Gunfire on street in north Sanderson

Two Sanderson residents are charged with firing at least six shots at a pedestrian on CR 127 during the early morning hours of September 1.

Victim Steven Keith, 31 and also from Sanderson, told Deputy John Hauber he was walking near the intersection with Sanderson Circle about 1 am when four occupants got out of a white Oldsmobile and brandished pistols in his direction. When he took off running, Mr. Keith said the shots were fired in his direction, several of them creating sparks when they struck pavement.

Rasheem Gaskins

Brad Stewart

He identified one of them as Rasheem Gaskins, 18, who was taken into custody at his residence on Dolphin St. shortly after and brought back to the scene for a positive identification.

A second suspect was later identified via a photo lineup as Brad Stewart, 18, who a witness said left a family function on foot in that north Sanderson neighborhood with Mr. Gaskins shortly after midnight. The other two suspects, described as black males, were not identified.

Deputy Hauber noted in his report that officers combed the scene and recovered shell casings believed fired from two different pistols.

Another witness who lives nearby said she heard 5-6 shots "in rapid succession" that morning. Both suspects were charged with aggravated assault.

Tax hike vs. cuts in spending

MIKE ANDERSON

When Baker County commissioners meet Thursday afternoon for a final budget workshop they will have two hours to make some tough decisions about how to arrive at a balanced budget for fiscal year 2014-15 before heading into the first public hearing on the new budget and taxes at 6 p.m.

Among the key questions are:

- Will property taxes have to be raised and, if so, by how much? The current budget proposal reflects a $1.1 million deficit and calls for a 14 percent tax increase, though commissioners now are leaning toward half that or smaller.

- Will county employees receive their first pay raise in several years or ride out another year on the same salary? The budget as proposed reflects a 3 percent raise across the board, but a one-time bonus of $500 or $1,000 may be offered, instead, or nothing at all.

- Can the county commission and all five constitutional offices — sheriff, tax collector, property appraiser, clerk of court and supervisor of elections — take a 5-10 percent budget cut?

- How much may have to be taken out of a $6 million cash surplus to help balance the budget?

"We've been doing these cuts for four years. We're down to the bone."

—Tax Collector Gene Harvey

These are all questions county officials have been grappling with the past two months.

Commissioners will try to answer them Thursday evening in preparation for a final hearing on a new spending plan on September 16.

on August 28, County Manager C.J. Thompson complied with a request from the commission and presented a budget containing a 10 percent cut in current expenditures — those for the 2013-14 fiscal year — for the county government and the five constitutional offices.

But he did not endorse such deep cuts.

"I think, as a whole, we've done a good job," Mr. Thompson told commissioners. "I will re-caveat what I said last week. I am in no way, shape or form recommending (any further) cuts. We've done our due diligence."

Bottom line, he said, is that a 10 percent reduction in expenditures "will be doable but it may be painful."

Following a lengthy pause, during which commissioners gazed at computers in front of them containing budget data, Chairman Jimmy Anderson solicited input from the audience.

'Child loving' bus driver calls it quits

JOEL ADDINGTON

Angelina Tolliver has been surrounded by children her whole life.

The Macclenny resident has 16 brothers and sisters. She's adopted seven children of her own and spent 28 years as a school bus driver and before retiring this summer.

"I retired now because I want to see what it's like not to get up at five in the morning," she said with a chuckle.

Her career with children began shortly after she graduated from the all-black high school that's now Keller Intermediate School. She worked as a teacher's aide in Macclenny for four years before marrying her husband, an Olustee native, in 1972.

They then moved to Orlando, but they didn't stay there long. In 1984 the couple returned to Baker County by way of Jacksonville, where Ms. Tolliver also drove a bus.

"They were saying they needed some black bus drivers at that time and I knew I could drive so I applied for the job," recalled Ms. Tolliver at her dining room table on August 15 as her grandchildren played in front of the television nearby.

She said in those days the white bus drivers had trouble corralling black children, so the obvious solution was to hire black drivers. And when problems arose with black students from her native community of Sanderson, guess who was called in to help?

"The administrator didn't have to come. I went to the bus. I would tell them, 'Not today. You can't do it this way' ... They were my nieces, nephews, cousins from Sanderson. It was easier for me because I knew everybody."

The reverse was true as well. When Ms. Tolliver first joined the school district, she was transporting all-white students, which had its own challenges.

"They would try me to see how strong I was," said Ms. Tolliver. "And they did and I challenged them right back and I won. Once I challenged the bully I was good. He was my best friend. I had no problems from there on out. He loved me, because I just love children. I just love people period."

Over the years, Ms. Tolliver has delivered children from all over the county to school. She counted off her routes: Macclenny II, Shirley Lane, Trail Ridge, near the ballfields in Macclenny, Sanderson and Margaretta. But where she spent the most time was with youths from Olustee, an area she was very familiar with.

The route, twice daily, took about two hours.

"Between 14 and 18 years I worked Olustee," she said. "I loved it. I knew the kids. I knew their mommas. So it was much easier since I knew all the families."

Ms. Tolliver's approach to bus driving and handling rambunctious kids was one of mutual respect, communication and boundaries. "You just have to talk to the children and they'll work with you," said the 63-year-old grandmother.

After a smooth primary election with six clear winners last week, the candidates are ramping up for November when the general election will decide two offices, and when the county commission and school board will install its newest members, James G. Bennett and Paula T. Barton, respectively.

Mr. Bennett defeated first-term commissioner Adam Giddens by a significant margin of 22 percent, with turnout coming in high for a primary at 44 percent, compared to just 17.5 percent statewide.

Going into the election Mr. Giddens and others believed his primary battle would be a

Crunch time: the budget deadline

During the next two hours and 45 minutes commissioners listened to suggestions from the audience, including no tax increase, deeper budget cuts, special assessments and user fees, selling county property and seeking a local-option sales tax to increase county revenue.

It also became clear that the proposed 10 percent cut did not have the support of constitutional officers, who said such a reduction would not enable them to fulfill their duties and responsibilities.

Nor, they said, could they close their offices two days a week to accommodate a suggestion by Commissioner Gordon Crews that county employees work 12-hour shifts three days a week rather than 40 hours over five days to save money.

"If you can tell me how we can go to 36 hours a week I will cut a lot," said Sheriff Joey Dobson. "We work 24/7."

Clerk of Courts Al Fraser echoed the sheriff's response. "That ain't gonna fly at the courthouse," Mr. Fraser said. "I reckon you could do it but you'd have people lined up out the door."

Commissioner Adam Giddens said instead of 12-hour work days employee hours could be reduced and still work five days a week. Offices could open later or close earlier, he said.

The board eventually abandoned hope of gaining the support of constitutional officers for any significant budget cut, especially after they got the same negative response when a 5 percent reduction was proposed.

The constitutional officers said the only cuts that could possibly be made were in payroll, meaning the 3 percent raise could be eliminated.

"We've been doing these cuts for four years," Tax Collector Gene Harvey told the commission. "We're down to the bone."

The county commission controls the purse strings for its own budget and those of the constitutional officers, who also are elected and serve autonomously. But commissioners have stopped short of enacting a budget containing spending cuts that constitutional officers insist they cannot support.

"I can't say they don't need every penny they budget," said Commissioner Gordon Crews.

On August 4 commissioners voted 3-2 to increase the county's tentative millage rate to 8.29, or about $8.29 per $1,000 of taxable property value. The increase, opposed by Mr. Giddens and Commissioner James Croft, would produce $761,399 in revenue, which would still be about $400,000 short of the current deficit.

Last week, Commissioner Crews said he could support eliminating the proposed pay raises and balancing the budget with cash reserves "and kick the can down the road again." He also said he did not "have a problem leaving the tax rate the way it is and give taxpayers a break."

"I don't want to run it (reserves fund) dry but people don't want a tax increase either," Mr. Crews said.

Ed Barber, Macclenny resident and business owner, said he realized the county was struggling financially but that was no reason to raise taxes on a struggling populace.

"You are between a rock and a hard place and so are we," Mr. Barber said, noting that he has had to reluctantly lay employees off to keep his business afloat. He said he has been told by other business owners that they may have to shut their doors if the county raises taxes.

"Businesses are hurting," Mr. Barber told the commission. "You are not just obligated to county employees. You have an obligation to us, too."

At one point, the tax collector said surplus funds were more than adequate to balance the budget and should be tapped.

"Six million dollars is way too much in reserves," Mr. Harvey said. "Hey, let's use it."

Critics of that approach say the reserve fund is supposed to be used only for emergencies but it is gradually being depleted to fund operating expenses. The money has been cut nearly in half from the $11 million it once contained about five years ago because the county has used it as a source of funds to balance the budget every year.

Property Appraiser Tim Sweat noted that property taxes comprise about 19 percent of total revenue in the county budget and 81 percent comes from other revenue sources, such as state sales and gasoline taxes.

He also asked if the county had explored ways to make taxes fairer, such as an additional sales tax that everyone pays, adding: "A lot of people get services and don't pay for it and the county has to pick it up."

In response, Commission Chairman Jimmy Anderson said the Florida Legislature "won't allow the county to even put a sales tax (proposal) on a referendum." He said he and others have tried but state lawmakers said "no dice."

Mr. Barber urged the county to keep trying. He said he would not be opposed to paying an additional one-cent sales tax in Baker County and thought many other people would go along with it, as well.

"Push the idea in Tallahassee," he said. "Don't assume you can't get it."

Near the end of last week's workshop, which was attended by dozens of residents, business owners and county employees, commissioners expressed gratitude for all the ideas and suggestions made to balance the budget and Commissioner Anderson promised to "take everything to heart."

Commissioner Crews said he was pretty sure one issue in particular led to such a robust meeting.

"The millage rate prompted a lot of discussion," he said.

"It got my attention," remarked Ed Barber.

another.

"I would always tell my kids if you're mad with each other let me know so I can separate you so you won't disturb the bus," said Ms. Tolliver. "I didn't have problems on my bus. I talked to my children. I look at it like this — if I can't sit still for two hours, then the children can't sit still for two hours, or stay quiet for two hours. If I can't, they can't. If you work with the children, they'll work with you. If you're hard with the children, they'll be hard with you. So I found out being like a family would make being a bus driver real easy."

Most of her students were sixth graders and high schoolers. She had the younger students sit in the front of the 66-passenger bus "so I could get to know them and they could get to know me," she said.

The sixth graders took some training, however. Ms. Tolliver said they would come from a "fun" bus in elementary school and had to learn to be quieter and remain seated during her trips.

"With sixth graders, it was totally different when they got to my bus," she said.

During her nearly three decades on the job, Ms. Tolliver has noticed some changes. Children today, she says, are less disciplined than they used to be and parents are less involved.

"Back in those days the parents would help you with the children. You talked with the parents and told them what the kids were doing, and the parents would intervene. The parents wouldn't take the children's word, they would take the adult's word for it. The thing is now the parents are younger. They haven't grown up ... That's the difference — babies are having babies and they're not teaching their babies how to grow up."

In the last five years of her career, Ms. Tolliver was driving two disabled children, one in a van and another in a car. She said they were very quiet and their days very regimented, making her job that much easier.

"It was a simmer-down time after driving 23 or 24 years with 40, 50 or 60 children," said Ms. Tolliver.

Being raised with so many biological brothers and sisters, the oldest of whom is now 86, was great training for managing personalities and resolving conflicts among the kids, according to Ms. Tolliver.

When she wasn't driving the bus, Ms. Tolliver was working in day care centers or hospitals, but always with children.

But she also has another passion — food.

"That's my main thing. I love to cook. You name it, I do it. The bus drivers love my fried chicken ... You go to the bus garage and ask about Angelina's fried chicken," she said, adding it's her favorite dish as well.

And while everyone tells her she should turn her cooking talents into a business, she quickly dismisses the idea.

"Oh no, that's work. Driving a school bus is not," said Ms. Tolliver, who was named bus driver of the year in 1991.

The politics of Obamacare

Next month begins open enrollment for health insurance, so it's as good a time as any to reflect on the first year of Obamacare and all the election-year bickering over whether it's helped or hurt us.

For yours truly, I have much better coverage — namely cheaper co-pays — for a slightly higher monthly premium. But with all the options I had available with Obamacare, I could've gotten a cheaper plan for generally the same coverage I'd had for years.

But, of course, the whole point of Obamacare was to get more people covered and bring down ever-rising health care costs. And after one year, both goals have been reached to some degree, despite no cooperation from some of the states, including Florida, that Obamacare actually empowered to find new and innovative ways to accomplish those two goals.

Then there's the dysfunctional Congress, and the House in particular, which wasted its time and energy repeatedly repealing Obamacare with no hope that the move would ever become a reality.

It was political theatre, which is to say a load of bull manure, much like a recent Republican Party of Florida statement that Obamacare is responsible for higher health insurance premiums expected this year. It did come during an online forum in which Charlie Crist was answering questions, and was quickly debunked by the fact-checking team at Politifact.com. But really?

Are we really going to ignore the fact that premiums have been going up every year for decades? Were we really to expect after only one year of Obamacare, this trend would completely reverse?

Please. How quickly the GOP forgets what something so central to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as health insurance was like before the national healthcare law was implemented.

You know about all the great things in Obamacare: no more denials for pre-existing conditions, kids can stay on their parents insurance longer, no co-pays for preventative care, making insurers spend 80-85 percent of our premiums on actual healthcare, and if not, refund the difference.

But there's another provision of the law that has gotten much less play in the media. Obamacare included greater authority for the states to regulate insurance premiums. It was among many features of the law that gave more power to states in hopes they would use it to help consumers.

But here in the Sunshine State, our leaders are more focused more on fighting old political

On Point In Print

Joel Addington

those deemed too high, for two years.

The head of said agency, political appointee Kevin McCarty, has said there's no need for such authority, which would require insurance companies to prove to the state its rates are reasonable.

Last year, with Obamacare being rolled out and insurers competing for the new business, the first year rates were largely viewed as unreliable in terms of judging the eventual effect of the national healthcare law on premiums.

But when insurers submitted their new rates to the state recently, in some counties they were much higher than the current rates while others saw slight drops or others level rates. The state is expecting a 13 percent jump on average, though some counties could see 20-plus percent increases and others single-digit decreases, depending on which companies are selling plans in the respective counties.

Insurers argue the rise was due to covering more aging and/or sick people than they expected. While that's a convenient excuse, I'd like to see the numbers. But, of course, no one outside of the insurance companies can get them because of the change in state law.

The truth is, it's impossible to make sweeping statements about the rates because what you pay for health insurance not only depends on the rates companies charge, but also on your age, whether you smoke, the state and county you live in and your income, which affects how much of your premium is paid by the government.

In fact, Oregon is expecting a 5 percent average drop in rates. Here in Baker County, the state reports the jump will be $17 a month for "silver plans," which are the most commonly selected on the federal exchange. And while premiums are still rising nationally, the rate at which they're rising has slowed since Obamacare was implemented.

It's not perfect and it's a work in progress, but the benefits of Obamacare are clear to me. I wish our state leaders would drop this charade, stop sending our federal healthcare funding to other states for political reasons, and give the state back its ability to negotiate premium rates.

I believe all three will happen eventually, but sooner would be better than later.

battles than getting more people health insurance and reducing healthcare costs. So, they placed a small provision into a much larger 2013 bill (SB 1842) that stripped the Florida Office of Insurance Regulation of its authority to review insurance rates, and reject

Clothing choice means little compared to the 'stalemate'

This week's column is a mixed bag, with some odd news stories that make me scratch my head and a couple of pieces of good news about former Wildcat sports stars.

I scanned the news this weekend until I basically had to stop. For 25 years I have written a weekly humor column, but try as I might, nothing I can write is conceivably as bizarre as the real news.

One of the biggest headlines this week has not been the ISIS terrorists fighting in Syria and Iraq. It's not the Ebola crisis in Africa, nor the fact that over a thousand Russian troops are fighting in Ukraine. No it had to do with the President's choice of suits.

The President had the audacity to wear a tan suit to his most recent news conference and within minutes, the social media was alight with criticism of his choice of threads. Facebook, Twitter and the other social sites lambasted him for looking un-presidential.

Despite the fact that Ronald Reagan, both Bushes and Bill Clinton regularly wore tan, when President Obama donned the color it was as if world democracy was teetering on the edge of the apocalypse.

I don't give a flip for what he or any other member of the government wears so long as it causes them to do something. House Speaker John Boehner could come to work in a Speedo and flip flops if it would jump start Congress. President Obama could wear a powder blue leisure suit if it meant the economy would turn around.

It's getting more and more ridiculous. Last week Congress threatened to shut the government down if the president acted unilaterally on immigration reform. When I heard that on the radio I literally scratched my head in disbelief. Shut down the government? How would we notice?

College football got underway this weekend and all anyone could talk about was the modified playoff system that goes into effect this year. I listened carefully to the cri-bizarre as the real news. Top teams from the five power conferences would have an almost automatic in and a few other smaller conferences would be considered. Cinderella teams have a proverbial snowball's chance of getting in. Basically, the football rich keep getting richer. But it's better than nothing.

The Seminoles struggled to a win over Oklahoma State and the Gators struggled to keep their heads above water as the Swamp lived up to its name. So much rain fell I was surprised that real gators didn't take the field.

Throughout all the games the crawler ESPN ticker was full of the news that Michael Sam, the league's only openly gay player, had been released by the St. Louis Rams. Amid all the hoopla they missed the fact that one of the best players ever to put on a uniform, Champ Bailey, was also released by the Saints. The perennial pro-bowler was let go by the Broncos earlier in the year. I sure wish the Jaguars would pick him up if for no other reason than the Charlton County native's wealth of knowledge at cornerback.

A Massachusetts man painted his Maserati sports car to look like a cross between a police car and a Transformer. He was arrested for impersonating a police officer. I have no problem with the man being arrested. My only issue is what he was arrested for. He should have been arrested for being an idiot who painted a fabulous $100,000 Maserati to look like anything besides a fabulous $100,000 Maserati.

On much a much more pleasant note, it was great to see some former Baker County Wildcat football players getting significant playing time for major college and professional programs.

Darvin Ruise started at weak side linebacker for Missouri in its 38-18 win over South Dakota State on Saturday. Ruise, who played quarterback for the Wildcats, has steadily worked his way up the depth chart to a starting position for the Tigers in his senior season.

Duke sophomore quarterback Thomas Sirk played the entire second half for the Blue Devils in their 52-13 rout of Elon on Saturday. Sirk demonstrated his versatility, throwing the ball well and scoring a pair of rushing touchdowns.

Bear Woods continues to play well at linebacker for the Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League. He had a sack this weekend against the Ottawa Roughriders.

LPA to tackle 'nuts, bolts' of new zoning code

MIKE ANDERSON
PRESS STAFF

A major rewrite of Baker County's zoning code, which was shelved last year after a controversy erupted over sand mining, could be another year away from completion now that a zoning advisory panel has been tasked with a more extensive review of the code.

The county's five-member Land Planning Agency, or LPA, will schedule a series of public workshops and hearings in the coming year to study numerous potential changes in the Land Development Regulations, or LDRs, which govern all zoning decisions.

The volunteer board met the evening of August 28 and approved a list of 13 topics to study in the LDR revision process, with mining heading the list.

"I would love to be done by a year from now," Planning and Zoning Director Ed Preston told the board.

One of the main questions to be answered in the months ahead is whether sand mining should be banned or at least restricted to areas zoned only for industrial purposes and excluded in all other zoning districts.

Today, mining is also allowed in agriculture districts with a special exception granted by county commissioners, which is what Oldcastle Southern Group, a subsidiary of a global construction conglomerate based in Ireland, had sought from the county before commissioners denied the request in July 2013.

The county commission was caught squarely in the middle of a battle between Oldcastle and its promises of economic payoffs and the Baker County Conservation Alliance, a grassroots environmental group that portrayed mining as bad news for the county's natural resources and rallied the support of many voters countywide.

Large landowners in the county weighed in on the issue over a year ago when they came out in opposition to further restrictions on mining, arguing that they would violate their rights as property owners and limit their ability to profit from their real estate investments.

A similar concern over property rights was voiced during the August 28 LPA meeting by two leaders of the Baker County Business Alliance, president Doug Moore and treasurer John Kennedy.

"I represent a group of land owners and business owners with the goal to protect property rights," Mr. Kennedy told the board, adding that the business alliance wants to be part of any discussions that could lead to further restrictions on what property owners may do with their land.

However, Mr. Kennedy assured LPA members, "We're here in a supportive role, not a combative role."

Mr. Moore, who owns a 2,400-acre tree farm south of Sanderson, pointed out to the board that in his view "some have discouraged growth" in Baker County and that has adversely affected the local economy and stifled jobs.

Florida Trend magazine, for example, has portrayed Baker County as "not business friendly," Mr. Moore said, predicting that any further restrictions on land uses and zoning "would further discourage business development."

In addition to mining, the list of issues to be reviewed and considered for changes in the LDRs include: Gun ranges, noise, adult entertainment, gambling, road paving requirements, mobile home restrictions, home occupation, rural commercial, signage, road access management, homestead division and multi-family.

Mr. Preston said the issues would have to be addressed in separate ordinances, which will expedite the process.

"We can give the commission one ordinance at a time," he said. "We don't have to give them everything at once."

In a memorandum to the county commission, dated July 8, 2014, Mr. Preston said the purposes of the new LDRs are to:

√ Establish the regulations, procedures and standards for review and approval of all proposed land development in the county.

√ Foster and preserve public health, safety, comfort, and welfare, and to aid in the harmonious, orderly, aesthetically pleasing and socially beneficial development of the county in accordance with the comprehensive plan.

√ Adopt and maintain a development review process that is: efficient, in terms of time and expense; effective, in terms of addressing the natural resource and public facility implications of the proposed development; and equitable, in terms of consistency with established regulations and procedures, respect for the rights of property owners and consideration of the interests of the citizens of the county.

√ Implement the Baker County Comprehensive Plan as required by the Local Government Comprehensive Planning and Land Development Regulation Act.

LPA member Philip Zamarron suggested Mr. Preston develop a website to dispense and receive information and solicit input from the public, including the scheduling of workshops to discuss proposed new LDRs.

Administrative changes to the LDRs were approved by the county commission in June, but those affecting specific land uses were sent back to the LPA for further study, including those affected by changes in state laws since 2011 regarding electronic gaming parlors, gun ranges and adult entertainment establishments.

Upon completion, the newly revised LDRs will become part of the county's 2020 Comprehensive Plan.

Hopefuls: now eyes on November

close one.

"In my gut, I was feeling optimistic," he said this week by e-mail. "I felt like I might win but it would be a close race. I've heard that most people who tried to predict the race had the opinion that it could go either way, and would most likely be a close race. But, all you can do in a campaign is work hard to get elected and then the people vote, and that's what I did."

After some prayer, Mr. Giddens said he's come to peace with the outcome and he's looking forward to spending more time with his wife, family and friends.

"I can now focus on growing my private sector business, focus on my family, and have more free time. The duties put on the shoulders of a county commissioner are very heavy, and a lot of hours are spent working on and thinking about decisions because they impact a lot of people," he said. "It is a big burden on oneself and family members."

Between now and November, Mr. Giddens plans to continue to advocate for keeping taxes low and passing a budget that doesn't result in county employee layoffs. Commissioners are set to vote on their budget and property tax rate on September 4 [see related story on front page].

"I have not been afraid to make the unpopular tough decisions, because I know if we don't, we will face even tougher times in the future," Mr. Giddens said. "Now that the duties will be passed on, I look forward to Mr. Bennett's plans and initiatives to bring the fiscal state of the county out of its bind, without laying off county employees or raising our taxes. The people of the county have elected him for such a time as this. As for me, I will continue to work just as hard as I've worked the last few years. I will vote on decisions that I feel are in the best interest of the people of our county. We will pass the budget for next fiscal year soon, and I will continue to fight for no tax increase and no county employee layoffs."

For the time being, he has no plans to run for another public office, Mr. Giddens said, despite hearing from people before and after the primary that he should seek a state or county post. But he has thought about it.

"I will weigh all options and opportunities as they come," he said. "As of right now, I will finish out my term as commissioner and I look forward to spending more time with my wife, family and friends."

Like Mr. Giddens, school board candidates Jody Anderson and Artie Burnett, who will face off in the general election, felt good about their chances going into last week's election. Because none of the three candidates in the District 4 school board race secured a majority (more than 50 percent), the top two vote getters have a runoff set for November 4.

"Tuesday I felt good. I felt positive," said Mr. Burnett, who is pursuing his second term in office. "I expected there to be a runoff. It's kind of hard to get 50 percent plus one. I didn't have any thoughts I could get that. I've only seen one person do that in my time watching."

Mr. Anderson, a political newcomer, was a little nervous heading into the election but prayer and family support helped prop him up, he said.

"For my first time as a candidate I was very pleased with the outcome and the support of the citizens," said Mr. Anderson by e-mail. "I think everything went great and I truly enjoyed going door-to-door meeting new people and getting fresh ideas."

He also said he appreciated that the District 4 race — in which Mr. Burnett received 42 percent of the vote compared to Mr. Anderson's 35 percent — was "clean."

Both candidates said they intend to continue campaigning and knocking on doors between now and election day.

"I know Jody's going to work hard and I'm going to work hard and let the best man win," commented Mr. Burnett.

The closest contest last week was the race for the Republican Party's nomination for the county's next clerk of courts, who also serves as comptroller here. The position is held today by Al Fraser, who announced his retirement earlier this year.

Chuck Brannan defeated Jackie Baker by just 8 points — 54 percent to 46 percent — for the nomination.

"I was pleased with the result and appreciative of the citizens giving me the opportunity to move on to the general election," Mr. Brannan said in a written statement.

He said the high turnout was indicative of the high level of engagement by the community in the primary.

"Our citizens are always engaged and enthusiastic when it comes to their politics and their leaders," said Mr. Brannan. "People in Baker County care about their community and it makes campaigning here special and rewarding."

Emerging as the Democrat nominee for the clerk's job, from a field of five, was deputy clerk Stacie Harvey. She as well as Mr. Bennett did not return requests for comment.

Budget showing a surplus in Glen

While county government continues to struggle with $1 million-plus deficits, and the City of Macclenny pares its expenses in anticipation of massive utility repairs in the near future, the Town of Glen St. Mary anticipates taking in more revenue in fiscal 2015 than it spends.

The budget presented August 19 by Mayor Juanice Padgett and expected to be passed later this month proposes spending of $294,702 in both the general and water and sewer funds, and anticipates revenues of $327,315. That latter figure includes excess revenues from high-use sewer and water customers under a new rate schedule also on tap for consideration later this month.

The mayor postponed utility rate increases because the required public hearings and ordinance were not advertised in time for consideration at the August meeting. The new rates are not expected to meet with opposition on the five-member governing board.

Glen's relatively modest expenditures are due to the few municipal services offered by the small town west of Macclenny. It does not levy property taxes and financed a water system and connections to a relatively few sewer customers along US 90 largely through federal grants.

The town pays Macclenny $23,200 annually to tie into the city's sewage treatment plant.

Next year's budget anticipates putting aside $18,000 for future capital and repair expenses to the town's water and sewer system, a step recommended by consultant Bob Mearns of the Florida Rural Water Association in July.

He warned the governing board that it falls perilously short of having funds to replace worn-out equipment in coming years, and proposed rate increases that affect only about one-quarter of water customers and a small number of the town's 56 sewer customers.

The hikes that will be considered later this month are expected to bring in about $15,000 more annually.

Mayor Padgett also proposed last year that spending remain at 90-95% of revenues to bolster cash reserves that have been dwindling in recent years. The 2014-15 budget adheres to that goal, as does the present one.

Upholds road paving rule LPA denies contractor's appeal

MIKE ANDERSON
PRESS STAFF

The validity of zoning regulations requiring all new homes in a subdivision to have direct access to paved roads was upheld by the Baker County Land Planning Agency, or LPA, at a meeting the evening of August 21.

The five-member volunteer board rejected an argument put forth by Macclenny contractor Rock Rhoden, who wanted to build four homes on five-acre lots on Deer Track Drive, a private unpaved road north of Glen St. Mary.

"I want to keep the county rural," Mr. Rhoden told the LPA. "I live on a dirt road. There's nothing wrong with dirt roads."

Furthermore, he said, his proposal would save taxpayers money because, if left private, the road would not become the county's responsibility to maintain.

"I think private roads are good because they don't cost the county anything," he said.

Mr. Rhoden originally went to the county planning department to submit an application for a new subdivision with five-acre lots on a private unpaved road. The four lots in question are part of a larger 60- to 70-acre parcel off Cottontail Lane east of Bob Burnsed Road.

After Planning Director Ed Preston denied his application Mr. Rhoden appealed the decision to the LPA.

"His application did not comply with the code," Mr. Preston told the board. "He challenged the ordinance."

In a report to the LPA panel, Mr. Preston said Mr. Rhoden "requested the county reconsider the requirement for direct access to a county-maintained paved road for all new subdivision lots anywhere in the county."

The Development Review Committee, which includes the fire department and emergency medical services, also recommended denial because of concerns that emergency vehicles might not be able to reach the homes due to impassable conditions during heavy rains.

According to the county zoning code:

"All roads and driveways within a subdivision shall be paved and constructed in accordance with the requirements set forth herein and within the Baker County Land Development Regulations.

"All subdivisions shall have direct paved access to the connection with a county-maintained road or street dedicated to public use which has been accepted for maintenance by the county or Florida Department of Transportation.

"If the county-maintained road or street is not paved, the developer shall pave the county road or street accepted by the county or state."

Mr. Rhoden said his lots are "on a high and dry sand hill" not likely to ever flood and that it would cost him "close to a million dollars" to comply with the paving requirements. He said such an expense discourages residential developments, which are needed to expand the county's tax base.

"I agree we need the developments," said LPA member John Adams. "That would be a nice place to build new homes."

However, Mr. Adams went on to say that "adverse weather can produce undue hardships" on people living on dirt roads, especially if they were cut off from emergency vehicles due to impassable road conditions.

He said the county's paved road ordinance, which was designed to ensure access to homes by emergency vehicles, was "a big deal when it was passed and it was considered to move the county forward in terms of development."

Fellow member Philip Zamarron, former chairman of the board, moved to reject Mr. Rhoden's appeal.

"I do not support Mr. Rhoden's application and I fully support your recommendation," Mr. Zamarron told Mr. Preston moments before his motion was approved.

A third member, Joseph DeFee, said he saw nothing wrong with the current ordinance but stated that he would be willing to support Mr. Rhoden's request for a special exception to the zoning to allow him to build the four houses without paving the road in front.

After the meeting Mr. Rhoden told Mr. Preston that he will return with an application for a special exception to the zoning code to allow him to build homes on the four lots with frontage on Deer Track Drive.

When that happens he may have Mr. DeFee on his side. Mr. DeFee announced during the meeting that he had to leave the board, but he could be present for one more meeting in October.

The only other case on the LPA agenda was an application for a special zoning exception to allow two family lots on a 29-acre parcel in a non-conforming subdivision at the west end of Harry Rewis Road, an unpaved road off CR 23A (Lowder Street).

The applicant, Mitch Canaday, told the board he wants to give his two sons two acres apiece on which to build their homesteads near his residence. The area is zoned agriculture with a density of no more than one residence for every 7.5 acres.

Mr. Preston recommended denial of the application because the parcel "was divided and developed without regard to subdivision regulations resulting in a non-conforming status."

A neighbor, Ron Robinson, appeared before the LPA board to offer his support for Mr. Canaday.

"I have no objection," Mr. Robinson told the board. "Use the common sense approach. If the man wants to give some land to his children, let the man do it."

The board unanimously approved the application for two family lots with two stipulations. No more than two family lots will be permitted and Mr. Canaday must give the county a 60-foot-wide easement on the road.

Driver subdued with Taser shots

It took several deputies and two shots with a Taser gun to subdue a Macclenny man in the parking lot of the Waffle House on South 6th in the early hours of August 31.

The suspect, Christopher Rodgers, 32, was followed by Lt. Scotty Rhoden as he turned onto the restaurant property about 2 a.m. Moments before, the officer saw the suspect's 2014 KIA northbound without headlights.

Christopher Rodgers

Lt. Rhoden was soon joined by Sgt. Shawn Bishara, who was working off-duty at the restaurant, and both officers had to quickly move out of the path of the KIA as Mr. Rodgers allegedly began backing up and nearly struck another vehicle.

A struggle ensued as the suspect attempted to drive off, at one point dragging both deputies along with him before they succeeded in placing the vehicle in park and taking the keys. They were soon joined by other deputies including Michael Hauge, who pried Mr. Rodgers' arms from the steering wheel and dragged him from the vehicle.

The driver continued to resist attempts to handcuff him on the ground, and Deputy Hauge applied the second Taser charge.

Mr. Rodgers was medically cleared before being booked at county jail for aggravated battery on the officers, resisting arrest, possession of marijuana and a grinder found in the KIA, driving on a suspended license and without headlights, and possession of an open container of alcohol.

Police also learned he was wanted in Columbia County on a probation violation.

In other recent arrests, Tyler Payne, 28, of Macclenny was charged with disorderly intoxication about midday on August 25 following complaints that he was knocking loudly on doors and looking into windows of residences on W. Minnesota Ave.

Mr. Payne, who Deputy Chris Walker said was under the influence of drugs, insisted he was looking for a girlfriend. He was taken to Fraser Hospital for evaluation of an accelerated heartbeat and later confined under the Baker Act for a mental health evaluation.

Deputy Koty Crews arrested a chronic driver's license offender the morning of August 27 when he spotted him at the wheel of an older Mercury on US 90 in Macclenny.

The officer said he was aware that Rushad Lee, 27, of Macclenny has never had a license and had been previously cited for the offense, and for three instances where he failed to pay traffic fines.

Another chronic offender, this one with 13 prior license suspensions, was arrested by Deputy Jeremiah Johnson late on September 1 following a traffic stop at North 6th and Linda St. in north Macclenny.

The officer said the tag light was not functioning on a 1995 Jeep driven by Jeremy Thomas, 30, of Jacksonville. He was also charged with having an expired Maryland license tag on the vehicle.

Vehicle occupants had drugs, paraphernalia

A county deputy arrested both occupants of a vehicle on drug-related charges after he stopped it in the north county for speeding the morning of August 27.

Deputy Trey McCullough said he pulled over a northbound 2002 Toyota pickup after clocking it at 76 mph in a 60 zone on SR 2 near the Eddy Grade.

Due to agitated behavior on the part of driver William Thesis, 56, of Livingston, Texas, the officer obtained consent to search the truck and found a crack pipe and residue in a cigarette pack. Mr. Thesis, who said he was en route to a hunting camp in Fargo, GA, admitted the pipe belonged to him.

The deputy also learned that passenger Michael Church, 50, of Jacksonville Beach was wanted in Statesville, N.C. for felony larceny, and during a search of his duffel bag he found a prescription steroid and a hypodermic needle.

The occupants were booked at county jail for possession of the drugs and paraphernalia.

In another arrest following a traffic stop, a Maxville man was charged early on August 30 with felony possession of two Xanax pills concealed in his wallet.

Deputies John Minkel and

Michael Hauge stopped the 1996 Chevrolet pickup driven by Richard Mills, 48, on South 6th St. shortly after 2 a.m. after observing it did not have a tag light, and that the driver did not use a turn signal.

Mr. Mills insisted he was holding the pills for a female passenger, who denied the allegation.

NEFSH patient arrest on sex offender warrant

A sheriff's investigator took a discharged patient at Northeast Florida State Hospital into custody on August 29 because he was wanted in Orlando for violating terms of an earlier release from custody as a sexual offender.

Investigator Tracie Benton, who handles sex crimes for the sheriff's department, said Dubric Mitchell, 73, was sought on a warrant for failure to re-register as an offender and failure to update his address.

Orange County had earlier advised of Mr. Mitchell's pending release from the mental hospital, and he was held at the local jail until transport to Orlando was arranged.

In other recent incidents at the state hospital, a 42-year-old female patient was named in a battery complaint for slapping employee Erika Womack, 43, of Glen St. Mary the morning of August 28.

The worker told Deputy Robert Simpkins the patient became irate when told she could not retrieve a jacket from her room because it has buttons she attempts to swallow.

Deputy Jacob Satterwhite filed a complaint for battery on August 25 based on a statement by a 53-year-old male patient that he was struck several times while sleeping by another male patient, age 31.

The attack allegedly occurred the previous weekend. Another patient-on-patient fight was reported the morning of September 2 and resulted in complaints filed against both parties.

Deputy Michael Antonini said one of the patients, a 43-year-old male, had an eye swollen shut when he interviewed him, and the other male, 52, had scratches on the arm and a facial abrasion.

Both gave conflicting and confusing versions of what transpired in a "day room" that morning.

Public urination leads to arrest for possessing coke

JON SHUMAKE
jonshu@live.com

A Sanderson man was arrested the afternoon of September 1 for cocaine possession after he was caught urinating off the side of County Road 127 and fled from police.

Deputy Trey McCullough tried approaching Otis Jones, 52, in his police car after seeing him on the roadside, but the suspect ran off when he saw the officer. Dep. McCullough chased after him with multiple commands to stop. The deputy threatened to taser the suspect, and Mr. Jones then complied with the officer's commands.

Dep. McCullough searched Mr. Jones after handcuffing him and found a crack cocaine pipe and a "substantial amount of Brillo pads," according to the officer's report. A small amount of cocaine residue was found inside the pipe.

Mr. Jones was also charged with indecent exposure, resisting arrest without violence and possession of drug paraphernalia.

In a similar incident, two Bay County residents were arrested the early morning of September 2 on separate drug charges, including possession of heroin, after police acted on an anonymous call about a suspicious vehicle at the Exxon station on SR-121.

Sergeant Benjamin Anderson spotted a vehicle that matched the description at a pump at the service station. He walked up to the driver's side and found Sean Pitts, 24, of Panama City rolling a blunt on top of a notebook covered by loose cigar tobacco. Sgt. Anderson illuminated the passenger side and saw Ashley Bolte, 31, of Lynn Haven shoving unknown objects into her wallet. The sergeant told her to stop and keep her hands visible until more police arrived.

After deputies Jeremiah Johnson and Jeremiah Combs got to the scene, Ms. Bolte was asked to step out of the vehicle, and she threw her wallet into her purse that was on the floorboard.

A clear bag of marijuana fell from Mr. Pitts' lap onto the floorboard when he exited the vehicle and he was placed under arrest.

Ms. Bolte told Sgt. Anderson a friend left drugs in the back floorboard and she was just putting them in her wallet. Four bags were found in her wallet, and both the bags and a compartment on her wallet had powdery residue. Two of the bags were tested and had positive results for heroin.

Police also found a plastic straw in the wallet with residue inside it.

In addition to the possession of heroin, Ms. Bolte was also charged with possession of drug paraphernalia.

CIRCUIT COURT

Probation violator sentenced

A Sanderson man was sentenced August 26 in circuit court to 24 months in prison for a string of violations to the probation agreement he accepted in November of last year for possession of controlled drugs.

Justin David Pearce, 31, was arrested in March of this year for burglary, possession of prescription drugs, marijuana and paraphernalia, court records indicate. At the time, he was on an 18-month probation imposed by Judge Mark Moseley. He also admitted that he failed to pay the cost of supervising his probation.

Justin Pearce

The judge allowed Mr. Pearce credit for 175 days in jail since his arrest. Prior to the 2013 sentencing, the defendant had a criminal record that included burglary, grand theft, criminal mischief, resisting arrest, domestic battery and possession of drug paraphernalia.

In other cases that day before Judge Moseley:

- Marcus Coleman will serve 150 days in county jail in return for a no contest plea to possession of cocaine.
- Tyler Trice pleaded no contest to grand theft and was granted the 60 days he has already been in jail as his total sentence.

• Judge Moseley accepted no contest pleas from Michael Williams of Lake City to 24 counts of fraud, making false statements and dealing in stolen property and ordered him to jail for an additional 80 days above the 100 days he has been confined.

Mr. Williams will be on probation 18 months following release. Court records indicate he cashed a $500 check written on the account of his girlfriend's father, and also stole jewelry and other property that he then pawned or sold for scrap.

The offenses occurred in April of this year.

• Jason Harris admitted to violating terms of his probation for possession of drugs and driving on a suspended license and Judge Moseley altered the sentence to house arrest.

• Darrell Thompson was ordered to county jail for 180 days after admitting he violated probation for drug trafficking and possession of controlled drugs.

Warrants were issued for two defendants who failed to appear that day: Shawn Pedro for felony driving with a revoked license and Ryan Darras for possession of controlled drugs, driving on a suspended license and having a non-assigned license tag.

Attacks husband on roadside

A Macclenny woman was charged the evening of August 30 with attacking her estranged husband during an argument that began east of the city on U.S. 90 and ended near the intersection of SRs 228 and 121 near the sheriff's department.

Deputy John Minkel arrested Deandra Harmon, 41, after noting bleeding scratch marks on the neck of Curtis Harmon, 40, at the scene where the fight was broken up by a passing pedestrian.

She allegedly first confronted Mr. Harmon in a parking lot of a scrap yard about 6 p.m. after suspecting he was en route to see another woman. They first talked and the husband admitted to pushing her away when she raised the tenor of her voice.

They left the scene in separate vehicles, but agreed to again talk it out near Macclenny Elementary where the argument escalated and they moved to the roadside on SR 228 where it turned physical.

Deputy Minkel determined Mrs. Harmon the primary aggressor and she was arrested for domestic battery. The estranged husband was named in a complaint for battery for allegedly shoving her.

In another incident, police arrested boyfriend Yonas Gebreyesus, 40, of Jacksonville for domestic battery on Abeba Admassu, 37, while she was working the afternoon of August 29 at the Citgo station on South 6th in Macclenny.

The victim, who is store manager, told Deputy John Hauber her boyfriend came to the store intoxicated and they argued about child support she is receiving from an ex-boyfriend.

He allegedly swung a backpack at her, striking her in the wrist, then fell into the cigarette case before attempting to stop her from calling police.

In other recent cases:

- A 14-year-old boy was charged with felony battery on a fellow male student, also 14, while riding a county school bus the afternoon of August 25.

Sgt. James Marker said he responded to the scene near U.S. 90 and Pine Top Rd. west of Glen St. Mary about 2:35 after driver Robert Johnson observed the two fighting and stopped the bus.

The victim was treated at Fraser Hospital for a laceration he received when struck repeatedly about the face and head, said Deputy Marker.

The youth who was charged said the fight started because a friend of the victim was sitting on his backpack and refused to move, and the accused responded to the victim's threat to beat him up.

The officer said he viewed a surveillance tape the following day, confirming the accused was the aggressor.

Both boys are from the Sanderson area.

• A second school bus fight, this one the following day, resulted in civil citations filed against both combatants, boys

12 and 13 years old and from the Macclenny area.

Deputy Justin Yingling said the incident was reported by driver Debra Lauramore, who stopped the bus on SR 228 near the sheriff's complex. Officers took conflicting statements from the two boys, who accused each other of provoking the fisticuff.

Henrietta Yarbrough loved to sing

Mrs. Henrietta Louise Yarbrough, 95 of Macclenny, passed away Wednesday, August 27, 2014. Henrietta was born and grew up in Minersville, PA. She was one of eight children. As a teenager, she headed to Hollywood, CA to pursue a singing/dancing/acting career. A chance encounter at a sandwich shop, owned by Roy Yarbrough, changed everything. Less than a year later, Henrietta and Roy were married and lived in Taylor, FL. Eventually they moved to Macclenny and opened Roy's Service Station. Over the next 20 something years, Henrietta enjoyed greeting and visiting with everyone who stopped in, whether it was for service, gas or just a cold Coca Cola.

Henrietta Yarbrough

Henrietta enjoyed fishing, gardening, needlework and many other crafts. She never made it to Hollywood, but always enjoyed singing, dancing and acting, though her performances were limited to mostly family. She truly was a star!

She was raised a strict Roman Catholic, but she began attending Raiford Road Church in the late 1950's. In the early 1960's, while watching a Billy Graham Crusade on TV, she made the decision to enter into a personal relationship with Christ Jesus. She always got excited about sharing that story!

Henrietta was a friend to all that met her and willingly gave unconditionally of herself, her love and all she had.

She lived the past few years at Macclenny Nursing and Rehab. Over those years, the staff there became more family and friends than health care providers. She dearly loved each and everyone of them. She was blessed to have been lovingly cared for by the staff during those years and received the best of care by all.

She is survived by her daughter Mary Jane "Janie" (Mike) Dennard of Macclenny; grandchildren George (Diane) Barg of Jacksonville, Judith (Luis) Perez of Colorado Springs, CO, and Brent Dennard of Macclenny; two great-grandchildren, two great great-grandchildren; son-in-law Bill Barg of Macclenny, and daughter-in-law Kathleen Yarbrough of Kernersville, NC. She was preceded in death by her parents Michael and Dora Kuntz; all of her siblings; husband Roy Yarbrough; children Ruby Barg, Michael V. Yarbrough, and an infant son.

A graveside service was held September 2, 2014 at Taylor Cemetery, Taylor, Florida with Reverend Eddie Griffis officiating. Arrangements are under the care and direction of Forbes Funeral Home.

years, Greg Callaway and Keith Jordan with 15 years, Jerry Jordan with 10 years, Marquis Turner with 10 years and Mark Ray with five years.

Another BCI staffer was also recently touted by the Guardian Ad Litem program.

Sgt. Patricia Jennings, who has been with the Florida Department of Corrections since 1999, was named child advocate of the month for August.

She has served as a volunteer guardian to children in Circuit 4 for the last 17 months and is very consistent and dependable, according to the program's newsletter.

"She has never missed a visit and always knows every little detail about the children she is assigned to," the newsletter reads. "She writes her own judicial reviews, attends all court hearings and staffings if her work schedule permits, and buys her kids birthday presents to make their day special."

Pastor Scott and Pastor Chester Shoupe, thank you for your words of kindness and encouragement. Thanks also to the fellow pastors who attended the service, and to Pastor Larry Graham and the Crews Boys for their songs and support. Thanks so much to everyone who provided food, drinks and supplies. We appreciate the love and hard work everyone showed to us, even if it was only a visit; those were important as well. ## Drunk mom arrested for yanking at her son

An intoxicated south Macclenny woman was arrested the late afternoon of September 1 for domestic battery on her young son who she was attempting to snatch away from the arms of her husband.

Tiara Waters, 25, was in an agitated state when Deputy Jeremiah Johnson responded to the disturbance call about 5:30 off Clay Hole Trail, and noted she had been pulled to the ground by her brother Dalton Bennett, 23, because he was concerned about the child's safety.

Terry Waters, 32, said he returned to the couple's residence earlier and that his wife had been drinking with her mother. They argued, and she went to the home of a neighbor where the second altercation took place. Ms. Waters allegedly grabbed the child by the neck in an attempt to free him from her husband.

She was also booked for disorderly intoxication, and Deputy Ben Anderson administered a dose of pepper spray when the suspect refused to calm herself and cease kicking and banging her head against windows of a patrol car where she was placed in handcuffs.

In another arrest a short time later, Chelsy Croft, 24, of Olustee was charged with disorderly intoxication after she was found inside the residence of Rose Wilcox on Sam Green Rd.

Deputy Johnny Hodges said the incident was first reported as a burglary, and he confronted Ms. Croft at Olustee Park off U.S. 90. She initially refused to show her hands while seated on a picnic table with Timothy Cason, 46, a neighbor of Ms. Wilcox who was not charged.

The officer complied with Ms. Wilcox's request that Ms. Croft not be charged with entering her home, and instead ordered under threat of arrest to stay off the property.

Boosters donate drums to Westside

JOEL ADDINGTON
MANAGING EDITOR

Baker County Friends of the Instrumental Arts, a nonprofit group benefiting local music programs, has raised nearly $25,000 in its five-year history, including funds for an 18-piece drum set donated to Westside Elementary School last week.

The Remo brand drums from Steve Weiss Music came in various sizes and varieties and were valued at $1086. The set had three bongos, three floor toms, four gathering drums, three djembes, three kongas and three tubanos.

Westside music teacher Debbie Fortuna said the gift will give every child the opportunity to play a drum at the same time. They'll also replace older, worn drums.

"And there's no way we could have done this without BCFA," said Ms. Fortuna, referring to Baker County Friends of Instrumental Arts, whose president Brad Good, secretary Merredith Oakes and treasurer Kim Pietrowski presented the drums to the school the morning of August 29.

Another instrument, an electronic keyboard, will be donated at the nonprofit's next board of directors meeting on September 9.

The donation at Westside was the first for the school from BCFA. "Every community needs something like this," added Ms. Fortuna.

The group has three upcoming fundraisers to benefit its programs — a gun raffle in the fall, a haunted house at the high school October 24-25, a first-time event, and the annual Breakfast with Santa benefit on December 13.

Ms. Pietrowski said volunteers are welcome, particularly high school students who need community service hours. She said the organization is also looking for a volunteer grant writer to help secure additional funding to benefit the instrumental arts in Baker County.

For more information, please e-mail Ms. Pietrowski at treasurer@bcfia.org or visit www.bcfia.org.

E-cigarettes have risks, too Groups warn of new smoking trend

FROM STUDENTS WORKING AGAINST TOBACCO AND BAKER COUNTY TOBACCO FREE PARTNERSHIP

If you saw one of these in a pocket, purse or backpack, would you recognize it for what it is? It looks like lipstick, mascara or a pen but it's actually an electronic cigarette that emits a sweet smelling vapor. These come in fruit and candy flavors. There's banana split, cotton candy, sweet tart, cola and pina colada. One maker says 30,000 flavor combinations are possible. Although they may look attractive and smell good, they are not harmless.

E-cigarettes are unregulated and contain nicotine. All the major tobacco companies own e-cigarette brands and they are marketing them just like they used to market tobacco before the practices were banned. E-cigarette liquid (nicotine) is poisonous and a teaspoon of it can kill a small child. Another concern is that e-cigarette cartridges can be filled with other liquefied drugs and inhaled.

The number of Florida high school students who had tried e-cigarettes doubled from 6 percent in 2011 to 12.1 percent in 2013.

E-cigarette use has become popular with Baker youth. All tobacco use is high in Baker County when compared to the rest of the state. Baker youth have a tobacco usage rate of 21.5 percent for any form of tobacco, double the state rate of 11.2 percent. The use of spit tobacco is prevalent in Baker County Schools with youth usage at 12.9 percent — almost 4 times the state rate of 3.5 percent.

The school district's tobacco policy which was adopted in 2012, prohibits all forms of tobacco including e-cigarettes.

It prohibits use by everyone at all times on all school properties and at all school events. Youth who violate the tobacco policy by using or possessing tobacco products are issued a non-criminal citation.

They can either do 16 hours of community service or pay a $30 fine and must also attend a series of four tobacco education classes. Those who do not comply with the penalty have their driver's license suspended or a hold put on them getting one until compliance is met. The reason for all tobacco policies is to prevent the starting of tobacco use and to encourage users to quit.

Tobacco addiction is difficult to overcome and deadly. For those trying to beat it, there are some methods that are proven effective to help. Counseling and nicotine replacement can double the success rate. Used together they can triple it. Area Health Education Centers offer classes along with free nicotine replacement at the Baker County Health Department.

Online counseling and phone counseling are available through Tobacco Free Florida. Get help if you need it by calling 259-6291.

Dangers of drowsy driving

FROM THE FLORIDA DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAY SAFETY

Do you fight to keep your eyes open and your head up when you are tired?

All too often this scenario is real on by driver fatigue and to bring awareness to the dangers of drowsy driving, the Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles and the Florida Department of Transportation are teaming up with lawmakers and safety advocates during Florida's Drowsy Driving Prevention Week September 1-7 in memory of Ronshay Dugan, who was killed in 2008.

"Alert Drivers make for safer roads," says DHSMV director Terry L. Rhodes. "To help get everyone home safely, the department reminds motorists never to drive tired."

FDOT Secretary Ananth Prasad said, "The department recognizes that making our roads safer includes driver responsibility and encourages all motorists not to drive drowsy. Be alert every trip, every time you get behind the wheel."

"Six years ago, the life of a little girl was tragically taken in a crash that easily could have been prevented," added state Rep. Alan Williams, who sponsored prevention week legislation in 2010. "Drowsy driving can be eliminated by simply planning and making a conscious decision to pull over and rest when you're tired. I applaud Ronshay's family for keeping her memory alive and fighting to prevent other senseless deaths."

The state offers these tips for preventing fatigue driving:

- Allow plenty of time to get to your destination.
- Avoid driving times when normally you'd be sleeping.
- Drink caffeine.
- Drive sober.
- Get a good night's sleep before traveling.
- Take a break every two hours.
- Take a 15-20 minute nap in a safe place if you think you're falling asleep.
- Use the buddy system and switch drivers when needed.

Take time to be a dad today.

Lady Cat volleyball nabs two more wins

JON SHUMAKE
jonshu@live.com

The Lady Cat volleyball team's hot start under first-year coach Ashley Holton continued this week when the girls remained undefeated with wins over Union County and Suwannee.

The team improved to a perfect 3-0 with a successful home debut September 2 when it beat Union County 3-1 (23-25, 25-17, 25-17, 25-22) in a close game.

After dropping their first set of the season, the Lady Cats responded well to easily take the second set with the help of a seven-point rally. The ladies pulled away late in the third set to take the lead in the game.

Two rallies of five and four points helped the girls take the decisive back-and-forth fourth set after trailing by four early in the set.

The hard-fought win over the Lady Tigers followed the team's 3-0 (25-19, 25-19, 25-19) win August 28 over hosting Suwannee.

The Lady Cats will look to remain unbeaten when they open up District 3-5A play September 4 at Stanton, who ended Baker County's season in last year's district tournament. The team will return home September 8 when it hosts West Nassau.

Jackets sting Wildcats in opener, 20-6

The Baker High Wildcats put up a tough fight August 29 in their season opener, but ultimately fell 20-6 to the visiting St. Augustine Yellow Jackets to start the year out 0-1.

St. Augustine's tandem rushing attack of Patrick Stewart and Jaques Russell gashed the Cats' defense for almost 200 yards and combined for the Yellow Jackets' two touchdowns. The punishing ground game neutralized star defensive end CeCe Jefferson for most of the contest and ate up valuable time off the clock.

Still, Baker County kept the game close and had a chance to pull within one score in the fourth quarter. After Jacob Carter completed a pass to Zach Rafuse to pick up a much-needed fourth-down conversion, the Cats were forced to punt four plays later and pinned St. Augustine deep with about nine minutes remaining. The Yellow Jackets were able to run the clock out to secure the hard-fought victory.

"The team played tough," head coach Tom MacPherson said. "I told the guys they have nothing to be ashamed of. We played one of the best teams in Northeast Florida pretty damn tough and if a couple things go our way that's a different ball game."

The Cats started out fast and the defense looked dominant early. Jefferson wreaked havoc in the opening minutes of the game as his pressure helped Pooby Jackson drop St. Augustine quarterback Cole Northrop on a sack in the first possession. In the Yellow Jackets' next possession, Jefferson tipped a pass incomplete before forcing Russell to fumble, which gave the Cat offense the ball on St. Augustine's 26-yard line.

Facing fourth-and-6 after the turnover, Carter completed a beautiful 22-yard touchdown pass to Reggie Givens to give Baker County a 6-0 lead midway through the first quarter. Coach MacPherson said he decided to go for it to excite the crowd in his first home game.

"It's your first game in a new town and you're playing one of the best teams in Northeast Florida," he said. "We knew what the coverage was and what we liked versus that coverage, so why not go for it?"

The lead didn't last long, however, as St. Augustine responded with a 10-play scoring drive capped off by Stewart's 1-yard touchdown run.

A poor punt after a three-and-out on Baker County's next possession gave the Yellow Jackets the ball on the Cats' 34-yard line. Russell wasted no time finding the end zone on a 34-yard scoring run on St. Augustine's first play of the series to give his team a 14-6 lead at the end of the first quarter.

ond quarter as the team put together a long drive that was aided by two Yellow Jacket penalties. Seth Paige set the team up with a first down on the 5-yard line, but suffered a shoulder injury on the play and didn't return to the game. The offense stagnated in the freshman's absence and Carter missed a field goal to end the drive.

"He's my go-to guy on offense," coach MacPherson said of Paige. "I use him for everything. Once he went down we didn't really have a backup for him and it really affected our offense for the rest of the way. We've got to do a better job of getting the rest of our players to learn our offense."

With the Cats struggling to move the ball, St. Augustine put together several sustained drives to run down the clock. The Yellow Jackets added field goals in the second and fourth quarter to make the score 20-6, but they spent most of the second half grinding away the clock.

The Cats will try to pick up their first win of the season September 5 when they travel to Bradford County.

Volleyball B-Cats merge Sole opening win against Yulee

JON SHUMAKE
jonshu@live.com

The Lady Bobcat volleyball program's quest to repeat as conference champions got off to a slow start as the two teams combined for one win their first week of play.

Volleyball tryouts were held during the first week of school and gave the Lady B-Cats only three days of practice to prepare for the season. Both the A-team and B-team lost on August 28 against visiting Yulee, but coach Angela Lauramore said the girls played well despite the losses.

The B-team picked up the middle school's only volleyball win of the opening week August 26 when it defeated Wilkinson in front of a home crowd. The A-team couldn't match the B-team's success and fell to the visiting team.

Both teams started off the year with a loss August 25 at Lake Asbury.

The Lady Bobcats will try to get some momentum rolling September 4 when they host Hilliard and then at Bradford the following day.
