There's lots of good reasons to get it done

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month. I have to admit that I don't think about breast cancer very often. I probably should.

The American Cancer Society, in a report comparing data from a six-year period, projected more than 178,000 women would be diagnosed with breast cancer in 2007 and that more than 40,000 women would die from the disease. Of course, it also kills men, but not at the same rate.

In 2007, about 2,030 cases of breast cancer were expected to occur among men; with an approximately 450 deaths.

I didn't think about October being National Breast Cancer Awareness Month until I went to the radiology department for my annual, now-that-I'm-older mammogram.

Mammograms' aren't a lot of fun. But when you think about how this examination, which takes only a few minutes to complete, could provide early identification of a killer disease, hey, it's a no brainer.

According the National Breast Cancer Awareness Month Website, mammography is the best available method to detect breast cancer early.

Virginia Mack performed my mammogram, painlessly. While we talked, she reminded me that it is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

What can I write that might con-

Some people haven't moved an inch beyond it

Because of my job, I read a lot of magazines and news Web sites, including many Internet blogs. I try to stay as informed as I can and also get ideas for my commentaries.

As I've read many of the blogs and so-called news sources, it has struck me that virulent anti-Semitism and hatred of Israel is alive and well in the world, or at least in the cyber world.

It comes from many sources. It's not just Arabs whom you could expect to harbor hatred given the trouble in the Middle East.

The Way I See It

Nobody is surprised that Mahmoud Ahmadinejad spouts venom calling for the destruction of Israel.

But it's not just radicals and the Neo-Nazi crazies who get in on the 'hate-the-Jews' act.

Many seemingly 'normal' Europeans and Americans are the most vicious of the lot.

Just last week, a well-known 'mainstream' American columnist, TV commentator and author, said during a radio interview

To whoever decided to no longer allow bike parking at the Dock Security Checkpoint near the Bank of the Marshall Islands. It is a huge inconvenience to hundreds of commuters as well as many residents who live near the parking area and are awakened daily. There is also insufficient lighting at the location.

To personnel and departments abusing use of government vehicles by taking passengers to and from the airport, running personal errands, driving to the Café Pacific for lunch and numerous other violations.

Telephone operators will go away Nov. 1

Hourglass reports

At 12:01 a.m. on Nov. 1 a service that has been provided since Kwajalein first became a military install will be gone. That's the day the telephone operators go away.

"There have been telephone Operators here ever since Kwajalein became a military facility," said Ron Gamble, Kwajalein Range Services telephone operations supervisor. "Until 1996, no calls could be placed from or to Kwajalein without the assistance of an operator."

Today there are two full-time and six part-time operators who answer the phone when you dial zero. The operators functioned as a directory assistants, but also helping distraught individuals. "The operators have often received emergency calls," Gamble said. "In some instances, the operators would provide the correct number to call and in some instances the operator would connect the caller to the appropriate emergency service. When the operators are no longer available, there will be a recording that instructs callers to hang up and dial 911 if there is an emergency."

Gamble explained the new plan, "People will need to use their telephone directories or electronic directories. Electronically, phone numbers can be accessed in Outlook or on the USAKA Business Web."

And if callers are looking for a number? They'll have to let their fingers do the walking, through the island telephone book. "The 2008 update of the residential section of the telephone book will be mailed to all residents by the end of December. Monthly updates of the residential section are posted on the USAKA Business Web and are available for the various organizations to print as needed. The updates to the business sections of the directory are delayed pending the budget approval that will affect many listings and instructions in the various sections of the phone book."

He added, "The service is being terminated due to budget constraints."

Kwajalein TV, radio will have service reduction

Hourglass reports

Due to a budget reduction and consequent staffing decrease, the Kwajalein affiliate of the American Forces Network is changing. Three immediate changes, beginning on Tuesday are: the morning radio show with Rich Feagler, currently broadcast from 6 to 9 a.m. each Tuesday through Saturday on FM 101.1, AM 1224 and on television on Channel 9 will be reduced to three, two-hour programs weekly; the Window on the Atoll, currently produced locally each week with debut broadcasts at 7:50 p.m. on Fridays and subsequent showings at noon on Saturdays, 10 p.m. on Sundays, 6:30 p.m. on Mondays and 6 p.m. on Tuesdays will become a twice monthly program; and the third change will be a significant reduction in Roller support.

The radio program will now be for two hours, from 7 to 9 a.m. each Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The Window on the Atoll will continue to provide local television production, but will now be produced with twice-a-month airing. The debut programs will air for two weeks.

The Roller will take on a new look and will be leaned-down to support fewer subject matters and almost no artwork.

Birthday and anniversary announcements will continue to be run.

Roller announcements will be kept to subject matters that have wide-spread interest and are not otherwise easily accessible. Announcements, such as those with specialized interest to a narrow focus group, will not be put on the Roller. The only lengthy announcements will be those pertaining to safety and or emergencies.

All other announcements will be short, with just the basic facts.

For information on the changes, e-mail drumhel_n@smdck.smdc.army.mil or call Nell Drumheller at 52114.

Rumor Mill checks into laundry machine charge

The following rumor was submitted to the Rumor Mill.

"I heard that the laundry facilities in the bachelor quarters aren't going to remain free of charge. Is it true that the free machines are going to be traded out for coin-operated machines?"

Jeff Halliday, Kwajalein Range Services public affairs officer, responded, "I checked with the KRS Housing Office and Logistics. There are no plans to make this change in the BQs."

Gates urges Turkey to exercise restraint in Iraq

By Donna Mills
American Forces Press Services

Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates told reporters Thursday he's concerned the pending congressional resolution regarding Armenian genocide "has the potential to do real harm to our troops in Iraq." He also called on Turkey to refrain from military action into Iraq, which he said "would create an international crisis and further undermine stability in Iraq."

Speaking at his first news conference with new Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Navy Adm. Michael G. Mullen, Gates expressed concerns about a congressional resolution that declares Ottoman Turks' 1915-1917 killings of Armenians a genocide.

President George W. Bush reiterated his own concern over the measure during a news conference Wednesday. He called on Congress not to vote on the resolution, which has heightened tensions between the United States and Turkey.

"It has the potential to do real harm to our troops in Iraq and would strain, perhaps beyond repair, our relationship with a key ally in a vital region in the wider war on terror," Gates said.

Gates said neither he nor Armenian Prime Minister Serzh Sargsyan raised the issue during their meeting this morning at the Pentagon.

He told reporters that the measure, if passed, could drive a serious wedge between the United States and Turkey that hampers U.S. efforts in Iraq. He recalled Turkey's reaction when the French parliament passed a similar resolution in 2006; Turkey responded by cutting off military-to-military relationships.

The U.S. war effort could suffer greatly if Turkey reacted similarly to a U.S. measure, Gates said. "I don't think the Turks are bluffing. I think it is that meaningful to them. I think they see implications in terms of reparations and perhaps even borders," he said.

Gates said he believes there's "a very real risk" of Turkey putting restrictions on use of Incirlik Air Base in the southeastern part of the country if the resolution passes.

He noted that 70 percent of U.S. air cargo, one-third of its fuel and 95 percent of mine-resistant, ambush-protected vehicles bound for Iraq transit through Incirlik. "So there are real consequences here, and I think people are beginning to think about that," he said.

The secretary said the issue boils down, not so much to the substance of the issue, but to timing and consequences.

Meanwhile, the United States and other countries are negotiating with Turkey to urge its leaders not to send troops across the border into Iraq to confront terrorists launching attacks into Turkey.

The Turkish parliament voted Wednesday to approve military action. The one-year authorization gives the green light for Turkey's military to move into the Kurdish region of Iraq to go after members of the Kurdistan Workers' Party, or PKK, who have been launching attacks into Turkey.

Gates urged Turkey to exercise restraint, citing the instability the action would create in Iraq and the region. "We recognize the harm and heartbreak caused by terrorist attacks across the Iraqi border into Turkey and are working with both governments to rein in the activities of the PKK," he said. "We recognize that Turks are being killed by this organization—innocent Turks, both soldiers and civilians."

The United States wants to help the Turks deal with the PKK, he said, and will pass specific intelligence it gets about the group to the Turks. "I think that if we were to come up with specific information, that we and the Iraqis would be prepared to do the appropriate thing," he said.

Gates said he plans to discuss the matter when he meets with Turkish National Defense Minister Mehmet Vecdi Gonul in Europe. "We are determined to work with the Turks in trying to reduce this threat to the Turkish people and the Turkish army," he said.

Mullen said he's encouraged to see Turkish and Iraqi government leaders addressing the problem. "Hopefully there can be some positive outcome from that engagement," he said.

women (skin cancer tops the list) and accounts for more than one in four cancers diagnosed in U.S. women is pretty compelling to me.

For some reason, to some people the subjects of breast cancer, mammograms and self-examination are embarrassing. I don't get that. Skin cancer isn't embarrassing; lung cancer isn't embarrassing; who's embarrassed about kidney or brain cancer?

Women, we have to get over it.

The NBCAM Web site lists the most common reasons why women don't get mammograms:

• "I don't need a mammogram because my doctor has never recommended I have one."

- "I've never thought about it."
- "I have no breast problems, so mammography isn't necessary."
- "I don't have enough time."
- "I have had a mastectomy (double mastectomy, radical mastectomy) and don't have breasts."
- "I don't have a family history of breast cancer"

Here, I'll list a few of my reasons for getting a mammogram:

- Laura (my daughter)
- Mark (my son)
- Leah, TJ and Austin (my grandchildren)
- Bob, Pat and Mary Jane (my siblings)

that America would be better off without Judaism and that Jews need to be 'perfected' by becoming Christians.

I can almost hear Adolf Hitler making such a statement in a speech to his Nazis.

Speaking for myself, I'm a little put off by the comment.

I'm a Christian, but Jewish blood is in my veins courtesy of my father. So, even though I'm 'perfected,' it still ticks me off a tad.

Since I have Jewish blood, had I lived in Nazi-occupied Europe, I might well have ended up in a place like Auschwitz.

Hatred of Jews and all things Jewish is rife throughout the world today and no one is more aware of that than the Israelis.

Some people in the world just can't help but get crazed and upset that a small nation, surrounded by enemies and with its back to the sea, has the audacity to defend itself and survive in the world.

I've seen many writings that say the existence of Israel is the cause of all the problems in the Middle East and is responsible for all the terrorism in the world.

It's unbelievable to me that so many people seem to think terrorism would vanish from the face of the earth if Israel didn't exist anymore.

Anyone who thinks the terrorists of the world would become peaceniks and embrace the brotherhood of man if Israel disappeared tomorrow hasn't been paying attention.

Given the hatred and the enemies they face, the Israelis started an innovation in 1981 called the Mavra Program.

Young Jews, male and female, between the ages of 18 and 28 from all over the world, are invited to yearly military education and training classes run by the Israeli Army.

Thousands of young Jewish people have attended the classes through the years.

The young people who attend the program are introduced to the Israeli Army and taught Israeli warfare tactics, weaponry, physical fitness and become familiar with the region's terrain.

The classes also include education in Jewish and Israeli history.

The object of the program, according to Israel, is to give the young people a sense of Jewish identity and to develop in them a much closer connection to Israel.

Israel does not hide the fact that as a small nation with a small number of citizens, it hopes the young Jews going through the program will decide to live in Israel, thereby increasing the population and also bolstering the ranks of the Israeli armed forces.

A few days ago, I was doing some reading on the Internet and came across an article written by someone whose way of thinking I can't understand. It's sad that many people share his view.

The person who wrote the article said that young Jews who go through the Mavra Program are just as indoctrinated in violence and hatred as if they had attended terrorist training camps.

I don't see how any clear thinking person could look at it that way.

A country whose very survival is threatened every day trying to instill a sense of heritage and connection to their roots in young people is a far cry from being indoctrinated in violence and hatred.

Yes, the hope is they might someday help Israel to defend itself, but who in their right mind could blame the Israelis for that? What country does not want to defend itself?

The writer of that article went on to say that all cultures and religions produce terrorists and that America has produced more than its share of terrorists. He says just ask the people of Vietnam and Iraq. He seems to feel that Americans are the worst terrorists in the world.

He couldn't be one of those 'blame America first' people could he?

It's troubling that many Americans seem to share that view.

Yep. Israel and America. How much better off the world would be without them, huh?

It's a sad thing that 62 years after the greatest mass murder and genocide in history, many people in the western world haven't been able to move an inch beyond the hatred and the stupidity that causes it.

Israel knows that and so they do everything they can to be prepared to defend themselves.

I'm sure they wish they didn't have to.

Former Kwaj resident compares past, present with photos, postcards

How much has Kwajalein changed in the past 50 or so years?

Looking into the memories of a former Kwajalein student, it's easy to see the transformation over the past five decades.

Bill Remick lived on Kwajalein from 1966 to 1968. He recently returned to the islands to see if reality lived up to his memories. While on island, he used his camera to capture the Kwajalein of today and compare it to the life he left behind.

"In my distant past I went to photography school, and sometimes I just can't shake the urge to go take pictures," Remick said.

"Kwajalein has a special hold on me, and I have attempted to collect all sorts of memorabilia from here over the years, old post cards being one of them," he said. Remick has a varied collection of postcards depicting a former life on Kwajalein.

"I collect post cards and WWII memorabilia from Arizona, where I currently reside, as well. I have also assisted a couple of author/historians, Dan Bailey and Mark Miller, in their research and writing of books on WWII shipwrecks at Kwajalein, and have written a handful of short articles myself on some of the wrecks.

"I purchased all of these cards on the Internet, and made copies for Leslie Mead [Kwajalein Range Services archeologist] to archive with other historical items."

Remick's interest in photography and history gave him the idea to recreate some of the postcard images. "While I was waiting each day for my buddies to get off work so we could go diving, I had a lot of time on my hands. I decided that it might be fun to try and replicate the post cards."

Remick attempted to find the same angles and lighting to create the same images. “This turned out to be harder than anticipated, as I had to find nearly the exact position the originals were taken from, and the approximate time of day as well, so the shadows matched. The latter proved very difficult, as it seems that the post card photos were taken at a different time of year. Who would have thought it would make a difference out here?”

Looking into the past, Remick recalled his life on Kwajalein. “I went to high school at the old George Seitz facility. Everybody went to school there at the time.”

Similar to teens of today, Remick spent his after-school hours making a few dollars. “After school, I first worked at the Teen Club, located next to the Family Pool, and later at the Small Boat Marina.” He said both jobs were fun for a 16-year old, “I got to meet a lot of interesting people.”

The money he made at those jobs he spent on the same things teens use money for today, “A cheeseburger was 50 cents and a whole plate of fries was a quarter.”

That was probably comparable to prices in the states at the time. “When I think of changes at Kwaj over time, most of them are small, almost silly things,” he said. “A boat rental at the marina and gas were free; there were four movie theaters, and watching the departure of the World Airways DC-6 charter flight was a big event, with no security hassles!”

Physically things have changed quite a bit, too.

“The biggest structural change over time was the demolition of the ZAR radars. The PBQ is just a smoking hole in the ground now, and I suppose before too many years there will be a new Terminal building, but overall, the island is pretty much the same, except the palm trees are taller and there are noticeably less vehicles.”

This wasn’t Remick’s first trip back to the islands, but it has created lasting memories and now some of them will be kept digitally.

“I had a great time on this trip, as I have had on a number of trips here over the past 20 years. I may be back again. By then I might even have discovered some more post cards to re-photograph,” he said.

SIX SIGMA
PERFORMANCE-BASED LEADERSHIP

Receipt Discrepancies Arriving to Kwaj Process Improvement Project : A Six Sigma team identified contributing issues regarding substitute items arriving to Kwajalein. This accounted for 52 percent of all discrepancies arriving on island. The key inputs (X's) were identified as communication of discrepancies in KEAMS, receiving documents with missing part numbers, lack of stock catalog updates prior to shipment, and unclear roles and responsibilities. These issues were addressed through the PIP Team and resulted in less than 10 percent substitute discrepancies arriving to Kwajalein.

Columbus Day Run draws 105 participants

By Bob Sholar

30th Annual Columbus Day Run race director, Kwajalein Running Club

The Kwajalein Running Club-sponsored 30th Annual Columbus Day Run had a great turn out with 105 (107 if we include two pet dogs) participants.

The race was held on Oct. 9, and was a one or two loop, 6.52 mile island perimeter course.

Eleven contestants took the 2-loop option covering 13.04 miles or approximately 1/2 Marathon. While toeing the start line himself, U.S. Army Kwajalein Atoll Commander Col. Stevenson L. Reed, gave the official start signal at close to 6 a.m. near Namo Weto Youth center.

It was a hot one this year, despite the advantage of some cloud cover.

Section winners at the one-loop distance were:

Female Open:	Molly Frazier	1:03:55
Female Masters:	Roberta Jones	0:59:54
Female Teen (13 to 19):	Loren Thomas	1:45:06
Female Youth (12 and under):	Leightyn Cossey	1:38:03

The fastest man of the day was visitor Robert Jahn competing in the Men's Open Division.

Jahn finished his first loop in 47:51 ahead of all one-loop contestants and then proceeded to win the two-loop distance in 1:35:23.

Jahn was followed under four-minutes later by Kwajalein Junior/Senior High School teacher Jon Jahnke in 1:39:40.

Jahnke improved on his time from last year by less than five-minutes to easily win the Men's Masters (40+) Division.

For the women, it was Stephanie

Los finishing two-loops in 1:57:29. Los is a Master but was the overall women's winner.

The Kwajalein Schools were well represented at two-loops with teachers AnnElise Peterson, Doug Hepler and Christi Davis participating; as well as several students.

Most improved among the adults was KRC Vice President John Lafferty. Lafferty ran one-loop last year in 56:53.

This year he ran two-loops; blasting through the first in 51:34, then cruising to a 1:53:48 half marathon.
