

uwp | library

RESOURCE GUIDE

2009-2010

your library mentor
the uwp|library blog
first-year writing libguide

you and your library mentor

a library mentor is your class' librarian for the semester

Be sure to contact your library mentor soon. Alison will tell you who your librarian is as soon as she gets the list from me :^) now what? You can set up a meeting with your librarian to discuss what your class will need from the library throughout the semester. Your librarian can show you a few resources so that you know what your students will be using, and so you can help your students in class if you need to.

If your students will need newspaper articles, we'll show you LexisNexis so you can help your students. If your students will need scholarly articles, we'll show you Academic Search Premier, or another great multi-disciplinary database.

No matter what you discuss with your librarian, we'll stay in touch with you all semester long. You know, just to make sure your students are producing good results.

but what if your students find research difficult? Well, that's normal! We have lots of ways your students can get personalized help. They can hop on Ask-A-Librarian chat, visit the research assistance desk in the library, or email their class librarian :^).

Put us on your syllabus and in your course website for easy access. Include links to library resources, too!

Emma says, "Send your students to a library lab--rwawr rwawr!"

UF | George A. Smathers Libraries
UNIVERSITY of FLORIDA

library labs are great for students

Library labs are held in Library West room 211.

They're for your students when they need extra help with finding books or articles.

ENC 1101 & 1102 students are invited to come to ask specific questions, to look for things with a librarian nearby "just in case," or just because they know they're guaranteed a computer in the library for at least an hour.

Lab hours are posted on the UWP|Library blog and on the First-year writing LibGuide. These websites are located in that green box for you to see.

New lab hours appear monthly. Let your librarian know if you think your students would benefit from more labs.

Suggestion: you might want to give your students extra credit for attending a library lab!

library stuff just for you and your students

UWP/Library Mentoring Blog

Just another UF Libraries weblog

Library toolbar for Firefox

Posted on July 21, 2009

Filed Under common reader program, databases, design, questions, research assistance, resources | Leave a Comment

If you like Firefox, and I already know you heart the library and research, then the LibX UF toolbar is probably something you want to try out.

Here are some screen shots and instructions on downloading.

But why use it? It's actually a very powerful tool. Let's say you're hopping around the internet and you see something you want to know more about. Plug in a keyword into the toolbar and search the libraries without going to the library catalog website.

Take a video tour of the libraries!

Categories

Select Category

Blogroll

Ask a Librarian

ENC LibGuide

Library Instruction

Library Research Handouts

Online Writing Lab

First-Year Writing (ENC 1101 and 1102)

Taking ENC 1101 or 1102? Take a look at what we've gathered for you here.

Last update: Aug 09, 2009 | URL: <http://libguides.uflib.ufl.edu/enc> | Print Guide | RSS Updates | SHARE

Home Research 101 Library Video Tours KISS Paper Topics Project Starters Library Services RefWorks Library Tools

Library How-To's on YouTube

Library How-To's on YouTube | Comments (0) | Print Page

Search

Guides | Go

What's New?

How to Find Books in the UF Library Catalog is the first video in the library how-to series. I hope it helps you! Please feel free to leave feedback.

Do you want me to make a video on something specific? Let me know! I'll see what I can do :^)

Stay tuned-- there's more to come!

Comments (0)

How to Find Books

Outreach & Instruction

Missy Shoop

Contact Info:
542 Library West
273-2624
Send Email

Links:
Profile & Guides

Try RefWorks! You'll love it and you'll want your students to use it, too. Check out RefWorks.com to watch the tutorials.

Follow the libraries on Twitter and Facebook!

Text call numbers to yourself from the library catalog!

getting your students ready for research introduce your class to the libraries Have them watch the library videos for homework or look at a few in class. Watch "How to Find Books" together on YouTube. Show them the library homepage in class, and then look up books together.

assign the plagiarism tutorial for homework Plagiarism is taken very seriously at UF. Help your students learn to avoid it.

get to know the library yourself The more you know about the libraries, the easier it will be to answer questions or to offer advice to your students. For example, if you know there's a Journalism & Communications Library on campus, you won't send a student to Library West to ask for help finding sources related to mass media.

general library orientations occur during the first half of each semester Suggest attending an orientation to your students. No registration is required and they are open to all students, staff & faculty at UF. Orientations introduce each of the nine campus libraries with an overview of resources offered.

links you just gotta have

Libraries' Homepage

www.uflib.ufl.edu

- the catalog
- subject guides & specialists
- databases
- hours for all the libraries
- Ask A Librarian chat

UWP|Library Blog

blogs.uflib.ufl.edu/uwp

- library lab schedule
- helpful hints and reminders
- helpful links
- library mentor contact info

First-Year Writing LibGuide

libguides.uflib.ufl.edu/enc

- best resources for your students
- Project Starters databases
- library lab schedule
- links to other good stuff
- RefWorks (trust me!)

Library West Homepage

www.uflib.ufl.edu/librarywest

- Awesome Library West stuff
- assignment calculator
- general orientation schedule

Plagiarism Tutorial

www.uflib.ufl.edu/msl/07b/studentplagiarism.html

UF Libraries' YouTube Channel

www.youtube.com/user/UFlibraries

so many libraries, so little time :^)

image created at wordle.net

the blog and libguide

Don't forget about these two resources. They're built just for you and your students and they can help throughout the semester.

how do you use them?

You can use the blog in class. For example, because blogs are so popular in businesses and trades, you could have your students comment on a post as practice for this method of communication. They can also post comments if they have questions about research or about the libraries! Sometimes the answer to a question can help lots of people.

The first time you or your students post a comment, I'll have to approve it. Don't worry-- after the first time, you're automatically approved for subsequent postings.

You can use the LibGuide for lots of things. Look at it for teaching resources or for library resources. You'll find the best databases for your students' paper topics or project ideas under "Project Starters." There you'll find LexisNexis, Academic Search Premier, CQ Researcher, and much more. It's like one-stop shopping for the best databases!

The LibGuide is also a quick way to find special library resources such as library information videos, library how-to videos, RefWorks, and library tools like our LibX toolbar for Firefox. Check them out!

