ awareness and communication skills in relationships and opportunities for bystander intervention.

The work was supported by the Eunice Kennedy Shriver National Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

can occur, including infections of the brain; infections of the lung; and secondary bacterial infections of the chickenpox spots, including cases of flesh-eating disease or necrotizing fasciitis, which were reported, as well,” says Dr. Rajapakse.

The virus can be spread through direct or close contact with someone who has chickenpox and through the airborne route. Cases of chickenpox continue to develop in areas where children are unvaccinated. Dr. Rajapakse says chickenpox also can be picked up when people travel to areas where vaccine is not routine. “Chickenpox is definitely still present in the U.S., and it’s possible to get exposed and infected.”

The best preventive is vaccination. “The chickenpox vaccine is available as a combined vaccine with measles, mumps, rubella.

There’s a measles, mumps, rubella, varicella and chickenpox vaccine. There’s a free-standing chickenpox vaccine, as well,” says Dr. Rajapakse. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends that children receive the first dose of the varicella vaccine at 12–15 months old and a second dose at 4–6 years old.

Chickenpox may be a thought of as a childhood disease, but it also has implications for adults. “Chickenpox and shingles are caused by the same virus.

When you get infected with it the first time, you develop the classic chickenpox illness with the diffuse rash. Once you are infected with chickenpox virus, it stays in your body in a latent or a sleeping state, which can then wake up or reactivate later on in life. When it does that, that’s what we call shingles,” says Dr. Rajapakse.

A new shingles vaccine is now available. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommends the vaccine for all adults 50 and above.

Today's vets seek mental health help sooner than peers

BY UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON

Mental health treatment has come a long way for our nation's veterans. Veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks are seeking treatment for post-traumatic stress disorder and depression much sooner than veterans before 9/11 or even civilians, according to a study in Psychiatric Services. The study found that veterans who served post-9/11 are seeking PTSD care in 2.5 years, compared to 16 years for veterans serving before 9/11, and 15 years for civilians. The study also found that that the median time for depression treatment was one year for veterans following 9/11, compared to seven years for veterans before 9/11 and five years for civilians.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Veterans are seeking mental health treatment earlier than their predecessors.

Lead author Simon Goldberg conducted the population-based survey study while working at the Veteran Administration Health Services Research and Development Post-Doctoral Fellowship Program run by faculty from the VA Puget Sound Health Care System and the University of Washington School of Medicine. The analysis looked at data from 14,916 adults with a lifetime diagnosis of PTSD, major depressive disorder or alcohol-use disorder. Goldberg, now an assistant professor at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, said the results could reflect the increased investment in mental health care, screening and outreach for veterans. Every person seeking primary-care treatment at the Veteran's Administration is now screened for PTSD, depression and alcohol-use disorder – three of the most common mental health conditions among post-9/11 veterans. Co-author John Fortney, professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at the UW School of Medicine and co-director of the post-doctoral fellowship program, said the cumulative effect of outreach efforts by the Department of Defense, VA, and veterans organizations have helped encourage veterans to obtain care. Fortney said that, while there is still a lot of stigma in seeking mental health treatment among active duty military, integrating mental health into VA primary-care services as part of a general wellness visit has improved access to care. "Self-reliance and stoicism are expected in the military, so it is not easy for veterans to seek help when they re-engage into civilian life," said Fortney. The study also looked at the initiation of treatment for alcohol-use disorder and found no differences among the groups. All seemed to be reluctant to seek help. Goldberg said this may highlight a general need for additional engagement efforts to improve understanding of alcohol-use disorder and encourage treatment in veteran and civilian populations alike.

ticket. A single episode of acute stress generally doesn't cause problems for healthy people. However, severe acute stress can cause mental health problems — such as post-traumatic stress disorder. It can also cause physical difficulties such as tension headaches, stomach problems or serious health issues — such as a heart attack.

Chronic stress
Mild acute stress can actually be beneficial — it can spur you into action, motivate and energize you. The problem occurs when stressors pile up and stick around. This persistent stress can lead to health problems, such as headaches and insomnia. The chronic-stress response is more subtle than is the acute-stress response, but the effects may be longer lasting and more problematic.

Effective stress management involves identifying and managing both acute and chronic stress. Know your stressors
Effective stress management starts with identifying your sources of stress and developing strategies to manage them. One way to do this is to make a list of the situations, concerns or challenges that trigger your stress response. Take a moment to write down some of the top issues you're facing right now. You'll notice that some of your stressors are events that happen to you while others seem to originate from within.

External exasperations
External stressors are events and situations that happen to you. Some examples of external stressors include:
• Major life changes
These changes can be positive, such as a new marriage, a planned pregnancy, a promotion or a new house. Or they can be negative, such as the death of a loved one or a divorce.

MAYO CLINIC

You can help reduce stress by knowing what is likely to induce stress.

• Environment
The input from the world around us can be a source of stress. Consider how you react to sudden noises, such as a barking dog, or how you react to a bright sunlit room or a dark room.
• Unpredictable events
Out of the blue, uninvited house guests arrive. Or you discover your rent has gone up or that your pay has been cut.
• Workplace
Common stressors at work include an impossible workload, endless emails, urgent deadlines and a demanding boss.
• Social
Meeting new people can be stressful. Just think about going on a blind date, and you probably start to sweat. Relationships with family often spawn stress as well. Just think back to your last fight with your partner or child.

Strategies to manage external stressors include lifestyle factors such as eating a healthy diet, being physically active and getting enough sleep — which help boost your resiliency. Other helpful steps include asking for help from others, using humor, learning to be assertive, and practicing problem-solving and time management. Consider how you use your time and energy by focusing on activities that are important to you, paring down the number of activities you're involved in, and saying no to new commitments.

Internal irritations
Not all stress stems from things that happen to you. Much of our stress response is self-induced. Those feelings and thoughts that pop into your head and cause you unrest are known as internal stressors. Examples of internal stressors include:

• Fears
Common ones include fear of failure, fear of public speaking and fear of flying.

• Uncertainty and lack of control
Few people enjoy not knowing or not being able to control what might happen. Think about how you might react when waiting for the results of a medical test.
• Beliefs
These might be attitudes, opinions or expectations. You may not even think about how your beliefs shape your experience, but these preset thoughts often set us up for stress. Consider the expectations you put on yourself to create a perfect holiday celebration or advance up the career ladder.
The good news is that we have the ability to control our thoughts. The bad news is that our fears, attitudes and expectations have been our companions for a long time and it often takes some effort to change them. Strategies to manage internal stressors include reframing your thoughts and choosing a positive mindset, challenging negative thoughts, using relaxation techniques, and talking with a trusted friend or counselor.

Take the first step
Recognizing a problem is the first step toward solving it. By beginning to identify and understand the sources of your stress, you've taken the first step in learning to better manage it. Manage it, not eliminate it. Stress is a fact of life. And that's OK. You can learn ways to handle it.

An unabashed plug

By CARRIE CLASSON
POSTSCRIPT

CLASSON

More than 10 years ago, I was living in Africa (Lagos, Nigeria, to be exact). My life was pretty much a shambles, but I refused to return to the U.S. The reason I didn't want to come back was because I could not for the life of me figure out what had happened. My husband of 22 years had left without warning. The company I was working my heart out for suddenly dumped me. I found myself in a foreign country (and a difficult one) with no job, no home, no husband, and the most incredible part about all of it — to me — was that I genuinely did not see any of it coming. One day I came in from my run. I was living in yet another temporary apartment that I would have to vacate soon. I was doing freelance work to make enough money to get by (although I didn't need a lot) and, on this day, I came in still covered in sweat and sat down at my computer.

I typed: People ask me what Lagos is like. I never tell them. It's easier that way. Then I proceeded to tell myself (and these imaginary people) what Lagos was really like. I didn't write the cheery explanations and rationalizations I'd been giving my family and friends (and myself). Instead, I wrote the truth about how afraid and lost I really was at mid-dle-age without a husband or a home or a job and with no idea at all what would happen next. I don't know where that writing came from. I'd never done anything like it before. But sitting in my running clothes, about 12 years ago, writing answers for myself, for others, I began something that continues to this day. Those words eventually became a book and this week that memoir — Blue Yarn — has been released. So, yeah, this is a plug for my book. But this is also a plug for anyone reading this who might be thinking of trying something new—something scary, something you might not even fully understand. My sister's husband is 60 years old and he is starting seminary next month. I could not be more proud of him. He is starting over at an age when conventional wisdom says it is too late—just as I began writing too late. This is a plug for new beginnings that happen late. Whether it is upending our lives or just adding some new thing to an otherwise good life, change keeps us alive. Change allows us to direct the course of the second half (or third) of our life in a way that makes meaning of our time. This is a plug for finding meaning—by whatever means, through whatever change is required. This is an unabashed plug for that crazy idea that gets hidden away, that yen to do something that isn't particularly logical, that desire to try something new—at an age when everyone will assure you it doesn't make sense. This is a plug for doing it anyway.

Or, at least, giving it a try. Entertain the idea. Invite the idea in for coffee and have a long chat. See what the idea has to say and what it would be like if it became part of your life. These changes are scary and they're usually not easy. But we make them because whatever we have been doing just isn't enough anymore. We make them knowing people will say we are being foolish or self-deluded. It is humbling. It is frightening. It is worth it. Till next time, Carrie Carrie Classon's memoir, "Blue Yarn: A Memoir About Loss, Letting Go, & What Happens Next," has just been released! It is available at Amazon, Barnes and Noble, and other fine stores. Learn more at CarrieClasson.com.

Sri Lanka still reeling after Easter attacks

Their president gave the military police powers after the Easter bombings killed nearly 300 people

By BHARATHA MALLAWARACHI
and KRISHAN FRANCIS
ASSOCIATED PRESS

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Sri Lanka's president gave the military sweeping police powers starting Tuesday in the wake of the Easter bombings that killed nearly 300 people, while officials disclosed that intelligence agencies had warned weeks ago of the possibility of an attack by the radical Muslim group blamed for the bloodshed.

The suicide bombings struck three churches and three luxury hotels Sunday in the island nation's deadliest violence since a devastating civil war ended in 2009. The government shut down some social media, armed security forces patrolled the largely deserted, central streets in the capital of Colombo, and a curfew went into effect.

The military was given a wider berth to detain and arrest suspects — powers that were used during the civil war but withdrawn when it ended.

Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe said he feared the massacre could unleash instability and he vowed to “vest all necessary powers with the defense forces” to act against those responsible.

Adding to the tension, three unexploded bombs blew up Monday inside a van parked near one of the stricken churches as police were trying to defuse them, sending pedestrians fleeing in panic. No injuries were reported. Dozens of detonators were discovered near Colombo's main bus depot, but officials declined to say whether they were linked to the attacks.

The government blocked access to Facebook, WhatsApp and Instagram after the blasts, creating confusion and doing little to reassure residents and visitors that the danger had passed.

5 reasons experts think autonomous cars are many years away

After Tesla announced they will try to have full self-driving cars by 2020, some experts express doubt

By TOM KRISHER
AP AUTO WRITER

PITTSBURGH — In the world of autonomous vehicles, Pittsburgh, Phoenix and Silicon Valley are bustling hubs of development and testing. But ask those involved in self-driving vehicles when we might actually see them carrying passengers in every city, and you'll get an almost universal answer: Not anytime soon.

An optimistic assessment is 10 years. Many others say decades as researchers try to conquer a number of obstacles.

That makes Tesla's declarations that it will offer fully autonomous vehicles by the second quarter of next year all the more striking.

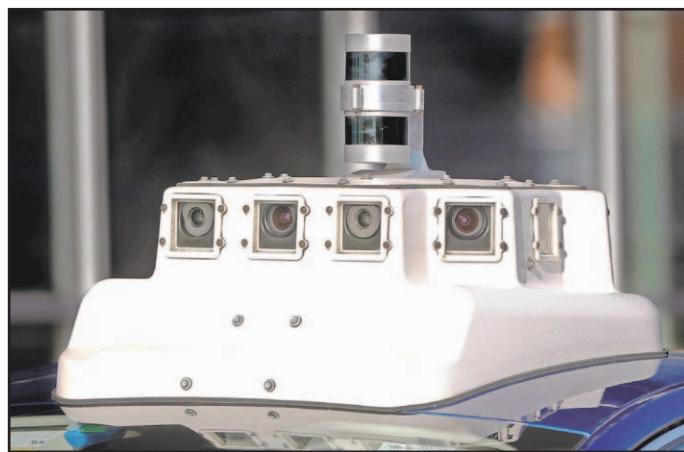

The company announced its ambitious plans during an investor conference on Monday. But skeptics doubt that Tesla can pull it off.

Here are the problems that researchers must overcome to start giving rides without humans behind the wheel:

SNOW AND WEATHER

1 When it's heavy enough to cover the pavement, snow blocks the view of lane lines that vehicle cameras use to find their way. Researchers so far haven't figured out a way around this. That's why much of the testing is done in warm-weather climates such as Arizona and California.

Heavy snow, rain, fog and sandstorms can obstruct the view of cameras. Light beams sent out by laser sensors can bounce off snowflakes and think they are obstacles. Radar can see through the weather, but it doesn't show the shape of an object needed for computers to figure out what it is.

“It's like losing part of your vision,” says Raj Rajkumar, an electrical and computer engineering professor at Carnegie Mellon University.

Researchers are working on laser sensors that use a different light beam wavelength to see through snowflakes, said Greg McGuire, director of the MCity

Trump sues to block House subpoena for financial documents

By ANDREW HARRIS
BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON — President Donald Trump and the Trump Organization have asked a U.S. judge to block a congressional subpoena seeking business records from his longtime accounting firm Mazars USA LLP.

The subpoena is part of sweeping series of requests by Democratic lawmakers for financial records from the president's company and Trump himself. Trump has refused to cooperate, and Monday's lawsuit in Washington shifts what is certain to be an intense battle into the federal courts.

Trump's personal lawyers said the House Oversight Committee is exceeding its authority by rummaging in his personal business records without a “legitimate legislative purpose.” Trump is suing in his individual capacity, and not as president.

“There is no possible legislation at the end of this tunnel,” Trump's attorneys said in the complaint, accusing the committee led by Maryland Democrat Elijah Cummings of assuming the investigatory powers of the U.S. Justice Department.

“Its goal is to expose plaintiffs' private financial information for the sake of exposure, with the hope that it will turn up something that Democrats can use as a political tool against the president now and in the 2020 election,” the lawyers said.

Mazars is required to comply with the subpoena by noon on April 29.

“The White House is engaged in unprecedented stonewalling on all fronts, and they have refused to produce a single document or witness to the Oversight Committee during this entire year,” Cummings said in a statement. “The president has a long history of trying to use baseless lawsuits to attack his adversaries.”

In a March 4 letter, White House Counsel Pat Cipollone also argued that lawmakers failed to establish a “legitimate legislative purpose” in rebuffing a request for White House records related to security-clearance procedures. Cipollone cited a pair of U.S. Supreme Court rulings to support his case.

House Democrats have also asked the U.S. Treasury Department to turn over the

Will Ukrainian comedian be any match for Vladimir Putin?

By YURAS KARMAU
and VLADIMIR ISACHENKOV
ASSOCIATED PRESS

KIEV, Ukraine — Volodymyr Zelenskiy's landslide victory in Ukraine's presidential election has thrust a comedian and political novice into the middle of the most dangerous flash-point between Moscow and the West since the end of the Cold War.

Whether Zelenskiy is any match at all for Vladimir Putin, a canny and ruthless KGB veteran who has led Russia for nearly 20 years, remains to be seen.

Zelenskiy, who played an accidental president in a hugely popular sitcom but has no real political background, has vowed to keep Ukraine on its pro-Western course. At the same time, he has pledged to quickly reach out to Moscow to negotiate an end to the five years of fighting in Ukraine's industrial east against Russian-backed separatists, a conflict that has killed more than 13,000 people.

Arkady Moshes, an expert on Russia and Ukraine with the Finnish Institute of International Affairs, said the Kremlin may try to exploit Zelenskiy's lack of political experience.

Moscow "can on the one hand offer him something and basically outplay him diplomatically, and on the other hand threaten Zelenskiy as an inexperienced commander-in-chief with the destabilization of the situation in the east," he said.

With nearly all ballots counted in Sunday's election, the 41-year-old Zelenskiy won 73% of the vote to President Petro Poroshenko's 24%, reflecting disillusionment with the old elite amid economic woes, deep-seated corruption and the war.

Russia annexed Crimea in 2014 and has fomented the fighting in Ukraine's industrial heartland in a bid to maintain its influence in the country and keep the former Soviet state from joining the European Union and NATO. NATO doesn't welcome nations with unsettled territorial conflicts.

The question is whether Zelenskiy will have any more success than his predecessor in halting the hostilities.

"Everything will depend on Putin — whether the Kremlin will continue to use the conflict in the east to put the brakes on Kiev's movement toward the EU and NATO," said Volodymyr Fesenko, head of the Penta Center, a Kiev-based think tank.

Russia paid a steep price for its actions in Ukraine, with the U.S. and the EU responding with sanctions that have limited Moscow's access to global financial markets and restricted imports of key technologies. The Kremlin may now be eager to engage in talks with Zelenskiy in the hope that a lull in the fighting will pave the way for the lifting of Western restrictions.

On the campaign trail, Poroshenko warned over and over that Zelenskiy could be easy prey for the steely Russian leader. But Zelenskiy could also face powerful resistance at home.

Mexican police detain hundreds of Central American migrants

By SONIA PÉREZ D.
ASSOCIATED PRESS

PIJJIAPAN, Mexico — Mexican police and immigration agents detained hundreds of Central American migrants Monday in the largest single raid on a migrant caravan since the groups started moving through the country last year.

Police targeted isolated groups at the tail end of a caravan of about 3,000 migrants who were making their way through the southern state of Chiapas with hopes of reaching the U.S. border.

As migrants gathered under spots of shade in the burning heat outside the city of Pijjiapan, federal police and agents passed by in patrol trucks and vans and forcibly wrestled women, men and children into the vehicles.

The migrants were driven to buses, presumably for subsequent transportation to an immigration station for deportation processing. As many as 500 migrants might have been picked up in the raid, according to Associated Press journalists at the scene.

Some of the women and children wailed and screamed during the detentions on the roadside. Clothes, shoes, suitcases and strollers littered the scene after they were taken away.

Kevin Escobar, a 27-year-old from Honduras, was one of about 500 migrants who fled onto private property to avoid immigration agents. Sitting on the property, he yelled to them: "Why do you want to arrest me?"

Escobar vowed that he will never return to his hometown of San Pedro Sula, saying "the gangs are kidnapping everyone back there."

Agents had encouraged groups of migrants that separated from the bulk of the caravan to rest after some seven hours on the road, including about half of that under a broiling sun. When the migrants regrouped to continue, they were detained.

Agents positioned themselves at the head of the group and at the back. Some people in civilian clothing appeared to be participating in the detentions.

After seeing what happened, some migrants began walking in dense groupings and picked up stones and sticks.

Officials from the National Human Rights Commission observed the action from a distance.

"We are documenting what is happening," said Jesús Salvador Quintana, a commission official. "We cannot tell authorities in charge what to do, but yes, we are documenting and we will investigate."

Mexico welcomed the first caravans last year, but the reception has gotten colder since tens of thousands of migrants overwhelmed U.S. border crossings, causing delays at the border and anger among Mexican residents.

Last Friday, local media reported a series of detentions of migrants in nearby Mapastepec, where thousands were awaiting normalization of their migratory status.

Mexico's National Migration Institute did not immediately respond to requests for comment. The National Human Rights Commission said it had interviewed more than 200 people detained in Mapastepec.

The detentions came as the U.S. has ramped up public pressure on Mexico to do more to stop the flow of migrants. President Donald Trump railed against the government of his Mexican counterpart, Andrés Manuel López Obrador, and threatened to shut the entire border down, but then quickly congratulated Mexico for migrant arrests just a few weeks ago.

Mexico already allows the United States to return some asylum seekers to Mexico as their cases play out. And government officials said in March they would try to contain migrants heading north at the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, the narrowest part of the country's south and easiest to control.

In its most recent statement from last week, the Migration Institute said 5,336 migrants were in shelters or immigration centers in Chiapas, and over 1,500 of them were "awaiting deportation."

The Rights Commission said Sunday that more than 7,500 migrants were in detention, at shelters or on the road in the southern state. It urged authorities to carry out a proper census of the migrants and attend to their needs, particularly children.

In Venezuela, women sell hair as another way to get by

Demands of daily survival force them to abandon self-care in a country known for success in beauty pageants

By FABIOLA SANCHEZ
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CARACAS, Venezuela — Valery Díaz covered her eyes and held her breath before looking in a hair salon mirror to see herself without much of the long dark hair that used to frame her face.

The 16-year-old student was paid $100 for the shorn hair, money she'll use to help her family and buy a cellphone at a time when Venezuela's sharp economic decline has led to shortages of food and medicine, and hyperinflation has made salaries nearly worthless.

Increasing numbers of women in poor neighborhoods are selling their hair for use in wigs and extensions as the demands of daily survival force them to abandon the kind of self-care long an obsession with a country known globally for its success in beauty pageants. Seven Miss Universe winners have been Venezuelans, as have six Miss Worlds.

Some women are washing their hair with dishwashing liquid because they can't afford to buy shampoo that costs more than the minimum monthly salary, now equivalent to just a few dollars. Many have to adapt to make personal care products last longer, with no sign of an end to a crisis that has pushed more than 3 million Venezuelans — one-tenth of the population — to leave the country in recent years.

Díaz gazed silently at the mirror and attempted a positive spin on the loss of locks that she had worn since she was a young child.

"There are times when you go two or three weeks without washing your hair," she said, alluding to frequent water shortages in past weeks, caused by nationwide blackouts that shut off water pumps.

Her mother, Yeny Gómez, laughed nervously and tried to buoy her daughter's spirits.

"You don't notice it,"

AP PHOTO

Nelly Navarro sits with her kids Nerianny and Luis in a beauty salon where she came to consult how much money she could get for her hair in Venezuela, April 2. Navarro said she needs the $100 to travel to Colombia where she's planning to move.

Gómez, a 43-year-old teacher, said of the drastic haircut.

Despite sacrificing her hair, Díaz said she still tries to buy cosmetics, using money she earns from making and selling bracelets.

But Gómez said she hasn't bought lipstick or any other cosmetics for more than a year because she's saving whatever money she earns to get food for her and her two daughters. Beauty care has become secondary for most Venezuelans, she said.

Local shops that sell beauty products are also reinventing themselves to stay afloat. International cosmetics brands have disappeared from storefronts, replaced by cheaper goods from China as well as locally made products that use honey and other ingredients.

Deputies: Dad shoots man who stole car with boy, 6, inside

LANTANA (AP) — Sheriff's investigators say a Florida father chased down and shot a man who stole his car with his 6-year-old son inside.

Palm Beach County Sheriff's officials say 29-year-old Lamar Thurman remains in critical condition following the shooting early Saturday.

News outlets report the father left his 2012 Honda running while saying goodbye to friends around 2:30 a.m. Saturday. That's when Thurman jumped in and took off.

The father and his friends called 911 and drove after the vehicle. Sheriff's officials say the group followed Thurman for five miles, where he crashed the car. As they went to grab the boy from the car, Thurman drove away. The father pulled out a gun and started shooting. The boy wasn't injured.

Thurman is on probation for carjacking an 86-year-old woman in 2016.

Third body found following weekend Miami Beach boat crash

MIAMI BEACH (AP) — Authorities found the body of a woman in the sand near the Miami Beach that a boat crashed into over the holiday weekend.

Florida Fish and Wildlife spokesman Ronald Washington tells news outlets the body was found Monday morning near Government Cut. After the boat crashed Saturday night, authorities found the bodies of a man and a woman. Another passenger in the boat was seriously injured and taken to Jackson Memorial Hospital's Ryder Trauma Center.

Rescuers spend much of Sunday searching for the missing woman.

Officials haven't released the names of the victims.

Dive team finds body of snorkeler in Panhandle

DESTIN (AP) — A dive team has recovered the body of a tourist who went missing while snorkeling off a Florida Panhandle beach.

Okaloosa County Sheriff's officials said in a news release that the body was recovered Monday morning in Destin's East Pass. The 28-year-old was reported missing Sunday evening after the friends he was snorkeling did a head count and realized he was missing.

The search for the man was called off Sunday due to poor weather conditions. But the dive team returned early Monday and found the body near a jetty.

The man's name hasn't been released.

Sheriff's sergeant suspended for selling police gear on eBay

JACKSONVILLE (AP) — A sheriff's sergeant in Florida has been suspended for 45 days after authorities say he sold police-issued gear on eBay.

The Florida Times-Union cites an internal affairs report in reporting that Jacksonville Sheriff's Sgt. Richard E. Vercurysse made $60.50 in the sale of a gun belt, a double magazine holder and a badge wallet. The report says the items were given to the sergeant for use on the job and were expected to be returned if he retired or resigned.

The probe began in August and wrapped up in February and the newspaper received the report last week. The report says Vercurysse admitted to investigators that selling the items was a dumb move. Investigators say the items were sold by an eBay user known as milkman25.

Chinese woman accused of lying at Mar-a-Lago gets May 28 trial date

By JANE MUSGRAVE
THE PALM BEACH POST

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A 33-year-old Chinese woman will be tried next month on charges that she lied to federal agents to get into Mar-a-Lago while President Donald Trump was visiting last month. U.S. District Judge Roy Altman has scheduled a jury trial for Yujing Zhang on May 28 in Fort Lauderdale. She faces a maximum five-year prison sentence if convicted of charges of lying to a federal agent and gaining access to a restricted building. Zhang's defense attorneys and prosecutors could seek additional time to prepare their cases. However, legal observers said that with Zhang being held without bond in the Palm Beach County jail, it is unlikely her legal team would ask for a delay. Declaring Zhang a serious flight risk, U.S. Magistrate William Matthew last week refused to let the self-described investment consultant be released on bond. When she was arrested by U.S. Secret Service agents March 30, she was carrying four cellphones, a laptop computer, an external hard drive and a thumb drive that investigators originally said contained malicious software. Later tests showed it did not contain malware, officials said. Her attorneys said she went to the club to attend an event that she didn't know had been canceled.

US stock indexes end mostly lower after listless trading day

By ALEX VEIGA
AP BUSINESS WRITER

Wall Street capped a day of mostly sideways trading Monday with a slight gain for the benchmark S&P 500 index, as a spike in crude oil prices sent energy companies broadly higher.

Energy sector stocks climbed as the price of crude oil hit its highest level since October after the U.S. government moved to further block Iranian oil exports.

Even with the surge in energy stocks, losses in banks, real estate companies and elsewhere in the market led to a mostly lower finish for the major U.S. indexes. Smaller company stocks fell more than the rest of the market.

Homebuilders slumped following a report showing that sales of previously owned U.S. homes fell in March.

Monday's listless day of trading was in line with a relatively calm stretch for the U.S. stock market in recent weeks. The market has been hovering near all-time highs after following up a nearly 20% plummet late last year with a nearly mirror-opposite rebound.

Investors are focused on a cavalcade of corporate earnings reports later this week and new data that will give them a read on how much U.S. economic growth slowed during the first three months of the year.

"This week is a crucial week for the market," said Quincy Krosby, chief market strategist at Prudential Financial. "Investors want to hear what these companies are saying in terms of their guidance, and that's going to be crucial to see if this market can continue to inch higher."

The S&P 500 wavered between gains and losses for much of the day before eking out a gain of 2.94 points, or 0.1%, to 2,907.97. The index, which had briefly been down as much as 0.3%, is now within 0.8% of its record high set in September.

Woman waved handgun, carrying baby, threatened to blow up church during Easter service

By LYNDSEY WINKLEY
THE SAN DIEGO UNION-TRIBUNE

SAN DIEGO — A woman who walked into a San Diego Easter service carrying a baby with her left arm and waving a gun with her right was tackled by parishioners after threatening to blow up the church, police and witnesses said.

The sermon was just wrapping up when the armed woman appeared on the church stage about noon, said Brother Ben Wisan, the founding pastor of Church TsidKenu. The church holds its services at Mount Everest Academy, a school in the Clairemont neighborhood.

Wisan told the congregation of about 100 to get outside and "start praying," but several church members stayed to try and talk to the woman, he said.

David Miller, a Navy man, said he was one of several people who stayed inside to try and defuse the situation safely. Miller told OnScene TV the woman was making "crazy comments" about teaching people how to suffer and that there was a need for people to become martyrs.

He said as the church members started to slowly approach her, she pointed her gun at several parishioners and then her own baby, telling them not to come any closer.

That's when the group, including Miller, tackled the woman, first getting the child to safety and then wresting the gun from her hand, he said.

When police arrived minutes later, the woman tried to escape, Miller said. One officer tackled her through a row of chairs and she was taken into custody. She was later identified as Anna Conkey, 31, and was booked into jail on suspicion of making criminal threats and displaying a handgun in a threatening manner.

No one was injured during the incident. Because Conkey threatened to blow up the building where the church held its service, officers with bomb detection canines swept the facility and her vehicle. Nothing dangerous was located.

Wisan, the pastor, said investigators later told him Conkey's gun wasn't loaded. He said church members knew the woman and that she had attended services in the past. San Diego police Lt. Christian Sharp said officers are investigating whether Conkey was involved in an incident at the same church about a week ago.

The woman's 10-month-old baby was taken into protective custody, the lieutenant said. Police also located a second child, a 5-year-old daughter, healthy and unharmed, police said. Both were taken to a 24-hour facility that houses children who must be separated from their family.

According to a personal blog and social media profiles, Conkey was a Navy veteran who studied English and journalism at San Diego State University. She had worked as a digital media producer for NBC7 San Diego, as a news production assistant at KPBS, and had commentaries published in The San Diego Union-Tribune.

Conkey often shared her perspective in a personal blog and YouTube channel.

Videos posted to her YouTube channel were also overtly religious. In some, she claimed to be a prophet.

The threat occurred hours after explosions hit Sri Lankan churches and hotels on Easter Sunday in a coordinated attack that killed hundreds of people. On Saturday night, San Diego police Chief Dave Nisleit said on Twitter that extra officers would be patrolling houses of worship as a precaution.

Gallbladder removal didn't stop formation of gallstones

DEAR DR. ROACH: My husband had his gallbladder removed many years ago. In the past few years, he has had six ERCPs to remove gallstones from his bile duct, as he is still making them. He has been told to drink lots of water but that there is no preventive remedy. Do you have any suggestions for how to prevent these gallstones from forming? — B.A.P.

ANSWER: Ordinarily, removing the gallbladder stops new gallstones from forming. Having a gallstone left after surgery is not uncommon, but it is very uncommon for people to make multiple new stones years after surgery. One possibility is a diverticulum of the common bile duct. The common bile duct drains bile from the liver and gallbladder into the small intestine; it drains pancreatic fluid, too. A diverticulum is a blind pouch. It's possible for a stone to form there, so you should find out if he has one. They should have seen it on one of the ERCPs. If present, a diverticulum can be removed surgically.

I asked my colleague at Weill Cornell, Dr. Arun Jesudian, for his expertise, and he said he has seen multiple stones in the liver due to parasitic infections, often in Asian patients. That may require surgical treatment. He also discussed doing a sphincterotomy, which is a procedure to open the end of the common bile duct, to let stones pass through easily. Your husband may benefit from expanding it. Finally, there is a medication to reduce gallstones, ursodiol (Actigall), which Dr. Jesudian feels had no real downsides and might well help.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I'm a female, 53, who suffers from and is being treated for IBS. I have a history of colon cancer in my family. My family members and I go through regular screenings and so far, we've been clean. Once in a while, I wake up feeling a sharp, stabbing pain in my rectal area that lasts no more than 20-30 minutes before going away. These pains occur no more than once a month, sometimes every few months, but the pain often happens while I'm asleep and wakes me up.

Luckily, there have been no bloody or black stools or urine following this, much to my relief. I've talked to my gastroenterologist about it, and he's as clueless as I am. I do exercise and watch what I eat. Could it be gas? At least the pain is short-lived, so it doesn't interfere with my daily activities or routine. — A.

ANSWER: Irritable bowel syndrome is a common problem, found more frequently in women, that ranges from annoying to life-changing. Although it does not predispose to cancer or reduce life expectancy, IBS can have dramatic effects on a person's social and work lives.

The hallmarks of IBS are bowel changes (diarrhea, constipation or sometimes both, alternating) and abdominal discomfort. The discomfort is usually described as cramping, but it is not unheard of to be described as sharp or stabbing.

I believe a colonoscopy is appropriate to be sure IBS is not actually a different problem, such as inflammatory bowel disease. Black or bloody stools would be concerning for IBD not IBS.

Your symptoms are not typical for colon cancer, which often has no symptoms until it is quite advanced, making regular screening is so important.

Woman gets distracted by a distant online romance

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who has re-entered the dating pool after a few years of being single.

I have gone on some amazing dates with fabulous men.

I met someone online last summer. "Miles" had a similar story — long, bad marriage and now living life to the fullest. I adore his personality (and looks), but I have never met him in person.

We talk often, sharing dating stories and everything else, knowing it won't go anywhere as he lives 1,000 miles away. We have developed a strong emotional bond and have become great friends. My emotions have now moved past friendship. I believe Miles can sense it because he has pulled back a little. I know realistically it won't work due to the distance. My kids are still in school, and I'd feel guilty asking him to move away from his business, kids (grown), parents, family, etc.

Should I quit talking to him altogether, because apparently I can't keep it where it has been for the last several months? We agree that we "met" for a reason, and only time will tell what that reason is or if it goes anywhere. I'm heartbroken and emotionally unavailable to the great men around me.

My heart is with Miles. Advice? — Smitten In South Carolina

DEAR SMITTEN: You and Miles may have met for a reason, but there's also a reason why the two of you haven't met in person in nearly a year. The fact that his reaction to the idea that you might be getting serious about him is to pull back makes me wonder whether you may have jumped the gun.

Before allowing yourself to fall further in love, you have some work to do to get your emotions back under control so you can move forward and be more receptive to the "great men" in your own area who are available.

Signs of a possible stroke

Dear Readers: Suspect a STROKE? Act F.A.S.T. The National Stroke Association (www.stroke.org) suggests looking for these danger signs:

F. (FACE): A droopy face when smiling.

A. (ARMS): Inability to raise both arms at the same time, and with equal height.

S. (SPEECH): Slurred or garbled speech when reciting a simple phrase or song.

T. (TIME): Call 911 immediately if you observe ANY of these symptoms; note the time the symptoms first appeared.

A stroke can occur when blood flow is cut off to the brain, or when a damaged

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Sometimes you have to spend time with people who just aren't a good influence on you, but more often you have a choice. When you think and plan ahead, it's easier to avoid having to spend time in ways you don't prefer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). The truth moves you, even if the truth happens to be fiction. It's the emotional truth of a thing that rings out or doesn't. Just be aware that this can be manipulated by skilled actors, liars and storytellers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You love people in different ways and for different reasons than you once did, which is the natural progression of love — to move with the changes, whether they be toward depth or friendliness or familiarity. It's nothing to fear.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Just by being you and doing the next right thing, you will build up the trust others have in you. You'll do it enough times and in as many different ways as possible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Your fresh, playful attitude makes it possible for you to live long without growing old. It also attracts attention from interesting people. The conversation is terrific!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). As you work, don't be afraid to make your tools your own. The same goes for the rest of the resources. Forget about what a thing was designed to do. What matters is what you're using it to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). It's one thing to understate things out of modesty or social grace and quite another to hide your light because you're afraid to show people what you're up to. Talk about your work. The support you get will do you good.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Showing your love isn't always romantic, like the gift of flowers, or glamorous, like being on a fantastic trip. Mostly, showing your love is as small as spoonfuls, as diligent as washing dishes, as moving as a carpool.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). You can't change other people, but you can make them want to change and then watch as they do the changing all by themselves. This is through fear or inspiration. Inspiration is better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Perfectionism can be a form of fear. To collect your "points" in whatever form they are available today, you need to get the product out the door. Know when to say, "Good enough."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Fun is contagious, but it's also subjective. Read the room. And if you're not in the room, as in an email or text situation, this is impossible. Jokes are risky unless you already know your audience well.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (April 23). It starts with a 10-week stretch of cosmic boons, many and varied, including a lucky friend, fantastic tickets and an open door to a better position. You'll have the means to get what you want, but be careful, as an acquisition becomes, to some extent, a taskmaster, requiring attention and maintenance. Scorpio and Pisces adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 7, 40, 28, 1 and 19.

The bidding:
SOUTH WEST NORTH EAST
1♠ 2♥ 3♠ Pass

Opening lead: King of ♥ South couldn't keep himself from bidding game when partner jump raised his suit, even though that jump showed a pre-emptive hand. Trade North's queen of spades for the 10 of diamonds and the game contract would have been excellent.

There wasn't much chance unless East held the ace of clubs. That was unlikely after the auction, but South saw a possibility. West was known to hold the queen of hearts from his lead. South saw that he might make his contract if West also held the jack of hearts. South won the opening heart lead with his ace, drew trumps in two rounds, and led a low diamond to dummy's queen. Declarer now held his breathe and led a low heart, hoping that East wouldn't step up with the jack and shift to a club.

South's luck was in, as it was West who held the heart jack. West won this trick but was endplayed. He had to yield a ruff-sluff or lead one of the minors and South had his contract either way. Nicely played!

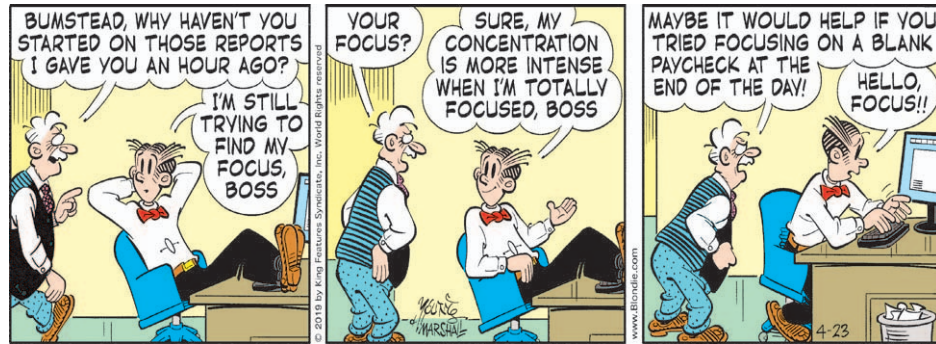

Note the effectiveness of the pre-emptive three-spade bid. East might have raised hearts if he could have done so at the three level, but he judged it too dangerous at the four level. On this lucky lie of the cards for East-West, it takes a diamond lead to hold four hearts to 10 tricks. They can take 12 tricks after a spade lead.

according to police spokesman Ruwan Gunasekara. The three stricken hotels and one of the churches, St. Anthony's Shrine, are frequented by tourists, and dozens of foreigners were among the dead.

A national day of mourning was declared for Tuesday.

International intelligence agencies had warned that the little-known group, National Thowfeek Jamaath, was planning attacks, but word apparently didn't reach the prime minister's office until after the massacre, exposing the continuing political turmoil in the highest levels of the Sri Lankan government.

Health Minister Rajitha Senaratne said the intelligence agencies began issuing the warnings on April 4; the defense ministry wrote to the police chief with information that included the group's name; and police wrote April 11 to the heads of security of the judiciary and diplomatic security division.

President Maithripala Sirisena, who was out of the country Sunday, had ousted Prime Minister Ranil Wickremesinghe in October and dissolved the Cabinet. The Supreme Court later reversed his actions, but the prime minister has not been allowed into meetings of the Security Council since October, which meant he and his government were in the dark about the intelligence.

Authorities said they knew where the group trained and had safe houses, but did not identify any of the suicide bombers, whose bodies were recovered, or the two dozen other suspects taken into custody.

All the bombers were Sri Lankans, but authorities said they strongly suspected foreign links, Senaratne said.

Also unclear was a motive. The history of Buddhist-majority Sri Lanka, a country of 21 million including large Hindu, Muslim and Christian minorities, is rife with ethnic and sectarian conflict.

In the civil war, the Tamil Tigers, a powerful rebel army known for using suicide bombers, was crushed by the government and had little history of targeting Christians. While anti-Muslim bigotry fed by Buddhist nationalists has swept the country recently, there is no history of Islamic militancy. Its small Christian community has seen only scattered incidents of harassment.

Mano Ganesan, the minister for national integration, said his security officers had been warned by their division about the possibility that two suicide bombers would target politicians.

The coordinated blasts took place in the morning at St. Anthony's and the Cinnamon Grand, Shangri-La and Kingsbury hotels in Colombo, as well as the two churches outside Colombo. They collapsed ceilings and blew out windows, killing worshippers and hotel guests, and leaving behind scenes of smoke, soot, blood, broken glass, screams and wailing alarms.

A few hours later, two more blasts occurred just outside Colombo, one at a guesthouse where two people were killed, the other near an overpass, said Brig. Sumith Atapattu, a military spokesman.

Also, three police officers were killed while searching a suspected safe house on the outskirts of Colombo when its occupants apparently detonated explosives to prevent arrest, authorities said.

A pipe bomb with 110 pounds of explosives was found and defused late Sunday on a road to the international airport, said air force Group Capt. Gihan Seneviratne. It was powerful enough to have caused damage in a 400-yard radius, he said.

A morgue worker in Negombo, outside Colombo, where St. Sebastian's Church was targeted, said many bodies were hard to identify because of the blasts. He spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to talk to the media.

Two Muslim groups in Sri Lanka condemned the church attacks, and Pope Francis expressed condolences at the end of his traditional Easter blessing in Rome. The United Nations' most powerful body, the Security Council, also denounced the "heinous and cowardly terrorist attacks."

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said in Washington that he spoke to the prime minister and offered assistance. Later, the FBI said it was helping with the investigation.

"This is America's fight, too," he said. "We also stand with millions of Sri Lankans who support the freedom of their fellow citizens to worship as they please. We take confidence in knowing that not even atrocities like this one will deter them from respecting religious freedom."

party," he said.

"I think that's what's got them worried."

President Richard Nixon sought to quash congressional subpoenas seeking tape recordings of Oval Office phone conversations, both Dallek and Prakash noted. But those were official government records and not privately held by a third party, the UVA professor said.

Cummings laid out his case for the committee's authority to pursue the financial records from Mazars in an April 12 memo to House Oversight members.

"The committee has full authority to investigate whether the president may have engaged in illegal conduct before and during his tenure in office," Cummings wrote. He said it's also the committee's job to determine whether Trump has undisclosed conflicts of interest, or is accepting gifts from foreign or other governments in violation of the Constitution.

"The committee's interest in these matters informs its review of multiple laws and legislative proposals under our jurisdiction, and to suggest otherwise is both inaccurate and contrary to the core mission of the committee to serve as an independent check on the Executive Branch," Cummings wrote.

Trump's lawsuit comes less than a week after the public release of special counsel Robert Mueller's partly redacted report on his two-year probe of Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election and possible coordination with the Trump campaign.

Though the 448-page report detailed extensive contacts between Russians and people connected to

SRI LANKA BOMBING VICTIMS WERE FROM AT LEAST 12 COUNTRIES

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — At least 290 people were killed in bombings of churches and hotels in Sri Lanka on Easter Sunday.

Sri Lankan authorities say at least 31 foreigners died in the attacks. Some details on the victims:

SRI LANKA: The vast majority of the victims were Sri Lankan, many from the island nation's Christian minority. Their names and other details of their lives were slow to trickle in and difficult to report, in part because most social media after the blasts.

UK: Sri Lanka's top diplomat in Britain says authorities know of eight British nationals killed in the bombings.

Among them were lawyer Anita Nicholson, son Alex Nicholson and daughter Annabel Nicholson, her husband, Ben Nicholson, confirmed in a statement. Nicholson said the family was on holiday, sitting at the table of the restaurant of the Shangri-la Hotel when they were killed.

INDIA: Indian officials say eight Indians died.

DENMARK: The Bestseller clothing chain confirmed Danish media reports that three of the children of its owner, business tycoon Anders Holch Povlsen, were killed in the attacks. However, spokesman Jesper Stubbkier gave no details said the company had no further comment.

SPAIN: Spain's foreign ministry says a Spanish man and woman were killed but didn't provide further details. The mayor of Pontecesures in northwest Spain, Juan Manuel Vidal, tells Radio Galega he knew the local pair and says they were in their 30s, according to a report by Spanish private news agency Europa Press.

AUSTRALIA: Australia's prime minister says a mother and daughter from that country were killed. Manik Suriaaratchi and her 10-year-old daughter Alexandria were attending a church service in Negombo when they died.

UNITED STATES: The State Department says at least four Americans were killed and several others seriously injured. It gave no details about the victims' identities.

Fifth-grader Kieran Shafritz de Zoysa, spending a year in Sri Lanka on leave from the private Sidwell Friends School in Washington, D.C., was among those killed, the school said in an email to parents, according to the Washington Post. The email said: "Kieran was passionate about learning, he adored his friends, and he was incredibly excited about returning to Sidwell Friends this coming school year."

Dieter Kowalski, who lived in Denver and worked for international education company Pearson, died in the blasts shortly after he arrived at his hotel for a business trip, the company and his family told AP. A Friday Facebook post reads "And the fun begins. Love these work trips. 24 hours of flying. See you soon Sri Lanka!"

SWITZERLAND: The foreign ministry says a Swiss national, a Swiss dual national and a non-Swiss member of the same family were killed. It didn't identify the second country or give other details on the victims.

CHINA: State media say two Chinese died in the blasts.

OTHERS: The Netherlands, Japan and Portugal have confirmed their nationals were among the dead.

ALMANAC

Today is Tuesday, April 23, the 113th day of 2019. There are 252 days left in the year.

Today in history

On April 23, 1954, Hank Aaron of the Milwaukee Braves hit the first of his 755 major-league home runs in a game against the St. Louis Cardinals. (The Braves won, 7-5.)

On this date

In 1616 (Old Style calendar), English poet and dramatist William Shakespeare died in Stratford-upon-Avon on what has traditionally been regarded as the 52nd anniversary of his birth in 1564.

In 1789, President-elect George Washington and his wife, Martha, moved into the first executive mansion, the Franklin House, in New York.

In 1898, Spain declared war on the United States, which responded in kind two days later.

In 1943, U.S. Navy Lt. John F. Kennedy assumed command of PT-109, a motor torpedo boat, in the Solomon Islands during World War II. (On Aug. 2, 1943, PT-109 was rammed and sunk by a Japanese destroyer, killing two crew members; Kennedy and 10 others survived.)

In 1968, student protesters began occupying buildings on the campus of Columbia University in New York; police put down the protests a week later. The Methodist Church and the Evangelical United Brethren Church merged to form the United Methodist Church.

In 1969, Sirhan Sirhan was sentenced to death for assassinating New York Sen. Robert F. Kennedy. (The sentence was later reduced to life imprisonment.)

In 1971, hundreds of Vietnam War veterans opposed to the conflict protested by tossing their medals and ribbons over a wire fence in front of the U.S. Capitol.

In 1987, 28 construction workers were killed when an apartment complex being built in Bridgeport, Connecticut, suddenly collapsed.

In 1998, James Earl Ray, who confessed to assassinating the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and then insisted he'd been framed, died at a Nashville, Tennessee, hospital at age 70.

past six years of Trump's personal and business tax returns and related documents. The department is reviewing that request.

Matt Dallek, a political historian at the George Washington University, said Trump's lawsuit may be politically savvy but not likely to succeed given Congress's power to oversee the executive branch.

"It's a messaging document that doubles down on Trump's notion that this is all a witch hunt," Dallek said.

The president is following the standard practice of trying to delay and stall, said University of Virginia law professor Saikrishna Prakash.

"What's different here is that Congress has subpoenaed a third autonomous vehicle testing lab at the University of Michigan. Software also is being developed so vehicles can differentiate between real obstacles and snowflakes, rain, fog, and other conditions.

But many companies are still trying to master the difficult task of driving on a clear day with steady traction.

"Once we are able to have a system reliably perform in those, then we'll start working toward expanding to those more challenging conditions," said Noah Zych, Uber's head of system safety for self-driving cars.

In some limited areas that have been mapped in three dimensions, the cars can function in light snow and rain.

LINES AND CURBS

2 Across the globe, roadway marking lines are different, or they may not even exist. Lane lines aren't standardized, so vehicles have to learn how to drive differently in each city. Sometimes there aren't any curbs to help vehicles judge lane width.

For instance, in Pittsburgh's industrial "Strip District," where many self-driving vehicles are tested, the city draws lines across the narrow lanes to mark where vehicles should stop for stop signs. Sometimes the lines are so far back and buildings are so close to the street that autonomous cars can't see traffic on the cross street if they stop at the line. One workaround is to program vehicles to stop for the line and creep forward.

"Is it better to do a double stop?" asked Pete Rander, president of Argo AI, an autonomous vehicle company in which Ford has invested heavily. "Since intersections vary, it's not that easy."

HUMAN DRIVERS

3 For many years, autonomous vehicles will have to deal with humans who don't always play by the rules. They double-park or walk in front of cars. Recently in Pittsburgh, an Argo backup driver had to take over when his car stopped during a right turn, blocking an intersection when it couldn't immediately decide whether to go around a double-parked delivery truck.

"Even if the car might eventually figure something out, it's shared space, and it's socially unacceptable" to block traffic, Rander said.

Humans also make eye contact with other drivers to make sure they're looking in the right direction, something still being developed for autonomous vehicles.

Add to that the antagonism that some feel toward robots. People have reportedly been harassing Waymo's autonomous test vehicles near Phoenix. The Arizona Republic reported in December that police in suburban Chandler have documented at least 21 cases in the past two years, including a man waving a gun at a Waymo van and people who slashed tires and threw rocks. One Jeep forced the vans off the road six times.

4 Deciding when to turn left in front of oncoming traffic without a green arrow is one of the more difficult tasks for human drivers and one that causes many crashes. Autonomous vehicles have the same trouble.

Waymo CEO John Krafcik said in an interview last year that his company's vehicles are still encountering occasional problems

Trump's campaign, Mueller said facts uncovered during the investigation — which also addressed the president's pursuit of a Trump-branded tower in Moscow while campaigning — didn't establish a criminal conspiracy.

"The fact is Trump was seeking to do business in Russia," Dallek said, adding that the president's been implicated in potential campaign finance violation, his New York-based charity closed down due to allegations of illegal activity and he's been accused of profiting from foreign governments through his Washington hotel in violation of the constitution.

"There's probably a half dozen instances where his private business concerns are connected directly or indirectly to his public responsibilities as president," Dallek said. "There are legitimate questions."

at intersections.

"I think the things that humans have challenges with, we're challenged with as well," he said. "So sometimes unprotected lefts are super challenging for a human, sometimes they're super challenging for us."

CONSUMER ACCEPTANCE

5 The fatal Uber crash near Phoenix last year did more than push the pause button on testing. It also rattled consumers who someday will be asked to ride in self-driving vehicles.

Surveys taken after the Uber crash showed that drivers are reluctant to give up control to a computer. One by AAA in March found 71 percent of people are afraid to ride in fully self-driving vehicles.

Autonomous vehicle companies are showing test passengers information on screens about where the vehicles are headed and what its sensors are seeing. The more people ride, the more they trust the vehicles, says Waymo's Krafcik.

"After they become more and more confident they rarely look at the screens, and they're on their phones or relaxing or sleeping," he said.

Rays stop a season-high four-game skid with a 6-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals

AP SPORTS WRITER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Mike Zunino returned from the paternity list and hit his first home run for Tampa Bay, a two-run shot that helped the Rays stop a season-high four-game skid with a 6-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Monday night.

Yandy Diaz, Brandon Lowe and Daniel Robertson also drove in runs for the AL East leaders, who scored three times in the seventh to come from behind against Brad Keller (2-2). It's the ninth time this season the Royals have lost after holding a lead in the sixth inning or beyond.

Pitching while appealing a five-game suspension for his role in a benches-clearing fracas with the Chicago White Sox last week, Keller held the Rays in check until giving up Robertson's tying RBI grounder and Zunino's homer to straight away center in the seventh.

Zunino, obtained from Seattle in an offseason trade, missed three games while on the paternity list for the birth of his son last Friday.

The 23-year-old Keller allowed five runs and seven hits over 6 1/3 innings in his first outing since hitting Chicago's Tim Anderson with a pitch two innings after the AL's leading hitter emphatically spiked his bat to celebrate a homer, sparking last Wednesday's melee that led to his suspension.

Alex Gordon, Hunter Dozier and Jorge Soler hit solo homers for the Royals, who have lost four straight.

Gordon and Dozier went deep for the second straight game, with Gordon connecting off Rays starter Yonny Chirinos in the first inning and Dozier giving the Royals a 3-1 lead in the sixth. Soler's solo shot snapped a fifth-inning tie.

Quinnen Williams about to fulfill a dream and his mother's last request

The defensive tackle could be the best player in the NFL draft

By RICK STROUD
TAMPA BAY TIMES

TAMPA — Quinnen Williams is a mama's boy. "I call it the favorite child," he says.

Marquischa Henderson Williams and the second of her four children were inseparable. He was the one she confided in when she was diagnosed with stage two breast cancer in 2005. When it returned in 2010, he was the last one to speak to her at her hospital bed side when she died at age 37.

Quinnen was 12. "She pulled me in and she was like 'Quinnen, you're going to be the one who takes care of everybody, you're going to be the one to like make sure everybody is straight I need you to do that.' "

Williams smiled as he recounted the story for an interview on ESPN. He has grown to be 6-foot-4 and 303-pounds. But the round face, the cherubic cheeks and the braces covering his teeth give him a child-like look when he speaks.

Stone Crabs squander opportunities in loss to Tarpons

Charlotte gets bases loaded in 8th, can't capitalize

By JACOB HOAG
SPORTS WRITER

It was there for the taking, but the Stone Crabs couldn't grab it.

In the span of two innings, Charlotte went from a bases-loaded situation with no outs only needing a run to tie to giving up five runs in the ninth.

Despite a strong four-inning effort from Stone Crabs' pitcher Brian Shaffer, Charlotte (6-12) fell 9-4 to Tampa (7-11) and are now 3-8 in their last 11 games.

"Those last runs are a bit irrelevant to me because you almost give it to us in that eighth inning," Stone Crabs manager Jeff Smith said. "We were battling, we've been battling all season trying to make things happen."

Dermis Garcia gave Tampa a 4-3 lead in the top of the sixth inning with a two-run homer to left-center field.

In the bottom of the eighth, Charlotte had its best chance to take the lead with bases loaded and no outs.

Charlotte Stone Crabs center fielder Thomas Milone (3) bats against the Tampa Tarpons Monday, April 22, 2019 at Charlotte Sports Park.

Hernandez and walks by Jim Haley and Tyler Frank loaded the bases for Garrett Whitley, who struck out swinging.

Thomas Milone then hit a soft ball to the Tampa first baseman, who threw home to just barely get the force out.

Zach Rutherford grounded out to shortstop for the final out.

"That eighth inning was a bit disappointing," Smith said. "Our at bats were very tentative at bats. We were put in a position to win a game and we did not take quality at bats. We had a chance to put the game away and do some things. We couldn't get a ball out of the infield with bases loaded and nobody out. You're not gonna win many games that way."

After squandering a golden opportunity in the eighth, reliever Alex Valverde gave up five runs, two of which came on a home run over the center field wall by Steven Sensley.

Moises Gomez hit his second home run of the season in the bottom of the ninth, but it was all for naught.

14 SEC players who could have breakthrough seasons

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Now that spring practice has ended, here's a list of Southeastern Conference players who are poised to break out this fall. Classes listed are their classes in the fall.

EASTERN DIVISION

Florida

Amari Burney, LB, Soph. — Burney, a converted safety, takes over for NFL-bound Vosean Joseph at the all-important "star" position in Florida's defense. The 6-foot-2, 222-pound sophomore can chase down ball carriers, run with receivers and blitz off the edge — the kind of versatility that will keep offenses guessing. Joseph led Florida with 93 tackles last season — nine for loss — and had five pass breakups. Burney could be even better.

Georgia

Demetris Robertson, WR, Jr. — This former five-star recruit started his career at California. He had four carries for 109 yards and no catches last year in his first season at Georgia but has won compliments from coach Kirby Smart this spring. The 6-foot Robertson has a great opportunity for playing time now that Riley Ridley and Mecole

Kentucky

Jamar "Boogie" Watson, OLB, Jr. — Watson will be Kentucky's main edge rusher this fall now that 2018 All-America selection and SEC defensive player of the year Josh Allen has left for the NFL. Watson recorded five sacks last year to rank second on the team behind Allen's 17. Watson capped a solid spring by recovering a fumble in the spring game.

Missouri

Jordan Elliott, DT, Jr. — This Texas transfer showed his potential last year when he recorded three sacks in the regular-season finale against Arkansas and was named SEC defensive player of the week. He followed that up with a productive spring and should emerge as one of Missouri's top defensive players.

South Carolina

Zacch Pickens, DT, Fr. — Pickens is an early enrollee who drew rave reviews this spring. Pickens was the nation's No. 1 defensive tackle and No. 8 overall prospect in his high school class according to composite rankings of recruiting sites compiled by 247Sports. He is South Carolina's most highly rated signee since Jadeveon Clowney arrived on campus eight years ago.

NEW YORK — The WNBA is nearly doubling its national TV exposure with a multiyear deal with CBS Sports.

CBS Sports Network will broadcast 40 WNBA games beginning next month when the season opens. The Minnesota Lynx vs. the Chicago Sky on May 25 will be the first game on the CBS Sports Network.

“Through our partnership with CBS Sports Network, the WNBA is joining an elite lineup of premium sports programming,” said NBA Commissioner Adam Silver. “We thank CBS Sports for making such a meaningful commitment to women’s basketball and for providing another platform to showcase the world-class athletes of the WNBA.”

The league, which will begin its 23rd season on May 24, also has a deal with ESPN to show 16 regular-season telecasts, including three on ABC. Last year, the WNBA had a strong regular season with combined average viewership across ESPN2 and NBA TV up 31% over 2018. The CBS deal is the latest in an active offseason for the WNBA with AT&T as a new marquee partner, new uniforms by Nike and a rebranding of the league with a new logo.

All-Star Sue Bird and the defending WNBA champion Seattle Storm will make six appearances on CBS Sports Network this season. That includes a WNBA Finals rematch against former league MVP Elena Delle Donne and the Washington Mystics on June 14.

The TV channel will use local broadcast feeds for now, similar to what NBA TV does for WNBA games. The upcoming NBA TV schedule of WNBA games has not been finalized yet, but nearly 50 games are expected to be broadcast — the same as last year.

“We are truly excited to partner with the WNBA, bringing the country’s premier women’s sports league to CBS Sports Network. This partnership is one of the biggest and most impactful women’s sports programming arrangements ever at CBS Sports, offering national exposure of 40 games per year,” said CBS Sports chairman Sean McManus. “This agreement 2018. aligns two great brands in the WNBA and CBS Sports. We look forward to working with the WNBA for many years to come.”

CBS executive vice president of programming Dan Weinberg said the WNBA was exactly what CBS was looking for to bolster its schedule.

“We are looking to partner with established brands that are growing with dedicated fan bases,” he said in a phone interview. “The WNBA checks every one of those boxes. (Playing in the) spring-summer lends itself to our programming schedule. We are clearly and obviously talking about the best basketball players in the world at the highest level. Associating ourselves with WNBA, it’s a great powerful established brand with popularity across the country.”

The sides are still discussing expanding the coverage to include features and other WNBA programming.

“It’s going to be beyond highlights,” said David Denenberg, who is the Senior Vice President, Global Media Distribution and Business Affairs for NBA Entertainment. “Whether it’s features we develop or CBS develops, we want to do more.”

It’s unclear how the WNBA will decide which games will air on ESPN or CBS Sports Network going forward after this year. The league didn’t seem too concerned.

“Suffice it to say we have enough games we think we’ll put together a robust schedule for everyone,” Denenberg said. “We’ll announce the CBS schedule, ESPN schedule. I think we’re going to well serve all our partners.”

Hurricanes rally past Capitals 5-2, force Game 7

By JOEDY MCCREARY

RALEIGH, N.C. — Jordan Staal scored the go-ahead goal and added an assist in the third period, and the Carolina Hurricanes beat the Washington Capitals 5-2 on Monday night to force Game 7 in their first-round playoff series.

Justin Williams scored an insurance goal seconds after the Capitals had the tying goal disallowed, Warren Foegele and Teuvo Teravainen also scored, Dougie Hamilton added an empty-netter and Petr Mrazek made 23 saves.

The Hurricanes scored three third-period goals in bouncing back from a 6-0 beatdown in Game 5 and prolonging their first playoff appearance in a decade by one game at least.

Game 7 is Wednesday night in Washington. The winner will play the New York Islanders in the second round.

Alex Ovechkin scored for the third straight game, Brett Connolly also scored and Braden Holtby stopped 31 shots. Washington — which won 10 road games a year ago on its run to the first Stanley Cup title in club history — went 0-3 on the road in this series after winning both regular-season meetings in Raleigh.

Staal gave the Hurricanes their first lead of the game at 3:51 of the third period, following a scramble in front of Holtby. Justin Faulk uncorked a shot from the point and Brock McGinn and Staal both poked at it, with Staal ultimately slipping it past the Capitals goalie to make it 3-2.

Then came the key momentum swing of this one — the waved-off goal that Washington thought should have counted.

As Evgeny Kuznetsov tried to tuck the puck under Mrazek’s pads with 9:26 remaining, Ovechkin crashed into the goalie. The officials waved it off, ruling that the Capitals’ captain interfered with Mrazek by pushing his pad.

Williams then put Carolina up by two goals 84 seconds later by tipping Brett Pesce’s shot past Holtby and Hamilton extended the lead with his empty-netter with 3:06 left.

By that point, the Capitals’ frustrations hit their breaking point, with Ovechkin receiving a slashing penalty and a game misconduct with 1:08 remaining.

It helped the Hurricanes that they got a bit healthier, with one of the three forwards injured during this series returning to the lineup. Jordan Martinook was back after a lower body injury kept him out of Game 5. Martinook left Game 4 early after his right heel slammed into the boards as he attempted a hit on Dmitry Orlov.

Another theme of the series was upended: At no point during the first five games of this series did the road team ever lead. Connolly ended that pesky bit of trivia early in this one by scoring at 5:06 of the first.

And Ovechkin’s fourth goal of the series — and his third in three games — put the Capitals up 2-1 with 4:48 left in the first when he waited for Jacob Slavin to slide past him, then beat Mrazek from a tough stick-side angle.

But they didn’t score again — and the Hurricanes kept pushing back.

First, Foegele made it 1-1 when he beat with the Whalers against Boston in 1991.

And Teravainen pulled Carolina to 2-2 at 1:56 of the second. Sebastian Aho swiped the puck from Jonas Siegenthaler behind the net and passed to Teravainen in the slot.

Jaguars' Marrone, Ramsey finally talk, share 'little laugh'

Jacksonville Jaguars coach might need to update his contact list after failing to reach star cornerback Jalen Ramsey

By MARK LONG
AP SPORTS WRITER

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Jacksonville Jaguars coach Doug Marrone might need to update his contact list.

Marrone said Monday he finally spoke to star cornerback Jalen Ramsey, who is skipping voluntary workouts to stay closer to home, and seemingly cleared the air. Marrone said last week that he reached out to Ramsey and didn't get a response.

As it turned out, Marrone had the wrong number for the two-time Pro Bowl defender.

It was the latest twist in a weeklong saga that included public shots from Tom Coughlin, Ramsey's agent and the NFL Players Association.

"Had a great talk," Marrone said. "He's training with his brother. He's in Nashville. He's spending time with his family. He said he's going to come back in the best shape he's ever been in and he's all fired up. That was pretty much the conversation. It was a good conversation. I was concerned, obviously, because I was texting a number I thought was his and he wasn't getting back to me.

"I couldn't figure out what was going on, so we kind of had a little laugh about it. Now I have the right number. He's always had my number, so it's good."

Marrone said he and retired NFL tight end Marcus Pollard, the team's director of player development, both had the wrong number for Ramsey and didn't realize it until after Coughlin ripped Ramsey and linebacker Telvin Smith for their absences. Marrone also said Ramsey had been in contact with his position coach, Tim Walton.

Coughlin, the team's executive vice president of football operations, criticized Ramsey and Smith during the team's state of the franchise presentation Thursday. He said "championship teams are dominated by selfless individuals who recognize that the welfare of the team must always be paramount to any other consideration."

"Success in the NFL demands struggle," Coughlin added. "Those who have everything given to them become lazy, selfish and insensitive to the real values of team. The hard work that many try to avoid is the major building block for the development of an outstanding football team."

"It's not about rights and privileges. It's about obligations and responsibility. And the question is, can we count on you? Doing things the right way all the time, we are what we repeatedly do. Excellence therefore is not an act, but a habit."

NFLPA President Eric

Winston reacted by saying the Collective Bargaining Agreement's definition of voluntary "is the same as the actual definition of voluntary and prohibits anyone from threatening players to participate in voluntary workouts."

Ramsey and his agent, David Mulugheta, responded on social media the following day.

Coughlin backed down a bit Monday.

"There's really no need to speak any further on that one," he said. "That was an open statement about my beliefs about what the offseason programs are about. That's enough. You're not going to get me to answer any more on that one."

Ramsey and Smith are the team's only players who didn't show up for the start of the team's offseason program. Marrone said Monday he still hasn't heard back from Smith, adding "he's probably busy."

he views the workouts as voluntary.

"I try to keep reminding myself that, and we appreciate the players that are here," Marrone said. "That's what you have to do. If you treat them like they should be here, then that gets tough. The NFLPA collectively bargained that it's a volunteer period, and those players have an option. And the ones that are here we appreciate and we're working with them, trying to get them better."

Nadal to face 63rd-ranked Mayer in Barcelona Open

Defending champion Nadal to face Mayer in his first match at Barcelona Open

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Defending champion Rafael Nadal will face Leonardo Mayer in his first match at the Barcelona Open.

Mayer defeated Marius Copil 6-3, 6-7 (3), 7-5 in the first round on Monday. The 63rd-ranked Argentine saved all five break points he faced in a match lasting more than two and a half hours.

Second-ranked Nadal, an 11-time winner in Barcelona, opens play at the clay-court tournament on Wednesday after a first-round bye. He is coming off a loss to Fabio Fognini in the semifinals of the Monte Carlo Masters.

"My personal opinion is that I played one of the worst matches on clay," Nadal said in Barcelona. "It's a reality. There is no need to hide it. What has happened has happened."

Fognini, the champion in Monte Carlo, will play either Nicola Pietrangeli or Federico Delbonis, who meet on Tuesday.

Argentine Diego Schwartzman, who had to go through qualifying after missing the deadline to enter the main draw, defeated Japanese Yoshihito Nishioka 4-6, 6-4, 6-2. He will play third-seeded Dominic Thiem of Austria on Tuesday.

In other results on Monday, Fernando Verdasco defeated wild card Feliciano Lopez 6-4, 6-3 in an all-Spanish match, Mackenzie McDonald of the U.S. beat Taro Daniel of Japan 6-2, 6-2, and Taylor Fritz got past Reilly Opelka 6-3, 6-4 in a meeting of Americans.

Sofia Kenin helps US beat Switzerland 3-1 in Fed Cup

Sofia Kenin and Sloane Stephens win matches to give the United States a victory

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Sofia Kenin and Sloane Stephens won matches to give the United States a 3-1 victory over Switzerland on Sunday in a Fed Cup World Group playoff.

Kenin, a late replacement for Madison Keys, beat Tímea Babos 6-3, 7-6 (4) to wrap up the match at Freeman Coliseum. The Americans advanced to the 2020 World Group draw, while Switzerland was relegated to World Group II.

The 20-year-old Kenin rallied from 3-0 down in the second set to force a tiebreaker and win her first Fed Cup match.

"I'm just really happy, and I really left it all out there on the court," Kenin said. "Sloane just said, 'You know what? Just fight. Leave it all out on the court.'"

In the opening match Sunday, Stephens beat Viktorija Golubic 6-3, 6-2. On Saturday, Stephens beat Babos 6-4, 6-3, and Golubic topped Keys 6-2, 6-3.

"Just to get back in the World Group is important," Stephens said. "We want to be competing, obviously, for another Fed Cup title."

The Americans, who won the 2017 Fed Cup, improved to 9-0 against Switzerland overall.

Williams didn't know if he was even going to start. He had played only 151 defensive snaps as a redshirt freshman. But on Thursday, he will be among the top five players to walk out on a stage at the NFL draft in Nashville.

If the Bucs had a wish list that could be fulfilled in the draft, it would likely start with Williams.

"It's tremendous," Williams said. "I look back every day almost and look at where I came from in a year. ... I was just like 280 trying to get bigger to play nose guard around this time last year."

It's not easy to get on the field at Alabama. You have to wait your turn, which usually means waiting behind a prospective NFL draft pick. Such was the case with Williams. He played behind Daron Payne, who was selected 13th overall last year by the Washington Redskins.

"After I knew Daron Payne was leaving to go first round in the draft, I knew it was my turn," Williams said. "I knew they were going to have to fill in that hole and I wanted that job, and I was determined to play that position."

Williams played it better than anyone could imagine. He had seven sacks and 18.5 tackles for loss in 623 defensive snaps. That earned him All Southeastern Conference and first-team All-America honors. He received the Outland Trophy for the nation's best interior defensive lineman.

Even so, NFL teams are slow to embrace one-year starters in the draft. There is generally too much risk involved. How do you know if that season will become the outlier when they get to the next level?

But the league is changing. The game is changing. They don't need 325-pound mounds of run stuffer to clog the middle. Offenses in the NFL are about speed and quickness. Quarterbacks don't hold onto the ball. Running backs and receivers are testing the perimeters.

The most valuable defensive player in the NFL last season was Rams defensive tackle Aaron Donald, who used his quickness and to penetrate and disrupt the game. He led the league with 20.5 sacks.

"Just playing under Coach (Nick) Saban, we really don't look at the rat poison of the media, the different mock drafts basically," Williams said. "... I'm going to keep doing the little things during training. I'm going to keep paying attention to detail and being disciplined.

"I didn't know I would end up here. I didn't know until Coach Saban told me like a week after the national championship game that I was going to up in the NFL draft."

Whatever doubts remained, Williams ended them at the NFL scouting combine in Indianapolis in February.

He ran a 4.83 40-yard dash, the fastest time for a 300-pounder in the combine for about a decade, after downing four double-stuffed Oreos.

Nineteen teams had Williams as their highest-rated player in the draft, according to a poll conducted by NFL Network's Charley Casserly.

"When I was done evaluating the tape, (I) thought he was the best defensive player in all of college football this year," ESPN draft analyst

Todd McShay said. "The power that he has in addition to that quick first step, hand usage and finishing and then showing up in big games. When they needed him the most he was there — LSU, Georgia, the playoffs. Until he injured his hand, which he's had repaired, he was the most dominant player in the College Football Playoff and the SEC Championship Game. So, I struggled with it, but I went with Quinnen just because I could sleep better at night knowing that I got the better football player."

Clearly, the Bucs plan to move ahead without six-time Pro Bowl defensive tackle Gerald McCoy, whose $13 million salary for this season is not guaranteed and is expected to be either traded or released. Who better to pair with defensive tackle Vita Vea for the next four years?

"I know a lot of guys in front of me who were from where I'm from who were way better than me, had way more athletic ability, way more talent," Williams said. "Even my brother (Quincy), way more talent than me, way faster, way stronger, way bigger, but didn't have the same opportunity that I have."

Already, that opportunity has allowed him to see the country as he has traveled to meet with teams. He's been training in Calabasas, Calif. He's visited San Francisco and New York. Earlier this month, he met with the Bucs in Tampa Bay.

Even though his mother would've been against the idea, Williams recently added some tattoos to his arm: two breast cancer ribbons and an angel with wings wearing a No. 92 jersey.

The favorite child is about to keep everybody straight.

Rays journal: Daniel Robertson won't play the excuse game

Infielder looks to break his slump with execution, not explanations

By ERNEST HOOPER
TAMPA BAY TIMES

ST. PETERSBURG — Rays infielder Daniel Robertson has gotten off to a tough start offensively, enduring an 0-for-21 slide. But he has now hit safely in three games, including a two-run double Sunday that gave the Rays an early 2-0 lead against the Red Sox.

Robertson said he could explain his struggles, but he's focusing on simply improving. "You ever been to CVS? You ever get a receipt from CVS and how long they are? I can give you a list like that of excuses of why I've had early season struggles," Robertson said. "Right now I'm just going to battle through and keep progressing, working."

Robertson quickly added that he's more concerned about the team's performance than his individual efforts. "Obviously, we just got swept, and that's what's more important," he said. "As a team, we need to get back on board and play good baseball. We've got to come back and play good baseball and keep it together. It's a long season personally, long season for the team. We've been tested early in the season, and we'll have to see how we bounce back."

Meadows' status remains uncertain. The Rays did not release additional information on the status of outfielder Austin Meadows after Sunday's loss to the Red Sox, but a thumb injury has created a huge question mark for one of the team's top offensive players so far this season.

Meadows was set to see a hand specialist Sunday afternoon after injuring his right thumb sliding into third on a triple during Saturday's game.

Tampa Bay placed Meadows on the 10-day injured list Sunday morning.

"They saw some damage, but they don't know how bad it is," Meadows said. "We'll see where we're at later today."

"I slid into third kind of awkwardly. I think I put my right hand down ... and the thumb kind of jammed into the base. It was just kind of a freak accident. It didn't feel too good."

Meadows' loss would be significant if he's out for an extended period. He was named the American League player of the week on April 15 and going into Sunday was leading the Rays in batting average (.351; tied for fifth in AL), home runs (6; tied for seventh) and RBIs (19; fourth).

Asked before the game to compare Meadows' injury to the 2018 thumb injury that kept centerfielder Kevin Kiermaier out for more than two months, manager Kevin Cash said, "The way it was described to me was Austin's went straight back, whereas KK and somebody else's kind of went off to the side."

The Rays hit a franchise record four triples during Saturday's game.

Snell update

Don't look for injured pitcher Blake Snell to pitch in the upcoming three-game series against the Royals.

He's eligible to come off the injured list Wednesday and while Cash said the ace left-hander is progressing nicely, he'll have a couple of more throwing sessions on the side before returning to action.

"Blake felt great," Cash said. "His exact quote was it bothered him more walking than it does throwing off a mound, which is a good sign. So I think he's slated to play catch in a couple more days, probably have another bullpen and then we'll figure out where we're going to put him back in."

Snell broke the fourth toe on his right foot in a freak accident in his bathroom at home.

Abreu HR, 5 RBIs helps White Sox crush Orioles 12-2

BALTIMORE (AP) — José Abreu homered and drove in five runs, James McCann had a homer and four RBIs and Chicago White Sox beat the bumbling Baltimore Orioles 12-2 Monday night.

McCann's three-run drive off David Hess (1-4) highlighted a four-run fifth inning, and Abreu's shot with a man on sparked a four-run seventh against Tanner Scott.

Abreu also had an RBI single in the fifth and singled in two runs during a four-run eighth.

The rebuilding Orioles have lost four straight, fell to 1-10 at home and drew just 8,555 — their fifth time under 10,000 at Camden Yards this season.

Their youth and inexperience was on full display in this defeat: Shortstop Richie Martin committed two errors; Renanto Núñez killed a potential uprising by getting picked off third base with the bases loaded; Pedro Severino had a passed ball during Chicago's pivotal fifth inning; and Miguel Castro threw three wild pitches in the eighth.

Chicago White Sox's James McCann reacts after hitting a three-run home run against the Baltimore Orioles in the fourth inning of a baseball game, in Baltimore.

Catcher Jesús Sucre pitched the ninth for Baltimore, marking the third time in 24 games this season that manager Brandon Hyde has used a position player on the mound. Throwing sliders in the 65 mph range, Sucre worked a 1-2-3 inning.

Hess retired 12 of his first 13 batters before he fell apart in the fifth, when he walked two and allowed four hits — a home run, two doubles and a single.

Making his first start since 2015 — his last season in the majors before this year — Chicago left-hander Manny Bañuelos gave up five hits and a walk over four shutout innings. He was followed by Ryan Burr, who allowed a run in 1 2/3 innings, and Jace Fry (1-0), who permitted one hit over 1 1/3 innings.

Baltimore's runs came on an RBI double by Trey Mancini in the fifth and solo homer by Severino in the ninth.

HOME (NOT) SWEET HOME

This was merely the latest in a series of lopsided defeats at Camden Yards for the Orioles. They lost 15-3 to Yankees, 13-2 and 10-3 to Oakland and 16-7 on Saturday to Minnesota.

HARPER EJECTED

NEW YORK (AP) — Bryce Harper bolted from the dugout to angrily confront the plate umpire after being ejected

Monday night, and it took three members of the Philadelphia Phillies to hold back the enraged slugger.

Harper was tossed four batters after being called out on strikes by Mark Carlson to begin the fourth inning against the New York Mets. Harper became the first Phillies player ejected from a game since pitcher Justin De Fratus in 2015.

Harper was already miffed by a couple of strikes in the upper part of the zone when he was ejected while sitting on the bench.

Phillies manager Gabe Kapler came out of the dugout to argue, then Harper followed in a hurry. Harper yelled and pointed at Carlson over and over from close range, with Kapler repeatedly pushing him back his star player.

Bench coach Rob Thomson wrapped up Harper and third base coach Dusty Wathan blocked his path to the plate.

Kapler continued the argument as Harper made his way back to the bench and clubhouse.

Pitcher Gio González released by Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Gio González was released Monday from his minor league contract with the New York Yankees.

The 33-year-old left-hander agreed to the deal in mid-March. If added to the 40-man roster, he would have received a $3 million salary while in the major leagues and the chance to earn $9 million in performance bonuses: $300,000 for each start through 30.

González was 2-1 with a 6.00 ERA in three starts and 15 innings with Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre. Under the terms of his deal, he exercised his right Saturday to ask the Yankees to put him on the big league roster or release him within 48 hours.

New York had been seeking additional pitching after ace Luis Severino got hurt. Domingo Germán was inserted into the rotation, joining Masahiro Tanaka, James Paxton, CC Sabathia and J.A. Happ.

González was 10-11 with a 4.21 ERA last season for Washington and Milwaukee, which acquired him on Aug. 31. He was 3-0 in five starts for the Brewers down the stretch.

Shaffer was solid on the mound, pitching four innings and allowing no earned runs on two hits with five strikeouts. Shaffer has now gone three appearances (9 2/3 innings) without allowing an earned run and has only given up five hits.

"He started as a reliever and we were able to get him out of a relief role with multiple innings there," Smith said. "The big thing for him is he's gonna attack the zone, not gonna walk a lot of guys."

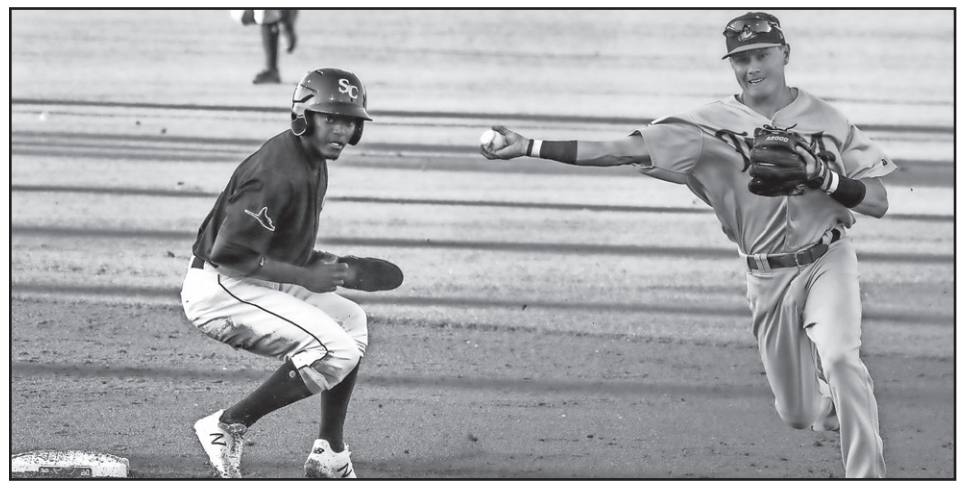

"He had a good base of pitches today. He threw a really good mix of slider, curveball changeup. He had a good mix. He pitched ahead of the counts which really helped him. He got into two-strike counts and put away pitchers."

Tennessee's starting left tackle. The early enrollee spent spring practice working with the first-team offensive line. Tennessee signed two five-star offensive tackle prospects by adding Morris and Darnell Wright, who won't arrive on campus until this summer. It wouldn't be a surprise if both end up starting.

Vanderbilt

Riley Neal, QB, Sr. — Neal started 32 games at Ball State before heading to the SEC as a graduate transfer. He is competing with Deuce Wallace for the right to replace four-year starter Kyle Shurmur as Vanderbilt's starting quarterback. Neal split first-team reps with Wallace during spring practice.

WESTERN DIVISION

Alabama

LaBRYAN RAY, DE, Jr. — Ray could be the Crimson Tide's next breakout defensive lineman. The former five-star recruit had 39 tackles and 2½ sacks last season and is a likely starter opposite Raekwon Davis.

Alabama's defensive line must replace All-America tackle Quinnen Williams and AP second-team all-SEC end Isaiah Buggs.

Arkansas

Trey Knox, WR, Fr. — This 6-5 freshman should provide an immediate impact for an Arkansas offense that needs more weapons with the Razorbacks coming off a 2-10 season. In the spring game, Knox caught three passes for 57 yards, including a 45-yard touchdown.

Auburn

Seth Williams, WR, Soph. — The 6-3 Williams emerged as a playmaker his freshman season and appears poised for an even bigger role this year following the departures of Ryan Davis and Darius Slayton. Williams was the offensive most valuable player of the spring game, with four catches for 103 yards and two touchdowns.

LSU

Derek Stingley JR., CB, Fr. — Stingley should continue LSU's tradition as Defensive Back U. The former five-star recruit will enter August camp as LSU's No. 1 punt returner and will compete with sophomore Kelvin Joseph for a starting cornerback spot opposite Kristian Fulton. He picked off a pass in the spring game.

MISSISSIPPI

Elijah Moore, WR, Soph. — Moore managed to get considerable playing time during his freshman season as part of a loaded group of receivers that included A.J. Brown, D.K. Metcalf and DaMarkus Lodge. Now those guys are gone and Moore will be one of the Rebels' main options.

MISSISSIPPI STATE

Erroll Thompson, LB, Jr. — Thompson was very good last season and delivered 87 tackles, but he was a little overshadowed on a defense that also had potential first-round draft picks Montez Sweat and Jeffery Simmons.

Now that Sweat and Simmons have departed, Thompson has a chance to move into the SEC's elite as a leader of the Bulldogs' defense.

TEXAS A&M

Bobby Brown III, DL, Soph. — Brown played well enough in a reserve role as a freshman to be named the Aggies' top defensive newcomer at the team's banquet. The 6-4, 325-pound Brown figures to take on a much larger role this fall. Brown and returning starter Justin Madubuike should give Texas A&M a dynamic tandem at defensive tackle.

Wilmer Font (1-0) struck out the only batter he faced to get the win. Emilio Pagan pitched the ninth for his first career save.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Royals: LHP Danny Duffy (left shoulder impingement syndrome) is expected to rejoin the rotation Friday night. "He's been one of our better starters over the last couple years, and when he's healthy we know what type of pitcher he is," manager Ned Yost said.

Rays: RF Austin Meadows, who's on the injured list with a sprained right thumb, will be shut down for 10 days and hopes he will be ready to return in three to four weeks. "Let the swelling go down and after that see where we're at," Meadows said.

ON THE MEND

Rays LHP Blake Snell (fractured right fourth toe) had a light mound session totaling eight pitches in advance of an upcoming full bullpen. The 2018 AL Cy Young Award winner did not take part in defensive drills with the other pitchers. Snell was hurt moving a decorative stand in the bathroom of his home on April 14.

UP NEXT

Royals RHP Homer Bailey (2-1) will start the middle date of a three-game series. The Rays will use an opener, but were waiting until after Monday's game to announce which reliever would take the mound first.

Pirates continue winning ways against Lemon Bay

By STEPHEN MCKAY
SUN CORRESPONDENT

After Friday night's game was rained out in Port Charlotte, Monday's game at Lemon Bay was the only time this season these non-district rivals will have a chance to do battle.

Unfortunately, for the Manta Rays, that leaves them without a chance to get even after dropping a 9-3 contest at Jack Llewellyn field.

With a five-run hitless rally in the opening inning, Port Charlotte had Lemon Bay on the ropes from the start. While Rays starter Matt Lintz struggled with his control, he also had little help from his defense as three errors were committed behind him during a 35-minute opening half inning.

The first run crossed after the Pirates cleanup hitter Jordan Delcolle was hit by a pitch. The bases were loaded in front of him as a result of three walks. A pair of outfield errors fueled the next four runs. Ryan Lomski picked up the only other RBI of the inning when he walked with the bases full. "We were flat tonight. We've been preaching for the last few weeks about having good energy and when we have that we play well," said Rays coach Dan Flaherty. "When we don't, this is often the result. I'm not overly concerned. I know us to bounce back." Lemon Bay managed to get one back in the bottom of the first. Zach Sparby grounded into a fielder's choice that plated Tyler Intihar who opened the frame with a single. Tyler Zylstra pitched a solid game for the Pirates. He went 5 1/3 innings to earn the victory. "My main goal was to keep my composure and pitch to contact and let my defense do their work," said Zylstra. "My curve ball wasn't working early, but my change up was strong tonight. We started throwing a slider and that worked well too. I was getting ahead of batters mixing in the slider and change up."

The Manta Rays, which clinched the top seed in District 5A-12 last Thursday, were hoping to cool down a streaking Pirates team. Port Charlotte struggled through a three-game losing streak in mid-March. They have won of nine of their last 10 since.

The Pirates presently sit second in their district, but still have a pair of important games against Ida Baker before the final seeds are determined. All district tournaments begin the week of May 6.

The Manta Rays have just five more games remaining on their regular-season schedule. All but one, are on the road (vs. North Fort Myers on April 30). Next up, they travel to Bradenton to meet IMG Academy Gray at 7 p.m. on Wednesday.

The Pirates play the home-and-home with Ida Baker beginning tonight at 7 p.m.

'From the heart': Mullin's decision to leave St. John's

'Straight from the heart and gut': Chris Mullin knew it was time to leave St. John's

By DOUG FEINBERG
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

NEW YORK — Chris Mullin felt in his heart it was time to leave St. John's.

He stepped down this month after four years as coach at the school where he starred in the 1980s.

"It got to a certain point for me to do something different," Mullin told The Associated Press on Monday. "Straight from the heart and gut, when you do it that way it's natural. It wasn't anything but that. I'm excited to do some different things."

Mullin had two years remaining on his contract. At the time he resigned, he mentioned a "recent personal loss." Older brother Roddy died in March after battling cancer for years.

The 55-year-old coach was coming off his first winning season and only trip to the NCAA Tournament, an accomplishment he described as a "lifetime memory." The Red Storm lost to Arizona State in a First Four game last month.

"I think it's all about timing. I had four great years," Mullin said. "It was time to do something different. It's a lot of work, it's time-consuming. We grew each year. Last year we had incredible success from where we came from. We had steady progress each year, which was hard to do."

Mullin was happy with the Red Storm's recent hiring of Mike Anderson, who was announced as the new coach Friday after he was fired at Arkansas last month.

"He's a great selection. He's got a great track record, I got friends that know him," the Hall of Famer said. "Some of my friends who played at Arkansas know him well. He's a class guy, great fit. He'll do a good job." Mullin holds no ill-will toward St. John's. "That place and I go back to when I was 10 years old with coach (Lou) Carnesecca," he said. "It will continue. I met my wife there. It's beyond my playing and coaching there. It's a special place for me and always will be."

Mullin is now an ambassador for USA Basketball's 3-on-3 initiative, with the game to debut at the 2020 Tokyo Olympics. He's been associated with USA Basketball for nearly 40 years, playing on the 1984 and 1992 Olympic teams. Now he's excited to be talking up the schoolyard game that's in his blood.

"It's something we've always done in the parks and it's the core of basketball," Mullin said. "It really emphasizes the fundamentals of the game."

Mullin knew which of his three Dream Team teammates from 1992 he would want on a 3-on-3 team.

"Larry, Magic and Michael," Mullin said smiling.
