No one could have predicted back in 1925, when the Philadelphia A's started spring training in Fort Myers, that five franchises would win the World Series while training there.

BY GLENN MILLER • FLORIDA WEEKLY CORRESPONDENT

SPRING TRAINING IS ALWAYS about more than balls and strikes, doubles and double plays and fans sitting in the sun, a hot dog in one hand and cold beverage in the other.

Always has been. That's why five Philadelphia sportswriters arriving in Fort Myers was a big deal in 1925. It was money. Or at least the possibility of it.

Komen race puts faces behind funds raised for breast-cancer fight

BY LAURA TICHY-SMITH
Florida Weekly Correspondent

Triathlete Bobbi Gonzalez runs in a number of charity races every year, but the annual Susan G. Komen Southwest Florida 5K Race for the Cure stands out as one of her favorites.

"It's a lot more inspirational than other runs I've been to," she said. "You see a lot of breast cancer survivors, and they share their stories. It's not often you get to see the face of the charity when you're at a run."

The Florida Gulf Coast University student said she first participated in the event as a volunteer to earn service-learning credit while in high school, but now she runs in the race to train for the two triathlons she does annually.

"I did sports in high school but not in college, so it's a way to stay active, and it's for a good cause," Ms. Gonzalez said.

It is also a local cause, said Sarah Layton, development director for the Southwest

COMMENTARY

Pain relief, and then some

I learned what I am about to tell you from a report in the New York Daily News, of all places — that's the one I used to see with The New York Post blowing across windswept Broadway or Amsterdam Avenue, or clutched in the paws of some bleary-eyed subway rider taking the fast train uptown to the Bronx after cleaning toilets on Wall Street all day.

That's the one that just this week headlined with the story of Bode Miller, the Olympic skier, breaking into tears when asked about his dead brother by a female reporter in Sochi.

The online edition also featured important stories about a female teacher having sex with her students; the deaths of a mother and four kids in a burning SUV witnessed by the father; a transgender Italian politician arrested in Sochi for carrying a gay rights flag; a 22-year-old male student found beaten to death in New Jersey; arrests at a Nigerian restaurant where cops discovered human meat on the menu; a woman jailed for not returning a movie video to a now-shuttered store nine years earlier; an angry guy who shot a 15-year-old girl because she egged his car; a 21-year-old Christian studies student who shot his girlfriend and then tried to make it look like suicide; a declaration by Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia that Chicago deep-dish pizza is not really pizza, so it shouldn't be called that; and finally this one, way down the line:

"Florida woman faked rape story after skipping work: authorities."

Sure enough, the Boca Raton woman didn't want to go to work at her great uncle's house, according to the story, so she told cops that when she pulled over in broad daylight to change a flat tire, a white guy offered to help, then raped her. Investigators were suspicious right off the bat but it wasn't until her old man phoned the Palm Beach County Sheriff's Office and ratted her out that she was arrested.

Thank God she didn't claim it was a black guy. That's happened before in the Sunshine State with very bad results for black guys.

I know it's easy to mock this kind of reporting, but consider for a moment that it isn't really journalism — not in a full sense. It's anesthesiology on the cheap. And you don't even have to sign up for Obamacare.

For decades, the venerably tawdry New York Daily News and its ilk have provided regular injections of pain-relief medicine at very little cost to hard-working, long-suffering men and women stuck on subways or in walk-up apartments where eau de diaper is the chief cologne, and the odor of cumin and greasy meat in the curry being cooked on the second floor takes about 10 minutes to reach the seventh floor and create a gaseous condition that probably violates the Geneva Convention's rules against biological warfare.

They open a New York Daily News, they read this, and suddenly they look around and think, "Hey, this isn't so bad. I don't have to claim I got raped if I don't want to go to work, hell no. I'll just claim my grandmother, my dog, my parents and everybody on my block died of cancer, so I had to go to a funeral."

In other words, the parade of these stories provides not just news, but a measure of numbing comfort and macabre comedy. Human burgers in a Nigerian restaurant — for real? Man, maybe that greasy take-out thing from the Chinese-Mexican diner on Second Avenue wasn't so bad after all.

What struck me in the story about the Boca Raton woman, though, was this line: "The Florida Highway Patrol reviewed turnpike video and couldn't find images (of) Westover's vehicle anywhere on the recordings."

Oh really? And did authorities check the red light cameras that seem to litter the intersections of so many Florida counties now, as well?

We've known for some time that remote policing-by-camera is effective — at the very least in significantly boosting revenues for various causes and agencies, and for doing it without the need to employ trained human beings versed not only in apprehension, but in the Fourth Amendment, which prohibits search and seizure without reasonable cause, and without a judge's permission.

What troubles me is not so much the cameras themselves, but how they're employed, where the revenues really go, and what will happen when the technology becomes much more sophisticated.

Soon, for example, policing could be done commonly and county-wide by drone, and maybe not just any drone. Maybe by drones so sophisticated that their cameras can see everything we do in or out of buildings. Maybe drones so capable that they can perform arrests and apprehensions, complete with automated Miranda warnings (unless, of course, Justice Scalia and a few of his colleagues decide that not only is Chicago-style pizza not pizza, but Miranda is just plain unnecessary).

For that matter, I see no reason why we couldn't invent drones that not only monitor and enforce, but also serve as judge, jury and "executioner" right on the spot, doing away with this expensive and needless jury system that relies on 12 good people.

Think of our roads in terms of the Internet. We get up in the morning, we get dressed and we go out onto the electronic highway or the asphalt highway. In either case, law enforcement agencies have a right to monitor some of that, don't they?

Of course they do. But they do not have a right to watch our every move, monitor our personal adventures or to violate our right to privacy on behalf of "safety," do they?

No, which is why Edward Snowden has struck so deep a nerve in the American temperament with his revelations about spying on Americans by the National Security Agency, in violation of Constitutional prohibitions against it.

Too easily, "safety" can become synonymous merely with "revenue."

And that's no way to obtain pain relief. ■

nia in the Hal Prince revival of "Showboat." For the Naples parade fundraiser, the two will perform classics from the Emerald Isle, inspirational favorites and showstoppers from the Broadway stage, including the "Fields of Athenry," "Danny Boy," "Music of the Night" and "All I Ask of You."

The Dublin-born Mr. Sheehan played the Phantom on Broadway for 2½ years; Ms. Pfisterer appeared as Christine in "Phantom" for more than 1,000 performances on Broadway and also played Mag-

The evening will also feature Naples' award-winning Irish step dancers Claire and Catherine Gorman, owners of the Celtic Spirit School of Irish Dance.

Public television viewers might remember Mr. Sheehan for shows including "Ciaran and Friends," "From Galway to Broadway" and "The Irish and How They Got That Way." He studied with Broadway director Bobby Lewis and also performed with the Irish Repertory Theatre in New York City.

Tickets for the Naples concert are $30 and $40 and are available by calling 227-5350 or by visiting www.naplesparade.com/events. Tickets are also available for purchase at Erin's Isle restaurant in Naples, Gorman's Auto in Marco Island, and at St. Elizabeth Seton Hall in Golden Gate.

Organized and funded every year by the Naples St. Patrick Day Foundation, the Naples St. Patrick's Day Parade steps out at 11 a.m. Saturday, March 15, and is expected to draw more than 40,000 spectators to downtown.

The first parade fundraiser this year is the parade kickoff and silent auction beginning at 6 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23, at Paddy Murphy's, 457 Fifth Ave. S.

The 10th annual pub crawl to raise parade funds begins at 6 p.m. Friday, March 7, at Mulligan's Sports Grille, 2041 Tamiami Trail N., and continues to Bokampers, Paddy Murphy's and Jack's River Bar. Tickets for $38 include parking and round-trip trolley transportation to the participating pubs, with bagpipers on the trolleys and at the bars. ## OPINION

The party of less work

richLOWRY

Special to Florida Weekly

The Democrats once styled themselves the party of workers. Now, they are the party of people who would have been workers, if it hadn't been for Obamacare.

The Congressional Budget Office released a new analysis of the economic effects of the health-care law that estimates that it will reduce the number of workers, in effect, by 2.5 million in 2024.

This unleashed a torrent of arguments from the Democrats implicitly denigrating the value of work. Perhaps not since Southern "fire-eaters" attacked Northern "wage slavery" in the mid-19th century has a good honest day's work been talked about so dismissively.

The old jobs crisis was people not having jobs; the new jobs crisis is people having to work. The party devoted to combating inequality is now blithely unconcerned about a law discouraging people — especially people down the income scale — from earning more. So much for its championing of economic mobility.

A few caveats are in order: We aren't talking about jobs that are eliminated in the usual sense of discouraging employers from hiring, as some Republican talking points suggested. And the 2.5 million number isn't for jobs per se, but for "full-time equivalent" positions, i.e., the cumulative lost hours of millions of people deciding to work less.

Nonetheless, the number is devastating. Democrats want to pass it all off as ending the "job lock" that keeps people in a job only to preserve their health insurance. There is a little something to this, but it isn't the main problem. Obamacare has created a vast apparatus of subsidies, penalties and taxes that is effectively anti-work.

The CBO explains that Obamacare's subsidies, by giving people more resources, allow "some people to maintain the same standard of living while working less." And the way they phase out creates another disincentive, as "subsidies decline with rising income (and increase as income falls), thus making work less attractive." The penalties and taxes, meanwhile, "will ultimately induce some workers to supply less labor."

Democrats consider all this and pronounce themselves well-pleased. Rep. Mark Pocan, D-Wis., sees only upside in people working less: "What that means is instead they might be able to tuck their child in bed at night and read a bedtime story, or go to an activity, which means they're better off."

White House economic adviser Jason Furman made an inapt comparison. "Getting rid of Social Security and Medicare would cause more 95-year-olds to work," he said. "You wouldn't judge whether Social Security or Medicare are good or bad based on what they do to labor supply."

No, you wouldn't — because they are programs for the elderly. Discouraging work among 95-year-olds is different than discouraging work among people in the prime of their lives. No one told us when the bill was being considered that Obamacare would have some of the same effects as a retirement program.

The latest CBO numbers are part of the growing list of facts about Obamacare that, if they had been widely acknowledged before its passage, would have doomed it in Congress. But that debate seems so long ago. It was back when both political parties professed to be pro-work. ■

African-Americans and the vanishing right to vote

amyGOODMAN

Special to Florida Weekly

"I found myself standing in front of railroad tracks in South Florida. I was waiting on the train to come so I could jump in front of it and end my life." So recounted Desmond Meade, describing his life nine years ago. He was homeless, unemployed, recently released from prison and addicted to drugs and alcohol. The train never came. He crossed the tracks and checked himself into a substance-abuse program. He went on to college, and now is just months away from receiving his law degree.

Meade, however, will not be able to practice law in Florida. As a former felon, he cannot join the bar. That is one of his rights that has been stripped, permanently, by Florida's draconian laws. In a democracy, if one wants to change a law, you vote for lawmakers who will represent your views. Yet, as an ex-felon in Florida, Meade also has lost the right to vote for the rest of his life.

It's called "felony disenfranchisement," and is permanent in 11 states: Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Iowa, Kentucky, Mississippi, Nebraska, Nevada, Tennessee, Virginia and Wyoming. It's enforced in differing degrees, like a patchwork, across the U.S. In 13 states and the District of Columbia, you get your rights back upon release from prison. In others, you have to get through your probation or parole. In Maine and Vermont, prisoners retain the right to vote, even while incarcerated.

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder addressed the issue this week at a legal symposium at Georgetown University:

"Across this country today, an estimated 5.8 million Americans — 5.8 million of our fellow citizens — are prohibited from voting because of current or previous felony convictions. That's more than the individual populations of 31 U.S. states." Close to 6 million Americans, denied the basic right to vote. Because of the racial disparities in our penal system, African-American and Latino men are vastly disproportionately denied the right to vote. Holder continued, "The current scope of these policies is not only too significant to ignore — it is also too unjust to tolerate."

The Georgetown event was co-sponsored by The Leadership Conference, a coalition of civil-rights, legal and human-rights groups. Last September, the group released a report titled "Democracy Imprisoned." In it, the group writes, "Florida's disenfranchisement rate remains the highest and most racially disparate in the United States." It is no coincidence that this key swing state is home to more than 1 million of the nation's nearly 6 million disenfranchised.

Former Florida Gov. Charlie Crist eased the laws, making the application for the reinstatement of rights automatic. But in 2011, his successor, Republican Gov. Rick Scott, imposed a waiting period of at least five years for anyone to apply to the clemency board. Meade told us on the "Democracy Now!" news hour: "Even after applying, the processing time for the application takes upwards of six years. So, in reality, an individual will have to wait anywhere between 11 to 13 years just to see if they have a chance, a shot, at getting their rights restored." Crist has switched parties to run for governor as a Democrat against Scott.

Law professor Michelle Alexander opens her groundbreaking book, "The New Jim Crow: Mass Incarceration in the Age of Colorblindness," with the story of Jarvis Cotton: "Cotton's great-great-grandfather could not vote as a slave. His great-grandfather was beaten to death by the Ku Klux Klan for attempting to vote. ... His father was barred from voting by poll taxes and literacy tests. Today, Jarvis Cotton cannot vote because he, like many black men in the United States, has been labeled a felon and is currently on parole."

At a national level, bills are being proposed that would guarantee voting rights for ex-felons, with both Democrat and Republican support. After Holder, Republican Sen. Rand Paul of Kentucky spoke at Georgetown, advocating for full voting rights. But it is still an issue over which states exert enormous control.

Desmond Meade is not sitting around waiting for his rights to be handed back to him. He is organizing. He currently serves as the president of the Florida Rights Restoration Coalition, with close to 70 groups pushing for reforms of the state's disenfranchisement laws:

"It's about humanity. It's an all-American issue. It's not about Democrat or Republican. It's about the common decency of letting an individual or helping an individual to reintegrate back into their community so they can become productive citizens and enjoy life."

We can all be thankful that the train he was waiting for that fateful day never came. ■

What's that? Say again? Quiet, please!

Have you noticed lately how loud our environment has become? No, it's not just that we're getting older. Findings issued by the National Institute of Health and other credible research organizations indicate that we are living with as much as twice the decibel levels of 20 years ago.

Increased heart rate, irritability, sleep deprivation and hearing loss notwithstanding (and all of these are significant and rising), I have often wondered what all this noise is doing to our psyches and to our ability to hear ourselves think.

It's that deeper ability to listen to ourselves that intrigued me about a friend's effort to get away from it all.

Every year, he attends a three-day silent retreat.

That's right.

No one is allowed to speak except for the retreat master, who guides participants through several 45-minute talks each day — with hours of utter silence for reflection in between. The lectures are designed to invoke deep, personal introspection, the premise being that we have lost touch with who we are, and that the only way to regain/replenish that sense of true self is to listen to our inner selves in complete quiet and contemplation, free from external distractions.

This is not a new process. Early Christians went off alone as Christ did to the desert.

In 16th century Ireland, men would go on "a long walk," a description still in use today, although it is largely figurative.

Aussies still rely on the refreshed thinking that results from a "walk-about."

And we Americans celebrate "getting away from it all," which for most of us just means getting away from our own routine and into a routine equally wrought with distraction (e.g., a cruise "vacation").

A three-day silent retreat might be a stretch for many of us, but everyone can and should create mini-retreats within the day.

Begin by acknowledging the noise around you. Right now. As you read this. Listen.

It's everywhere: leaf blowers, rumbling trucks, cell phones ringing, pool pumps, A/C units, mood music, ear-piercing DJs at weddings and special events and the loud drone of nearly every public building we enter.

It's enough to make us want to scream, "Quiet!"

Then there's intentional noise. Noise to make us shop more, eat more, ignore one another more, noise for entertainment, for background, for filling the gap. Noise just for the sake of noise.

Once you hear it, you'll realize that it's not easy to get away from. But don't settle for simply tuning out the noise. That won't do anything to help you hear yourself think.

Instead, find the quietest place you can. Here in Naples, that would be the beach. Leave the book at home. Walk the shoreline and find a place to sit away from everyone else so you can dream into the water.

In your office, shut your door, turn off your phone, listen to your breathing and let the stress drain from you.

When I can't sleep, I like to imagine myself early in the morning sitting on a dock watching the sunrise over a beautiful, mirror lake. Of course, that's just my image of peace and quiet. Use your imagination (something most of us have completely forgotten we have). Remember what our mothers used to say: Entertain yourself.

With practice, you'll find yourself thinking more clearly, falling to sleep more quickly and sleeping more soundly, and enjoying life more fully. But be patient with yourself. It might take a couple of weeks to go from tossing and turning to falling asleep like a baby.

Of course, all of this assumes a relatively quiet environment — which brings us back to the subject of noise in the first place and what to do about it.

Sadly, until our society takes this subject seriously, all we can do is seek our own quiet places and protect them as best we can. Still, a movement is afoot. Google "the value of Silence" and 102 million results will pop up. Take your pick, cozy up in a quiet corner and rediscover the person you've been missing within you. ■

The potential of paydays is the reason Lee County built $80 million Jet-Blue Park and also is spending $48 million for renovations at the Lee County Sports Complex.

It follows a tradition as old as baseball's green grass. That's green as in money.

That's why city and county officials have spoken in recent years with the Washington Nationals about moving into City of Palms Park.

That was why local officials set aside $80,000 to build a new grandstand at Terry Park to bring the Pittsburgh Pirates here in 1955.

Even 30 years before that, at the dawn of Lee County baseball history, the hope of economic benefit was the impetus for bringing baseball teams to town.

Straight A's and crybabies

When the train carrying the Philadelphia A's, the area's first big-league team, arrived Feb. 22, 1925, the Fort Myers Press reported that five sportswriters were aboard. Why report that? Because those big-city boys from big-time newspapers would put Fort Myers datelines on their stories and write about how warm and sunny it is in this small city on Florida's west coast.

Their stories from sun-splashed Fort Myers in February and March would be read by folks far north, people dealing with snow, sleet and ice. People, it was hoped, who would be tempted to visit and move here and maybe even start businesses in Fort Myers.

A Fort Myers pharmacist and businessman named R.Q. Richards, the president of the Kiwanis Club, certainly knew that. The savvy and community-minded Mr. Richards traveled to Philadelphia to help sell Fort Myers to the A's, specifically to owner and manager Connie Mack. His sales pitch and the warm weather helped convince Mr. Mack to bring the A's to this remote place, back when Lee County's population was around 7,000.

In 1984, almost 60 years later, Mr. Richards wrote a one-page summary of the history of spring training in Fort Myers. That page is tucked away in the Southwest Florida Museum of History.

Mr. Richards wrote of those five sportswriters and the stories they would send north with these words: "This was advertising which could not be purchased for any amount of money."

Nobody in 1925 knew that by the 21st century, Fort Myers could boast that it has had more franchises train in its ballparks and win World Series than any other city in Florida or Arizona.

It started with the A's and set in motion an uncanny pattern in which teams move to Fort Myers and improve dramatically.

The A's finished sixth, seventh or eighth in each of the previous 10 years before moving to Terry Park. In seven of those seasons, they were last in what was then an eight-team league. In five of those seasons, they lost 100 or more games, including a particularly ugly 36-117 record in 1916.

But the Fort Myers move paid off immediately. The A's were 88-64 their first season training here and finished second, their best season since 1914.

They were on their way. The A's won American League pennants in 1929, 1930 and 1931, winning the World Series as well those first two years.

Jimmie Foxx of the Philadelphia A's

This was a fabled team, one strong enough to beat the mighty Yankees of that era and their mythic figures, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig. How extraordinary were the A's of 1929 to 1931? On average, the Ruth/Gehrig Yankees finished 15.8 games behind them in the American League standings those seasons.

The A's at that time were bursting with future Hall of Famers. Pitcher Lefty Grove, one of the best ever, was a combined 79-15 those three pennant-winning seasons and led the league in earned-run average and strikeouts each season.

Slugger Jimmie Foxx was one of the great power hitters of all time, and in 1930 hit .335 with 37 homers and 156 RBI.

In one 1927 game at Terry Park, eight future Hall of Famers played. In 1934, one of the greatest female athletes ever, Babe Didrikson, suited up and played one inning for the A's against the Brooklyn Dodgers. She pitched one inning, walking two and then getting the third batter to line into a triple play.

The A's left Fort Myers after 1936, but the Cleveland Indians came for 1940 and 1941 spring training.

The Fort Myers magic held for the Indians, who finished third in 1939, but in 1940, they rallied to second place, finishing only one game behind the Detroit Tigers. Hall of Fame pitcher Bob Feller was 27-11 that year.

Those Indians may be best remembered, if remembered at all, as the Cleveland Crybabies. They acquired the nickname because of a public spat with crusty manager Ossie Vitt.

That led to another nickname for them — the Half Vitts. They were also called a Bawl Team.

Mr. Vitt was an old-school manager in those days. When he groused about modern players loafing, he harkened back to his days in the majors, before 1920.

Of his players, he said, "If the boys don't hustle, out they go."

After 1941, it was out of Fort Myers for the Indians.

Pirates and Royals

It wasn't until 1955 that the Pittsburgh Pirates, apparently bewitched by the prospect of an $80,000 palace of a ballpark, left another Fort for this Fort. They left Fort Pierce for Fort Myers.

They were a bad team, one of the worst in baseball, but the move paid off for them as it had paid off for the A's and Indians.

The Pirates showed up in 1955, during Dwight Eisenhower's first term, coming off three successive 100-loss seasons, including an epic 112 losses in 1952.

Their first game at Terry Park featured a matchup of 1954 last-place teams. The A's, who finished last the previous season, returned to their old spring home. The Pirates beat them 9-8. Connie Mack threw out the ceremonial first ball.

A spring-training season ticket then cost $15, less than the price of a reserved seat for one game today.

Like the A's and Indians before them, the move to Fort Myers marked an end to futility for the Pirates. No more 100-loss seasons. By 1958, they were second in the National League, and in 1960, they won the pennant then beat the Yankees in a seven-game World Series.

The Pirates won Game 7 on a walk-off homer by second baseman Bill Mazeroski in Forbes Field, the team's Pittsburgh ballpark.

The best player on those Pirates teams was right fielder Roberto Clemente, one of the greatest players ever.

The Pirates left after 1968 spring training and moved to Bradenton, where they remain. They were replaced by a team that didn't exist in 1968 — the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals were a 1969 expansion team, and even though expansion teams have traditionally struggled for years, the Royals were competitive almost immediately.

After finishing fourth in a six-team division their first two years, the Royals were second three times between 1971 and 1975, then won four divisional titles between 1976 and 1980. They won the American League pennant in 1980 and the World Series in 1985.

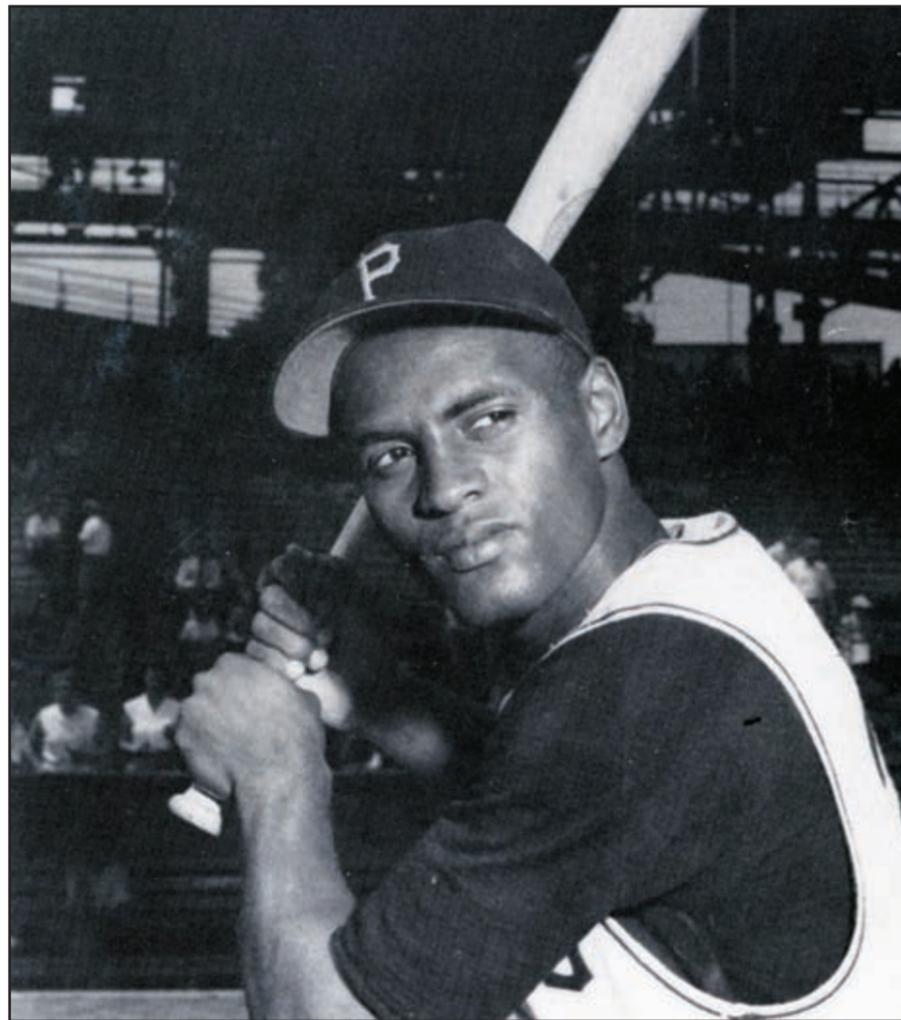

The Royals left after 1987 spring training for a new complex called Baseball City in Central Florida, which no longer exists. Lee County did not have a team the next three years.

Party like it's the 1990s

Could the magic continue after the last-place Minnesota Twins moved here in 1991 from Orlando?

The Pittsburgh Pirates won a World Series in 1960 after training in Fort Myers.

Pittsburgh Pirates legend Roberto Clemente has a park named after him in east Fort Myers.

Somehow, yes. And like it never had before or since.

The Twins, who had finished last in the seven-team American League West in 1990, rebounded and not only went worst to first to win the division, but went on to win the World Series.

One huge challenge remained for Lee County and its reputation for helping turn losers into winners.

The Boston Red Sox left Winter Haven in 1993 and moved into City of Palms Park in downtown Fort Myers.

Their last World Series title was 1918. It was said the team labored under a curse because it sold Babe Ruth to the New York Yankees after the 1919 season. Boston Globe sports columnist Dan Shaughnessy even wrote a book chronicling the long wandering in the wilderness of the team titled, "The Curse of the Bambino."

The Red Sox moved to Fort Myers in a similar fashion to the Twins: They were coming off a last-place finish and moving from Central Florida.

The move didn't rocket them to a championship immediately, but things started to pick up. They moved up to fifth in 1993 and fourth in 1994, and won the American League East in 1995.

A World Series title eluded the Red Sox until 2004. Now, a team that went 86 years between titles has won two more, in 2007 and 2013, and it comes to spring training this year as defending World Series champions.

The future

The Red Sox and Twins aren't going anywhere for a long time — until sometime in the 2040s at the earliest, if at all. Both teams signed long-term deals with Lee County in exchange for JetBlue Park and renovations at the Lee County Sports Complex.

Meanwhile, City of Palms Park is home to numerous amateur baseball games every year. It's used for youth games and the Roy Hobbs World Series, an adult tournament every fall. So is Terry Park, which has been used for amateur events since the Royals left.

County and city officials hope to lure another big-league team to City of Palms Park and a five-field training complex about two miles to the east. The Washington Nationals, who currently train in Viera on the east coast, have expressed interest. County and city officials have met with team officials, but no deal appears imminent.

The future of the 22-year-old ballpark remains in limbo. Will it continue being used for amateur baseball? Will it be converted to other uses? At one time, there was talk of turning it into a swimming facility. That didn't happen when Lee County officials became

More recently, the city and Rockford Development were discussing potential deals to renovate the stadium. Talks fell apart when city officials told Rockford and its local partner it didn't have the funds to proceed.

"I don't want to say it has failed completely," said Roger Desjarlais, Lee County manager.

But no contract has been signed. In the case of the Nationals, the team wanted $36.6 million in improvements. "We had no money to contribute to the upgrades," Mr. Desjarlais said.

Mr. Desjarlais knows questions continue swirling around City of Palms Park's future.

"What is Plan B going to look like?" he asked rhetorically.

Something may be percolating. "We're not ready to discuss it," Mr. Desjarlais said of whatever Plan B is.

Mr. Desjarlais is well aware Major League Baseball teams use one community's interest as a bargaining chip with other communities when it comes to luring away or keeping teams.

"Our job is to make sure we don't get whipsawed between them," he said.

Mr. Desjarlais said the county would love to have a third team, but the price has to be right.

"Not at the expense of the taxpayers," Mr. Desjarlais said.

Although the city of Fort Myers built the stadium and it sits within city limits, the county took over ownership in 2003 because the city was financially strapped.

But for now, no big-league action is scheduled for City of Palms Park.

A few miles away, two other ballparks will be bustling with residents and tourists for many years, continuing a tradition going back almost 90 years in Lee County.

Back to the days of Connie Mack and teams traveling by train and a powerhouse team that won three successive pennants when Herbert Hoover was president. ■

YMCA motivated to meet $1.5 million matching challenge

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

Best Buy Founder Dick Schulze of the Richard M. Schulze Family Foundation has pledged $1.5 million to the Greater Naples YMCA as a challenge to the community. The foundation will match new contributions received in 2014 toward the rebuilding and restoration of the Naples Y that was partially destroyed in a fire on this past Labor Day.

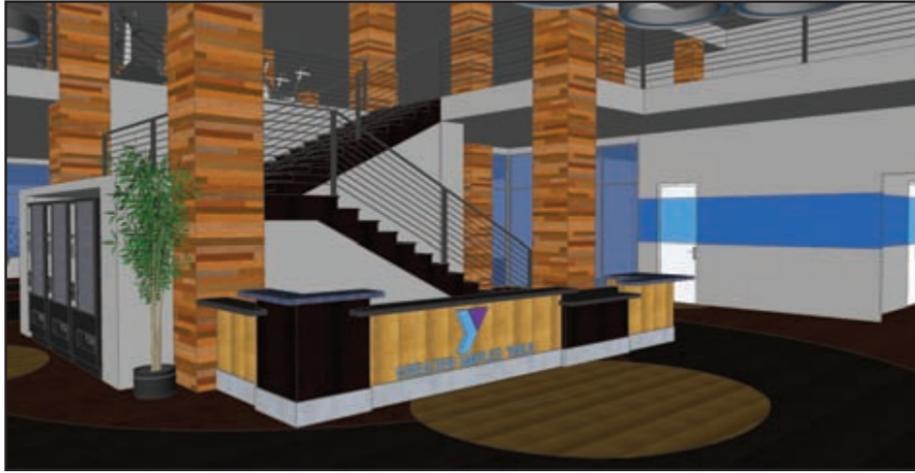

"We were impressed by what the Y had accomplished in just five short months. The fire didn't defeat them but only made them stronger and more determined to create a bigger and better Y," Mr. Schulze says. "By our showing of confidence, we hope to encourage others to support the Y and its mission."

Since the fire, the Y leadership has been working toward an overall goal of $7 million to rebuild a comprehensive health and wellness facility that will allow for expanded membership, new programs and healthier living.

"We are extremely humbled by this generous donation," says Paul Thein, president and CEO of the Greater Naples YMCA. "With the incredible support of the Schulze Family Foundation, we are now at 62 percent of our $4 million fundraising goal. By meeting their challenge, we will achieve 100 percent of our goal."

It is critical, however, that the community understands that this is a true challenge grant, Mr. Thein adds.

"We have to raise all $1.5 million in a very short period of time in order to meet the match and fully realize the foundation's generosity," he says. The matching challenge parallels the Y timeline to open the new healthy living center within a year of the fire.

A rendering of the lobby of the proposed new healthy living center.

Entrepreneur and chairman emeritus of Best Buy Co. Inc., the world's largest multi-channel consumer-electronics retailer, Mr. Schulze and his family foundation have supported education programs, youth development and medical services for more than 10 years.

"My family and I have truly been blessed to have had the opportunity to give back to our community in Minnesota," he says. "As local residents, we have had a chance to support several worthy nonprofits. When we saw this need, along with the Y's commitment to the community and its members, we knew this was an opportunity to make a meaningful difference in Collier County."

Funds will be used toward phase two of the renovation process, which will expand and transform the Y facility to better meet community wellness needs. Additions to the fitness facility will include state-of-the-art equipment, a basketball court, spaces for spinning and yoga, as well as classroom space for learning about preparing nutritious meals and maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Phase two is expected to be complete by the end of the year.

"Throughout the last 150 days, we have received an outpouring of support from local businesses and community members who have donated just over $1 million to the Y's rebuilding efforts," Mr. Thein says. "We especially want to thank the Community Foundation of Collier County for helping to share our mission with The Richard M. Schulze Family Foundation. We continue to be grateful for the many ways the community foundation shows their support for the Y, including their funding of Riley Philanthropy, whose fundraising counsel has been essential in this process."

"When a crisis like this happens to the Y, it's pertinent that the community foundation and others help where we can because the Y is a staple for the community," said Eileen Connolly-Keesler, president and CEO of the Community Foundation of Collier County. "Its staff and leadership help provide programs critical to youth development in our community, from after-school care and pre-school services to drowning-prevention classes and wellness and literacy programs. We knew that it was our responsibility to look for supporters who would be willing to help the Y succeed in a big way."

Across the United States, 2,687 Ys engage 21 million men, women and children — regardless of age, income or background — to nurture the potential of children and teens, improve the nation's health and well-being and provide opportunities to give back and support neighbors. Anchored in more than 10,000 communities, the Y has long-standing relationships and physical presence not just to promise, but to deliver, lasting personal and social change.

The Greater Naples YMCA has been serving Collier County since 1968. Its signature fundraising event, the annual Sneaker Ball, takes place Friday, Feb. 21, at Seacrest Country Day School. All charitable donations will qualify for the Richard M. Schulze Family Foundation matching funds. Individual tickets and tables as well as sponsorship opportunities remain available.

For more information, call 597-3148 or visit www.greaternaplesymca.org. Naming opportunities for the new facilities and membership options are available. ■

Evening gala and family day of fun will raise funds for Gordon River Park

A gala fundraiser for the newest city park in Naples, the Gordon River Park is taking shape for Saturday evening, March 15, at Riverside Circle to be followed by a day of family fun on Sunday, March 16.

Under the stars and a full moon on the park site, the "Prelude to a Park" gala will raise funds to name the park and provide benches, picnic tables, trees, light posts and more.

Hosts for the evening are Naples Mayor John Sorey, City Manager William Moss and architect and park designer Matthew Kragh. Delores Sorey is chair of the gala.

Guests will be able to learn about the master plans for the park and invest in the project while enjoying an elegant dinner, entertainment by Joe Marino and All the King's Men and an auction with City Councilman Bill Barnett wielding the gavel.

Tickets are $350 ($200 tax deductible) per person. Patrons pay $500 ($350 tax deductible) or $5,000 for a table of 10.

For the family

Family Fun Day for the Naples Gordon River Park takes place from 1-4 p.m. Sunday, March 16. With Amy Saad as chair, the afternoon will showcase the talents of children from numerous organizations in Naples. Hamburgers and hot dogs will be offered for a modest fee with all other activities free and focused on children. Strolling entertainers will roam the grounds, and families will be able to purchase a paver with their name engraved for a modest amount. Final plans for the Gordon River Park will be on display.

In addition to the city of Naples and MHK Architecture & Planning, sponsors for the "Prelude to a Park" gala and

St. Matt's House has thrift shop grand opening

St. Matthew's House hosts a grand-opening celebration and fashion show at its boutique thrift shop from 2-5 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22. The shop opened several months ago at 2601 Airport-Pulling Road.

Designers from Petunias of Naples, Wildflower Boutique, Kari's Kreations, and True Fashionistas will put their talents to the test against a thrift store specialist using only donated clothing found in-store. Models will be from the Justin's Place recovery program for women at St. Matthew's House.

Tickets for $25 are available at www.stmatthewshouse.org.

All proceeds will benefit the St. Matthew's House mission. ■

Watch the mail for notice of special elections

Collier County voters who are eligible to vote in the U.S. Congressional District 19 special elections will receive a notice of election/vote by mail request form from the Collier County Supervisor of Elections Office.

The mailing, which started Feb. 19, serves to remind voters of the special primary election scheduled for Tuesday, April 22, and the special general election scheduled for Tuesday, June 24.

The vote by mail request form provides a convenient way for voters to request a mail/absentee ballot for one or both elections. Registered Collier County voters can also request a mail/absentee ballot by visiting www.Collier-Votes.com. For more information, visit the website or call 252-8683. ■

Mensa member hosts 'Saturday Stag' discussion

Sam's Fourth Saturday Stag, a lively discussion hosted by Mensian and psychotherapist Sam Sewell and open to male Mensa members and non-members, takes place at 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22, at Dr. Sewell's North Naples office. This month's conversation, focusing on the philosophical foundation of religion, is based on a lecture Dr. Sewell delivered as president of the Theological Center in Naples.

Attendance at Sam's Fourth Saturday Stag is free; donations to the Southwest Florida MENSA scholarship fund are welcome. Seating is limited, and reservations are required. Call Dr. Sewell at 591-4565 or email sams@bestselfusa.com. ■

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

BY CHUCK SHEPHERD

DISTRIBUTED BY UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE

Find that genius!

Beijing Genomics Institute scientists are closing in on a technology to allow parents to choose, from several embryos, the one most likely to yield the smartest offspring. London's Daily Mail (in January, referencing recent work in Wired, The Wall Street Journal and The New Yorker) explained that BGI will have identified high-potential mathematics genes (by mapping the cells of geniuses) so that researchers can search for those among a couple's array of embryos. (Most embryos will yield gene arrays resembling their parents', but one embryo is likely "better" — and maybe much better.) One Chinese researcher acknowledged the "controversial" nature of the work, "especially in the West," but added, "That's not the case in China." The parental price tag on finding the smartest kid? Expensive, said a supporter, but less than upgrading an average kid via Harvard, or even a private prep school.

Can't possibly be true

■ "This (was) my life," said musician Boujemaa Razgui in December, referring to the 13 handmade flutes that he played professionally, "and now they're gone." Arriving in New York City from Madrid with the 13 woodwinds in his checked luggage, he was shocked to discover that U.S. Customs had destroyed them without notice because "wood" is a restricted "agricultural" import. (Unsophisticated agents had apparently regarded them as mere bamboo.) Mr. Razgui plays all over the world including, since 2002, with the Boston Camerata ensemble staged by the city's Museum of Fine Arts.

■ A Georgia Regents University's dental school official acknowledged in December that the school would likely continue to conduct research on the mouths of stray dogs solely to test a coating that might inhibit infections in humans' dental implants. The work is controversial because the only way to study the installed implants is to remove them, after euthanizing the dogs. (Also, the research is sponsored by commercial dental-implant companies for a market dominated by elective cosmetic patients.) (However, a GRU professor noted that implants are also functional, as they inhibit infections that might reach the heart's lining and other locations.)

■ Americans who have grown accustomed to hearing that the U.S. is militarily without peer might have been shocked to learn in January (as CBS News reported from a Pentagon interview) that America has "practically zero capability" either to detect enemy cruise missiles fired at Washington, D.C., from offshore, or even worse, to "defend against (them)." The Pentagon's interim makeshift solution to protect the U.S. capital, said an official, is to launch two blimps, soon, to float two miles up over a base in Maryland to try to spot any such missiles.

■ In February, a California Highway Patrol officer handcuffed and threatened to arrest a firefighter performing an emergency roadside rescue along Interstate 805 in Chula Vista, Calif., because the rescuer would not move his truck from the fast lane, where it was "impeding" traffic. Firefighters are required to block lanes during rescues, specifically to "impede" traffic for their own protection and that of victims nearby. CHP and the Chula Vista firefighters later jointly called the incident a "miscommunication."

Unclear on the concept

■ Oregon inmate Sirgiorgio Clardy, 26, filed a handwritten $100 million lawsuit in January against Nike for inadequately marketing its Air Jordans. Mr. Clardy, a convicted pimp, had received an "enhanced" penalty for using a "dangerous weapon" to maim the face of a john, i.e., he had stomped and kicked a man after accusing him of skipping out on a payment, and the "dangerous weapon" was apparently his shoe. Mr. Clardy said Nike bears at least some responsibility for his incarceration because it failed to label the shoe a "dangerous weapon."

■ Officials at the Emu Plains Correctional Center near Sydney, Australia, announced in January that they had pre-empted a planned escape by two female inmates, ages 32 and 21, after finding a 60-foot length of tied-together sheets in a cell. Nonetheless, the officials said they were puzzled, in that Emu Plains is a one-story facility, enclosed, wrote the Daily Telegraph, by a "not particularly high" fence.

Perspective

Recent U.S. Supreme Court rulings have made clear that only in the case of murder can a juvenile be given a life sentence "without possibility of parole" (and never a death sentence). Under-18s, the court said, must get a "meaningful opportunity" to mature and redeem themselves behind bars. The U.S. Constitution aside, apparently some Florida judges disagree and have subsequently sentenced juveniles to 50 years or longer for non-murders, in some cases assuring that the release date will be beyond the inmate's natural life expectancy. In one case found by a Barry University law school program, a juvenile convicted of gun robbery and rape had his earlier life-without-parole sentence "reduced" to consecutive sentences totaling 170 years. Critics said the Supreme Court should recognize that some juveniles are already "thoroughly incorrigible." ■

Baby Basics to celebrate 3 millionth diaper

Baby Basics of Collier County, a volunteer organization that provides free diapers and kindness to more than 345 infants and toddlers from low-income, working families in Collier County and Bonita Springs, hosts its 3 Millionth Diaper Celebration from 5:30-7 p.m. Thursday, March 13, at Waterside Shops. The evening will include live music and an array of appetizers. Tickets are $25.

Since it was founded in 2004, Baby Basics of Collier County has assisted more than 1,600 families. Participating families must have at least one working parent or guardian, must demonstrate financial need and cannot be receiving federal or state cash assistance. Qualifying families come to the closest distribution site to pick up a free supply of diapers. Volunteers greet the families, help them select the proper size and provide information about the next distribution and other opportunities for supportive services. Baby Basics is a 100 percent volunteer organization. All donations and sponsorship funds except those specifically earmarked for administrative costs are used to purchase diapers.

The 3 Millionth Diaper Celebration is sponsored by Life in Naples, Waterside Shops, Classical 88.7, IMA Creative, Shula's, Willow Creek Advisors, Patrick Dearborn LLC, Escapes Paris and The Beacon Group at Morgan Stanley and Morgan Stanley Naples. For more information about Baby Basics, visit www.BabyBasicsCollier.org. ■

Drug Free Collier luncheon planned

Drug Free Collier hosts its sixth annual Community Awareness Luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Thursday, March 6, at The Ritz-Carlton Golf Resort. The event is the organization's primary fundraiser of the year.

Sheriff Kevin Rambosk will be honored this year, and guest speakers will include psychologist and author Lisa Boesky. Entertainment will be by Gulf Coast High School singer Jessie Michaels. Patrick Nolan and Emily Dishnow of Fox 4 News will emcee the afternoon.

A limited number of tickets remain available for $100. Call 377-0535. ■

Author to share 'Bank on Yourself' tips

Top Wealth Agenda presents "Bank on Yourself," a workshop featuring New York Times and Wall Street Journal best-selling author Pamela Yellen, from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 25, at the Hilton Naples.

The program is one of five Ms. Yellen is conducting around the country in conjunction with the launch of her new book, "The Bank On Yourself Revolution: Fire Your Banker, Bypass Wall Street and Take Con-rol of Your Own Financial Future." She will discuss her financial management program based on a review of more than 450 savings and retirement planning strategies.

Copies of her new book will be available for purchase, and she will be on hand after the presentation for autographs.

For reservations or more information, call Top Wealth Agenda at 213-1700. ■

Youth Haven welcomes clothing from Angels Undercover

Angels Undercover has formed a partnership with Youth Haven to provide school uniform shorts and shirts to students housed in Youth Haven's emergency residential center.

"This is a test program for us," says Jackie Bennett, founder and president of Angels Undercover. Since it started four years ago, the organization has provided underwear, socks and school uniform shorts and shirts to thousands of economically needy elementary school children in Collier County.

"As we grow, we plan to reach out to other nonprofits who also work with at-risk students," Ms. Bennett says.

Angels Undercover can provide

"emergency clothing packs" to organizations such as Youth Haven thanks to a partnership with Chico's that allows the organization to purchase clothing in large quantities at much lower costs.

"New school clothes are incredibly important to our children's self-esteem," says Jinx Liggett, executive director of Youth Haven.

Angels Undercover's mission is to promote education by providing basic wardrobe necessities to children who would otherwise come to school inadequately dressed and, therefore, not ready to learn.

For more information, call 596-0690 or visit www.angels-undercover.org.

CLUB NOTES

Naples FLOWER Show

Mr. Tallamy's presentation at 7 p.m. A wine-and-cheese reception and silent auction will precede dinner. Tickets are $35 ($20 for the lecture only). For reservations, call Jean Roche at 597-7222 or download the event flyer at www.naples-fnps.org.

■ Naples Newcomers Club welcomes new members who have moved to the area within the past five years. In addition to a monthly luncheon, members get together to explore Naples and to enjoy a variety of interests, from books to bridge and mah-jongg to gourmet cooking and conversations over coffee. A coffee for prospective new members takes place on the first Thursday of each month. For more information, call 298-4083 or visit www.naplesnewcomers.com.

■ The Naples Doll Club, under the umbrella of the United Federation of Doll Clubs, meets on the first and third Wednesdays of every month through April. The next meetings are March 5 and 19. For more information, call Myrna Eby at (574) 780-0951 or email mydoll\_2@yahoo.com.

■ Organizing for Action-Naples holds a dinner meeting from 5:45-7:45 p.m. on the first Tuesday of the month at the Club at Olde Cypress. Join fellow activists and supporters of President Obama's legislative agenda for dinner, conversation and an update on OFA national, state and local activities. Upcoming meetings are March 4, April 1 and May 6. Cost is $20 (cash bar available).

For reservations or more information, call 513-1595.

■ Southwest Florida Federated Republican Women meet at 11:30 a.m. on the first Wednesday of the month at Arbor Trace, 15661 Vanderbilt Drive north of Wiggins Pass. The next meeting is March 5. For more information, call Diane Van Parys at 431-5224.

■ Zonta Club of Naples invites members and visiting Zontians to its monthly meetings at Brio at Waterside Shops at noon on the first Tuesday of each month. The next meeting is March 4. Cost is $17. For reservations or more information, call Erica Vanover at 434-1112.

■ The 275-plus members of Corvettes of Naples enjoy networking with other Corvette owners and clubs as well as their own monthly social functions including car shows, picnics, cross-country trips, home parties and dining at fine restaurants. Meetings take place at 7:30 p.m. on the first Thursday at Vanderbilt Presbyterian Church, 1225 Piper Blvd. in North Naples. The next meeting is March 6. Visitors who own Corvettes are always welcome. For more information, visit www.corvettesofnaplesfl.com.

■ The Florida Poetry Club meets for open mic readings at The Norris Center from 4-5 p.m. Tuesday, March 11. Members and guests are welcome to enjoy dinner together at Alberto's on Fifth afterward. For more information, call Jan Cosner at (440) 554-1144 or email formulawriting@hotmail.com.

■ The Jewish Genealogy Shared Interest Group meets at 10 a.m. Tuesday, March 11, at the Jewish Federation of Collier County, 2500 Vanderbilt Beach Road. All who are interested in getting starting and/or continuing to explore the world of Jewish genealogy are welcome. No experience is necessary. RSVP by emailing genresearch13@yahoo.com.

■ The Everglades Astronomical

■ Invest in Films & TV Club is a new group dedicated to pairing scriptwriters with investors in the local film community. Monthly roundtable discussions and mixers will be held ITZ Studios in Naples, hosted by studio owners Chuck Ardezzone and Frank Monti.

The first Invest in Films & TV Club meeting is set for 6-7 p.m. Monday, March 3. Attendance is free, but reservations are requested. ITZ Studios is at 4344 Enterprise Ave.

For more information or to make a reservation for the March 3 get-together, call Mr. Ardezzone at (917) 375-6527 or email chuck@itzmedicagroup.com.

■ The Naples Garden Club holds its annual flower show Friday and Saturday, March 28-29, at the Naples Botanical Garden. Thousands of attendees will enjoy floral designs, exotic plants, educational displays and demonstrations, entertainment and shopping surrounded by the beauty of the Garden. Two floral demonstrations will also be offered both days.

"Alice in Wonderland" is the theme for the 2014 Naples Flower Show. Visitors might spot white rabbits, flamingos, grinning cats, caterpillars and maybe even a tea party. Students from Grace Place for Children & Families will have a special exhibit in the youth education section.

Admission will be $12.95 for adults, $7.95 for ages 4-14 and free for ages 3 and younger. Fees include all activities and full admission to the Garden. Members of Naples Garden Club and the Naples Botanical Garden enjoy free admission. For more information, visit www.naples-gardenclub.org.

■ Members of the computer club PCBUG invite PC users of all levels of ability to a webinar about Acronis True Image 2014 beginning at 5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 20, at Naples Regional Library, 650 Central Ave. The Acronis program provides image backup and recovery of email, music, photos, videos, documents, personal settings and all applications. For more information, call 455-1542.

■ The Naples chapter of PFLAG, Parents Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays, a support, education and advocacy group for families with gay or transgender members, meets at 7 p.m. on the third Thursday of each month. The next meeting is Feb. 20. Call 513-4568 for location.

■ Scott Campbell, market CEO of Physicians Regional Healthcare System, will be the guest speaker at the luncheon meeting of the Naples Press Club on Thursday, Feb. 27, at the Hilton Naples. Guests are welcome. Doors open at 11:30 a.m. Cost is $25 for members, $30 for others. Purchase tickets at www.eventbrite.com (search for Naples Press Club) or email rsvp@naplespressclub.org.

■ The Naples Chapter of the Florida Native Plant Society holds its fifth annual banquet Friday, Feb. 28, at Naples Botanical Garden. Guest speaker Douglas Tallamy, Ph.D., a professor from the University of Delaware and the author of "Bringing Nature Home," will discuss "Are Alien Plants Bad?" Mr. Tallamy researches the role of insects in the natural environment.

The evening begins at 5:30 p.m., with

Volunteers help ensure success of programs for Immokalee students

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

The Immokalee Foundation is committed to empowering Immokalee's children through programs focused on education, career and life skills. The organization works with students to develop a plan that nurtures their development as a student, citizen and future professional.

TIF could not continue its work to enrich the lives of Immokalee's children and young adults without the generosity and compassion of individuals and businesses in the community. The foundation is currently seeking volunteers to help advance its mission and ensure the continued success of its programs and events.

Volunteers are needed in all capacities.

"We are looking for individuals to contribute in any way they can — whether it's helping with an event, administrative tasks, becoming a mentor or a committee member or being a guest speaker at one of our career panels," says Executive Director Liz Allbritten. Opportunities also exist for high school or college students seeking volunteer service hours.

Each year, TIF hosts signature fundraising events including the Inter-Club Challenge and Pro-Am golf tournaments and the Charity Classic Celebration gala. For events of this magnitude, the foundation needs a large number of individuals to lend a helping hand. Tasks range from greeting guests and helping with registration to acting as a table host.

Joseph Riashi, with PayPros, is both a vendor and a TIF volunteer. As a vendor, he handles payment processing; as a volunteer, he's up for anything.

"I'm there for both big and small events, where I oversee all input of credit card information," Mr. Riashi says. "But I also move tables, do set-up — anything they need. It's a phenomenal organization and I'm happy to donate my time." He would be involved even if he weren't a vendor, he adds. "It's such a feeling of personal fulfillment. You realize it's not just about you."

Those willing to perform administrative duties such as phone calls, data entry, filing and a variety of other clerical responsibilities are also needed and are a tremendous asset in keeping the day-to-day operations of TIF running smoothly.

Since signing up as a volunteer in 2012, Marlene Leeds has committed time every week to provide administrative and event support. Both she and her husband, Peter, have also volunteered their support at TIF's Charity Classic Celebration and Pro-Am, held each year in November.

"Volunteering gives me a good sense of well-being," Mrs. Leeds says. "I like to help people and the feeling I get knowing I've done something." Working with TIF staff is especially rewarding, she says. "The people are just so wonderful. I love everyone."

Equally satisfying is helping at events and witnessing change in action. "It is great to see what is actually accomplished and the impact it has on the kids."

Local professionals can provide important insight to students by taking part in career panels, an element of

TIF's career development program that features guest speakers in a wide variety of careers, from technology and law to media, human services, health care, manufacturing and more. The professionals are asked to volunteer approximately two hours of their time to talk and interact with 30-50 high school students in a panel setting.

Businesses can get involved by partnering with TIF to host workshops, luncheons, facility tours, company-wide career panels and more.

The support of individuals, area companies, organizations and professionals throughout the community allows the foundation to offer students a unique chance to understand the scope of career opportunities.

Since 2001, TIF has matched volunteer mentors with qualified students from Immokalee Middle School and Immokalee High School through its Take Stock In Children program. Mentors inspire and guide and are involved in the students' road to success. With a time investment of only one or two hours each week, a volunteer can get to know a student and help him navigate the challenges of education and life. TSIC students who successfully fulfill their required pledge to earn good grades, exhibit good behavior and meet weekly with their mentor are awarded a full college scholarship upon high school graduation.

"For those interested in learning more about The Immokalee Foundation and our volunteer opportunities, we would be happy to offer a personal tour of Immokalee and our student facility so that they, too, can experience the hope we're building for generations of Immokalee's children," Ms. Allbritten says.

To learn more about volunteering, mentoring or for additional information, call 430-9122 or visit www.immokalee-foundation.org. ■

Workshops deliver the dirt on growing in Southwest Florida

The Collier County Master Gardeners winter/spring series of workshops continues from 10-11:30 a.m. Thursdays at Unity of Naples, 2000 Unity Way off Davis Boulevard. All are welcome. Admission is $7 to each class.

Here's the lineup:

■ Feb. 20: "Shades and Textures of Green" - Ray Pelletier of Ray's Lawn & Garden Center will discuss how to create a lush landscape in sun or shade. In addition to ground maintenance, pest control, fertilization, irrigation and landscape design services, the garden center offers a wide variety of shrubs, annuals, perennials, soils and organic vegetables.

■ Feb. 27: "Gardens for Wildlife and Butterflies" - Self-described "butterfly lunatic" Mike Malloy, a landscape professional and Collier County Master Gardener, will discuss how to attract wildlife and butterflies to the garden. Mr. Malloy is the author of "Butterfly Gardening Made Easy" and "Tropical Color: A Guide to Colorful Plants." He writes about gardening in the Naples Daily News and conducts the free plant clinic on Thursday mornings at Naples Botanical Garden.

■ March 6: "What's Old Is New and What's New Is Old" - Horticulturist Craig Morell of Pinecrest Gardens in Miami will present the program. A lifelong plant accumulator with a yen for epiphytes, Mr. Morell has worked as a nursery inspector for the Florida Department of Agriculture, as a horticulturist at the Boca Raton Resort and as a managing grower for an orchid company in West Palm Beach. He travels widely and spends his free time orchid gardening at home in South Miami.

■ March 13: Garden tour - For series subscribers only, the final event of 2014 will consist of a tour of a private waterfront garden in Naples. Reservations for individual sessions are not required. For information about subscribing to the series, visit the Collier County Extension Service website at www.collier.ifas.ufl.edu. ■

Biologists team up for program about Fakahatchee's 'lost' orchids

Two local biologists known for both their scientific and presentation skills team up for a program about their efforts to restore rare and extinct orchids to Fakahatchee Strand Preserve State Park.

Dennis Giardina of the Florida Fish and Wildlife Commission and Mike Owen of the Fakahatchee Strand park have traveled to Cuba in their quest for a seed source of Fakahatchee's two "lost" orchid species. Their photographic presentation, sponsored by the Friends of Fakahatchee, takes place from 5:30-8:30 p.m. Saturday, March 1, in the environmental education center at Rookery Bay, 300 Tower Road.

Admission for $50 per person includes

hearty appetizers and beverages. All proceeds will support their orchid restoration work. Reservations are required and can be made at www.orchidswamp.org. ■

Stock up on orchids this weekend

The Naples Orchid Society holds its 41st annual show and sale Friday through Sunday, Feb. 21-23, at Moorings Presbyterian Church. "The Wonderful World of Orchids" will showcase prize-winning arrangements and will include a wide array of individual plants to inspire orchid aficionados of all levels. Five vendors will have orchid plants and materials for sale.

Hours are 3-8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 21; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22; and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 23. Admission is $8 at the door (free for children 12 and younger). Coupons for admission for one person are offered in newspaper ads and at www.NaplesOrchidSociety.org. For more information, visit the website or call 682-8390 or 775-5220. ■

Florida Komen affiliate. The organization gives 75 percent of the proceeds from its fundraising efforts as grants to Southwest Florida nonprofits that provide free mammograms, treatment and support services to patients, as well as provide education and awareness for the community. Ms. Layton said the remaining 25 percent is sent to the national foundation exclusively to fund cancer-research grants. None of the money raised is spent on the overhead expenses of the parent organization, according to the local affiliate's website.

"At the heart of our race is our mission to end breast cancer forever," Ms. Layton said.

Since 2002, the Southwest Florida affiliate has given almost $6 million in grants to local organizations serving Lee, Charlotte, Collier, Hendry and Glades counties, Ms. Layton said. She said that last year, the affiliate gave $678,500 in grants to 10 breast-cancer nonprofits, but even that is only about half of the $1.35 million it would take to fund the five-county area's needs fully.

While many of the grantees handle diagnosis and treatment, others help breast-cancer patients with living expenses or with post-treatment health issues.

One success story

One survivor-support organization is the all-volunteer Lymphedema Resources, which has received grants from the local Komen affiliate for nine years that total more than $200,000.

Cancer surgery or radiation treatments can damage the body's lymphatic system, resulting in chronic, debilitating swelling called lymphedema that is caused by fluids collecting in the tissues. Lymphedema is incurable after it occurs, but education can help breast-cancer survivors avoid the risk factors that trigger the onset. Once lymphedema develops, it can be managed by lymphatic drainage therapy and use of compression garments. Cancer survivors are permanently at risk for developing the complication, which can occur from one week to many decades after cancer treatment.

"All it takes is a burn or cut to start an infection, even years later," said Claire Hauenstein, president of Lymphedema Resources.

Ms. Hauenstein developed lymphedema when she flew to Europe a couple of years after undergoing treatment for breast cancer, unaware that she was at risk for the condition and that she needed to wear a medical compression garment in order to fly safely. Ms. Hauenstein said she help found Lymphedema Resources after she attended a support group meeting where she met Dara Leichter, founding president of the Southwest Florida Komen affiliate.

After the meeting, Ms. Leichter suggested that the support-group participants should form a nonprofit organization so they could apply for a Komen grant to help other cancer survivors with the lymphedema issue.

"We applied and got a $5,000 grant the second year Komen Southwest Florida was in operation, and we thought we'd gone to heaven," Ms. Hauenstein said.

At first, the organization only provided the compression garments, which can be costly but are not always covered by insurance and must be replaced twice a year. Ms. Hauenstein said the organization has expanded its programs and now provides payment for lymphedema therapy, a six-week cancer survivorship program and preventative education. She said the nonprofit has helped 520 lower-income patients during the last 10 years.

This year's goal is $850,000

Ms. Layton said Komen Southwest Florida hopes to raise $850,000 this year while offering a race with a distinctive experience because it features activities to keep spectators occupied while they await the return of race participants.

"We want to incorporate everyone in the family and make it a fun day, but also raise awareness," she said.

Ms. Gonzalez said that seeing cancer survivors participating in the race could prove motivational.

"What I noticed is there is such a wide variety of runners there — the fit and trimmed, and the not-so-fit," she said. "Families go, and it's not just for the fit freaks. You don't have to be a big runner to do it." ■

Air pollution increases risk for hypertension in pregnant women

BY THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

Breathing the air outside their homes might be just as toxic to pregnant women — if not more so — as breathing in cigarette smoke, increasing a mom-to-be's risk of developing deadly complications such as preeclampsia, according to findings from a new University of Florida study.

UF researchers compared birth data with Environmental Protection Agency estimates of air pollution, finding that heavy exposure to four air pollutants led to a significantly increased risk for developing a high blood pressure disorder during pregnancy. The research was published in the Journal of Epidemiology & Community Health.

The pollutants include two specific types of fine and coarse particulate matter: carbon monoxide and sulfur dioxide. According to the EPA, particulate matter includes acids, dust, metals and soil particles. These inhalable particles are released from industries and forest fires and can form when gases react with each other in the air. Sulfur dioxide is emitted from power plants and industries. Most carbon monoxide is produced by car exhaust.

"Fetal development is very sensitive to environmental factors," says Xiaohui Xu, an assistant professor of epidemiology in the colleges of Public Health and Health Professions and Medicine. "That is why we wanted to do this research.

Hypertension (high blood pressure), in particular, is associated with increased morbidity and mortality, causing a lot of problems for the mother and fetus, including preterm delivery."

Hypertensive disorders such as gestational hypertension, preeclampsia and the deadly condition it leads to, eclampsia, affect about 10 percent of pregnancies. Despite the serious risks to mother and baby, little is known about what specifically causes these conditions to develop in pregnant women, the researchers say.

To gain a better understanding of how environmental factors might play a role in increasing the risk of developing hypertension during pregnancy, the researchers examined data from women who gave birth in Jacksonville between 2004 and 2005 and environmental data from their communities.

The sample included more than 22,000 pregnant women.

(The researchers did not include in the sample mothers with chronic hypertension, those who had previously given birth prematurely or those whose babies were born with other complications.) They then gauged how much pollution the women were exposed to throughout their pregnancies using data the EPA gathered daily to measure the levels of several pollutants.

Among the sample of women, 4.7 percent developed a hypertensive disorder during pregnancy. Exposure to air pollutants throughout the first two trimesters of pregnancy increased women's risk of developing one of these conditions, Mr. Xu says. They determined this after controlling for other factors that could affect a woman's risk for developing hypertension, such as socioeconomic status, exposure to co-pollutants and smoking during pregnancy.

But they could not determine conclusively whether exposure early in the pregnancy or late in the pregnancy was more likely to increase a woman's risk for hypertension.

"It looks like the whole period has impacts for hypertension," Mr. Xu says.

On the basis of these findings, the researchers say more air pollution control is necessary to prevent dangerous complications in pregnant women and babies. Although more studies are needed, they hypothesize that exposure to air pollution during pregnancy might affect a woman's normal pattern of blood pressure.

Next, the researchers plan to expand their study throughout the state and also examine other conditions that could be affected by pollution.

"We are trying to look at several outcomes," Mr. Xu says. "We also want to look at preterm delivery and low birth weight and find out what the effects of breathing contaminated air are on fetal development."

The research was funded through a grant from the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences. ■

Altruism plays a big role in the climate of our community

allenWEISS

allen.weiss@nchmd.org

Just what is it that makes our Southwest Florida community such an idyllic place? For openers, the weather is great. And the tax structure helps create an equally nice economic climate. But there's another reason why this region of America is so wonderful: altruism. The people who reside here, from young professionals to retirees, are involved in the community, want to see it improved and are willing to work to help make those improvements.

Last week was a perfect example.

A group of 50 people, mostly newcomers to the area, spent part of a day at our downtown campus learning about the region's health care, as part of this year's Greater Naples Leadership class. NCH has hosted about 15 such GNL classes over the years. The five goals of this year's visit were: (1) to review governmental regulations about health care; (2) to help GNL members understand our local capabilities; (3) to give them an appreciation for the level of coordination that exists among caregivers; (4) to address wellness and prevention; and (5) to discuss future opportunities and challenges.

Previous GNL members have yielded a host of NCH board of trustees members, including Ned Stedem, who led our finance committee for many years and made a significant contribution as a grarious and kind mentor for many of us on the leadership team. Other GNL participants have been strong NCH supporters and generous donors. Most recently, Craig and Pat Jilk made a generous gift to name the new neonatal ICU nursery. The Jilks have also contributed mightily to other worthy local charities.

Leadership Collier is another example of a program bringing leaders from various businesses and organizations together to develop a community of civic leadership. Organized by the Greater Naples Chamber of Commerce about 25 years ago and strongly supported by NCH since inception, this diverse group delves into topics ranging from business to agriculture to health care. Someone from the staff of NCH is typically in each year's class among professionals who range from investment advisors to human resources executives to CEOs.

Other leadership programs under the umbrella of the Leadership Collier Foundation and the Greater Naples Chamber of Commerce include Growing Associates In Naples and Youth Leadership Collier. Leadership Florida is a similar program and one in which numerous NCH senior team members, including yours truly, have been privileged to participate.

It's never been more important to be involved and to be a leader in making the world a better place. All of us at NCH — 1,200 volunteers and 4,000 colleagues, including 660 physicians — are proud of our role in helping create a community that is built on altruism. ■

TO YOUR HEALTH

Clear your household of expired, unused meds

With the rise of prescription drug abuse and overdose deaths reaching epidemic proportions in recent years, pharmaceutical take-back programs are necessary tools for keeping harmful drugs from falling into the wrong hands.

Although the proliferation of pill mills contributed significantly to Florida's problem, stockpiles of medication found in medicine cabinets have also become a source for accidental poisoning, overdose and abuse.

Data shows that more than one in five teens in America has taken a prescription pain medication not prescribed for them, and one in 10 reports abusing cough medicine to get high.

There is good news, though. Thanks to efforts such as Operation Medicine Cabinet and other state and local initiatives, there was a sharp drop in illicit prescription pill abuse and deaths caused by prescription drugs during 2012 in Collier County and throughout the state. A recently released Florida Department of Law Enforcement report shows that the number of drug-related deaths in Florida is at the lowest it's been since the Florida Medical Examiner's report was first compiled in 2008. Locally, the number of accidental deaths caused by prescription drugs dropped almost 20 percent, from 41 deaths in 2011 to 33 deaths in 2012.

In collaboration with the Collier County Sheriff's Office and the Naples and Marco Island police departments, Drug Free Collier encourages residents to bring unused or expired prescriptions, controlled substances and over-the-counter medication to the following drop-off sites. No questions asked, no ID required and it's free.

Floridians value water, but not 'all in' on conservation

THE UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA

Floridians value water almost as much as they value money and their health. Just don't ask them to time themselves in the shower.

An online survey of 516 Floridians found that interest in water ranked third in a list of public issues, just behind the economy and health care, but ahead of taxes and public education. Eighty-three percent of respondents considered water a highly or extremely important issue.

Alexa Lamm, the University of Florida assistant professor who led the survey for the Center for Public Issues Education (PIE Center), says the respondents, who completed the survey this past December, were selected as a demographically representative sample of adult Floridians.

The PIE Center is part of UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences. Ms. Lamm, a faculty member in the department of agricultural education and communication, is the center's associate director.

Jack Payne, UF's senior vice president for agriculture and natural resources, says it is important for a large research university where so much scientific work is being done on water to gauge how well the public understands issues associated with water supply and usage.

"We need educated voters at the voting booth, so it's always good to know the level of understanding our citizens have," he says, adding many critical problems Florida will face in the future revolve around water, including the supply and quality of water as well as a rising sea level.

The survey found that respondents would support some increases in their water utility bills if the money would help ensure future water supplies. To that end, 69 percent said they would support a 10 percent increase in water bills, if used for that purpose. Perhaps not surprising, support dropped as the bill-hike percentage increased. Only 7 percent of respondents said they would be willing to pay 50 percent more for water to help ensure its supply.

Michael Dukes, director of UF/IFAS' Center for Landscape Conservation and Ecology, says Florida's growing population will mean more pressure on state water supplies.

"I think we're going to have to come to a decision point on the use of high-quality drinking water — potable water — to maintain landscapes," Mr. Dukes says. He notes current UF research working to help offset water problems, including studies on efficient irrigation, new ways to recapture water and development of drought-tolerant turfgrass varieties, and he adds many Floridians are looking for ways to landscape with plants that are attractive and drought tolerant.

As was true with last year's water survey, PIE Center officials learned that the public has varying amounts of tolerance for giving up creature comforts in order to enhance conservation.

For example, Ms. Lamm says, while 75 percent of survey respondents said they would wait until their dishwasher is full to turn it on, 47 percent said they would not put a timer in the bathroom to help remind them to shorten their shower.

The survey also found that Floridians reported low overall knowledge about some water-related current events, despite media coverage.

Only 31 percent of survey respondents were aware of last fall's decline in commercial oyster production in Apalachicola Bay, and only 26 percent knew that Florida officials filed a lawsuit in October over the state of Georgia's consumption of fresh water from a river that helps support Florida's oyster industry, she says.

The survey did find that Floridians support state government efforts to protect water, even if it means resolving disputes in court: 83 percent agreed that state government should protect water, while just 18 percent said it would be a waste of government money to fight legal battles over water rights.

The survey is part of a number of water-focused activities scheduled this month. The PIE Center will host a webinar with Wendy Graham, director of the UF Water Institute, at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 25.

The PIE Center water survey marked the start of the second year of its public-opinion surveys. Besides water, survey topics have included endangered and invasive species, immigration and public perceptions about food safety, food security and genetically modified organisms.

The water survey, results and a link to register for the webinar can be found at www.piecenter.com/water. ■

Pupulation control

Deciding when to spay or neuter your dog depends on a variety of factors, not just age

BY DR. MARTY BECKER AND KIM CAMPBELL THORNTON

Universal Uclick

If you got a puppy during the holidays, you're probably starting to wonder when you should have your young pal spayed (removal of ovaries and uterus) or neutered (removal of testes). The answer to that used to be straightforward: Most veterinarians recommended that the surgery take place when the pet was 6 to 9 months old.

Spaying and neutering has benefits for pets, owners and society. In general, altered pets live healthier, longer lives. They are less likely to roam because they don't have hormones urging them to seek out a mate, and females don't need to be confined during twice-yearly heat cycles. And widespread spay/neuter efforts have greatly reduced the numbers of homeless animals in shelters.

All of those benefits are important, but we've discovered that they must be balanced with the needs of individual dogs, and that can be a challenge. The issue of when to spay or neuter a pet is complicated, and there's no one-size-fits-all answer. New research tells us that for some dogs, at least, waiting until they reach physical maturity is a better option than pre- or early adolescent spay/neuter surgery.

Depending on the age at which it's performed, several studies have shown that spay/neuter surgery is linked to increases in the incidence of certain diseases or conditions in dogs, including osteosarcoma (bone cancer), hemangiosarcoma (heart tumor), hypothyroidism and canine cruciate ligament (CCL) injuries, as well as prostate cancer in male dogs and urinary incontinence in females.

For instance, giant breeds are more at risk for osteosarcoma. Breeds at higher risk for CCL tears include Akitas, German shepherds, golden and Labrador retrievers, Newfoundlands, poodles and Saint Bernards. The science tells us that in certain breeds it's beneficial to let bones mature before spaying and neutering.

Don't get us wrong. We believe spaying and neutering is the right thing to do for family pets. The benefits more than outweigh the risks. The decision you need to make, in conjunction with your veterinarian, is when to schedule it for your particular pet. Here are some factors to consider:

■ Ask your veterinarian about the health risks faced by your breed and whether any of these issues are affected by the age at which a dog is spayed or neutered. Several recent studies have addressed these topics.

■ Typically, the bigger the dog, the greater the risk of orthopedic problems with early spay/neuter. Letting the dog mature before spaying or neutering may improve bone health over the long run. Talk to your veterinarian about the best age for your dog based on breed and the latest science.

■ Consider alternative methods of altering your dog, such as ovariectomy (removal of only the ovaries) or injectable neutering with Zeuterin. An ovariectomy is less invasive, and the Zeuterin procedure allows dogs to retain some of their testosterone, which can offer certain protective health benefits, according to some studies.

■ Make your decision based on the most current research and your dog's breed and lifestyle. For instance, if your dog will be a canine athlete, later neutering may improve his muscle tone and decrease the risk of CCL ruptures.

■ Put risk into perspective. Altering at a young age may have only a slight effect on the incidence of disease, and the increase in incidence will be breed-related. If the risk increases from 1 in 20,000 to 2 in 20,000, you are still better off spaying or neutering your dog.

■ Cat owners, your decision is easy. Spaying or neutering before 5 or 6 months of age is still best, no matter what the breed or mix. ■

Pets of the Week

>> Cowboy is a neutered, 1-year-old American bulldog/boxer mix. He's a happy, silly guy who weighs about 60 pounds.

>> Curious Georgie is a neutered, 1½-year-old dachshund/Chihuahua mix who weighs about 8 pounds and is looking forward to a permanent home. He comes with his favorite toy.

>> Pumpkin Dump-lin' is a spayed, 3-year-old blue Abyssinian mix who has a beautiful ticked coat and loves to play.

>> Yuri is a neutered, deaf, 4-year-old dachshund mix. About 18 pounds of love and affection, he's quiet, housebroken, leash and crate trained, sleeps in his own bed. He likes other household pets and loves treats.

A GUIDE TO THE LOCAL BUSINESS & REAL ESTATE INDUSTRIES

“There is no ego problem, that’s how we work together.”

Tom, Stewart, Gary and John Matter of Matter Brothers Furniture & Design

VANDY MAJOR / FLORIDA WEEKLY

Brothers in business

Siblings share values for success

BY ROGER WILLIAMS
 rwilliams@floridaweekly.com

You’ve heard of Cain and Abel, of course — the Old Testament brothers who tried to go into business together, and failed.

That is not the story Florida Weekly brings you here, about brothers (and families) who not only try but succeed beyond all expectation when they go into business together.

It happens regularly along the Gulf Coast, with names that originally hailed from places like Michigan and Ohio and Fort Myers and Punta Gorda and now stand as near-synonyms for Southwest Florida, from Naples to Sarasota: Jensen and Matter and Galloway and Germain and Wotitzky. There are more, of course, many more.

And even though there are variations on the theme, they all seem to have one thing in common:

“There is no ego problem, that’s how we work together,” says a self-deprecating Gary Matter, whose four older brothers — Stewart, David, Tom and John — join him in heading Matter Brothers Furniture & Design, based in Naples and with stores in Fort Myers, Pinellas Park and Tarpon Springs.

Ditto for the three eternally merry Jensen brothers, owners and operators of Jensen’s Twin Palm Resort & Marina on

MONEY & INVESTING

Entering and exiting movie theaters and equity markets

took their seats never even pondered the need for an exit door. They never even considered their seat location relative to an exit door.

This, too, is a bit like leaving the U.S. equity market when there is a crash, a crisis, chaos, etc. There is a rush to create liquidity and leave the market. Since many have never been faced with this kind of crisis and they never made plans for an emergency exit from the markets, they are in confusion about what to do.

Bear market corrections happen as well, and most investors have no plan how to handle an equity crisis.

Logic suggests that a worn-out, old theater might have greater probability of a safety challenge. Likewise, logic suggests that a worn out equity bull market definitely has greater probability of peaking and a bear market emerging.

When is it time to worry that the current equity bull is old and worn-out? Mostly possibly now.

The phrase "long in the tooth" has been overused to describe the current bull market. The website WiseGeek.com paints a picture of this idiom's meaning and history.

"The main theory behind the meaning of this phrase is that it has to do with determining the age of horses. Horse teeth grow more prominent with age, and at the same time, the gums recede. As a result, an older horse will appear to have long teeth. Many people would examine the teeth of horses before they purchased them in order to determine the horse's age."

And over time, the idiom has come to refer to the age of people and to the age of bull markets.

One way to determine if a bull market is really long in the tooth is by looking at how long (in calendar days) and how high (in percentages) the bull runs after the old/previous high has been taken out.

For example, the prior high in the S&P was October 2007 at 1576; that high was taken out April 10, 2013 when the S&P closed at 1587. And the question to be posed is: "How much farther in time and percentage gain before the peak — before the onset of a new bear market?"

The table "reflects what (was) found upon focusing on the 13 bull/bear instances, since the S&P 500 was inaugurated in the 1950s, in which, following a bear market... a new high (was reached)." (Market Watch, Mark Hulbert, Feb. 28, 2013, "Would new Dow record set bear market trap?")

So, since 1954, how many calendar days have passed between the date of a new market high and the eventual market peak?

1. The best case was an additional 711 calendar days.
2. The worst case was an additional 132 days.
3. The median was 417 (and preference is given to the median as it takes out the outliers.)

From April 10, 2013, the bull market has continued another 281 days through Jan. 15, 2014, the most recent peak.

So, since 1954, what percent additional gain was realized between the date of a new market high and eventual market peak?

1. The best case was an additional 222 percent.
2. The worst case was an additional 2 percent.
3. The median was 18 percent (and preference is given to the median as it takes out the outliers.)

From April 10, 2013, the bull market has gained another 17 percent through Jan. 15, 2014, the most recent peak.

This "long tooth" might keel over any day — and it might set a new record. But a reality-based investor will not turn a blind eye to these statistics which infer probability of events. A retiree, who thought recouping the loss of 2008-9 might not happen in his/her lifetime, will certainly take heed.

Investors should prepare their portfolio for the inevitable equity decline as each and every prior bull market has been followed by a bear market.

Talk to your investment adviser and seek counsel from experts in specific areas of investing as some aspects of investing are broad-based and other areas require specialization and specific investment licenses. ■

How to do business with local governments

The Small Business Development Center at Florida Gulf Coast University hosts "Doing Business with Collier County Government Agencies" from 9-11:30 a.m. Friday, Feb. 21, at the Greater Naples Chamber of Commerce headquarters, 2390 Tamiami Trail N. Panelists are Joanne Markiewicz, interior purchasing director for Collier County;

Jed Secory, purchasing manager for the city of Naples; and Lina Upham, purchasing analyst for the city of Marco Island. Business analyst Larry Trowel will moderate the discussion.

Attendance is free and open to all. To register, call 745-3700 or visit www.sbdseminars.org. ■

How to turn challenges into achievements

The Center for Nonprofit Excellence at Hodges University presents "Turn Lead into Gold: Your Future Depends on It," from 9:30-11:30 a.m. Thursday, Feb. 27, at the university's Naples campus, 2655 Northbrook Drive. Presenter Dave Fleming, chief strategic officer for the Southwest Florida Community Foundation, will discuss how businesses can use challenges as the raw materials for high performance and achievement rather than as obstacles that block progress and increase frustration.

Registration is $35. For more information, call 513-1122 or email the Center for Nonprofit Excellence at cne@hodges.edu. ■

Leadership Collier accepting applications

As the Leadership Collier Foundation prepares to celebrate its silver anniversary, the program is accepting applications for the 2015 Leadership Collier class. Members will meet for 10 full-day sessions between September and March. Tuition is $2,100. Applications are due by April 18.

The primary objective of Leadership Collier is to educate local business leaders about the societal and economic challenges facing the community today and to promote their involvement in civic issues.

The 25th anniversary celebration takes place from 1-5 p.m. Saturday, April 12, in the ASG Software Solutions hangar at the Naples Airport. All graduates of the Leadership Collier, Growing Associates In Naples and Youth Leadership Collier are invited. Guest speaker will be alumni Gen. Peter Pace (Ret.) USMC, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. The occasion also will serve as the joint graduation of the 2014 Leadership Collier and GAIN classes. In addition, the foundation will present its annual Distinguished Alumni Award.

Registration is $60 before March 1 and $75 thereafter. Registration closes March 28. Tickets are available at www.napleschamber.org/events.

Stock Market Jitters?

The Dow Jones Industrial Average ("the Dow") fell by 878 points in January, losing 5.3 percent of its value. (The S&P 500 sank 3.6 percent.) If your portfolio receives a 5 percent haircut in a single month, you might hyperventilate. Don't. Here's what to do instead:

Take a deep breath, and remember that the stock market never goes up in a straight line, and that over the long run, it has always gone up. Successful investors need patience and perspective.

Separate what you can control from what you can't. If the market plunges or a company you own cuts its dividend, you have no control over that. All you can do is reassess the long-term health of your portfolio or the prospects of that particular company, and decide whether you want to make any adjustments. That's your sphere of control.

Focus on the businesses behind the stocks. Some will fall for good reason, such as if their products are not selling well, their debt is soaring or their profit margins are shrinking. Others will dip for no particular reason. Worry about long-term problems facing companies, but don't fret too much about short-term issues.

Review the valuations of the stocks in your portfolio. Ask yourself whether the current valuations make sense, given the companies' earnings power and growth rates. For every stock you own, ask: "If I didn't own this stock today, would I want to buy it at its current price?" Concentrate your money on your best investment ideas, and don't invest where you have little confidence. Why park money in your 45th-best idea when you could add money to one or more of your top 10 ideas?

Don't track your portfolio on a minute-to-minute basis and watch less financial news. Remember that Warren Buffett has said he wouldn't mind a stock market that opened only once a year.

Whenever the market dips or dives, remember to stay calm and focused, and you'll make better decisions. Consider looking for new bargains, too. ■

My Dumbest Investment

A Cheap Lesson

As a total newbie, I invested in a stock based on news announcements, which more careful reading would have shown me came from the company itself. It bragged about a new tablet, and then announced a 3-D printing acquisition and a new CEO with experience in 3-D development.

I finally sold the shares for around $0.04 each. The company isn't even on the main stock exchange. So, live and learn. It was a cheap lesson. (Thank heavens that my brokerage charges only $7 per trade.)

— D.W.R., Bellevue, Wash.

The Fool Responds: Ouch. That stock has fallen to $0.03 per share now. Stocks trading for less than about $5 per share are penny stocks — notoriously volatile and risky. It's fine to read information supplied by a company, but collecting outside opinions is valuable, too, as is studying its financial statements, looking for actual profits and growth.

Using inexpensive brokerages is smart, as there are many good ones. (We offer an overview of some solid brokerages at broker.fool.com and guidance on how to choose one that will serve you well.) ■

Last week's trivia answer

I trace my roots back to 1919, when the guy I'm named after bought the Mobley Hotel in Cisco, Texas. Over the years, I bought the Plaza, Waldorf-Astoria and Roosevelt hotels. (Roosevelt rooms were the first to offer TVs.) Today I'm one of the world's largest hotel companies, with more than 4,000 properties and more than 650,000 rooms in 90 nations and territories. My brands include DoubleTree, Embassy Suites, Conrad, Hampton, Homewood Suites, Home2 Suites, and my own name, which is the most recognized hotel brand in the world. I employ more than 300,000 people. Who am I? (Answer: Hilton Worldwide) ■

Can't Pay? File Anyway

Q If I can't pay my taxes on time this year, what should I do?

— G.N., online

A Whether you pay on time or not, be sure to file your return on time. Failing to file leads to stiffer penalties than simply underpaying. Meanwhile, you do have some options, which the IRS itself lays out at its irs.gov website.

For starters, you can call the IRS at (800) 829-1040 to request a brief extension. You can also submit an Online Payment Agreement application with the IRS, which may permit you to set up an installment payment plan. Offline, submit Form 9465 or call the number above to see about an installment plan.

Paying by credit or debit card is also possible, but it's not a smart move if the debt is going to remain unpaid for a long while, racking up interest charges at perhaps 20 percent or more annually. (Note that credit card service providers will also charge a "convenience" fee, which can be rather inconvenient.)

Your bank might loan you money, too, possibly charging you less than the IRS' interest and penalties.

If you receive a bill from the IRS, don't disregard it, as it could make your problems worse and might lead the IRS to take collection action. To minimize penalties and interest charges, pay as much as you can on time and pay the rest as soon as possible.

Q Is it too late for me to refinance my mortgage?

— K.R., Detroit

A Rates have been inching up over the past year, but they're still very low. Depending on your current mortgage's interest rate and some other factors, refinancing may still be a profitable idea. Learn more at fool.com/how-to-invest and bankrate.com. ■

Name That Company

I trace my roots back to 1927. Westinghouse Electric bought me in 1995, bought Infinity Broadcasting in 1996, and in 1997 took on my name as its own. Today, based in New York City, I'm a mass media powerhouse. My brands include Simon & Schuster publishing, Showtime Networks and Smithsonian Networks, among others. I own America's most-watched TV network, one of the world's largest entertainment content libraries, dozens of TV and radio stations, and a billboard advertising business, among other things. I rake in about $15 billion annually, and my logo is a body part. Who am I?

Know the answer? Send it to us with Foolish Trivia on the top and you'll be entered into a drawing for a nifty prize! ■

The Motley Fool Take

A Stock for Your Shopping Cart

Some find Amazon.com's (Nasdaq: AMZN) stock too expensive now, but plenty believe it still has lots of room to grow. Remember, too, that the stock has long been called overvalued, while it has averaged double-digit gains for many years.

So what will fuel the company's growth in coming years? Amazon keeps entering new markets and building on existing ones, such as with its Pantry packaged goods business, set to launch this year. The company generates about 40 percent of its revenue internationally, and its operations in emerging markets such as China and India offer great potential.

Amazon continues to gain market share in its relatively high-margin third-party business, signing up more merchants and reducing shipping times by placing more fulfillment centers near major U.S. cities. It's a significant player in cloud computing, too, and its Kindle business has been quite successful. Amazon's "Prime" service, with more than 20 million members, includes video streaming and is a threat to Netflix. There's even speculation that Amazon.com could become a major smartphone seller.

As more consumers across the globe do more of their shopping online, Amazon and its shareholders are positioned to benefit. It's not a stock for the risk-averse, but you might want to consider adding at least a few shares to your portfolio. (The Motley Fool owns shares of Amazon and Netflix and its newsletters have recommended both.) ■

Captiva Island. “We tap into things we learned from our customers — for example, we met the Matter brothers early on after we moved to Captiva (in the late 1970s), and figured, heck, if they could get along with each other surely we could, too,” says Dave Jensen.

“And then there’s our guests, like World Wrestling Federation superstars Mike Rotonda and Barry Windham, who are brothers-in-law,” he adds. “They taught us that when verbal communication fails, use the headlock maneuver.”

No need for that, however — not if a sibling team is imitating the Matter Brothers.

“We all get along well,” says Gary. “We like to spend free time together, with our families. This is as much about camaraderie, as anything. None of us is trying to be the lead dog. We give each other the leeway and respect to make decisions.”

Some families — one at least, the Germain brothers, including Steve, Rick and Bob — operate businesses so big that they divide up duties and live in different places.

The Ohio-based company, founded in 1947 by their grandfather, established Florida roots when their father, the late Bob Germain, made Naples his home. It includes some 17 dealerships, three of them in Florida, along with such ventures as Germain Racing and Germain Properties of Naples. That one is managed by the brothers’ sister, Susan Germain Maahs.

The Galloway family, meanwhile, has stayed closed to home while expanding an automotive business founded in 1927 — now Sam Galloway Lincoln-Ford — when Sam Jr.’s grandparents knew Henry Ford, Harvey Firestone and Thomas Edison.

Nowadays, although Sam Jr. continues to work, his sons, Sam III and Robert, along with daughter Katherine, all play pivotal roles in the company — and the community, like all of these brother (and sister)-run businesses. Whether it’s the American Cancer Society, the Community Cooperative Ministries (Soup Kitchen) or the Edison & Ford Winter Estates, almost a million people now living in Southwest Florida — about 950,000 more than lived here 87 years ago — benefit directly or indirectly from their largess.

“We do it,” Sam Jr. told Florida Weekly last year, “because we believe it’s the right thing to do.”

Which is also the ethic of Punta Gorda’s venerable and now generations-old law firm, Wotitzky, Wotitzky, Ross & McKinley.

“Our values are steeped in the tradition of faithfully serving our clients and community,” according to the website, www.wotitzkylaw.com.

Their values are also steeped in the tradition of sticking by each other, which is what Ed Wotitzky’s late father and uncle, Frank and Leo, did after Frank Wotitzky founded the firm following his graduation from the University of Florida Law School, in 1940.

A native through and through, he and his brother passed on their sense of a life that combines both business virtues and personal virtues to Frank’s son (named for Frank’s brother) Ed Wotitzsky, also a Gator by education in both undergraduate and law school, and now the firm’s expert in real property, condominium, community association, commercial, construction, real estate, zoning and planning and business law.

Perhaps that history and deep-rooted sense of community lends an extraordinary extra energy to Mr. Wotitzky: His community work is both broad in scope or deep in reach.

At various times he has served on the Peace River Basin Board of the Southwest Florida Water Management District; Boy Scouts of America, Southwest Florida

Council; the Executive Council; United Way of Charlotte County; the Charlotte County Charter Review Commission; American Red Cross, Charlotte County chapter; the Charlotte Local Education Foundation; Charlotte Behavioral Healthcare; and the Punta Gorda Chamber of Commerce.

But for sheer devotion as families, not just as business partners, we can look back to the Matter and Jensen brothers. What do these brothers do when they’re not working (which is infrequently, in some cases)?

“We all enjoy the outdoors,” says Gary. “We love to go to the Keys and fish. We like to head out west in our RVs, we like to play golf and do things — those are our passions.”

For the Jensens, sometimes working is playing — and like the Matters, it means playing outdoors.

“We used to argue about who would be the lucky one to pump gas (into a boat) or dip shrimp for a (fishing) customer, because it is just so darn beautiful here,” Dave says.

But for any of them — for Dave, John or Jim Jensen, or for Gary, Stewart, David, Tom or John Matter, and probably for the others, as well — there’s something even better than the paradise of sun-blached beaches and golf courses and the vast reaches of salt or fresh fishing waters that surround residents of the Sunshine State: that’s family, of course.

“We have a unique, or at least a rare combination (of personal and professional),” explains Gary Matter. “If you saw us, you would think we are best buddies.”

When brothers working together works like that, nothing is better, acknowledges Dave Jensen.

“We all know we have each other’s backs,” he says.

But what about Cain and Abel? What advice does he have for other siblings (and we know they’re out there) who might be considering a business venture together?

He shows no hesitation. “Go for it,” Dave says.

After all, if it doesn’t work you can always use the headlock maneuver. ■

WEEK OF FEBRUARY 20-26, 2014

A GUIDE TO THE LOCAL REAL ESTATE INDUSTRY

Grand opening of new model in Fiddler's Creek

Homebuilder D.R. Horton hosts a grand opening of its lakefront Madison model home in Chiasso at Fiddler's Creek from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 22. Entertainment and refreshments will be provided from 1-3 p.m.

The one-story Madison has three bedrooms plus den, formal living and dining areas and four baths in 3,246 square feet of air-conditioned living area. The bedrooms are situated in separate corners of the home to ensure privacy, and the den is large enough to accommodate an alternate fourth bedroom. There is also an outdoor kitchen and a two-car garage.

Upgrades in the new model include cherry wood cabinets with a chocolate glaze in the kitchen and baths, and granite countertops throughout the home. The living areas have Travertino tile laid on a brick pattern; the den has Crystal Cove wood flooring. Ceiling fans and whole house plantation shutters also are included in the model.

The base price for the Madison is $586,990.

In the Veneta section of Fiddler's Creek, Chiasso has 59 single-family home sites. Five floor plans are available, ranging from 2,583 air-conditioned square feet to 3,522 air-conditioned square feet.

In addition to the Madison, one other fully furnished model is currently open for viewing. The Washington encompasses 2,788 air-conditioned square feet and has three bedrooms plus den, 3½ baths and a great room as well as formal living and dining rooms. The model was built with an optional three-car garage.

Base price of the Washington is $568,990.

The entrance to Fiddler's Creek is off Collier Boulevard between Naples and Marco Island. Amenities include the 54,000-square-foot clubhouse, a lagoon-style swimming complex, tennis courts, tot lot and casual and elegant restaurants.

For more information, call 732-9300, stop by the information center at 8152 Fiddler's Creek Parkway or visit www.fiddlerscreek.com. ■

House Hunting:

1637 Chinaberry Way
Banyan Island in Grey Oaks

This stately residence by Frey Homes in the Banyan Island neighborhood in Grey Oaks has lake, fairway and beautiful bougainvillea views made even more expansive by the higher foundation on which it was built. The impeccably maintained, cheerful interior enjoys an abundance of light and feels warm and inviting throughout. In almost 5,000 square feet under air, there are four bedrooms plus den, 5½ baths; his-and-her baths in the master suite; and a six-burner Viking stove, two dishwashers, a custom hammered-copper range hood and a walk-in pantry in the kitchen. There's also an outdoor kitchen and motorized screens in the partially covered lanai.

Residents of the 26-home Banyan Island community have had pavers installed on both streets, and there are three beautifully landscaped floral focal points in the neighborhood. Owners' golf carts are permitted on course, a rare amenity.

Ruth Bethem of Downing-Frye Realty has the listing for $2.86 million. Call 777-7007, email ruth@ruthbethem.com or visit www.ruthbethem.com. ■

Oh, la, la! Clive Daniel Home celebrates all things French

Clive Daniel Home welcomes Jacques Wayser of French Heritage elegant French furnishings from 3-5 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 27. Mr. Wayser will present products from his Avenue and Maison lines and explain their origins. Many of the pieces are entirely bench-made using centuries-old techniques.

The afternoon will also feature models from Escales Paris, a new boutique at Waterside Shops, strolling through the showroom in French couture with a causal feel to fit Naples' clientele. A drawing will be held for a fragrance gift, and Saks Fifth Avenue will present beauty tips with French cosmetics and gifts for guests as well as a drawing for a "pretty party." One guest will win a travel voucher from Betty Maclean Travel.

"This will be the ideal opportunity for Francophiles to gather in a beautiful setting of French furniture, food, fashion and cosmetics," says Kris Kolar, Clive Daniel Home vice president of merchandising and interior design. The furniture showroom will host a trunk show of 50 pieces from French Heritage's Avenue and Maison collections through Sunday, March 9.

Clive Daniel Home is at 2777 Tamiami Trail N. in Naples. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday-Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information, call 213-7879 or visit www.CliveDaniel.com/events. ■

 Discover a host of design inspirations for your home with one stop at the Miromar Design Center, where the 2014 Designer Dream Rooms remain in place through Saturday, March 8. Included is a bedroom designed by Vivian Armenti at the Henredon Interior Design Showroom, above, that exudes sophisticated glamour and incorporates pieces in gold and black finishes from the Celerie Kemble Collection. There's also a dreamy luxury spa bath at Richlin International and an amazing outdoor living room at Jardin De Ville, left, that seamlessly blends indoors and out. The center is at 10800 Corkscrew Road, I-75, Exit 123, in Estero. The exercise room

Vanderbilt Country Club fitness center completed

BCBE Construction has completed a new 5,000-square-foot fitness center at Vanderbilt Country Club, a project that also involved Humphrey Rosal Architects, Club Design Group interior designers, mechanical engineers Energy Concepts of Southwest Florida, Community Engineering Services civil engineers and the Vanderbilt Community Association board members.

The center has a maximum capacity of 196 people and includes an exercise room with state-of-the-art equipment, men's and women's locker rooms, comfort suites and an aerobics studio. Residents will be able to participate in golf fitness programs, cardio and strength training classes as well as a variety of aerobics classes.

BCBE Construction continues with the renovation of the main clubhouse at Vanderbilt Country Club, a private bundled golf course community on 320-plus acres. The community is designed for 800 estate homes, villas, carriage homes and condominiums. For more information, visit www.vanderbiltcountryclub.com. ■

Builders Care receives donation from Minto

Minto Communities is donating $100 from each home sale at its new Bonita Isles community in Bonita Springs to Builders Care, the nonprofit charitable arm of the Lee Building Industry Association. The association provides emergency repairs and construction services to elderly, disabled and economically disadvantaged people who are unable to obtain home repairs through traditional means. To date, Lee BIA Builders Care has put more than $2.4 million in construction services back into the community at no cost to homeowners in need.

Minto recently donated $2,200 to the cause. The funds will provide wheelchair ramps, handicap accessibility, widened doorways and roof and air-conditioning repairs, among other things. In addition, the developer is donating its services and resources to complete a large residential renovation project for a qualifying homeowner in Lee County.

Builders Care enlists the volunteer services of Lee BIA members and leverages grants and donated materials to provide construction and remodeling services to qualified homeowners throughout Lee County. Certified Building Partners include Stock Development. Major supporters include Cape Coral Plumbing, Ferguson Enterprises, Harbor Springs Building Company, Nilles Design Group, Priority Marketing of Southwest Florida, Sunset Air and The Aubuchon Team of Companies.

For more information, call 938-0056 or visit www.LeeBuildersCare.org. ■

Harbourside, Iron Star are at home in Fairgrove at Talis Park

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

The Fairgrove neighborhood within the North Naples community of Talis Park is an enclave of 24 home sites with golf course, water and preserve views. Only five home sites remain available for purchase.

Homes in the “single-loaded” neighborhood all face south and are on the same side of the street; Fairgrove’s views to the north include a Talis Park preserve and a golf course in an adjacent community.

Being built by Harbourside Custom Homes and Iron Star Luxury Homes, the Italian Renaissance designs in Fairgrove honor the more traditional view of Naples’ architecture and are joined by a Spanish eclectic style. Plans range from 3,100 square feet to 4,000 square feet and are priced from $1.25 million.

Seven resident-ready homes are available and include furnished models, unfurnished residences and residences in varying stages of construction, allowing buyers to choose when they wish to engage in the buying process and the degree to which they prefer to be involved with feature and finish selections.

Iron Star’s fully furnished La Villa Sul Verde model has an interior designed by Charlie Hansen and Rebekah Errett-Pikosky of Clive Daniel Home.

In the great room, white beams suspended from the soaring 28-foot ceiling provide detail that complements a wrought iron and wood chandelier. The ceiling detail continues in the double-island kitchen that features white perimeter cabinetry, a grey-toned marble backsplash extending to the ceiling, island bases finished in weathered grey, quartz countertops with grey veining and stainless steel Viking appliances.

The La Villa Sul Verde’s 3,506-square-foot floor plan includes three bedrooms, 3½ baths, a dining room, bonus room, three-car garage and an outdoor living area with a covered lanai, outdoor kitchen and bar, a pool with fire bowls, a negative-edge spa and an open-air cabana with a fireplace.

Under way soon

Iron Star expects to begin construction of its Villa Grande and Casa Bella residences in Fairgrove this spring.

The Villa Grande will offer 3,766 square feet with four bedrooms, five baths, formal living and dining rooms, a study, gourmet island kitchen, and a three-car garage. One of the guest bedrooms is in a detached cabana that opens to a lanai with a fireplace and a spacious pool deck with a custom-designed pool and spa.

The Casa Bella is a 3,137-square-foot, three-bedroom, four-bath residence with a massive great room, dining area and kitchen space, as well as a den, a three-car garage, a spacious covered lanai with a fireplace and a custom-designed pool and spa. The kitchen includes counter-height bar seating, a café area and a breakfast nook.

Pricing for both the Casa Bella and the Villa Grande will be determined prior to construction start.

are bringing a light, sophisticated look to the residence’s 3,175 square feet of living area that includes a great room and three bedrooms, 3½ baths, a study, a formal dining room, a kitchen with a wrap-around island and raised bar, an outdoor living area with a covered lanai, multiple seating areas, an outdoor kitchen, a fireplace, a pool and spa, and a three-car garage. Flooring throughout the living areas will be 12-by-24-inch porcelain tile with shades of taupe, Harbourside Custom Homes’ first Villa d’Este model in Fairgrove at Talis Park sold the day it opened. A new Villa d’Este model is expected to open this month.

Residences in Fairgrove at Talis Park overlook the fairways and greens of a golf course that consistently ranks among the top 20 in Florida.

while the study will have wood flooring.

The Villa d’Este is priced at $1.895 million with furnishings and options.

Harbourside has begun construction of its 2,767-square-foot Aviano model and expects the residence to be completed by third quarter of 2014. The model will be priced at $1.25 million.

Harbourside also expects to break ground on its 3,935-square-foot Casa Arianna in March. The great room floor plan includes four bedrooms, five full baths, a formal dining room, a spacious island kitchen with a breakfast nook, a study, a craft room, a split three-car garage and a large outdoor living area overlooking Talis Park’s Greg Norman-Pete Dye designed golf course. The Casa Arianna is priced at $1.995 million. ■

House Hunting:

6171 Lancewood Way

Whether you're in search of a man cave, an in-laws' suite or just a space where you can escape to catch your breath, this home is perfect. The property is actually two homes for the price of one. The 4,118-square-foot main house has three bedrooms, 2½ baths, a quaint breakfast nook and a cozy family room with gas fireplace overlooking the pool. A game room separates it from the 1,459-square-foot guesthouse that has two bedrooms, two baths and a large, open great room with vaulted ceilings and wood flooring. Get away from the hustle and bustle by sitting by the pool with a waterfall, basking in the sun and enjoying the view of the 2.27 manicured acres.

This property is listed at $824,000. For more information, call Beth Brown with Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate at 262-7131 or visit www.floridamoves.com. ■

In The Center Of It All!

Final phase just released. Last chance to experience lakefront luxury living in the heart of Bonita Springs.

BRING THIS AD IN NOW TO SAVE $5,000 TOWARDS THE PURCHASE OF YOUR NEW HOME!***

Minto is proud to introduce the Salerno Model at Bonita Isles during the 2014 Parade of Homes

The Salerno / 2,080 a/c sq. ft. / 2 Bed / Den / 2.5 Bath / 2 Car Garage

During the Parade of Homes now through March 2nd the purchase of a new Minto home earns you $5,000 towards closing costs or options.*

Just minutes from Coconut Point Mall and North Naples, Florida's preeminent homebuilder has created a private lakefront oasis. This is the last phase and last chance to experience Bonita Isles and the Island Club, a lavish island-style amenity center featuring a state-of-the-art fitness area, tennis, resort-style pool and expansive lanai with outdoor grill.

No CDD Fees at Bonita Isles!

Unlike many of our competitors, Bonita Isles has been developed without utilizing Community Development District (CDD) funding. This means you won't see annual CDD assessments on your tax bill, which saves you thousands of dollars over the life of your home! Once you compare, the choice is clearly Minto.

Only one home still available in Marsala at Tiburon

Tiburon's Marsala neighborhood is nearly sold out: Only one home is available in the popular single-family estate neighborhood by WCI Communities in North Naples.

The available Cortez design has four bedrooms, four baths and a den in 3,822 square feet of living space. In its own wing, the owner's suite includes dual walk-in closets, his-and-her vanities, a large garden tub, comfortable sitting area and private access to one of the home's two lanais.

While the Cortez features formal dining and living rooms, the open kitchen-great room floor plan is enhanced by three sets of sliding glass doors leading to the outdoor living area.

The home also has a summer kitchen, swimming pool and three-car garage within 5,630 total square feet. Scheduled for completion in spring of 2014, the

Scheduled for completion this spring, The Cortez is the only home currently available in Tiburon's Marsala neighborhood.

Cortez home is priced at $1,190,510.

In addition to The Ritz-Carlton Golf Resort, Tiburon is home to the Tiburon Golf Club and a members-only fitness and health club. For more information, call (800) 889-7922 or visit www.TiburonWCI.com. ■

Lennar will showcase four models in Fiddler's Creek

Lennar Homes will showcase several model homes in Fiddler's Creek during the Colliers Building Industries Association Parade of Homes March 7-9.

The Florence coach home model has three bedrooms and two baths in 1,741 square feet of living space. The open design, with a living room, dining room, dining nook and covered patio all served by an angled kitchen, makes the Florence ideal for family gatherings or large social occasions. The Florence is a single-story design and has a two-car garage.

The Verona is a two-story coach home design with a three-car garage. It has 2,110 square feet of living space, with three bedrooms and two baths.

Also open in Fiddler's Creek is the Bougainvillea estate home model, with three bedrooms plus den and three baths and a total of 2,800 square feet of living space. The dining room, great room, nook and wraparound lanai are all served by an island kitchen. The master suite is separate from the guest bedrooms and has its own access to the lanai. ■

Live large in Lutgert's new villa at Grey Oaks

The Lutgert Companies has completed the Fabiana model in the Marsh Wren neighborhood of Grey Oaks. The model recently sold and will remain open for viewing through March. Construction is under way on another Fabiana model.

Overlooking the community's golf course and lake, the 3,516-square-foot villa has three bedrooms with study and 3½ baths. The home was designed and decorated by senior designer and co-owners Natalie Sorrentino and Jill Cotton of Winter Park-based SOCO Interiors.

"The approach for the Fabiana villa was to be clean and transitional with a color scheme of taupe, cream, spa blues and espresso," Ms. Sorrentino says. "Instead of using heavy crown moldings, we allow the casing and base to be interesting and different. By using straight-cut travertine in the main areas, the linear grain was shown. Adjacent to the great room, the open kitchen has espresso- and taupe-colored cabinets with a linear glass decorative backsplash. The great room features dueling sofas and a writing desk. The exteriors display a touch of the Mediterranean."

To the right of the front entryway, square columns define the dining room that has seating for eight and a view of lush flora through an expansive window.

The kitchen is open to the great room and planned for cordial entertaining and functionality with two islands, one serving as a breakfast bar with marble counter and four stools, and a separate prep island complete with a sink and clad in quartz. Other highlights include a tray ceiling, custom cabinetry with full extension drawers and under-cabinet lighting, Viking appliance package, wine cooler and Kohler sink and faucets.

Positioned left of the entryway, the study has dark wood flooring, five panel windows that draw in natural light and a custom wood ceiling.

The master suite has a soaker tub, his-and-her closets and private access to the outdoor living area. A custom mirror in a sunburst pattern hangs above the bed and floor-to-ceiling windows draw in the golf course panorama.

Planned for sustainability and energy efficiency, the Fabiana is LEED-registered and has received the Florida Power and Light BuildSmart energy-efficient certification. Other energy efficiencies include Andersen impact-resistant and insulated glass in doors, windows and WinDoor sliders; a high-efficiency, multi-zoned air conditioning system with outside air intake, dehumidifier and linear diffusers; a tankless water heater and hot water recirculation; paperless drywall; spray foam roof insulation, including loggia and garage; and block walls with high-efficiency rigid board insulation.

Outdoor features include a gas fireplace, a summer kitchen and zero-edge saline pool with sun shelf and spa.

For more information, call 261-3148 or visit the Estuary sales center at 1220 Gordon River Trail. ■

Donna Garner, seated, learned to play the accordion for her role in "Once."

'Once' upon a time there was a musical with a different kind of love story

BY NANCY STETSON

nstetson@floridaweekly.com

Sometimes, you might think there's not a place for you, but there is.

A friend told Canadian actress Donna Garner that "Once" was going to hold auditions for the first national Broadway tour. He thought she should try out for it, but she didn't think there was a role that would be right for her.

But when he showed her the list of parts, she noticed one was for a woman between 40 and 50 who could play piano and accordion. Ms. Garner fit the age range and was a professional pianist. Though she can play a number of instruments, she did not, however, know how to play the accordion.

So she immediately went out and rented a blue Hohner and set about teaching herself how.

She was in final rehearsals for "The Full Monty" in Toronto at the time.

"I had eight days before the audition," she recalls. Every minute she wasn't on stage rehearsing, she'd be in a dressing room back stage, figuring out the accordion. "I tortured my cast-mates with my accordion," she says.

Before she went to a call back audition in New York City, she bought a 1960s Silvertone accordion and had a professional lesson, "just to see if I was doing everything right."

She was.

And she got the role.

"It worked out. I guess I did OK," she says.

Winning accolades

"Once" started out as a 2006 movie. Set in Dublin, it tells the story of an Irish man, identified only as Guy, who plays on the streets and wants to make it as a musician. He meets a young Czech girl, identified only as Girl, who plays piano. She inspires his music and helps him make a demo.

Musician Glen Hansard played Guy in the movie; Maketa Irglova was Girl.

The movie became a hit Broadway show, winning eight Tony Awards in 2012, including Best Musical. In addition, it was named Best Musical by the

The Naples National Art Festival brings artists and shoppers back again and again

BY DON MANLEY

Florida Weekly Correspondent

BOB AND PATTI STERN SET UP SHOP at about 40 art shows a year, traveling the country to hawk their artistic creations.

One of the couple's favorite stops for displaying their one-of-a-kind clock-head cabinets and humanlike sculptures crafted from architectural antiques is the Naples National Art Festival, which marks its 35th anniversary this weekend.

"It's one of the most highly regarded art shows in the country," says Mrs. Stern. "I love the energy. It's such an educated, inquisitive, sophisticated crowd. It's the most the most sophisticated group of people on the West Coast."

This year's juried fine art and craft festival will feature more than 260 artists from around the nation exhibiting their handiworks at Cambier Park and along Eighth Street South on Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 22-23. The Naples Art Association hosts the event, which serves as the main source of funds for the association's education programs.

SANDY DAYS, SALTY NIGHTS

My kind of threesome

It's never easy being the third wheel, that lonely extra party at meals and get-togethers. Thankfully, I have friends such as Ethan and Melanie, the kind of good-natured, down-to-earth people who always make me feel welcome — even when I show up without a date. It helps, too, that they live a charmed life, the kind of existence I'd like to step right into: They bought their house at a good price when the market was down; he has a stable job; she's able to stay home with their toddler. Even their dog is cute. They're blessed with the kind of solid, peaceful life that makes me wish I'd hurry up and settle down.

And did I mention the food? Every time I'm over for dinner, we eat the sort of multi-course meal people used to serve before everyone starting eating out — meals you read about in cookbooks before phoning-in for Thai. Grilled steak, scalloped potatoes, strawberry parfait. Most people I know never eat that way.

In fact, I didn't know people still lived the way Ethan and Melanie live. In our over-hurried, stressed out world, I thought no one had a clean house or a well-behaved child, let alone a hot dinner on the table every night. It was, in short, my perfect fantasy.

Recently, toward the end of another one of those fantastic dinners, as the three of us sat around the table finishing dessert, the conversation turned toward celebrities: who we'd seen in what, who was looking terrible and, of course, who was hot.

"Oh, Hugh Jackman," Melanie said. "He's totally part of my celebrity threesome."

I paused, dessert spoon midway to my mouth. "Your what?"

"You know, my celebrity threesome."

She looked at Ethan for confirmation, and he nodded.

"Everybody gets one," he said. "The two celebrities you're allowed to hook up with."

"Even if you're married?" I asked. "Even if you're married," he said. "Like, mine's Jessica Biel and Jennifer Aniston."

"How about you?" Melanie asked me. "Who would your threesome be?"

Now this, I'll admit, is not a question I'm asked often. Especially not at the dinner table.

And, dear reader, I'm ashamed to admit what came to mind: our own happy threesome. Not in the way you're no doubt thinking (shame on you), but in a perfectly respectable way, one where Melanie cooks amazing dinners and Ethan does the dishes and I sit on the couch and rub their cute dog's belly. They'd retire to their room and I'd retire to mine, and in the morning Melanie would have eggs and bacon on the table by the time I got up. We'd live in their sweet house with its affordable mortgage and nicely folded towels in the bathrooms, the subtle fragrance of scented candles wafting through the nicely decorated rooms, a little Yanni playing on the stereo.

Who wouldn't want to be part of all that?

The next day Ethan sent a text to thank me for coming over.

"Hope that threesome talk wasn't too weird," he said. ■

Legendary Yale Glee Club set to bring 80 voices to Naples

The ArtsNaples World Festival and the Yale Club of Southwest Florida will host the Yale Glee Club in concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at North Naples United Methodist Church. Sponsored by Fidelity Investments, the program will feature works by Brahms, Victoria, Tavener and new works by Timothy Laciano (Yale Class of 2015) as well as folk songs, spirituals and, of course, a selection of Yale original songs. From its earliest days as a group of 13 men from the Class of 1863 to its current incarnation as an 80-voice chorus of women and men, the Yale Glee Club, Yale's principal undergraduate mixed chorus and oldest musical organization, has represented the best in collegiate choral music.

During its recent 150th anniversary season, the club's performances received rave reviews in the national press, from The New York Times ("One of the best collegiate singing ensembles, and one of the most adventurous ... an exciting, beautifully sung concert at Carnegie Hall") to The Washington Post ("Under the direction of Jeffrey Douma, the sopranos — indeed, all the voices — sang as one voice, with flawless intonation ... their treacherous semitones and contrapuntal subtleties became otherworldly, transcendent even").

One of the most traveled choruses in the world, the Yale Glee Club has performed in every major city in the United States and embarked on its first overseas tour in 1928. It has since appeared before enthusiastic audiences throughout North and South America, Europe, Asia, Australia and Africa. After a short trip to Sarasota for a concert following the performance in Naples, the Glee Club will embark on a tour to Cuba.

Jeffrey Douma has served as music director of the Yale Glee Club since 2003. He also serves as professor of conducting at the Yale School of Music, where he teaches in the graduate choral program, and as founding director of the Yale Choral Artists. He served as artistic director of the first Yale International Choral Festival in June 2012.

Tickets for the Yale Glee Club concert in Naples are $35 for premium seating, $25 for general admission. The North Naples United Methodist Church is at 6000 Goodlette-Frank Road. For more information or to purchase tickets, call (800) 595-4849 or visit www.YaleClubSWFL.org. ■

Cleveland, won the Award of Excellence in 3-D Mixed Media at last year's festival, which draws more than 20,000 attendees each year and is consistently ranked as one of the top 10 fine art festivals in the United States by Sunshine Artist Magazine.

"Part of the reason for the festival's success is we're drawing on 35 years of history," explains Shea Lindner, NAA manager of marketing and public relations. "This festival is known among collectors as one of the best."

Festival applicants are judged based artistic merit, design, vision and creativity, craftsmanship and technical competence, and marketability-booth presentation. The jurors' panel changes each year and is composed of people who have in-depth knowledge and experience in a variety of artistic mediums. Their backgrounds include working artists, educators, fine art and craft gallery owners and museum directors-curators.

Artists will compete for $5,000 in prize money divided among the winners in 14 categories: ceramics, digital art, fiber/leather, furniture, glass, graphics/printmaking, jewelry, metal, mixed media 2D, mixed media 3D, painting, photography, sculpture and wood.

Creating kinetic art

Like the Sterns, Chicago-area artist Michael Brown sees the Naples National as a highlight of the art-festival circuit. This is his fourth year to have been juried into the show.

"My experience has been wonderful," he says. "The weather has always been perfect, and everyone who comes is always happy and having a good time."

Mr. Brown's optical photo art can enable the viewer to see the passage of time by simply taking a single step. His specialties are 3D images that can be viewed with the naked eye and lenticular printmaking, an exacting and time-intensive process that blends multiple photographs into one to create images that shift with the viewer's perspective.

He describes his lenticular works as "kinetic art" and says they can depict the changing of the seasons as reflected in bucolic scenes, such as a gentle woodland stream spanned by a wooden footbridge.

He describes the lenticular screen he uses in the print making process as having a "ribbed surface like corduroy." It has the ability to refract light from angles, so what the viewer sees depends on where they stand, he adds. It's a method that was discovered about 100 years ago and is rarely used because of its expense and complexity, says Mr. Brown, who has been working with the process since 2006.

"The whole thing just fascinated me — the ability to take photography to a place that it hadn't been before." To learn more about Mr. Brown and his art, visit www.michaelbrown.com.

Whimsy in life and art

The sense of fun that infuses Mr. and Mrs. Stern's artwork is also reflected in their approach to life.

"We think that it's OK to have too much fun," says Mrs. Stern.

Marrying American antiques and architectural salvage items with "a touch of whimsy," the Sterns create sculptures that mirror the human form. "Bob and I are the American Pickers," quips Mrs. Stern.

The couple, married 28 years, discovered they shared a love of antiques when they were dating. Inspiration for their artistic approach sprang from Mrs. Stern picking up a window frame at an Ohio flea market in 1993. That eureka moment

"Giant Water Lily" by Julie Carlson

"The Three Stooges" by Patti and Bob Stern

"literally started the business," she says. Within six months, their creations were in 10 stores. "It was quite amazing," she says.

The Sterns only use American antiques and no reproductions for their pieces, reflecting their shared appreciation of 19th century craftsmanship.

"Every piece is one of a kind, made from antiques," says Mrs. Stern. "It never happens twice."

She says they log 30,000-35,000 miles a year traveling the art festival circuit and enjoy every stop.

"We try to get people involved in the fun," she says. "It's all about the fun."

A connection to nature

Julie Carlson doesn't have to venture far to find inspiration for the floral designs, trees and botanical scenes she lushly depicts in her oil paintings.

All it takes is venturing out her door and onto the verdant grounds that surround her home Bonita Springs home of 11 years.

"When I stepped foot on this property, I knew I was connected to it without even seeing the house," says Ms. Carlson. "I knew that I belonged here."

With Oak Creek running along two sides and the Imperial River nearby, the property is home to mature oaks, palms, mangrove, tangerine and other trees and abundant wildlife. The old trees are the subjects of Ms. Carlson's paintings.

"When I'm out in the woods and walking around in nature, I can feel an immediate connection to something and know that I have to paint it, just like when I stepped on the grounds here."

Motivation can strike in any local natural setting, whether it's a flower garden or the Everglades, she adds.

Ms. Carlson says she has been exhibiting at the Naples National Art Festival for so long that she no longer recalls when she began.

"It's got a wonderful reputation," she says. "People may follow you for months and they'll wait until the show to make a decision." Not only that, she adds, the possibility of selling an original is greater for her at the Naples National. ■

Artist John Leben, an exhibitor at the upcoming Naples National Art Festival, is asking the public for help coming up with a name that aptly describes the "particular poetic appeal" of his latest digital painting, above. Email suggestions to jleben@lebenart.co. The person who submits the winning name will receive a free 5-by-10-inch limited edition print of the piece (a $24 value). Be sure to include a mailing address when suggesting a name.

ARTS COMMENTARY

Barking mad, doggedly funny: 'The Hound of the Baskervilles'

nstetson@floridaweekly.com

"Never assume anything," Detective Sherlock Holmes haughtily admonishes Dr. Watson early in "The Hound of the Baskervilles."

And it's good advice — one that journalists and scientists follow, too.

But here's one thing you can safely assume: If you see "The Hound of the Baskervilles" at Florida Repertory Theatre, you will have a great time, laughing consistently throughout the show.

Arthur Conan Doyle might not recognize what's been done to his tale, however, as it's no longer serious and dramatic. Adapted for the stage by Steven Canny and John Nicholson, this "Hound" is manic, melodramatic and totally loopy.

It's a master class in funny, incorporating every type of humor there is: witty lines, puns, funny walks, unusual costumes, obviously fake beards, strange accents, physical humor and sight gags. (For example, the Baskerville coat of arms is a paw print.)

Is it silly?

Yes. Decidedly so.

But it's also smart.

Designer Robert F. Wolin has created a set within a set within a set, with a series of diminishing proscenium arches. This not only echoes the show's play-within-a-play, but has a telescoping effect, giving the stage an even more intimate feel.

The outermost arch, closest to the audience, contains a linked chain design and jagged triangles that suggest the teeth of blade, or a dog's choke collar ... or perhaps even the sharp teeth of a mad dog.

At the very top: a backlit silhouette of Sherlock Holmes in profile, complete with the famous deerhunter cap and pipe.

The entire show is performed by three actors who play multiple roles: Michael Satow, last seen as Mortimer Brewster in Florida Rep's "Arsenic and Old Lace"; ensemble member Jason Parrish, also from "Arsenic and Old Lace" and known for his annual performance in Florida Rep's "The Santaland Diaries"; and Wynn Harmon, who was in the 2012 Broadway production of "The Gershwins' Porgy and Bess."

Mr. Harmon has played this role before and is masterful at it: His Sherlock is intense and narcissistic, given to pontificating, then striking a majestic, thoughtful pose with two fingers to his chin. (You imagine him as teenage wannabe sleuth, spending hours in his room developing the pose in front of his mirror.) He is insufferably condescending.

Mr. Parrish's Watson is amiable but dense, which serves to make Sherlock Holmes look even more intelligent, in contrast.

Mr. Parrish has a great monologue where he complains to Holmes about the difficulty of the mystery they're trying to solve, comparing it to a jigsaw puzzle without an image on the box cover to guide you. There are "little bits of puzzle everywhere," he whines, then declares, "God, I hate puzzles!"

But this play really isn't as much about solving the mystery as it is about having fun. With "The Hound of the Baskervilles," it's the journey, not the destination, that matters.

Truthfully, I'd be hard pressed to explain precisely how the play is resolved. But I can tell you the premise:

Mr. Satow plays Sir Henry Baskerville, the only remaining heir to the Baskerville fortune. It appears that the previous heirs all have been killed, possibly by a large, mysterious dog that appears out of the dark on the moor.

If Sir Henry goes to the Baskerville manor, he may well be killed as well, but of course he naively and cheerfully goes, with Watson tagging along to protect him.

(At one point, Mr. Satow "poses" for various family portraits supposedly hanging on the walls at the manor, holding a gilt frame in front of him while mugging creatively.)

There are sight gags galore. For example, when the three initially meet, in a sauna, Sir Henry sports a white towel around his waist ... and argyle socks. Holmes and Watson show up in the sauna with thick white towels wrapped around their waists too ... but fully clothed, and dead serious.

Some of the traveling scenes highlight the actors' keen physical humor: Mr. Parrish and Mr. Satow on a coach, jiggling so much it turns into a '60s-ish shimmy worthy of Bob Fosse, or the three of them jouncing about on a train in a series of vignettes that show the passing of time.

With the exception of playing a Scottish native (and an actor named Jason), Mr. Parrish remains Watson for the length of the play — an Everyman stumbling through the action, a character the audience can relate to.

But Mr. Satow and Mr. Harmon play a variety of characters, performing quick costume changes off-stage (and sometimes on stage.) Mr. Satow runs around pantsless for some of the show; Mr. Harmon, whose Sherlock only shows up sporadically in Act II, plays a butler, a caretaker and a sister (who might in actuality be a wife). Said to be from Brazil, the sister is dressed in fiery red and black lace, complete with a fan she opens and closes with a snap.

The play is actually about three actors who are putting on a play called "The Hound of the Baskervilles," though things keep happening to interrupt them. It's in the genre of shows such as "The 39 Steps," "The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged)" and "Shipwrecked! An Entertainment - The Amazing Adventures of Louis de Rougemont (As Told by Himself)." It's quick moving and zany, with minimal sets and props and actors breaking the fourth wall to speak directly to the audience.

Director Mark Shanahan, who's directed "Baskervilles" elsewhere around the country, including New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, was also an understudy for "The 39 Steps" on Broadway. He understands this type of humor intimately and channels that through this talented trio of actors.

The play has endless light cues and sound cues — a stage manager's nightmare, but Karen Oberthal handles it with aplomb. (Example: Two characters are warned that night falls quickly on the moor. Suddenly, there's the click of a light switch being thrown, the stage grows dark and a full moon immediately appears in the sky.)

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" is wonderfully wacky, delightfully goofy and 100 percent irreverent.

It might be a grand night for singing in the venue's studio theater, where a Rodgers and Hammerstein revue is enjoying a successful run, but in the main theater, it's undeniably a grand night for laughing. ■

HOROSCOPES

■ PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You find yourself swimming in circles, looking for some way to get back on a straight course. But things get easier once you're able to refocus your energies.

■ ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your efforts in behalf of a colleague do not go unnoticed, let alone unappreciated. Meanwhile, arrange to spend more time investigating that troubling fact you recently uncovered.

■ TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Devoting a lot of time to a current career move means having less time for those in your private life. But once you explain the circumstances, they should understand and be supportive.

■ GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Organizing your many duties in order of importance should help you get through them pretty quickly. Additional information puts that still-to-be-made decision in a new light.

■ CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Lingered bad feelings over a recent misunderstanding should fade as reconciliation efforts continue. Meanwhile, vacation plans might need to be revised because of new developments.

■ LEO (July 23 to August 22) Love dominates the Lion's heart this week, with Cupid shooting arrows at single Leos and Leonas looking for romance. Partnered pairs also enjoy strengthened relationships.

■ VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) "Getting to Know You" should be the single Virgo's theme song as you and that special person discover more about one another. That workplace situation needs looking into.

■ LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might be upset at having your objectivity questioned in the handling of a dispute. But it would be wise to re-examine your feelings to make sure you're being fair with both sides.

■ SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family dispute creates mixed feelings about how you hope it will be ultimately resolved. Best advice: Stay out of it and let the involved parties work it through by themselves.

■ SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Making an effort to smooth over even the smallest obstacles now will go a long way to assuring that things run smoothly once you're set to move on with your plans.

■ CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A challenge to your authority can be upsetting, but your longtime supporters want you to defend your position so you can win over even your most adamant detractors.

■ AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Being unable to get involved in a friend's problem calls for an honest approach. Provide explanations, not excuses. Another friend might be able to offer support for your decision.

■ BORN THIS WEEK: You're known for your charm and your wisdom, and there's no one who wouldn't want you to be part of his or her life. ■

'RoboCop'

www.hudakonhollywood.com

Is it worth $10? Yes

Morality. Fairness. Loyalty. Honesty. Humanity. Family. Love.

None of the above is a word you expect to see in a review of "RoboCop," which in simple terms is about a part-man/ part-machine police officer programmed to find bad guys and bring them to justice. This easily could have been — and in the minds of some, no doubt, should have been — a mindless shoot 'em up, all action, no brain, "just provide visual effects and a high body count" type of movie.

Thank goodness it's not. Granted, the visual effects are plentiful and the body count is decent. More importantly, what's also here is a surprising layer of depth and social commentary, demonstrating real care and thought given to a story in which none is expected. In 2028, Detroit cop, good guy and family man Alex Murphy (Joel Kinnaman) is unfairly dressed down by his boss (Marianne Jean-Baptiste) because he got his partner (Michael K. Williams) shot. Alex, perhaps loyal and honest to a fault, recounts his side of the story, including details on a bad guy named Vallon (Patrick Garrow) and a leak from inside the Detroit police department.

Meanwhile, a company named OmniCorp has developed machines to provide law enforcement, but can't get government approval to allow its progeny on streets in the United States. CEO Raymond Sellars (Michael Keaton) finds himself butting heads with the conservative Sen. Hubert Dreyfus (Zach Grenier), whose legislation is blocking the robots from moving forward. The machine must have a conscience and feelings, the senator insists, which inspires Sellars to go to his creative leader, Dr. Dennett Norton (Gary Oldman), with the idea of a half-man, half-machine police officer. Coincidentally, it's around this time that Alex is the victim of a horrible explosion that leaves him severely burned, paralyzed, blind and deaf. With Alex's wife Clara's (Abbie Cornish) consent, Dr. Norton goes to work.

Instead of creating RoboCop and sending him off on a series of crime-fighting adventures tangential to the plot, director Jose Padilha and writer Joshua Zetumer remain centered on Dr. Norton and the ethical question of removing Alex's humanity. These scenes, among others, allow the audience to remain focused on Alex as a human being; if all we had were RoboCop shooting stuff up indiscriminately, it would get old fast and the story's morality would be lost.

Better, a TV journalist played by Samuel L. Jackson doesn't shy away from pushing a militaristic agenda forward. His bias is both appalling and accurate, as mainstream journalism today sometimes does similar things, albeit in a more subtle and veiled way. Mr. Jackson also mines a few quality laughs out of his bombastic character, and because he comes in small doses, he hits just the right notes that are needed.

It's always a pleasant thing to write that a movie has no business being as good as it is, because it means the filmmakers put quality thought and effort into the product. So congrats, "RoboCop," for being better than expected. Don't forget what you did well when the time comes for your sequel. ■

in the know

>> Peter Weller played Alex Murphy/RoboCop in the 1987 original. That film was made for $13 million, grossed $53 million and spawned two sequels. The budget for this reimagining is estimated at $100 million.

CAPSULES

The Monuments Men ★★★

(George Clooney, John Goodman, Matt Damon) With WWII nearing an end, a squad of older, art-loving soldiers ventures to Europe to retrieve lost/stolen art. It's a colossal bore that wastes the notable ensemble talent. Rated PG-13.

The Lego Movie ★★★

(Voices of Will Ferrell, Chris Pratt, Elizabeth Banks) An ordinary Lego figure (Mr. Pratt) is whisked off on an adventure when he's thought to be the one who will rid Legoland of evil. It's cute and silly as expected, but it's also clever and witty. This is as good a movie about Legos as we could ask for. Rated PG.

That Awkward Moment ★★★1/2

(Zac Efron, Miles Teller, Michael B. Jordan) Three dudes (Mr. Efron, Mr. Teller, Mr. Jordan) vow to stay single in New York City. Shortly after making this proclamation, however, they find women who don't tolerate their games. It's R-rated crude and funny, yet predictable and trite. Decent, just nothing to run off to. Rated R.

K.C. Schulberg with a 1958 photo of his father and uncle on the set of "Wind Across the Everglades."

Naples filmmaker will share stories about 'Wind Across the Everglades'

Naples resident K.C. Schulberg remembers when his father and uncle, Stuart and Budd Schulberg, were making their celebrated film "Wind Across the Everglades" (Warner Brothers, 1958) starring Burl Ives, Gypsy Rose Lee and a young Christopher Plummer.

The area and ambiance left a lasting impression on the young Mr. Schulberg and have inspired him now to plan a new film set in Southwest Florida. The public can hear about it and see clips from the project when the Everglades Society for Historic Preservation welcomes Mr. Schulberg at 5:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 28, at Everglades Community Church. He will also share memories and stories of the movie industry from his youth.

A screening of "Wind Across the Everglades" will follow the program. Set in the early 20th century, the film follows a game warden (Mr. Plummer) who arrives in Florida in the hopes of enforcing conservation laws. He soon finds himself pitted against Cottonmouth (Mr. Ives), the leader of a fierce group of bird poachers. The film was loosely based upon the life and death of Guy Bradley, an early game warden who in 1905 was shot and killed by plume hunters in the Everglades.

Everglades Community Church is at 102 Copeland Ave. S. in Everglades City.

Attendance is free but seating is limited. For reservations, call Marya Repko at 695-2905 or email eshp@hotmail.com. ■

'Warsaw: A Story in Song' makes Florida premier with three shows

SPECIAL TO FLORIDA WEEKLY

The idea of a musical about an episode of Holocaust history might seem unusual, until one realizes that many successful Broadway shows have dealt with serious historical topics: Russian pogroms in "Fiddler on the Roof," for example, and the French Revolution in "Les Miserables." In dealing with a serious topic, a well-written story accompanied by a richly harmonic score can result in a remarkable, moving musical drama.

Such is the case with "Warsaw: A Story in Song." Coming to Southwest Florida for two performances in March, the musical is based on the 1943 Warsaw Ghetto Uprising, the largest revolt by Jews in German-occupied Europe and a symbol of the indomitable human spirit.

The Collier/Lee Chapter of Hadasah and the Catholic-Jewish Dialogue of Collier County are bringing the Florida premier of "Warsaw: A Story in Song" to Fort Myers and Naples on Saturday, March 8, and Sunday, March 9, respectively. The musical drama has been performed to sell-out audiences at numerous venues in New York and New Jersey, including the New York Musical Theater Festival and the Museum of Jewish Heritage.

"Warsaw" tells the story of a young

Jewish man, Roman, trapped inside the Warsaw Ghetto and separated from his Catholic fiancée, Ana. They struggle to reunite against overwhelming odds as Roman tries to support his family amidst a crumbling ghetto and Nazi occupation. He is inspired to join a small group of resistance fighters in their fight for freedom and dignity.

The story of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising has been told in books, films and art, but never before as a stage musical. Composer William Wade has a prolific output that includes ballet works and orchestrations as well as the musical "Alice." Lyricist John Atkins also wrote "Redemption" and "Monster."

New York casting and stage director Jamibeth Margolis became part of the evolution of "Warsaw" when she was a script reader for the New York Musical Theater Festival. Intrigued by the score and music, she contacted Mr. Wade and Mr. Atkins in hopes of becoming part of the current production. They three have collaborated for seven years.

Ms. Margolis' mother, Ida Margolis, is co-chair of the effort to bring the "Warsaw: A Story in Song" to Southwest Florida. The younger Ms. Margolis' grandmother, Janet Moskowitz, was a Holocaust survivor who devoted her life to informing school children about her past in hopes of teaching tolerance and understanding.

The professional New York cast bringing the show to Southwest Florida includes actors who have appeared in Broadway shows such as "Phantom of the Opera," "Cats," "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Les Miserables." Mark Sanders, one of the original cast members of "Warsaw," lives in Lehigh Acres and has performed at the Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall in Fort Myers. Also appearing is Alex Crisci of Naples, a student at Pine Ridge Middle School who received acclaim for his performance in "Les Miserables" with The Naples Players.

Local audiences have three opportunities to see "Warsaw: A Story in Song":

■ 7 p.m. Saturday, March 8, at Temple Beth El, 16225 Winkler Road in Fort Myers.

■ 7 p.m. Sunday, March 9, at Temple Shalom, 4630 Pine Ridge Road in Naples.

General admission for the evening performances is $36 and the student admission is $10. Proceeds will benefit the work of Hadassah and Hadassah Medical Organization.

■ 1 p.m. Sunday, March 9, at the St. Ann Catholic Church Jubilee Center, 525 Ninth Ave. S. in Naples.

Tickets for the matinee are $25 general admission and $10 for students. Proceed will benefit the Catholic-Jewish Dialogue of Collier County and the Holocaust Museum & Education Center of Southwest Florida. This performance is dedicated to the memory of Ann Jacobson, who was a central force in the Catholic-Jewish Dialogue and the Holocaust museum.

For tickets or more information, call Ida Margolis at 963-9347 or email co-chair Rhonda Brazina at rfbraz@aol.com. ■

Like a gourmet meal, 'Murder with Ganache' will leave you wanting more

pkjason@comcast.net

■ "Murder with Ganache" by Lucy Burdette. Obsidian. 320 pages. Mass market paperback $7.99.

This fourth entry in the Key West Food Critic Mystery Series is a bit darker than the first three. It's just as enjoyable, but not so much in a laugh-out-loud way.

Restaurant critic Hayley Snow, an enchanting young woman striving to prove herself as an independent adult in her adopted home town, has a lot of bowling pins in the air at once. Can she juggle them all successfully?

Just when she needs some relief from the deadline pressures of her assignments with Key Zest Magazine, Hayley gets additional assignments, including one on the Hemingway cats, with almost immediate due dates.

What has complicated her life is her agreement to manage her friend Connie's wedding. It's just around the corner, and that means relatives and friends are piling into town and need Hayley's attention.

Among the newly arrived are Hayley's mother Janet and Janet's beau, Sam; Hayley's father and his second wife, Allison; and Allison's teenage son from her first marriage, 15-year-old Rory, whose brooding teenage angst is on display. Is it just that he doesn't want to be there? Or is something else bothering him?

Before we know what has Rory in such a distressed state, he disappears into Key West's spring break scene. After frantic searching by Hayley, the other relatives and the police, Rory is discovered beaten up and unconscious. Worse, he is found to be the last person to have been seen with a teenage girl who has turned up dead. Comatose Rory is soon the prime suspect in a murder case. When he regains consciousness, he cannot seem to remember much about what happened. Or is he just hiding the truth?

Stepsister Hayley cannot keep from leading her own investigation, often risking the wrath of the law enforcement professionals.

Rory's predicament soon brings his irascible bully of a father onto the scene. One can readily understand how the tug of war between this man and his ex-wife Allison shaped Rory's upbringing. It's amazing that Rory can function at all.

Suddenly, the wedding is called off. A confrontation between Connie's father, who unexpectedly shows up (even though they had been estranged), and her fiancé Ray leads to a meltdown of the lovers' relationship. Ray's parents, as well as all the

The constant charms in the Key West Food Critic Mystery books are, as one might expect, the attention to Key West and the attention to food — as nourishment, delight, art, business and social lubricant.

As Hayley's endeavors have her on and off her motor scooter, zipping all over the island, we become familiar with its neighborhoods, establishments and institutions. We explore the Key West lifestyle, representative character types, its paradisiacal climate and even the friction that can rough up the island's laid back cultural atmosphere. Haley is still a short-time resident of the island, and as we watch her internalize its nuanced flavors, we absorb them for ourselves.

Because writing about food — and the establishments that prepare and serve it — is Hayley's occupation, readers learn a lot about that as well. The author takes readers into a gastronomical world that keeps them alternately satisfied and hungry.

One special feature of the books in this series is the appendix of mouth-watering recipes with which each concludes.

Spritely and suspenseful, "Murder with Ganache" has a unique piquancy. Like a gourmet meal, it will leave you wanting more.. ■ other family members, are perplexed by the situation, but Ray won't talk and Connie feels betrayed and lost.

Now Hayley has even more to worry about.

Lucy Burdette gives depth to this book by dissecting the modern family in all its divorce, remarry, reshape, share kids, make nice, stay enraged, give up, try again glory and gloom. Hayley's caring yet determined nature often provides the healing salve that lowers the anxiety level and heals torn relationships. The author's background as a clinical psychologist clearly enriches her handling of this material.

history behind the place we call home.

"At Home" features the room-by-room journey of discovery of his Victorian parsonage. Mr. Bryson takes the reader into the kitchen for a discussion of nutrition and the spice trade, and the bedroom for an account of sex, sleep and death. It is an intriguing, lively narrative that will cause you to see your dwelling in an entirely new light.

Bill Bryson was born in Iowa in 1951. He moved to Britain, where he has lived for most of his adult life. In 1995, "Notes from a Small Island" became a bestseller on both sides of the pond and even triggered a celebrated television series. "At Home," originally published in 2010, is being reissued in a special illustrated edition, while his latest book, "One Summer: America, 1927," makes its debut. This is a cause for celebration.

Shortly after Mr. Bryson moved into a former Church of England rectory in rural Norfolk, he went into a rooftop space in search of a leak. Since Victorian structures often are a collection of architectural bewilderments, he was not surprised to find a secret space in the attic. This experience inspired "At Home," a fascinating excursion into the

In his new book, "One Summer: America, 1927," Mr. Bryson writes that there certain seminal years when historical events seem to almost overwhelm, and 1927 was one of them. He focuses on such happenings and personalities as Charles Lindbergh and his trans-Atlantic flight, Queens housewife Ruth Snyder and the murder of her corset-salesman husband, the antics of cigar-chomping Al Capone, baseball legends Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the flooding of the mighty Mississippi, and much more.

"At Home" and "One Summer" represent exceptional historical writing and are highly recommended. ■

We are still listening

Since I began as president and CEO of the SWFL Community Foundation, I kicked off my listening tour talking to donors, nonprofit leaders, community leaders, residents, friends and neighbors to get a wide variety of perspectives on community needs and solutions. As a stakeholder in the SWFL region, our board of trustees and I continue our promise to do our work in the 5-county region, and to listen before acting. We won't do something "about you, without you." We want to be involved, to support the causes and be part of the effective solutions. Please join the conversation by attending our round table discussions on issues, follow us on Facebook or Twitter, attend our art receptions, stop by our Community Hub, or email me at iamlistening@floridacommunity.com

PREPARE TO BE FUNDED

SWFL Community
Foundation Supports,
Walks Alongside
Regional Nonprofits

SPECIAL TO THE COMMUNITY FOUNDATION

FOCUSED ON ITS MISSION OF CREATING REGIONAL CHANGE for the common good, the Southwest Florida Community Foundation (SWFLCF) took to the highways and back roads in the region recently to deliver community impact grants totaling $440,000 to 15 agencies across Lee, Charlotte, Collier, Glades and Hendry counties.

To celebrate and highlight the great work of local nonprofits, Foundation leaders loaded into a van full of balloons, oversized checks, iMaps and lots of enthusiasm and embarked on their first-ever "regional road trip." As the van rolled up to several nonprofits, SWFLCF President and CEO Sarah Owen stepped out, megaphone in hand, heralding their arrival with: "Prepare to be funded!" as if part of a prize patrol.

Impactful to needs and causes

She and her foundation fellows were welcomed with open arms by other nonprofit enthusiasts, her signature on sweepstakes-sized checks, her smile genuinely happy.

"We have worked hard with these organizations to assure that this Foundation support would be impactful to their needs and their causes," says Owen. "We are taking money that donors have entrusted to us to put back into the community and we know that these nonprofits, who have partnered with us, will ultimately solve problems."

Scholarship Season Kicks Off with a Slam Dunk

With an eye on increasing the number of high school seniors filling out the all-important FAFSA form for free federal financial aid, the game-changer for students who otherwise couldn't afford a college education, the Southwest Florida Community Foundation's (SWFLCF) FutureMakers regional call-to-action is off to a raving start. The FutureMakers partners along with the Florida College Access Network have been huddled for months preparing for this year's graduating seniors scholarship and FAFSA season.

It was just a year ago that the Southwest Florida Community Foundation's 3-D research “That’s how everyone should feel when giving away money, contributing to the Foundation, and nonprofit organizations — happy!” she says with a bright smile.

But what is really behind the joy of distributing much-needed funding is the how and why, and the significant shift in the Foundation’s approach to solving regional issues.

In the past, the Foundation would put out a request for proposals to nonprofits, the agencies would apply, the Foundation would receive and review proposals, do its due diligence, issue checks and enable these agencies to go on and do their good works.

“The Foundation was involved in the very beginning and the very end of the funding process, but not so much in the middle,” Owen says.

With a desire to give more than grant money but rather to pack a bigger punch with grants that offer measurable community impact, the Foundation turned their process of grant selection into a big conversation. Agencies now submit letters of intent, detailing their ideas and ambitions. The Foundation brings these agencies together in what Owen affectionately calls a “compassionate shark tank.”

“Not-for-profits with similar causes, solving similar problems, come in and give 15-minute presentations about their ideas,” Owen says. “They hear each other’s proposals. For the first time, in many cases, they are able to hear what other organizations are doing and hear what they have in common. Relationships develop: ‘We’re doing similar things, maybe we could work together.’”

These compassionate-shark-tank sessions help develop ideas and give way to more organic and more robust conversations. It’s almost like geography converges in the shark tank to forge regional partnerships, to target regional approaches to solving problems. Organizations in one county meet and decide to help organizations in another county. The Foundation

“We are taking money that donors have entrusted to us to put back into the community and we know that these nonprofits ... will ultimately solve problems.”

— Sarah Owen,

President & CEO, Southwest Florida Community Foundation

starts the conversation. But the story does not stop there.

Regional collaborations

After further review of proposals, the Foundation tries to determine what collaborations will have the most impact in the region, then forms grant recipients up into “tribes,” grouping similar nonprofits with similar missions together to meet with each other throughout the year, to learn from each other, and to evaluate their progress as their partners.

“Savvy donors want to see data and measurable, impactful results,” Owen says. “They give us their time or money and they want to know what has been done to make a difference.”

In previous years, the Foundation has funded up to 30 organizations in a year, but this time the Foundation funded 15 organizations. “Our reason was to more fully fund the projects,” says Owen, explaining that if a project required a $50,000 grant, the Foundation wanted to give the full $50,000 rather than giving $10,000 to multiple endeavors, to help bring funded projects into realization.

The strategy to help nonprofits “come together” may sound like cueing up a Beatles song, but Owen says the Foundation found its inspiration by listening to donors and nonprofits committed to making change and craving a more transparent conversation.

Rather than being there at the beginning with funding and the end seeking a report, Owen says, “We want to walk alongside nonprofits throughout the whole cycle.”

As the chair of the SWFLCF board, Joe Mazurkiewicz leads the vision of the Foundation. When he looks to the fruition of impact grants, he sees collaboration among nonprofit stakeholders, but more so, he sees funded projects finding sustainability.

Mazurkiewicz describes the Foundation as a gathering point for organizations to have open dialogue, as if gathering around the water well, to discuss the best game plan to achieve sustainable solutions for Southwest Florida.

Compassionate shark tanks

He describes the compassionate shark tanks as a gathering of nonprofit professionals to explore projects from the perspective of a business mind to solve community needs.

Patti Nemazie of Grace Community Center was impressed with the shark tank sessions. The community center was able to hire three special-needs adults as a result of their $30,000 grant from SWFLCF. Before that grant, the largest gift Nemazie had received from the foundation was an amount generous enough to purchase a refrigerator/freezer.

Nemazie describes the whole process of applying for grants as “new to me,” but says, “The Foundation had a genuine interest in what we were doing. More than filling out grant applications, the Foundation was interested in our project, they wanted to know what we were doing and what we wanted to do.”

Nemazie says there was an openness to the grant selection process. It was not laborious. She felt the trust of the Foundation. And she felt its support.

Grace Community Center is putting its $30,000 grant toward its Exceptional Entrepreneurs Program. “We are creating opportunities for special-needs folks who are not able to hold a job to be productive members of society through worm farming,” Nemazie says.

The program will farm composting and fishing worms, as well as sell worm waste as an organic pesticide.

“Because of the connections we made through the Foundation, the Hendry County Library wants to help us sell our worms,” Nemazie says. “Their program was totally different from ours, but because the Foundation let you see what everybody was applying for, the library said they would help us sell our worms because their area’s a big fishing community.”

“The connections we made through the Foundation goes beyond our program.”

As impressed as Nemazie was with the shark tank experience, Joy Mahler, CEO of Big Brothers Big Sisters of the Sun Coast, has been most impressed with the tribes.

BBBS received a $45,000 grant from SWFLCF to help with their Decisions to Win Dropout Prevention Mentoring Program in Lee County high schools. The money will also go to expand the program in Charlotte County high schools.

She describes the Foundation’s grant selection process with words like “innovative,” “exciting” and “fresh.”

“I have found the tribes to be extremely helpful,” Mahler says. “We come together and talk about some similarity we are trying to reach. We may have different methodologies, but our end game is very much the same.”

“Bringing nonprofits together in smaller groups, we can really explore synergy and see what ways we can collaborate to make stronger outcomes.”

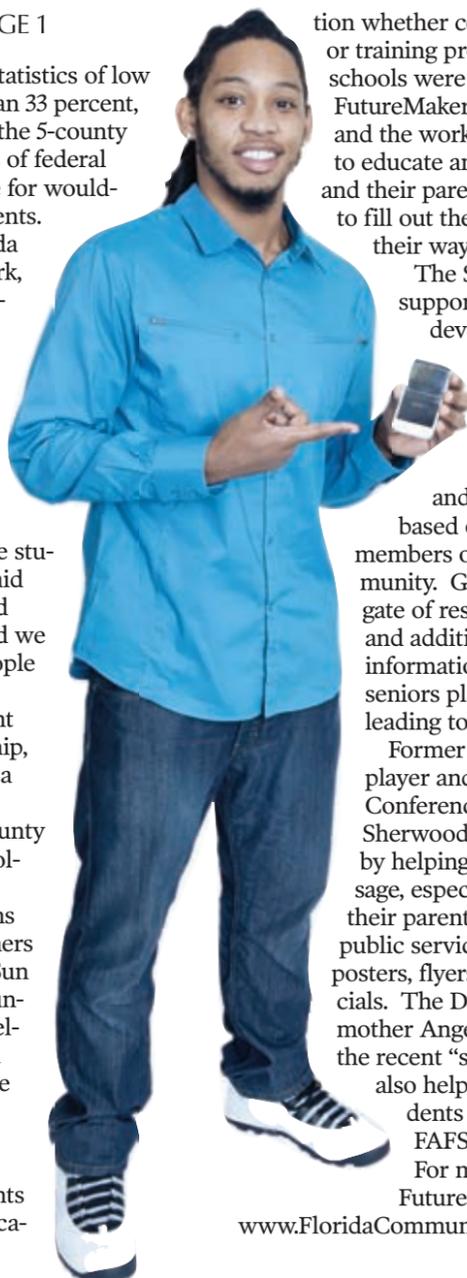

To put it simply, Mahler says the tribes are designed for “greater outcomes through collaborative effort.” Her word choice of “greater” was wise, for the Foundation’s process speaks to both meanings of the word, greater heights and greater distance. —OC effort uncovered the statistics of low FAFSA returns, less than 33 percent, in high schools across the 5-county region leaving millions of federal aid dollars on the table for would-be college-bound students. According to the Florida College Access Network, it is estimated that during 2012, Florida’s high school graduates left behind more than $100 million in Pell Grants by virtue of not completing the FAFSA form.

“We knew we had to do something for the students in our region,” said SWFLCF President and CEO Sarah Owen. “And we knew just the right people to make it happen.”

With a financial grant and dedicated leadership, the SWFLCF gathered a group of partners: The Foundation for Lee County Public Schools, The Collier County Education Foundation -Champions for Learning, Big Brothers and Big Sisters of the Sun Coast in Charlotte County and Workforce Development in Hendry and Glades counties. These organizations with hyper-local focus have symbiotic goals to get their graduating students to the next step in education whether college, trade school or training programs. Eight high schools were chosen to receive FutureMakers’ attention this year, and the work has already begun to educate and inspire students and their parents across the region to fill out the FAFSA to find their way to college.

The SWFLCF, with the support of Wells Fargo, developed GradApp, a mobile application that can be downloaded to any digital device, for students, parents and in-school mentors based on feedback from members of the education community. GradApp is an aggregate of resources, guidance and additional scholarship information to help graduating seniors plan their next big step leading to meaningful careers.

Former FGCU basketball player and 2012-13 Atlantic Sun Conference Player of the Year Sherwood Brown stepped in by helping to spread the message, especially to seniors and their parents through in-school public service announcements, posters, flyers, and TV commercials. The Dunk City dynamo’s mother Angela Brown attended the recent “season opener” to also help rally around students to start now on the FAFSA process.

KOVEL: ANTIQUES

Collectors' tastes skewing to newer artful items

BY KIM AND TERRY KOVEL

Special to Florida Weekly

Collectors and collections are getting younger. So the old 1950s favorite, Chippendale furniture, has now been replaced by 1950s Eames pieces. And 18th-century English Staffordshire ceramics are not as wanted as much as Ohio-made 20th-century Rookwood pottery. Many auction galleries are holding special auctions that feature furniture, glass, pottery, jewelry and even toys made after 1950. A unique table made by Judy Kensley McKie (b. 1944) sold at a 2012 Rago auction for $23,750. The artist started making furniture soon after she graduated from Rhode Island School of Design in 1966. She wanted to furnish her home, so she taught herself how to make one-of-a-kind pieces. By the 1980s, she was receiving national awards for her work. Her tables were made of carved and painted wood, bronze, marble and even plastic. Many resembled animals, including horses, bears and rhinoceroses. They are imaginative, often humorous and very usable. McKie is one of many studio artists who have been working since the 1950s and whose works are now included in museum collections. Collectors should look for quality in the almost-new as well as the old when going to sales.

"Arizona" is the name of this unusual side table made in 1986. Not old enough to be a legal antique, it was important enough to sell for $23,750 at a 2012 auction of 20th-century art and antiques held at Rago Arts & Auction Center of Lambertville, N.J. The table is 29 inches high and is made of painted wood, granite and copper. It is marked "JKM" for the artist Judy Kensley McKie.

Q: I have a sterling-silver bracelet and earrings that were made in Denmark. Each earring is shaped like two leaves, and the bracelet is made of links of two leaves each. The back is marked "Sterling A8K Denmark." Can you tell me who made it and what it's worth?

A: The mark actually is "A&K." It was used by Aarre & Krogh of Rander, Jutland, Denmark. The company was in business from 1949 to 1990. It's known for modernist designs of stylized leaves and flowers. Your set could sell for $200 to $250.

Q: My wife's estate included a one-liter Lalique perfume bottle that has two birds on the stopper. It is 9 inches tall and 6 inches wide and still is filled with perfume. Can you give me a value?

A: The perfume bottle was designed in 1947 by Marc Lalique for Nina Ricci's fragrance "L'Air du Temps." The clear glass bottle has fluted sides and a frosted stopper with the fragrance's iconic figural doves in flight. This 9-inch bottle is a "factice," a store display bottle. A few L'Air du Temps perfume bottles the size of yours have sold at auction for $200 to more than $500.

Q: I inherited a large neon clock from my uncle, who was a meat inspector in Los Angeles in the 1950s. It was made by the Glo-Dial Corp. and has the words "Hungarian Salami" around the dial. It has green neon lighting and is 32 inches across. The patent number is 1994950. Can you tell me the history and value of this clock?

A: The Glo-Dial Corp. was in business from the 1930s until the 1950s or later. Charles Hoffritz, who founded Glo-Dial in Los Angeles, was granted a patent for an illuminated clock dial in 1934. The dial had a black background, beveled white hands, white numerals and a neon tube concealed behind the dial. The white surfaces diffused the light, which reflected off the glass covering the dial and illuminated the numbers and hands. Advertising clocks are collectible. Your clock is worth about $400 to $500.

Q: Years ago, I bought a box full of dinnerware made with rice carefully imbedded and baked into the porcelain. The rice pieces are translucent when the piece is held toward the light. The dishes are white with blue designs and blue dragons in the middle. The bottom of the dishes are marked "Made in China," and there are Chinese characters above the mark. Can you tell me something about these dishes?

A: Although this type of porcelain is sometimes called "rice" porcelain, it's not made with rice. The porcelain is pierced to make rice-shaped holes before the first firing. Later the holes are filled with glaze and the piece is refired, creating the translucent rice-like appearance. "Rice porcelain" was first made in China in the 1300s, but the technique may have originated in Persia more than a thousand years ago. Rice porcelain also has been made in modern times. The words "Made in" on your dinnerware indicate that your dishes were made after 1915. A 20th-century rice porcelain dinner plate sells for about $10 to $15.

Tip: Do not store scrapbooks or other paper items on unlined wooden shelves. The acid in wood is harmful to paper, textiles and many plastics. Line the shelves with acid-free paper. ■

POSTER IMAGE COURTESY OF THE FORT MYERS FILM FESTIVAL

The opening-night film for the fourth annual Fort Myers Film Festival, "Alive Inside: A Story of Music & Memory," is an award-winning independent film about music therapy with Alzheimer's patients.

Last month, the film drew the Sundance audience award for U.S. documentaries.

"Alive Inside: A Story of Music & Memory" reveals a music-based breakthrough that has already transformed lives. Spearheaded by social worker Dan Cohen and captured on camera over the course of three years by filmmaker Michael Rossato-Bennett, it shows viewers how songs from a patient's past can awaken memories and emotions that have been asleep for years, sometimes decades.

Within a moment of hearing "I Get Around" by the Beach Boys, Alzheimer's patient Marylou jolts back to life, dancing around the living room and expressing a euphoria her husband hasn't witnessed since her illness took effect. Countless instances in the film provide proof that music stimulates activity in dementia-affected parts of the brain and transforms the quality of life of those often left to languish in silence.

Through revealing conversations with renowned neurologist Oliver Sacks and musician Bobby McFerrin, as well as powerful firsthand experiments conducted by Mr. Cohen in nursing homes, this groundbreaking documentary demonstrates how connecting the elderly to the music they love not only combats memory loss but also supplements a broken health-care system often indifferent to interpersonal connections.

Director Mr. Rossato-Bennett is the founder and executive producer of Projector Media, a documentary production company dedicated to inspiring conversations that investigate issues related to our cultural consciousness. "Alive Inside: A Story of Music & Memory" is Mr. Rossato-Bennett's first feature-length offering.

The Fort Myers Film Festival will be held March 19-23 at the Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall, Sidney & Berne Davis Art Center, Alliance for the Arts and Broadway Palm Theatre, with parties and dinners at Twisted Vine Bistro, a filmmakers lodge at Firestone, and breakfast panels at Bennett's Fresh Roast and

"Finally, a Gym that Believes in You More than You Do"

The reason we are one of the fastest growing fitness programs in the country is because we have a few basic beliefs. We believe that a fitness program that constantly changes and pushes you to the best of your ability is the best fitness plan yet developed. We believe we all work better together as a team, that competition helps us stay focused and accountability makes us honest.

We believe that helping you attain your goal should be our goal - and we're there every step of the way during every workout. Finally, we believe the potential of every person that steps through our door is greater than what they believe - whether you're a mother of two, a man in your 50's, a conditioned athlete or a beginner who wants to get better.

Results. Guaranteed.

Iron Tribe members are as young as six and reach to over 70. The point is this: we believe any able-bodied person can work out at Iron Tribe Fitness. That means you! You're invited to find out for yourself by calling us at phone number below.

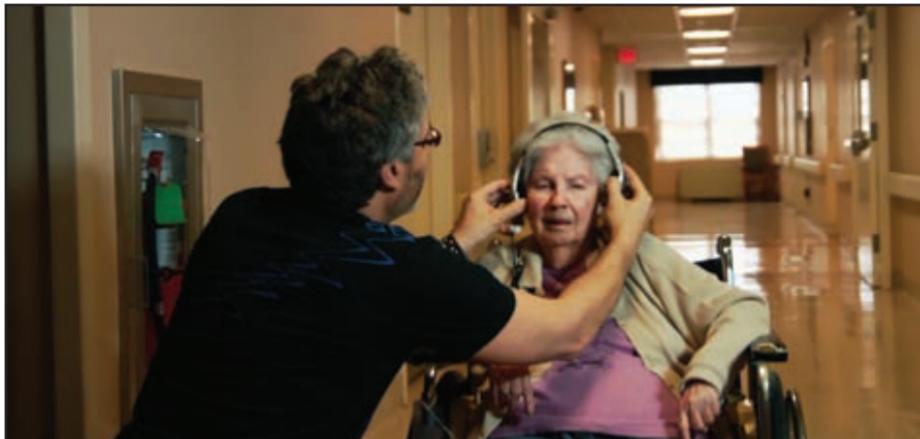

When you do, we'll make you this outrageous guarantee: If you'll give Iron Tribe Fitness just 120 days, then we'll personally buy you TV's most popular (work out at home) P90X program if you are not totally blown away with your results at Iron Tribe Fitness.

CELEBRITY EXTRA

'Reign' actress rules on TV, films and web

BY CINDY ELAVSKY

Q: I am so into the CW show "Reign," and I wondered about the actress who plays Clarissa. Can you tell me what else she has been in?

— Mary Ellen F., via email

A: Toronto native Katie Boland, 26, has been professionally acting since she was 9 years old, and is known for her roles on "The Zack Files," "Terminal City," "The Master" and a ton of other stuff. Right now at www.hulu.com, you can catch Katie in the 11-part Web series "Long Story Short," which she wrote and stars in, and co-created and co-produced (with her mother, Gail Harvey, who also directs the series).

Katie Boland

David and Linda Kasdova rode off into the sunset together, only to break up a short time later.

Q: Several years ago, there was a TV program similar to "The Bachelor." It was about an all-American boy from Texas who went abroad to find love. He met a girl named Linda, who eventually moved to Texas to surprise him. It was a nice ending to the story. Do you have info on this program and/or whatever happened to them?

— Joyce M., via email

A: The show you're thinking of is "The Next Joe Millionaire" — a follow-up to surprise hit "Joe Millionaire" — which aired on Fox in 2003. Rodeo-cowboy David Smith of Midland, Texas, went to Italy to find "true love" — by masquerading as a millionaire to a group of European women who were unaware of the show's actual premise. At the end of the season,

Q: Now that Rob Lowe is gone from "Parks and Rec," what's he got coming next?

— Paul F., The Villages, Fla.

A: Rob may have left "Parks and Rec," but he's staying with NBC. He's been tapped to star in a new pilot, a single-camera comedy called "The Pro," which centers around a golf and tennis club. Rob stars as Ben Bertrahm, a former doubles champion who is reunited with his ex-partner Bobby Welch (the hilarious Rob Riggle) after a public feud that left them both floundering in life. ■

The first national tour stops at the Barbara B. Mann Performing Arts Hall in Fort Myers through Feb. 23.

Ms. Garner's character, Baruska, is Girl's mother.

tecting her family ... She's watching her daughter raise her own daughter, and is just subtly hoping her daughter makes the right choices. She's wise sometimes, she's funny sometimes, she's bold sometimes ... She's got a ton of fire and substance to her."

Ms. Garner seems tailor made for the role. Not only does she have the acting experience, she's studied opera, so she's comfortable singing in other languages. And she's also versatile in playing various instruments. (In "Once" she also plays concertina and fiddle in addition to accordion.)

The musical has a minimalist set: an Irish pub, with chairs scattered around. The actors are also musicians, playing their own instruments, which include fiddles, cello, mandolin, ukuleles and acoustic guitars.

In addition to playing instruments on stage, the actors move in stylized ways, turning, twisting, stomping, all while playing their instruments. Choreography is by Steven Hoggett ("Black Watch," "American Idiot" and "Peter and the Starcatcher," among others).

"There is an old saying in musical theater that when your emotions are high, you're compelled to speak, and then when your emotions get to a higher level, you're compelled to sing, and then when it goes to a higher level again, you're compelled to move," Ms. Garner says. "That's what happens in this show. The movement is directly related to the emotion of the moment.

"Sometimes the movement is beautiful and graceful, sometimes it's ugly and brusque or sudden. It depends on the emotion of the moment."

Non-traditional love story

"Once" is a love story, though perhaps not a love story in the traditional Hollywood sense, Ms Garner says.

"There are a lot of different kinds of love, and not all of it involves consummation," she says. "The love that we see in this show comes out of a real mutual respect, trying to help each other achieve a higher level of understanding about their own lives."

And it's not just Guy and Girl, she says. "Every character on stage is working through something painful that happened in their life, and trying to improve their own experience of relationships," she says, which is why the show rings with so many different ages and types of people.

It also talks about death and recovering, grieving, and about the search for love.

"It talks about relationships and the choices that sometimes we have to make for reasons other than our heart. It talks about being true to one's self and following the path that you really need to follow, rather than what might be an easy path, or the path that other people are expecting of you." ■

The constant charms in the Key West Food Critic Mystery books are, as one might expect, the attention to Key West and the attention to food — as nourishment, delight, art, business and social lubricant.

As Hayley's endeavors have her on and off her motor scooter, zipping all over the island, we become familiar with its neighborhoods, establishments and institutions. We explore the Key West lifestyle, representative character types, its paradisiacal climate and even the friction that can rough up the island's laid back cultural atmosphere. Haley is still a short-time resident of the island, and as we watch her internalize its nuanced flavors, we absorb them for ourselves.

Because writing about food — and the establishments that prepare and serve it — is Hayley's occupation, readers learn a lot about that as well. The author takes readers into a gastronomical world that keeps them alternately satisfied and hungry.

One special feature of the books in this series is the appendix of mouth-watering recipes with which each concludes.

Spritely and suspenseful, "Murder with Ganache" has a unique piquancy. Like a gourmet meal, it will leave you wanting more.. ■ other family members, are perplexed by the situation, but Ray won't talk and Connie feels betrayed and lost.

— Phil Jason, Ph.D., United States Naval Academy professor emeritus of English, is a poet, critic and freelance writer with 20 books to his credit, including several studies of war literature and a creative writing text.

Now Hayley has even more to worry about.

Lucy Burdette gives depth to this book by dissecting the modern family in all its divorce, remarry, reshape, share kids, make nice, stay enraged, give up, try again glory and gloom. Hayley's caring yet determined nature often provides the healing salve that lowers the anxiety level and heals torn relationships. The author's background as a clinical psychologist clearly enriches her handling of this material.

PAST REPASTS

Here are some capsule summaries of previous restaurant reviews:

■ Alberto's on Fifth, 868 Fifth Ave. S., Naples; 430-1060

With its menu of Northern Italian cuisine — not the heavy, marinara-drenched fare that dominates Italian restaurants in Southwest Florida — Alberto's is a breath of fresh air. Chef-owner Alberto Varetto hails from Torino and presided over the kitchen of the venerable Sale e Pepe on Marco Island for more than 10 years. You'll find no mass-produced pasta here. Only freshly made ribbons of pappardelle and taglierini are good enough to be laced with Varetto's ragouts; only hand-folded envelopes of agnolotti, raviolini and tortelloni are worthy of being stuffed with meats, cheeses and herbs. Flavor pairings such as plump sea scallops with lush lobster sauce and sweet onion confit, and salty prosciutto with sweet roasted pears and peppery baby arugula, are well conceived. If the to-die-for taglierini with pesto and copious amounts of jumbo lump crabmeat is a fair indication, the fresh pasta dishes are not to be missed. Because the portions of each course were so reasonable, we left feeling fully satisfied but not at all stuffed — and eager to revisit. Full bar.

■ Alpine Restaurant, Galleria Shoppes at Vanderbilt, 2355 Vanderbilt Beach Road; 325-9499

Step into Alpine Restaurant and instantly be transported to that lovely part of the world filled with snow-capped mountains and stick-to-your-ribs food. There's hearty goulash and schnitzel (plus lighter options), charming service and a dining room that seems lifted whole from some cozy Austrian village. Start off with a bowl of goulash, filled with beef, pork and vegetables or, even better, the sauerkraut soup, with strands of sauerkraut, smoked pork, potatoes and mushrooms. The chicken version of Alpine schnitzel (pork is another option) is marinated, grilled then topped off with provolone and a fried egg. Served with bacon-laced farmers potatoes and a medley of green beans, red peppers, peas and water chestnuts, it's a meal that guarantees leftovers. The knedlo-vepro-zelo, a traditional Czech dish, features pork, dumplings and sauerkraut accompanied by caramelized cabbage. A fitting finish is the aptly named Triple Yummy crepe, a delicate pancake filled with Nutella, bananas and strawberries. Beer and (basic) wine served.

■ The Chapel Grill, 811 Seventh Ave. S., Naples; 206-4310

Casual yet stylish, this restaurant in the 65-year-old former First Baptist Church offers a wide-ranging menu that puts a new spin on some familiar dishes. The calamari, for instance, is strewn with chorizo sausage and tempura-fried julienned carrots with a delicious mango-rum sauce. Seafood or steak, Chapel Grill seems blessed for success. A New York strip was perfectly grilled to medium-rare yet achieved a crusty exterior that most home grillers would envy. The nicely marbled 14-ounce cut was dry-aged for 21 days, which imparted a noticeable richness. Red rock cod Florentine was a hefty fillet with thick flakes of moist white meat within its crisp, oven-baked Parmesan crust. Inventive cocktails such as a vodka gimlet with balsamic-laced strawberries and fresh basil, or a bourbon highball spiked with The King's Ginger liqueur and a kiss of cloves are sinfully indulgent. ■ FISH, Village at Venetian Bay, 4369 Gulf Shore Blvd., Naples; 263-3747

At this stylish bistro, you can have your fish cooked or raw and, either way, be assured of a well-executed meal. Space is tight in the dining room, so those who need more of it might want to sit on the patio, weather permitting. (If you don't mind tight spaces, small tables by the window afford great views of the bay.) Oysters Rockefeller were tasty but pricey ($20); a grilled octopus appetizer was skillfully rendered. Blackened redfish with etouffee sauce and a heaping bowl of cioppino had nearby patrons enviously eyeing our table — and for good reason. Both were excellent. Should you have room for dessert, skip the creme brulee and opt for the tiramisu, which was expertly rendered and large enough for sharing. Full bar.

■ Restoratives Café, 20461 S. Tamiami Trail, Estero; 949-6715

This breakfast and lunch spot derives its name from the French origin of the term "restaurant," referring to the restorative powers of food — specifically the soups of an 18th century Parisian chef named Boulanger. Chef Jay Gillmore, who trained at Le Cordon Bleu in Orlando and has worked at numerous Southwest Florida restaurants, launched this artsy little café in August with his brother, Tim. With its chalkboard menu, rustic lumber and impressive wall of locally produced paintings, Restoratives has a do-it-yourself vibe backed by rock music that nonchalantly suggests this place has more hipster cred than your typical diner in the 239. Soup is definitely a good way to go, based on our basil tomato-herb and Snake Bite cheddar renditions; we liked the cheesy richness and the interplay of smoky Guinness barley and tangy cider in the latter. Among eight sandwich offerings, the brisket torta was well conceived and executed, with juicy, tender beef topped with melted queso blanco, pickled chilies, pico de gallo and sour cream. Don't pass up the fresh juice offerings.

CUISINE

Time and change have not altered Angelina's appeal

drewSTERWALD
pgnews@floridaweekly.com

From the luxe atmosphere to the expansive wine program to the extraordinary twists on Italian cuisine, Angelina's Ristorante set the bar high when it opened in 2008. Although it's categorized as Italian, the label is far too reductive to accurately reflect the restaurant's aspirations and its status as one of Bonita Springs' finer dining experiences.

Despite a number of staffing changes over the years and a distracting side project (Agave in Naples), the restaurant today maintains the high standards it initially set out to achieve. Injecting some new interest was the recent appointment of consulting executive chef Sarah Gruenberg. A runner-up in TV's "Top Chef: Texas" competition in 2012, Ms. Gruenberg was part of the James Beard Award-winning team at Spiaggia in Chicago, where she became executive chef in 2010.

All this talent, fine food and tony atmosphere comes at a price, of course. One can find ways to economize; the selection of flatbreads called pizzettes ($10-$15) paired with a small pasta course ($10-$16) could suffice for a meal along with one of the few glasses of wine offered for less than $10.

But the temptations to abandon frugality are almost too irresistible. The wine list has earned Wine Spectator honors, after all. And entrees such as a veal chop laced with black truffles and accompanied by truffle risotto could turn the head of anyone who can afford to drop $58 on a single plate. (I hope that those who monitor my dinner receipts will appreciate that we enjoyed a splendid meal without completely surrendering to such indulgence.)

We were seated in the Red Room, a plush alcove within sight of the 30-foot-tall wine tower at the center of the restaurant that holds thousands of bottles. Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett crooned in the background of this ruby-toned room decked out with a fireplace and gilt-framed artwork. If you're looking for a setting that's a little more private, curtained booths are available for intimate dining.

A plate bearing cubes of aged cheese appeared quickly at the table as a welcoming gesture — a sign of hospitality that continued to the final après-dessert offering of digestifs such as limoncello.

Passing on the selection of creative, tasty-sounding cocktails, I sipped a glass of 2012 Laetitia Pinot Noir ($13), a Southern California wine with deep cherry notes and hints of clove. My companion enjoyed the 2011 Kaiken Malbec ($10). Good bread arrived with roasted garlic spread to hold us over until the first course arrived.

We started with one of the aforementioned pizzettes, "fiore de zucca con burrata" ($13). We loved the fresh, light toppings of zucchini blossoms, San Marzano tomatoes and baby zucchini. Dabs of super-creamy mozzarella added just the right touch of melted dairy without weighing down the delicate cracker crust. Flatbreads are about as common as salt and pepper in restaurants these days, so it's nice to see Angelina's going the extra mile to offer interesting toppings.

The carne cruda ($18) also is something you don't see on a lot of menus: prime dry-aged beef, so it had lots of flavor. Restraint with the accouterments — shards of Parmigiana Regianno, truffle shavings, a lemon spritz and lacy celery sprouts — was key to keeping the visibly marbled, nicely chilled beef front and center.

Angelina's serves a proper pasta course — a small tangle of freshly made noodles or a few pockets filled with meat, squash or seafood — between appetizers and entrees. We thought adding a fourth course might prove too filling, so we upgraded a pasta dish to entrée status, which patrons can do with any of the half-dozen choices.

It was a difficult choice. The lobster with tagliatelle sounded sublime, as did the corzetti, or Ligurian pasta coins, with crab and pesto. Ultimately, the rustic agnolotti stuffed with slow-roasted veal ($28 as entrée) won us over. The meat filling was incredibly tender within the sheer envelopes of pasta, and it was nicely paired with a complex balsamic-based gravy that we sopped up with extra bread. Wild mushrooms added toothsome texture and woody notes to the mix.

We could have been well satisfied with an entire meal of pastas, but there were eight entrees to choose from — and they were not the typical piccatas, Parmigianas and Marsalas you find in 99 percent of the Italian restaurants in Southwest Florida. Think whole snapper baked in sea salt, or brown-butter seared black grouper with artichokes and olives. With nary a drop of marinara in sight, Angelina's seems more pan-Mediterranean than classically Italian. Hooray for that.

I know it's uber-trendy right now, but the scallop dish ($29) had me at "pork belly." In fact, this dish hit several buttons for me, starting with thick, buttery scallops perfectly bronzed. The sizeable hunk of pork was slowly roasted to yield a crisp crust, tender meat and gelatinous fat. A citrus "marmalatta" provided a zesty contrast to the sweet shellfish. The brussels sprout leaves scattered like rose petals over the dish left me craving whole sprouts while realizing the funky little cabbages would have totally overwhelmed the delicate seafood. Clearly, the chef understands how to balance the flavors on a plate.

Another canny decision is presenting desserts on a tray — much more tempting than a printed list. There's a little sticker shock when the tab comes, but it's not what you'd expect; each of our desserts cost just $3.50. The pumpkin cheesecake was whipped to feathery lightness, and the chocolate-domed mint panna cotta was refreshingly original.

In fact, that's what elevates Angelina's above 99 percent of the Italian restaurants out there: It's refreshingly original. ■

Sanibel, Captiva & Surrounds

Long beloved for their white-sand beaches, prolific seashells, and flora and fauna, the Islands provide a haven for families, vacationers and those who simply enjoy a slower pace of life. From condominiums to resorts to villas to cottages, the Islands are the perfect refuge for living year-round or as a getaway in the sun.
