

C: No, drank spring water.

P: Drink the spring water.

C: _____ salty, you know.

P: Uh huh.

C: No, we had plenty to do. We had a little old picture show that showed these old reels and they'd break down every five minutes, cause they didn't 'run over five minutes' time.

P: Was that an outside picture show or an inside picture?

C: Well, it was semi. Part of the audience sit under a shed outside, and the rest of us sit in the building. _____ but they just had it at night, see, the way, when it was dark.

P: Uh huh.

C: Didn't have it in the daytime because light would come in. No, it was a nice place to live. We had a spring there to swim in. That was always something, _____ out to the river to swim in. I swam in the river more than I did the spring.

P: Uh huh. Because it's warmer?

C: Oh, yes.

P: (laughter) I know. What about fishing?

C: Well, that was.... Plenty of fish around in there. I used to fish quite a bit in the river. Bass. When they first stopped, these hotels were using fresh-water fish. _____

P: Uh huh.

C: In these rivers. There was a boy here named Silas. He'd go up and down the river every morning and fish everybody's fish traps. They all had traps there to get the fish with. He'd fish all the traps and then go down to the hotels and sell them to the hotels. And they had fresh-water fish.

P: So he wasn't, was he taking other people's fish?

C: Yeah, he....

P: Did they catch him?

C: Huh? Yeah, they'd catch him. They wouldn't do nothing to him, just cuss at him. He was just a little teenage boy.

P: Uh huh.
