Former employees: Superintendent told staff who to talk to, what to say and who to 'Like'

by Teresa Eubanks, Journal Editor

"I've dedicated many years here only to be pushed out the door," says Jason Fowler, 35, who served as technology supervisor and special assignment teacher for the Liberty County School District until he decided it was time to go.

He left his position May 22. The next day, he started working at Tallahassee Community College.

Fowler and new School Superintendent Gloria "Gay" Uzzell clashed soon after she took office last October. It was no secret that he supported the incumbent School Superintendent.

At that time Fowler, who was in charge of the school's email system, was surprised in December when Uzzell changed the password on a current employee's email account "not knowing they had blocked her out of the account for a reason."

And while employee emails are public record, it concerned him that Uzzell was personally monitoring communication between staff members without the school board's knowledge.

"I didn't agree with her leadership style," Fowler said. "She told me who to talk to and what I should say when people asked how she was as a superintendent."

He said many other employees got that message as well.

Something as casual as clicking "LIKE" on a friend's Facebook post could result in an angry call from Uzzell, as was done when employee Joan Hall congratulated Fowler and his wife on their anniversary on their Facebook page, he said. Hall addressed the issue at the last school board meeting.

Uzzell contacted the sheriff's office in an effort to have trespass warnings issued against Fowler and others. "She's made posts on Facebook that I had stalked her and called her on a number she said I wasn't supposed to have, which is a flatout lie," Fowler states emphatically. "She tried to have criminal charges brought against me on June 3, nearly two weeks after I resigned."

He decided to resign on May 17 and wanted to tell her personally. He said he called the office at 4 p.m. to schedule a meeting with the superintendent. He and his wife were about five minutes away in their truck, heading home, but planned to stop and speak with Uzzell. He was told she had just left to go to Hosford

School. When he drove by the school board office, he saw her and another school employee leaving the parking lot in separate vehicles.

Fowler said he continued on to his home to collect the items he needed to turn in, which included computers and keys. He returned to the office to hand in his letter of resignation and the school property to Gay Lewis, Director of Instruction.

He left a voice mail with the superintendent's secretary to let Uzzell know the items had been handed in.

As he drove down Pea Ridge Road on his way home, he saw Uzzell's car at her parents' house. He made a second call to Uzzell's office and left another voice mail with her secretary in which he pointed out that although he had been told a few minutes earlier she was going to Hosford, she was actually already home.

Uzzell later gave the voice messages to the sheriff's office as proof when she accused Fowler of stalking and harassing her.

Even though he's got a new job, Fowler says his problems are not over.

Buddy Money appointed Liberty Co. Sheriff

by Teresa Eubanks, Journal Editor

BRISTOL – Walter Lee "Buddy" Money, 57, was appointed by Governor Rick Scott to take over the duties of Liberty County Sheriff on an interim basis last week.

Money was advised of his selection shortly before 9 a.m. Wednesday, July 3. The governor's office issued an announcement that afternoon and Money was then sworn in by Liberty County Judge Kenneth Hosford. His term officially began on Friday, July 5.

Money, a Liberty County native who is a registered Republican, was an officer with the Coral Gables Police Department for over 22 years. He took on the duties of Victim's Advocate with the Liberty County Sheriff's Office in 2008.

Money currently lives in Clarksville but indicated he would be moving to Bristol after renovating a home here.

Governor Scott said, "Buddy is a seasoned and effective law enforcement officer and I am confident that he will serve the families of Liberty County with honor and distinction during this interim term."

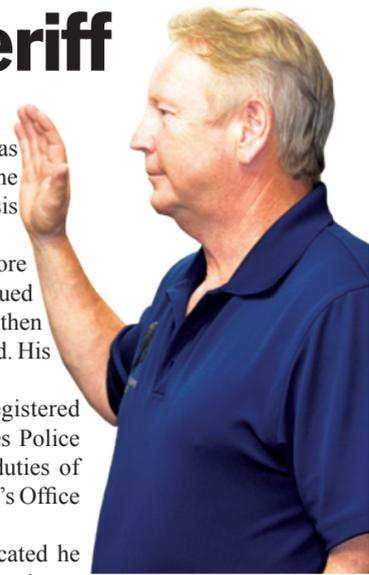

Sheriff Nick Finch, who was elected Nov. of 2012, was suspended from office June 4 for official misconduct after he released a man a deputy had charged with carrying a concealed weapon and then allegedly destroyed records of the arrest.

On Monday, Money - who replaced Interim Sheriff Carl Causey, an FDLE agent who took over the sheriff's duties for one month - said the transition was going smoothly.

His immediate goal is to get some additional training for deputies and "just try to make it through this budget year," he said.

There was much speculation about who would be wearing the sheriff's star in Finch's absence. The suspended sheriff said he thought the governor made a good choice in selecting Money. "Buddy's a good man," Finch said. "I think he will do a fantastic job."

The sheriff's office is now seeking applicants to apply for the job of Victim's Advocate but will continue to provide the services for citizens in need despite the vacancy.

King is third LCSO employee arrested in four months Liberty Sheriff's Office dispatcher arrested for buying hydrocodone

by Teresa Eubanks,
Journal Editor

BRISTOL - A dispatcher with the Liberty County Sheriff's Office was arrested at work Friday morning after paying a confidential informant $20 for four hydrocodone pills, according to an arrest report.

Jackie King was charged with purchase of a controlled substance.

The sheriff's office conducted a reverse sting after learning that King had previously solicited pain medication from her co-workers, Capt. Tim Partridge said.

A confidential informant contacted King Thursday evening by text message and offered to sell her the pills. The arrest report said King arranged to make the exchange when she arrived for work Friday morning.

King was taken into custody and relieved of her duties following the transaction, which took place in the LCSO Communications office and was recorded.

King admitted buying the pills and said she was doing it to help the informant "with gas money."

JACKIE JONES KING

She is the third Liberty County Sheriff's Office employee to be arrested this year.

Jail Administrator Jenny Young was charged with grand theft in April, following an investigation that began after her Jan. 1 resignation when the newly-elected Sheriff Nick Finch took office.

Investigators said over $1,000 in jail funds, along with three computers, went missing shortly after she left the job.

Finch was arrested June 4 on a charge of official misconduct following an investigation by FDLE which concluded he had removed an arrest record from the jail file, had a man's name "whited out" from the handwritten booking log and released him from custody after a traffic stop resulted in a charge of possession of a concealed weapon.

The suspended sheriff is also named in a sexual harassment complaint filed with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in which a former jail nurse, who worked for less than a month before being let go, claims she was fired for rejecting the sheriff's advances.

Large marijuana plant found in Sumatra during search for Youth Camp runaways Liberty County Sheriff's Office Captains Tim Partridge and Wes Harsey are shown with a large marijuana plant they came across off Third Street in Sumatra during a search for two runaway juveniles that escaped from the Apalachicola Forest Youth Camp on Thursday.

No arrest was made due to the lack of sufficient evidence to prove who the owner was. The plant was seized.

Arraignment Wednesday for suspended Sheriff Finch

Suspended Liberty County Sheriff Nick Finch is scheduled to be arraigned Wednesday, but he won't be there.

Instead, his attorney James P. Judkins, has already filed the paperwork for the Judge William Gary to review.

The sheriff is charged with official misconduct and falsifying public records.

Finch said he is pleading not guilty to both charges and demanding a jury trial, although he expects at some point "we will file for a motion to dismiss."

Experts say arm kids with tools to keep them safe from abuse

TALLAHASSEE – Summer is an important time for parents to arm children with information to keep them safe from sexual abuse. That's why the Florida Department of Children and Families and Lauren's Kids teamed up to provide new educational tools for parents, children and youth-serving organizations.

The summer safety push includes launch of a free online parent toolkit to help parents talk with their children about how to stay safe through videos, interactive scenarios and parent and kid tips. Also available is an online Web training and handbooks for youth-serving organizations to teach their staff and volunteers how to spot and report abuse, and protocols to keep children, staff and volunteers safe.

Parents also can benefit from the resources of the "Don't Miss the Signs" campaign, a comprehensive public awareness campaign that launched earlier this year that aims to educate Floridians about the signs of child abuse as well as their obligation to report suspected abuse.

Ninety percent of child sexual abuse victims know their offender in some way.

"Sex offenders seek out places where children are, so youth-serving organizations need to keep their guard up and learn how to be a strong first line of defense against sexual abuse," said Department of Children and Families Secretary David Wilkins.

To promote a safer summer experience, Florida requires all owners, operators, employees and volunteers who work more than 10 hours a month to undergo background screening for state and criminal histories. DCF wants to remind summer camp operators of Florida's background screening requirements and encourages them to add their summer camp listings to DCF's statewide database.

Area community band to have first organizational meeting July 16

Former Marianna High Band Director and several local musicians want to organize a community band that could add to the fine arts in the area. "It would be a volunteer group which would practice a few times before a concert and perform for the locals in second-time around concerts that will satisfy older musicians to continue the great loves of band music," according to Royce Reagan.

The organizational meeting will be held on Tuesday, July 16 at 6:30 p.m. in the old Chipola Arts Center, which is now called the Chipola Cultural Center. No need for horns and equipment for this first meeting, this is just a time to set details for the Panhandle Community Band. Reagan encourages band lovers to come and bring someone else for the 50-minute get-together in anticipation of another fun time for musicians. For more information, call (850) 526-6609.

The myths of Gettysburg

WASHINGTON—The Battle of Gettysburg fought 150 years ago on July 1-3, 1863, instantly engendered a series of myths and legends, many of which have lived on to the present. Among these are:

1. Gettysburg was the turning point of the Civil War and High Tide of the Confederacy.

Following the battle, the opportunity arose for Gen. Robert E. Lee to detach Lt. Gen. James Longstreet's I Corps and reinforce Gen. Braxton Bragg's Army of Tennessee. It would be the only time in the war when a Confederate army would have numerical superiority over a major Federal army.

Confederate President Jefferson Davis wanted Lee to replace Bragg, but Lee demurred, and Davis, in what proved to be his greatest mistake of the war, failed to press the point. Bragg did win a major victory at Chickamauga on September 19-20, 1863, and, except for the men remaining with Maj. Gen. George H. Thomas, the Federal retreat was a rout. The controversial and irascible Bragg failed to follow up the victory, inciting Maj. Gen. Nathan Bedford Forrest to storm into his headquarters and accuse him of cowardice. The aggressive Lee would never have missed such an opportunity.

Had that Federal army been destroyed, the Federal armies on the Mississippi and Potomac could not have sent sufficient reinforcements to protect Kentucky, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and the war most likely would have ended. And so the turning point of the Civil War was reached with a lost opportunity after Chickamauga rather than a lost battle at Gettysburg.

2. Pickett's Charge was primarily comprised of Pickett's Division.

Maj. Gen. George Pickett's fresh Division, arrived after the first two days' fighting, and it was joined in the fateful Confederate charge on the third day by Maj. Gen. Harry Heth's and Maj. Gen. Dorsey Pender's depleted divisions, then commanded, respectively, by Brig. Gen. James Pettigrew and Maj. Gen. Isaac Trimble.

3. Maj. Gen. George G. Meade's tactical leadership was the primary factor in the Federal victory.

Meade did not arrive until early on the second day of battle, and the first day's fighting resulted in the near destruction of two of his seven corps. On the second day, Meade failed to protect his left flank at Little Round Top, an oversight corrected at the last moment by Brig. Gen. Gouverneur K. Warren, his chief of engineers.

Also on that day, Maj. Gen. Daniel Sickles, ignoring Meade's orders, thrust his III Corps forward in a salient where it was mauled in the Wheat Field and Peach Orchard, but in the process thwarted the Confederate flanking attack that culminated at Little Round Top.

On the third and last day of battle, Meade did position his battered forces to prepare for Lee's final effort.

4. Maj. Gen. George G. Meade could have destroyed Gen. Robert E. Lee's Army of Northern Virginia.

By the end of July 3, 1863, both armies had lost about a third of their men in killed, wounded, and missing. In the end, Federal defensive positions on Culp's Hill, Cemetery Hill, Cemetery Ridge, and Little Round Top had proven decisive. Accordingly, Lee arrayed his forces along Seminary Ridge to await Meade's counter attack on July 3rd and 4th. But by then, neither army was in a position to assault such heights, a fact Meade wisely understood. It would have been Pickett's Charge in reverse.

During Lee's retreat to Virginia, Meade did miss an opportunity to strike at Williamsport, but even there Meade realized that a frontal attack against prepared defenses might prove to be folly. The following year's fighting would prove him right.

5. Lincoln's eloquent November 19, 1863, Gettysburg Address was a call for peace and reconciliation.

In fact, this most famous of American speeches was a call to arms, a call to continue the war, and continue it did, with more men dying in battle in the final year and a half of war following the speech than had died in the preceding two and a half years. In the bloody fighting in the summer of 1864 alone, the Federal Army of the Potomac commanded by Maj. Gen. Meade and accompanied by Lt. Gen. U.S. Grant lost more men than Lee had in the entire Army of Northern Virginia.

The war began with Confederate President Jefferson Davis proclaiming, "All we ask is to be let alone," and President Lincoln stating, "My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union." The Gettysburg Address added his corollary that supreme sacrifices confirmed that cause:

"It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain . . ."

Released panther gives birth

Biologists with the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) have discovered that a female Florida panther rescued as an orphaned kitten and raised in captivity has given birth just a few months after her release back into the wild. Biologists found an approximately 1-month-old female kitten recently in the Fakahatchee Strand Preserve State Park in southwest Florida, near where they released the young adult panther on Jan. 31.

"We were very excited to find this panther's kitten," said Dave Onorato, FWC panther biologist. "The fact that this panther has given birth is positive news for the recovery of this endangered species and a testament to the hard work of all involved in its rescue and rehabilitation."

Biologists estimate the female panther became pregnant about three weeks after her release, when she was only 21 months old. That age is somewhat younger than the typical age of first conception for female panthers the FWC has documented.

While biologists are encouraged the female became a contributor to the population so quickly, it was not completely unexpected, given that her home range is within prime panther habitat.

After discovering the kitten over the weekend, biologists evaluated its health and tagged it for identification purposes to document whether it eventually becomes part of the adult population. An estimated 100 to 160 adult and subadult panthers remain in south Florida.

"Kitten survival rates are pretty low, but this kitten looked healthy and feisty," said Onorato. "The kitten has a chance of one day contributing to the population as well."

The FWC rescued the now young adult panther and its brother as 5-month-old kittens in September 2011 after their mother was found dead. They were then raised at the White Oak Conservation Center in Yulee until they were ready for release. The FWC released the male panther in April at the Rotenberger Wildlife Management Area in south Florida.

Florida residents can support panther conservation efforts through the purchase of a "Protect the Panther license plate." Fees from license plate sales are the primary funding source for the FWC's research and management of Florida panthers.

"The success story of this once orphaned panther giving birth in the wild following its rescue and rehabilitation would not be possible without license plate funds," said Carol Knox, FWC's Imperiled Species Section Leader.

*To report dead or injured panthers, call the FWC's Wildlife Alert Hotline at (888) 404-FWCC (3922), #FWC or FWC on a cell phone, or text Tip@MyFWC.com.

July 17 meeting in Jackson Co. to plan future of the Apalachee WMA

A 10-year plan for the Apalachee Wildlife Management Area (WMA) will be presented at a Wednesday, July 17, public hearing in Jackson County.

People are invited to attend the 7 p.m. public hearing at the Jackson County Commission Chambers, 2864 Madison St., in Marianna.

Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) staff will present the draft land-management plan for FWC-managed portions of the Apalachee WMA, a nearly 8,000-acre tract of rolling upland forests, farms and marshes on the western shores of the Chattahoochee River and Lake Seminole in north Florida.

Apalachee WMA protects habitat for imperiled and native species such as fox squirrels, gopher tortoises, little blue herons, bald eagles and alligators, making it a popular place for wildlife viewing. It is a good area for deer, duck and quail hunting, with some of the largest deer in the state taken here. Additionally, the WMA is nationally known as a destination for people hoping to catch largemouth, hybrid striped and white bass in Lake Seminole. People can hike and ride horses here as well.

At the public hearing, the public will be encouraged to ask questions and comment on the draft plan. An overview of the plan is available at MyFWC.com/media/2582810/AWMA-Overview.pdf.

"The Apalachee WMA was purchased to ensure the preservation of fish and wildlife resources, other natural and cultural resources, and for fish and wildlife-based public outdoor recreation," said Rebecca Shelton, FWC land conservation biologist. "This draft plan will specify how we intend to do that."

All lands purchased with public funds must have a management plan that ensures the property will be managed in a manner that is consistent with the intended purposes of the purchase.

Hunting and fishing regulations are not included in this plan or meeting; those are addressed through a separate public process.

To obtain a copy of the draft land management prospectus for Apalachee WMA, please call Diana Kilgore at (850) 487-9588, or email Diana.Kilgore@MyFWC.com.

For background and more information on management plans and their goals, visit MyFWC.com/Conservation and select "Terrestrial Programs" then "Management Plans."

ANF volunteer camp hosts sought for Camel Lake, Wright Lake and Lost Lake

TALLAHASSEE – The Apalachicola National Forest is accepting applications for volunteer camp hosts at various recreation sites throughout the forest. Campground hosts play a key role in supporting forest activities and projecting a friendly, helpful face to visitors.

Volunteers that support our campgrounds receive a free site that includes full hookups, propane reimbursement and tools needed for the job, in exchange for 30 hours of service per week. Camp hosts on the Apalachicola National Forest are unpaid volunteer positions. The time requirement may be divided up when there is more than one individual occupying the host site.

Some of the duties that camp hosts are required to perform include welcoming visitors and providing them with information about the forest, performing general site maintenance and assisting Forest Service personnel. Current positions available include camp hosts for:

•Lost Lake Recreation Area, a trailhead for the off-road motorcycle trail system in the Apalachicola National Forest in Leon County;

•Camel Lake Recreation Area, surrounding one of the few crystal-clear lakes its recreation area provides a quiet place to relax and take in the beauty of the longleaf pine forest in Liberty County;

•Wright Lake Recreation Area, surrounds a spring-fed lake offering both a day use area for swimming, picnicking and hiking, as well as a campground in a beautiful forest setting in Franklin County.

Volunteers of all ages can apply for positions and individuals under 18 years old may volunteer with signed permission from a parent or guardian. The Apalachicola offers diverse projects and a chance for an individual or group to become involved in meeting visitors, working in a natural setting and learning about the forest.

Groups are welcome to help with individual projects such as trail maintenance, forest cleanups, recreation area projects and various other activities.

The Apalachicola National Forest, at 571,088 acres, is within short driving distance from Tallahassee and the beaches at Carrabelle and St. George Island. Outdoor recreational activities are centered on campgrounds, lakefront beaches, hiking, fishing, boating and OHV and equestrian trails. Other attractions include the Florida National Scenic Trail and Bradwell Bay Wilderness.

For more information on volunteering, contact Crystal Dillard at (850) 575-9064 ext. 6618 or e-mail at cddillard@fs.fed.us. Interested applicants can also go to www.volunteer.gov/gov/ to fill out an application.

Ten trees to be planted with new Arbor Day membership

America's forestland is a prized natural resource, and anyone can help plant trees in these vital areas by joining the Arbor Day Foundation this month.

Through the Replanting Our National Forests campaign, the Arbor Day Foundation will honor each new member who joins in July by planting 10 trees in forests that have been devastated by wildfires, insects and disease.

The cost for joining the Arbor Day Foundation is a $10 donation.

America's national forests face enormous challenges, including unprecedented wildfires that have left a backlog of more than one million acres in need of replanting. The Foundation has worked with the United States Forest Service for more than 20 years to plant trees in high-need forests.

Our national forests provide habitat for wildlife, keep the air clean and help ensure safe drinking water for more than 180 million Americans.

To join the Arbor Day Foundation and help plant trees in our national forests, send a $10 membership contribution to Replanting Our National Forests, Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, or visit arborday.org/july.

REFLECTING on rainy days

JIM McCLELLAN'S OUTDOORS Down South

As I write this, we've now had several days of rain and, as much as I complained about the drought, I'm ready for some sunshine and clear skies. The damp, dreary conditions haven't kept me from fishing, though. And as I was drying out from my latest trip, I started thinking about the stormy weather I've experienced and how different circumstances changed the way I felt about it.

As a small child, I can remember my grandmother, Mother Mac, being incredibly paranoid about thunder and lightning. At the outset of a thunderstorm, she would unplug the television, turn off the lights and make us sit on her couch. (Because it was foam rubber.) It's easy to look back and say she was just being silly, but Florida is the lightning capital of the world and I guess it's hard to argue with success. After all, we never got struck once at her house.

Thunderstorms could also put an end to the fun when we were at Mexico Beach for the summers. As soon as the lightning flashed a couple of times, we would have to leave the water and go back up to Grandmother Hentz's cottage. In those days, there was precious little for a kid to do at Mexico Beach even under the best conditions. Add to that being trapped inside the cottage and it was like doing hard time for a seven- or eight-year-old. (Reading materials down there included 1950s-era Boys' Life, Better Homes and Gardens and stacks of old true crime magazines.)

It wasn't until high school that I started seeing a silver lining to storm clouds: If the weather was bad enough, we'd get to miss football practice. I can remember sitting in sixth period at Blountstown High, eyes glued to the windows, hoping the dark clouds on the horizon had enough juice to cook up a day off for my teammates and me. Although I swear that one day we watched Coach David Pitts stare down a rain cloud and make it change directions.

On the other hand, a thunderstorm wouldn't get you out of work at the Piggly Wiggly. As long as customers were shopping, we were bagging their groceries and taking them out. The upside is that it made the day a little more exciting. The downside is that we had to mop the floors constantly.

When I went to work for Neal Land & Timber Company after high school, it was pretty much the same thing. I remember cutting a land line with Cooter Taylor and my friend Terry Nichols, now a dentist in Graceville. We got caught in a violent storm out in the middle of the woods and I thought we ought to head back to the truck because of the lightning.

Cooter, however, didn't subscribe to the Ella Mae McClellan theory of thunderstorm safety. His words on the subject were, "Might as well keep working. I ain't ever known lightning to hit every tree in the swamp." I'd never thought about it before, but it was an early lesson in playing the odds.

It turns out that the experience with Neal was good training for my time in the military, which began at boot camp in Fort Jackson, SC. That's where I first heard a drill sergeant quote that timeless saying, "It don't rain in the Army, boy. It's rains on the Army." The first part of that saying never made much sense, but I can attest that the second part did. I found out about the only things the Army didn't do in a storm was pump gas and let you carry an umbrella.

As I've gotten older, I've come to see rain and lightning a little differently. I still head indoors during an electrical storm, but if it's just rain, I'll keep right on hunting or fishing or running or whatever else I might be doing at the time.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow wrote that, "Into each life a little rain must fall." I would add only that life's too short to let that keep you from doing the things you enjoy.

However, if it can get you out of something you don't want to do . . . well, that's a different story.

Calhoun County native Jim McClellan grew up hunting, fishing and hanging out in the same Apalachicola River swamp that five generations of his family has enjoyed. He lives in Pensacola. His columns can also be found on his blog, outdoorsdownsouth.com.

"She's sent me a message that she would contact my new employer and report 'my misconduct.'" He said one of her "many allegations" against him was that he had withheld a corrective action plan required by the Department of Education. "I didn't even write it," he said. "That was another employee's responsibility." After she found out someone else wrote it, he said Uzzell dropped the issue.

"A lot has been thrown out with my name in it," he said. "I have never stalked or harassed anyone, and am grateful that the sheriff's office performed their duties with due diligence and refused to file criminal charges against me; there is a laughable lack of evidence of any of the things she's said about me. I've never had an issue with anyone, and hope to never have to deal with anything like this again. Folks ought to be allowed to have an opinion without being persecuted by their employer."

The superintendent says she's the one being bullied, not the employees.

In a lengthy message posted on Facebook last weekend, the embattled superintendent said she and her family had "endured the unthinkable" with "gangs showing up at public meetings to intimidate us, having nails put in our driveway and flattened tires, numerous hateful anonymous letters, phone calls and emails from fake accounts, employees threatening and cursing my assistant and me at work...."

She called the June 4 school board meeting a "witch hunt" and "public stoning." At that meeting, School Board Chairman Kyle Peddie questioned her at length on over more than $12,000 she charged to a county credit card that she had issued to her office without consulting the board. It included thousands of dollars charged to clothing shops, hotels and restaurants as well as online stores.

The credit card charges included several days at Tallahassee hotels, where she was scheduled to attend a two-and-a-half day conference for new superintendents.

"I was yelled at, accused, and even quoted scripture by the school board chairman for nearly an hour and a half. He even quoted the verse about "If your right hand offends you, then cut it off" at a public school board meeting, which is a violation of church and state, along with several other instances of scripture quoting and mudslinging that night."

She described the chairman as "... lifting his hand as if to hit me while he quoted scripture to me and yelled at me during a public school board meeting."

After refusing to explain her long list of purchases made at Dillard's to the board chairman, Uzzell asked for a restroom break and left in the middle of the meeting.

In her lengthy Facebook post, she wrote that she was intimidated that "over seven deputies came in one-by-one in five minute intervals," during that meeting, which was standing-room only.

She made it clear that she didn't want one of the newest members of the sheriff's office at the meetings, speaking about Sgt. John Summers, son of former Superintendent Sue Summers. She wrote, "...our board chairman had Mr. Summers show up in uniform at the past three school board meetings to maintain order. I didn't call and request for him to be there, nor do I want him there. The people elected ME as Superintendent, and I arrange for a deputy to attend our meetings."

When she called the sheriff's office to charge an employee with stalking her, she pointed out that Summers was the officer who responded.

"All I want is to be able to run Liberty County School District without constantly being bogged-down with issues from former employees and their families and our school board chairman who clearly is on a mission to destroy my career, my reputation, and attempt to take over the school district (he is now visiting our offices and schools at least three times a week, micro-managing our personnel, which is crossing the line in his duties as a school board member. I am the Chief Executive Officer and in charge of operations and personnel at LCSB)," she wrote on her Facebook page. "I simply want to do my job."

She asked her Facebook friends, "Why do you think the school board chair is making such a big deal out of a credit card?" Then she gave her answer: "Because he wants a distraction from all the things I've uncovered that have been going on for years in the school district!"

While she gave no specifics of wrongdoing, she said people would be shocked at what was in school board email. "I'm talking sex, lies and evidence of improper bids, conflict of interest and failure to report at least one teacher's misconduct," she wrote.

"I can't effectively run a school district with these continued attacks, out of control school board meetings, and continued stalking and harassment... School starts in just over a month, and I have a lot to do."

In January, Paula Parrish agreed to quit her state job and take a pay cut to work at home.

The cut turned out to be deeper than she had expected. The job was supposed to pay $65,000, but after she was hired she said Uzzell told her she would be making $12,000 less because she didn't have a degree.

There was another surprise. Before accepting the job, she asked about insurance. She was paying $30 a month through her state job for family coverage. The superintendent told her the insurance would be $50.

But when she got there to fill out the paperwork, she was told, "We don't have $50 a month insurance." When she asked what it would cost to cover her family, she found out she would be paying $900 a month.

"I couldn't afford it," she said, so the four months she worked there, her family was uninsured. She said it was a shock, because she had given up her job after more than 21 years with the Department of Revenue.

There were other issues she declined to discuss but she finally decided to quit after realizing, "It was too unstable for me and I'm not comfortable in this environment."

She said employees knew to be careful about who they talked to. "She did tell us we were not allowed to talk to the previous finance officer," she said.

She applied for her old job back with the state and when she was hired, she gave the superintendent her two weeks' notice. That same day, Director of Administration Kathy Nobles called to let her know that would be her last day.

Although she was able to return to her state job a few days earlier than planned, the abrupt end to her position with the district office cost her a week's pay. She said the superintendent had told others that she had not given two week's notice.

Parrish was surprised to see in the school board's published minutes that she had thanked Uzzell for allowing her to leave without giving two weeks' notice.

Manatee and sea turtle decals celebrate state's 500-year anniversary

New manatee and sea turtle decals from the Florida Fish and Wildlife Commission (FWC) give people another chance to celebrate the 500-year anniversary of Juan Ponce de Leon's arrival on Florida shores and support conservation of these iconic Florida species.

Manatees and sea turtles were among the native wildlife seen by Spanish explorer Ponce de Leon and his crew in 1513, when he named the peninsula La Florida, land of the flowers. Ponce de Leon also designated a cluster of islands 70 miles west of Key West as Las Tortugas, because of sea turtles nesting there. As with other Florida beaches, the islands of Dry Tortugas National Park still have loggerhead, leatherback, green and hawksbill turtles coming back year after year to lay their eggs.

Today, the manatee is the state's designated marine mammal and the loggerhead sea turtle is the state's saltwater reptile.

The sale of decals helps support the FWC's manatee and sea turtle research, rescue, rehabilitation, management and education efforts. Decals also can be ordered online at www.myfwc.com/wildlifehabitats/managed/manatee/decals/ or www.myfwc.com/wildlifehabitats/managed/sea-turtles/decals/.

Hosford Summer Camp kids visit Gulf Specimen Marine Lab

Hosford School's Summer Camp celebrated the week with a theme of Marine Life.

We started off with a visit to the Gulf Specimen Marine Lab in Panacea. Students were able to observe, hold and enjoy several types of marine life to include: starfish, crabs, numerous fish and even sharks! Students were given a tour of the lab and the hands-on pavilion. In art classes, students made watercolor hermit crabs, envelope sharks and colorful jelly fish.

The week ended at the Apalachicola National Estuarine Research Reserve in East Point. Students were given a tour of the aquarium. Then they enjoyed a lecture about animals found in an estuary and took delight in holding the snake! We also watched a video about the great Apalachicola Reserve that also taught us how the huge wall mural in the aquarium was made.

Vial after vial of blood was taken during recent testing in Miami last month.

Donor approved to give her kidney to Calhoun youngster

by Teresa Eubanks, Journal Editor

Following a trip to a Miami hospital and numerous medical tests, Alicia Kitchen, 25, has been given the OK from doctors to undergo surgery to donate a kidney to a three-year-old Calhoun County youngster.

She got the call Monday and after they redo one test in which the lab did not have enough of her urine to analyze, plans will be made to remove one of her kidneys and transplant it into Bryson Hatcher, the son of Phillip and Rachel Hatcher of Blountstown.

"We don't have a date for the surgery yet but it could be within one or two months," Alicia said.

But first, she's got to produce a lot of urine. She has 24 hours to collect as much as she can to ship off for a few more tests and make sure it doesn't have too much protein.

She be staying hydrated at her desk at Calhoun-Liberty Hospital Wednesday with her bright orange jug at her side. She's already told her co-workers "make sure I'm drinking my water."

She said she's not made too many changes as she prepares for the upcoming surgery with the exception of limiting what she calls, "My two guilty pleasures - Dr. Pepper and sweet tea."

Alicia Kitchen waits between blood draws as numerous vials are taken for testing to be sure she is a kidney donor.

Rachel Hatcher is looking forward to her firstborn being able to experience life away from his dialysis tube.

"Bryson has never been to the beach and felt the sand between his toes," she wrote on her Facebook page. "This will be the first on our to-do list!"

She added, "We look forward to seeing him feel better and reach many milestones."

Bryson has a rare disorder known as Joubert Syndrome, which resulted in the loss of kidney function. He is also legally blind and has yet to learn to crawl or walk. His father, Phillip, works days while his mother, a nurse, works nights so they can give him around-the-clock care at home.

Rachel and Alicia knew one another but hadn't talked in a few years. Alicia, who works in the billing office at Calhoun-Liberty Hospital in Blountstown, stayed late one afternoon to set up her new office. When she left, she happened to see Rachel, who had come in to work the evening shift.

Alicia heard about the little boy's medical situation and knew her O Positive blood type would make it likely she could be a donor. She had given it some thought but when she saw Rachel, she stopped and they talked. Alicia realized then that she wanted Bryson to have one of her kidneys.

~ Resolution urges retailers not to sell flavored tobacco ~

Health Department warns against candy-flavored tobacco

BLOUNTSTOWN – On June 11, Blountstown passed a resolution urging tobacco retailers to restrict the sale and marketing of flavored tobacco products.

Fruit- and candy-flavored cigarettes were banned under the Family Smoking Prevention and Tobacco Control Act in 2009. However, menthol cigarettes, flavored cigars, cigarillos and smokeless products were not included.

There are increasingly more non-cigarette products available in Calhoun County which youth are using. Tobacco products in flavors like kiwi-strawberry, chocolate and sour apple are available across the state despite overwhelming evidence that these deadly products appeal to youth and lead to a lifetime of tobacco addiction.

Many children and teens mistakenly believe these products are less harmful than their non-flavored counterparts. Once youth start using one tobacco product, they are more likely to experiment with others.

More than just cigarettes

The flavoring and lower costs of these non-cigarette smoked tobacco products make them especially appealing to youth. All of these tobacco products cause cancer, heart disease and other smoking-related diseases. Smokeless tobacco includes chew, dip, snus and a host of emerging products. Compared to cigarettes, these products can contain more nicotine. Traditional smokeless products, like chew and dip, contain 28 cancer-causing agents. Users of these products have an 80 percent higher risk of oral cancers and a 60 percent higher risk of pancreatic and esophageal cancer.

Sweet deception

With cigarette smoking rates on the decline, the tobacco industry has created products and strategies that attract a new generation of tobacco users. The array of flavored tobacco products that appeal to youth present new challenges and concerns in the fight against tobacco use. These products help create a new generation of lifelong nicotine addicts and of life-threatening diseases.

Learn more about the dangers of candy-flavored tobacco and how you can help protect youth from this sweet deception. Visit www.tobaccofreeflorida.com/flavoredtobacco.

Hospice Lunch and Learn teaches about handling grief when it comes to school

Big Bend Hospice hosted a Lunch and Learn training for the Liberty County School system on Tuesday, June 4 at Veterans Memorial Civic Center. The session was attended by 129 employees and was a very timely training in lieu of recent tragedies. Liberty County Advisory Council of Big Bend Hospice made the arrangements for the training and provided lunch for the attendees.

The goals of the training were:

- To increase the knowledge and understanding of grief and bereavement in youth in a school setting
- To have opportunities to discuss how school staff can positively and proactively address grief and bereavement issues in their students.

The presenters were Pam Mezzina, MSW and Caitlin Burns, LCSW from Big Bend Hospice. The presenters were joined by Travia Crommartie, Community Resources Coordinator and Jackie Williams, Public Relations Liaison.

We would also like to recognize Elry Stanly, Patricia Holcomb, Leona Stoutamire and Bert Mears for contributing to the event by baking desserts.

A place to explore FAMILY HISTORY

The new Genealogy Room in the Family Learning Center of the Blountstown Public Library was dedicated Monday, July 8. The area offers plenty of space to work along with two computers, many reference materials as well as a large screen t.v. Genealogy research classes will be held to give library patrons the basic skills to use the data bases and other materials.
