ENTERING FLORIDA'S SPIRIT WORLD

Craft distilleries are proliferating in Florida, but not nearly as fast as in states such as New York, where there are fewer restrictions on sales

BY EVAN WILLIAMS
ewilliams@floridaweekly.com

FLORIDA'S SMALL DISTILLERIES bring in thousands of visitors for tours every year, but they aren't allowed to sell a single cocktail or shot of whiskey or rum, to any of them. That's just one rule that restricts sales far more than in states such as New York and Oregon, and doesn't apply to breweries, which can sell as many glasses of beer as they'd like right where it's made.

Even so, the number of Florida craft distillers that produce rum, vodka, whiskey, gin and other spirits has nearly tripled in the last five years. In 2015 and 2016, Alligator Bay Distillers in Punta Gorda, List Distillery in Fort Myers, and Black

Considering the trickster coyote

BY ROGER WILLIAMS

rwilliams@floridaweekly.com

In the lore of the Plains Indians, Old Man Coyote is both admired and disdained — a crafty trickster, a savvy hunter and seducer of other creatures' wives sometimes ensnared by his own arrogance. In trouble, he escapes with his own ingenuity.

He's an animal of broad and rapacious appetite.

Given the spread of coyotes across Florida beginning in the 1950s and '60s — and now even into cities and towns on the southwest coast — those interpretations don't seem so far-fetched.

Although no official numbers exist, coyotes are thriving in the Sunshine State in spite of a population jump from five to more than 20 million humans since 1960 — unlike fellow predators such as

George Patton's politics

rwilliams@floridaweekly.com

I woke up this morning and instead of getting myself a beer, like Jim Morrison, I got myself a question: "Dad, do you think Gen. George Patton would have liked Trump?"

Either a beer or a spiked question at 6 a.m. will lead roughly to the same result: intoxication.

I've found it difficult to think of anything else ever since.

Gen. George S. Patton Jr. most famously commanded the tough Third Army in World War II. President Donald J. Trump most famously created his persona, Trump. Nash Bennett Williams, famous or not, is a kid fascinated by history even before dawn.

How are they connected and why would Nash's question matter?

To start with, Americans now living still include veterans of World War II whose lives were influenced by Patton then and by Trump, now.

And all of us, arguably, may breathe the same air Patton breathed — before he died in a Heidelberg hospital following an accident under suspicious circumstances, apparently, on Dec. 21, 1945, some seven months after the German surrender in Europe.

Our 45th president, by the way, was born about six months after Patton's death, on June 14, 1946. Which means he's a baby boomer, a species well known for inhaling and exhaling more of everything, including bombast in Trump's case, than anyone else who ever lived.

So we are connected, and Patton remains current history.

Jesus is current history, too, in the respiratory sense — the sense of breathing in and out on the planet. Do we in fact breathe the same air, the same molecules or atoms, once used by George S. Patton Jr., Jesus or Julius Caesar?

Marquette University biology Professor Martin C. Maurice has answered the question obliquely, this way: "There is some truth to this possibility. ... There may have been a carbon atom in last night's cupcake that was once integral to the structure of Julius Caesar's left toenail."

That's not very appealing. I might give up cupcakes.

Since few atoms ever escape the earth's atmosphere and none change form, unlike molecules, the professor draws an obvious conclusion: "Every breath you take has, at one time or another, been associated with another living organism."

But the organism known as Patton would have felt little respect or affection for the organism known as Trump.

In Patton's view, son, Trump is a whore.

What's a whore? I'll explain that later. A lot later.

"That's the reason I have never liked politics or politicians — they are always switching sides, changing bed partners in their politics," Patton said.

Trump switched parties five times beginning in 1987 when he registered as a Republican, according to news reports in 2015. He became a Democrat in 1999, an Independent in 2001, a Republican again in 2009, then left the party in 2011, indicating he wished to join no political party. Now, he's a Republican again.

In contrast, Patton joined the United States Army in 1909. He served in that party until his death in 1945.

"The soldier is also a citizen. In fact, the highest obligation and privilege of citizenship is that of bearing arms for one's country," the general said.

Trump received five draft deferments during the Vietnam War: four so he could remain at either Fordham University or in the real estate program at the Wharton School of Business, and one after college for bone spurs in his heel (which later went away, he has said).

On the day he graduated from Wharton, 40 Americans were killed in Vietnam.

Trump has made a lot of promises and broken many of them. He's switched bed partners many times, literally and figuratively. He's told countless lies to the country and his constituents, and before that to his business partners. Everybody knows that, even his apologists. They just don't care.

"Say what you mean and mean what you say," said Patton, who did care.

Politifact.com, which calls to account politicians of both or any parties by analyzing what they say and comparing it to demonstrable facts, points out just a few of Trump's twisted tweets:

"This Russian thing with Trump and Russia is a made-up story," Trump said.

"Before the presidential campaign, I didn't know Steve Bannon," Trump said.

"Terrorism and terrorist attacks in the United States and Europe have gotten to a point where it's not even being reported," Trump said.

All lies. Along with promises about preserving Medicare and Medicaid. Or boasts that he convinced company executives at an Indianapolis factory (Carrier) to save 1,100 jobs instead of moving them to Mexico, last December. Three hundred of those jobs weren't planned for extradition, anyway. Meanwhile, the company has just announced it will lay off at least 600 employees this year, with the last 290 getting pink slips three days before Christmas, 2017.

Patton would have detested that or any empty boast.

He would have hated Trump's inability to lead by example, too.

"Always do everything you ask of those you command," Patton said.

"Do not make excuses, whether it's your fault or not," Patton said.

"There's a great deal of talk about loyalty from the bottom to the top. Loyalty from the top down is even more necessary and is much less prevalent. One of the most frequently noted characteristics of great men who have remained great is loyalty to their subordinates," Patton said.

This is what Trump said, and not to Americans but to Russians sitting in the Oval Office of the White House on May 10: "I just fired the head of the F.B.I. He was crazy, a real nut-job."

Patton said one other thing, too, presaging Trump's ascendancy: "Moral courage is the most valuable and usually the most absent characteristic in men." ■

OPINION

What condition is my condition in?

leslieLILLY

lilly@floridaweekly.com

If you are one of the millions of American worried about losing your health insurance coverage, join the club. The Republican majority in the U.S. House of Representatives passed the American Health Care Act earlier this month. The bill achieves the long-desired goal of conservatives to repeal and replace Obamacare, i.e., the Affordable Healthcare Act.

While they were at it, they undertook a re-engineering of Medicaid to shrink its scope and the breadth of its coverage. Theirs was a mighty ambition. Medicaid is now the nation's single largest insurer. President Lyndon Johnson signed the amendments to Social Security in 1965 that established Medicare and Medicaid.

According to the Kaiser Health Foundation, the program covers 74 million people and gives them access to a broad spectrum of health services, including the bulk of long-term care coverage. It provides significant revenue to "hospitals, community health centers, physicians, and nursing homes, and jobs in the health care sector and finances over 16 percent of all personal health care spending in the U.S." Medicaid is a big deal.

This explains why House Speaker Paul Ryan and his colleagues were so jubilant when the House passed the AHCA. In the context of Medicaid, it has served a dual purpose as a Trojan Horse to breach a wall of resistance to up-ending the program. This is perhaps bigger than gutting Obamacare. Speaker Ryan said as much. He chortled that passing the AHCA was "the most historic entitlement reform we have ever had."

His high level of self-satisfaction is a clue of the damage done by AHCA to the social safety net. Tens of millions of Americans would take a hit. That is because the AHCA is Frankenstein legislation at its worst. It is carved out of and crudely stitched together with parts of Obamacare that have been weaponized. The result is an unholy re-creation of the nation's health care plan, made from the intended corpse of the ACA.

But their proposed replacement does little to improve broad access for Americans to healthcare. Nor does it protect them from high, out-of-pocket costs. And it achieves, with a legislative sleight of hand, a cap on Medicaid spending that would end the program's expansion.

The disdain of the Senate for this House-butchered legislation was epic. The bill in its present form won't be seen again. But that doesn't mean we are out of the woods. An all-male, 13-member committee consisting solely of Republicans is crafting new legislation behind closed doors, and without any benefit of open hearings. Uh-oh to that.

For all the problems with Obamacare, it provides tens of millions of previously uninsured Americans with affordable health coverage for the first time. Yes, Obamacare has serious issues. If you are snake-bit by high deductibles and/or excessive, out-of-pocket costs, we hear you now. But the sneak peek of the future solution offered by Speaker Ryan and his colleagues is indicative of a self-induced, life-threatening medical emergency. Hard-line conservatives want to unravel Obamacare and replace it with something far worse, and take down Medicaid in the process.

Massive cuts are proposed to the state subsidies the feds provide through Medicaid. These dollars off-set and curtail out-of-pocket costs for assistance provided to Americans through the program. And here is another twist of the knife: The AHCA includes an $880 billion cut to Medicaid to finance a huge, back-door tax cut for the wealthy. Pity the tens of millions of children, seniors, people with disabilities and other adults for whom this is a slow severing of their lifeline to public health services and protections.

But there is more. To get the radical Freedom Caucus on board to support the AHCA, an escape hatch was added to the bill allowing states to seek exemptions from federal requirements that insurance policies be inclusive of certain, essential medical services and prohibit the use of pre-existing conditions to deny coverage.

Those clamoring to make health care in America great again should be careful what they wish for. They don't remember the days when insurance companies only wanted to insure healthy people, and the only people who had health insurance were the ones who could afford it or whose employers made it available.

In the days before Obamacare, the Kaiser Health Foundation reports "52 million adults under 65 — or 27 percent of that population — qualified as having the kind of 'pre-existing health conditions' that insurance companies used to deny them coverage." Obamacare bans these practices, but any newly proposed alternatives are unlikely to do so.

Tom Price, secretary of Health and Human Services, insists the mega-cut to Medicaid is not a "cut." It is just a way to give states greater flexibility. But state exemptions are a Pandora's box, opening the door to insurers to use pre-existing conditions to deny coverage, charge excessive premiums and eliminate essential medical services from their plans.

If you really want to know what condition your condition is in, don't ask the lawmakers who support the AHCA. They don't care and they haven't a clue. ■

Special to Florida Weekly

The Turkish government is obviously familiar with the concept of "chutzpah," if not necessarily the word.

Ankara summoned the American ambassador to protest allegedly "aggressive and unprofessional actions" by the Washington, D.C., police. Their offense? Intervening after Turkish security personnel mauled peaceful protesters outside the Turkish ambassador's residence in Washington.

Video of the incident is jaw-dropping. About a dozen people protested Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan — arriving at the ambassador's residence after a White House visit — from across the street, separated by police from Erdogan's forces. Then guards suddenly rushed en masse past the D.C. cops to beat up the demonstrators.

Press accounts can obscure the truth of what happened. The two sides didn't really "clash" or "engage in a violent confrontation," as is often reported. There was an overwhelming aggressor — the thuggish security personnel of the head of state of, amazingly enough, a NATO country.

Dressed in black suits, the guards repeatedly kick in the face a man who had been thrown to the ground. They put a woman in a headlock. Clearly, assaulting innocent people is a core competency.

This incident, which injured 11, is not the most consequential event in the world. It's not the Syrian war, or a North Korean missile test. We have large national interests at stake with Turkey, especially in navigating the complex currents in the Syria civil war. But it's not nothing, either. It deserves more than State Department statements of "concern."

Especially given the context. The guards didn't lash out on their own. They charged under the watchful eye of President Erdogan, who emerged from a black Mercedes-Benz to observe the assault. Some media reports contend that Erdogan himself may have given the order for the attack.

This is a second offense for the Turks. A year ago, they beat up protesters and disfavored journalists outside an Erdogan talk at the Brookings Institution in Washington. "Never seen anything like this," one reporter wrote. If you hang around President Erdogan long enough, though, you'll see it all.

Erdogan is a thug who has bullied, cheated and purged his way to the head of a budding authoritarian state, accumulating powers unparalleled since Ataturk. It speaks to the nature of his regime that Turkish officials insist the guards acted in "self-defense."

The Trump administration is obviously not putting an emphasis on promoting our values abroad, but it's another thing to shrug off an assault on the rights of protesters on our own soil. Not only did the Turks carry out this attack, they are thumbing their noses at us by summoning our ambassador over it.

The Turkish goons who punched and kicked people should be identified and charged with crimes. They are beyond our reach, either because they are back in Turkey or have diplomatic immunity. But we should ask for them to be returned and for their immunity to be waived. When these requests are inevitably refused, the Turkish ambassador to the U.S. (heard saying during the incident, "You cannot touch us") should be expelled.

Erdogan is crushing his opponents with impunity in Turkey. Reacting firmly to this attack at least will send the message, "Not in our house." ■

NOAA predicts above-normal hurricane season this year

Forecasters at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s Climate Prediction Center say the Atlantic could see another above-normal hurricane season this year.

For the upcoming Atlantic hurricane season, which runs from June 1 through Nov. 30, forecasters predict a 45 percent chance of an above-normal season, a 35 percent chance of a near-normal season, and only a 20 percent chance of a below-normal season.

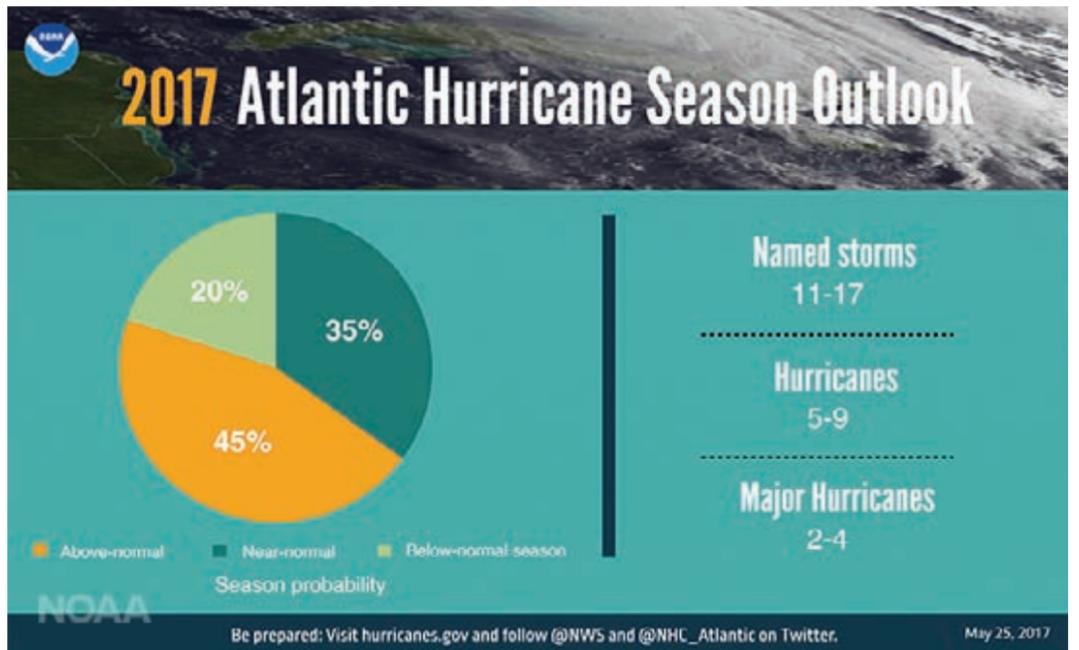

Forecasters predict a 70 percent likelihood of 11 to 17 named storms (winds of 39 mph or higher), of which 5 to 9 could become hurricanes (winds of 74 mph or higher), including 2 to 4 major hurricanes (Category 3, 4 or 5; winds of 111 mph or higher). An average season produces 12 named storms of which six become hurricanes, including three major hurricanes.

These numbers include Tropical Storm Arlene, a rare pre-season storm that formed over the eastern Atlantic in April.

“The outlook reflects our expectation of a weak or non-existent El Nino, near- or above-average sea-surface temperatures across the tropical Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea, and average or weaker-than-average vertical wind shear in that same region,” said Gerry Bell, Ph.D., lead seasonal hurricane forecaster with NOAA’s Climate Prediction Center.

Strong El Ninos and wind shear typically suppress development of Atlantic hurricanes, so the prediction for weak conditions points to more hurricane activity this year. Also, warmer sea surface temperatures tend to fuel hurricanes as they move across the ocean. However, the climate models are showing considerable uncertainty, which is reflected in the comparable probabilities for an above-normal and near-normal season. ■

“I was having a cocktail — it was a terrible cocktail, a terrible rum — and it was a rum produced in a different country, and I said, ‘Why the heck aren’t we doing a Florida rum?’”

— JoAnn Elardo, owner of Wicked Dolphin Distillery in Cape Coral

Coral Rum in Riviera Beach are among the list of newcomers added to now established names such as Wicked Dolphin Distillery in Cape Coral and Drum Circle Distilling in Sarasota.

Alligator Bay owners Alex and Benjamin Voss, who took their company’s name from a bay in Charlotte Harbor, are brothers who grew up in Naples. They found the right spot to open their facility to make rum a few counties north with lower rent, along a quiet street in Punta Gorda. Prior to opening last year, Alex completed an apprenticeship at a distillery on the Hawaiian island Maui.

“To us, we like to say this is putting Punta Gorda on the distillation map,” he said.

Like many other distilleries, Alligator offers tours to show how the rum is crafted, from the brown sugar and molasses that come from the state’s vast sugar cane fields to the pot stills and oak barrels that help create the final product.

In Fort Myers, List Distillery is billed as the only certified organic distillery in the state. Owners Thomas and Renate List are from Austria where Ms. List’s uncle founded the famous Jägermeister brand.

“With what she learned from him we started our business over here,” Mr. List said.

He emphasizes the higher quality of small distillers. Their “Mr. Tom’s Spirits” brand of rum, gin, whiskey and other products are often flavored with local ingredients such as fresh fruit, habanero peppers, and honey.

“Our liquor is made more with love compared to the big ones,” he said.

In 2013, there were fewer than 10 craft distilleries in Florida, those that produce 75,000 gallons or less per year by the state’s definition (lawmakers have considered raising that to 250,000 gallons). Now there are at least 30 spread out across the state.

In South Florida, they often specialize in rum because of close access to sugar cane products. That’s one reason why JoAnn Elardo started Wicked Dolphin, which features a towering copper pot still. Ms. Elardo is from Long Island and owned a large footwear distribution company in Europe before opening the distillery in 2013. She started thinking about it four or five years before that.

“I noticed that Florida produces 50 percent of the sugar cane for the United States,” she said. “I was having a cocktail — it was a terrible cocktail, a terrible rum — and it was a rum produced in a different country, and I said, ‘Why the heck aren’t we doing a Florida rum?’”

Now Wicked Dolphin rum, vodka and other liquors are sold in more than 3,000 locations in the U.S., she said.

“We’ve been lucky,” Ms. Elardo said. “If you want to have a distillery, it’s a labor of love. It’s not a quick get rich. Believe me, I’ve had other businesses. You really have to love what you’re doing.”

She adds that about 20,000 people per year visit her distillery in the Cape, but aside from the small free taste she’s allowed to give them on a tour of the facility, they must to go elsewhere to sit down and order a craft cocktail.

Distilleries cut off from cocktails

Breweries and wineries can sell directly to customers right where the product is made, such as offering them a glass of beer or selling an unlimited number of bottles of wine to go. By contrast, distilleries can only sell two bottles of liquor per person, per brand, per year on site. The only drinks they can pour are free tastes.

“Why can clothing companies, shoe companies, beer companies and wine companies have the right to sell their product without a limit (where it’s made)?” Ms. Elardo asks. “Why does only a craft distillery have a limit? It’s not right, it’s not fair, and it does not let us promote our business.”

And, under the current “three-tier” system (manufacturer, distributor, retail), distilleries are not allowed to sell their products directly to retail stores such as ABC Fine Wines & Spirits or local restaurants and bars. Breweries also must use a distributor to sell to retailers, while wineries have the least restrictive rules, enabling them to sell wine entirely by themselves if they choose to.

Distillers also can’t ship liquor to tourists who live out of state. Neither are they permitted to open a second tasting room in some other location, such as a popular downtown area.

“I’ve worked in some distilleries out in Colorado, Utah, those areas,” said Dustin Skartved, who opened Citrus Distillers in Riviera Beach in 2012. “The biggest thing out there is you can have a satellite facility. That’s what really kicked off the craft movement in those areas, I really believe. They can sell unlimited bottles at their plant and they were allowed to open up a satellite tasting room anywhere they wanted, downtown, a bar, anywhere.”

Huge distributors such as Southern Alligator Bay owners Alex and Benjamin Voss make rum in their Punta Gorda distillery.

EVAN WILLIAMS / FLORIDA WEEKLY

Glazer's Wine & Spirits and Republic National have opposed rules that would allow distilleries to sell more on their own because it would cost them money, Mr. McDaniel said. Neither company responded to a request for comment.

Not all distributors oppose allowing distillers to sell more on their own, even if it might cost them business in the short term, said Kimberly Robertson of Modestino Beverages, a small distribution company based in South Fort Myers that is focused solely on craft spirits. Ms. Robertson works with distillers in Florida such as List, placing orders, organizing tastings and making deliveries.

"I would like to see the rules changed in their favor to be able to sell to clients, to people that come into the distillery for tours and whatnot," she said. "With the distillery being able to sell directly to consumers it would help them out."

She adds, "But there has to be limitations. I think it should be just all the craft distilleries that are allowed to do that."

The Florida legislature this year passed a bill that, if signed by the governor, would allow distillers to sell six bottles per person instead of two. It is a disappointment to many, especially after an initial bill asked to remove all limits on bottle sales from tasting rooms, allow for drinks by the glass from the distillery, the ability to open second tasting rooms, ship liquor, lower licensing fees, and increase the per-gallon limit definition of a "craft" distillery.

"It was a token," said Philip McDaniel of St. Augustine Distillery, and founder of Florida Distillers Guild. "While six bottles is interesting it's not going to change our business model. It's not going to allow (distilleries) to grow."

The ability to sell drinks has been a boon for distilleries in other states, such as Van Brunt Stillhouse, which produces whiskey, rum and grappa in Brooklyn, N.Y. Owner Daric Schlesselman said New York law changed three years ago to allow it.

"And it went from being zero percent of our business to 25 percent of our business during a year," he said, before dropping to about 15 percent as wholesale sales grew. "So that was huge. We

that a small Florida distillery legally sold a bottle of booze over the counter.

The two-bottle rule and other changes came after efforts by then new distillers such as Mr. McDaniel and Ms. Elardo. It also marked a recognition by politicians that the craft distillery industry in Florida, like craft breweries and pretty much craft whatever, is growing. The Brewers Association says that Florida craft breweries grew in number from 45 in 2011 to 195 last year.

"(Distillers) won't grow as fast as craft brewing because beer is consumed so quickly," said Mr. Skartved of Citrus Distillers. "But I definitely see it, it's going to have its own speed, but not as fast as the breweries. They can turn over a lot of cups."

While Alex and Benjamin Voss of Alligator Bay are hoping that the rules change in their favor as well, they're looking ahead to mirror other success stories in Florida, distilleries that have found routes to profitability under current rules.

"In five years, I want to look back and say I survived my first five years," Benjamin Voss said. "And then in 10 years I'd like to see myself where Troy Roberts (of Drum Circle Distilling in Sarasota) is now, if not better."

Mr. List sees younger generations such as his son, who works for the company, continuing to drive a trend toward craft products.

"I see the whole industry very strong because there's a big rethinking going on with the consumers," he said. "People are going away from the chain thinking, you know? People are also starting to realize they should live a little better. I think the Millennials are very good pioneers to lead this." ■ were smaller then."

The New York State Distiller's Guild says craft distilleries grew by 500 percent since 2011 to 150 distilleries, spurred by a drop-in licensing fees and, Mr. Schlesselman said, a "slow unrolling of new benefits."

Even with Florida's restrictions, distilleries have proliferated in the state, albeit at a slower pace.

One of the first new laws slightly easing rules for distilleries in Florida went into effect in 2013, allowing them to sell the two bottles instead of none from their production facility. Wicked Dolphin sold a bottle of rum, marking the first day since Prohibition (1920 - 1933)

Local Moms Demand Action group takes aim at gun violence

BY LINDSEY NESMITH
lnesmith@floridaweekly.com

The local chapter of Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America encourages everyone to recognize Gun Violence Awareness Day in events starting at Cambier Park at 10 a.m. Saturday, June 3. The group will march down Fifth Avenue South before returning to the park for comments from Naples Mayor Bill Barnett and Dr. Allen Weiss, president and CEO of the NCH Healthcare System.

The Wear Orange movement will stage similar events across the country. All are encouraged to wear orange, the bold color that hunters wear in the woods to make themselves visible to other shooters.

Wear Orange was inspired by friends of Chicago teen Hadiya Pendleton, who was 15 years old when she was gunned down in a Chicago park near her school in 2013.

Moms Demand Action advocates for common-sense gun laws on the state level, and while the coalition has seen some successes in Florida during the last few legislative sessions — like keeping guns out of schools and colleges — local lead Katherine Cunningham hopes that bringing Neapolitans together for Gun Violence Awareness Day will alert them to the work that still needs to be done to reduce gun deaths.

“It’s really an awareness day to build a broad-based coalition to say we can do better than this,” Ms. Cunningham said. “I think we’re blessed to live in Naples where most of us feel safe on a day-to-day basis, but Florida as a state is one of the worst in terms of gun homicides.”

Moms Demand Action does not aim to take away guns from responsible owners, Ms. Cunningham said, but instead wants to spread the word that common-sense laws could prevent the vast majority of gun tragedies that afflict the state.

One way to improve people’s view of amending gun safety laws is to consider the problem from a public health standpoint, which is why the local Moms Demand Action has invited Dr. Weiss to speak on June 3. Approaching gun violence from the same angle as the health profession has tackled issues such as tobacco consumption and heart disease might make it easier for people to understand and practice gun safety measures.

“A public health approach emphasizes prevention over punishment,” Dr. Weiss said. “That approach has been so successful in reducing rates of injury and death for tobacco consumption and car accidents. It can also be applied to gun violence.”

“It doesn’t mean taking away guns from everyone — that’s the knee-jerk response that gets everyone excited. It’s like an epidemic, and it should be studied scientifically to try out hypotheses and see what happens.”

Oh, baby! Conservancy plans a shower

It’s baby season for wildlife in Southwest Florida, and to help the youngest patients at its von Arx Wildlife Hospital, the Conservancy of Southwest Florida is holding a “baby shower” from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, June 3. Items on the gift registry range from infrared spot lamps and special-formula opossum food to exercise wheels and cleaning supplies.

The full list is available for ordering and payment at Amazon.com, which means even those who can’t attend the shower can give to the cause. Items purchased from Amazon are sent directly to Conservancy headquarters. All donors receive one free admission to the Conservancy Nature Center.

All who attend the baby shower can enter a drawing for a 30-minute behind-the-scenes tour of the wildlife hospital.

The von Arx Wildlife Hospital admitted more than 3,800 animals last year. Director Joanna Fitzgerald says the hospital will treat hundreds of baby birds, mammals and reptiles through the summer months.

For more information or to make a donation, visit www.conservancy.org/babyshower. ■

Among the recent patients admitted to the von Arx Wildlife Hospital at the Conservancy are a baby bobcat, an owllet and a fox kitten.

UF report: Consumer confidence drops for second consecutive month

THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

Consumer sentiment among Floridians dropped in May for the second month in a row, falling 2.4 points to 93.3 from a revised April reading of 95.7.

The less-positive outlook was shared by all Floridians across age, gender and income groups.

“Most of the pessimism in May stems from perceptions about current economic conditions,” said Hector Sandoval, director of the Economic Analysis Program at UF’s Bureau of Economic and Business Research.

Perceptions of one’s personal financial situation now compared with a year ago showed the biggest drop, falling 5.9 points from 91 to 85.1. Opinions as to whether now is a good time to buy a major household item declined two points, from 101.7 to 99.7. However, there were increases among those 60 and older and those with income under $50,000.

Expectations of personal finances a year from now dropped 5.2 points from 105.1 to 99.9. Expectations for the U.S. economy were mixed: Anticipated conditions over the next year decreased from 92.8 to 92.7, while expectations of U.S. economic conditions over the next five years increased from 88.1 to 89.

“In contrast to April, this month’s unfavorable expectations are accompanied by a significant decline in perceptions of present conditions,” Mr. Sandoval said.

The latest report from the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis shows Florida’s gross domestic product growth rate ranked fifth of all states in 2016, with an annual growth rate of 3 percent. The sector contributing the most to the Florida economy in 2016 was the professional, scientific and technical services sector, followed by the construction and information sectors.

Florida’s unemployment rate declined again in April by three-tenths of a percentage point to 4.5 percent. The industries gaining the most jobs were professional and business services, followed by trade, transportation and utilities.

Conducted May 1-24, the UF study reflects the responses of 415 individuals who were reached on cell phones and who represent a demographic cross section of Florida.

The index used by UF researchers is benchmarked to 1966, which means a value of 100 represents the same level of confidence for that year. The lowest index possible is a 2, the highest is 150.

Take a shelter cat home and save the adoption fee

As part of Adopt-a-Shelter Cat Month, Humane Society Naples has declared Thursdays in June to be "Purrdays," when the adoption fees (typically $35-$75) are waived for all cats over 4 months old.

The shelter has many friendly, playful adult cats and older kittens ready for adoption. All are spayed or neutered and have had all of their vaccinations and veterinary care. The only thing they lack is a permanent home.

More than 1,400 homeless cats entered HSN's no-kill shelter last year, and the nonprofit organization anticipates taking in 1,500 felines this year.

See the adoptable cats in the main shelter at HSN headquarters at 370 Airport-Pulling Road N. (11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday, and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday), or at the satellite adoption center at Coastland Center during mall hours. Call 643-1555 or visit www.HSNaples.org for more information. ■

Spay/neuter clinic offers low-cost surgeries

The Collier Spay Neuter Clinic is dedicated to providing a non-lethal solution to the problem of shelter pet overpopulation. There are no income qualifications required. Pets and feral cats from Marco Island to Cape Coral and more are all welcome.

Spay/neuter fees are $70 and $60, respectively, for cats; and $100-$150 and $90-$105 for dogs, depending on weight ($30 surcharge for all dogs over 100 pounds).

All healthy cats and dogs over the age of 8 weeks and weighing at least 2 pounds are eligible for surgery.

The CSNC feral cat package for $45 includes spay/neuter surgery, ear tipping, ear cleaning, ear mite treatment and a 3-year rabies vaccination.

In addition to spay/neuter services, CSNC offers wellness appointments every Tuesday and Thursday and low-cost vaccinations from 9 a.m. to noon on the last Friday of each month (first come, first served).

The CSNC is at 11569 Collier Blvd. For more information about services, fees and appointments, call 228-7740 or visit www.collierspayneuter.org. ■ red wolves (now gone from Florida) or once-numerous black bears and panthers.

And people are increasingly worried about them, although they shouldn't be, say the experts.

"People have spotted at least two in the Edison Park area of Fort Myers (near the Edison-Ford Winter Estates, downtown), so residents are concerned — about themselves and their small animal companions," says veterinarian Dr. Sharon Powell of the Edison Park Animal Hospital.

"But they don't have to be," she adds. "They never attack humans. Just keep your small animal companions in at night and on a leash when you walk them."

Dr. Powell grew up in the neighborhood — her father was one of only three veterinarians in Lee County, once — and she remembers seeing a cottonmouth and even an alligator that probably swam up a creek known as Manuel's Branch from the Caloosahatchee River. But never a coyote, until now, when she spotted one recently behind Covenant Presbyterian Church.

"The Edison Park Neighborhood Association has meetings, and some people are looking into trapping and relocating the coyotes, but I've learned that's an inefficient way of trying to solve problems," she says.

"It increases the chance of more coyotes."

The animals are territorial, and a pair will keep others out. Females normally have litters ranging from two to 12 pups, once a year, according to the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission. But if a female is relocated, more coyotes may come into the area and breed, Dr. Powell explains.

She encourages any residents of a community with coyotes to invite officials from the FWC to a meeting — they'll send an expert to provide advice on how to best solve the problem, if it is a problem.

Coyotes and people

Why are they able to tuck up against humans when other larger predators are not?

"Because they're smart and they're adaptable, so they've been able to survive with humans without a lot of protections," says Dr. Martin Main, associate dean for Natural Resources at the University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences.

Although the FWC strictly controls hunting of many species in Florida, not the coyote. They're lumped in with 'coons, 'possums, skunks, nutria and even beaver as fur-bearing animals you can kill year around.

But there's little reason to do so, it seems.

Based at the IFAS station in Immokalee, Dr. Main studied canis latrans (the singing dog) for almost two decades.

"They've had a bad rap as livestock killers and occasionally they do — a big coyote is about 35 to 40 pounds and they can be tough on goats and sheep."

That's true especially in the west. Coyotes killed 1,200 sheep in a recent year in Montana, numbers show, and cattle ranchers have traditionally shot any coyotes they spotted — but not so much in Florida.

To get a sense of the problem in Florida's huge cattle industry a few years back, Dr. Main conducted a months-long study by radio-tagging and monitoring 400 calves spread across two big cattle ranches in Collier and Hendry counties, mostly north of the Big Cypress but south of Immokalee.

"A coyote didn't kill a single one of those calves," he says.

Sometimes they'll eat pets left unattended, especially at dusk and dawn although they hunt in daylight hours or at night, as well, usually by themselves or occasionally in pairs.

A coyote problem?

But there's a lot more to know about them that suggests they aren't to be feared; on the contrary, they're valuable to have nearby, says Dr. Main.

"I had a call the other day: 'We have a coyote problem,' they said. 'What's the problem?' I asked. 'We've been seeing coyotes.'"

"Well, seeing a coyote does not constitute a problem."

One reason is diet.

Across North America, the coyote's chief food source has always been young deer — fawns. "Wherever there are deer, there are coyotes," Dr. Main notes. In Florida, though, the deer population sometimes flags — and coyotes seem to have little effect on the numbers of deer anyway.

They find other food.

"Panthers have to eat fresh meat, only, but coyotes eat saw palmetto berries, grasshoppers persimmons, rabbits, birds, hogs, fawns, carrion, raccoons, opossums, rats — they can adapt to any food resource that's plentiful," Dr. Main explains.

As a result and beneficially, coyotes have been restoring a natural balance that existed decades ago and disappeared with the loss or reduction in numbers of other predators — they help to rein in the surging numbers of raccoons and opossums, and to hold down increases in rat populations in some places.

Raccoons, opossums and rats seek out and eat bird eggs and young birds, including quail and wild turkey populations. But where coyotes exist, those bird populations actually do better, studies have shown.

"If a coyote comes cross a turkey nest, it'll eat the eggs — who doesn't love an egg?" says Dr. Main.

"But it doesn't hunt those eggs. It hunts the animals that hunt the eggs."

And that works out well for farmers with livestock such as Jerry Kennedy, who keeps cows and securely fenced goats on his 25 acres in northeast Lee near the Charlotte County border.

"If they don't bother my stuff, I won't bother them," he says. "I've seen them practically every day or every night out there (in fields and woods just south of Babcock Ranch). I had two out there last night. One was a little skinny."

Mr. Kennedy deploys game cameras on his property, taking a lot of pleasure, he says, from photographs of coyotes, bobcats, an occasional otter and other creatures he sees many mornings when he checks the cameras.

They've never killed his livestock, his pets or even one lucky rabbit, a fat one that lives where he spots the most predators, he notes.

Maybe Old Man Coyote and Old Man Rabbit have worked out some kind of deal. ■

Gulfshore Playhouse set to purchase land for theater at Naples Square

Gulfshore Playhouse has entered into a purchase agreement for a 3-acre site at Goodlette-Frank Road and First Avenue North in anticipation of building a new regional theater complex.

The land is within Naples Square, a mixed-use development by The Ronto Group in partnership with Wheelock Street Capital that includes 300 residences and the recently announced Shoppes at Naples Square.

The new Gulfshore Playhouse will enable the professional theater company to produce a broader season with more musicals, new works and content specifically created for Broadway. An education wing will expand offerings for all ages and will also provide for community outreach programming with a special focus on at-risk youth.

The creation of the new complex is made possible by a $10 million matching gift from Patty and Jay Baker. A campaign is underway to continue raising funds.

Closing on the land purchase from The Ronto Group is expected in mid-August. ■

BEHIND THE WHEEL

Jeep Wrangler Unlimited, the brawny coddler

mylesKORNBLATT

mk@autominded.com

The classic styling of today's Jeep Wrangler is part of a slow design evolution from its WWII founding father. Retaining the visual connection to an American hero has been so successful that it sustains an entire brand.

It portrays a ruggedness that can even make a milk run look like an adventure. But while the appearance is old-fashioned, those who haven't checked out a Wrangler in a while might be in for a surprise.

The first CJs (Civilian Jeeps) were low on creature comforts, and the option list was mostly agricultural equipment. Decades later, it was still a rudimentary 4x4 with rear seats being one of the pricier add-ons. But during this progression, a select group of people started embracing a lifestyle that the go-anywhere CJs provided.

As the appeal of being a "weekend warrior" has spread further into the mainstream, Jeep has been adapting their fundamental 4x4 to carry more creature comforts. This cozy evolution has led to an off-roader like the one seen here.

The Wrangler Unlimited offers a longer wheelbase so it can fit four full doors, and everything is nicely color-coordinated. But it also has a beefy first impression that proves it's ready to join its predecessors on the muddy trail.

In fact, the latest generation's largest difference is how much a Jeep can be a fully enclosed machine.

There are still soft tops and low cut doors for the adventurers who like to be one with nature, but a fully loaded version like our range-topping Wrangler Rubicon Recon comes standard with full doors that feature power windows and locks.

Plus, the fiberglass roof can now be body-colored to make this look like it was born to be an enclosed SUV.

It's still a true Jeep, and so it only takes two wrenches, 14 bolts, two spindles, and the removal of seven components to become a full convertible. But this conversion takes a muscular set of helping hands, and no one will need a day at the gym once the task is done.

Inside there is a similar feeling of robust design with concessions for added comfort.

Besides options like power windows and locks, the Wrangler can be outfitted with a strong air conditioner, a water-resistance subwoofer stereo, and satellite navigation. These seem like great options no matter if it's a trip through the Everglades or Main Street. The only complaint is that they feel like a generation behind the mainstream.

A basic two-door Wrangler starts around $25K, and a four-door Unlimited Rubicon Recon like our test vehicle is over $44K.

For that kind of money, the standard SUV shopper often expects automatic climate control, instead of the analog A/C controls. And the navigation system could have a larger and crisper screen.

Then again, there are many of us who are just impressed with such modern conveniences available in an icon that once was proud for offering a heater. Thus, the perception of the Wrangler's interior features is the true telltale dividing line of people who are ready to join the Jeep lifestyle.

For those newly minted weekend warriors, the best Jeep features are actually underneath the skin.

For example, the upper level trims offer a sway bar for the front suspension that can be disconnected just by touching a button next to the speedometer. What this means in the real world is a vehicle that feels steady on the school drop-off runs, but it also has the ability to release the suspension for boulder-clearing levels of travel.

All levels of the Wranglers are quite capable right out of the box. It's thanks to a 4x4 drivetrain that features a two-speed transfer case, sturdy axles, and good ground clearance — all as standard.

Besides off-road prowess, the other great Jeep tradition is personalization. No matter if it's Mopar accessories direct from the dealership, or aftermarket components out of the dozens of mail order catalogs/websites, the enduring appeal of the Wrangler is being able to make it your own.

Living this Jeep lifestyle has always been a camaraderie of individual spirits rallying around a central theme of people who love a good 4x4.

The difference today is the club members are a lot more comfortable than they used to be. ■

Volunteers help CCSO in many ways

Civilian and auxiliary volunteers assist Collier County Sheriff's Office deputies in a variety of ways, including staffing special events, helping with traffic control, providing research or support to investigators, performing data entry and assisting with the agency's many youth programs.

Volunteers also patrol neighborhoods in specially marked vehicles, and if something seems out of character, they pass that information along to the deputies.

At the recent 20th annual CCSO volunteer appreciation luncheon, 10 civilian and auxiliary volunteers received certificates and plaques in recognition of the time and effort they devoted to CCSO and the community in 2016. The civilian volunteers were: Roger Hill, 3,198 hours; Kenneth Robins, 1,994 hours; William Leach, 1,503 hours; Brad Hale, 1,378 hours; and Paige Long, 1,356 hours. The auxiliary volunteers were: Richard "Barry" Liner, 1,497 hours; Charles Montgomery, 1,313 hours; Ernest Durso, 853 hours; Michael Provost, 731 hours; and Michael Day, 620 hours.

Specialized processing and background checks are necessary to become a volunteer. For more information, call 252-0530 or download an application at www.colliersheriff.org. ■

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPHERD
Distributed by Universal Press Syndicate

Rare fetish!

Jordan Haskins, 26, was sentenced to probation and sex counseling in May after pleading guilty to eight charges arising from two auto accidents in Saginaw, Mich. Prosecutors said Haskins described "cranking," in which he would remove a vehicle's spark-plug wires to make it "run rough," which supposedly improves his chances for a self-service happy ending. Haskins's lawyer added, "(Cranking) is something I don't think we understand as attorneys."

Weirdo-American community

■ A 22-year-old Los Angeles makeup artist who calls himself Vinny Ohh has, according to his several TV and YouTube appearances and much social media presence, transformed himself into a "genderless," extraterrestrial-looking person via around 110 bodily procedures (so far), costing him at least $50,000. He says his appearance is merely an "all-in" representation of how he feels inside. (The "genderless" Vinny has yet to specify a pronoun preference.)

The entrepreneurial spirit

■ Le Plat Sal (The Dirty Plate) restaurant in the Marais district of Paris features specialties actually containing dirt — or as Chef Solange Gregoire calls it, "the mud of the earth that caresses our toes, the sand kissed by the sun, and rocks." Mused a Food Network host in April, "What's left? People are already eating snout-to-tail, leaves-to-roots..." Gregoire extolled her four-star dishes, including pastry crust a la Mont Lachat rock and a Boue Ragout stew simmered with silt from the River Seine. (NPR also noted that the founder of The Shake Shack was "quietly" planning a new American chain, Rock in Roll.)

wealth obtainable by capturing the platinum reputed to be in asteroids. The costs to mine the stone (rockets, launch expenses, etc.) might have dropped recently to about $3 billion — a trifle next to the $50 billion worth of platinum Poponak said a single asteroid might contain. (On the other hand, experts point out, such abundance of platinum might crash the worldwide price.)

■ Goldman Sachs analyst Noah Poponak's 98-page paper (leaked to Business Insider in April) touted the

■ The Twisted Ranch restaurant in the Souldard neighborhood of St. Louis, saw crowds swell in March after it revamped its menu with more than two dozen items made with ranch dressing (including ranch-infused Bloody Marys). As one satisfied visitor put it, "Ranch is everyone's guilty pleasure."

Unclear on the concept

■ Yale University graduate students (well, at least eight of them), claiming "union" status, demonstrated in front of the Yale president's home in April demanding better benefits (beyond the annual free tuition, $30,000 stipends and free health care). Some of the students characterized their action as an "indefinite fast" while others called it a "hunger strike." However, a pamphlet associated with the unionizing made it clear that strikers could go eat any time they got hungry.

Smooth reactions

■ Police in Cleveland are searching for the woman whose patience ran out on April 14 awaiting her young son's slow haircut at Allstate Barber College. She pulled out a pistol, took aim at the barber and warned: "I got two clips! I'll pop you." (She allowed him to finish up and left without further incident.)

disorderly conduct in Cullman, Ala., in May after police spotted her standing on a car, stomping out the windshield and smashing the sun roof. She said it was a boyfriend's car, that she thought he was cheating on her, and that she had spent the previous night "thinking" about what to do, "pray(ing) about it and stuff." (However, she said, "I did it anyway.") ■

SHIFTING TAXPAYER'S BURDEN

To the Commissioners of the North Collier Fire Control & Rescue District

Norman Feder
Chairman

Chris Lombardo
Vice Chairman

Chris Crossan
Treasurer

Orly Stoltz (Ret.)
Fire Chief

In November, 2014, you promised the citizens of North Naples (NNFD) and Big Corkscrew Island Fire Districts (BCIFD) that if we approved the referendum to merge fire districts, "NNFD tax money will NOT be spent in BCIFD. By using a cost allocation method, the finances of each district will be tracked and maintained separately to ensure one district is not subsidizing the other."

After the merger, you broke your promise by replacing the original cost allocation method with the 86-14 Feder Plan that allocates 86% of all costs and expenses to NNFD taxpayers and the remaining 14% to BCIFD taxpayers.

Then, in December, 2015, you entered into a 10 year lease purchase agreement to buy two new pumper engines for BCIFD, to replace their outdated equipment, at a cost of $1 million. With the 86-14 Plan now in effect, NNFD taxpayers pay $860,000 and BCIFD taxpayers pay $140,000. Using the initially promised direct/indirect cost allocation method, NNFD taxpayers pay 0%, and BCIFD taxpayers pay 100% to replace their own pumper engines. Result: NNFD taxpayers spend $860,000 to subsidize BCIFD equipment purchase. This is EXACTLY what you promised would not happen!

Keep your promise and reinstate the direct/indirect cost allocation method promised in the merger documents. Commissioners Burke and MCGowan opposed the 86-14 Plan.

Volunteers SHINE light on concerns about insurance

Elders in Naples, their caregivers and family members who have questions or concerns about Medicare and related health insurance topics have a new place to turn. The state's SHINE — Serving Health Insurance Needs of Elders — program offers counseling at the Alzheimer's Support Network, 660 Tamiami Trail N., from 1-3 p.m. every second Friday of the month. The next session is June 9.

A volunteer program of the Florida Department of Elder Affairs, SHINE empowers elders to make informed decisions about their health-care coverage. It is offered locally through the Area Agency on Aging for Southwest Florida.

SHINE volunteers can answer questions regarding Medicare, Medicaid, prescription assistance, long-term care planning and more. They can help seniors and the disabled on Medicare find programs that might lower prescription drug costs, provide prescription drugs at no cost and help with Medicare Part B costs.

To make an appointment for counseling at the new Naples SHINE site or to receive assistance by phone, call the toll-free Elder Helpline at 800-413-5337. ■

PET TALES

Kittens have special nutritional needs

DR. MARTY BECKER, KIM CAMPBELL THORNTON AND MIKKEL BECKER

■ What's the difference between kitten food and food for adult cats? Kittens grow rapidly and need high levels of nutrients. Foods appropriate for kittens are labeled "for growth" or "for all life stages." Look for a food that has been tested with feeding trials, meaning the company has fed it to kittens for a specific period of time to make sure it meets their needs. Once kittens reach maturity, they can start eating a maintenance diet for adults. Large cats such as Maine coons, ragdolls or Savannas may do best if they eat kitten food for a longer period than smaller cats.

■ Early exposure to pets may help reduce an infant's risk of allergies and obesity, according to a new study from the University of Alberta. Babies from families with pets showed higher levels of two types of microbes — Ruminococcus and Oscillospira — that have been linked with reduced incidence of childhood allergies and obesity. The findings build on two decades of research showing that children who grow up with dogs have lower rates of asthma. Researchers believe that exposure to dirt and bacteria early in life — from contact with a dog's fur and paws, for example — can create early immunity.

set hound. The low-slung hound hails from Gascony, in southwest France. The basset bleu was bred down in size from the grande bleu de Gascogne and has a distinctive mottled black and white coat — giving a slate-blue effect — with or without black patches. He also has tan markings above the eyes, on the cheeks and lips, inside the ears, on the legs and under the tail. Basset bleus are playful and social, but love following scent trails above all else. ■

Pets of the Week

>> Brittany is a beautiful 1½-year-old domestic shorthair who likes everyone and will make a wonderful forever pet.

>> Dory is a beautiful and friendly 2-year-old Rhodesian ridgeback mix who weighs about 56 pounds. She's medium energy and loves to play and have her belly rubbed. She's good on her leash and will make a lovely family pet.

>> Kane is a playful and handsome 8-month-old Catahoula mix who weighs about 36 pounds. He's good on his leash and loves to play with toys.

>> Louie is a handsome, laid-back 10-year-old domestic shorthair who enjoys cuddling. He is on a special diet for his hyperthyroidism and needs a loving home.

To adopt or foster a pet

This week's pets are from Collier County Domestic Animal Services. Adoption fees for cats range from $20 to $60 and dogs from $30 to $80. Fees include sterilization surgery, vaccinations, pet license, ID microchip and a bag of food. Visit DAS at 7610 Davis Blvd. from 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Monday-Saturday. Adoptable dogs and cats from DAS are also at For Footed Friends in Marquessa Plaza on Livingston Road from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. the first Saturday of every month. THE DIVA DIARIES

What if your only closet were a carry-on?

It happened on the last night of our recent vacation in Tennessee, as I repacked my clothes into my startlingly wee 18-inch carry-on for the journey back to Southwest Florida in what I fondly refer to as the airless, claustrophobic metal tube that hurls across the sky (otherwise known as a “commercial airline jet”). I was tightly rolling up my clothes, just as a handy YouTube video had instructed me to do, when it suddenly hit me: The only clothes I ever need are the ones that can fit into my carry-on.

Stick with me here, please. I’ll own up to being an unrestrained shopping diva. My addiction to Ross Dress For Less, Marshall’s and the clothing section at Target is well known. I’m not even embarrassed to admit that I’d rather get in the car and go pay $12.99 for a discounted frock rather than iron one of the many on my laundry room floor when I need to find something to wear to an event. And even though, once a year, I fill up a few lawn-sized Hefty bags with clothes to donate, my shopping obsession continues and my clothing collection increases.

As an admitted garment hoarder, I’ve always found packing for a trip challenging. Whether it’s for a long weekend or a whole week, I tend to just stuff everything I don’t hate into an oversized suitcase and check my baggage. I pack with the notion that I’ll figure it out when I get to my destination. However, my dear husband put a crimp in my usual habit when, before our latest getaway, he bought me a present: the aforementioned itty-bitty carry-on. For logistical reasons, we were not going to be able to check our bags for our Tennessee trip; thus the shiny, tiny, new suitcase.

I had to find a way to make it work.

I headed to YouTube and found several videos detailing clever ways to pack an eight-day vacation wardrobe into a suitcase the size of a Triscuit box. I was forced to make smart choices, I had to learn how to roll clothes and I had to face the fact that I didn’t need to take any sparkly cocktail dresses to a rustic cabin in the Smoky Mountains.

So, as I was repacking, or rather rerolling, on our last night, I came to the realization that not only did I have plenty of clothes for our getaway, there was actually a skirt, a dress and two tops that I never got around to wearing.

This was huge.

This meant I could go home and donate every piece of clothing I own — except what was in the carry-on. I don’t need the size-2 stonewashed skinny jeans I’ve kept for weight-loss motivation for the past 10 years. I certainly shouldn’t be hanging on to the see-through red lace blouse that I’ve had since my early-’90s clubbing days. And seriously, as someone over a certain age, I definitely could say goodbye to all my grunge-era baby doll dresses.

I could purge.

The carry-on consisted of two skorts (skirt/shorts combo), two pairs of pants, two pairs of shorts, a few tops, four dresses, a nightgown, a robe, a bathing suit and a beach cover-up.

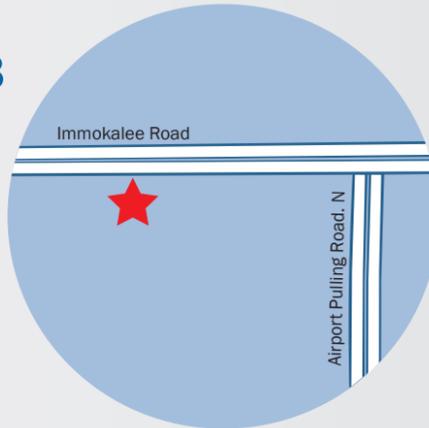

For the first few days after we returned from our vacation, I continued to only wear the carry-on wardrobe. That is until we were invited to a wine dinner that called for a cocktail dress.

For once, I actually scooped one off the laundry room floor and ironed it. I call that progress. Baby steps, dear readers, baby steps. ■

Deep roots with nonprofits lead to top job at Naples garden

DON MANLEY
Florida Weekly Correspondent

Donna McGinnis' business philosophy places a premium on planning, but it's not her paramount concern when it comes to having a smooth-running organization.

MCGINNIS

"The one thing I talk about is culture beats strategy," said Ms. McGinnis, president and CEO of Naples Botanical Garden. "As much as we might plan or strategize, if we don't have the right organizational culture, that will derail everything. Naples Botanical Garden has a staff that has grown very quickly, and it's a facility that has grown very quickly, so building the culture is very important because there are new people coming in all of the time."

After just five months on the job, memories of being a new hire there are still fresh for her. She succeeded Brian Holley, who retired at the end of 2016 after 11 years in that role.

Ms. McGinnis came to NBG after four years as senior vice-president of the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis. She was also an adjunct professor in St. Louis' Washington University's nonprofit management master's degree program for 10 years.

Prior to that, she was a managing director of the Missouri History Museum, also in St. Louis, and worked as a consultant counseling nonprofits on strategic planning and fundraising.

"I've always worked for nonprofit organizations and have found such fantastic rewards in it," she said. "I think with botanical gardens, across the U.S. and internationally, we're a community

Warren Buffett Wisdom

Tens of thousands of Berkshire Hathaway shareholders gathered in Omaha in early May to listen to Chairman Warren Buffett and his partner, Charlie Munger, answer questions for five and a half hours. Here are some nuggets from the annual meeting:

- On capitalism, free trade and "roadkill": When questioned about job losses through corporate downsizings, Munger said: "I'm afraid that a capitalist system is always going to hurt some people as it modifies and improves. There's no way to avoid it."

- Buffett opined, "We have to have policies that take care of the people who become roadkill." He added: "... we've got a rich society that can do that and a society that will benefit from free trade, and I think we ought to try to hit both objectives of making sure that there is no roadkill and, at the same time, that 320 million people get the benefits of free trade."

- On ideal companies: They look for businesses with trusted management and sustainable competitive advantages. "You want a moat around the castle and a knight in it."

- On mistakes: Munger noted, "We missed a lot of things. And we'll keep doing that," adding, "But we don't miss them all." That's an important point, reflecting how you don't need to find all great investments in order to do well. Buffett pointed to Google as a business they didn't sufficiently appreciate years ago.

- On hedge funds: "The huge money is in selling people the idea that you can do something magical for them" — such as market-trouncing returns. Buffett went on to criticize the typical hedge fund payment model of collecting 2 percent of investors' assets each year, plus 20 percent of any gains, pointing out that if the hedge fund manager oversaw $1 billion and delivered terrible performance, he'd still collect $20 million.

We'll offer more on Buffett next week. In the meantime, read his educational (and often entertaining) annual letters to shareholders at berkshirehathaway.com. (The Motley Fool owns shares of and has recommended Berkshire Hathaway.) ■

My Smartest Investment

Shortsighted

My dumbest investment occurred a long time ago — in 2003, I think. I shorted an internet stock. I was right about it being way overvalued, but it went up anyway. And then it kept going up and up some more. I had to bail, and I lost huge. The stock did eventually fall. As I said, it really was way overvalued.

— W.B., online

The Fool Responds: Most of us know about the massive dot-com meltdown in the stock market that happened in early 2000. But it wasn't smooth sailing for technology and other stocks after that. The stock market is simply a relatively volatile place, especially at certain times.

In 2003, technology stocks soared some 50 percent, followed by a surge of more than 20 percent the following year. Those are not typical advances for any stock or sector, and such increases certainly do suggest that there are overvalued stocks to be found. Thus, it can seem smart to "short" a stock, where you essentially bet against it by (legally) borrowing shares of it and selling them, expecting to buy them back later at a lower price.

The problem with shorting, though, is that even when you're correct that a stock is due to fall, you can't know just when it will do so. If you end up "covering" your short (buying shares to replace what you borrowed) at higher prices, you'll lose money. ■

Last week's trivia answer

I was founded as Sound of Music in 1966. (I took my current name in 1983.) Between 2000 and 2010, I bought Musicland Stores, Magnolia Hi-Fi, Pacific Sales, Napster and more. Today, I'm a retail giant, with more than 1,500 stores in North America and more than 125,000 employees. My recycling program receives an average of more than 400 pounds of electronics every minute that my stores are open. I rake in close to $40 billion annually. I've gone through a rough patch and am now regaining my footing. My stores feature squads of technological heroes. Who am I? (Answer: Best Buy) ■

I Bonds and Derivatives

Q Can you explain what "I bonds" are?

— T.W., LaCrosse, Wisconsin

A Series I savings bonds are savings bonds offered by the federal government that feature inflation-adjusted interest payments. They offer limited risk (as the U.S. government is rather reliable), tax advantages, small minimum investment amounts (as little as $25) and protection against inflation. Interest is taxable unless you follow certain rules and use it for qualifying educational expenses.

On the downside, the bonds' interest rates are low these days — at 1.96 percent recently, and due for a semiannual adjustment on Nov. 1. That still beats most savings accounts or short-term CDs, though. You'll lose some interest if you cash out within the first five years.

Over the long haul, money tends to grow much faster in stocks than in bonds. The folks at Morningstar looked at every 20-year period between 1926 and 2015 and found that stocks outperformed bonds in each period at least 93 percent of the time. Economist Jeremy Siegel has calculated that between 1802 and 2012, stocks averaged an inflation-adjusted 6.6 percent annual return, versus 3.6 percent for bonds.

I bonds can protect your money, but they're not likely to make you rich. Learn more about bonds at treasurydirect.gov and investor.gov.

Q What's a derivative?

— N.K., Bay City, Michigan

A Derivatives are financial contracts whose value is "derived" from another security, such as a stock, bond, commodity, currency or a market index. They include options, futures and mortgage-backed securities. Derivatives are sometimes used to "hedge" risk, such as when companies limit their exposure to losses from currency exchange rate fluctuations or fuel price volatility. Many derivatives are unregulated, and they're often quite risky. Warren Buffett has called derivatives "time bombs" and "financial weapons of mass destruction." ■

Name That Company

Tracing my roots back to a grain warehouse in 1865, I'm now America's largest privately held company — yet you may not know my name. Based in Minneapolis, I specialize in food, agricultural, financial and industrial products. My brands include Egg Beaters, Ambrosia chocolate, Shady Brook Farms meats, Truvia sweetener and Diamond Crystal salt. My ingredients are found in toothpastes, shampoos, deodorants and more. I offer industrial salts, oils, biodiesel products, animal feed and much more, too. I rake in some $120 billion annually and have about 150,000 employees working in 70 countries. Who am I?

Think you know the answer?

We'll announce it in next week's edition. ■

The Motley Fool Take A Quarter of the World

Facebook's (Nasdaq: FB) market value recently topped $430 billion — and it's still growing. Its statistics are breathtaking: It ended 2016 with 1.86 billion monthly active users (MAUs), up 17 percent over 2015. That's about a quarter of the entire world's population. Over just two years, Facebook added 467 million MAUs.

No other social-media networks are even close. Facebook-owned WhatsApp, Messenger and Instagram boast about 1.2 billion, 1 billion and 700 million active users, respectively, placing them in second, third and seventh place behind Facebook.

Meanwhile, Facebook has only begun monetizing these platforms. The vast majority of company revenue comes from ads on Facebook. It's recently begun advertising on Instagram, and it has hardly cracked the surface on generating revenue from Messenger or WhatsApp yet. There are many revenue channels that Facebook has yet to tap.

The international market is another fertile field for long-term growth. For example, while Facebook recently generated about $17 in revenue per user in the U.S. and Canada, where it has more than 230 million users, it collected less than $6 per user in other regions, which feature about 1.7 billion users.

Facebook's price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio, recently near 40, may seem high, but given the company's growth rate and growth potential, the stock seems like a promising candidate for a long-term portfolio. (The Motley Fool owns shares of and has recommended Facebook.) ■

of colleagues that are pretty close-knit, so you get to work every day with really smart, enjoyable people.”

The first of the NBG's nine tropically themed gardens opened in 2009. The 170-acre grounds are also home to wetlands, nature preserves and the Chabraja Visitors' Center. The garden also offers an array of classes for adults and children as well as large-scale exhibitions, concerts, flower shows, holiday celebrations and family events.

About 220,000 people visit the garden annually. Almost 10,000 households have memberships and there are also 600 volunteers. Those numbers are impressive for a relatively young facility, compared to the nation's other botanical gardens, said Ms. McGinnis.

“Other gardens around the country have really been watching Naples because it took off so successfully,” she said. “When Brian Holley announced he was going to retire, there was a lot of interest in becoming his successor, so I feel really lucky to have been chosen.”

She attributes NBG's success to the community's receptiveness to the facility to its overall quality and the fact it was designed with residents and tourists in mind.

“We pay a lot of attention to what the visitors' experience will be so that they'll tell others to come,” Ms. McGinnis said. “That's been a very important part of our business.”

During the tourist season, getting to know donors and the garden's other constituents while they were in town was a big part of Ms. McGinnis' job. Since the season's end, her sights have been centered on developing a new master plan for NBG.

“What we'll do is look at what we're going to do for the next 20 to 30 years, in terms of new display gardens, new facilities and new programs,” she said. “It's in early stages right now,” she added about the plan. “It will probably take 18 to 24 months to have a final product to show the community.”

Ms. McGinnis is a Seattle native who graduated from Washington State University with a bachelor's degree in communications. She received an MBA from Webster University in St. Louis. She and her husband, Brian McGinnis, have three daughters: Mary, 21, Sally, 18 and Kate, 14.

An avid reader and museum lover, Ms. McGinnis also enjoys outdoor activities, as does her family. Now that summer is here, they look forward to racking up some serious beach time and indulging in their love of kayaking.

She also looks forward to renewing the civic involvement that was part of her life in St. Louis.

“One of the things that I'm excited about is to be at an institution that's growing and also to be in a community that's growing,” she said. “We're really looking at how the gardens can be the best community asset as that happens.”

Interview with Donna McGinnis

• Business mentor: I have been lucky enough to work for some amazing leaders, the first being Charles MacKay, general director of the Santa Fe Opera. In my first “real job” after college, I worked with him when he led Opera Theatre of Saint Louis and learned extraordinary lessons about building an audience and stewarding philanthropic support.

• First job: In high school, I worked summers at the Country Burger Drive-In, a locally owned restaurant. The owner's wife made us matching calico kerchiefs and aprons. It was humbling.

• Business words of wisdom: Culture beats strategy. Even the best plan will fail if an organization's culture doesn't affirm and motivate employees, or worse, if it fails to address negative behavior. Actually, my favorite adaptation of this is attributed to Peter Drucker: “Culture eats strategy for breakfast.”

• Favorite business book: My go-to is Stephen Covey's “Seven Habits of Highly Effective People.” My dog-eared copy is held together with masking tape. I also keep Mr. Covey's Time Management Matrix on my office wall to remind me to spend my time strategically.

• Two things you look for when hiring: 1) For early-career positions, I look for candidates who have had internships and student leadership roles, especially those that demonstrate the ability to work independently, organize a project and lead a team. 2) For more senior positions, I look for the ability to manage up and across, and for a positive attitude that will enhance our organizational culture.

• Any job openings now? Positions will be coming open over the next year. Watch for them at www.naplesgarden.org. ■

SECURITY

be about nine months before anyone realizes there's a problem.

■ Employees will continue to be critical to protection. For just about any organization, employees are the first line of defense — and the weakest link. Typically, when a breach happens behind a firewall it's because someone was tricked into clicking on a link they shouldn't have. Employees need to be educated, Mr. Miliefsky stresses.

■ Cyber insurance is hot and growing hotter. A breach can prove costly to companies, which is why cyber insurance is a growing field. Just as homeowner's insurance doesn't keep your house from catching fire, though, cyber insurance doesn't guard against a breach, Mr. Miliefsky warns. But a policy can help the company that's hit by a breach regain its financial footing.

■ Companies might begin to realize the importance of managing their intranet. Most breaches happen behind firewalls. “You'll need more than antivirus to stop the bad guys,” Mr. Miliefsky says. This includes anti-phishing tools, network access control, zero-day malware quarantining and other next-generation approaches focusing on the root cause of how breaches happen.

Without a network access control solution, Mr. Miliefsky says, you won't be able to tell who is on your network, including if the cleaners are plugging in a laptop at midnight or if a consultant is on the wrong VLAN, like human resources or payroll where you don't want them to have access. In addition, you should find and fix all your common vulnerabilities and exposures. Learn more about them at the National Vulnerability Database at www.nvd.nist.gov or www.cve.mitre.org.

“By finding and fixing your holes, you'll have a stronger, less exploitable infrastructure,” Mr. Miliefsky says.

■ The best protection for consumers is still self protection. Consumers can't always count on how well their bank or their favorite retailer handles cyber security. But anyone can take steps to be safer, Mr. Miliefsky says. Change passwords frequently. Put a sticker over your laptop's webcam when you're not using it. Protect your smartphone by turning off WiFi, Bluetooth, NFC and GPS except when you need them. Delete cookies and your browsing history regularly.

When consumers learn the importance of mobile-device “hygiene,” both they and the places they work are at less risk of suffering a data breach or loss.

“We should be asking ourselves: Why not prevent breaches instead of reacting to them?” Mr. Miliefsky says. “Corporate America and consumers don't need to sit around waiting to become cyber crime victims.” ■

REAL ESTATE NEWSMAKERS

Neal Communities ranks No. 43 on the Builder Magazine list of Top 100 homebuilders in the nation. Neal Communities increased its ranking on the Builder 100 list from No. 45 last year, with 1,129 closings and close to $415 million in gross revenue in 2016. Sales of Neal Communities' homes have increased 15 percent since 2015. The company's south region encompasses Lee and Collier counties.

So far in 2017, the company has sold 414 homes in the region.

Every year since 1984, Builder Magazine has ranked the nation's top homebuilders, evaluating both privately and publicly held companies through direct surveys and basing its results on the number of home closings. In addition to the publicly traded companies on the list, the Builder 100 is populated by a wide range of building firms, from affordable housing nonprofits to multifamily builders to companies selling entry-level, move-up and luxury single-family homes.

Since opening in Lee and Collier counties in 2014, Neal Communities' south division has grown to 44 employees. Selling currently in 10 communities, the division has sold out and completed two neighborhoods since spring 2013.

Richmond Park is the newest Neal Communities project in the Naples area. The 15-acre neighborhood features 96 multifamily, luxury carriage homes. The neighborhood has two lakes, and amenities include a clubhouse, resort-style pool, spa and a sundeck.

The entrance to Richmond Park is at the corner of Immokalee Road and Woodcrest Drive. Model homes are on schedule to open this coming fall. For more information, visit www.RichmondParkNaples.com.

Johnson Development Associates has awarded Naples-based general contractor DeAngelis Diamond with the construction of four self-storage facilities throughout Collier, Hillsborough and Pasco counties. The four Class-A self-storage facilities range from 80,000 to 100,000 square feet, with a construction schedule of eight to 10 months per project between now and the second quarter of 2018.

The first project, Hackney Drive Self Storage in Riverview, managed by Extra Space, was completed in April and has 670 units. DeAngelis Diamond has started construction on a 732-unit, 98,97-square-foot, three-story facility to be managed by CubeSmart in Lutz, with completion anticipated by the end of 2017.

Construction is also underway for a 575-unit, 79,560-square-foot facility to be managed by Extra Space on Kramer Road west of Interstate 75 in Naples. Completion is on schedule for early 2018.

Rattlesnake Self Storage in east Naples is in the preconstruction phase. Also managed by Extra Space, it will consist of 776 units.

EHC Inc., a construction company that provides pre-construction, earthwork and infrastructure services, has started on site development of the new academic building in honor of Mother Teresa of Calcutta at Ave Maria University. Manhattan Construction Group awarded EHC with the site development contract for the building that will house the university's nursing program and provide venues for the performing arts. EHC is providing earthwork, subgrade base, asphalt paving, site concrete, traffic signage and striping and final grading for the project.

The new building will provide more than 37,000 square feet of space for classrooms, a nursing laboratory, 13 private offices for faculty and also staff space for campus ministry and the Mother Teresa Project. The building also will house the permanent home for the Mother Teresa Museum, as well as a 400-seat performance hall and a 125-seat auditorium with a thrust stage.

EHC currently has 18 active projects and several in the planning stages from Collier to Sarasota counties.

Sales in phase one of the Parrot Cay neighborhood have surpassed the half-way mark at Naples Reserve, iStar's 688-acre community off U.S. 41 two miles southeast of Collier Boulevard. To date, 21 of the 38 lots in phase one have been purchased. Five lots remain along the centerpiece 125-acre Eagle Lake; 14 lots are available on interior lakefront lots.

The neighborhood's seven furnished models showcase workmanship by Florida Lifestyle Homes, KTS Homes, Lundstrom Development, Marvin Development, McGarvey Custom Homes and Stock Signature Homes. Homes have up to four bedrooms and range from 2,812 to 3,594 square feet of living space. Prices start in the high $900,000s.

Naples Reserve offers 17 fully decorated models available for viewing in six of 11 planned neighborhoods. For more information, visit the sales center at 14885 Naples Reserve Circle or go to www.naplesreserve.com. ■

More time, more choices for dining out

BY KAREN FELDMAN
 Florida Weekly Food Writer

Let's get something straight right off: Naples Restaurant Week is misnamed. Firstly, it isn't one week, it's two — two weeks of specially priced meals at four dozen restaurants. And second, it's not limited to Naples. There are at least two Bonita Springs establishments and a few in Marco Island as well.

But starting Thursday, June 1, and running through Wednesday, June 14, locals can consider this their reward for enduring a winter season when it was tough to get a reservation at their favorite restaurants as well as solace for what's shaping up as a brutally hot summer.

"Restaurant Week is an opportunity for Southwest Florida to be proud of something that's ours," says Raphael Feliciano, who organized the spring event with business partner Guy Clarke. "We get to showcase our food and our restaurants. It's an opportune time to reach locals and give back to residents who love the food here."

And, he says, the region is beginning to attract visitors from the East Coast and Tampa as well in part because of its rising culinary reputation.

The way it works is that each restaurant creates a three-course, prix-fixe menu. Most are priced at $25 to $35, although some establishments are offering additional menus priced at up to $65. Tax, gratuity and beverages are not included.

Each menu includes at least a couple of choices per course and provides diners an opportunity to try places they haven't been to before without investing a lot of money.

"It makes it very affordable to try someplace new," says Mr. Clarke. "That's the beauty of restaurant week. You can try three courses or, in some cases four or five courses, depending on the restaurant."

Consider local critic's choices for this season's reading list

BY NANCY STETSON

ELAINE'S LIST: IF IT WERE A NOVEL, it'd be a bestseller.

If a music video, it'd go viral.

Snowbirds take it back north with them. Others email the list to friends and family. Librarians share it, bookstores post it. Neapolitans take it with them when they vacation in Europe for the summer.

Highly anticipated and widely disseminated, Elaine Newton's Summer Reading List is perused line by line, the same way many of us of a certain age used to pore over lyric sheets in just-released Beatles albums.

Ms. Newton's Critics Choice lectures at Artis—Naples every season are highly popular, often selling out. Every year, she discusses half a dozen new novels, giving the same lecture twice: first on Thursday morning, then on Saturday morning.

FLORIDA WRITERS

Searching Florida's past for the beginnings of human life

philJASON

philjreviews@gmail.com

■ "An Ice Age Mystery: Unearthing the Secrets of the Old Vero Site" by Rody Johnson. University Press of Florida. 224 pages. Hardcover, $24.95.

For 100 years, the human and other remains of Vero, Fla., have engaged the skills and imagination of professional and amateur archaeologists. Just what was the region like during the Ice Age? What grew there? What were the geological features? Did animals thrive? Did humans leave their marks — and their bones — somewhere in the layers of sediment washed by intruding waters?

And why are these questions important?

The history of archaeological investigations of "the Old Vero site" is characterized by sporadic periods of accelerated interest and action separated by longer periods of general neglect. Rody Johnson tells the story in a highly accessible style, even making the forays into science understandable and engaging. It's a story of diehard fanatics, professional rivalries, hometown boosters and local kids with nothing better to do than search for Ice Age tools, fossils, bones and other evidentiary signs of life, both individual and communal.

Yes, before there was today's Vero Beach, perhaps 10,000 years before, there was Vero Man — or more likely, Vero Woman.

Mr. Johnson divides his book into two parts. The first begins with the 1916 discovery by geologist Elias Sellards of Ice Age human and animal remains. His interpretation, originally challenged by leading authorities, was eventually supported by radiocarbon dating technology. Unfortunately, this justification came long after the dismissal of Mr. Sellards' claims had crushed his career and spirit.

The author traces the ebbs and flows of interest in the Old Vero site, sets this pattern in the context of other Ice Age research sites and ends this section with reference to a long period of research dormancy. Along the way, we meet the important players in the field, generation by generation, and learn about major findings nearby and far away that rival the Old Vero site's claim for attention.

Part two of the book focuses on the resurgence of interest, the development of the Vero Beach/Indian River area, the renewal of local archaeological interest and education and the formation of civic organizations dedicated to continuing the work Mr. Sellards started so long ago.

This is a story of public pride and a sense of responsibility. It's a story of raising funds, organizing and bringing the best of current expertise to the Old Vero enterprise. Ultimately, it's a success story, but an open-ended one in that the project goes on — and on.

The main player in the renewal of activity has been the Old Vero Ice Age Sites Committee, whose website features the opening of the fourth season of activity since the committee's initial plans were put into action. See www.oviasc.org.

The committee engaged prominent and committed professionals to build upon the past and insure the future. These include Andrew Hemmings and James Adovasio of the Mercyhurst Archaeological Institute, who carried the scientific ball forward while locals Susan Grandpierre, Sandra Rawls and others did much of the organizing. The committee's motto "Dig Old Vero" says it all. The organization, with its unpronounceable acronym OVIASC, is now a community treasure, a glowing example of citizen activism.

Mr. Johnson provides chapter notes (including interview references), a glossary, a bibliography and an index.

This lively and fascinating book is an intelligent examination of how scientific endeavor operates over time and how community life can be focused and energized. It's also filled with portraits of colorful personalities.

About the author

Rody Johnson is the author of several books, including "Chasing the Wind: Inside the Alternative Energy Battle," "The Rise and Fall of Dodgertown: 60 Years of Baseball in Vero Beach" and "Different Battles: The Search for a World War II Hero." He holds engineering and MBA degrees and made his career in aerospace project management before he became publisher of a community newspaper. He lives in Vero Beach. ■

This week at Lab Theater

The Laboratory Theater of Florida offers live performance, education, community outreach, experimentation and the development of ensemble work. Here's what's coming up:

Square One Improv: June 2

Square One Improv returns to Lab Theater with a night of hilarious antics and on-the-spot jokes starting at 8 p.m. Friday, June 2. Every facet of the improvised show is based on audience suggestions. With years of experience performing and competing nationally, Square One delivers a sidesplitting, one-of-a-kind show every time.

Performing a unique mixture of both short- and long-form improv, the Square One team provides an entertaining evening of family-friendly laughter that is fast-paced, musical and entirely ad-libbed.

"We try and give our audiences a taste of everything," says co-founder Shaun Johnson. "There's something for everybody." For the more adventurous, there are occasional opportunities to join the cast on stage.

"True Colors of Pride": June 3

The Southwest Florida Gay & Lesbian Chorus gives its first performance of the "True Colors of Pride" 2017 concert season beginning at 7 p.m. Saturday, June 3, at Lab Theater.

Dedicated to celebrating the diversity in all of us, the chorus. In addition to the signature song "True Colors," the evening will feature selections such as "All the Things You Are," "Bridge Over Troubled Water," "Dare to Dream," "Forever Motown" and "Swingin' at Basie's Place."

Tickets for an evening of improv and "True Colors of Pride" are available by calling the box office at 218-0481 or by visiting www.LaboratoryTheaterFlorida.com. The theater is at 1634 Woodford Ave. just east of downtown Fort Myers. ■

Ms. Newton tells Florida Weekly she's chosen the following for discussion in the upcoming season: "The Nix," "The Women in the Castle," "The Underground Railroad," "A Gentleman in Moscow," "Commonwealth" and "Anything is Possible."

She also says two of the authors will join her for an on-stage dialogue: Mr. Hill ("The Nix") in November and Mr. Towles ("A Gentleman in Moscow") in February.

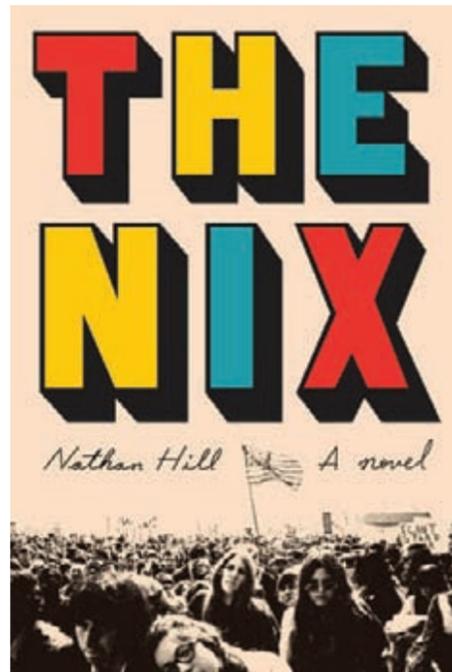

Here are the critic's descriptions of her choices for next season:

■ 'The Nix' by Nathan Hill

November lecture/author dialogue

In this astute, hilarious, sprawling debut novel, full of plot twists, digressions and set-pieces, a young, frustrated professor and stalled novelist agrees to write the tell-all biography ("acres of secrets") of his estranged mother who abandoned him at age 11. Now, after 20 years, she has resurfaced, splashed all over the news as the "once radical hippy prostitute-teacher" who has just been arrested for throwing rocks at an ultra right-wing presidential hopeful. "The Nix" is a fascinating journey, careening through the last 50 years of American history from the 1960s counter-culture to the Occupy Wall Street movement."

Note: The author, by the way, is a Neapolitan who used to teach at Florida Gulf Coast University; his wife is in the Naples Philharmonic. "The Nix" has just been released in paperback.

■ 'The Women in the Castle' by Jessica Shattuck

December lecture

Drawing on her grandparents' experience, Ms. Shattuck takes us inside the world of "ordinary Germans" before, during and after WWII. This is a novel full of compassion, shame, heroism and complex relationships.

Never denying the savage atrocity of the war, offering no atonement, Ms. Shattuck presents three fallible German women whose husbands have been executed for their role in the failed attempt to assassinate Hitler. The women are very different, with diverse backgrounds, perspectives and principles. Left to survive together with their children in a crumbling Bavarian castle, they struggle with fear, shame and shared grief. Each has experienced the war years differently, made difficult choices and decisions. Eventually, each will ... be forced to face the secrets she has hidden and to re-live the truths of her life, coming to terms with sorrows, dreams and the sins of her nation.

"The Women in the Castle" does not ask for forgiveness. Instead, it seeks an understanding that serves the phrase, "Never again."

■ 'The Underground Railroad' by Colson Whitehead

January lecture

With a daring blend of comedy, tragedy, history and imaginative fiction, "The Underground Railroad" ingeniously envisions the hidden metaphorical passage, used to smuggle the escaped

Southern slaves to Northern freedom, as an actual underground railway network complete with tracks, tunnels, conductors and platforms. The story follows Cora as she escapes from a Georgia plantation and flees from one town to another, from state to state, witnessing a culture that is determined to demonize, brutalize and degrade the lives of African Americans.

Mr. Whitehead spins a moving, astonishingly effective story that takes us right up to the present day. Winner of the National Book Award."

■ 'A Gentleman in Moscow' by Amor Towles

February lecture/author dialogue

Set in Russia in the fraught years from 1922 to the 1950s, "A Gentleman in Moscow" centers on Count Alexander Rostov, a cultured aristocrat who is placed under lifetime house arrest in a small attic room in Moscow's Metropol Hotel, across from the Kremlin.

Isolated from the outside world, yet very much influenced by it, the count has lost his possessions, his status, his freedom. But he makes endearing friendships with a chef, a 9-year-old girl and a famous actress. Though he sees all his loves about Russia being uprooted by the new regime, the count retains his humor, his civility and honor as a gentleman and his ingrained optimism ... navigating his diminished world with elegance and an increasing sense of humanity.

This is, quite simply, an irresistible novel.

■ 'Commonwealth' by Ann Patchett

March lecture

An illicit kiss at a christening destroys two marriages and blends together the lives of six children from the differing families. From shards of conjured memories, family lore and legend, gossip and outsider information, we follow parents, children, siblings and step-children over a period of 50 years, discovering secrets that have been carefully hidden and truths that have been slowly revealed.

As always, Ms. Patchett is a masterful, insightful storyteller, combining emotional depth with narrative skill."

Note: "Commonwealth" has just been released in paperback.

■ 'Anything is Possible' by Elizabeth Strout

April lecture

Narrated by the friends, neighbors and family of Lucy Barton, nine intertwined stories create a richly human portrait of the pain, desires, disappointments and kindnesses in the lives of the people living in rural Amgash, Ill.

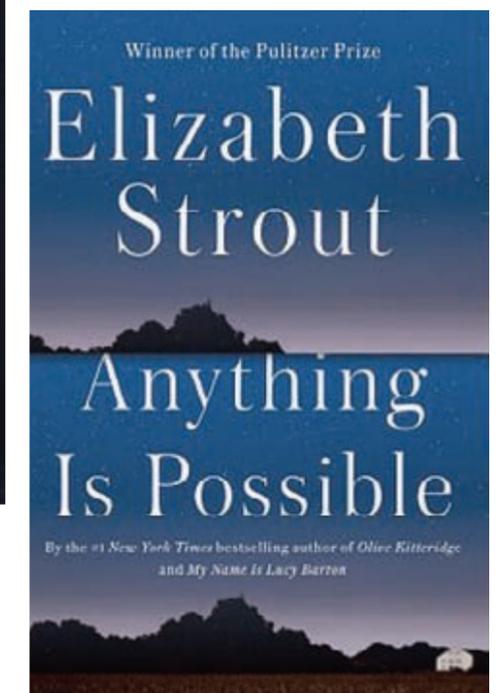

The novel speaks of the ways in which the past remains with us ... how tightly held secrets, gossip, indignities and unexpressed emotions can warp life, and how compassion and forgiveness can redeem it.

Ms. Strout's writing is powerful in its understatement and deeply insightful in its quietly beautiful prose. The Pulitzer Prize-winning author is at her very best in this latest work.

Note: The author's previous novel was titled "My Name is Lucy Barton."

Although she can only choose six novels to discuss each season, Ms. Newton tells us these contenders were high on her list for 2017-2018: "The Tea Girl of Hummingbird Lane" by Lisa See, "News of the World" by Paulette Jiles and "American War" by Omar El Akkad.

"I hated to drop them," she wrote in an email, "but choices had to be made." Avid readers will devour them anyway. ■

RESTAURANT

Diners have a wide range of choices, from Ario to Zen Asian BBQ. There are a few chain restaurants participating, such as Ruth's Chris and Shula's, Bravo, True Food Kitchen and Tommy Bahama, but the majority are independents that don't have the advertising budgets of the big guys and so might not be on everyone's radar.

Take, for example, Sakura Hawaiian Grill, a charming little restaurant offering both a $25 and a $35 menu plus a 25 percent discount on wine with the higher priced meal. If you've not tried the chef's huli huli chicken or Hawaiian grouper with lemongrass, this is a prime opportunity.

Sea Salt has devised an inventive menu with a choice of roasted corn panna cotta or bone marrow to start, striped bass or garganella with shrimp as an entrée and strawberry marzipan shortcake with fleur de sel caramel or mango sorbet with crystallized ginger for dessert. All for $35 per person.

At Lamoraga, guests have a choice of two four-course menus — one for $35, one for $55 — with two or three options per course.

There are plenty of casual spots as well, such as the new and creative Catch 41 Bar 'n' Grill, Fish Crazy, Moura Bistro, The Local and 7th Avenue Social.

A bonus is that the aptly named preview event, First Bite held recently at Mercedes-Benz of Bonita Springs, attracted 800 people to sample dishes from each of the restaurants and raised almost $16,000 for Humane Society Naples.

Mr. Clarke says Naples Restaurant Week diners will find a donation envelope for HSN along with their check when they dine at the participating restaurants. He's hoping that at least some diners will be moved to put some cash or a check in the envelope to add to the $16,000 to help HSN in its mission to care for and find homes for abandoned and stray animals in the area.

And for those who feel that two weeks isn't enough time to get to all the restaurants they want to try, take heart in knowing that another restaurant week is already scheduled for Nov. 30-Dec. 13 and will include Lee County as well. For a preview of what will be offered during that extravaganza, make sure to attend the fall First Bite, set for Tuesday, Oct. 24, at Mercedes-Benz of Naples.

COLLECTOR'S CORNER

When it comes to collecting, it's the people who matter

scott SIMMONS

ssimmons@floridaweekly.com

In the end, it's the people who matter. Think of Grandma pouring sauce from that gravy boat or Grandpa using that chair or that pipe every evening. Unless that gravy boat was a piece of Meissen or Herend or that chair was some rarity by Stickley or Chippendale, it probably would be worth precious little without the memories. Much of the value we assign to our objects is the people with whom we associate them. After more than 40 years of collecting (I started young, OK?), I value the friendships I've made along the way. I think back to the 1970s in Fort Myers, where I got to know Mary Nooe, who taught me so much about furniture, glass and pottery in her store next to Bill Smith Appliances on Fowler Street. Or Donna and Jim Hartle of Heritage House Antiques in North Fort Myers, who pulled together a beautiful selection of 19th and early 20th century pieces — I still have the Ingraham mantel clock I bought from them when I was 13, as well as an Empire-style chair that used to serve as my desk chair. They always had the patience to share their knowledge. That also was true with Martha Earp of The Purple Place, off Cleveland Avenue in Fort Myers. She was knowledgeable and passionate about the beautiful glass and silver she sold. I treasure the finds from Martha's store and still use the information she shared. I can say the same for Judy Haar, who always had a lovingly curated selection in her shop on McGregor Boulevard. Judy refreshed her merchandise with items acquired each summer in New England. I often found something to buy at Judy's store, but the real treat was visiting with Judy, who retired from the business last year. Jacksonville antiques dealer Jim Antone, former floor manager of the West Palm Beach Antiques Festival, and his business and life partner, Donna Poor, have become dear friends. It doesn't hurt that Jim is one of the most knowledgeable of dealers. I've also come to know Bill and Kay Puchstein, the promoters of the monthly show, as well as shows in the Treasure Coast and Ohio. My friends Ed and Nancy Pry, who set up each month at the show, also bring decades of knowledge and passion to the business, and I always

THE FIND:

Fenton opalescent cranberry glass hobnail salt and pepper shakers

Where: West Palm Beach Antiques Festival, South Florida Fairgrounds, 9067 Southern Blvd., West Palm Beach. Next show is June 2-4. Info: www.wpba.com or 941-697-7475.

Paid: $20

The Skinny: I love to buy things from antiques dealer Louise Lenck just because she and her daughter, Peggy Vautin, always have a kind word and real love of the business.

And it never hurts when Louise has something my mom and I collect, like these hobnail salt and pepper shakers.

My mother always collected Fenton's opalescent cranberry hobnail — pink glass with white-tipped bumps inspired by 19th century glass, and she still has some choice pieces of the ware.

These shakers date from the 1950s or '60s — the West Virginia glass firm

They're endlessly pretty and practical, making them well worth their salt in my collection. ■ count on my friends Jerry Taylor and Art Shea to have booths that reflect their exquisite tastes.

I also never miss an opportunity to say hello to Louise Lenck, who in her 80s has the energy and enthusiasm of someone decades younger.

The folks in the business aren't getting any younger, that's for sure.

But there are some younger folks with the passion for collecting.

I love to see what Sonny Kimball and Lisa Orlans bring to the show and I've loved watching their two sons grow from babies to young men. At age 2, their younger son could pronounce the word "netsuke" with ease.

That gives me hope that there will be a younger generation of collectors and dealers for me to befriend.

After all, it's the relationships that count. ■

ARTS COMMENTARY

Waiting, waiting (tap foot), waiting (check watch)

I was driving to the office the other day when “Time is Tight,” the 1968 Booker T and the MG’s instrumental, came on the radio.

And I just had to laugh, because I’d been thinking about my schedule and upcoming deadlines.

The tune was more than appropriate. You could say it’s a journalist’s theme song. We’re forever trying to beat the clock and meet each and every deadline.

We’re answering editors’ questions about stories we’ve just handed in, submitting a just-completed story, writing a new story, setting up interviews and doing research for upcoming stories and planning what we’ll be writing in the weeks and months ahead, all at the same time.

Like the Gulf of Mexico at high tide, deadlines are a never-ending series of incoming waves, one after the other.

But sometimes it seems that journalism, like the Army or like the movie business, is a lot of “hurry up and wait.”

It makes me feel like a character in Beckett’s “Waiting for Godot,” waiting, waiting, waiting.

One of the more frustrating things to deal with sometimes is setting up interviews.

Ideally, things go smoothly. You call, set up a time and date and the interview happens as scheduled.

But sometimes, you just keep going back and forth with a middleman. Other people’s schedules can be just as crazy and erratic as our own. The person’s not available when you are. So you schedule something else during that time and then unexpectedly, at the last minute — surprise! — he or she is available, but you’re not.

Or you spend days playing phone tag or waiting for a response to an email, and everything’s up in the air.

I’m going through that now with a publicist for a Famous Person.

Is Famous Person available at all on two certain days?

Nope, he’s traveling then and won’t be able to talk at all. So I make other plans.

And then, all of a sudden, at the last minute, he’s available.

But I’m not.

I still don’t have that interview nailed down yet.

I also have a friend wanting to set up a lunch date — a lunch that wouldn’t be a rushed affair but that would last a couple hours.

“Send me a few dates when you’d be available,” she emails. As if it could ever be that easy.

Friends either understand the erratic, unpredictable nature of my job, or they don’t.

I remember trying to get an interview with Willie Nelson when I was writing for another paper. The publicist told me to sit by my phone and computer during a certain time frame and just wait. If he calls, he calls, they told me. If he doesn’t, well, he doesn’t. It probably means he went out and played golf instead.

My editors were insisting on a Willie Nelson story, regardless of whether I was able to obtain an interview or not.

So during the appointed hours I waited. And waited.

And then waited some more.

He never called.

I felt like a teenage girl from the ’50s waiting by the phone, hoping to be asked to the prom.

But while I waited, I listened to various

Willie Nelson CDs. (One of my favorites is the atmospheric “Teatro,” recorded in an old movie theater in Oxnard, Calif.)

And when Mr. Nelson never called, that’s what I wound up writing about: how he never called, and how I spent my time listening to his CDs, commenting on them.

My editor was pleased with the story, though he confessed, “If you’d told me ahead of time that this is what you were going to do, it wouldn’t have sounded like much.”

(And, just so you don’t think I’m bashing the musician, I’ve seen him perform many times and once saw him stay 45 minutes after a concert at the Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall, shaking hands, posing for photos, signing autographs.)

We just seem to spend a lot of our time waiting.

I recently arrived at a theater much earlier than planned and was surprised to find a huge crowd of people standing in the lobby, waiting for the doors to open. When they did, they anxiously pushed through and then sat in their assigned seats for at least another half hour before the show began.

It just seemed so senseless.

We all have to do that when boarding a plane, but to do it voluntarily boggles the mind.

I tried to find some statistics about how long we wait during our lifetimes, but was unable to find anything definitive.

Thefactsite.com claims we spend five years of our lives waiting in lines, and that six months of that is spent waiting at traffic lights.

But on quora.com, someone writes that Richard Larson, a professor at MIT, has estimated the average American spends two years of her life waiting in line. Maybe it just feels like five.

Another person writing in says there are many kinds of lines, and “the more activities you participate in, the more you’d have to wait.” And yet another writes that it all depends upon location, that in metropolitan cities the average person waits 45 minutes a day but in other places it’s only 20 minutes a day.

However long we spend waiting, it’s simply a fact of life.

I just need to have a Zen attitude about it ... along with a Plan B.

Always having a good book on hand wouldn’t hurt either. ■

HOROSCOPES

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Keep your thoughts focused on the positive as you deal with an unexpected turn of events in a personal or professional relationship. This could be the start of a welcome change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Health matters take on added importance at this time. Deal with them before they interfere with your summer plans. A relationship that cooled off could soon warm up again.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While a few details involving upcoming decisions still need your attention, you fun-loving Felines can begin to spend more time enjoying your lively social life again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That long-sought-after career change could require you to move to another city. Weigh your decision carefully before either accepting or rejecting the offer out of hand.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A workplace situation can be awkward for Librans who prefer to keep their problems private. But you might have to "tell-all" if you hope to see it resolved in your favor.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your financial situation starts to improve this week, you still need to be cautious about money matters. Avoid major obligations, for now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your overall aspects continue to brighten, allowing you to tackle long-deferred challenges. A change in travel plans could work to your benefit.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Things seem to be slowing down for the usually restless Sea Goat. But wouldn't a bit of respite be just what you need right now? Activity picks up by the weekend.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Personal relationships take a positive turn for both married and single Aquarians. Professional commitments, however, could be complicated by newly emerging events.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A decision you thought was final might be reopened as new facts are discovered. This could lead to a short-term problem, but ultimately might prove beneficial.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A recent spate of confusion regarding decision-making begins to clear up. But caution is still advised. Continue to check details. An old friend has important news.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're anxious to see your ideas move from concept to development. But trying to force the issue right now could backfire. Wait for movement to resume shortly.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your keen interest in pursuing global events could lead you into a career as a politician or journalist. ■

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Triumph of mind over matter

BY STEVE BECKER

There are plays in bridge that seem to make no sense at all and yet, upon closer inspection, are demonstrably correct. Fortunately, such plays are rarely called for, but when the opportunity for one does arise, it is to be hoped that the player in the spotlight recognizes his opportunity.

Assume West leads the jack of hearts, won by South with the king after East signals with the six. Declarer leads a diamond to the ace, plays the queen of clubs and finesses. Unfortunately, West wins with the king and returns a heart, and South goes down one.

What's wrong with this picture, you may ask? The answer is that declarer should have made the contract. All he had to do was to play the eight of hearts at trick one instead of taking the king, and he would have been on Easy Street.

True, the subsequent club finesse would still have lost to West's king, but the big difference is that the defense would have been unable to take more than four tricks, while South would have been assured of nine regardless of how East-West defended.

Of course it takes iron nerves and a vivid imagination to duck the jack of hearts at trick one. But there can be no argument that playing low is the right play. After all, declarer is not in danger of losing the contract if he lets the jack hold the trick, but is in distinct jeopardy

if he takes the jack with the king.

Force of habit may cause declarer to win the first trick and then start thinking of what to do next, but this would be a clear case of putting the cart before the horse. The first step always is to plan the play from the outset, and any declarer who starts thinking at trick two instead of trick one is asking for trouble. ■

Southwest Florida playwrights invited to enter annual new works contest

The Naples Players' ETC ... Readers Theatre is accepting original one-act scripts for its 14th annual Evening of New Plays contest for Southwest Florida playwrights. In addition to having their play cast and performed at TNP's Evening of New Plays on Sunday, Jan. 21, 2018, up to four finalists will each receive a performance royalty and will have the opportunity for their play to be cast, directed and staged at the Sugden Community Theatre.

dry counties. Only non-musical one-acts are accepted, and only one play per writer can be submitted. Each play must be the writer's own original work, not an adaptation, and not commercially published or produced, though it may have been work-shopped or presented in staged readings. A submitted play also may have been entered in an earlier contest, so long as it was not an earlier finalist.

Deadline for submission is July 31. Winners will be notified by Oct. 31.

The judging panel can recommend up to four finalists to the ETC... committee for review and final approval by Mr. Alexander and Ms. Walck.

Under the leadership of Jessica Walck, associate artistic director of The Naples Players, ETC ... Readers Theatre helps develop playwrights, directors and actors through staged readings of original works, daring performances of contemporary plays and fresh interpretations of classic productions. The ETC program allows TNP to test new plays before producing them and provides critical feedback to playwrights along with access to performance and directing opportunities through flexible and shortened rehearsal processes and augmented performance demands.

Still working on it?

For writers with unfinished works, TNP is offering a class in Play Writing 101 with instructor Anna Segretto. Sessions meet from 2-4:30 p.m. on six consecutive Saturdays beginning June 10. Designed to guide writers through the process of creating a one-act play, the class includes idea-generating writing prompts, plot structure, character development through distinctive dialogue and script formatting.

"ETC ... is the true experimentation ground of The Naples Players," says Artistic Director Bryce Alexander.

For more information about the playwriting class or for the complete rules and regulations for entering the Evening of New Plays contest, call 263-7990 or visit www.naplesplayers.org.

Playwrights must be a resident of Collier, Lee, Charlotte, Glades or Hen-

FILM CAPSULES

Baywatch ★★

(Dwayne Johnson, Zac Efron, Priyanka Chopra) Stern lifeguard leader Mitch (Mr. Johnson) tries to get a new recruit (Mr. Efron) on board with his "team" concept as they search for a drug dealer (Mr. Chopra). It's all cheap thrills, which is expected, but none of it is satisfying in any way. Rated R.

Chuck ★★★

(Liev Schreiber, Naomi Watts, Elizabeth Moss) In the mid-'70s, New Jersey boxer Chuck Wepner (Mr. Schreiber) works his way through the ranks to a title shot with Muhammad Ali. Based on the true story that served as Sylvester Stallone's inspiration for "Rocky," it's a pretty cool true story. Rated R.

Alien: Covenant ★★★

(Michael Fassbender, Katherine Waterston, Danny McBride) After landing on a planet they hope to colonize, members of the Covenant space vessel soon realize there are native aliens who don't want them there. This is much better than "Prometheus" (2012), as it tells a solid story with clarity and has riveting action. Rated R.

The Wall ★★★

(Aaron Taylor-Johnson, John Cena, Laith Nakli) American soldiers (Taylor-Johnson and Cena) in Iraq try to survive a deadly sniper (voice of Nakli) in late 2007. This is no-frills filmmaking at its finest — tense, unrelenting, and endlessly captivating. Rated R.

Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2 ★★½

(Chris Pratt, Zoe Saldana, Dave Bautista) Peter Quill/Star-Lord (Pratt) wonders who his real father is as he and the Guardians once again save the galaxy. The 2014 original is better largely because this is narratively flawed, but darn if the action and visual effects aren't tremendous fun. Rated PG-13.

The Dinner ★★★

(Steve Coogan, Richard Gere, Laura Linney) Paul (Coogan), his brother Stan (Gere), and their wives (Linney and Rebecca Hall) meet for dinner in a posh restaurant to discuss a crime their sons committed. The plot keeps getting interrupted with backstory and only occasionally moves forward, which is a problem when trying to build drama. Rated R.

King Arthur: Legend of the Sword ★★

(Charlie Hunnam, Jude Law, Djimon Hounsou) Origin story of how Arthur (Hunnam) came to be king, including getting revenge on the man (Law) who killed his parents. The editing is so frenetic, and the rest of it so profoundly average, that this is a letdown for Warner Bros., which would like it to be the first of a six-part franchise. Rated PG-13.

Free Fire ★★

(Brie Larson, Armie Hammer, Sharlto Copley) In a Boston warehouse in 1978, a misunderstanding leads to a shoot-out between gunrunners. The story is thin and the characters are one-dimensional, but that's forgivable. Rated R. ■

Pirates of the Caribbean: 'Dead Men Tell No Tales'

www.punchdrunkmovies.com

Is it worth $10? Yes

Where has this been? Why has it taken four tries and 14 years for a "Pirates of the Caribbean" movie to come close to the enthralling success of the 2003 original?

"Pirates of the Caribbean: Dead Men Tell No Tales" isn't just good, it's really good.

The action is creative, the visual effects are spectacular and the story has elements that are ingenious. Sure it's overloaded with plot, but darn if I couldn't stop smiling while watching it.

Captain Jack Sparrow's (Johnny Depp) big opening action set piece is a doozy. He's stealing a bank vault, which his men have tied to a rope that stretches through the rear of the building. Sparrow is inside the bank and the local militia is in the front, shooting at him. Sparrow's men, in horse-drawn carriages, take off — but not just with the vault: The entire bank lifts from its foundation and is dragged through the island. It's a creative twist that makes an otherwise inconsequential action scene an absolute blast. More importantly, it sets a tone that the rest of the movie follows: It's preposterous and unrealistic, but it's done with a cinematic smile that signals the joy of the "Pirates" franchise has returned.

Most individual story components work well. In revealing how Sparrow became a captain, screenwriter Jeff Nathanson has a few surprises up his sleeve and nicely ties the narrative into the original trilogy. The only problem is the number of plotlines, as things do get convoluted at times. The basics:

Henry Turner (Brenton Thwaites), the son of Will and Elizabeth Turner (Orlando Bloom and Keira Knightley), seeks the Trident of Poseidon, believing it's the only thing that can free his father's curse to live in the ocean. Henry teams with a horologist named Corina (Kaya Scodelario) and Sparrow to find it.

Meanwhile, a Spanish pirate named

Salazar (Javier Bardem) wants the Trident so he can kill Sparrow and free himself and his men from undead purgatory.

And finally, Barbossa (Geoffrey Rush) gets involved, playing both sides as usual.

For the fifth entry of a franchise, the action is brilliantly creative. Among directors Joachim Ronning and Espen Sandberg's highlights: Cannon-hopping during battle, ghost sharks and a journey to the bottom of the ocean. None could be possible without ample visual effects, the most impressive of which involve Salazar and his men. Notice the way Salazar's hair, and the tassels on his shoulder, constantly sway as if they're under water. The time, detail and (no doubt) expense of rendering such an effect is admirable work indeed.

The first "Pirates," a critical and box office sensation, of course had an excess of novelty that delighted us all. Now "Dead Men Tell No Tales" reminds of what a great franchise this could be. For the first time in a long time, there's good reason to look forward to the next "Pirates" movie. ■

in the know

>> Despite the "Caribbean" of the title, this one was shot in Australia. The fifth in the franchise, it is the first "Pirates" movie to be shot outside the Caribbean.

Waiting for Shakespeare

BY CINDY ELAVSKY

Valerie Curry, Scott Speiser and Brendan Hines. The superhero comedy centers on an underdog accountant with zero powers (Mr. Newman) who comes to realize his city is owned by a global supervillain long thought dead. As he struggles to uncover this conspiracy, he falls in league with a strange blue superhero. The seven-episode series was created, written and executive produced by Ben Edlund ("Gotham," "Supernatural" and "The Tick" in 1994).

Q: I saw a commercial on TNT for a new series about William Shakespeare. What do you know about it?

— DeeDee F., via Facebook

A: As an English- and theater-degree holder, I can say unequivocally that I am excited about this one. "Will" premieres at 9 p.m. Monday, July 10, on TNT. The new original series takes viewers back in time to Elizabethan England to tell the wild, rowdy story of young William Shakespeare.

Newcomer Laurie Davidson plays the title role in this period drama told in a bold, contemporary style and played to a modern soundtrack that exposes all of the Bard's recklessness, lustful temptations and tortured brilliance. Also starring are Olivia DeJonge, Ewen Bremner, Colm Meaney, Mattias Inwood, Jamie Campbell Bower and Jasmin Savoy Brown.

Q: I have been hearing about a new version of "The Tick" being produced. I loved the Patrick Warburton version. Can you give me any information?

— Billy B., via email

A: Amazon Studios has announced a premiere date of Friday, Aug. 25, for its original series "The Tick." It stars Peter Serafinowicz as The Tick, as well as Griffin Newman, Jackie Earle Haley, Q: A few years ago I saw the movie adaptation of "The Girl With the Dragon Tattoo" starring Daniel Craig, Rooney Mara and Robin Wright. Will there be any films based on the rest of the best-selling series of books?

— Brandon M., via email

A: The director's mantle has been passed to Fede Alvarez ("Evil Dead," "Don't Breathe") for "The Girl in the Spider's Web," the second book in Stieg Larsson's series, and this means an all-new cast as well. As of this writing, Mr. Alvarez is eyeing Claire Foy ("The Crown") in the role of Lisbeth Salander, the anti-establishment computer expert who savagely rights wrongs. The movie is set for release in October 2018. ■

tizer this time of day, but when we both oohed and awed over the description of the Wasabi Blue Crab Poppers, above, we knew we needed an order for sharing. Each of us savored two of the delicious panko-fried orbs that were filled with sweet blue crab infused with wasabi bits and served with an eye-opening cilantro wasabi aioli. Knowing our main dishes would soon arrive, we reluctantly left behind the fifth popper. My Spicy Bulgogi Tacos (two per serving) were everything I had hoped for: strips of tender sirloin stir-fried to perfection in a spicy Korean sauce and served open-faced on soft flour tortillas with shredded greens and carrots and a generous chunk of grilled pineapple.

One More Thing: Sakura Hawaiian Grill might be small, but the menu is big. I look forward to returning so I can try the Maui Shrimp Spring Rolls and the Teriyaki Chicken Bowl. ■

PAST REPASTS

Here are some capsule summaries of previous restaurant reviews:

Angelina's Ristorante, 24041 Tamiami Trail, Bonita Springs; 390-3187

When Angelina's Ristorante opened in April 2008, it unquestionably raised the bar for Italian cuisine in Southwest Florida. Other Italian innovators have followed, yet none can compare to the complete dining experience here: food that honors yet elevates Italian ingredients and flavors; an award-winning wine program; elegant, sprawling dining rooms; and a highly trained service staff eager to accommodate and enlighten diners. It's worth indulging in both the "primo" course of small pasta portions and the "secondo" of heartier entrees. The handmade pastas are so sheer that they won't leave you too full for such stellar entrees as scallops paired with slowly roasted pork belly or classics such as veal Marsala. Angelina's is still in a class by itself. Full bar.

Catch 41 Bar 'n' Grill, Ramada Inn, 1100 Tamiami Trail, Naples; 263-6046

The Ramada has a winner in its latest restaurant, run by talented Executive Chef David Lani, a Culinary Institute of America alum who helped launch 7th Avenue Social. The atmosphere is casual, the food is fun and fanciful. Cucumber mojitos started the meal off on a cool and refreshing note. Three Maryland style mini crab cakes with remoulade, grilled Mexican street corn and cotija cheese made a great appetizer. The bao bun tacos (tucked into Chinese-style buns rather than taco shells) come in three versions, and I liked all three: the crispy pork belly with charred jalapenos, mango and bourbon glaze; blackened shrimp with kim chee slaw; and wild mushrooms with hoisin, onion and cucumber. Red grouper sliders and a pair of mini hot butter poached lobster rolls with garlic beurre blanc were great entrees. Also well done were sides of hand-cut fries and roasted cauliflower with garlic and Parmesan. The stout beer milk chocolate pudding is a great ending for beer lovers. Full bar.

Escargot 41, Park Shore Plaza, 4339 Tamiami Trail N., Naples; 793-5000

Sold by its founder, Patrick Fevrier, to current owner Stoyan Panayotov a couple of years back, this cozy little restaurant retains its French menu, charm and most of its many snail appetizers. I can recommend the Fricassee 41 — snails in scrambled eggs, tomatoes and herbs with a puff pastry top — as well as the sea-salt-cured hickory smoked salmon coated in coffee, two long-time signature dishes. The house pate, a country-style studded with pepper, is a winner, too. Entrees of tournedos lesdiguiere, beef tenderloin in a Marsala mushroom sauce, and a flaky, bronzino in an elegant almond beurre meuniere sauce were first rate. The duck, however, was disappointing, as the skin was somewhat fatty and not crisp as described on the menu. A chocolate soufflé was right on point while the raspberry version seemed less vibrant. Service was vigilant throughout the meal. Beer and wine served.

Local lovers of Cuban food have twice as much to thank the Fernandez family for now that there's a second Fernandez the Bull to patronize. For 25-plus years, the first one has existed in various locations. Now a chic-looking sibling on Pine Ridge Road offers indoor and outdoor seating, a full bar and a terrific staff. Start with a well-chilled and minty guava mojito. Savor some beef empanadas (one dish of eight serves two or more) or crisp fried calamari before moving on to an entrée like the chicken with mojo and garlic sauce or shrimp and mussels in white wine and tomato sauce. Sides of moros (rice and black beans), fried yucca or fried plantains are all great choices. And don't skip dessert. We loved the guava mango mousse cheesecake. Full bar.

Wine Loft of Naples offers club-like setting to sip and socialize

cuisine@floridaweekly.com

There are plenty of restaurants at Mercato but nothing quite like The Wine Loft of Naples, which resembles an upscale men's club with an imposing brown and gold color scheme and a sizeable bar with hammered copper covering its front and the ceiling above it. Plush brown leather booths line one wall and equally cushy leather chairs surround cocktail tables scattered through the room.

One corner has drapes pulled back and presumably serves as a dining space for parties desiring privacy. The loft above it also serves that purpose.

It's a semi-quiet Saturday. Not much foot traffic at Mercato now that the winter throngs have departed. There are a couple of people at the bar and a couple of occupied tables when we arrive just before 6 p.m.

We ask for a booth and are told they are reserved. The hostess attempts to lead us to a tiny table in the window, which we decline. We are planning to have dinner and can see that the table won't support two water glasses, two wine glasses and two plates.

We head to a slightly larger table snugged up against the curtains that border the private area. Clearly, the décor here is meant for drinking and perhaps a small plate to be shared. But the fact that the menu includes standard entrees as well begs the question as to why the management hasn't seen fit to add a few roomier tables to the mix.

First up: the wine list, which offers more than 60 selections by the glass plus a choice of bottles. You won't find any bargains here, but you will be able to sample some wines not often available by the glass. We began with one of Meiomi rose ($13) and one of Gaillard rose ($16).

I was surprised to see the bartender pull two half-filled bottles from beneath the bar and fill our glasses. I'd expected a cruvinet, a machine that keeps open wines fresh and at the proper temperature for several weeks. There's no telling how long these bottles had been open, but with 60 wines to choose from and a limited clientele now that things are slow, I had to wonder. Neither wine was particularly distinctive, lacking in the fruit and aromas described in tasting notes I found on each. I've tasted the Meiomi before and this glass did not have the floral notes or the berry flavors I remembered.

While the wine was cool, it wasn't chilled to the 49 to 55 degrees considered optimal for whites. The Gayda shiraz ($14) I ordered with my meal was barely below room temperature, although the flavors were fuller, as were those of the Honig sauvignon blanc ($12) my companion tried.

The menu has gone through some changes over the four years during which The Wine Loft has been open. The current chef, listed as Chris Baloga on the establishment's Facebook site, appears to be relatively new.

The current offerings include a half-dozen appetizers, clam chowder, salads, sliders, flatbreads and eight entrees. It's not a big selection, and there are no surprises on the menu, but it's plenty for a place in which wine is the primary concern.

The shrimp cocktail ($16) and a crab cake ($16) arrived on diminutive plates as befits appetizers. The former held five plump shrimp that were lightly seasoned and accompanied by a lemon wedge and what was billed as "spicy sauce," which appeared to be cocktail sauce that could have used more horseradish.

The crab cake was average, the crab chopped fine as opposed to the lumps described on the menu. There was but a wisp of mustard on the plate and if it was Creole grain mustard as the menu states, the grains were extremely fine. At $16, I wouldn't order this again.

From the slider menu, I tried the mini Kearneys ($15) — three Wagyu patties with roasted onions and peppers and voodoo sauce on a brioche bun with fries. The small burgers were topped with roasted onions and peppers with a very light application of a mildly spicy orange sauce on what was a standard mini-burger bun. The fries seemed hand cut but were neither crisp nor hot.

The Scottish salmon ($26) was properly roasted with a light citrus orange glaze accompanied by an apple and frisee mix on top of it. Had we not ordered a side of whipped potatoes ($6), that's all that would have been on the plate. And for $6, the mound of potatoes was small. It was also lukewarm.

We shared a house-made dessert the server described as hazelnut chocolate pie with an Oreo crust. The slice was huge, extremely sweet and topped with an overabundance of chocolate sauce.

The bill came to $152 (before gratuity), which isn't a fortune by Naples standards, but I've had far better meals and wine for the money. The kitchen needs to hone its execution and deliver hot, fresh food made with top-notch ingredients for that price. And the bar needs to up its game when it comes to wine service.

The Wine Loft is attractive, yes, but looks alone won't keep customers coming back. ■

Chocolate hazelnut pie with Oreo crust and chocolate sauce is ideal for those who like their last course super-sweet.

Kalea Bay's first tower nears sellout

Sales strong in Tower 2

Kalea Bay, the gated, resort-lifestyle, high-rise community located on Vanderbilt Drive in North Naples, announced the community's second tower has been released for sale.

"Our first tower, which is under construction and scheduled to be completed in November, is approaching the 90 percent sold mark," stated Inga Lodge, Vice President of Sales and Marketing for Kalea Bay. "The approaching sellout of Tower 1 and the overwhelming response from our buyers prompted us to release Tower 2. Currently, the number of residences already reserved in our second tower exceeds the $40 million mark."

The new 22-story tower, with 120 residences, will have 20 floors of residences over two floors of parking. The incredibly designed residences offer views of the Gulf of Mexico and pristine nature preserve.

Six floor plans are available in Tower 2. Residences 1 and 6 are 3-bedroom plus den/3.5 bath plans with 3,704 total square feet. Residences 2 and 5, with 4 bedrooms, 4.5 baths, have 3,791 total square feet. Residences 3 and 4 are 4-bedroom/4.5-bath plans also with 3,791 total square feet.

"Residents will revel in Gulf views, open floor plans, a private elevator leading directly into their residence and wood floors throughout," said Lodge.

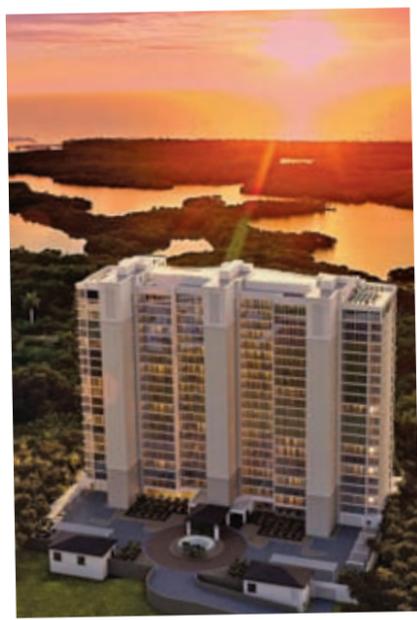

The custom kitchens have Wolf and SubZero appliances, a natural gas range, luxury cabinetry, quartz countertops, a Butler's pantry and oversized island, all of which are standard features.

"Our floor plans have an open design we call 'lifestyle designs' that blends the kitchen seamlessly into the living and dining rooms, perfect for the way people live today," said Lodge.

The master bedroom includes an oversized walk-in closet while the master bath has his and hers vanities, quartz countertops, luxury cabinetry, a soaking tub and separate glass-enclosed shower.

"All master suites, kitchens and main living areas have direct views to the water and preserve. They are perfect vantage points to watch our spectacular sunsets," Lodge said.

Additional residential features include floor-to-ceiling windows and doors that open to large lanais with transparent glass rails.

Above: All master bedrooms offer views of the Gulf of Mexico. Tower 2, which was released for sale at the start of the year, is 22 stories tall. Kalea Bay residences have very open floor plans. Kalea Bay's Tower 1 and Tower 2 were designed with rooftop amenities, including a sky lounge, spectacular pool and open-air fitness center. Kalea Bay's 88,000-square-foot clubhouse, with three pools, is slated to be completed in November.

"We take our outdoor living as seriously as our indoor living with oversized lanais on every residence," said Lodge. High-tech wiring and fully equipped laundry rooms round out the list of features, she noted.

Dramatic views are available to every homeowner, no matter which floor they live on as the tower's amenities are located on the rooftop including the sky lounge, a dramatic pool and the open-air fitness center.

From the rooftop, residents can enjoy daily views of the Gulf of Mexico, the nature preserves and two beaches ranked among the best in the United States.

Prices at Kalea Bay begin at $1.3 million in Tower 1 and $1.4 million in Tower 2.

In addition to the rooftop amenities, the residents of Kalea Bay will also enjoy the community's clubhouse area, which is also under construction and due to be completed when the first residents move into their new homes.

"The clubhouse area will be the social and recreational centerpiece of the community," said Lodge.

Kalea Bay's 88,000-square-foot clubhouse is located on the north side of the large lake at the community's entrance. It will feature three individual pools, including a resort pool, an adults-only pool and a children's pool, plus an expansive pool deck, a poolside bistro, open-air bar, an indoor/outdoor restaurant, a sundries shop, and a state-of-the-art fitness center.

"All three pools will overlook the lake and provide a multitude of recreational options for everyone who lives and visits here," said Lodge. "Expansive sun decks with lounge chairs and native, tropical plants will separate each of the three pools for the ultimate in privacy."

If basking in the sun or taking a refreshing dip in the pool isn't on a resident's schedule, perhaps meeting friends for lunch, dinner or drinks is.

"What better way to celebrate the good life in Florida than meeting family and friends for drinks while watching the sun set over the Gulf of Mexico," said Lodge. "This is what living in Florida is supposed to be."

Adjacent to the clubhouse is the tennis pavilion with Har-Tru tennis courts, as well as pickleball courts, and 24 guest suites to accommodate overnight guests and family members.

"Having that number of guest suites is unusual for a luxury high-rise community, but it's an amenity our residents are excited about especially when they have extended family visiting," said Lodge.

The Club at Kalea Bay will be in excellent hands when it opens. That's because Stephen G. Jones, CCM, was recently hired as the Club's General Manager.

Jones is a Certified General Manager, one of only 1,200 in the country. The Manchester, England native has worked in the cities of London and Atlanta, as well as on Grand Cayman Island in the Caribbean. More than 20 years ago he moved to Naples and has been associated with some of the finest Beach and Golf Clubs in the area.

For more information regarding Kalea Bay visit the onsite sales center. Due to bridge closings in the North Naples' area, take US 41 to Wiggins Pass Road, then right on Vanderbilt Drive, two-tenths of a mile. Additional information is available by calling (239) 793-0110 or online at KaleaBay.com. ■

Stock Development features stunning move-in ready homes across Southwest Florida!

The summer sales season is underway and homebuyers this weekend can tour dozens of Stock Development's move-in ready homes across 16 communities from Bradenton to Marco Island. No other builder has such a diverse array of residences in highly amenitized communities.

Stock is one of Southwest Florida's most successful and respected builders.

"Stock is having another terrific year in 2017," said Claudine Léger-Wetzel, Vice President of Sales & Marketing for Stock Development. "We have sold homes ranging from casitas in the $230s to custom estate homes priced at over $7 million. Overall, our average sale price topped $1 million for the first time."

One of the keys to Stock's success has been its aggressive inventory and custom homes program. The company maintains an unparalleled portfolio of homes available for immediate occupancy.

"Stock has a home for every lifestyle at incredible prices," said Léger-Wetzel. "This weekend guests may tour coach homes and twin villas priced from the $300s to single-family homes and custom built estate homes priced at nearly $4 million!"

Stock has move-in ready and soon to be complete homes available in The City of Naples, Bonita Bay, Quail West, Lely Resort, Naples Reserve, The Isles at Collier Preserve, Esplanade Golf & Country Club of Naples, Twin Eagles, Renaissance, Hidden Harbor, Paseo, The Concession, The Lake Club, Esplanade at Lakewood Ranch and Country Club East.

Stock's furnished Stella model in Quail West's Cortland neighborhood is available for immediate occupancy. The 4,238 square foot Stella model includes a formal living room with a fireplace, a formal dining room, wet bar, a double-island kitchen, breakfast nook, and family room, a study, four bedrooms, four-and-a-half baths, and a three-car garage. It features a classic interior design by Soco Interiors' Kassie Parisoe that showcases dark espresso finishes contrasted by light fabrics.

Lakoya at Lely Resort is a meticulously planned 242-acre enclave with sculptured landscaping, classical gardens, spectacularly choreographed fountains and elegant paved walking paths.

It is surrounded by subtropical woodlands and The Classics 18-hole championship course, which features gentle undulations and tree-lined fairways. An elaborate series of lakes has been crafted throughout the neighborhood, giving the homes a spectacular array of water, golf course and nature preserve views.

From the Topaz Series, The San Remo III is a single-story great room style home features two bedrooms, two baths, plus a study, and a spacious master suite. The San Remo III offers homebuyers 1,809 square feet of living area in an open and breezy floor plan with plenty of space to enjoy a casual Florida lifestyle.

The great room opens to a very generous lanai and large pool and spa. The grand two-story foyer is adjacent to the study, which is the perfect place for the home office and quiet reading.

The guest bedroom sits off to the side and offers privacy to family and friends, while the spacious master suite features his and her walk in closets and a luxurious bath with both a shower and a soaking tub.

Above: The Stella model, Stock builds at Naples Reserve, the San Remo III, TwinEagles. Right: The Players Club & Spa.

The master suite also features plenty of natural light and direct access to the outdoor living area. This move-in ready home is available for $641,485.

At Twin Eagles, Stock is selling single-family homes in the Hedgestone neighborhood of this stunning North Naples country club community. A Golf Membership is included in the cost of every new home.

Offering 3,375 square feet under air, the Muirfield V features a massive living room, a formal dining room, an island kitchen, four bedrooms, four-and-a-half baths, a study, an outdoor living area with a summer kitchen, pool and spa, and a three-car garage. It is priced at $1,334,185.

Naples Reserve is a 688-acre gated community midway between Naples and Marco Island along the U.S. 41 Tamiami Trail/Collier Boulevard. Naples Reserve presents a relaxed, water themed lifestyle. Stock is building in the Parrot Cay and Sparrow Cay neighborhoods, offering homes from 2,300 to over 3,500 square feet.

The Biscayne is available in Sparrow Cay. This three-bedroom/two-bath home features 2,384 square feet under air and 3,806 total square feet, including the covered entry, attached three-car garage and spacious outdoor living area.

The open floorplan offers a great room design and includes a formal dining room, as well as a study. The large island-style kitchen has a breakfast nook with bay windows overlooking the pool. It is adjacent to the great room, which is bathed in natural light from stacked sliding glass doors leading directly to the covered outdoor living area where there is a second kitchen. The Biscayne is a furnished model available on lease-back and is priced at $906,330.

Everyone invited to enjoy Tuesday & Saturday music nights at Babcock Ranch

Babcock Ranch, the solar powered town being built by Kitson & Partners in Charlotte County off Florida State Road 31 just north of the Lee County Civic Center, is inviting the public to enjoy twice a week free live music performances at the band shell at Founder's Square, the 13-acre lakefront green in the heart of the new town's downtown district. Everyone is welcome! Tuesday Night Live every Tuesday from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. and the Saturday Concert Series every Saturday from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. offer a pleasing mix of performers and musical styles in a setting that is ideal for family members and friends to enjoy time together. In addition to the band shell, Founder's Square features a boardwalk on the banks of Lake Babcock, a children's splash pad, picnic tables, and shady areas for relaxing. Menu and beverage specials will be available at the lakefront Table & Tap restaurant on the western edge of Founder's Square. With its indoor and outdoor dining, beer garden, relaxed outdoor conversation areas set around fire pits, craft beers, a farm to table menu by Chef David Rashty, and friendly service, Table & Tap has become a preferred destination. A towering 80-year old oak tree transplanted from the Babcock property provides a backdrop for the restaurant's beer garden.

This Saturday, June 3, the Mystic River band that dazzled visitors to Babcock's Founder's Festival with their unique brand of Texas red dirt country and has continued to be a music fan favorite will take the stage at the Founder's Square band shell. Next Tuesday, June 6, soloist Harry Havery will enliven the evening with acoustic renditions of classic hits, rock, and country selections. On Saturday, June 10, the exciting Kindred Spirit duo will present a collection of blue grass and Americana favorites. On Tuesday the 13th and Saturday the 17th the Cody Daniels duo will play fun multi-genre sets featuring tunes from the 1960's to present. Soloist Steve Farst will showcase his extensive repertoire of multi-genre selections on Tuesday, June 20. Mystic River will be back for an encore performance on Saturday, June 24th and Cody Daniels will round out June's performance schedule on Tuesday the 27th. Tuesday Night Live and Saturday Concert Series visitors are encouraged to bring their own lawn chairs or blankets. Visit babcockranch.com for performance updates.

Babcock Ranch's Discovery Center, the Table & Tap Restaurant, and Curry Creek Outfitters are open seven days a week. LIFE WASN'T MEANT TO BE EXPERIENCED THROUGH YOUR DRIVER'S SIDE WINDOW.

Life is better when you get out of the car and walk. Or bike. Or kayak. So we designed not just a town, but an entirely new kind of town. One that enables you to do just that. Walk to school and to work. Bike to the store or to wilderness. Engage with your neighbors, your environment and yourself. Enjoy luxurious amenities at an unluxurious price. You've always known a better life was out there. Now you know exactly where to find it.

The Ronto Group announced sales continue to surge at the 26-floor, 120-unit Seaglass high-rise tower being built by Ronto within Bonita Bay. Sales contracts worth more than $125 million have been processed. The building is more than 60% sold. Concrete for the 20th floor has been poured and a new floor is being poured every two weeks.
