Once a year, Component personnel has to go through ICCS training. New is that now Force Command personnel also has to take part in this special training.

Force Command personnel gets ICCS training

By A1C Daniel Houben

The first ICCS Training at the E-3A Component for Force Command personnel took place on 14 January, from 0800 until 1700. ICCS is the abbreviation for 'Individual Common Core Skills'. Every Component member has to do the ICCS Training once a year to build up his or her skills in first aid, fire fighting, NBC and EOD. Military personnel also have to do shooting practice.

The day for the twenty soldiers of different nations from Force Command started with indoor training at the shooting range with the Heckler &

Koch P7, firing at four targets from a distance of twenty meters. They shot in various positions: lying, standing, kneeling, and also lying on the floor while wearing the NBC mask. The difficulty of this is the aiming, due to the mask.

Next the group had a theoretical introduction to NBC protection, and practical training in wearing the NBC suit, including the mask, as well as the basic knowledge about how to protect yourself against NBC and Air attacks, what to do in case of an attack, and how to decontaminate other people.

The afternoon training program was partly outside and just after lunch it started to rain, but of course the motivation of the participants was quite good. First Aid training started at 1300 with theoretical training. Then the basic skills were trained on a simulator. The instructors were impressed by how quickly the participants were able to use their skills in practice.

The last and funniest part was the EOD and Fire Fighting training. Everyone learned how to fight a fire and how to help a burning person - please note that this was only simulated with a puppet. Special thanks to the instructors who did a great job by teaching their skills.

Afghan President speaks on ISAF, appreciation

By Capt. Virgil Magee, SHAPE/PIO

SHAPE, Belgium - Afghan President Hamid Karzai recently spoke with International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) personnel Jan 8, to discuss his country's future and the role of ISAF.

During the session Karzai praised the efforts of NATO, ISAF and coalition nations for contributing to Afghanistan's continued push toward democracy and freedom.

"ISAF has a very important role that it is accomplishing very well. It is the provisional security to the citizens of this country, mainly in Kabul, and in other parts of the country. During our elections ISAF provided protections for voters," said Karzai. "I am sure that same security will be provided for the parliamentary elections."

Mandated under chapter VII of the United Nations charter, ISAF was established in accordance with the Bonn Agreement of December 6, 2001. The primary role of ISAF is to assist the Afghan Transitional Authority in providing a safe and secure environment in and around Kabul, Afghanistan.

"We are grateful and tremendously thankful [for ISAF]. It is because of your effort that we are where we are today. It is because of the blood that some soldiers shed that this country is more stable and that we have democracy," said Karzai. "Our people vote now, but it has not come without a cost. This is something we will remember forever in this country. Afghan citizens are once again the owners of Afghanistan and we know how important that is and we are grateful."

In carrying out this mission, ISAF conducts patrols throughout the 16 different police districts in Kabul and its surrounding areas. Over a third of these patrols are carried out jointly with the Kabul City Police.

On a political level ISAF works closely with the Afghan authorities, the United Nations Assistance Mission to Afghanistan, non-governmental organizations and other agencies.

Name changes as Iraq mission grows

NATO's training mission in Iraq will soon be growing in size after the Supreme Allied Commander Europe, General James L Jones, was authorised to start the next stage of its expansion. The issue of the Activation Order on 16 December, changes the mission's name from NATO Training Implementation Mission to NATO Training Mission-Iraq. The Activation Order follows the directive from the North Atlantic Council that came as NATO's Foreign Ministers met in Brussels on 9 December 2004.

The current expansion of what will be known as the Iraq Training Mission, Iraq (NTM-I) will see up to 300 personnel deployed in Iraq, including trainers and support staff, and will mean a significant increase in the existing training and advice given to mid and senior level personnel from the Iraqi security forces. Currently about 60 NATO staff are working in Iraq. Over the coming weeks new staff will be trained and prepared.

The next stage of expansion, which would lead to a further increase in personnel, will be NATO help in establishing an Iraqi Training Education and Doctrine Centre (TEDC), to provide leadership and management training for the middle and senior level of the Iraqi forces.

Speaking at the Foreign Ministers meeting SACEUR said he was finalising the details of some of the offers, but that the outcome had been very positive, "It means we are really on track to execute training inside Iraq, outside Iraq, and to co-ordinate military equipment supplies for Iraq." (Information from SHAPE news release)

Progress on weapons cantonment in Afghanistan

A programme to collect artillery, tanks and other heavy weapons from armed factions in Afghanistan has now commenced in the Panjsher Valley, in the northeastern part of the country.

Under the nationwide programme, known as Heavy Weapons Cantonment (HWC), arms belonging to armed factions throughout Afghanistan are collected and stored at special government-run cantonment sites.

"This [the start of the programme in the Panjsher Valley] is an important step forward in this programme that seeks to reach the common goal of building an increasingly secure Afghanistan," said Lt Cdr Ken Mackillop, Spokesman for the NATO-led International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Afghanistan, at a press briefing in Kabul on 12 January.

Locking up weapons of war

Once deposited, the weapons cannot be removed from the cantonment sites without the permission of both the Ministry of Defence and ISAF. The programme therefore contributes directly to establishing a safe and secure environment in Afghanistan.

Throughout the country, the process is now 82% complete and some 7,360 operational and repairable heavy weapons are under lock and key in guarded compounds.

The programme is an initiative of the Afghanistan Ministry of Defence. ISAF endorses, supports and facilitates the cantonment of the weapons, including providing logistic support for the collection and transport of the weapons.

New facilities for NATO School in Oberammergau

The NATO School in Oberammergau now has new facilities that will double the student capacity of the school and give students access to cutting-edge educational tools.

The new facilities were given their first test during the 2005 NATO Defence Planning Symposium. The event, held at the school from 17 to 19 January, was attended by 27 high level speakers, with a keynote address by the NATO Secretary General, Jaap De Hoop Scheffer.

New facilities for future requirements

The enlargement of the school includes two large classrooms, several small class and syndicate rooms, multimedia tools and space for additional faculty and support staff.

These new capabilities will include the latest information technology available to support education and the ability to conduct distributed Computer Assisted Exercises (CAX) from the school.

This project will allow NATO and partner countries to keep up with future demands for interoperability training among personnel and to further standardize education.

It will also enable the school to further significantly expand its capacity from the current 8,000 students annually. The new facility will officially be opened on June 24th, 2005, when the central conference hall will be named "Manfred Woerner Hall", in memory of NATO's former Secretary General.

Carnival

By A1C Daniel Houben

For many people Carnival is the fifth season of the year. At this time everything is different from normal. Everybody wears a costume and plays a role they are not familiar with, perhaps as a cowboy, pirate, Spiderman, bear, or something else.

The fifth season of the year traditionally opens 11 minutes after 1100 of the 11th day of the 11th month, but the really crazy time with big parades, costume balls, lots of drinking, singing and simply 'letting loose' starts on 'Altweiberfastnacht' every year. That day always comes on a Thursday: this year it is on 3 February, with a big party in the Frisbee Club from 1400 till 2400. The crazy time is over on the following Wednesday 'Aschermittwoch' (Ash Wednesday).

The tradition of 'Altweiberfastnacht' goes back to the 14th Century when the women started to have their own parties and gained control over the men by storming the town hall and winning the power over the city for a few days. Today everybody is reminded of this old tradition when the women snip the ties of every man they see. So every man makes sure that he is wearing an old tie!

Some say that tradition of Carnival even goes back to 4th Century where it was a significant festival of the ancient world and was intended to remind people of the time of Saturn's rule in which there were no slaves. During that festival nobody was allowed to do anything serious. The work in the whole town came to a standstill and schools were closed. Everyone made noise, drank, sang, danced, played and joked. Men and women, free citizens and slaves exchanged their clothes. The free citizens entertained the slaves during those days and did the work the slaves would normally do. That's the reason for wearing costumes today.

Get your costume out of the closet and experience the carnival fever.

But today Carnival is not only costumes and snipping ties; it's a big business with really big festivals and organizations with huge numbers of people in Germany, the Netherlands and Belgium. Nearly everybody goes to parties and parades throughout the weekend, from Thursday till Tuesday, to sing, drink and have a lot of fun in this crazy time. In the evening there are always big events in large tents in different cities, with live acts, dancing groups and crazy actors who make the visitors laugh.

In the mornings and afternoons there are normally the big carnival parades with self-made carnival floats decorated to match the slogan the organizing group has chosen. There are really funny vehicles like submarines, Snoopy, polar bears, etc...and of course the members of that carnival group are costumed in the same way. Especially for the children it's a big event, because the members of the many carnival groups in their big carnival vehicles with loud music and funny dancing throw sweets, popcorn, chocolate, or even CDs and many other things to the children and people along the streets to make them happy.

Every year millions of people watch these spectacles live or on TV. There are parades in every big city, such as the one in Cologne, the hometown of carnival where 'Die Jecken' (Crazy People) from all over Germany come to see the parade on 'Altweiberfastnacht' and celebrate Carnival.

We hope that every Component member will have a crazy Carnival time with a lot of fun.
