Range scores big on back-to-back missions

By Jim Bennett

When Kwajalein Missile Range personnel prepared for three missions to be conducted over eight days this past week, they set a record.

"This was unprecedented in recent history," said Lt. Col. Ray Jones, KMR commander. "It reflects on our people, and the range met the challenge."

Thursday's Minuteman III mission was canceled Wednesday at around 1 p.m., but not before most of the preparations had been made as of T-27 hours.

In short, the scheduling of three missions meant long hours and hard work on the part of range personnel to prepare communications, telemetry, optics, and sensor equipment for three different missions. Normally, the range institutes a 14-day "configuration freeze" on equipment prior to a mission. In this case, technicians had less than four days between the first two missions and two days before the last.

The first mission, FTM-O2, called for tracking an Air Force Minuteman III ballistic missile, launched from Vandenberg Air Force Base May 24, Kwaj time. The mission was "not nominal," something went wrong, and technicians had to scramble in seconds to meet the customer's needs, Jones said.

"We collected all the data. Our people had to make real-time decisions. It's high stress," he added.

Service focuses on 'Forgotten War'

By Jim Bennett

Residents sat silent as waves crashed on the shore near the flagpoles, and Capt. John Eggert, KMR test director, told the story of Pfc. Herbert Pililaau, Medal of Honor winner and casualty of the Korean War.

Defending his platoon on Heartbreak Ridge, "Herbert closed with the foe in hand-to-hand combat, courageously fighting with his trench knife and bare fists until finally overcome and mortally wounded," Eggert said. "When the position was retaken, over 40 of the enemy was found in front of Pfc. Herbert Pililaau ... Herbert Pililaau's story serves as a strong reminder that freedom is not free."

The theme echoed throughout the Memorial Day service Monday, as residents paid tribute to American men and women who gave their lives in the defense of the country, but especially those of the Korean War. Known as "the Forgotten War," the conflict began 50 years ago this month.

"The Forgotten War' [is] a war that must never be forgotten," said Col. Gary K. McMillen, USAKA/KMR commander.

"Sandwiched between the great U.S. and Allied victory of World War II and the unpopular but highly publicized Vietnam War, Korea was a conflict most Americans wanted to forget," McMillen said. "After all, the war ended in a stalemate, with the North remaining communist and the South struggling toward democracy."

The Higgins boat was the linchpin in more than 30 amphibious landings in World War II. A new museum in New Orleans is dedicated to these D-Day invasions.

New museum highlights World War II D-Days

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department is taking advantage of the opening of the National D-Day Museum in New Orleans to honor World War II veterans.

Officials expect 7,000 to 15,000 World War II veterans to attend opening ceremonies June 6, the 56th anniversary of the Allied invasion of Normandy.

The museum, a private, nonprofit organization affiliated with the University of New Orleans' Eisenhower Center, will highlight all the D-Days of World War II. Officials said there were 34 opposed amphibious landings in Africa, the Mediterranean, and the Pacific during the war.

"I think the D-Day events of World War II ... (are) a great way for us to focus on the contributions of what Tom Brokaw refers to as our 'greatest generation,'" said Charles Cragin, acting assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs and the DoD coordinator of the event.

He said it is particularly appropriate that this museum is located in New Orleans. The city was the home of Andrew Jackson Higgins, the inventor of the Higgins boat. His company built 20,000 of the landing craft and made the Allied amphibious invasions of World War II possible.

Jeramon non kom

"Jeramon non kom" is the Marshallese way to say, "Goodbye and good luck, friends."

Pat Cataldo departs Saturday, June 17, on Aloha, ending her third tour at Kwajalein after six and a half years. Her other tours were 1966-70 and 1976-83.

Pat has been editor of the Hourglass since 1993 and also was editor from '79 to '83. Before that, she wrote a weekly column and feature stories.

Reminiscing about her years at Kwaj, Pat recalled the days when the Hourglass was a daily ... there was no TV ... missiles were launched from Mount Olympus ... nearly 5,000 people lived at Kwaj ... the Ivey Gym was the Ivey Theater, with cartoons every Saturday afternoon, and the Rich and Yokwe Yuk theaters showed movies every night.

She revisited memorable events at Macy's: the "monkey pod riots" ... the highly successful visit of the fur coat salesman (customers stored their purchases at the reefer plant) ... and the week the Wig Man sold out.

She recalled when Continental Air Micronesia first offered scheduled air travel in Micronesia. She, husband Frank, and daughters Sue and Lisa hopped on board and went everywhere Air Mike went.

On another trip, she represented the Hourglass in the company of the world press to witness the removal of the Bikini people from their island in 1978, when it was found unsafe.

Finally, she remembered when Ronald McDonald really did come to Kwaj (and sold 3,000 super-burgers in three days!), after she had a wild and wacky idea for a Yokwe Yuk Women's Club fund-raiser.

Pat is off to Huntsville, Ala., to hold the world's largest garage sale of the "stuff" that has been in storage for years. She then plans to travel and spend time with Sue and family in Maine and with Lisa and family in Honolulu.

"Some of my happiest memories are of Kwaj, and some of my closest friendships have been forged here," Pat said. "Kwaj and Kwaj friends will always be in my heart. Yokwe kom to my Marshallese family and friends, who have added so much happiness to my life."

Did You Know?

It takes funds to have fun ...

In Fiscal Year 1999, the recreation fund spent $909 per resident at Roi-Namur for recreational activities and $507 per resident at Kwajalein.

University of Maryland goes stateside

By Peter Rejcek

The University of Maryland Internet campus just got a whole lot bigger.

Students seeking a bachelor's degree can now register with the University of Maryland stateside division for Distance Education courses at Asian Division rates.

According to Eve Cran, University of Maryland field representative, there are three benefits to this new development — lower costs, greater course selection, and an expanded specialization or major selection.

Previously, when Asian Division students could register for stateside courses, they had to pay out-of-state tuition fees, which are much higher than tuition for overseas classes. Now, Asian Division students may register for stateside, or Adelphi Division, classes at the same tuition they pay for Asian and European classes.

Currently, Asian Division students are charged $124.40 per credit hour, while Adelphi Division classes for out-of-state students are nearly double, at $236 per credit. In fact, in-state students pay $184 per credit hour — $60 more than their Asian Division counterparts. Each undergraduate class is three credit hours.

The real bonus for students is choice.

"The stateside division offers significantly more courses than either the Asian or European divisions," Cran said. "Periodically, students experienced some difficulty in finding a needed class on-line — either it was not offered in a particular term or it was already full.

AMC flights are rescheduled through June

The departure and arrival times for the AMC Saturday flights in June have been rescheduled due to the C-141 making a cargo flight to Kwajalein on Fridays.

The following Saturday passenger flights times are effective from June 10 to July 1:

- Hickam Air Force Base to Kwajalein: Check-in is no later than 10:30 a.m. Estimated time of departure is 12:30 p.m., with arrival at 6:05 p.m.
- Kwajalein to Hickam: Check-in is

"With greater options, the chance that a student will not find a necessary course is slim," she added.

For example, a typical Asian Division semester might offer as many as 50 to 75 classes. The Adelphi Division offers hundreds of classes, as well as more than one section of each class, each term.

Along with more class options will be a greater variety of majors.

"Most of the specializations offered through the stateside division are not offered through the Asian Division," Cran noted. "This opens up a lot more opportunities for students."

Students registering for stateside classes do not need to transfer their files from the Asian Division. Asian Division degree-seeking students may have their coursework evaluated by Asian Division academic counselors for Adelphi Division degrees.

Registration for the Adelphi Division fall term began Thursday, with classes starting Aug. 31. Cran said students must simply complete an on-line application confirming they are Asian Division students. They will then receive a PIN number that can be used to register on-line. Once confirmed in a class, students should visit the University of Maryland office at Kwaj to pay for the course. The registration process is then complete.

For more information, see the Adelphi Division Website at www.umuc.edu, the Asian Division Website at www.umucad.org, or the European Division Website at www.ed.umuc.edu. For further information, call Cran at 52800.

between 1:30 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Estimated time of departure is 8:20 p.m., with arrival at Hickam at 1:30 a.m.

Saturday flights are booked close to 100 percent capacity, so travelers are advised to check-in as early as possible. Passengers will be allowed only one carry-on bag, not to exceed 19" x 12" x 13". They should have a picture ID, a copy of their travel orders, and $4.55 or their meal card for a box lunch, if desired.

KMR personnel work through three-mission marathon

Following the stress of the May 24 mission, range personnel worked through the holiday weekend, preparing for a risk-reduction-flight mission in support of the National Missile Defense program. The mission included a new target test vehicle, which will be used in upcoming integrated flight tests. Beginning with simulations, to coordination with the Airborne Surveillance Tracking aircraft visiting Kwajalein, to collecting data for NMD, the mission went off without a hitch, Jones said.

For NMD, the mission gave technicians a chance to practice the skills they will use in the July 8 Integrated Flight Test-5, when they try to shoot down a similar target vehicle.

"This was a demonstration flight [of the target vehicle], but we also used it as a dry run," said Jim Hill, NMD site manager. "We do everything but fire the [interceptor] missile."

"The target vehicle worked really well," Hill added, noting the NMD team will be ready to go on July 8.

The range will be ready for that and any other missions that come along, as well, Jones said.

How do they pull it off? Careful planning and extensive risk assessment, Jones answered.

"We do a risk assessment on each mission and not just where the missile and debris will fall," he said, noting that range staff review safety and technical data before determining risk. They also review the schedule to make sure personnel are in top form.

"I want to know that range personnel receive adequate rest before the mission," Jones said. "You could stack a number of missions together, and if you're not careful, string someone along for 48 hours without a break."

Concluded Jones, "We're not going to put any missions at risk, we are dedicated to 100 percent mission success."

Students in grades first through third competed in a similar series of silly events Thursday.

July 4th should be a blast with fireworks display

By KW Hillis

Preparation for the Fourth of July celebration was among the items of discussion at a recent Consumer Advisory Council meeting.

A large fireworks display will highlight activities at Emon Beach. Along with the pyrotechnics, events will feature games for kids and adults alike, including the famed watermelon eating contest and the banana boat rides in the ski dock area.

DJ Neil "The Driver" Dye will spin tunes.

Food and beverages will be provided by Sodexo Marriott. Topping the menu will be five-foot-long barbecue sandwiches hot off the grill.

A required vendors meeting will be held 5 p.m. Tuesday at the Grace Sherwood Library Conference Room.

Block of food

In other food-related business, a second Farmer's Market — with a country fair theme, including cooking contests for pie, chili, and ribs — is scheduled for August or September.

Full meat counters

Ray Denham, Retail Provisioning Services manager, confirmed that chicken and meat items are up to normal stock levels.

Retail futures

The next Marshallese shopping day is tentatively scheduled for June 10, according to Kathy Valencia, RSE Retail Operations manager. In addition, special items for Father's Day, June 18, are being ordered.

Telephones will ring

Twenty-three new phone lines, along with three local dial direct lines for Honolulu, are slated to be added this summer. The additional lines should relieve the busy signals to Honolulu, according to Don Hornbrook, USAKA assistant chief of staff for Information Management.

Upcoming fun

The Armed Forces Entertainment band, "RAVIN," is scheduled to perform on Roi-Namur and Kwajalein, July 8-14.

Samoan circus entertains

By Peter Rejcek

Magic this good comes around only every 10 years. That's how long it's been since the Magic Circus of Samoa visited Ebeye and the Republic of the Marshall Islands. A capacity crowd on opening night Tuesday could testify that the performance was well worth the wait.

Visiting about a score of countries on this two-year tour, the circus has already been to Majuro and the island nations of Tuvalu and Nauru. After leaving Ebeye, the circus will head to Kosrae and visit the rest of the Federated States of Micronesia, and many other islands in the Pacific.

While based in Western Samoa, the performers hail from all over the world, from French Polynesia to Colombia and from Fiji to Mexico. But no matter where they're from, they all have one trait in common — the ability to entertain a crowd.

High school students dance the night away

Story by Bob Fore

Seeing a large number of people walking around on a tropical island in formal dresses and tuxedos could seem a bit surrealistic to those not in the know. But that is exactly what happened Sunday evening, May 21, when the Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School Prom was held at the Yokwe Yuk Club.

The theme for this year's prom was "Millenium 2000 Around the World."

Decorating required the combined efforts of students, parents, and various committees under the direction of prom chairperson Danielle Bellknap.

"When I looked at what still needed to be done Sunday morning, even after working all Saturday night, I said to myself there is no way that this will get done," said Tom Ferris, high school teacher and chaperone. "But, as usual, the kids ... [came] through, and the prom was a fantastic success."

This year's prom was attended by 104 people. Though the dance is officially considered to be the junior/senior prom, all high school students are welcome.

Both sides of the Yuk Club were closed to the public for the evening's festivities. Dinner included a sit-down buffet with salad bar.
