Dream of Havana

Havana remains unspoiled and vibrant. But how long will it take before it becomes just a tourism destination?

It's a little after midnight on my last night in Havana. The streets eight stories below my two-room Airbnb apartment overlooking Old Havana are quiet now. My mind is clear and the effects of the evening's half dozen mojitos and daiquiris quaffed at two of Ernest Hemingway's favorite Havana haunts, El Floridita and La Bodeguita del Medio, wore off hours ago. In a few short hours I'll be back in the United States. I do not want to leave.

Experience the Everglades in a whole new way

BY CINDY PIERCE
cpierce@floridaweekly.com

The 10th annual Everglades Bike Ride sets out from the heart of Everglades City on Sunday morning, April 2, giving cyclists the option of pedaling 15- or 62-mile "smooth" routes (on pavement) or a 27-mile "bumpy" route off-pavement and into the Fakahatchee Strand.

No matter which route you ride, it's a great way to experience what many consider the most unique part of Florida's landscape. Past participants have declared the SAG-supported ride one of the best bicycling events in the state.

Organizers focus on safety, environmental education and stewardship for those who enjoy and promote hiking, walking and/or cycling as a means of traversing the Everglades. Proceeds from registration fees will benefit Friends of the River of Grass Greenway, Smallwood's Store Museum and Florida's state and national parks.

The River of Grass Greenway is a non-motorized transportation and recreation corridor proposed to connect Naples and Miami. Paralleling the historical corridor of the Tamiami Trail/U.S. 41, the 76.47-

Sunshine Week, with clouds

“Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion ... or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press...”

— First Amendment,
United States Constitution

That damn First Amendment. It keeps getting in the way of shadowy government corruption. It keeps insisting on open public records no matter how you read it.

Perhaps President Trump and Florida Gov. Rick Scott should consider privatizing corruption.

A federal or state Department of Corruption could be highly efficient, especially if experienced private business owners run it: Wall Street bankers, health insurance executives, oil barons, used car dealers, casino operators, pimps and a loan shark or two. That should do it.

Wouldn't corruption then be a lot less costly and more productive than corruption managed by plodding and unimaginative government bureaucrats?

But let me put that question aside.

For a quarter-century I've thought about what the First means, and one thing remains clear: the First is hobbled when government officials try to hide their actions from citizens.

But they do it consistently, again and again.

“We have 1,119 exemptions to revoke open-records law and open-meetings law in Florida,” Barbara Petersen told me last week. She's president of the scrupulously nonpartisan First Amendment Foundation, based in Tallahassee.

“This year the legislature is again chipping away by proposing new exemptions. I have 150 legislative bills on my tracking list now, and only three or four that attempt to do something good, like protect IT research at universities or personal health information.”

This week, for example, the legislature will hear a bill that exempts any information about applicants to jobs as university presidents, provosts or deans — that's House Bill 351 sponsored by Rep. Bob Rommel (Dist. 106), a Naples Republican.

“They want to keep it secret until there's a list of finalists,” Ms. Petersen explains. “But frequently that's a list of one. And if that applies to university presidents does it also apply to city or county managers?”

Here's one that's even worse: Rep. Byron Donalds, another Naples Republican (Dist. 80), has proposed a law (HB 843) that would give local government leaders the right to meet two at a time out of the Sunshine — out of the public eye — to talk about public business. That means city council members, county commissioners, planning board members, members of school boards, hospital boards, and so on.

Maybe there's something in the Naples water.

Apparently it's just fine with Rep. Donalds if Commissioner Joe meets Commissioner Jack and convinces him to give a big county contract to his pal, Bill, or permitted development rights in low-density rural zones to his pal, Bud. And it's OK if Commissioner Jack then meets Commissioner Jane, and they all agree — out of the Sunshine — to hire Bill and green-light Bud with their majority vote on a five-member commission.

And it's peachy-keen with Rep. Donalds if nobody living in that county ever knows the difference: none of the 1.4 million citizens in Palm Beach County, or the 700,000 citizens in Lee, or the 350,000 in Collier or the 170,000 living in Charlotte.

Rep. Donalds' bill would undo 108 years of public records precedent in the Sunshine State.

In 1909, Florida passed its first open-records law, a simple little thing that would seem to have sufficed for all time: “All state, county and municipal records shall at all times be open to a personal inspection of any citizen of Florida, and those in charge of such records shall not refuse this privilege to any citizen of Florida.”

Whoever they were, those legislators had read the First Amendment and taken it to heart.

But that law failed to do the job — corruption generally offering a bigger payday than openness. So 50 years ago, in 1967 under Republican Gov. Claude Kirk, the state passed the first “Sunshine Law” requiring that people be informed of meetings or communications between officials — any officials and anyplace, including bars, boats, restaurants, rest rooms or official meeting halls. Such communications, legislators decided then, are public records.

You might have thought that would get the job done, finally. But no.

In 1975, The News-Press in Fort Myers sued the county administrator, Lavon Wisher, in a case called Wisher v. News-Press Publishing Co. — and not just for fun. She had refused to turn over personnel records that could tell the public about the backgrounds of county employees.

Lee Melsek became part of that case, which changed Florida law again. Now a retired investigative reporter, he spent 32 years at The News-Press using public records to put corrupt officials out of jobs or in jail, or to help victims of abuse from cops or at state hospitals, to name a few. With another reporter and backed up by his editors, he began pushing for the county's personnel records.

A judge ruled that Lee County, and by extension every county in the state, had to turn over those records when any citizen sought them.

“The government created the Sunshine and public records law because, it said, the business of government is the public's business,” Mr. Melsek once told me (I worked with him at The News-Press in the late 1990s).

“The public owns that government. Everything that government does should be open — transparent.”

If you're a red-blooded First Amendment American, you might just want to shout “AMEN!” and carry on proudly after reading that, since it couldn't be more clear.

But not if you love Sunshine in Florida. In that case you should start with this premise, now during “Sunshine Week” 2017:

If you have Sunshine — and we still do in the Sunshine State — somebody will try to take it away from you, sooner or later. ■

OPINION

For want of a nail

lilly@floridaweekly.com

Florida's State Legislature is back at work in Tallahassee. Their task is to craft the future year state budget. Our governor has weighed in with his own budget proposal. He would like to boost state funding to a new high, engineer a $618 million tax-cut for businesses and excise $1.1 billion in state spending, with hospitals taking most of the hit. It also would include squirreling away $5 billion in "rainy day" reserves should the state coffers unexpectedly require an infusion of cash.

In assessing the tenor of the upcoming negotiations, Max Dixon for Politico Florida writes, "The governor's plan is laced with potential landmines that will make portions of it untenable for legislative leaders, who will push hard for their priorities. That's not uncommon this early in the budget process, but without question, clear fault lines exist between the governor and both chambers of the Legislature."

That is something of an understatement. The governor and the legislature are already at war over the governor's most fervent funding priorities. They include $85 million to fund Enterprise Florida for business recruitment and $76 million to fund Visit Florida to boost the state's tourism.

The Legislature is not in the mood to rubber-stamp Scott's proposal. The lawmakers in the House first offered a bill to completely gut both agencies but may ultimately settle for something less draconian.

Those who support Scott's funding request for the agencies are quick to come to their defense. They include the state's most powerful, private sector stakeholders, and the special interests of agriculture, tourism and the state's major utilities. The Florida Chamber of Commerce is at the head of the pack.

It says its mission in Tallahassee is to lobby on behalf of the private sector for "an annual competitiveness agenda, referred to as the Florida Business Agenda."

The agenda is a "set of policy priorities that will help grow private sector jobs, continue to create economic opportunity in Florida and diversify our economy." The chamber's punchline? "Free enterprise works, but it is never free."

The chamber warns, without tax subsidies supporting job creation in the private sector and special interest perks to juice the free market, Florida's economy will suffer in the present and tank in the future in tough times.

They might as easily have argued, "For want of a nail the shoe was lost, for want of a shoe the horse was lost, for want of a horse the knight was lost, for want of a knight the battle was lost, for want of a battle the kingdom was lost." Woe to Florida for want of a nail.

It is the "never free" part of the chamber's declaration that is at the crux of the budget negotiation. Some lawmakers call tax expenditures for these purposes "corporate welfare," a tax giveaway of benefit primarily to for-profit ventures that don't need the help. Those supporting the funding say it is warranted if Florida is to keep its competitive edge, invariably offering a rosy calculus of the taxpayers' future return on investment, i.e., jobs, jobs, jobs.

It is a classic, perennial tug-of-war. Anytime a perceived excess of tax dollars is in search of a purpose, there is no absence of special interests and lobbyists who want to give them one. They round-up legislative allies and become a phalanx of rainmakers, pounding the drums and chanting the job creation mantra, orchestrating the necessary pow-wows, to inspire a downpour of tax dollars.

Dressed in the garb of the public interest and paychecks for people, they spin deal-serving rationalizations and cause/effect claims to get to "yes." But alas, for all the successes paraded and promised returns on investment, the state's failed hopes are buried in a boneyard filled with the evidence of misspent enthusiasm — enough that healthy skepticism is warranted.

This skepticism is in now in play in Tallahassee, although one might reasonably suspect it is the right perspective for the wrong reason. But that is just politics in a nutshell.

Some lawmakers take the long view: Might a better plan be to invest in human capital and build a highly skilled labor force to attract good paying jobs? Or how about investing in the kind of 21st-century infrastructure that attracts and stimulates world-class entrepreneurship? Sadly, it is hard argument to make.

Up-selling a long-term plan to term-limited legislators doesn't work well. Most lawmakers are far more interested in the short-term gratification of a ribbon-cutting and photo-op than waiting out an adolescent's graduation as an adult into the job market, or the information superhighway paving the way to high-paying jobs in Belle Glade. The shelf life of a politician expires long before patient capital invested on a 10-year plan comes to fruition. Alternatively, when the you-know-what hits the fan and all those promised, high-paying jobs fall short or fail to materialize at all, the lawmakers responsible are long gone from Dodge City and the robbers have taken the money and run. ■

richLOWRY

Special to Florida Weekly

At Middlebury College earlier this month, Charles Murray needed a safe space — literally.

In a significant escalation of the campus speech wars, protesters hooted down the conservative scholar in a lecture hall and then roughed up a Middlebury faculty member escorting him to a car.

The Middlebury administration commendably tried to do the right thing and stand by Murray's right to be heard, but was overwhelmed by a yowling mob with all the manners and intellectual openness of a gang of British soccer hooligans.

Sometime soon, we may yearn for the days when college students were merely childish and close-minded. If campus protests of speech begin to more routinely slide into violence, Middlebury will be remembered as a watershed.

First, there was the target. Charles Murray is controversial — mainly for his book "The Bell Curve," about IQ — but he is one of the most significant social scientists of our age. His latest book, which was to be the topic of his Middlebury talk, is "Coming Apart," a best-selling account of the struggles of the white working class that illuminated some of the social forces behind the rise of Donald Trump.

Second, there was the venue. No one has ever mistaken Middlebury, a small Vermont liberal arts college founded by Congregationalists, for Berkeley, and yet it has given us one of the most appalling episodes of anti-speech thuggery in recent memory. If it can happen at Middlebury, it can happen anywhere (or at least at Swarthmore or Bucknell).

Finally, there was the violence. The students who brought in Charles Murray framed the evening as "an invitation to argue," and in that spirit asked professor Allison Stanger, a Democrat in good standing, to serve as Murray's interlocutor. When chanting students commanded the lecture hall, Stanger and Murray repaired to another room for a live-streamed discussion. Protesters found the room and pounded on the windows and pulled fire alarms. When Murray and Stanger headed for their getaway car, protesters shoved and grabbed Stanger, who was shaken up and later went to the hospital, and pounded on the car and tried to obstruct it.

Political correctness has been a phenomenon on campuses since the 1980s, but now has become much more feral. The root of the phenomenon is the idea that unwelcome speech is tantamount to a physical threat against offended listeners. If this is true, it follows that dissenting speech needs to be shunned (in safe spaces) and attacked (in protests). Shutting down a speaker and literally running him off campus is, from this warped perspective, an entirely justifiable defensive action.

Of course, speech doesn't threaten anyone. The appropriate response to an erroneous argument is counterargument. And the free exchange of ideas always allows for the possibility that someone will actually learn something.

If campuses aren't to sink further into their current miasma of illiberalism, administrators will have to actively fight the tide of suppression. It's not enough to say the right things about free speech; they have to punish thuggish student agitators. Otherwise, college campuses may become increasingly unsafe spaces for anyone departing from a coercive orthodoxy. ■

Good girl! Jessie seems to sense that the family needs less stress

lindseyNESMITH
lnesmith@floridaweekly.com

with her morning and evening walks.

Is she growing up or becoming resigned to her fate? Through the mania of her first year, people told us she would calm down after her birthday, and miraculously, she has. It kind of worries me.

The truth is that the last few weeks we've been unable to take her to daycare because we can't find the time in our afternoon schedules to pick her up. Her daily rollerblade runs with James — his trusty method of exhausting her at the end of the day — are on hiatus because he hasn't found the time yet to replace the wheels she wore out. Even so, visitors can now enter our house in safety without a manic, 40-pound, liver-and-white furred missile launching itself at their waist in greeting.

Is Jessie actually becoming a good girl?

She shows no signs of depression. She still greets us enthusiastically as we wake, with unsuppressed tail wagging and a genuine doggy smile, as if she can't believe that she woke up and still belongs to us (a questionable fate until recently). As I sit at my desk, I still periodically feel fact, she napped inside it the other day and I forgot to lock it when I left. To my surprise, she was exactly where I left her two hours later, and not a single destroyed or even disturbed item was to be found in the house. For her morning greeting, a full-body snuggle suffices rather than an unauthorized wrestling match as we rise from the sheets.

If she's not depressed, growth and maturity become Jessie — and none too soon.

As I write this, she's at my side basking in the sun at 8 a.m. Two weeks ago, she would have been terrorizing the cats, counter-surfing for breakfast remains, patrolling the kids' rooms for a beloved item to destroy and barking out the window at the neighbor dogs that rise later than 5 a.m. Today, however, if all goes to plan she will occasionally lift her paws to my knees and wag her tail to alert me to the necessity of a potty break. I could not be more grateful for her recent transformation, and as long as she continues to show signs she's content, I shall remain so as well. ■

— It took a year, but Lindsey Nesmith might be turning into a dog person.

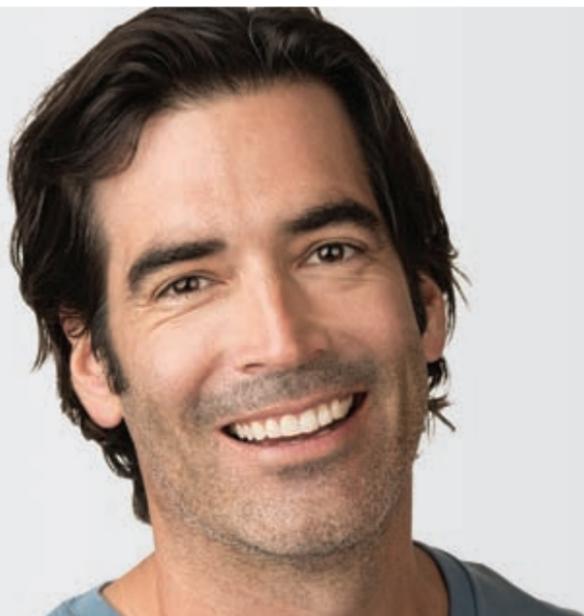

Anybody else feel the pressure? Spring has sprung and with the early arrival of blooms in the planter comes the crush of everything happening at once and needing attention now that only residents of a seasonal destination can feel. The holidays have nothing on the volume of things on our to-do lists during tourist season (or, thanks to lines of cars and people everywhere, on the time it takes to accomplish even the most mundane of those things). December at least holds the promise of enforced time off to bathe in Christmas sparkle, whereas right now I just want to lie down and take a long winter's nap until Easter is over.

Along with the fact that traffic should start to lighten soon, there's another bright spot at our house these days: Our dumb dog Jessie has slowed her roll. Whereas two weeks ago she still required frequent visits to daycare to expel extra energy, now she seems to be happy napping at my side for most of the day while I work.

This turn of events is weird and sudden, but much appreciated. Jessie has stopped destroying valuables and now sticks to the worthless knick-knacks the kids bring in the house. She can have them. The fruitless barking out the windows has stopped, and she seems content

Conservancy's 'Magic' raises $1.2 million

The Conservancy of Southwest Florida's 13th annual Magic Under the Mangroves gala dinner and auction fundraiser raised $1.2 million to support the Conservancy's mission to protect the region's water, land, wildlife and future.

"The funds raised from Magic will enable our biologists, policy advocates, education team and wildlife rehabilitation staff to continue their important work that will influence Southwest Florida for years to come," said Rob Moher, Conservancy president and CEO.

This year's presenting sponsors were Northern Trust and William Raveis Real Estate. Carol Dinardo, the proprietor of Washington, D.C.-based Windows Catering chaired the evening that was set to theme "Flock to Magic for a Bird's Eye View." The Windows culinary team spent several months researching and developing the menu and overall gastronomic experience. Members of the team, as well as captains, bartenders and waiters, traveled to Naples in advance to ensure a successful event down to the smallest detail.

In addition to Northern Trust and William Raveis Real Estate as the presenting sponsors, supporting sponsors of the 2017 Magic Under the Mangroves included AVMedia, Germain BMW, Gulfshore Life, Florida Weekly, NBC-2 and the Naples Daily News.

“I wanted to get here before it started looking like Miami Beach. The people have been charming and they’re happy to have Americans coming here and spending their money here.”

— Linda Lam, a resident of Boca Raton

A view of Old Havana from an Airbnb in Havana's Centro district.

HAVANA

“Would the world be in the mess it is if we were loyal to love and not to countries?” — Graham Greene

Five days ago, my wife, Janet, and I boarded a $135 round-trip, 8 a.m. flight from Fort Lauderdale to José Martí International Airport, Cuba’s busiest airport, some 20 or so miles outside of Havana. Forty-five minutes later, the nearly full JetBlue airliner touched down.

The purpose of our trip? To see Havana as it is now, as it was when my father first fell in love with city back in the early 1950s and before an influx of foreign investment turns it into just another tourist destination for Americans to escape the cold grip of winter.

After an hour waiting for our bags and making our way through customs, we exchange $700 just outside the terminal and get back a little more than $600 CUC (Cuban pesos), thinking that would be plenty for five days. It wasn’t.

In our taxi and headed toward Havana, it doesn’t take long to realize Cuba is not like other Caribbean nations. There are no shiny billboards with scantily-clad women shimmering in the hottest nightclub, no billboards announcing the latest and greatest beach resort or casino, no malls, no fast-food franchises, no pastel-wearing punks revving the engines of their convertible Italian sport cars.

But there is Fidel. And Che. And the signs of their decaying dreams are everywhere: paint-chipped pro-revolution propaganda billboards; abandoned and weed-covered Soviet-style apartment buildings; donkey-drawn carts hauling produce to the populace and, of course, the cornucopia of classic American automobiles sputtering and spewing clouds of noxious, thick, black smoke.

Then, all of a sudden, you’re in Havana. The streets are filled with people. Children are on their way to school. Some are waiting for the orderly traffic to clear. Many are waiting for a space to stand on overcrowded buses. Others appear to be just waiting.

People like Noel Merbille, 32.

Sitting in the café La Lluvia de Oro, not far from Old Havana’s Parque Cervantes, Mr. Merbille is full of hope. “Cuba is going to change a lot because of all the Americans coming in,” he says optimistically.

Despite the Obama administration easing some travel restrictions that had been in place since President John F. Kennedy announced an economic embargo 55 years ago, most Americans aren’t “officially” allowed to visit Cuba. Official visits are permitted for 12 categories including family visits, official government business, professional research, journalistic, educational, religious or humanitarian activities. Licensed Florida tour operators such as author Randy Wayne White’s Doc Ford’s Cuba Expeditions, Chef Douglas

Getting there

You can book your trip through tour operator packages like Doc Ford’s Cuba Expeditions, Drod Culinary Adventures or many others — or fly there on your own. JetBlue now offers direct flights from Orlando, Fort Lauderdale and New York’s JFK international airports.

Prior to take-off you’ll be required to possess a visa, which can be purchased at the airport terminal for $50. You’ll also be required to state the purpose of your trip. Travelers must meet one of 12 requirements for legal travel to Cuba. For more information on these requirements, see <https://cu.usembassy.gov/u-s-citizen-services/local-resources-of-u-s-citizens/traveling-to-cuba/>

10 Do's & Don'ts In Havana

Do bring at least $100 a day per person for the entire length of your stay. Finding places that accept credit cards is difficult and finding bank machines that accept U.S. bank cards is even more difficult.

■ Don’t drink the water! Drink only bottled water — and use that bottled water to brush your teeth. But don’t worry about drinking that daiquiri or mojito from local bars and restaurants. Their ice is filtered and safe.

■ Do bring Immodium, aspirin and other medications. You may not be able to get what you need if you get sick.

■ Don’t listen to Cuban taxi drivers or people on the street telling you about some “better” restaurant, “better” bar or “discounted” Cuban cigars. They’re likely being paid by the restaurant or selling you knock-off cigars.

■ Do engage with the locals. Cubans are friendly, love Americans and want to talk politics, technology and more.

■ Don’t expect to be able to share all your photos until you get home. Wi-Fi is rare and extremely slow.

■ Do take a 1950s-era U.S.-made classic car taxi. They’re more affordable than the modern taxis.

■ Don’t get ripped off on money exchange or change from purchases. There are two currencies in Cuba — the CUC and the CUP. The CUC is the Cuban peso and is about equal to one U.S. dollar. One CUC is equal to about 24 CUPs.

■ Do bring comfortable walking shoes and leave the high heels at home. Sore feet from uncomfortable shoes or twisting an ankle on uneven, broken or cobblestone streets is no fun.

■ Don’t bring more than $100 in cigars back to the U.S.

■ Do negotiate cab fares. If you take a classic ‘50s-style cab, ask how much to a given location before agreeing to the ride. No matter where you are in Havana, cab rides should never be more than $12 CUC.

■ Don’t be afraid to be out after dark. Cuba is one of the safest countries anywhere in the western hemisphere.

JANET C. KRZOS
Tributes to Che Guevara, Fidel Castro and José Martí are inescapable. This statue of Martí is in the Plaza de la Revolución.

Rodriguez's Drod Culinary Adventures and others fulfill the requirements of one of the categories. Many of the Americans we encountered said their real reason for visiting Cuba "was to see it before it changes" and appeared unfazed by Congress's failure to fully lift the embargo. While we checked off "journalistic activities," we also did a small part in helping the Cuban people by buying milk for people such as Mr. Merbille and his family.

Mr. Merbille, like many Cubans, knows the issues well. "When Obama was president it seemed like finally America was helping the Cuban people," he said, taking a long sip from his mojito. "Trump said he's going to continue that."

Noel Merbille and his girlfriend say a lot has changed over the past few years and that 10 years ago they weren't even allowed to speak to tourists.

Other Cubans aren't so sure. Lazaro Martinez, a tour guide in Havana's Chinatown, said there have been signs of progress between the two nations before, but it eventually fizzled out. "The feeling is that the U.S.A. is trying to stop progress," he said while cooling off with a drink at Centro Havana's El Patio de Areito. "Cuba needs to progress and wants to open its heart to the world."

Mr. Martinez said both the governments of the United States and Cuba need to get past their issues for the sake of the long-suffering Cuban people. "If nothing happens, the people will stay poor."

In Havana, milk is scarce and rice is rationed. "Salaries are still low, but 10 years ago, Cubans weren't allowed to even talk to tourists," Mr. Merbille said.

The Cubans who call the Havana districts of Centro and Vedado home don't have much, but they manage. Some sell fruit on the side of the road, others sell scratch-off Wi-Fi cards designated for use in one of the local parks. Only a few seem to beg for free handouts.

Tom Fleming, a social worker from Hackensack, N.J., said he's drawn to places in flux. "I came to Cuba because I wanted to get a feel for what's going on here," he said. "I wanted to see the architecture, the people, the art, the culture. What's really surprised me is the resiliency of the people and how they use creativity and ingenuity to cope with life here."

Places to eat and drink In Havana

This nightclub in Havana's Miramar district is a celebration of modern art complete with DJs spinning music by hip-hop artist The Weeknd, dance, tapas, drinks and more.

The original Sloppy Joe's opened in Havana in 1917. It was here that celebrities such as Frank Sinatra and Ava Gardner enjoyed the rope vieja sandwich. The landmark closed in 1960 and reopened in 2013.

Street art and graffiti in Chinatown.

Eating and drinking can be incredibly affordable although not always satisfying in and around Havana. State-run restaurants offer pastries, pizza, Cuban sandwiches (usually nonpressed and without pickles and quality mustard) for less than $3. Most of this fare rarely rises above average. Cuban coffee, Cuban beers such as Bucanero and Cristal, mojitos and daiquiris are also within the $1-$5 range.

Recently, the government has allowed citizens to open their homes and serve home-cooked recipes in restaurants called paladares. Inside these paladares, diners will feast on meals whose recipes had been passed down from generation to generation. These spots now not only rival the best Cuban restaurants in Miami and Tampa, but often surpass them

■ Fabrica de Arte Cubano — This is one nightclub you do not want to miss. Built in an old oil factory, the Fabrica de Arte Cubano is one of the coolest and hippest places in all of Cuba. It's part modern art gallery and part nightclub. Havana's hippest crowd flocks to this place several nights a week to drink, eat tapas, dance and view some of the edgiest modern art anywhere in the Caribbean.

■ La Floridita — A hangout of Ernest Hemingway and billed as the "cradle of the daiquiri," this bar/restaurant at the west end of Obispo is jammed with tourists, many eager to get a picture of the bronze Papa standing at one end of the bar. Get there early if you want a seat.

■ La Bodeguita del Medio — One of the most popular bars in all Havana and another one of Hemingway's hangouts. Over the bar, you'll see a large scribbled note: "My daiquiri in La Floridita, My mojito in La Bodeguita."

■ O'Reilly's — You might hear the coffee grinder from a block away and it never seems to stop. A good relaxing place to enjoy a light breakfast, a great cup of coffee and plan your day.

■ O'Reilly 304 — Mixology in Old Havana? Passion fruit mojitos. Mango daiquiris and a whole lot more. This modern tapas bar with one foot in the present and another in Havana's future gets packed at night. Make a reservation.

■ Mama Ines — This hard-to-find Creole spot is located on a small side street just a few hundred yards from where cruise ships dock. The black beans, rice and roast pork are sensational.

■ Nao Bar Paladar — Located at the foot of Obispo, Nao Bar specializes in seafood, but if oxtail or ropa vieja is on the menu, get it. You won't be disappointed.

■ Otramanera — Located on a side street and just down the road from Casa de la Musica in the Miramar district, this outstanding restaurant goes beyond traditional Cuban fare. Cuban fish curry, fresh red snapper served on a bed of smoked red beans and ultra modern décor, excellent service made this spot one of my favorites in all of Havana.

■ Paladar Los Amigos — A popular place for locals and located not far from the U.S. embassy, this nine-table restaurant has been called the best paladar in all of Havana. A familiar celebrity face — Anthony Bourdain — is on the wall. Order what he had, ropa vieja and the masa, and you'll be so completely satisfied that you may end up back there the next night. Make a reservation.

El Malecon, one of the world's most famous roads, is a popular hangout for Cubans and tourists of all ages. Many gather here at sunset for romance, music and to unwind after a long day.

In Old Havana, Cubans dress up for the tourists. Tourist advice: Don't take their pictures without giving them a buck or two.

Life in Havana can differ wildly from one street to the next, but no matter where you are, you always feel safe (unlike many third world countries).

"People have been really friendly and they're super proud of their country," Molly Leibowitz, a San Francisco resident said between sips of her daiquiri at the famous La Floridita. "But Havana is about what I expected. It has a ton of charm and a lot of poverty. I do feel like some of the poverty is swept under the rug a bit."

Linda Lam, a resident of Boca Raton, came to Havana as part of a tour, but her reason for choosing Cuba was because it had been off-limits for so long. "I wanted to get here before it started looking like Miami Beach," Ms. Lam said. "The people have been charming and they're happy to have Americans coming here and spending their money here."

At The Hotel Nacional, where Marlon Brando, Frank Sinatra, Ava Gardner and Lucky Luciano once stayed, tourists from Asia, Europe and the Americas watch the sunset over Havana's historic drive, El Malecon. A few hours later, they are cheering on the world-renown Grammy Award-winning Buena Vista Social Club. Some even get up and dance.

Similar scenes play out all over the city. Along the Old Havana streets of O'Reilly and Obispo, storefronts have fresh coats of paint, restaurants are packed and live salsa music spills out into the street. Soon locals are dancing with tourists, heads begin to turn and smiles sweep across hundreds of different faces. It's a typical early afternoon in Habana Vieja.

Not far from the Plaza de Armas, open-air hotel lobbies offer sprawling bars and a piano player sings like a character right out of the movie "Casablanca." This was my father's Cuba when he was a boy. It wasn't the real Cuba then and it isn't the real Cuba now.

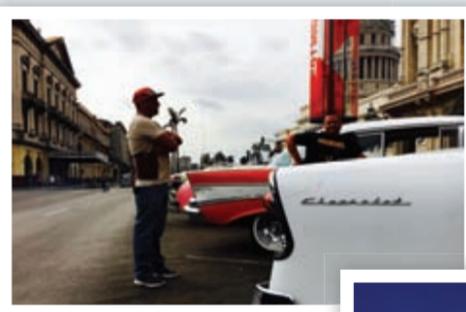

He told me stories of the casinos his father, my grandfather, spent his time and money in. He told me about the hotel parties he saw — the beautiful women in evening gowns and men in white tuxedos. He never saw the struggle outside the city back in the 1950s and he never had the chance to return to see Havana's current crumble and decay.

Pablo Morales Marchan, a freelance journalist in Havana, points at the people walking down Obispo. "What you're looking at is a tourist's version of Cuba," he said. "Very little has changed outside of Havana. People are living in misery — in extreme poverty. Yes, there is more freedom, but not enough. The government is trying to get a bet-

5 Things You MUST DO In Havana

■ Walk Havana's famous El Malecon at sunrise or sunset. It is the gathering spot for Havana residents and travelers to unwind after a long day.

■ Hire a classic, 1950s-era convertible at Parque Central for a drive along the Malecon and cruise the streets of Miramar as you gaze at world embassies, mansions and more.

■ Visit Plaza de la Revolucion where Fidel, Che and Jose Marti are all honored.

■ Get lost exploring the city streets in the La Habana Vieja, Centro Habana, Vedado and Miramar. Don't worry about finding your way back; someone will be eager to help you find your way again.

■ Buy the best Cuban cigars and learn Cuba's history of cigar making at Fabrica de Tabaco Partagas.

Where to stay

Where you decide to stay should depend on what you decide to do during your time in Havana. In Old Havana or Centro, you can expect to be without some modern conveniences like Wi-Fi or a pool and spa to unwind in after a long day of sightseeing. With an estimated 61,000 hotel rooms in all of Cuba, it's best to not leave booking for the last minute.

■ Technology is a wonderful thing, and Airbnb, now operating in Havana, is the choice for many travelers on a budget. Rooms can be rented from $22 a night up to $350 a night for a five-bed, full apartment. https://www.airbnb.com/s/Havana?guests=1&adults=1&children=0&infants=0&ss_id=x91q8i7n&source=bb&page=1&stag=ND_5DIOB&allow_override%5B%5D=

■ Hotel Santa Isabel in Old Havana. Built in the 17th century, this elegant hotel is pricey, but offers great views of the harbor and Plaza de Armas. <http://www.hotelsantaisabel.com/location.asp>

■ Hotel Telegrafo. A centrally located hotel that's a five-minute walk to everything in Old Havana and the Centro district. http://www.hoteltelegrafo-cuba.com/getting_there.asp

■ Iberostar Parque Central. Modern hotel. Centrally located in the Centro district, but easy walking distance to Old Havana. <http://www.hotelparquecentral-cuba.com>

■ Hotel Nacional. Perhaps Cuba's most famous hotel. Think The Breakers in Palm Beach. Built in 1930, it was the place to spot celebrities like Frank Sinatra, Ava Gardner and others, prior to the revolution. Located in the Miramar district, it still retains its old splendor but isn't walking distance to Old Havana. But you can catch the Buena Vista Social Club performing here. <http://hotelnacionaldecuba.com>

■ Melia Habana. One of Cuba's most modern hotels. Located far from most of Havana's action, but perhaps the most suited for travelers who demand more. <https://www.melia.com/en/hotels/cuba/havana/melia-habana/index.html>

ter image by making superficial changes and Raul (Castro, Cuba's president) is giving businesses more opportunity, but not enough for everyday Cubans."

If Castro would open up Cuba and provide greater freedoms, he would be celebrated with statues like Jose Marti, the apostle of Cuban independence from Spain, Mr. Marchan said.

Cuba is teetering between times — the Cold War Cuba, isolated from the world and without the freedoms afforded to millions, and the Cuba where freedom and prosperity are within reach.

Strolling along Obispo it's easy to wonder how long it will take before the tacky souvenir shops selling cheap trinkets and Che T-shirts and state-run restaurants offering the most basic and unimaginative breakfasts for two bucks a pop give way to Banana Republic, Starbucks and McDonald's. How long it will take before Havana, an unspoiled city full of life, music, culture and history, looks just like every other port in the Caribbean?

For Cubans, it starts with the U.S. lifting of the embargo and the influx of foreign investment and tourism. What happens after that will be up to them to decide. No one else. ■

The 150 bare flagpoles were erected as a way to keep Cubans from reading an electronic billboard the U.S. embassy erected to broadcast messages to the Cuban people.

Old buildings, such as this one, are not being torn down. It seems as if many are being gutted, but developers are keeping the facades intact.

Diamond Volunteer Awards winners announced

Naples real estate professional Kelly Capolino, founder of the Diamond Volunteer Awards program, announces the 2017 award winners. The program honors volunteers of local nonprofit agencies for their efforts to improve the community while helping change the lives of those they serve.

Three organizations are chosen each year to receive the Diamond Volunteer Award. The newest winners are: Guadalupe Center, Special Olympics and Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

Ms. Capolino founded the program in 2009 with the first awards presented in 2010. Each year groups are chosen based on their exceptional volunteer dedication and the positive influence that they make in the lives of others. This marks the eighth year Ms. Capolino has been honoring nonprofit organizations for their volunteer work. The Diamond Volunteer program celebrates its "silver" milestone in 2017 as the total number of nonprofits that have been honored reaches 25.

Award winners each get a private cocktail reception for 25 of their volunteers and honored guests; a press release written about their group; photos taken at their award reception and submitted to local media; and a framed award. ■

Moorings Park Foundation distributes $200,000 to help local seniors

The Moorings Park Foundation was formed with a mission to create a culture of philanthropy that provides opportunities to benefit the residents of Moorings Park, its employees and people in the greater community.

With that mission in mind, foundation board members challenged the residents of Moorings Park and Moorings Park at Grey Oaks, along with members of the various operating boards of Moorings Park, to raise charitable support for seniors who are struggling in the greater Naples community. The various entities raised $100,000, which then was matched by an anonymous resident donor.

The $200,000 has been distributed to four organizations: the Senior Friendship Health Center, the Naples Senior Center, the Golden Gate Senior Center and Step Smart Collier. ■

Former Immokalee student is in the driver's seat at Enterprise

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

Junior Destine laughs now when reminded of the Instagram profile he created while in his teens. He was "just a kid" of Haitian heritage trying to make it in America, he wrote then.

A few years later, his Blogspot profile declared that he was from Immokalee, a freshman at Florida Gulf Coast University studying business, and he liked to read and play basketball.

He's 25 now and clearly making it in America.

As branch manager for Enterprise Rent-A-Car at the Naples Municipal Airport, Mr. Destine is putting his degree in marketing and management to good use. He says managers for his company do it all, from sales to service, from marketing to managing the branch employees. "When you work for Enterprise, you've got your hands in everything," he says.

And doing everything has paid off financially, enabling Mr. Destine to move to a condominium in Fort Myers and, along with his sister, Yvette — an elementary school teacher in Cape Coral — to represent the first generation in his family to go to college and earn a degree.

He wouldn't have imagined it when he was a child.

"I just thought I'd be like the rest of my family — go to high school and then get a job," he says.

DESTINE

But The Immokalee Foundation's post-secondary and career success program helped him envision much more for his life.

Mr. Destine came under the foundation's wing while still in high school. He received help with his academic plan, applying to colleges and finding and competing for scholarships. He decided on FGCU. "And even during college, a mentor met up with me on campus, the whole nine yards," he says. "The Immokalee Foundation didn't get me to college and forget about me."

His association with Enterprise began with an internship during his senior year of college. He then worked at the Southwest Florida International Airport branch. After graduation, he stayed with the company full-time and soon was promoted to assistant manager. For the past year and a half, he has managed his own branch in Naples.

The goal of TIF's post-secondary and career success program is to help students make the transition from high school to college and beyond. It helps them develop important life skills such as financial responsibility, time management and study habits — skills that will benefit them now and later in life.

Mr. Destine was not alone in finding it hard to imagine earning a college degree and having the kinds of career opportunities his parents and grandparents never had. He and his sister were raised by their grandmother, who died two years ago. TIF remains as an anchor for them in the community and a loyal force in their lives.

TIF's major annual fundraisers like the Charity Classic Celebration and the Charity Classic Pro-Am make foundation programs possible, but so do donations, bequests, mentors, volunteers and a dedicated staff.

This 25th year of the foundation was notable for the first graduation of a physician, Dr. Kristen Dimas, who is completing her residency with Lee Health and plans to stay in the area to use her education to help her community of origin.

Support from the business community also has been essential to the growth of Immokalee's children into educated adults who realize their potential. TIF's post-secondary and career success program also provides vocational opportunities for students who are not college-bound but are needed to fill important, well-paying jobs, particularly in heavy equipment mechanics.

The post-secondary and career success program is bolstered by TIF's career development and junior career development programs for students at younger ages, beginning in middle school. Through speakers, presentations and outings to places of business in Southwest Florida, TIF students learn about a range of careers, from finance to military service, veterinary medicine to nursing, social work, performing arts, restaurant and other business opportunities.

To learn more about TIF, including how to volunteer, become a mentor or make a donation, call 430-9122 or visit www.immokaleefoundation.org. ■

Remember lost loved ones at Avow butterfly ceremony

Avow invites everyone to its annual butterfly release and community memorial service Saturday, March 25, at Cambier Park. Children's activities begin and a walk-through tent with hundreds of live butterflies opens at 10 a.m.

The memorial service starts at noon and will include inspirational readings, music and a name-reading ceremony to honor the lives of loved ones. At the conclusion of the service, the exhibit tent will open, allowing more than 500 butterflies to float into the sky.

Jaysen Roa, Avow president and CEO, says the butterfly was chosen as the symbolic representation for this event because it undergoes a major transformative process as part of its normal life cycle. "The butterfly is a reminder of how beautiful, delicate and fragile life can be, so that we should remember to appreciate and be grateful for each moment," he says.

Many view the butterfly as a symbol of joy, happiness, rebirth, and renewal. The butterfly evokes an image that is mild and gentle, one that can touch the heart and provide strength during difficult times.

The Avow butterfly release is generously endowed by the Gorchach family. Admission is free. Early arrival is recommended to allow for parking, check-in, and time to experience the butterfly exhibit prior to the start of the ceremony.

Those who wish to have a loved one's name read during the remembrance ceremony can do so by donating $40

The tent is opened and hundreds of butterflies flit away at the 2016 release.

BMW X4 is strange, and that's why you like it

mylesKORNBLATT
 mk@autominded.com

BMW might have just created the perfect Florida car with the X4 crossover, but the question is, did they really mean to do that?

It's hard to confine the X4 to one vehicle class. It has four doors like a sedan, but there's a sweeping rear roofline that German companies like BMW will still call coupes. It has the raised suspension of an off-road machine, but the tire package is from a sports car. And when the car-like rear decklid is opened, it reveals a versatile hatchback design.

Seems confusing, right? That's why BMW had to create the term Sports Activity Coupe. This is actually the company's second SAC behind the X6, and Mercedes and Audi are even following suit. So, this segment is more than just a fluke.

What an SAC really provides is a crossover for people who wanted a sports car. It works well where twentysomethings like to be seen in tall machines with prestigious badges, like when arriving at a nightclub in Miami Beach. But in reality, this is a vehicle that works exceptionally well for the senior demographic, too.

After all, the X4 has swoopy coupe lines, but its high ride height means there's no bending down to get inside. And the overall size is 10 inches shorter than the X6, so it's even easier to park. BMW already makes a taller version of its cars known as the Gran Turismo that offers similar mobility benefits to the X4, but this one just does a better job of hiding its functionality under trendy skin.

Inside, the X4 only loses a few inches of wheelbase over the X6. That means plenty of legroom up front, and there's even still proper seating behind the tallest of drivers. The instrumentation is lifted directly from the X3 crossover — a vehicle that shares the South Carolina assembly line with the X4.

The good news about this is that the X3/X4 has a well laid-out interior that keeps many of the familiar BMW family components (gauges, gearshift, iDrive, etc.) But it also feels a little better executed in some places. For example, other BMW vehicles have their infotainment screens mounted on top of the dashboard. The X3/X4's screen is smaller, but it seems a bit nicer because it's integrated into the dash design.

Our tester car was optioned with the M Sport interior that upgrades a few elements, including the steering wheel. It's not only thinner than the stock piece, but also fans of BMW history will love that the smaller round airbag allows the steering wheel to look like the classic performance designs from the first 3-Series and 2002 models.

And having a sporty feeling is key to the X4. The base motor is a twin-scroll turbo four-cylinder that produces a healthy 240. Upgrade to the X4 M40i, and that odd alphabet soup will add a six-cylinder turbo that yields nearly 50 percent more power.

The 355 hp motor in our test car loved to generate low-end turbo boost so that it was always the first one to the next stoplight. And while the X4 is taller than a sports car, the sports suspension and grippy road tires made sure there was no real body roll.

This kind of performance does come at a cost. The X4 starts at $46,545, which includes standard all-wheel drive. Upgrading to the M40i adds $12,550 more, and that's before expensive goodies like the head-up display or 20-inch wheels are added.

In fact, a vehicle like the one seen here is more expensive than its X6 larger sibling. The loaded X4 is lighter and more powerful than any comparably-priced X6 out there, and it's in this distinction that creates its the real versatility.

The X4 is not as capable off-road as an SUV, cannot carry as much cargo as a wagon, and is not as speedy as a true sports car. But it carries a little hint of each. Thus, it can be the sports car for people who want a trendy crossover, and it can be the tall crossover for those who are forced to give up their sports car. And whether you're a retiree or a club kid, you've probably got this one on your premium shopping list. ■ mile pathway will link six national and state parks, preserves, forests and wildlife refuges.

All three routes of the Everglades Bike Ride start and finish at McLeod Park in Everglades City.

Almost the entire length of the busy highway is two-lane. Traffic is high speed and includes many trucks hauling wide boat trailers, especially on weekends. To date, only a few portions have paved shoulder considered safe for bicyclists/walkers/hikers (one of the best portions is the 10 miles between Port of the Islands and SR29 in Collier County).

The idea for ROGG was born out of a notion to provide public access to one of the most unique and well-studied landscapes in the world. Building on the allure of a long-distance hiking and biking experience for a variety of users, ROGG is envisioned to bring awareness to the Greater Everglades ecosystem, including ongoing ecological restoration in the region. Fishermen, photographers and birders will also embrace the ability to better enjoy the area and promote stewardship of its unique assets.

Pick your route and pace

The Everglades Bike Ride is not a race, organizers stress. Cyclists can pedal at their own comfortable pace and are encouraged to watch for wildlife and stop at places of interest along the way. In fact, registration includes admission to Smallwood's Store Museum on the day of the ride.

All rides start and end at McLeod Park, where continental breakfast will be served starting at 7:30 a.m. and lunch from Triad Seafood Café complete with calamondin cake will be served from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Volunteer guides will accompany groups of riders to point out sights along the way, and volunteers from the Naples nonprofit Bikes for Tykes will provide free bike repairs as needed. SAG support will be provided by Island Bike Shops, Big Momma's Bicycles and Bikes for Tykes.

Setting out at 9 a.m., the 15-mile paved route winds through historic Everglades City and includes a stop at the Everglades National Park Gulf Coast Visitors Center before crossing the causeway to Chokoloskee Island — which arguably has the most colorful history and attitude within all of Collier County — before returning to the start point.

The 27-mile "bumpy" ride (1½-inch tires recommended) includes a stretch through the cypress forest of Fakahatchee Strand Preserve State Park, famous for its orchids and bromeliads. This ride starts at 8:30 a.m.

Starting at 8 a.m., the 62-mile "smooth" route takes riders along 17 miles of U.S. 41 in Big Cypress National Preserve and also includes a stretch along CR29 to view the wilds of Fakahatchee on the way to Chokoloskee. ■

HEALTHY LIVING

Health care and hospitals always evolve

allenWEISS

allen.weiss@nchmd.org

Changing culture is an ongoing process at NCH, where over the past 60 years we have evolved from a frontier clinic to a rural hospital and then to a community health-care system. Today, we are a teaching institution with a graduate medical education program starting this July with 12 internal medicine residents.

With growth and complexity comes the opportunity to improve, which is why we now inculcating a behavioral change that embraces efficiency and effectiveness using lean transformation. I'll explain with some examples of how we are encouraging our colleagues to ask questions, make suggestions, be engaged and enjoy the success of improvement.

The way we structure operations and solve problems has changed over the past three years under the leadership of Mustafa Abdulali, Dirk van Rossum and Chris Vasta. Examples abound with a common thread of front-line colleagues — who are most familiar with the requirements, processes and areas needing the greatest change — being most involved. A few notable recent projects are:

■ A nurse at NCH has traditionally been responsible for a group of four to six patients. Under the leadership of Angela Devaney, nurse manager on the fourth floor at the North Naples hospital, however, our nurses and clinical technicians are now organized into teams in order to give one nurse who may be temporarily overwhelmed assistance by a nurse from their team. Think of bowling, where four team members act individually, versus soccer, where team members pass the ball among themselves in a very inter-dependent way. On the hospital floor, this kind of collaboration sounds like a simple mindset

Florida Scripps scientists develop class of drugs that kill prostate and triple negative breast cancers

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

Scientists on the Jupiter campus of The Scripps Research Institute have designed two new drug candidates to target prostate and triple negative breast cancers.

The research, published recently as two separate studies in ACS Central Science and the Journal of the American Chemical Society, demonstrates that a new class of drugs called small molecule RNA inhibitors can successfully target and kill specific types of cancer.

"This is like designing a scalpel to precisely seek out and destroy a cancer — but with a pill and without surgery," said Professor Matthew Disney, senior author of both studies.

DISNEY

RNAs are molecules that translate our genetic code into proteins. RNA defects can lead to cancers, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, myotonic dystrophy and many other diseases.

In their ACS Central Science study, Disney and his colleagues used DNA sequencing to evaluate thousands of small molecules as potential drug candidates. The researchers were on the lookout for molecules that could bind precisely with defective RNAs — like keys fitting in the right locks.

This strategy led them to a compound that targets the precursor molecule to an RNA called microRNA-18a. This RNA had caught the attention of scientists who found that mature microRNA-18a inhibits a protein that suppresses cancer. When microRNA-18a is overexpressed, cancers just keep growing.

Disney and his team tested their compound, called Targapremir-18a, and found that it could target microRNA-18a and trigger prostate cancer cell death.

"Since microRNA-18a is overexpressed in cancer cells and helps to maintain them as cancerous, application of Targapremir-18a to cancer cells causes them to kill themselves," Disney said.

Disney said the precise binding of Targapremir-18a to microRNA-18a means a cancer drug that follows this strategy would be likely to kill prostate cancer cells without causing the broad side effects seen with many other cancer therapies.

And there may be even bigger implications. "We could apply the strategy used in this study to quickly identify and design small molecule drugs for other RNA-associated diseases," explained Sai Velagapudi, a research associate in the Disney lab.

The same screening strategy led the researchers to a drug candidate to target triple negative breast cancer, as reported in the Journal of the American Chemical Society.

Triple negative breast cancer is especially hard to treat because it lacks the receptors, such as the estrogen receptor, targeted with other cancer drugs. The Disney lab aimed to get around this problem by instead targeting an RNA called microRNA-210, which is overexpressed in solid breast cancer tumors.

The researchers tested their drug compound, Targapremir-210, in mouse models of triple negative breast cancer. They found that the therapy significantly slowed down tumor growth. In fact, a single dose decreased tumor size by 60 percent over a three-week period. The researchers analyzed these smaller tumors and discovered that they also expressed less microRNA-210 compared with untreated tumors.

Targapremir-210 appears to work by reversing a circuit that tells cells to "survive at all costs" and become cancerous. With microRNA-210 in check, cells regain their normal function and cancer cannot grow.

"We believe Targapremir-210 can provide a potentially more precise, targeted therapy that would not harm healthy cells," said TSRI graduate student Matthew G. Costales.

Next, the researchers plan to further develop their molecule-screening strategy into a platform to test molecules against any form of RNA defect-related disease. ■ change, but it makes a huge difference for patient service, quality and safety, not to mention making for more satisfied and happier nurses.

Medication reconciliation, namely understanding what medicines a person is taking upon entering and leaving the hospital, is a huge challenge in our industry across America. Kim Thorp, our director of pharmacy, and Gina Teegarden, our associate chief nursing officer, and their colleagues are "on the case," using everyone's expertise, not merely brute force, to find a sustainable solution. While medication reconciliation is an ongoing journey, we have made significant progress.

■ Cleaning surgical instrument trays is a complex and critical process that occurs more than 72,655 times a year in our Baker Hospital operating rooms. We had the opportunity to redo the downtown campus' sterile processing department using a full-size mock-up to create the new space so our colleagues could "walk through" the process. Thanks to the efforts of a team led by Kieran Boyle, our sterile processing manager, many changes were made in the mock-up, quickly and inexpensively resulting in a much better final process characterized by fewer steps both physically and operationally.

In our ever-changing industry, we must constantly be more efficient and effective with our limited resources. Being prudent and using best practices copied from other successful industries will ultimately help NCH help everyone we serve live longer, happier and healthier lives. ■

Repurposing your fat for a more youthful face: Understanding Fat Grafting

Most of us spend untold hours exercising, eating right, and trying to ensure that any areas of unwanted fat are kept as small as possible. But did you know that one of the things that ages us fastest is the loss of fat from our face as we grow older? While using dermal fillers is one solution for restoring lost volume, there's a 100% natural solution that has revolutionized the way many cosmetic surgery procedures are being performed, especially in regards to facial rejuvenation—fat grafting (also known as fat transfer).

UNDERSTANDING FAT GRAFTING

I've consulted many patients that are frustrated with loss of volume in their face. They have enjoyed a long life and have taken time to care for their bodies through exercise, only to lose weight in an area that needs boosting! I'm happy to share that they can have effective restoration in the facial hollows with fat grafting.

The reason babies are so cute is because of their round, cherubic cheeks and the fullness in their faces. This remains throughout childhood and decreases with time. As we grow into adulthood, age, gravity, the environment, and the sun take a huge toll on our skin. Dramatic weight loss can also produce a gaunt or hollow look. Thankfully, we now have the ability to restore volume through fat grafting. What may sound a little daunting at first is really a very practical and natural-looking way to enhance the shape of your face.

FAT

Here's how fat grafting typically works:

To boost facial hollows—most commonly the nasolabial folds (the folds from the corners of your mouth to your nose), the under-eye areas, the cheeks, and the temples—we take living fat cells from other areas of your body (e.g., the abdomen, thighs, or back of arms) and inject them into your desired spots. As an injectable filler, your own fat is almost perfect. It is soft and feels natural, offers a practical and natural alternative to synthetic fillers, and has less ongoing maintenance.

Downtime is minimal. The whole process takes two to three hours and is performed under local anesthesia. I often perform this procedure in conjunction with a browlift, necklift, or lower facelift. Typical side effects include light bruising in the area, which will generally take a few days to resolve. Restoring lost volume in the face creates more youthful contours with long-lasting results, erasing years while using an entirely natural substance from your own body. Have a look at more fantastic results from some of our patients by clicking here.

So if you're troubled by sunken cheeks, hollow-looking eyes, and thinning around your temples, fat transfer is a great way to look rested and youthful and is a long-lasting alternative to dermal fillers.

Litter box woes

If your cat isn't using the litter box, here's how to dig deep to discover the solution

BY DR. MARTY BECKER, KIM CAMPBELL THORNTON AND MIKKEL BECKER
Andrews McMeel

Cats come programmed to keep their living area clean. That's one of the things that make them great house companions. When a cat chooses not to use the litter box, people feel betrayed. It's no surprise that house-soiling — the technical term for peeing or pooping outside the box — is the No. 1 behavior problem reported in cats.

But cats don't avoid the litter box out of spite, as owners often believe. One retrospective study — meaning the researchers went back and looked at past cases to figure out possible associations — found that 60 percent of cats who had issues with house soiling had a history of urinary tract disease. Not using the litter box can also be a sign of other health problems common in cats, including hyperthyroidism, diabetes mellitus and liver disease.

There are other reasons cats may avoid the litter box. When other pets bully them in the box or they don't like the type of litter used or the location, size or cleanliness of their litter box, they vote with their paws: In other words, they don't use it. These nine tips will help keep your cat thinking inside the box.

■ Take your cat in for a veterinary exam to rule out a urinary tract infection or other health problem.

Knowing your cat's potty preferences ensures that you'll both be happy with the elimination situation in your home.

■ Try to figure out if your cat is having relationship issues with another cat or dog in the home, is unnerved by a new baby or person in the family, or is upset by some other change in his environment or schedule.

■ In multi-cat homes, separate litter boxes so that one cat doesn't guard access to them. Providing multiple litter boxes is also important if you have an aging cat who may have trouble getting up or down stairs or otherwise trekking long distances to a litter box. A good "rule of paw" is one box per cat, plus one extra.

■ Make the litter box attractive to your cat. Scoop it once or twice a day so that waste doesn't sit there and stink it up. At least once or twice a month, empty the box, wash it with warm water and unscented soap, and fill it with fresh litter.

■ Offer your cat some alternative types of litter. Line up some open litter boxes, one filled with your cat's regular litter and the others with alternatives. You may be surprised to find that your cat has a distinct preference.

■ Fill the box with two to four inches of litter. Many cats like to have some depth for digging. Even with a deep bed of litter, you should still scoop it daily.

■ Place the box in a quiet area where your cat will experience few interruptions. Cats like privacy when they do their business.

■ Try a different type of litter box. If you're using a hooded litter box, try an uncovered one. An open litter box gives a cat a feeling of security because he can see people or other animals approaching. An uncovered litter box is also easier for you to scoop and clean.

■ Discourage your cat from using the areas he soiled. An enzymatic cleanser is the best choice for stamping out odor that could draw your cat back to the area. Other ways to make it unpleasant for him to use that spot are to place his food and water dishes there or to cover the area with double-sided tape or aluminum foil. Remember that these techniques won't help unless you also uncover and address any health or social problems your cat may have. ■

March resolutions: It takes three months for the gyms to clear, right?

stephanieDAVIS
sdavis@floridaweekly.com

A New Year's resolution counts if I start in March, right?

Resolutions never work for me on Jan. 1 — or anytime in January, really — because I'm too busy putting away sparkly decorations, cleaning the house and eating leftover treats from festive holiday soirees. Also, February isn't convenient either, as there are far too many seasonal events to attend, plus it's the month of both Valentine's Day (chocolate) and Girl Scout Cookies (Thin Mints).

So, I've only recently achieved my 2017 resolution of joining a gym — in mid-March. I mean, at least, it's still technically winter; for another few days at least.

I'm notoriously bad at gyms. My first challenge is that most people go to the gym at the crack of dawn and I don't know about your bed, but MY bed somehow gets extra comfy as the day breaks — I mean, it really turns on the charm around 7 a.m. and just gets softer and more cuddly as the morning wears on. Therefore, mornings are not my thing. In addition to my affection for bed, there's also my penchant for muumuus — and if there's one thing you ought not to wear to the gym, it's a muumuu.

I'm actually not worried about looking out of place in a sea of neon Spandex and razor-back sports bras, but I am concerned that my muumuu could get caught in the inner workings of the treadmill and result in strangulation or some other deadly accident. I understand that people sometimes get injuries in gyms when they over-extend themselves, but I don't want my coroner's report to read, "Death by Muumuu."

Finally, there are the gym people — and I'm not one of them. I have no idea how to count my protein grams verses my carbohydrate intake vs. my cardio output multiplied by how many ounces of water I drink.

I realize there are apps for all that, but I'd rather use my phone to play Pokémon, not try to figure out how much time I need to spend doing squats to burn off the calories in one sleeve of Thin Mints — because, admit it, who eats just one Thin Mint without devouring the whole sleeve?

Luckily, there's a gym in my neighborhood that, while it won't permit me showing up in a flowy muumuu, can help me with all my other challenges.

It's a trainer-based gym — which means that you have to work with a personal trainer — and if there's one thing I'm good at, it's keeping dates. The concept is that if you know you have to keep the appointment, you'll show up. Also, I'm a 3 in the afternoon kind of gal and the gym is OK with that — 3 p.m. gives me a chance to sleep in, catch up on email, feed the cats and try to find something chic to sweat in that won't get caught in any fancy fitness equipment.

And bonus — if I start working out at 3, I'll be done just in time for Happy Hour.

Here's hoping my trainer can help me calculate how many lunges it takes to work off a double margarita. ■

Have you met Kathy Bigham of Bigham Jewelers?

BY DON MANLEY
Florida Weekly Correspondent

For proof of the profound impact teachers can have on their students, look no further than Kathy Bigham, president and CEO of Bigham Jewelers.

It was her seventh grade choir instructor and basketball coach in suburban Cleveland whose choice of fashion accessories sparked an interest in Ms. Bigham that led to her career choice.

BIGHAM

"I had a teacher who wore the most magnificent jewelry, which began my interest in jewelry," says Ms. Bigham, who founded her business in 1995 after moving to Naples from Ohio.

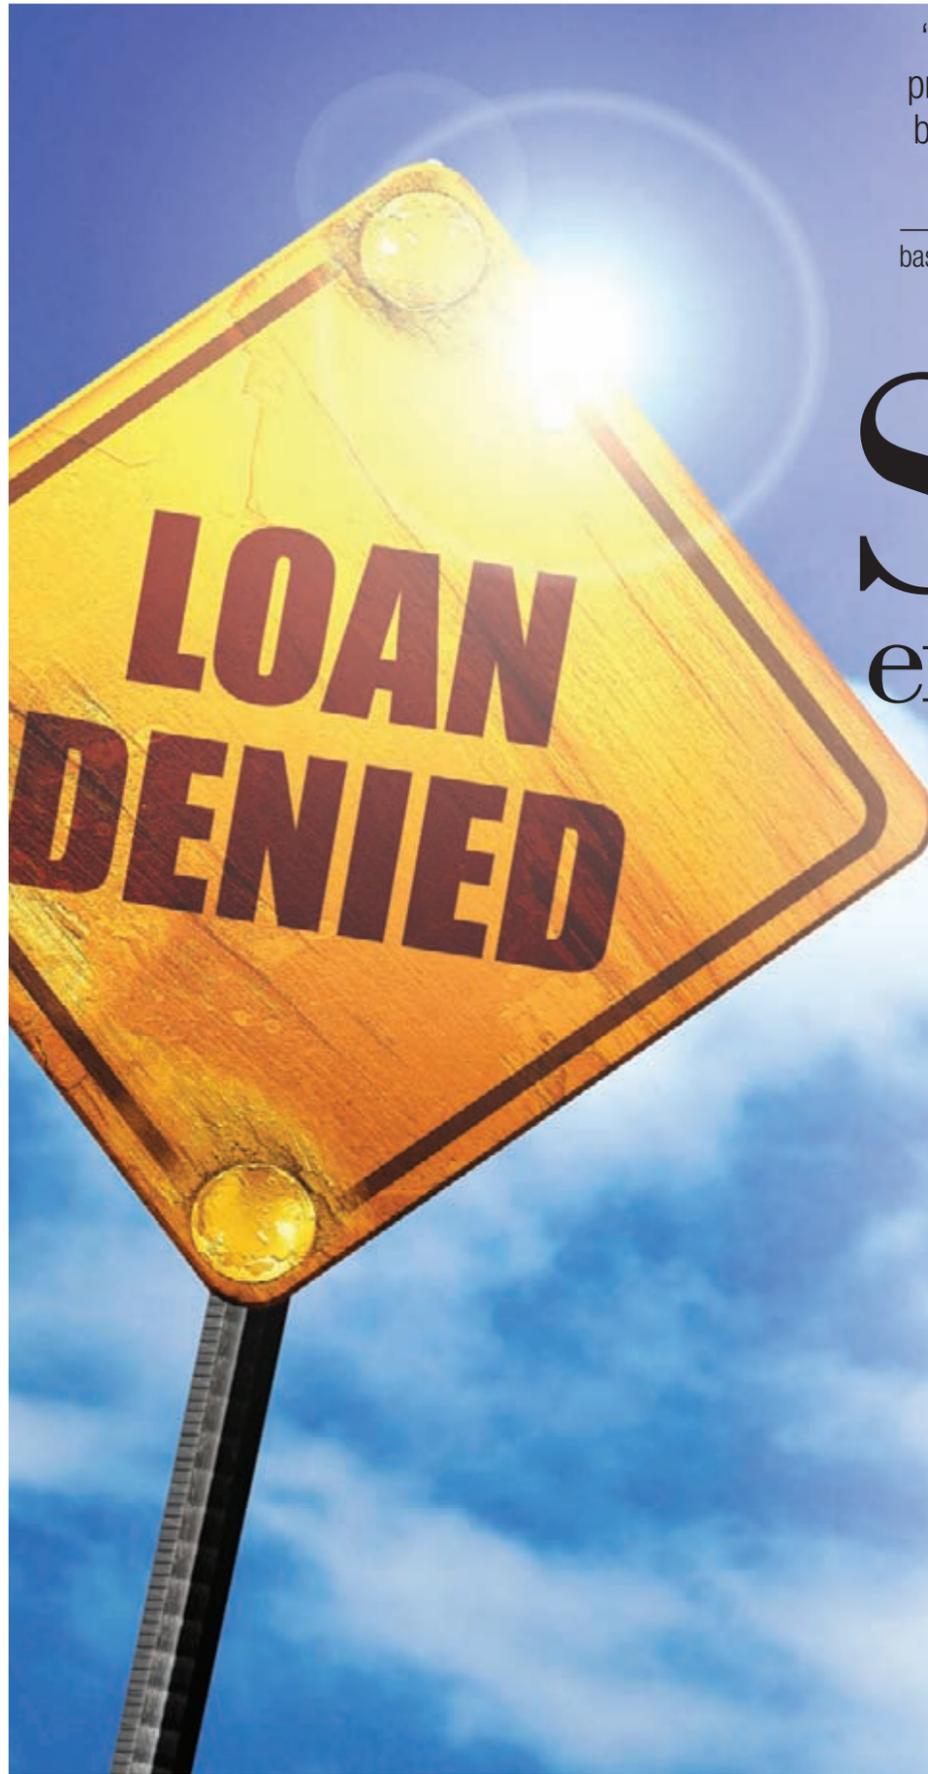

From its start in a 2,800-square-foot, strip mall storefront, Bigham Jewelers has grown to the point that it now occupies an 8,000-square-foot, diamond-shaped, stand-alone building dubbed the Bigham Galleria on U.S. 41. Shortly after its 2005 opening, InStore Magazine selected it as the "Coolest Jewelry Store in America" for being a "luxurious, but ultra-cool store where customer service has never felt — or looked — so good."

Combining her passion for jewelry and a burning desire to have her own independent family business became a goal during Ms. Bigham's youth. It's a decision she hasn't regretted.

"I love jewelry," she says. "I wanted to be able to wear and share it, and I wanted to be able to get into a business that I was passionate about. I wanted to be able to get up in the morning and say, 'Wow, I get to do this every day,' and to share in people's special occasions all year long."

Entrepreneurship appealed to her for several reasons.

FGCU Leadership Academy part of 20th anniversary celebration

As Florida Gulf Coast University celebrates its 20th anniversary, the FGCU Alumni Association invites the community to explore the school's two decades of growth and progress at the inaugural FGCU Leadership Academy.

Fashioned after similar programs sponsored by business and civic organizations to introduce participants to the inner workings of their communities, the academy will meet monthly for six months, starting in April. Participants will be introduced to the newest facilities and programs offered at FGCU — along with the administrators and faculty who manage them, and alumni who have benefited from The FGCU Effect.

The program will not only provide leadership training from FGCU staff and alumni but will also provide “an inside look at our ever-evolving campus and its surrounding properties in a special way,” says Kimberly Wallace, director of alumni relations. “For instance, we’ll visit the waterfront Vester Marine Field Station in Bonita Springs and the new Emergent Technologies Institute a few miles northeast of campus — both sites of cutting-edge educational research,” Ms. Wallace says.

On-campus tours will take participants behind the scenes at Alico Arena and FGCU's growing athletics facilities and the state-of-the-art laboratories for tomorrow's health-care professionals in Marieb Hall.

“Best of all, the deans of FGCU's colleges, faculty members and alumni representing each university program will be there to share industry trends and offer information and other practical tools that you can apply to your own business or profession,” Ms. Wallace adds.

Sessions will meet from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on the third Friday of the month.

Besides visits to the Vester station in April, Alico Arena in May, Marieb Hall in June and the ETI in July, the Leadership Academy will venture inside FGCU's business hub, Lutgert Hall, in August, and conclude with a graduation celebration in September.

The FGCU Alumni Association Leadership Academy is limited to 15 participants. Applications are due by March 24. Tuition is $350 ($250 for FGCU alumni).

To register or for more information, visit www.alumni.fgcu.edu, click on the “Engage” tab at the top of the home page and follow the drop menu to “Leadership Academy.” ■

MONEY & INVESTING

So far Snapchat is a one-trick pony, so be cautious before investing

ericBRETAN
estaterick@gmail.com

A number of people have asked me about my opinion of Snap Inc.'s IPO. For those not following financial markets, the parent company of Snapchat went public on March 2 with a very strong demand for the new stock. Because of this, the stock was priced above its expected price of $14 to $16, at $17 per share. SNAP opened at around $24 and by Friday it was trading above $27. So at this price, is this a good stock to buy?

To answer this question, I think it would help to examine what makes a stock price move. Ask a typical investor and her answer would probably be good news or bad news. If a company reports something positive like good earnings, the stock should move higher. And if it has a negative announcement like poor revenues, the stock should fall.

Actually, this is incorrect. Good news and bad news does not move stock prices. Unexpected news moves stock prices. For example, if a company was expected to post $10 million in losses in a quarter but it actually lost $9 million, that is still bad news. But the stock price actually may go up because the loss was better than expected — it was actually unexpected good news.

So going back to SNAP, at its current stock price the company is valued at $28 billion. It has no earnings (the company lost $500 million in 2016) and no dividend. Even using a multiple of sales, Snapchat's value is staggering. Twitter is priced at four times sales. Facebook trades at 12 times sales. SNAP is valued at 60 times sales.

So why is it worth so much? Because investors are already pricing good news into the stock. Company sales grew over 600 percent between 2015 and 2016. In order to justify its current valuation, the company must continue to grow at this kind of eye-popping rate. Skeptics point out that slowing user growth, saturation in the U.S. markets, higher expenses and increased competition from Facebook make this unlikely going forward.

Snapchat supporters point to the wildly successful Facebook IPO as an example of a highly valued stock that rewarded investors. And it is true that when Facebook debuted as a public company at a frothy 24 times sales, many analysts said that the company was completely overvalued. But those analysts were proved wrong when the company went on to rise from its offering price of $38 to over $130 today.

But what people may have forgotten was that Facebook not only rewarded investors with good results over the past few years but unexpectedly good financials. When the stock went public in 2012, the company had a significant user base just like Snapchat. But many investors were worried because users were using Facebook on their home computers but mobile computing was taking off. They didn't believe that Facebook would be able to get advertisers to pay big money to advertise on tiny smart phone screens.

These skeptics were clearly wrong and Facebook was able to monetize all of the new tablet and smart phone users. That is why the stock price has grown so quickly over the past couple of years — the unexpected success of its mobile advertising.

So the question now for SNAP is what unexpected positive catalysts are there for the company. If the company just grows as it is expected to, I would argue that it probably is not a wonderful investment as the stock is fully valued today and probably won't move much higher. And any revenue/user slow-downs, insider selling, or other negative surprises could destroy the stock as seen with a similar company, Twitter.

So the only way the company, in my opinion, is a good investment at this time is if the company can do something that the market is not anticipating. So far, the company has been a one-trick pony, so I don't see that creativity in the near future. Therefore, before investing in this new stock, I would first wait until the lockout period ends and insiders can begin to sell their stock. This should put near term pressure on the stock. And second, I would wait until the company demonstrates it can do something not currently anticipated by the market. Yes, you may miss the bottom of the stock run, but I think the risks just don't justify the rewards here right now. ■

"I really wanted to be able to have the flexibility to have a family and to be able to create jobs for my own family and for others," she said. "I think family businesses are something that is more and more difficult to pass on."

She is the product of a working-class background.

"I didn't grow up with much, although I certainly had what I needed," she says. "We lived paycheck to paycheck like most of the people we knew, but I wanted more. I take care of my family. My mom and dad (Dan and Linda Kelly) are both retired and I'm glad that they could do it."

Her family played and still plays a role in the business. Her mother, her brother Dan Kelly, ex-husband Gary Bigham, and her sister-in-law, Bonnie Bigham, all assisted with Bigham Jewelers at its inception and continue to play a role in day-to-day operations.

Bigham Galleria features creations by award-winning designers such as Elizabeth Locke, David Yurman, Penny Preville, Picchiotti and Bilgore. Many designers make personal appearances at the store, bringing extensive collections and interacting with customers. The store also offers a selection of watches from Rolex, Baume & Mercier, Carl F. Bucherer, Sablier and Shinola, as well as pre-owned timepieces.

"It's not like walking into a typical jewelry store," Ms. Bigham says. "We have something for everyone."

She received a bachelor's degree in business from Kent State in 1989, graduating in four years while attending night classes. On weekdays, she worked the early shift at a trucking company, and on weekends she sold gold jewelry from a briefcase.

After graduating, she joined the former Akron Diamond Trading Company, rising from a sales position to vice-president of store operations.

Upon opening her store, Ms. Bigham made community service, specifically causes that benefit women and children, a focal point. The Boys and Girls Club of Collier County, the Christ Child Society, the Naples Alliance for Children, The Naples Players and Baker Park are among the more than 50 organizations the business Bigham Jewelers has supported over the years. Those efforts led to her being named one of Collier's Junior Achievement Business Hall of Fame laureates for 2016. Ms. Bigham invited Kathy Leciejewski, the teacher who so profoundly influenced her, to the awards ceremony and she recognized her during her acceptance speech.

The tagline for the Bigham Jewelers' TV commercials — "Have We Met Yet?" — has not only served as a warm, unique identifier for the business, but has also caught on with the public, Ms. Bigham says. "I can't go anywhere in town without someone coming over and saying, 'Have we met yet?'" ■

Interview with Kathy Bigham

Business mentors: A first and lifelong mentor was my uncle, Bill Wortzman. An entrepreneur in my Cleveland hometown, he established a respected and highly successful financial services firm, starting from scratch.

Locally, my favorite mentor is the amazing Myra Janco Daniels, whose wisdom and grounded advice continue to inspire me.

First job: When I was 10 years old, I got a paper route.

Business words of wisdom: One of my favorite quotes is by Yoda, the jedi master in "Star Wars: The Empire Strikes Back." He says simply: "Do. Or do not. There is no try." This quote inspired my business motto: "Make it happen."

Favorite business book: Malcolm Gladwell's "Outliers," for its insights on what it takes to reach high achievement levels in different fields.

Things you look for when hiring: I look for three qualities in a candidate: That s/he CAN do the job, WANTS to do the job and WILL do the job. I need all three; if one is doubtful, it's a no-go.

Any job openings now? Because we are fortunate to be growing steadily, we always look for that additional "right" candidate. When s/he appears, we will create the position.

Last time you had to fire someone — and reason: Truthfulness is a must-have in our company. Last summer, I had to separate a new employee who had misrepresented himself. ■ ventional home loan. It's especially difficult for businesses less than two years old and those showing little or no profit come tax time.

"Some business owners have a profitable business and cash flow but on paper run at a loss for tax purposes," said Greg McBride, the Palm Beach Gardens-based chief financial analyst for bankrate.com. "It's nearly impossible for recent startups to get a loan unless there are other income streams or the business owner still has a day job."

The 2010 Dodd-Frank Act, which overhauled the nation's financial regulatory system and is slated for likely termination under the Trump Administration, tightened the mortgage approval process. Self-employed applicants can no longer show check stubs or bank statements as proof of income. Still fresh off the Great Recession and robo-signing, traditional lending institutions are scrutinizing business and personal tax returns more closely. Line 37, the adjusted gross income on the 1040, is the bottom line for most banks and typically disqualifies those in business for themselves from low-interest conventional loans, VA, USDA and FHA mortgages.

"CPAs can be very creative in claiming deductions for small business owners," said John Salter, a relationship manager at PNC Bank in Boynton Beach. "They get taxes down as much as possible, which is great for tax time but a challenge when these business owners try to get a mortgage."

Nationally, more Americans are their own bosses. Some 15 million workers, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, have stepped out of corporate America and are working for themselves. Between 2012 and 2013, Florida led the nation with 63,000 individuals joining the ranks of the self-employed. Census data, which will be updated in May, shows self-employed individuals account for the majority of all U.S. businesses.

Realtors, ironically, are among the self-employed who often don't qualify for a mortgage. So, too, are attorneys, entrepreneurs and the growing ranks of freelance and contract workers. It's also difficult for these solo professionals just getting started in their careers.

Florida has over 1.8 million self-employed workers, with professional services — particularly jobs in real estate and rentals — accounting for the most. The state also leads the country with the most mortgage failures, according to NerdWallet, a personal finance website which allows users to compare products available at various banks and insurance companies. Nearly one in five mortgage applications — 17.1 percent — get turned down, it discovered during its inaugural Home Buyer Reality Report.

Angie Fritz Nichols, broker associate for The Nichols Team as Jones & Co. Realty in Fort Myers, encounters self-employed would-be homebuyers "all the time. There are lenders out there who can get it done if the buyer has been self-employed for two years with enough claimed income to qualify for the loan."

It takes time

For those who can't show enough income, rectifying the situation isn't going to happen overnight. In most cases, banks will ask for two years of tax returns. Tim Manni, a mortgage expert at NerdWallet, suggests business owners reduce their deductions and start taking a salary, which means paying more taxes.

"It's definitely possible to target a conventional loan, but it's going to take time and research longer than a traditional salary position," he said. "You might have to write off less in those two years. Mortgage companies are going to look at line 7 to 22 on the 1040 and 23 to 37 for adjusted gross income. Debt levels are another thing."

The bottom line, said Victoria Prast, vice president of mortgage operations for Achieva Credit Union, is how much of a financial risk the potential borrower poses.

"At the end of the day it's about qualifying someone for something they can definitely afford," she said. "They have to have the ability to repay. There are regulations on lending that weren't there before and we have to show we're making good business decisions."

As a member-owned institution, Ms.

NICHOLS

MANNI

Prast said the 80-year-old Pinellas Park-based credit union with offices throughout Southwest Florida, has more flexibility than a traditional bank.

"We follow a more common-sense approach," she said. "Members feel we are looking at their particular situation and not asking for it to fit into a box. We can look beyond the bottom line and the current profit and loss, but it does have to make sense."

Ms. Prast and other experts also advise self-employed business owners to separate business and personal expenses. Paying for a business expense with a personal account can affect personal debt-to-income ratio, another key factor in qualifying for a home loan. Lenders look for a ratio of 36 percent or less when dividing monthly debt obligations by pretax income. Achieva also considers how much a member is paying for rent compared to a monthly mortgage.

All lending institutions will factor in home-related expenses, including monthly mortgages, taxes, insurance and homeowners' association fees and other debts like credit cards and personal, school and car loans.

For the self-employed, Mr. Manni suggests keeping tax write-offs low to attain a 36 to 43 percent ratio. "Having a really strong credit score, coming to the table with a large down payment and providing ample financial documentation will help your cause," he said.

Also, be prepared to be Googled, said Mr. Manni, noting a potential lender searched online for a former colleague, a self-employed freelance writer, "to see who she worked for and if it was consistent. It was kind of shocking to her." She did get approved.

"The bottom line is income," Mr. Manni said. "Ten years from now a bank wants to be able to protect its loan. You have to show you have money now and in the future."

Formerly the Pinellas County Teachers Union, Achieva has grown with the acquisition of other credit unions and opening offices in Cape Coral, Estero and Port Charlotte. By carefully vetting its mortgage holders, Achieva survived the housing crisis with less than 1 percent of its mortgages in default. Nationally, 90-day delinquency rates and foreclosure initiation procedures reached an all-time high of 25 percent in May 2008.

Paying the price

There is another option for the self-employed who want to buy a home sooner rather than later. Google "self-employed home loans" and more than 1.6 million results pop up, including shouty responses and advertisements guaranteeing approval.

One of the top, Home 1st Lending, rings right to Ruth Macellari, who runs the Naples branch. She's worked with attorneys, Realtors and lawn-care company owners locally and statewide. Depending on the dreaded line 37 on their tax return, she can qualify them for a conventional loan.

Home 1st Lending offers a portfolio of mortgage products, including a nontraditional loan that forgoes the tax return for 24 months of personal or business tax statements. But there are downsides, including higher interest rates — based on credit score and down payment amount — and a one-time 2.75-percent fee due at closing. Unlike a conventional loan, private mortgage insurance isn't a requirement for anyone putting less than 20 percent down.

"I do seven to eight of these a month," said Ms. Macellari. "Only a few lenders do this."

It's a matter of weighing the cost benefits — pay higher interest or additional business taxes.

For example, monthly mortgage payments with a 20 percent down payment on a $250,000 loan at today's 3.75 percent interest rates would run about $954 with no PMI. Expect to pay about $1,200 a month for a 6 percent home loan through Home 1st Lending.

"It is more but you're getting a loan," Ms. Macellari said. "You can always refinance out at any time." ■

Know Your RMDs

If you've been saving for retirement in a tax-deferred account, you may be subject to required minimum distributions (RMDs) one day — even if you don't need the money.

RMDs are mandatory withdrawals you must take from certain retirement accounts after you reach age 70 1/2. (They're sometimes referred to as minimum required distributions, or MRDs.) The RMD applies to accounts you contributed to on a pre-tax basis or that contain tax-deferred investment gains — such as traditional (non-Roth) IRAs, traditional (non-Roth) 401(k) or 403(b) accounts, Keogh accounts, SEP IRAs, SIMPLE IRAs and more.

You need to take your first RMD from your tax-deferred retirement accounts by April 1 of the year following the calendar year in which you turn 70 1/2. For example, if you turn 70 1/2 in 2017, you'll have until April 1, 2018, to take your first RMD. In subsequent years, you need to take your annual RMD before Dec. 31. Note that this means you might take two RMDs in the first year. That can be problematic if it propels you into a higher tax bracket.

Your RMD doesn't have to be a lump-sum withdrawal. You can take money out throughout the year as long as you have withdrawn the required amount before the deadline.

If you fail to take your RMD, the penalty is extremely harsh. The IRS can penalize you 50 percent of the amount of the RMD not taken by the deadline. So if you fail to take an RMD of $20,000 on time, the IRS can fine you a whopping $10,000.

So how is your RMD calculated? It's based on the balance of your retirement account, as well as your age and the age of your spouse, if you have one. IRS tables can help you determine your RMD each year — and many companies that manage retirement accounts will calculate it for account holders. Some will let you set up automated annual withdrawals, too.

My Dumbest Investment

Bat Guano Crazy

My dumbest investment is a weird one. In the late 1950s and 1960, a mining company aimed to profit from a cave in the Grand Canyon filled with bat droppings, a fabulous treasure of fertilizer. It built a cable system across the canyon to extract the stuff and bring it to a processing plant, where it was packaged for distribution and sale. The company experienced many mishaps and problems, though, and didn't make me rich.

— P., online

The Fool Responds: It's certainly an interesting story! It turns out that the U.S. Guano Company leased the cave, which was estimated to contain 100,000 to 200,000 tons of bat guano.

It was very costly to build a tramway over a mile long, and the cable reportedly broke several times. Even worse, the cave apparently held much less guano than expected. One report said, "The company had spent $3.5 million to salvage 1,000 tons of guano, which sold for 69 cents a pound." (That amounts to about $1.4 million in revenue.)

An odd silver lining in this cloud of a story is that a U.S. Air Force aircraft accidentally flew by and severed the cable, enabling the company, reportedly, to sue the Air Force and recoup some costs. A lesson here is to consider all possible risks when deciding whether to invest in a company. Remember that estimates can turn out to be quite incorrect. ■

Last week's trivia answer

I trace my roots back to 1928, when two cousins named Ed made a folding wood-slat reclining chair for porch use. A year later they upholstered it for indoor use — and gave it a name that some might find insulting. Chair production temporarily gave way to airplane-part production during World War II. In the decades after the war, ottomans, rockers, built-in footrests and electric controls were introduced. By the '90s, my chairs offered heating and massages. Today, based in Michigan, I employ more than 6,000 people and sport a market value near $1.4 billion. Who am I? (Answer: La-Z-Boy) ■

What's Fair for Facebook?

Q I see that Facebook has a market value near $400 billion. Isn't that pretty high?

— E.M., Walnut Creek, California

A It depends on how Facebook is performing and what you think its prospects are. A company's value is largely in the eyes of its beholders.

With Facebook, you might check out a few numbers to assess its value. Its price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio, for example, was recently 39. That's far steeper than the S&P 500's recent P/E in the mid-20s, but Facebook is growing much faster than the average company. Its revenue in 2016 topped $27 billion, up from $18 billion in 2015. Over the same year, profits surged from $3.7 billion to $10.2 billion. Fast growers tend to sport steep P/E ratios.

For more context, consider the approximate recent market values of Apple ($730 billion), General Electric ($265 billion), Google parent Alphabet ($575 billion) and Amazon.com ($400 billion). Looking at those, does a $400 billion value for Facebook seem reasonable? Think about how reliable its expected earnings and growth rates are, and how sure you are that it will still be around in five or 10 years.

Facebook is not without risks, such as falling out of favor, but many investors expect it to successfully generate revenue from its daily users, who number more than 1 billion. (The Motley Fool owns shares of and has recommended Facebook.)

Q How can I look up a company's ticker symbol?

— F.L., Houston

A The simplest way is online. Enter the company's name into a search box at many major financial websites, such as finance.yahoo.com or caps.fool.com, and you'll get the symbol. You'll likely find much more information on the company there, too. ■

Name That Company

I trace my roots back to a broken typewriter ribbon in 1985 that caused my founder to envision a supermarket for office products. I opened my first store in Brighton, Massachusetts, in 1986, and by 2002, I was the world's largest seller of office supplies. I debuted the Easy Button in 2005. I have more than a thousand stores in the U.S. and Canada and more than 200 in Europe. My market value was recently near $6 billion. The Lakers, Clippers, Kings and Sparks play in a center that bears my name — though it's about 3,000 miles from my headquarters. Who am I? Think you know the answer? We'll announce it in next week's edition. ■

The Motley Fool Take

General Electric's Bright Future

Not all that long ago, General Electric (NYSE: GE) was a mega-conglomerate with its hands in a wide variety of businesses. Not anymore. GE has since sold or spun off a number of businesses (such as its financial units and NBC) and has returned to its industrial roots — but with a twist. Instead of just being a traditional manufacturer, GE is becoming a "digital industrial company," combining its software and manufacturing expertise to create next-generation products.

Those offerings include gas turbines, jet engines, light bulbs, locomotives and other industrial products that connect to the internet. When combined with a subscription to GE's Predix software, these new products will be able to run more efficiently and communicate potential maintenance issues, both of which can greatly lower operating costs.

That should allow GE to steadily steal market share and substantially grow revenue in its high-margin software division. If this works out as planned, GE's bottom line looks well positioned for growth in the years ahead.

Market watchers believe that GE's bottom line will grow by more than 12 percent annually over the next five years. That's fast for a company recently trading at a forward-looking price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio in the teens. Throw in a dividend that recently yielded 3.2 percent, and GE looks like a stock patient investors can learn to love. (The Motley Fool owns shares of General Electric.) ■

Concierge Services - Simplify Your Life

What does "Concierge Service" mean to you?

The term "Concierge" is French, meaning "keeper of the keys." History reveals "Concierge" first appeared in France in the Middle Ages. The Concierge was responsible for keeping the keys to royal households and ensuring that visiting guests had everything they needed and wanted.

Have you ever said "I need to clone myself," or "I need a wife" - even if you are a wife? Many feel there are simply not enough hours in the day. Consistently, families need to work 36 hours of activity into a 24 hour day. Although the concierge industry is fairly new, the number of companies that are catering to busy families is skyrocketing.

A concierge service assures the necessary, but often time-consuming tasks are addressed. From retrieving prescriptions and groceries, to overseeing a home repair, packing and organizing, a concierge service can be very beneficial when you simply can't be everywhere at once. Services are also valuable when you would rather be spending quality time with family, versus running errands.

Experienced concierge service providers have heard it all, so there's no need to be shy about asking for assistance. Anything from grocery shopping and planning/parties, to caring for your home, boat and plants, or maybe delivering a picnic lunch to the beach, your extra pair of hands are standing by ready to help.

Folks choose to spend their leisure time on Useppa Island in order to escape the hectic pace of life. Owning a vacation home should be just that... a vacation. This is the opportunity to enjoy time with family, relax and savor all the fun that can fit into your day and night.

On Useppa, we've found a concierge service that allows us to spend our time sailing, fishing, reading, walking the beach or swaying in a hammock. At Your Service - Island Concierge. Yes! Island Life is Good.

Make your escape to Useppa Island. Paradise Without A Passport!

Brian and Mary McColgan, Realtors® with Keller Williams Luxury Homes International, Resort & Second Home Property Specialists and Useppa residents for 30+ years, happily show and share their "paradise" with all interested.

The two-story design has 5,800 square feet under air and includes a formal dining room, bonus room, wine bar, loft with wet bar, a mud room and an open floor plan between great room, kitchen and café. The model overlooks a lake and preserve.

The Catalina's kitchen has an island with sink and dishwasher, a six-burner stovetop, steam oven and separate refrigerator and freezer.

The master suite opens to a landscaped terrace under a cedar trellis. A private garden with outdoor shower is accessed from the master bath.

Additional outdoor features include an elongated linear pool with a sun shelf, a raised spa with spillover and a fountain in a garden area near a raised fire pit. Water is introduced in fountains flanking each side of the Catalina's brick-accented entryway.

Fully furnished by award-winning Romanza Interior Design, the Catalina is on target for completion in April. It is priced at $3,995,000.

Craig Pittman, who penned a popular book on weird Florida, joins other authors at the Southwest Florida Reading Festival

BY GLENN MILLER
Florida Weekly Correspondent

Author Craig Pittman arrived without his machete for a Florida Weekly interview at a Panera Bread plopped down in a patch of Pinellas County urban sprawl more than 100 miles north of Fort Myers.

"It's in the car," Mr. Pittman jokingly said of his machete as he settled into a booth. "They frown on it in public places."

Mr. Pittman, of course, doesn't walk around wielding machetes, either for recreational or criminal activities. He is the

Get to the Garden for Naples City Limits

BY LINDSEY NESMITH
lnesmith@floridaweekly.com

The current state of country music has many longtime fans wondering, "What's so great about trucks and beer?" and "How did a drum machine make it onto Cat Country?"

Local listeners looking to add a dash of authenticity back into their music's down-home twang need look no further than the first-ever Naples City Limits festival from 7-10 p.m. Saturday, March 18, at Naples Botanical Garden.

Shane Smith and The Saints take the stage to raise money for the Children's Advocacy Center.

Part Mumford & Sons and part Creedence Clearwater Revival, the band executes a mix of rock and country with dashes of Celtic, Cajun and folk influences to connect with their audience.

"I think the greater percentage of our fan base is people who are looking for honest, genuine music that sings about things country used to sing about," frontman Shane Smith says. "You can't often hear that on the radio anymore. You have to dig for it nowadays."

He describes the band's show as high-energy and "lyrically very honest."

The words matter, he says, not only because articulate word play enhances the music and gives audiences another element to connect with, but also because he doesn't want to sing songs he can't relate to anymore.

"I just don't want to write anything that I'm going to regret as an older person," he says. "If I'm going to be sing-

FLORIDA WRITERS

Classic Naples-based mystery series says adieu with class

■ “Death in the Dark” by Kinley Roby. Privately published. 277 pages. Kindle e-book, $2.99.

This is Naples resident Kinley Roby’s 11th and final Harry Brock Mystery. Though he had planned for it to be the last, an unexpected dilemma must have sullied the closure experience a bit. Accidentally deleting the almost completed text file and its backup from his computer (a cautionary tale, writer friends), Mr. Roby had to laboriously reconstruct his narrative. In the interim, the publisher of the first 10 series titles decided to abandon the detective fiction genre, leaving the author with little choice but to self-publish it via Amazon’s Digital Services division.

The good news is that it’s here — but so far only as an e-book.

A confessed fan of the series, I found it once again meeting the high bar of the others in most ways. Readers might trip over the typos of one kind or another that haven’t yet been corrected, but there are still so many things to enjoy.

ROBY

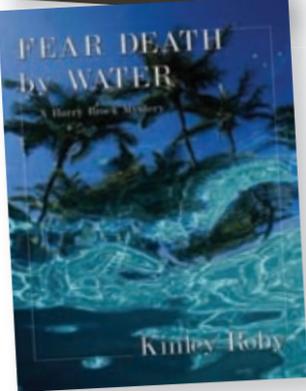

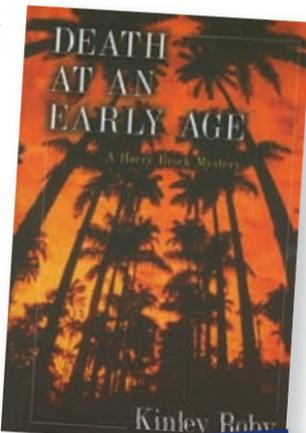

Mr. Roby sets the series in a disguised version of Naples and environs. Those familiar with the area will have fun penetrating the place names (such as “Vienna Village”) the author invents for familiar locations, as well his presentation of the cultural environment.

Harry is still running his PI business, patrolling the patch of government land called Bartram’s Hammock on the edge of the Everglades. He inhabits a small house in exchange for warden duties, and he gets mixed up in cases that also involve local, state and federal law enforcement agencies.

And, as in past adventures, beautiful women are omnipresent.

Harry’s also still spending time with his friend and neighbor, Tucker. The two aging outdoorsmen are still doing a bit of farming. It’s a delight that the author allows us to see them tending to pets with whom they carry on conversations.

Harry and Tucker are an intelligent, humorous odd couple. Tucker’s niece, Delia, temporarily living with her uncle, is one of several attractive women whom Harry admires and with whom a relationship almost blooms.

Some of the previous books in the Harry Brock mystery series by Naples resident Kinley Roby. The 11th and final installment is available only as an e-book.

Plot? An enormous international trade in stolen art run by cut-throat thieves is leaving a trail of bodies and threatens to leave more if Harry and the law enforcement officials can’t put a stop to the menace. Some of those involved in this illicit industry are on the edge of cooperating with the authorities to save their own lives and perhaps some of their filthy lucre. The ins and outs of the complex schemes that all sides are hatching create the intellectual stimulation that Mr. Roby’s novels always deliver.

The dialogue between Harry and his friends in uniform captures the nature of their relationships as well as the ways professionals develop and refine plans designed to take down criminals. Mr. Roby’s characters are well delineated by their patterns of speech and other tools of this writer’s trade.

There’s more than enough violence, including a huge shoot-out, to satisfy any filmmaker looking for a book to base a box office success upon. There’s also plenty of suspense and an unusually deep penetration into the minds and feelings of the main players.

Mr. Roby’s dedication to building complex, credible characters is best revealed in his treatment of the slow demise of Harry’s relationship with Holly, a woman he has lived with and loves, but not enough to step out of his safety zone and follow her to the place she needs to make home. Their problem with commitment and exposure is drawn with sensitivity and sympathy.

Somewhat less credible, but totally enjoyable, is the striking Russian woman named Arda Grigoryev who assists in the art theft business. More accurately, she is trapped in it. Both she and her boss warn that his involvement might lead Harry to harm; unexpectedly, they truly seem to care about him. Harry is charmed by her sexuality and by her laughable mangling of the English language. You will be, too.

A Burmese python, a bear, a sex-starved bobcat, a cerebral mule, a honey harvest and a handful of females fawning over Harry are among the many and varied ingredients in this delicious farewell to Harry Brock. (By the way, Mr. Roby is now working on a western.) ■

Children's book author never gave up the art of ad-libbing

BY NANCY STETSON

nstetson@floridaweekly.com

When author Chris Grabenstein attends a book festival or speaks at a school, he's greeted like a rock star — especially by those in the 8- to 12-year-old range.

Even reluctant readers love his books.

Third through sixth graders adore him.

"They just go crazy," he says, adding it takes a little more to win over the seventh and eighth graders.

Mr. Grabenstein is the author of such New York Times Bestsellers as "The Island of Dr. Libris" and "Escape From Mr. Lemoncello's Library." He has also collaborated with James Patterson on the I Funny, Treasure Hunters and House of Robots series and the books "Word of Mouse," "Jacky Ha-Ha" and "Daniel X: Armageddon."

When he talks in schools, he does an improvisational exercise with the kids, using their suggestions and ideas to write a story with them. It teaches them about story structure while also showing them how not to get writer's block.

"I never know what the story's going to be, what suggestions they're going to give me," he says. "It's never the same story twice. That's what keeps it interesting."

Mr. Grabenstein is one of half a dozen children's book authors attending the Southwest Florida Reading Festival taking place Saturday, March 18, in Centennial Park in downtown Fort Myers. This year's event includes adult authors such as Nathan Hill ("The Nix"), Gregg Hurwitz ("Nowhere Man"), Cassandra King ("Moonrise"), James Grippando ("Most Dangerous Place") and Beatriz

Chris Grabenstein

Williams ("The Wicked City"). A total of 26 authors of books for adults, teens and children are expected to attend.

Mr. Grabenstein will speak at the children's author/illustrator tent at 2:15 p.m. and sign books at 10:15 a.m. and 3:15 p.m.

Amusement park beginnings

Mr. Grabenstein started his career doing improv in New York City. He then began writing advertising copy, working for now-best-selling author James Patterson at J. Walter Thompson in New York City.

"He's always been, and to this day is, the hardest working man in the business," he says.

He recalls that Mr. Patterson would go to his office early and work on his books from 6 to 9 a.m. Then, from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., he'd be the ad agency's executive creative director.

"I remember seeing a picture of him in Advertising Age in 1985, a photo of him with a stack of his books, maybe five (different titles.) They weren't the huge bestsellers yet."

Inspired, Mr. Grabenstein began writing his own series of murder mysteries set in the fictional New Jersey seaside town of Sea Haven, where an amusement park is a main attraction. Like Mr. Patterson's books, these were novels for adults.

But why the amusement park?

"Mystery writers try to avoid the Cabot Cove Syndrome," he says, referring to the "Murder She Wrote" series where a murder occurred with frightening regularity in Jessica Fletcher's coastal Maine town. "It happened so often, you would think residents would author of the widely praised 2016 book "Oh, Florida! How America's Weirdest State Influences the Rest of the Country."

Mr. Pittman will appear March 18 at the Southwest Florida Reading Festival in Centennial Park. "Oh, Florida!" recently won the Florida Book Award gold medal for nonfiction.

"Learning that I'd won was so exciting that when I heard it I nearly dropped my machete," Mr. Pittman joked at the time.

His book brims with wacky and loopy stories about the ubiquitous Florida Man, which led to a Twitter account and eventually the book. But the book is about more than meth addicts and people throwing alligators through fast food drive through windows. Much more.

So was Mr. Pittman's wide-ranging chat. He touched on Florida writers, history and the environment. That makes sense because Mr. Pittman covers the environment for the Tampa Bay Times.

Through his long career he has compiled observations and insights that filled "Oh, Florida." Florida Weekly reviewer Phil Jason wrote that, "this book belongs in every Florida home."

Mr. Jason also referred to the author as "a master storyteller and a research addict." Mr. Pittman's research provided mounds of information.

"I've barely scratched the surface in my book," Mr. Pittman said.

He thought about including the Koreshans in his book. The Koreshans were a cult who settled in Estero in the 1890s. The Koreshan story was chronicled by Florida Gulf Coast University associate journalism professor Lyn Millner's book "The Allure of Immortality, An American Cult, a Florida Swamp, and a Renegade Prophet."

Mr. Pittman's original manuscript was too long. There wasn't room for the Koreshans.

"The editor kicked it back to me and said this is great but it's 100 pages too long," Mr. Pittman said. "You got to cut it."

So some stories had to be cut, including one about a fellow from Punta Gorda.

"Out went the guy who said he had a love affair with a dolphin," Mr. Pittman said.

Not even one of Florida's most fabled characters could make it.

"When I go around and give talks, they'll ask, 'Hey, do you have the Skunk Ape in there?'" Mr. Pittman said.

Alas, the Skunk Ape didn't make it. But the book made it to readers. For a while, that didn't appear likely.

"It was rejected by 15 publishers," Mr. Pittman said.

Why? Mr. Pittman said publishers liked the book and thought it was a "great" idea. But they doubted it would sell beyond the state line.

Eventually, of course, St. Martin's Press picked it up. And Mr. Pittman will appear at the Los Angeles Times Festival of Books in April, proving the book has appeal far beyond Florida.

Mr. Pittman is already working on his next book.

"I'm not really ready to talk about it but it's a more serious story," Mr. Pittman said. "It's got some wacky touches. ... It's an environmental book."

Mr. Pittman is also working on a novel.

"My goal was to write the ultimate Florida crime novel," Mr. Pittman said. "It's got machete vs. sword fight. It's got an obscene statue used as a weapon. It's got a naked meth addict and there's a retired Weeki Wachee mermaid."

Mr. Pittman isn't ready yet to announce the novel's title.

Mr. Pittman, whose Florida family roots go back to 1850, only five years after statehood, isn't embarrassed by the state's zaniness.

"What I always try to tell people is a lot of folks say to me, 'Oh, I'm always embarrassed by news coming out of Florida,'" said Mr. Pittman, who grew up in Pensacola. "I tell them don't be embarrassed. Be proud of that. Be proud that you live in the most interesting state in the union."

Mr. Pittman grew up reading and participating in Boy Scouts in the Panhandle. Both activities formed Mr. Pittman.

"I was a real, shy book-nerd sort of guy growing up," Mr. Pittman said.

Reading and stories were part of his childhood.

"My grandfather worshipped at the altar of Perry Mason," Mr. Pittman said. "He loved the TV show. He read all the books. My mother was a big fan of Agatha Christie."

Then there was his great-aunt Pansy who introduced him to perhaps the most influential Florida crime novelist of all, John D. MacDonald, creator of Travis McGee.

"When I was 14, she took a long drag on her cigarette and said, 'I think you're ready for Travis McGee' and handed me a copy of a book that had a topless woman seen from the back on the cover," Mr. Pittman said. "Yes, ma'am, I am ready for Travis McGee."

He was soon hooked on Mr. MacDonald.

"He slips in these environmental messages," Mr. Pittman said. "He teaches you that Florida is a beautiful place people are out to spoil it and maybe that's not such a good thing."

As a participant in the Southwest Florida Reading Festival, the author is a staunch supporter of reading, especially for writers.

"You got to fill up the gas tank," Mr. Pittman said. "You read other stuff so you can see how they structure sentences. You increase your vocabulary. You see how they tell a story. ... Anybody who wants to write has to read. People who don't read baffle me. I can't imagine what their lives are like. ... How do you function as a human being if you don't read?"

Craig Pittman reads. The evidence is in "Oh, Florida, How America's Weirdest State Influences the Rest of the Country." ■ say, 'Come on, let's get out of this town, someone's dying every week.'

"So I wanted to come up with a setting that had a transient population," he says. Plus, he's always had a fascination for amusement parks.

His first book in that first series, "Tilt a Whirl," won the Anthony Award and was named one of the best mysteries of 2005 by The Sun-Sentinel, the Detroit Free Press, the Christian Science Monitor, Barnes&Noble.com and BookBitch.com

He eventually wrote eight books in the series, each one named after an amusement park ride or game ("Whack a Mole," "Mad Mouse," "Fun House," for example.)

Then he wrote "a creepy ghost story about a haunted tree possessed by a demon of someone who'd crashed into it," he says. He'd written 120,000 words when his editor read it and declared it would be perfect for readers ages 8 to 12 — "if you take the adult language and situations out and cut 70,000 words," he says.

And Mr. Grabenstein, who has 20 nieces and nephews, thought: I might be able to write something my nieces and nephews could read!

So he did it. It became the first book of his Crossroads series.

"I realized, 'Wow! I've got this 12-year-old MAD magazine reader in my brain,'" he says.

A team effort

About 15 years after their time together at the ad agency, Mr. Grabenstein ran into his former boss, Mr. Patterson, at the West Palm Beach Day Academy

(Mr. Patterson's son was in the class Mr. Grabenstein was speaking to). The two decided to give collaboration a try. To date, they've written 16 books together.

If it's the first book in a series, Mr. Patterson will send him an 80-page outline. Mr. Grabenstein then sends back 10,000 words a month (toward a 40,000-word book). Then they talk on the phone and Mr. Grabenstein does rewrites.

"He is intimately involved in every one of those books," he says. "It's terrific fun. He's easy to work with. He's taught me a lot over the years how to write. He's my mentor."

Mr. Grabenstein hasn't done too shabbily on his own, though. Both "The Island of Dr. Libris" and "Escape From Mr. Lemoncello's Library" were New York Times Bestsellers. The latter was followed by "Mr. Lemoncello's Library Olympics" and "Mr. Lemoncello's Great Library Race."

And Nickelodeon made a movie out of "Escape From Mr. Lemoncello's Library." Set for release in the fall, it stars Casey Simpson (of "Nicky, Ricky, Dicky & Dawn") and Breanna Yde (of "School House Rock" and "The Haunted Hathaways").

Florida memories

He's never lived in Florida, but Mr. Grabenstein's grandparents did, and his family would visit them every year in St. Petersburg. Images from those visits — the heat in the car before air-conditioning became a standard feature, stopping on the road for cows to pass, his grandparents' rambling house and old beach motels — show up in his writing.

The second book in Mr. Grabenstein's Wonderland series is set to come out in May.

"It's a collection of all those wacky things I used to see: Gatorland in Orlando, roadside Americana statues and crazy things. It's the coolest retro motel you can imagine ... a struggling underdog place like the mom-and-pop roadside attractions — Weeki-Wachee Springs, glass bottom boats, Frontier Town — all those memories rolled into one."

Mr. Grabenstein says he's still doing improv — only now it's on the page.

"Take whatever comes into your brain, don't deny it, take it and build on it," he says. "Just put down whatever crazy thing comes into your imagination. Write down crazy stuff, then you can make connections."

You never know where an idea will take you.

When he and his wife flew out to Vancouver to see some of "Escape From Mr. Lemoncello's Library" being filmed, she was "totally blown away," he says, adding she looked at all the actors and costumes and lighting and sets and crew and said in wonder, "All these people are here because of that silly idea!" ■

ARTS COMMENTARY

Lavish and lovely: The Naples Players present 'My Fair Lady'

The news that two theaters in Naples, just blocks away from each other, would present the same show in the same season was initially met with consternation. But theatergoers — and the venues themselves — need not have worried.

Gulfshore Playhouse (an Equity theater) and The Naples Players (a community theater) gave audiences two completely different experiences with their productions of Lerner and Loewe's beloved "My Fair Lady."

Gulfshore Playhouse staged an innovative, minimalist production late last year. Ten actors played all the roles, and two pianists, one on each side of the state, provided all of the accompaniment.

The Naples Players take a more traditional approach for their rendition. It's a big, lavish celebration of the classic musical with full sets, a cast of 32 and a 13-piece orchestra in the pit.

Elizabeth Marcantonio as Eliza Doolittle makes a highly believable transformation from a lower-class girl selling flowers on the streets to "a proper lady." You see the light going on in her brain when she finally grasps how to say, "The rain in Spain falls mainly in the plane" properly. And when she attends her first ball, she looks like a princess. (Kudos to costume designer Mary Wallace.)

David Whalley is perfect as Col. Pickering, who enters into a bet with Professor Henry Higgins who claims he can transform "a common girl" into someone who can pass as royalty. The colonel's kindness is a balm, and possibly the thing that transforms Eliza more than Professor Higgins' relentless phonetic exercises.

Dave Gipson excels as the professor. I'd initially thought it odd casting, but it's possibly Mr. Gipson's best role on the Sugden Community Theatre stage. His Professor Higgins is a character you love to hate: a bully, a tyrant, egotistical and arrogant to the extreme. He possesses an inflated view of himself and doesn't see his own shortcomings at all, insisting that he's a reasonable man, even-tempered, when he's obviously not. You love to see him get his comeuppance.

Elizabeth Marcantonio, left, as the newly (but not quite completely) transformed Eliza Doolittle at the Royal Ascot races along with Scott Davis, Patti Caroli and Dennis Villarreal.

Players debut as his mother, Mrs. Higgins, does such a terrific job. I wish her role were bigger. The actress received well-deserved exit applause in one of her scenes and I can't wait to see her onstage again.

And Brad Brenner as Alfred Doolittle, Eliza's father, puts in a solid performance as the silver-tongued drunkard who suddenly finds himself elevated to the middle class. His two songs, "With a Little Bit of Luck" and "Get Me to the Church On Time" are joyous, full-out numbers that rock the house. However, there were times when I wish he'd sacrificed accuracy of accent for clarity; it was sometimes difficult to decipher his extremely thick accent, especially when his character's slurring his words due to drunkenness.

Also of note: Frank Scott Davis as Freddy Eynesford-Hill. His lovesick young man who swoons about in front of Professor Higgins' house in hopes of catching a glimpse of Eliza delivers a sweet version of "On the Street Where You Live."

Charles Fornara's orchestra is superb accompaniment and doesn't overwhelm the singers at all. He's done an excellent job with all the singers — leads and ensemble members alike. The harmonizing at times is exquisite.

Director and choreographer Dawn Lebrecht Fornara keeps this musical moving along, though it clocks in at almost three hours (typical of musicals of its era). Yet, the show never drags, thanks to staging and choreography so well done you have to keep reminding yourself these are not professional actors on stage. Ms. Fornara has single-handedly brought these local actors light years ahead of where they were just a few years ago, especially as dancers. Todd Potter's two-level set of the professor's study is filled with books and gramophone recording devices, an environment worthy of a man who buries himself in his work.

"My Fair Lady" is a much-loved play, and tickets to this production are selling quickly.

But watching it with a 21st century mentality can be a frustrating experience at times. The men are so misogynistic, especially Professor Higgins and Mr. Doolittle. The professor sees Eliza as merely an experiment and doesn't take her feelings into consideration, or even recognize that she has any. And both he and her father make comments about beating her or taking off a belt and whipping her into submission.

The professor infantilizes Eliza, yet turns around and wonders why she can't be more like an equal, "more like a man." He's just an insufferable grump, an overgrown child.

You get to feeling she'd be better off without him ... and possibly, after the musical ends, you hope she has the wherewithal to leave him for good.

Still, "My Fair Lady" is an interesting study in transformation, how knowledge and the kindness of others can change us for the better. Both Eliza and her father realize they can never return to the people they once were; they've changed too much, they know too much now.

Whether Professor Higgins has also been transformed remains to be seen. His big 11 o'clock number, "I've Grown Accustomed to Her Face," is not exactly a ringing declaration of love. What woman would be thrilled to be told, "I'm used to having you around"? It seems he still views their relationship in terms of how it affects him, how it will benefit him. He might have been temporarily humbled by Eliza's leaving, but he still has a lot to learn.

"My Fair Lady" is not only about gender relations but a look at class differences, too. The same people who think so little of Eliza when she's a poor girl peddling flowers esteem her when they think she's a member of high society or even possibly royalty.

If you want to see "My Fair Lady" with a full cast and orchestration, this production is just your cup of tea. ■

HOROSCOPES

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A patch of roiling water in the workplace could be threatening, but stay the course and you'll soon be clear of it. Then go out and have a great time with loved ones.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Put your restlessness to good use by indulging the Arian love of exploring new places and seeking new challenges. There also could be a new romance waiting to be "discovered."

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A surprise message from someone in your past could lead to a long-awaited reunion with a once-close friend. Also, look for a workplace problem to be resolved in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your self-confidence is rising, and that should be a significant factor in helping you adjust to a new social situation, as well as adjusting to a series of changes in the workplace.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Turnabout could be lots of fun when someone who previously accepted your tender, loving care without question now suggests that he or she wants to start taking care of you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put the lessons you learned from past disappointments to work in planning your future. The way ahead opens to opportunities "purrrfectly" suited to the adventurous Lion.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to renew contacts with family members and/or old friends who somehow slipped off your personal viewing screen in recent years. Travel also is favored.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Most problems surrounding that recent personal situation have been resolved, and that means you should move on to other things that are important to you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Spend this weekend recharging your physical and spiritual energies. When you return to your workaday world, you'll be ready to take on that new project.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful how you advise a troubled friend. Even your wise counsel could be misunderstood. Better to suggest that he or she seek professional help.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Family problems once again dominate and, once again, everyone seeks your guidance in these matters. Later, you can indulge in some much-needed relaxation.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Some mixed signals create confusion in the workplace. Best advice: Ask for explanations before you attempt to deal with any of these matters on your own.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your extraordinary leadership qualities mark you as someone people can turn to for guidance in difficult situations. ■

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Points, shmoints

BY STEVE BECKER

The number of tricks a side can make often is determined by distributional factors rather than high-card points, as witness this deal from a match between Ireland and Italy.

The Irish declarer, Peter Pigot, got to four hearts doubled as shown after East, Benito Garozzo, opened with one club, showing 16 or more points.

West led a spade, ruffed by Pigot, who returned the king of diamonds and discarded a spade from dummy. East took the ace and played another spade, ruffed again by declarer.

Pigot now cashed the queen of diamonds, discarding dummy's last spade, and made the key play of a low trump from his A-10-9, won by East with the queen. Garozzo could do no better than return a trump, won by South with the ace.

After ruffing a diamond with dummy's last trump, Pigot took a club finesse, which won, and led the J-10 of diamonds. West ruffed with his high trump and played still another spade, but Pigot ruffed and scored the last two tricks with the A-J of clubs to make four hearts doubled.

Thus it was that South, with 17 points, scored 10 tricks, while East-West, with 23 points, scored only three.

The outcome emphasizes that what counts in bridge is the number of tricks you can take and not the number of East dealer.

FILM CAPSULES

Kong: Skull Island ★★½

(Brie Larson, Tom Hiddleston, Samuel L. Jackson) In 1973, a group of explorers encounter a giant ape and other creatures on a remote island in the South Pacific. The action and effects are impressive, but the story takes a turn for the worse in its second half. If you go, see it in IMAX 3D – the visuals are tremendous. Rated PG-13.

Before I Fall ★★

(Zoey Deutch, Halston Sage, Jennifer Beals) After dying in a car accident, a teenager wakes to relive the same day until...well, that's what she needs to figure out. It's "Groundhog Day" as a teen girl drama, and though it has some intriguing ideas it plays out in pretty standard ways. Rated PG-13.

Fist Fight ★

(Ice Cube, Charlie Day, Tracy Morgan) A public high school teacher (Mr. Day) gets his colleague (Mr. Cube) fired after tattling on him after he destroyed a student-occupied desk with an axe. It's crass and unrealistic, but worst of all, it's an unfunny mish mash of a high school that is truly out of this world. Rated R.

The LEGO Batman Movie ★★★

(Voices of Will Arnett, Zach Galifianakis, Jenny Slate) Bruce Wayne/Batman (Mr. Arnett) adopts an orphan (voice of Michael Cera) and fights The Joker (Mr. Galifianakis) and other Gotham City villains in this spinoff of "The LEGO Movie" (2014). It's more than DC Comics characters who come into play (Sauron, Voldemort, etc.), which is part of the fun – and it is a heckuva lot of fun. Rated PG.

The Comedian ★★

(Robert De Niro, Leslie Mann, Edie Falco) Struggling stand-up comic Jackie Burke (Mr. De Niro) bickers with his agent (Ms. Falco) and finds a kindred spirit in a woman he meets in a soup kitchen (Ms. Mann). The jokes are hit and miss, the story labors and ultimately, Jackie is too pigheaded to root for. Rated R.

A Dog's Purpose ★½

(Britt Robertson, Dennis Quaid, voice of Josh Gad) The soul of a dog (Mr. Gad) is reincarnated over four lifetimes, touching different humans in the process. It might appeal to kids, but anyone else – even dog lovers – will find the manipulative, forced drama tough to stomach. Rated PG.

20th Century Women ★★★½

(Annette Bening, Lucas Jade Zumann, Elle Fanning) In 1979, a singer mother (Ms. Bening) asks two female friends (Ms. Fanning and Greta Gerwig) to help her 15-year-old son (Mr. Zumann) become a man. Ms. Bening leads the stellar ensemble in this wonderful coming of age story that sublimely captures the travails of adolescence and the spirit of the '70s. Don't miss it! Rated R.

Silence ★★

(Andrew Garfield, Adam Driver, Liam Neeson) Director Martin Scorsese's latest follows two priests (Mr. Garfield and Mr. Driver) as they travel to Japan to find their mentor (Mr. Neeson). It notably lacks Mr. Scorsese's dynamic style, and as a result is a dull bore of 161 minutes. Rated R. ■

LATEST FILMS

'The Sense of an Ending'

danHUDAK
punchdrunkmovies.com

Is it worth $10? No

For a movie that highlights the ending in its title, "The Sense of an Ending" doesn't have much of one. It's anticlimactic, if anything. This is especially disappointing because the rest of the Ritesh Batra ("The Lunchbox") directed film deserves better. For most of the 108 minute running time we are intrigued by the personal history of its protagonist, and the cloudy memory that distorts his recollection. It lends itself to a fascinating guessing game of where it'll go next, only to find out the destination leaves something to be desired.

Living in London, Tony Webster is a churlish, impatient malcontent. Because he's played with endearing vulnerability by Oscar-winner Jim Broadbent ("Iris"), we like him anyway. He's divorced from Margaret (Harriet Walter), and his daughter Susie (Michelle Dockery) is pregnant with no father in the picture. But they're not the source of Tony's distress. That comes when he gets a letter from Sarah Ford (Emily Mortimer), whose daughter Veronica (played by Charlotte Rampling when older) dated Tony 40 years earlier. There's a diary from Tony's old school chum, Adrian (Joe Alwyn) that was left to Tony but is in Veronica's possession. Getting the diary, and subsequently what's in it, comprise the bulk of the story.

For perspective, we also have flashbacks to young Tony (Billy Howle) and Veronica (Freya Mavor) dating, and see how Adrian came into their lives. These flashbacks are welcome and essential, as they add perspective to the present day and allow the film's overall narrative to build in tension. And to be sure, there are twists along the way that keep us on our toes, but the script by Nick Payne (based on the book by Julian Barnes) is careful to never turn into a soap opera.

What's compelling here is the way Batra plays with memory, and how our emotions sometimes sanitize unsavory events to make us feel not so horrible about them. This makes sense as an instinct of self-preservation, but it also welcomes delusion, and one of the film's shortcomings is that there aren't more consequences for Tony's misremembering. Relatedly, Payne's script recognizes that we cannot know exact truths unless we experienced them ourselves, and even then there are the sugarcoated memories in play. This is an important theme, as what Tony recalls happening in the past is directly related to what we're seeing in the present. If only Batra did more with these themes besides present them, make us consider them, and then ultimately render them moot.

The elements in "The Sense of an Ending" are fodder for a better movie than what we get, making it a wasted opportunity to create a piece of art that truly resonates. Broadbent, Rampling and the rest of the cast are fine, but there's only so much they can provide when the story doesn't do them justice. ■

Pitcher this: A Toby find that smiles across the ages

scott SIMMONS
 ssimmons@floridaweekly.com

I remember the first Toby jug I bought. It depicted a little fat man holding a mug. It could not have been more than 3 inches high and, though crudely painted, had the most beautiful cobalt blue glaze on its coat. I found it in an antiques shop in North Fort Myers and probably still have it somewhere, if I dig around. I thought it was an antique at the time, but it was marked "England," so I know now that it was made after the 1890s and would not have been considered an antique at the time. Ah, the things you learn. I'm sure my fascination with pieces like that stemmed from my love of history. It didn't hurt that Maas

Brothers, Jordan Marsh, Burdines and other department stores of the day carried Royal Doulton mugs depicting historical characters, including British monarchs.

The mugs depicting Henry VIII and his six wives especially appealed to me after I had seen Glenda Jackson in the "Elizabeth R" TV series in the early '70s — the mugs depicting Anne Boleyn and Catherine Howard bore handles in the shape of axes as a reminder of their fates.

Those pieces were vividly painted and caught my 10-year-old eye, but were out of my price range. They were new, but from a tradition that dated back to the mid-18th century.

Toby jugs, also known as Fillpots or Philpots, usually had the form of a seated person holding a vessel from which liquid could be poured. Toby mugs usually were just the head, and often were caricatures of real folks.

And the name?

"Most likely, it was named after a notorious 18th century Yorkshire drinker, Henry Elwes, who was known as 'Toby Fillpot' (or Philpot) and was inspired by an old English drinking song, 'The Brown Jug,' which paid tribute to Toby Fillpot, whose ashes were made into Toby's jug," according to the American Toby Jug Museum's website.

So now you know, and so do I. ■

THE FIND: A Toby jug

The place: Resale Therapy, 4595 Northlake Blvd, Palm Beach Gardens; (561) 691-4590 or www.resaletherapyshoppe.com.

Cost: $20

The skinny: The experts I know were pretty evenly divided as to whether this jug was made in England or Germany. Typically, the English marks are clearly defined, especially on later 19th century pieces such as this ample lady, who sits with a jug on her knee ready to pour milk. This bears no marking, other than an impressed "CF" on its bottom. That marking could indicate Charles Ford, who was in business in England between 1874 and 1904, according to ThePotteries.org, which gives a history of Stoke-on-

Trent and Staffordshire, where so many English wares were made.

I was worried that it was a reproduction. The bottom is immaculate, with none of the marks one would associate with something that had a century of use.

"It has honest wear," said my friend, Jacksonville antiques dealer Jim Antone, who also manages the floor at the West Palm Beach Antiques Festival. He noted that the gold trim on the wishbone-shaped handle was slightly worn, though the rest of the piece was immaculate.

No matter, the piece has a great look and looks great with my collection of English porcelains and ceramics. ■

ing when I'm in my 60s, I want to relate to the songs.

"That would be the most frustrating thing ever as a songwriter or band — to have to sing music that you just can't identify with but that are the songs people want to hear. That's the ultimate worst. It means nothing to you."

Mr. Smith, who comes from northwest Texas, is joined by fiddler Bennett Brown, guitarist Tim Allen, bass player Chase Satterwhite and percussionist Bryan McGrath, all of whom have been beating down a demanding tour that has taken them as far afield as Malaysia. It was an extremely cool experience, he says, encountering a different culture that embraced and enjoyed the band's Americana sound.

Rural communities in the U.S. however, seem to have the most enthusiastic response to The Saints' work, he adds. "You can tell that their only source to finding music is mainstream radio ... they're a little more taken away with our shows because we're so different.

"I don't know that tons of bands end up in Atwood, Kan., and so you can see a difference of reaction in places like that."

Shane Smith and The Saints will also be joined by local favorite, The Good Bad Kids, for a show that elevates American roots music to a fever pitch.

Naples City Limits is the second part of a fundraiser for the Children's Advocacy Center of Collier County, which works to improve the lives of abused children. Preceding the concert is the organization's 21st annual Beach Ball, starting at 5 p.m. in a tent adjacent to the concert site. Guests will enjoy a Fiji-themed gala with food from Lurcat Catering, specialty beverages, raffles and a live auction (among the action lots: four-nights at the New Orleans Jazz & Heritage Festival with luxury accommodations, and two tickets to a sold-out Lady Gaga concert in Tampa).

Tickets to Naples City Limits start at $22.50 and go up to $120 for VIP seating and an open bar.

Guests who want to enjoy both Beach Ball Fiji and the concert can purchase a full evening of entertainment for $300. For more information, visit www.caccollier.org or www.nclfestival.com. ■

'These Shining Lives' sheds light on the Radium Girls of the 1920s

BY PATRICE SHIELDS

Special to Florida Weekly

In recognition of Women's History Month, The Naples Players present Melanie Marnich's historical drama, "These Shining Lives," March 22-April 15 in the Tobye Studio at the Sugden Community Theatre. Jessica Walck directs.

Set in the 1920s at the factory Radium Dial on the outskirts of Chicago, the play is inspired by the true story of the young women, now remembered as The Radium Girls, who were poisoned by the luminous paint they applied to numbers on the faces of clocks and watches. The uplifting but ominous story chronicles the strength and determination of women considered expendable in their day.

The story follows Catherine (JamiLynn Bucci), a young mother who is happily married to her ironworker husband Tom (Jesse Hughes). Catherine opens the play with the lines that are both hopeful and foreboding: "This isn't a fairy tale, though it starts like one. It's not a tragedy, though it ends like one."

Catherine takes a job in a local watch factory to help make ends meet at home and meets Pearl (Amy Hughes), the incessant jokester; Frances (Katherine Oni), the moral backbone; and sharp-tongued Charlotte (Jasmine Vizena), the brutally honest one of the group. As the women happily paint watch dials with radium, sharpening the point of their brushes between their lips to accurately apply the radium to the dials, they become the best of friends.

When they start to notice the unusual effects of working with radium, the women are quickly reassured by the factory foreman Mr. Reed (Mark Vanagas) that radium is in no way harmful and might in fact have health benefits. And when they begin to succumb to the devastating effects of radium, the company refuses to acknowledge the issue and begins to systematically fire them when their illnesses interfere with their work. Though critically ill, the women choose to stand up and fight for justice. These women and their strength still shine brightly today and their resilient efforts for justice set in motion workplace safety standards and worker's compensation, introduced to protect future generations. ■

Island Theater Company's latest promises to fetch lots of laughs

The Island Theater Company on Marco presents the contemporary adult comedy "Men Are Dogs" March 16-20 and April 19-23 at the Marco Island Historical Museum. Playwright Joseph Simonella will attend the 7:30 p.m. shows on April 20 and 22 and conduct a talkback with the audience after each performance.

The play stars Diana Back as Cecelia, a successful psychologist who, among many sessions, runs a support group for single and divorced women. She's got troubles of her own, but it's her ensemble of neurotic patients who provide the action when a "volunteer" role-player becomes the hapless victim of their not-inconsiderable ire.

Judy Daye has the role of Rose, Cecelia's fun-loving "live-in" mom who offers her daughter unsolicited dating advice. Ray Kane plays the substitute postal deliveryman who strikes up a relationship with Cecelia.

John Moulton is Tony, a divorced, pompous, part-time actor hired by Cecelia to role-play with her patients.

Abby Yetter plays Allison, a hairdresser and the latest addition to Cecelia's group. Another member of the group is Madeline, is played by Carol Clark. Madeline is a comically dark, angry woman who has been burned way too many times.

The cast of "Men Are Dogs"

Maria Tobin plays Jane, a member of the group who is a bit of a "dim light bulb" and often misses the meaning of things going on around her. And Monico Sooy plays Loretta, the "wild child" who adds plenty of spark to every group meeting.

Ann Megna directs "Men Are Dogs" for the Island Theater Company. The show is sponsored by Clausen Properties. ■

CELEBRITY EXTRA

Series starring singer Jewel returns in April on Hallmark

BY CINDY ELAVSKY

Q: Last year I saw a movie on cable that starred Jewel, the singer, and she solved a murder mystery. It was based on a book series, so I was wondering if they were planning to make the movies into a series.

— Lyla F, via email

RYLAN PLUMMER
JEWEL

A: You are talking about Hallmark Movies and Mysteries' "Fixer Upper Mysteries," which are based on best-selling author Kate Carlisle's book series. I am happy to report that because of record-breaking viewing numbers, there will be more installments coming your way. The second movie is "Concrete Evidence: A Fixer Upper Mystery," and it premieres Sunday, April 2, at 9 p.m. ET/PT. I spoke with Jewel recently about the series, and she is thrilled to return to the role of Shannon Hughes.

"Shannon is a woman who once didn't trust her intuition, and it cost her very dearly with her mother, and she made a promise to herself to never ignore her intuition again. And her fight is really every woman's fight, every human's right, which is to speak up for your inner 'knowing' and what you know is right and act on that. It was so synergistic with the platform that I'm building (with jewelneverbroken.com), and getting to act a character who's actually trying to live the same thing was a real fun opportunity."

Jewel also sees parallels between acting and being a singer/songwriter/poet: "While there are definitely different aspects of the craft, the way I find my way into it is pretty similar. I wasn't formally taught music; I taught myself guitar, and you teach yourself songwriting — same thing with poetry."

Q: Do you know when "Game of Thrones" will be back? Usually it's around April or May, but I haven't heard anything.

— George A. in Rhode Island

A: HBO has pushed back the premiere a few months. While there is not an exact date as of this writing, word has it that season seven will premiere in July. Don't forget, season seven will have only seven episodes, with the eighth and final season rumored to have just six.

Q: A few months back, I heard about a new Bill Nye science show. Can you give me any more information on that?

— Kelli T., via email

A: "Bill Nye Saves the World" drops April 21 on Netflix. Each episode will tackle a topic from a scientific point of view, dispelling myths and refuting anti-scientific claims that may be espoused by politicians, religious leaders or titans of industry. ■

— Write to Cindy at King Features Weekly Service, 628 Virginia Drive, Orlando, FL 32803; or email her at letters@cindyelavsky.com.

VINO

Catching up on the wine tasting

The wine business is, in one sense, like any other. Winemakers want to get their products in front of the public. Some companies advertise their wares on television, or radio or in newspapers. Wine producers have different strategies.

One of the great things about being a journalist in general — and a wine journalist in particular — is that wineries and their public relations firms send out sample bottles, in the hope that we will evaluate the wines and recommend them to our readers. As you know, I do that faithfully in this space twice a month.

However, the supply far exceeds the space I'm given, as well as the lamentable infrequency of my column, so bottles tend to stack up in the cellar, awaiting my attention and evaluation. The backlog recently got so large I invited some very knowledgeable and discriminating wine friends over for a massive tasting session, where we sampled, critically discussed and rated about 20 different wines. We were very happy when we finished.

So this column is a kind of "catch up" piece, where I'm listing several wines we particularly enjoyed. I hope you like them as well as we did. And please persist to the Q&A at the end ... it's an especially interesting topic.

Matanzas Creek Merlot Sonoma 2013 ($30) — A full-bodied effort, dark ruby in the glass and bold aromas of chocolate and red fruit. Very fruit forward, and certainly a great food wine. WW 90-91.

Avignonesi Rosso di Montalcino 2014 ($17) — This "baby Brunello" would be great with grilled meats. Medium-bodied on the palate, flavors of red currant, cherry, and violets. WW 89.

Concannon Petite Sirah 2014 ($11) —

Great value, and a steal at the price. A big, dark, black wine in the glass, it delivers aromas of warm earth and smoke, but fruit flavors on the palate. You'll enjoy the complexity of the blackberry, raspberry, black pepper, baking chocolate and mushroom. Lovely. WW 89-90.

Bousquet Malbec Tupungato Valley Mendoza Grande Reserva 2013 ($25) — A wine that's very much about the place and the soil ... an Old World style. Bold flavors of earth, truffle and black tobacco. WW 88.

Kendall-Jackson Chardonnay Grand Reserve 2015 ($14) — From the middle-range of the KJ portfolio, this is a great everyday sipper. Medium bodied, with balanced oak notes supporting apple and lemon flavors. WW 87-88

Meomi Chardonnay California 2015 ($13) — Grapes are blended from three very diverse regions in this wine. It's bold and creamy with a buttery mouthfeel and an entertaining hint of buttered popcorn. Straightforward flavors of pear and white peach. WW 88.

Ask the Wine Whisperer

Q: I've read some articles recently about "vegan" wines. Can you clarify what this terms means?

— Harris G., Port St. Lucie
 A: This isn't the first question I've received about the issue of so-called "vegan" wines. This term is starting to enter the vocabulary of the wine world, and there's a lot of confusion about it. So let me try to answer it in some detail.

Wine is made from fruit, which is about as vegan as things get. What could there possibly be in the bottle that comes from animals? Well, it turns out there are two things.

Often, wine is put through a process called "fining." This is a way to clarify the liquid and get rid of any floating fruit solids that remain after fermentation and the "racking" of the wine from the big vats into smaller barrels. Fining involves putting some substance in the wine that's heavier than the liquid. It settles to the bottom, taking the particles with it. For centuries winemakers have used either gelatin or egg whites as fining agents. Both are derived from animal products, and that's what has the vegans on edge.

More recently, many winemakers use another pure inert material such as bentonite, which is a clay formed by the weathering of volcanic ash. So it's a mineral. It also has a strong negative charge, so it pulls impurities toward it. The problem is that while some bottle labels will tell you the product is "unfiltered and unfinned," it will never tell you whether it was fined ... or what kind of fining agent was used. So the concept of "vegan" wines will remain somewhat problematic, at least for the time being. ■

Antica Trattoria chef honors his southern Italian roots

Early last summer, I pulled into Antica Trattoria on Bonita Beach Road in the middle of a rainstorm. The parking lot was deserted, the front door was open and the tables were unoccupied. Not good omens, obviously, but it was too late to turn around and find another restaurant to review.

So, we sat down and ordered glasses of wine. That's when the server told us: They were closing for summer the next day. Chef-owner Antonio Scotto insisted on cooking for us anyway and encouraged us to return in the fall. I can't remember what he served us from his diminished pantry, but it was good, wholesome Italian food and the hospitality and integrity mattered more than the specific dish.

I do remember the chef bemoaning the fact that most customers wanted the familiar, tried-and-true dishes — parmigiana, picatta, puttanesca — while he yearned to celebrate his culinary roots in the coastal Campania region of southwestern Italy. He vowed to represent the region when he came back after the summer hiatus.

True to his word, Mr. Scotto has a full complement of chef's selections on his current menu. He pays homage to the rustic pleasures of braised rabbit (must be ordered two days in advance), sautéed beef tripe, beef braciola and grilled octopus with cannellini. The nine selections allow him to satisfy his soul while placating the predictable American palate with the rest of the menu. There are chicken and veal dishes prepared in seven variations, seven basic pasta dishes and a few baked ones, and a half-dozen seafood entrees.

The door once again was open when we arrived on a Friday night — a sign of welcome or is the air conditioning not functioning properly? The story inside this time was different. There were numerous parties eating and continuing to come in. Chef Scotto and another cook were busy in the open kitchen, and the staff appeared to be struggling a bit to keep up.

Located in a former fast food restaurant between U.S. 41 and the beach since 2015, Antica Trattoria has an open, casual feel with lots of natural light. Tables are well spaced apart in the ivory, black and burgundy dining area. The restaurant serves only beer and wine, and the selections could stand to be expanded. If you only want a glass of the grape, you have to settle for house wine. Our Pinot Noir was $8 a glass and just OK. Bottle options run a reasonable $22-$95 and favor Italians with just a few California products.

First to arrive were big yeasty rolls slick with butter and with just a hint of garlic — a nice change from the usual garlic knots or crusty bread.

From the short list of appetizers, we zeroed in on mussels Vesuvio ($8). The dozen glossy black shellfish all opened to reveal plump, tender mussels within. They were sautéed in a simple sauce of cherry tomatoes and garlic and served atop slices of toasted bread that soaked up some of the sweet sauce. With the name Vesuvio, I was expecting a pop of heat, perhaps from crushed red pepper, but that was not the case. Nevertheless, the sauce was a flavorful pairing for the shellfish.

The fried zucchini planks ($9) were very lightly battered, almost like tempura, and dusted with Parmesan. They were obviously hand cut, not out of a freezer like your typical chain restaurant. Tossed in for good measure were bite-sized potato croquettes that were crispy on the outside and creamy within. A thin tomato sauce was provided for dipping.

House salads were included, and they were composed of fresh greens with red pepper slivers, shredded carrot and black olives.

As regular readers know, we eat at a lot of Italian restaurants because they just keep proliferating. Mr. Scotto is making the effort to offer something beyond the usual Italian-American repertoire, so we decided to focus on his chef's selections for our main course.

The Polipo al Tegamo ($24) features octopus, which seems to be enjoying a moment in the culinary spotlight after decades of indifference in America.

Here it's gently simmered in a fresh cherry-tomato sauce seasoned with a bit of garlic, wine and fresh basil. Slow cooking renders the leg meat incredibly tender and imbues it with mouthwatering tomato flavor. A generous portion is ladled over cavatelli pasta for a delicious and hearty entree.

Another chef's selection, Granchio e Gamberi all Nerone ($26), showcased some of our local waters' treasures. Hefty chunks of jumbo lump crabmeat and three grilled jumbo shrimp were tucked into a bed of "lentil polenta," a smooth puree with a mild flavor that played a strong supporting role for the dish. The main attraction, of course, was the crab and perfectly grilled shell-on shrimp. The only fault with this entrée: dollops of pesto that had the bitter taste of old or jarred basil sauce. There was fresh basil on the premises — we saw the chef plucking leaves for garnish from a plant kept on the kitchen counter. Considering the care taken with the dish's other ingredients, it's hard to understand the misstep.

Mr. Scotto's wife, Claudia Plaza, is the pastry chef behind such delights as a pear and dark chocolate tart, complete with buttery crust, and flaky, pastry-crème-stuffed Napoleon ($7 each).

Go ahead and indulge. Antica Trattoria honors the traditions of the old country well. ■

"Mediterra is by far the most recognizable community in Southwest Florida and is becoming well known throughout the country and the world," said Mark Wilson, president and CEO of London Bay Homes, which manages all new home construction sales and marketing for the community. "Mediterra sets the standard for private clubs and is a great place to live. It offers every possible amenity sought after by the luxury homebuyer: 36 holes of Tom Fazio-designed championship golf, a Beach Club on the Gulf of Mexico, a variety of dining options, plus activities like tennis and bocce, social clubs and events."

Enhancing Mediterra's lifestyle are new single-family villas and custom estate homes built by London Bay Homes, which also offers homebuyers the exclusive opportunity to bypass an approximately one-year waiting list for a membership. The builder has reserved 28 golf memberships for new homebuyers.

Mediterra homes, many offering a maintenance-free lifestyle, are tucked away in intimate neighborhoods along golf fairways, sparkling lakes and nature preserves. Five furnished model homes featuring interior design by Romanza Interior Design are now open for viewing. London Bay Homes' one- and two-story homes offer generously sized designs flowing to outdoor destinations, including covered alfresco living and dining areas, fire pits and intimate garden spots. The homes embody the builder's commitment to its clients' self-expression, quality and attention to detail – the hallmarks of its Private Label Living.

Additional models are in various stages of construction and another seven models will open later in 2017, Wilson said.

The Club at Mediterra is also lauded as one of the top private clubs in the world by BoardRoom magazine and was recently ranked among the top 50 of the nation's 150 best private clubs by Platinum Club – the only Naples facility on the 2016-18 list.

Always mindful of enhancing the member experience with white-glove service and new amenities, the club recently completed extensive improvements to both golf courses, doubled the size of the Sports Club's fitness center and added tennis and bocce courts. Golf membership is limited to just 450 to ensure a premier experience.

Mediterra's award-winning lifestyle also includes an outdoor pool and spa treatments at the Sports Club, multiple indoor and outdoor gathering areas, and epicurean cuisine and bistro fare served at the 32,000-square-foot clubhouse.

Spanning 4,493 square feet of living space, the Capriano in Cortile overlooks a nature preserve and features a pool with a cascading waterfall fountain and spa.

The community's private Beach Club promises the perfect beach day and sunset views, providing convenient concierge service for chaises, umbrellas, towels, food and beverage right on the white-sugar sand. The

Phase II models now open at Naples Square

With Phase II residents at Naples Square beginning to move into their new homes, The Ronto Group announced that three new furnished Phase II model residences are now open for viewing. Ronto is developing Naples Square at the corner of 5th Avenue South and Goodlette-Frank Road in downtown Naples. The community's walkable lifestyle is changing how people live in the downtown district. Six Phase II residences remain available for purchase. The four available Phase II plans range from 1,529 to 2,857 square feet under air and are priced from the mid-$700's. Each of the plans features open-concept living areas, open-air terraces, controlled access under-building parking, private storage, and bicycle storage within the garage.

Baer's Furniture's Janet Graham, ASID created the interior for the Phase II Chelsea model. Graham is bringing a soft contemporary design to the Chelsea's two-bedroom plus den, two-and-a-half bath plan that includes 1,843 square feet under air and a 238 square feet balcony. The great room, master bedroom, and guest bedroom open to the balcony. The plan features a kitchen with a peninsula bar and food preparation area with a double-sink and dishwasher. The owner's suite includes walk-in closets and a bath with a glass-enclosed shower and tub and separate vanities.

Graham's design conveys an urban look reflecting the vibrancy of the home's downtown location. Off-white walls complement 12" x 24" porcelain wood-look tile flooring presented in pale cream with a subtle taupe variation. The tile runs throughout the main area, into the guest room, and onto the balcony. The kitchen perimeter and island cabinetry are finished in a White Chocolate Truffle tone with chrome hardware. White quartz countertops are accented by a pale green, watery blue, and iridescent silver glass chicklet backsplash.

The porcelain tile flooring transitions to wall-to-wall carpeting in the owner's suite. The master bath's porcelain tile flooring is also found in the shower and tub surround. Vanity cabinetry with a White Chocolate Truffle finish is topped by white quartz counters.

The owners will enjoy the balcony's 40" round dining table and four chairs. Club chairs with ottomans flank a 24" table outside the owners' suite.

The Phase II Ballard model features an interior by Robb & Stucky's Susan J. Bleda, ASID and interior designer Rachele Porco. The plan offers 1,732 square feet of living space, including an open-air balcony, and features two bedrooms, two baths, a den, great room, and an island kitchen. The great room, owner's bedroom, and guest bedroom open to the balcony. The balcony offers two areas for relaxing.

Twilight is the inspiration for Ballard model's interior. The designers have created a magical ambiance with glass and Lucite materials, reflective chrome and silver metal surfaces, and white backgrounds with accents of periwinkle blue, grayed lavender, and silver. The foyer features a circular tile flooring inset outlined by metal strips. The detail is set into Carerra-look white porcelain tile with gray accents.

The great room features a media wall with a linear fireplace. The media wall is faux-finished with silver striations. Recessed and paneled ceiling details create definition between the great room and dining areas. A Parsons-style rectangular dining table features a white quartz top and stainless steel legs. White leather dining chairs surround the table.

White shaker-style cabinetry in the kitchen is complemented by a sunset-toned glass tile backsplash. Countertops on the perimeter and island are finished with white quartz with gray accents. The study features a built-in desk/shelf across one wall with white shaker-style cabinetry underneath for storage. Quiet tones of silver and white continue into the light grey carpeted owner's bedroom. The spacious master bath includes white shaker-style vanity cabinetry topped by sandy-toned quartz countertops.

Renee Gaddis, NCIDQ, ASID, GREEN AP, President and Principal Designer at Renee Gaddis Interiors brought a

Above: Base-priced at $845,000, the 1,698 square feet under air Phase III Biltmore plan at Naples Square includes a 242 square feet open-air balcony. The two-bedroom plus den, great room plan includes a spacious counter-height island kitchen with a stainless steel sink, dishwasher and a food preparation area. Left: Base-priced at $695,000, the Phase III Astoria great room plan at Naples Square offers 1,460 square feet of living space plus a 260 square feet open-air balcony. The Phase III Astoria residences are east and west facing. Below: Modeled after the 2,934 square feet under air Phase I Franklin floor plan, the two-story Phase III Fenwick plan at Naples Square offers 3,238 square feet under air, a 10% increase in air conditioned space. Phase III reservations are now being converted to contracts.

The Denison's foyer presents a rectangular ceiling detail of white painted tongue-in-groove panels. White barn doors open to the den that includes a desk and a media wall. The ceiling design features a modern loft look with open truss details.

The kitchen features shaker-style cabinetry and Calcutta marble countertops that waterfalls over the edge of the island. The dining room features a live-edge wood table in a smoked gray finish. The great room features a drywall coffered ceiling design to add a subtle loft-like detail. Flat stock molding is applied to frame a walnut media console. The palette of white and smoky gray continues into the owners' suite where a stepped crown ceiling design adds drama. In the owner's bath, beveled white subway tile is used as a backsplash on the Calcutta marble double vanity with white shaker-style cabinetry.

Ronto is accepting Phase III reservations. Construction is expected to start upon permit approval. The Naples Square Sales Gallery at 100 South Goodlette-Frank Road in downtown Naples is open daily. Visit NaplesSquare.com. ■

Only 8 residences remain at AQUA at Pelican Isle

Select a residence in AQUA's Tower II and discover why it is Paradise Coast's chosen address!

AQUA at Pelican Isle is rapidly approaching sell out announced Chris Hanlon, principal with IC AQUA II, the developer of the luxury marina front condominium community in Naples adjacent to Wiggins Pass. Hanlon reports only eight residences—all with water views—remain available to purchase in AQUA's Tower II including one penthouse suite.

"AQUA at Pelican Isle reflects a new wave in luxury waterfront living by offering residents immediate access to water, a private marina, and spectacular views of Gulf of Mexico, beaches, Wiggins Bay and mangrove-lined estuaries," says Darline Hillard, AQUA director of sales. "Thanks to our convenient central location nearby world-class restaurants and chic shopping in Mercato, Waterside Shops and downtown Naples, AQUA combines all of the advantages of luxury waterfront living in Southwest Florida in one place," she adds.

Those seeking a more refined lifestyle—one where quiet sophistication, luxury and the water interact on a daily basis—should act now on the few remaining residences in AQUA's Tower II. With a completion date scheduled for spring 2017, these one-of-a-kind water view residences will not last long!

AQUA offers two- and three-bedroom plus den floor plans with open-concept living areas and open-air terraces, controlled access under-building parking, private storage and bicycle storage within the garage. A private enclosed two-car garage is also available for the remaining penthouse suite.

Designed as a beautiful boutique resort, the 11-story AQUA Tower II, featuring three levels of palatial penthouses, is located adjacent to the Pelican Isle Yacht Club at Wiggins Pass in North Naples. AQUA's expansive custom residences, priced from $1.995 million to over $2.545 million, range between 3,900 to just under 4,200 square feet with three bedrooms, three and a half baths and either a living/family room or living/family room plus den. Design features include high ceilings, gourmet kitchens with Wolf gas cooktops, Subzero refrigeration and two zone wine coolers, sunlit back-to-front living areas, spacious master bedroom suites, lavish master bathrooms with generous closet space, sunrise and sunset terraces, and more.

The penthouse suite, with more than 6,500 square feet of living area value, is available priced at $4.85 million. The penthouse features four bedrooms and four and one-half baths, grand salon, family room (or den or fifth bedroom), dining room, master study with wet bar and more than 3000 square feet outdoor living area thanks to a grand sunset terrace with sun deck—with wet bar and gas grill—spanning across the entire west side of the residence overlooking the Gulf of Mexico and mangrove lined estuaries of Wiggins Bay, plus an expansive private sunrise balcony adjacent to the family room and three guest suites.

Exceptional conveniences offered to AQUA residents include the community's private yacht harbor with direct access to the Gulf of Mexico with 29 boat slips to accommodate boats up to 55 feet long, a state-of-the-art private movie theater with 20 reclining seats, a private library, a pavilion bar complementing the resort-style pool and spa with nearby gas grills and fire pit, fitness center, and a rooftop sky lounge equipped with fireplace, flat screen TV, and full kitchen with bar. The rooftop terrace offers additional outdoor seating, gas grills and a hot tub spa.

AQUA's expertly appointed and light-filled fitness center features all the modern amenities you would expect from a luxury resort, combining stellar technology with ultimate expediency, and a commitment to improving each resident's health and well-being, 24 hours a day.

The fitness center is outfitted with state-of-the-art cardio and weight lifting equipment, spacious his and her locker rooms with cedar lined dry saunas, glass block steam rooms, a relaxation lounge and private massage/treatment rooms. Equipment includes a premier collection of True® treadmills, Precor® elliptical machines, and stationary bicycles—each furnished with an individual television and headphones. Free weights and weight machines allow for superior strength training, and a spacious stretching area offers ample room to warm up and wind down, and keep everyone toned, fit and in shape. Yoga, Pilates and aerobic workouts are improved thanks to the separate aerobics room equipped with a big screen TV and DVD to play preferred fitness routines.

In addition to the high-tech equipment in the fitness center catering to healthy lifestyles, AQUA is located just steps from the Vanderbilt Drive trails, one of the best jogging and bicycling spots in Naples, with planned improvements and expansion from Bonita Beach Road to 11th/Bluebill Avenue.

Resident peace of mind is assured thanks to a 24-hour attended arrival lobby and a grand entry gate with 24/7 controlled entry. An in-house management team and concierge provide the utmost in attentive service.

All AQUA residents will enjoy new amenities in the soon-to-be-completed Tower II including an outdoor putting green, dog run, fire pit, a game room with billiards, bar, TV, fireplace and high definition interactive virtual golf, three spacious guest suites, plus the Club AQUA social room with large curved screened TV and entertainment area with wet bar, fireplace, coffee bar and catering kitchen overlooking the waterfront.

Sales for AQUA Tower II have reached 75% with Naples-based PACT Realty serving as the exclusive listing agent. The AQUA information center and three new designer furnished models reflect the modern architectural style of the high-rise and showcase several features of AQUA's sophisticated and refined design. Models are available for purchase with potential leaseback opportunities.

For further information about the select opportunities at AQUA, please call 239-591-2727, visit online at www.aqua-naples.com or stop by the information center located at Wiggins Pass Road, 13675 Vanderbilt Drive, Naples, Florida 34110. ■

Kalea Bay releases second tower as first tower approaches sellout

Prices start at $1.3 million in Tower 1

Kalea Bay, the gated, resort-lifestyle, high-rise community located on Vanderbilt Drive in North Naples, announced the community's second tower has been released for sale.

"Our first tower, which is under construction and scheduled to be completed this fall, has already surpassed the 80 percent sold mark," stated Inga Wilson, Vice President of Sales and Marketing for Kalea Bay. "The approaching sellout of Tower 1 and the overwhelming response from our buyers prompted us to release Tower 2."

The new 22-story tower, with 120 residences, will have 20 floors of residences over two floors of parking. The incredibly designed residences offer views of the Gulf of Mexico and pristine nature preserve.

Six floor plans are available in Tower 2.

Residences 1 and 6 are 3-bedroom plus den/3.5 bath plans with 3,704 total square feet. Residences 2 and 5, with 4 bedrooms, 4.5 baths, have 3,791 total square feet. Residences 3 and 4 are 4-bedroom/4.5-bath plans also with 3,791 total square feet.

"All residents will revel in Gulf views, open floor plans, a private elevator leading directly into their residence and wood floors throughout," said Wilson.

The custom kitchens have Wolf and SubZero appliances, a natural gas range, luxury cabinetry, quartz countertops, a Butler's pantry and oversized island, all of which are standard features.

"Our floor plans have an open design we call 'lifestyle designs' that blends the kitchen seamlessly into the living and dining rooms, perfect for the way people live today," said Wilson.

The master bedroom includes an oversized walk-in closet while the master bath has his and hers vanities, quartz countertops, luxury cabinetry, a soaking tub and separate glass-enclosed shower.

"All master suites, kitchens and main living areas have direct views to the water and preserve. They are perfect vantage points to watch our spectacular sunsets," Wilson said.

Additional residential features include floor-to-ceiling windows and doors that open to large lanais with transparent glass rails.

"We take our outdoor living as seriously as our indoor living with oversized lanais on every residence," said Wilson. High-tech wiring and fully equipped laundry rooms round out the list of features, she noted.

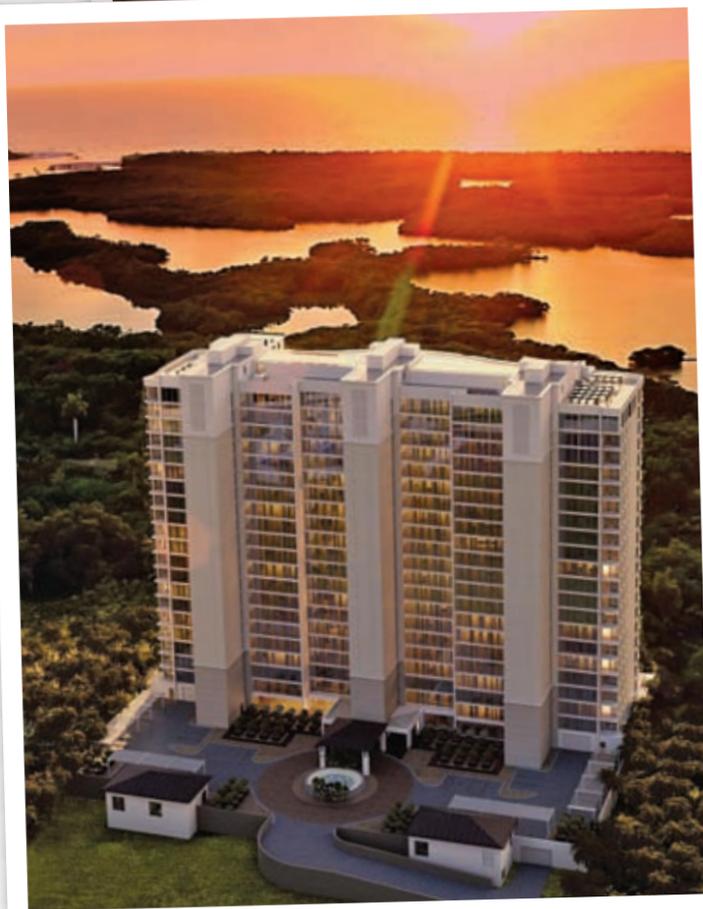

Dramatic views are available to every homeowner, no matter which floor they live on as the tower's amenities are located on the rooftop including the sky lounge, a dramatic pool and the open-air fitness center.

From the rooftop, residents can enjoy daily views of the Gulf of Mexico, the nature preserves and two beaches ranked among the best in the United States.

Prices at Kalea Bay begin at $1.3 million.

In addition to the rooftop amenities, the residents of Kalea Bay will also enjoy the community's clubhouse area, which is also under construction and due to be completed this fall.

"The clubhouse area will be the social and recreational centerpiece of the community," said Wilson.

Right: The custom kitchens feature Wolf and SubZero appliances and an oversized island. Below: Kalea Bay's first and second towers were designed with rooftop amenities, including a sky lounge, spectacular pool and open-air fitness center.

Kalea Bay's 88,000-square-foot clubhouse is located on the north side of the large lake at the community's entrance. It will feature three individual pools, including a resort pool, an adults-only pool and a children's pool, plus an expansive pool deck, a poolside bistro, open-air bar, an indoor/outdoor restaurant, a sundries shop, and a state-of-the-art fitness center.

"All three pools will overlook the lake

If basking in the sun or taking a refreshing dip in the pool isn't on a resident's schedule, perhaps meeting friends for lunch, dinner or drinks is.

"The amenities at Kalea Bay rival some of the finest in the world," said Wilson. "Our indoor/outdoor restaurant will serve phenomenal meals throughout the day. And what better way to celebrate the good life in Florida than meeting family and and provide a multitude of recreational options for everyone who lives and visits here," said Wilson. "Expansive sun decks with lounge chairs and native, tropical plants will separate each of the three pools for the ultimate in privacy."

friends for drinks while watching the sun set over the Gulf of Mexico. This is what living in Florida is supposed to be."

Adjacent to the clubhouse is the tennis pavilion with Har-Tru tennis courts, as well as pickleball courts, and 24 guest suites to accommodate overnight guests and family members.

"Having that number of guest suites is unusual for a luxury high-rise community, but it's an amenity our residents are excited about especially when they have extended family visiting," said Wilson.

For more information regarding Kalea Bay visit the onsite sales center. Due to bridge closings in the North Naples' area, take US 41 to Wiggins Pass Road, then right on Vanderbilt Drive, two-tenths of a mile. Kinross generating strong sales at TwinEagles TwinEagles announced that Lennar Corporation's Kinross neighborhood continues to drive strong sales in the North Naples community being developed by The Ronto Group. Kinross will include 86 residences at build-out. Twenty-four home sites measuring 52-foot wide and 145-foot deep or deeper remain available. Six floor plans ranging from 1,850 to 2,828 square feet are priced from the high $400's to the low-$600's and present a final opportunity to purchase a single-family home in TwinEagles at that price point. Eight unfurnished, move-in ready homes are also available, four of which are completed and the remainder of which are in varying stages of construction. Two furnished models are open for viewing. A golf membership is included with the purchase of every newly constructed home at TwinEagles.

Base pricing for each of the Kinross floor plans includes a caged heated pool and spa, a summer kitchen with a refrigerator, a paved pool deck, lanai and driveway, wood ceilings on the lanai, crown moldings in the living areas and owner's bedroom, and additional features. The 2,247 square foot Maria plan includes a great room and island kitchen, a spacious dining area, three bedrooms, a den or fourth bedroom, three full baths, a covered lanai off the great room and owner's bedroom, and a two-car garage. A furnished Maria model is open for viewing and an unfurnished Maria residence on a preserve home site is offered for $565,000, including optional features and upgrades.

The Maria furnished model showcases an interior by Baer's Furniture's Janet Graham, ASID. Her design blends contemporary flair with traditional straight lines. The color palette includes muted grays with fabrics that blend creams and aquas. Flooring throughout the living areas is 20 x 20-inch neutral porcelain tile. Ceiling details and custom built-ins add to the look.

Dark espresso wood flooring in the den blends perfectly with an espresso-toned custom built-in topped with a gray granite counter that provides cabinetry, shelves for books and accessories, and a 42-inch space for a television. A hallway sweeps past the den to a space that combines the dining area, great room and kitchen. In the great room, Graham has designed an eye-catching feature wall. A built-in console in a deep espresso finish provides storage space for media equipment while establishing the base for a television. The wall above is adorned with mosaic tile encased in wood. In the kitchen, extensive perimeter cabinetry features a creamy linen finish with raised panel doors. The countertop is executed in a granite with swirling splashes of grays and creams. The same material is used for a 4-inch backsplash. An extensive island provides ample space for food preparation and offers a natural casual gathering area. On the lanai, a separate lounging area includes two chaises lounges in the dark espresso finish with aqua cushions. The outdoor kitchen features cabinetry with a built-in grill.

Marina contributes to Bonita Bay's world-class lifestyle

In addition to enjoying luxurious, fully completed residences with spacious outdoor terraces, the residents of the award-winning Ronto Group's Seaglass at Bonita Bay highrise tower will relish the world-class lifestyle that makes Bonita Bay one of Southwest Florida's most desirable communities. Recognized as one of the ten healthiest clubs in America by Prevo Health Solutions, Bonita Bay's amenities include a 60,000 square foot Lifestyle Center with a fitness center, spa and salon, five championship golf courses, casual and fine dining, boating, biking and hiking trails, kayaking and canoeing, tennis, and a private, residents only beach club on Little Hickory Island. The master planned, gated community is celebrated for its environmental stewardship, and creative land use, including three waterfront parks and 1,400 acres of open space.

A full-service on-site marina with direct access to the Gulf of Mexico allows Bonita Bay residents to enjoy every aspect of Southwest Florida's heralded tropical lifestyle. A unique amenity that is rarely found in combination with a world-class golf experience, the Bonita Bay Marina is located on the Imperial River at the south end of Estero Bay, just minutes from the open waters of the Gulf. Wet slips and dry boat storage are available, as well as on-site fueling and light mechanical services. Owned exclusively by the residents of Bonita Bay, the Marina can accommodate a variety of watercraft with a maximum draft of thirty-six inches. The wet slip lifts can hold vessels up to 16,000 pounds and the dry storage can fit boats up to 32-feet long from the rear of the engine or platform to the front of the anchor or pulpit. Trailer loading and unloading service is available for most boats. Charts, bait, tackle, and other items are available at the Ships Store.

The Marina provides work racks for use by boaters on a first-come, first-served basis and can be used for washing, waxing, and vessel repairs. Independent mobile mechanics are available for assistance if needed. Dealers are permitted to perform work on vessels under warranty. Marina staff are available to provide washing and waxing, full detail, metal polishing, propeller reconditioning or replacement, battery charging or replacement, engine flushing, including scheduled flushing when boat owners are away, pump-out, and light mechanical maintenance services on an hourly rate basis.

Backwater Jack's, a waterfront restaurant and bar located at the Marina, is a favored gathering place for Bonita Bay's boater community. A menu offering flavorful twists on Backwater Jack's heralded casual dining selections is available during season. Dinner is served Tuesday through Sunday evenings and lunch service extends through season. A 4:00 to 6:30 p.m. happy hour includes drink discounts and a bar food menu. All menu selections are available for take-out. Live music by an assortment of artists is featured Friday and Saturday nights during season. Regularly scheduled special events and themed parties are open to all Bonita Bay residents and their guests. Backwater Jack's is available for events by special interest clubs, community parties, and private dinners.

With over $125 million in sales processed to date, Ronto's Seaglass tower will feature fully-completed, ready for occupancy residences with designer-selected premium finishes, including flooring, paint, and trim. Each residence will come with two protected access under-building parking spaces. Private enclosed two-car garages will be available.

The Seaglass penthouse residences have been sold. A selection of tower residences ranging from 2,889 to 3,421 square feet under air and priced from just over $1.1 million remains available. The tower residences will include dual private elevator grand foyers, island kitchens, three bedrooms and three-and-a-half baths, or three bedrooms plus a den or fourth bedroom and three-and-a-half baths, walk-in closets in the owner's suite, and sliders opening to multiple outdoor spaces that include a gas grill. Ronto is making a special opportunity available to purchasers of tower residences 2003 and 2004 on the 20th floor. Homebuyers may join the two units together to create a 6,200 square foot residence with scintillating Gulf views. The expanded residence will come with four protected access under-building parking spaces. The residences are individually priced at $1,855,000 and at $3,710,000 in the combined unit configuration.

With concrete on the 11th floor already poured and a new floor being poured every two weeks, homebuyers interested in residences on the building's lower to mid-level floors are urged to make their buying decisions now. Doing so will allow them to take advantage of The Ronto Group's Finishing Touches Program designed to assist future residents with finish selections and to ensure each residence meets individual buyer preferences.
