

R: great extent. Your world was very small. About ten or fifteen miles.

P: Uh huh.

R: We went to my grandfather's which was twenty-five miles away, it took us about eight or nine hours to go.

P: Where did he live?

R: He lived over in Suwannee county near Branford.

P: And what was his name?

R: Jesse Slokum.

P: So it took eight or nine hours to get there.

R: Uh huh, uh huh.

P: And church, where was the church that you went to?

R: Midway Church of Christ in Gilchrist county.

P: How long did it take you to get to church?

R: Well, we were not very far from church. We lived about a mile from church, so it didn't take very long, really, to go to church.

P: Did most of the neighbors in that area all go to this church?

R: Yes. It was quite, very prominent in that area, that most everybody, most everybody around there were family. They were either related some way or another and most of the people did.

P: So you would go to church on Sunday morning?

R: Uh huh, uh huh.

P: Sunday evening?

R: A lot of times didn't go on Sunday evening, just had the Sunday morning service.

P: And then you would probably have a Sunday dinner.

R: Yeah, that's, we had a Sunday dinner. Right.

P: And then you would go to church on Wednesday.

R: When I was growing up, we really didn't. Sunday morning was really about the only time that we went to church.

P: What was Sunday dinner like? What kind of foods did you eat?

R: Oh, that was when you had all the good things. You'd probably go out on the yard and kill a chicken and that was a delicacy. That's, you didn't have chicken every day like we do now sometimes. We would kill a chicken and dress it and have chicken and rice or
