

A is an Artist, who copies so well,
That likeness from sitter one scarcely can tell.

B is a Blacksmith, who hammers away

With a clang and a clatter throughout the whole day.

C is a Cobbler, who sticks to his last,
His work strong and neat, though he stitches so fast.

D is a Dressmaker, whose work seems but play,

For she's making a dress for her own wedding day.
