New ANF District Ranger wants to increase timber harvesting by Teresa Eubanks, Journal Editor Members gathered for Monday night's annual Liberty County Chamber of Commerce meeting got some good news for a county filled with timber cutters, sawmill workers and truck drivers: The new Apalachicola National Forest (ANF) District Ranger wants to increase timber harvesting. Ranger Clint Davis, who works out of the district office in Crawfordville, let the gathering know that he grew up in the timber industry in his home state of Arkansas.

"I'm from a logging family," he said, and told the group, "My grandfather is one of the best crosscut saw workers in the area where I grew up."

He shared his experiences of when he first started with the forest service on Aug. 12, 1991, which began with taking tests on firefighting his first day on the job. "On the third day, I was on the side of a mountain in California fighting a fire." He described his first few days as a little frightening as well as fun, adding, "That was my welcome to the forest service and it's been a great career."

Now, his focus is on the four counties that make up the national forest. Forty-seven percent of the land in Liberty County is national forest. The forest covers 44 percent of Wakulla County land. In Leon County, the percentage of forest land is 23, with just 12 percent in Franklin County.

In 2010, the forest service took over a 1,000 acre site in Calhoun County which was being managed as an experimental forest through the Southern Forest Experiment Station.

A 49-year-old Blountstown man who escaped injury after losing control of his truck - which then overturned and burned - was arrested for driving under the influence with property damage and careless driving last Thursday evening.

According to Florida Highway Patrol (FHP) report, Joel Alan Kirkbride was traveling south on SR 71 around 8 p.m. on Jan. 11 when his 2001 Dodge Ram 1500 pickup went off the road south of Altha, near NW Magnolia Church Road.

The truck was entering a curve when it crossed the centerline into the oncoming lane. driver overcorrected, causing the truck to rotate in a clockwise

The truck struck a utility pole and came to rest on the westbound shoulder near the woodline. FHP Trooper J. Gentry arrived on scene to find the vehicle still burning. The driver, who was wearing his seatbelt, was not injured.

A witness reported that the driver had attempted to leave the scene.

As he spoke with Kirkbride, Trooper Gentry noted that the driver's eyes were bloodshot and watery and he smelled strongly of alcohol.

Association meeting

Two-year-old Jantson Shuler accompanied his parents, Blountstown Fire Dept. Lt. Jamey Shuler and Tessa Shuler to the monthly Calhoun County Firefighters Association meeting Monday. While Jantson was enjoying trying on a firefighter's helmet, the rest of the group was busy discussing about ways to resolve the problem of poor address labeling in the county. They also learned about a free life insurance policy available for first responders. See more on PAGE 8.

Man arrested for aggravated battery with deadly weapon for hitting victim with level

An Altha man was arrested on a charge of aggravated battery with a deadly weapon following a Jan. 1 altercation at a residence on Chipola Street, according to a report from Altha Police Chief Jimmy Baggett.

Officer Hayes received a call from a landowner who heard a rifle shot from the roadway near his residence. The landowner also heard a vehicle speed away from the location. Officer Hayes responded and searched the area for any shell casings or evidence that a deer had been shot. Unable to locate any evidence, Officer Hayes concealed his patrol vehicle and conducted surveillance over two nearby farm fields. Approximately three hours later, a truck drove by slowly shining the fields with a spotlight. Officer Hayes conducted a traffic stop and found the driver to be in possession of a loaded 12-gauge shotgun. The suspect was charged with night hunting. The firearm and light were seized as evidence.

taxifolia) is a critically endangered conifer endemic to the Apalachicola River drainage of the Florida panhandle and adjacent southern Georgia. The species was once a prominent member of its forest community but today less than one percent of the historic population survives, by cyclically dying back at the sapling stage, such that seeds are rarely, if ever, produced. The main cause of the decline has been attributed to a fungal disease (i.e. Fusarium torreyae) and to date there is no control strategy available. Although the species has been subject to extensive conservation interventions, its extinction in the wild is imminent.

'American Pickers' looking for unique antique treasures

Hit History Channel series "American Pickers" will soon head south in search of good picks and southern hospitality! The Calhoun County Chamber of Commerce hopes stars Mike Wolfe and Frank Fritz will stop in Calhoun County as they look for treasures, characters, and the stories that go with

"If you know someone with an old shed or barn full of 'junk,' let us know," said Kristy Terry, executive director of the Chamber. "They are looking for places where the guys can spend the better part of a day picking." She noted that they would not be visiting retailers or locations with a single item.

The Midwestern pickers travel across America in search of rare artifacts and national treasures they can buy from the collectors they visit. They sell items in their antiques shops or, in some cases, put in their personal collections. They are willing to travel twotrail roads, respectfully dig through boxes, and climb up and over whatever it takes to get to the good stuff. While they are looking for items of value, they are also looking for items that reflect our history and tell a story.

If you or someone you know has a large, private collection or accumulation of antiques you'd like to share with Mike and Frank, send your name, phone number, location, and description and photos of the collection directly to americanpickers@cineflix.com, call 855-OLD-RUST, or visit them on facebook at www.facebook.com/gotapick.

If you need assistance with your submission, contact Kristy Terry with the Chamber of Commerce at (850) 674-4519 or kristy@calhounco.org.

The political, regulatory, and physical contexts for managing long standing issues of flow are changing within the Tri-State region of the Apalachicola Chattahoochee Flint (ACF) Basin. Of particular importance are the Apalachicola-Chattahoochee-Flint River Basin Water Control Manual recently proposed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the anticipated decision by the U.S. Supreme Court in Florida v Georgia. Drought management is taking on increased importance, while long standing questions of science and management remain important both in Florida and within the larger ACF Basin.

The conference will offer opportunities to learn about the challenges and opportunities ahead from knowledgeable scientists, elected leaders and local, state and federal water managers in the Tri-State region, as well as from other stakeholders.

The conference will include:

•Recap the history that helped shape the challenges in the ACF Basin today and focus on the condition of the resource now.

•Highlight how current and anticipated state and federal policies and programs create a framework for protecting and managing the resource and discuss where additional tools are needed.

•Share ideas for ways to better manage the river and basin in the years ahead, and discuss opportunities for regional cooperation in that context.

Thursday's dinner will host keynote speaker former U.S. Senator Bob Graham.

Conference hosts include the Florida Conservation Coalition (FCC), Riparian County Stakeholder Coalition (RCSC), Apalachicola Conservation Coalition (ACC), Tall Timbers, Sierra Club, Apalachee Audubon, Florida Wildlife Federation, Apalachicola Riverkeeper, and Apalachee Regional Planning Council (ARPC).

Calhoun & Liberty County residents urged to take care in winter weather

The Florida Department of Health in so they drip continuously. Calhoun and Liberty Counties urge Florida residents to take precautions to stay healthy and safe during extreme cold weather.

WINTER SAFETY TIPS:

•Stay indoors as much as possible to keep healthy, safe and warm. Make sure to check on friends and family members and neighbors who are especially at risk from cold weather hazards: young children, older adults, and the chronically ill.

•For outside activities, dress in multiple layers of loose-fitting clothing. Don't forget to wear a hat, scarf and mittens, or other winter gear.

•Heat your home safely. If you plan to use a wood stove, fireplace, or space heater, be extremely careful. Make sure each appliance is properly adjusted and you have followed the manufacturer's instructions and local building codes for use.

•Prevent carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning by never using generators, charcoal grills or gas grills indoors and by installing a CO detector to alert you of the presence of the deadly, odorless, colorless gas.

leave your home's water taps slightly open FloridaHealth.gov.

•Eat well-balanced meals to stay warmer. Avoid drinking alcoholic beverages—they cause your body to lose heat more rapidly. Instead, drink warm beverages such as hot chocolate or hot tea to help maintain your body temperature. If you have any dietary restrictions, consult your doctor.

•Bring pets out of the cold weather and provide them warm shelter.

•Cold weather can displace wild animals. Stay clear of wild or feral animals including cats, bats or raccoons especially if they look sick or appear injured. They could have rabies and hurt animals can also injure you.

A make-up free Nilsa with two castmates.

Despite having just turned 24, she's got a lot of life experience to share on the show and doesn't flinch when asked about her miscarriage, her divorce or her numerous surgical enhancements.

She says she got breast implants in 2015 to feel better about herself after a miscarriage and the failure of her three year marriage to a Marine who she said cheated on her. Twice.

Every six months or so she has injections to make her lips fuller.

She also advocates the use of Botox, which she says give her well-manicured eyebrows an arch.

"It's not a big deal," she said about fine-tuning her appearance surgically. "If you don't like something about yourself, it's OK to get it fixed. Why do people go to the gym? To improve something. It's the same thing."

With her dark hair and Panamanian heritage (her dad, Todd Prowant, met her mom, Yadira, while he was stationed with the Air Force in the Central American city of Panama) along with her trademark black eyeliner, she could be mistaken for one of the Kardashian sisters. But at just 5 foot and one inch tall, she's often compared to the reality star Snookie of Jersey Shore fame.

In fact, Floribama Shore is being produced by SallyAnn Salsano, who brought MTV the hit Jersey Shore, along with several other reality shows, including the recent pairing of Martha Stewart and Snoop Dog's VH1 show, Martha & Snoop's Potluck Dinner.

The beach format is working for MTV. The network has several local versions of the original Jersey Show including Siesta Key, set on a barrier island off Sarasota County, Florida. Similar shows around the world include Geordie Shore in the UK, Gandia Shore in Spain, Warsaw Shore in Poland, along with both Super Shore and Acapulco Shore in Mexico.

MAKING THE CUT

So how did Nilsa get hired for Floribama Shore? "I had no idea they were filming a show in Panama City until one of my friends started a jet ski rental company. He had just opened it and me and my best friend, Shayla, from Blountstown, went to check it out," Nilsa explained.

The girls decided to go for a swim while their friend stepped away to talk with a couple of men he said were MTV producers who wanted to interview him for a new show.

When they came out of the water and sat down on the beach, the producers approached Nilsa and Shayla and asked if they'd like to interview for a part on a new show.

Nilsa quickly replied "sure" but was quick to tell them, "..but I'm not going to fill out a million pieces of paper. You can ask me all the questions you want but I don't do paperwork."

They interviewed her with their iPhones. She was skeptical. "I didn't think it was legit...but whatever," but she responded to their questions. She was asked to do another interview the next day. "I started getting phone calls from this production company who was hired by MTV to produce this show. Then I had to do all these background checks and medical checks... then a bunch of Skype interviews. I had to send them a bunch of videos from my Snapchat about me and my life," she said.

Producers had been in Panama City for two months before that meeting on the beach. At that point, they had interviewed hundreds of twenty-somethings for the show. They had already cast a group of eight but decided it wasn't working and had to start over, recasting four of them. When 14 people were gathered in a hotel for three days for a final series of interviews, Nilsa made the cut.

"A couple of weeks later, I was moved into the house," she said.

MOM'S ADVICE

Reality shows revolve around arguments, hookups and heartbreaks. Nilsa - who has been an avid watcher of reality programs through the years - had an intimate moment of her own documented when she brought home a man she had just met. One of the many Go-Pro cameras - which include night vision capabilities - are strategically located throughout the house, including her bedroom.

"A lot of people can relate to that - meeting a guy, sleeping with him on the first night and then regretting it," she said. She discussed having second thoughts afterwards with her roommate, Aimee.

But what did Nilsa's mom think about it?

"She said that if we have a Season Two, not to do that," Nilsa replied.

She's equally open with her personal history, talking on the phone with her ex-husband, and is quick to tell someone off when angered. She's also been seen diving in to separate two house mates on the verge of fighting while moments later, she's escorting one to another room to talk it out.

NO SCRIPTS, NO PROMPTS

How does it all work? Is there an outline or script as to what should happen between the housemates?

Not according to Nilsa. "They don't tell us to do anything." While they often move in to film a conversation or a tense moment, "they don't make us reenact anything." She said the 495 Production Company filming this "is probably the only t.v. production company that does not, and will not, make you redo something."

She said 495 CEO SallyAnn Salsano told the housemates, "I'm not here to tell you what to do. You're adults. Play this out. We're all in this together. We're just going to follow you around with cameras...do what you would do in your normal life."

Nilsa said she wouldn't even be able to read and follow a script because she's dyslexic. "I never had good reading skills growing up," she said, and added that her high school grades reflected that. "I just had a rough time in high school academically. I've read probably five books in my life...I'm not a reader," she

But how much of what we see is true to life and isn't there the temptation to hype it up a bit for the camera?

"You're only seeing eight hours of my whole summer. Everyone has acted like a drunk, sloppy mess at some time or another and of course, they're going to put that on t.v. 'cos that's funny." She admits that when she was chasing after one of the male housemates, she was only interested in him a short time but most of the footage of that time was used and made it look like something more serious.

Not only do they not have a script, the show didn't even have a name when they started filming, she said. "We didn't even know it was going to be called Floribama Shore until our last day in the house."

The Aimee Day episode was her idea, she said, and explained that her roommate had always defended her and she felt bad she had not always been there for her

In addition to Nilsa, the cast members include:

- •Jeremiah Buoni, 22, from Amelia Island, FL;
- •Codi Butts, 25, from Westminster, SC;
- •Kortni Gilson, 21, from Panama City Beach, FL;
- •Aimee Hall, 24, from Perdido, AL;
- •Kirk Medas, a 25-year-old from Atlanta, GA; •Candace Rice, 24, from Memphis, TN;
- •Gus Smyrnios, 22, from Tallahassee, FL.

ALITTLE PUBLICITY

The cast appeared on MTV's Total Request Live (TRL) before their Nov. 27, 2017 premier and played a round of "Secret Questions" about their show. Nilsa and her castmate, Gus, were asked, "Over the course of the summer, how many people did Gus make out with?" Gus answered two. Nilsa may not have been sure of the exact number but her response was typically blunt and summed up his season's activities: "Everyone!" she said.

On the Dec. 3, 2017 episode of Saturday Night Live, the show was lampooned with a skit about the group filming in the midst of Hurricane Irma. It was not flattering...but it was funny and it showed that Floribama Shore has made its mark.

LIFE IN THE MTV HOUSE

She said it doesn't take long to get used to living in a house filled with cameras. "It's kind of like once you're in that environment, you get into a routine and you just forget the cameras are there," she said. "They're not in your way, they're not in your face...they're just there filming you." It's also less noticeable because the other housemates are wandering around, too. While the camera crew keeps their distance from the house mates, they can often be seen in the background.

Once in the house, they weren't allowed to have cell phones, t.v. or even a radio. There was a land line where they could stay in touch with family and friends but their social media activity was cut off. "We had one clock on the stove and half the time it wasn't right," she said. Those rules kept them focused on each other, their interaction and reliance on one another by limiting distractions. "We always joked that the world could be ending and we wouldn't know," she said.

She admits that leaving her cell phone behind was a bit of a break for someone like herself who is so active on social media. In fact, "it was kind of like a cleanse," she said. "I wasn't obsessed with social media...I was just figuring myself out, really."

They could have visitors but anyone coming in had to sign a release allowing them to be included on the show if producers thought it added something to the program.

The group of mostly dominate personalities made getting along a challenge. "I think all of us in the house - except perhaps for Cody - are Alphas. We thought that house was going to burn down by the end," she said. "There's a lot more you guys don't see 'cos your only getting to see eight hours of our summer."

There were plenty of stupid arguments that didn't make it into the show. "We fought over grilled chicken...that's how Alpha we are, OK?"

But it was fun. She summarized the experience as "summer camp with a bunch of drunk adults and no counselors."

And she can't wait to do it again.

I assume you know that an emergency alert went out on Saturday morning. This text is something received by everyone with a cellphone at 8:07 a.m. on Saturday: "Ballistic missile threat inbound to Hawaii. Seek immediate shelter. This is not a drill." And then they didn't get a correction until 38 minutes later. So for 38 minutes people were seeking immediate shelter — which in Hawaii, what does that even mean? Everybody get under a Mai Tai umbrella?

Trump would reinstate John Adams' Sedition Act

WASHINGTON

MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Douglas Cohn and Eleanor Clift

WASHINGTON

When on the receiving end, freedom of speech is the most difficult of all freedoms to accept. So, it is for President Donald Trump, who is looking to tighten the libel laws, and so it was for thin-skinned John Adams when the presidential races of 1796 and 1800 featured brutally personal exchanges between his surrogates and those of Thomas Jefferson. They had been friends and brothers-in-arms writing the Declaration of Independence in 1776, but had drifted apart, joining different political parties.

The worst charges came from the media – newspaper editors and publishers – not so different from today. In response, Adams signed the short-lived 1798 Sedition Act when the vitriol of his opponents exceeded the limits of his toleration during the undeclared naval Quasi War with France.

Aimed at French émigrés and their Jeffersonian allies, the act sought to quell free speech by making it a federal crime to "write, print, utter or publish . . . any false, scandalous and malicious writing or writings against the government of the United States . . . the Congress . . . or the president . . . with intent to defame."

As a result, 14 people, mostly newspapermen and pamphleteers, were prosecuted, fined, and jailed for such statements as declaiming Adams' "continued grasp for power," calling him "a repulsive pedant, a gross hypocrite and unprincipled oppressor," characterizing him as "a continual tempest of malignant passions," and calling for "downfall to the tyrants of America."

There is no question that Adams faced vicious attacks from the pro-French Jeffersonians and that his Federalist allies responded in kind. Such unrestrained emanations from the First Amendment's free speech clause were common during the nation's first 70 years, leading to violent altercations, fights, duels, and lawsuits; even the halls of Congress were not exempt. The First Amendment spawned what could be called America's Anti-Decorum Age and the Sedition Act attempted to quell it.

However, Jefferson, who succeeded Adams in 1801, allowed the act to expire, and he pardoned those people convicted under it.

Between the Adams presidency and the Civil War, presidents generally practiced restraint on the issue. But with states seceding following his election, President Abraham Lincoln suspended habeas corpus and imprisoned several thousand people who were "guilty of any disloyal practice," a phrase that led to the arrest of newspaper editors critical of his war policies.

Similarly, in the midst of World War I, President Woodrow Wilson signed the Sedition Act of 1918, the name given for a series of amendments to the Espionage Act. It was revoked in 1920.

The issue finally came to a head with the 1964 New York Times v. Sullivan case, the Supreme Court writing "the First Amendment protects the publication of all statements, even false ones, about the conduct of public officials except when statements are made with actual malice (with knowledge that they are false or in reckless disregard of their truth or falsity)."

Ignoring this history, it is clear that Trump would like to follow in Adams' footsteps and re-instate the Sedition Act to restrain what he regards to be an untruthful media. It is tempting to dismiss his threats as nothing more than rhetorical bullying. But history has proven this can be done. Adams was able to push through the Sedition Act because his Federalist Party controlled Congress.

Will a compliant Republican majority in Congress be willing to do likewise? A simple majority in the Senate can eliminate the 60-vote requirement to break a filibuster and pave the way to once again undermine the First Amendment.

SEAN OF THE SOUTH

THREE WORDS • BY SEAN DIETRICH

A gas station. The middle of the night. Tony stopped by this store every evening. He came for the food, and the company.

The night-shift cashier gave him hotdogs and egg rolls—lukewarm from the warming rack.

She did this instead of throwing them away. She did this because she liked Tony.

Tony. A nice homeless man with yellowed beard, gentle spirit, and dusty skin. A man who occasionally smelled like whis-

The two would sit on the sidewalk during the wee hours. They'd swap cigarettes, stories, laughter.

He was a spiritual man.

He told her about himself. In another life, he'd been a fella who was working his way through seminary. A thirty-something man, trying to do something worthwhile.

Then, his pregnant wife died in an interstate accident. He lost two people in one day. And he lost himself.

Anyway, Tony listened to her, too. She told him about boyfriend problems, her runaway father, and her unstable mother. She looked forward to his visits, they helped each other with late-night boredom. They helped each other period.

He gave her advice. She brought him clothes. He gave her presents on her birthday.

One particular week, Tony never showed. She sat on the sidewalk, waiting. No signs. She felt like something wasn't right.

She called the hospital. The voice on the phone said, "Yeah, we got a homeless guy here... Been here a few days. He belong to you?"

Tony had checked himself in. He'd told doctors he couldn't breathe. His chest infection had become pneumonia. He was dehydrated.

She visited when she got off work. She lied to the nurses and said she was family. They knew better, but looked the other way.

She found him in a bed with tubes connected to him. She sat in the chair beside him. When his eyes opened, she handed him a greasy paper bag.

"I made these fresh," she said.

Hotdogs and egg rolls, straight from the gas-station warming rack. He grinned at her and coughed. It was his way of saying, "thank you."

He ate, but he was too sick to do much more.

He tapped two fingers against his mouth every few minutes. He wanted a smoke. So, she placed an unlit cigarette between his lips to pacify him.

Before she left, he asked her to pray for him.

"Me?" she said.

He folded his hands. She did the best she could, but she was rusty. When she finished, he touched her hand and said, "I love you."

"I love you, too," she said.

Tony didn't make it.

But there's a picture on her refrigerator. It's an old photo. She's got her arm around a bearded man. She's wearing a cashier uniform, cigarette between her fingers. He's eating an egg roll.

The photo is ancient history now. She's not a young girl anymore. Today, she works for a local hardware store. It's a good job, but she's only doing it to help raise her kids and pay for her own schooling.

She takes weekend classes, some online courses. I ask what she's studying. She tells me she's in seminary.

"It's weird," she says. "Three little words from someone is all it took to change the direction of my life."

I've spent the past fifteen minutes trying to come up with a better line than hers.

I can't.

Firefighters & first responders struggle with lack of 911 address signs

At the last Blountstown City Council meeting, Blountstown Fire Chief Ben Hall was tasked with finding a way to encourage citizens in the City to post their 911 address.

Yes, after nearly 20 years, there are still some places that do not have a visible 911 address out front!

"After talking with some other departments, we realized this isn't just a 'City' problem," Hall said. "Firefighters, EMS and other emergency responders are having trouble finding which house to go to."

Calhoun County ordinance 1999-1 requires numbers of at least four inches in height on contrasting background, preferably reflective, be placed in front of each occupancy.

The City of Blountstown is working on a similar ordinance and it will be enforced by the Code Enforcement Division.

The fix is really simple, said Hall. Post your numbers. Post them on a sign in the yard, on the front of the house or even on your mailbox (as long as your mailbox is in close proximity to the home).

Why is this so important? "If we can't find you, then we can't help you," the Blountstown Fire Chief explained. "In any emergency - fire, medical or law enforcement - seconds count. Please help us find you!"

Her organization supports military and first responders with insurance policies and issues. They offer a free $5,000 life insurance policy for all first responders as well as affordable insurance policies with no exemptions.

RIGHT: Firefighters and other volunteers fill up on pulled pork at Monday's meeting, held at the Blountstown Fire Station. Before the meeting, they heard from speaker Bridgett West (at left) and discussed the problems with the poor labeling of 911 addresses throughout the county as well as dispatch issues.

Altha Wildcats improve their record to 6-9

from Altha School

The Altha Wildcats basketball team improved their record to 6-9 over the week with a win over Wakulla Christian and losing to Aucilla Christian on the road. The Cats played host to Freeport Tuesday night, results will be posted next week. The Cats travel to Port St. Joe Friday night and return home Tuesday, Jan. 23 vs. Franklin County.

Altha 66, Wakulla Christian 39

Altha jumped out to a 23-0 lead and then coasted to an easy win over the Saints. The win improved the Cats' record to 6-8 on the season.

Rhett Bodiford led the winning effort with 16 points, 7 rebounds and 6 assists. Mason Smith added 15 points, 6 rebounds and 5 assists. Spencer Sneads scored 9 points and 4 rebounds in the win.

Aucilla Christian 58, Altha 48

In an in-school game, the Cats fell behind 14 points at the half; but fought back to cut the lead to 4 (50-46) with 2:45 seconds left. The Cats got the ball, but a failed possession along two turnovers sealed the deal for Altha as Aucilla converted two free throws and two layups down the stretch.

Rhett Bidiford led the Cats and the charge back with 20 points and 8 rebounds. Mason Smith added 16 points. Spencer Sneads and Trace Newman each tallied 6 points in the loss.

In the junior varsity game, a nip and tuck affair ended with Aucilla holding on to win 43-42 despite a great effort by the younger Cats'. Wyatt Burch scored 13 points. Trace Mears added 11 points. Cole Fielder scored 8 points. Jaron Austin added 6 points in the losing effort.

"We have still got a lot of room to improve, but I love my young kids. We have gotten better but still have a lot of little areas to improve in to compete by next season and we will get there," Coach Jimmy Rogers said. "We have to do the little things like play hard every play, every trip and every game to succeed. Our focus the rest of the year, will be just that."

"One of the things I found fascinating is that of the 573,000 acres we've got in the forest, 2,700 acres of that is water - lakes and streams," Davis said, and noted, "You don't find a lot of forests like that."

Figures compiled by retired forest officer Mac McConnell of Tallahassee show that only 1.1 million cubic feet (five percent) of the forest's growth is harvested each year. According to Mc-Connell, more timber dies naturally (3.8 million cubic square feet) in the forest each year than is harvested. The forest has about 23 million cubic feet gross annual growth, with the net estimated at 19 million cubic

With the national forest covering nearly half of Liberty County's lands, many have long thought it should be opened up more intensive management to maintain forest health and to benefit the area's economy by providing wood for local mills and jobs for local workers.

Davis said the forest service is looking to do more stewardship work with environmental groups and local logging interests in hopes of bringing in more jobs.

Helping the community will also help the forest, he told chamber members. "If we can possibly bring more jobs in here and help industry, that helps us and we can spend more money on our roads and recreation areas in the forest."

One of the things we need is some stewardship agreements, some contracts, we've met with some of the purchasers and the Nature Conservancy," he said. "We're looking to do more of that - the stewardship part - to get more work done on the ground."

The biggest hurdle, of course, is the legal process and paperwork, he explained. "It takes a lot of surveying, going through the process, letting all of our constituents - you folks on the ground - look at what we're doing."

He added, "One of the things that's really important to me is our timber management on the forest. We can help out all four counties."
