Former Access party renamed

■ THE NEW PHOENIX PARTY IS ONE OF NINE RUNNING IN SG ELECTIONS.

By STEPHEN MAGRUDER

Alligator Writer
smagruder@alligator.org

The leaders of the former Access Party made a mythological move Wednesday by assuming the name The Phoenix Party for the upcoming Spring election.

The name change occurred after party leaders unsuccessfully tried to re-acquire their original name, which was registered last week by Florida Blue Key member Michael Shine.

"We wanted a party name that would convey all the things that we were feeling," said party advisor Andre Samuels.

"The mythology of it parallels our reality," he said.

According to legend, the birdlike phoenix lived for 500 years, burned and later rose from the ashes to live again.

Despite the new name and logo, Samuels said the party will be made up of the same members and work toward the same ideals that brought Access into power last Spring.

"The party was always bigger than the name," he said.

A nominating convention, which will be held in two weeks, will allow Access volunteers from the 2004 elections to vote for students who wish to run on the Phoenix Party ticket.

"We want everyone to come out and watch and participate," Samuels said.

The names of any potential Phoenix Party candidates have not yet been disclosed.

Leaders first looked into modifying their party name from the Access Party to the Real Access Party to stand out, a suggestion made by Director of Student Activities Lohse Beeland.

They decided the similarity in names might confuse voters in the upcoming elections, said Richard J. Rodriguez, Phoenix Party president.

At least nine political parties are in various stages of approval with the Student Activities Center, including Access, Gator, Ignite, Keg, Phoenix, Progress, Strike Force, Student Alliance and Voice.

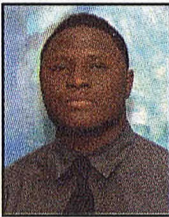

Using previously held party names, as well as having insiders set up "dummy parties so students don't know who to vote for" are typical of SG's past, Samuels said earlier.

In 2004, Access, Innovate and Keg were the only parties on the Spring ballot.

"I see all these parties as actually a good thing," Student Body President Jamal Sowell said.

He added that when students see multiple qualified candidates running for office, they also may become inspired to get involved.

Students who wish to create a party must apply at the Student Activities Center by Feb. 15.

Inmate's death likely a suicide

By: ELIZABETH PRANN

The Alachua County Sheriff's Office is investigating the apparent suicide of a county jail inmate, in the fifth such attempt to take place at the jail since July 2004.

John McPherson, 42, purportedly took his life by hanging himself in his cell, ASO spokesman Jim Troiano said.

McPherson was charged with aggravated fleeing and attempting to elude Gainesville police during an alleged robbery on Nov. 16. He had been at the jail since Jan. 6.

Detention staff found McPherson when they brought the deceased his breakfast and started CPR, continuing until paramedics arrived. McPherson was pronounced dead at the scene, Troiano said.

McPherson was alone in a two-person cell, a fact Troiano said was due to that particular portion of the jail-- the adult male high-felony section-- having only 28 of 32 bunks occupied. Prisoners in this section are usually housed in pairs.

McPherson left two notes, Troiano said, and although the contents of those notes could not be released, Troiano said they were extensive.

"There was a lot of information discussed; however, I cannot go into the contents of the note at this time."

Troiano said McPherson presented no previous suicidal tendencies when he went through the routine screening process.

"We had no idea he was going to kill himself. It was up to [the inmates] as well as the detention staff, and we had no indication."

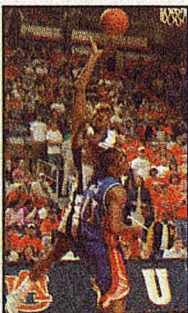

Jim Troiano
ASO spokesman

"This is an important thing to deal with when you're taking away someone's liberty," Troiano said.

There were no reports from fellow inmates of conspicuous behavior from McPherson.

Investigation into CBS report intrigues professors

By MEGAN V. WINSLOW
Alligator Writer

Recent turmoil concerning CBS's failure to accurately examine President Bush's Vietnam-era military record piqued the attention of several UF professors, who have followed the scandal since it broke nearly four months ago.

During the Sept. 8 broadcast of "60 Minutes: Wednesday," TV news veteran Dan Rather, armed with four memoranda suggesting Bush had received preferential treatment as a National Guardsman, called the president's military career into question.

An independent investigative panel recently released its findings that the documents were never properly authenticated. The CBS news division suffered from a severe lack in judgment, the investigators concluded.

As a result, four of the network's top journalists found themselves out of a job Monday.

Jon A. Roosenraad, assistant dean of UF's College of Journalism and Communications, diligently followed the affair since CBS was placed under scrutiny.

"I think it was similar to the New York Times and Jayson Blair [scandal]," said Roosenraad, who teaches a class entitled "Problems and Ethics of Journalism in Society." "It started at the top and reflected a total breakdown of the system of what was supposed to have been a very fail-proof, highly respected news organization."

Telecommunications professor Joseph Glover agrees.

"It's just another chipping away at the veneer of trust that CBS has tried to build up, that all of the networks have tried to build up," he said. "The problem is that this affects the press in general, television news in particular."

Although the panel concluded it could not prove whether the broadcast was sparked by political bias during an election year, UF College Republicans President Hunter Williams said he believes the incident is another prime example of a liberal leaning in the media.

Joseph Glover
telecommunications professor

"Releasing fake documents about a political candidate, no matter what party they belong to, when the documents are obviously fake, is a clear bias," Williams said. "The only reason you do that is because you want to hit [Bush], and you're betting that nobody's going to notice or it's going to be too late."

Mary Mapes, who produced the segment, was among those chastised by the panel for allowing the story to run.

Mapes did not contact the memo's anonymous source, supplied by retired National Guard Lt. Col. Bill Burkett, and was unable to verify the document's accuracy.

"It's difficult to believe that there wasn't some willingness on the part of the reporters, the producers, to accept what was before them, what seemed to them to be obvious," Glover said. "It's difficult to believe that there wasn't some sort of political predilection clouding their judgment."

Brendan Moore, UF College Democrats spokesman, said the "liberal news bias" is exaggerated. Although he said he religiously watches both CNN and Fox News Channel, Moore said the media primarily fails to live up to its responsibility as a "watchdog of politicians."

"It's true that CBS did not check their facts — it's true that they should have made sure the memo was legitimate," he said. "However, the mainstream media focused on this memo, and they did not focus on the fact that there are legitimate questions about Bush's record in the National Guard."

Nevertheless, Roosenraad and Glover said they plan to make the CBS blunder an important topic of conversation among the students in their journalism classes.

"It will be part of the lesson on being diligent about checking your facts and about making sure you have good sources and more than one source, and that you don't let your own predilections, your own biases, affect your reporting," Glover said. "It's a very good lesson in the basics."

New medical metaphors increase patient satisfaction

■ ABOUT HALF THE U.S. ADULT POPULATION FINDS MEDICAL INFORMATION DIFFICULT TO UNDERSTAND.

By SKYLER SMITH
Alligator Writer

It may not be advisable for physicians to speak like five-star generals to their patients, according to a new UF study.

Dr. Gary M. Reisfield, a professor at the UF

Health Science Center in Jacksonville, recently published a study on doctors' use of metaphors with their ill patients in the Journal of Clinical Oncology.

"Wars on drugs, poverty and illiteracy pervade our society, and war talk is easily adaptable to cancer," Reisfield said in a release.

According to the study, the human brain is wired to operate in metaphors, processing abstract or complex concepts in part by thinking of analogies derived from more familiar experiences. Comparing a patient's struggle with disease to a military battle can have unsettling, violent overtones.

Reisfield began the study when his aunt was diagnosed with cancer, and a doctor compared her to an old car and her knee a part needing replacement.

"She was incensed by this comparison and refused to go back to him," he said. "It's very dehumanizing to be compared to a mechanical thing."

Roughly 90 million American adults — about half of the U.S. adult population — find it difficult to understand basic medical information, according to an Institute of Medicine study published last year. Choosing metaphors wisely can increase patient satisfaction, improve healthcare outcomes and reduce healthcare costs, said Dr. George R. Wilson III, with whom Reisfield conducted the study.

The team scoured books, newspapers and Web logs for metaphors and concluded that while no metaphors are right or wrong, there are appropriate comparisons for each patient.

UF, engineering firms work on "green" gas station

By JEFF SIRMONS

Alligator Writer
jsirmons@alligator.org

Soon, UF students could fill their gas tanks while breathing fresh air at the world's first "green" gas station.

UF's Rinker School of Building Construction and Design is working with Gainesville engineering firms to produce the first energy-efficient convenience store with a gas station and a Quiznos Sub. To become the fourth "green" Gainesville building, they must comply with standards set by Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design, or LEED.

"In the long run, it costs less, it makes more money and it helps the environment along the way, so it's a win, win, win situation," said Dave Newport, director of the office of sustainability at the school.

The Pantry Inc. plans on using this convenience store as a model for future stores and remodeling to current locations, Newport said.

"This is not just a little thing—it's a big thing. More than 100 sites will be guided by this site," Newport said.

There is a possibility that the convenience store will operate on power generated from windmills in Kansas, Newport said.

There will be an electric vehicle charging station at the gas station, and also an infrastructure that could support more advanced fuels such as hydrogen, Newport said.

"In the long run, it costs less, it makes more money and it helps the environment along the way, so it's a win, win, win situation."

Dave Newport

Rinker School of Building Construction and Design director of the office of sustainability

"It's way ahead of its time," Newport said.

To further help the community, Quiznos will hire children involved in the Reichert House, a youth mentoring program for at-risk children, Newport said.

Robert Walpole, lead civil engineer with Causseaux & Ellington Inc., said the LEED qualifications should be used as the benchmark for all future buildings.

"Obviously, the Pantry has very high standards by getting LEED certified," Walpole said.

The convenience store starts construction in July and should be finished no later than December, if the proposal is passed by the City Commission, Walpole said.

The convenience store will be located at Main Street and North 16th Avenue, replacing the now-vacant Dodge car dealership.

Gainesville is home to three buildings that meet LEED standards, including UF's Rinker Hall, the new UF Orthopaedics and Sports Medicine Institute and the Alachua County Courthouse Criminal Justice Center.

Dorm sprinkler work underway

■ THE RENOVATION FACED SEVERAL SETBACKS.

By LINDSAY PETER

Alligator Contributing Writer

Students returning to Riker Hall for Spring were greeted with signs taped to each of their doors reading: "Until further notice, sprinkler heads are inactive!"

A fire sprinkler system had finally been installed in the dorm after several setbacks.

"Normally a project of this scope would take 90 to 180 days," said Mark Hill, assistant director of housing for facilities management. "We anticipated 180, but it has gone a little longer."

Billy Mathis, project manager, said the first problem was finding qualified, local workers to complete the project.

Then workers found wooden boards connected to utility wiring needed to be removed and the wiring replaced.

Inspections by Environmental Health and Safety further slowed the process.

Riker Hall also had portions of its electrical system and fire alarm updated to comply with fire codes.

New water lines were installed around the building, and piping was pressure-tested before being placed in the ceiling.

System tests still need to be conducted in February and March, with the majority of the testing being completed during Spring Break.

Installation forced workers to be on the floors of Riker Hall the majority of Fall, with the exception of the first two weeks of school and final exam week.

"They should have finished it during a time when we didn't have school because it makes it hard to concentrate," said UF freshman Katie Sexauer.

The setbacks experienced in Riker have helped to prepare for the same installations in other dorms, Hill said.

All dorms will get similar renovations as needed. Updated systems will feature a temperature-activated sprinkler system and a standing pipe system in the stairwells.

The total cost of the sprinkler systems will be between $9 million and $10 million.

All dorms are scheduled to have fire sprinklers by 2011.

Jail seeks improvements

"We had no idea he was going to kill himself," Troiano said. "It was up to [the inmates] as well as the detention staff, and we had no indication."

McPherson's room shows no signs of any suspicious activity or foul play, Troiano said.

The jail has been improving since the first suicide attempt in July, such as replacing the normal 6-by-8-inch peep window with glazed glass doors, which allows the detention staff to clearly see into an inmate's cell, Troiano said.

"We are trying everything we can to keep those inmates and our staff safe," he said.

However, Troiano said it is a difficult task because the previous attempts occurred in the section of the jail where inmates suspected of having mental health issues are held. McPherson was not in that area.

Troiano said he expects autopsy results today.

Editorial

Children first

Courts' priorities wrong in adoption decisions

As cliché, as it sounds, it's time for somebody to think about the children.

In a number of recent decisions, courts have been attempting to throw the institution of parenthood back in time to the days when it was more socially acceptable to be a murderer than a "bastard."

Evidence of this is not far from home. In Jacksonville, a couple who raised a 3-year-old boy, Evan Johnson, since he was two days old, have been ordered to give him to his biological mother.

The mother, who had separated from the biological father before she knew she was pregnant, had agreed privately to let the defendants adopt Evan.

Two months after the couple began caring for the boy, the father—not the mother—filed for custody before the adoption could be finalized.

There were plenty of reasonable arguments for the father's side. Since the adoption wasn't legally recognized yet, he had a legitimate claim. Because Evan had been with his new family for only two months, he may not have developed a bond with them that would have been traumatizing to break.

But the father in the beginning did not even have the mother on his side, as she supported the surrogate parents' right to keep the boy—until it became apparent the father could win.

More importantly, after a long period of legal battles, Evan has lived with the defendants for three years. To remove a child from those who have been his parents in every sense but by law for that long would be unconscionable.

This is not an issue of whether or not the result was right under the law, but an issue of whether or not it was in the child's best interests.

Unfortunately, the decision reflects the prevailing judicial opinion throughout the state and the country that these are matters of parents' rights, rather than matters of children's rights.

Providing the most glaring evidence of this, the Supreme Court has yet again cleanly extricated itself from the battle over gay adoption.

Their continued refusal to consider this important social issue is baffling. If the Supreme Court can see fit to rule on as touchy a subject as the private practice of gay sex—a practice that does not affect public life, regardless of whether or not you agree with it on moral grounds—they most certainly should not put off making a decision that could improve the lives of thousands of children.

The principle is very simple: those who would make the best parents should be allowed to adopt. If a gay couple can pass the rigorous selection procedures and background checks that are required under the current system, they should not be barred from doing so.

Gay rights is and will continue to be a divisive issue in our society. If the Supreme Court has decided it needs more time to consider the correct position, fine. Better to make the choice with authority once than to deliver a wishy-washy plurality that solves nothing.

But they should not duck the issue of adoption rights when it comes up again. In the meantime, the right for our children to have loving, supportive families is being neglected.

For the other cases, there is no excuse. When a suit such as this comes up, there is only one thing the judge and jury must do.

Think of the children.

Democrats need clear goals, leaders

It hasn't been hard to argue with my Democratic friends in recent years. The soulless party line they follow ensures arguments without passion or reason. I've found stirring up trouble is easy and entertaining, as unsustainable opposition often arises. You want to encourage hard work and smart investment? Then tax the successful and give more to the mediocre. You see inequality in the workplace and in schools? Then give one group an advantage over another based solely on race.

America clearly has turned away from many of the classic liberal ideas that made the Democratic Party strong and effective for decades.

Soon, it will be time for the Democratic Party to choose its future. As party loyalists gather in Orlando, they will be wise to remember the lessons of 2004: never forget the silent strength of the South, never underestimate the power of decisive leadership and never deny the need for early, strategic planning.

While I tend not to encourage the growth and strengthening of the Democratic Party, as a political nerd I'm somewhat disgusted by the amorphous blob that has formed from the carcass of the donkey killed on Election Day. While I'll be a Republican until my last vote is cast, I am disappointed to see a portion of America represented only by the frightening figures of Hillary Clinton and Ted Kennedy. The "leadership" of the current Democratic Party has failed to define a vision for America's future.

There is little hope for the party as it stands today. Some within the Democratic Party push for more of the same: bland leadership, whiney dissent and undefined policy. Other insiders call for the liberalization of the party. Apparently, they want to create more distance between the party and the thinking American voter.

Powerful Democrats should be shown the electoral map, with its glorious spans of red. They should be reminded of the likely longevity of the Republican Party. Regardless of the choice Democrats make in their Feb. 12 election, little change will occur in a party still celebrating its long-ago victories. The culture of America has changed, but the party has failed to change with it.

As a card-carrying Republican, I'm not sad to see the Democratic Party wither in the shadow of Republican dominance. It's clear the Democratic Party needs new life. The party needs a vision for America that can counter the clear Republican message. With the Republican Party holding strong majorities in both houses of Congress and in the presidency, the prospect of four years of a purposeless minority seems dangerous to the democratic process.

Democratic Party leadership has done little to inspire and little to rally its troops. In the coming months, I hope to hear something from the Democratic Party that expresses a genuine plan for the future of America. The Hillary Clintons and the Ted Kennedys are poor representations of the beliefs of the average voter. There is hope for intelligent debate that will improve our political process, but it can't come without a vision from the left.

Until the Democratic Party defines itself as something other than "Not-the-Republican Party," it will be easy to negate their arguments. To my friends on the left, get it together—it'll be 2006 before you know it, and we'll again meet on the political battlefield. This time, I'd like to see you bring some ammunition.

Student ambivalence means SG in danger of remaining a private club

Editor: The Access Party did the unthinkable last Spring: they beat the party in power and saw very high voter turnout. We were all promised a party for the students, but, after whispers of future taps and other perks in the ears of the Access presidential ticket by Florida Blue Key, it appears they've turned their backs on the Gators. They ran on minorities versus white fraternities, sororities and typical Student Government, but now they've cut out the minorities and transformed into the malevolent SG we all know and hate. Student apathy is at an all-time high, and, while it's great lots of kids know who Jamal Sowell is, they still couldn't give a dog's crap about SG.

History tells us this corruption of the students' trust will lead to the party's downfall, but what's the point if the process will repeat itself endlessly?

Either something major and historic happens this SG election season, or SG will remain a private club for over-involved, resume-boosting political science majors and aspiring law students to let all their egos blow up and brag about how important they are.

Government should not use terror in Iraq

A recent report by Newsweek should alarm every decent American. It revealed the Pentagon is debating whether to use "death squads" to quell the rebellion in Iraq.

According to Newsweek, one Pentagon proposal "would send Special Forces teams to advise, support and possibly train Iraqi squads, most likely hand-picked Kurdish Peshmerga fighters and Shiite militiamen, to target Sunni insurgents and their sympathizers, ... It remains unclear, however, whether this would be a policy of assassination or so-called 'snatch' operations, in which the targets are sent to secret facilities for interrogation." The strategy is being termed the "Salvador option," referring to the Reagan administration's strategy of funding or supporting "nationalist" death squads to defeat rebels in El Salvador—a strategy which led to many civilian deaths.

What the Pentagon really is talking about here is creating an Iraqi Gestapo that would help us by using terror to frighten Sunnis into cooperating with the new government. Newsweek quoted one anonymous military source as saying, "The Sunni population is paying no price for the support it is giving to the terrorists. From their point of view, it is cost-free. We have to change that equation." But to "change that equation" by using terrorism would be tantamount to selling America's soul. We are supposed to be fighting a war against terror, after all. And there seems to be a trend here. First, the Bush administration told us it was necessary to classify suspects from the Middle East as "enemy combatants," denying them the Geneva Conventions' legal protections for prisoners of war. We have been told to accept that most of the more than 500 prisoners in Guantanamo Bay still have not been charged. The few who were released tell stories of torture and brutality, but we have been told not to believe them.

Jason Levitt

And then came the photos from Abu Ghraib. This time, the sadistic brutality was in full view of the American public. The administration told us the actions were the results of a few twisted individuals. So far, I have accepted that in war the lines between right and wrong are blurred. Sometimes, in order to win, terrible things must be done.

Case in point: American war planes firebombed Tokyo during WWII, killing thousands of civilians. Some of the pilots recalled getting sick from the smell of burning flesh coming from below. The horror of this act only was surpassed by the atomic blasts on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. These terrible acts helped bring the war to a close, and therefore were in some way justified.

But America is now embroiled in a different type of war. We are not against a country but the technique of using terror to achieve an objective. Already, the Pentagon has come dangerously close to crossing the line. If it decides to proceed with the plan to use "death squads," it will be crossed. We will then have become the enemy, and therefore it will be us we must destroy.

DJ Loki lowers blood pressure, raises roof

By ALICIA PEREZ
Avenue Writer

With his hands he creates a blend of rhythmic beats that tantalizes the bodies of those who feel the need to be set free through the art of dance.

And with those same hands, he soon may help save the lives of hospital patients.

Larry Malbog, better known as DJ Loki to club-goers, has created hypnotizing beats with his turntables for two-and-a-half years.

Growing up in the small town of Clewiston, Malbog's passion was music. In high school, he started break dancing while listening to DJs mix songs at dances.

"My senior year, I heard this group of DJs known as the Beat Junkies, and from that moment, I decided I wanted to be a DJ," the 21-year-old says.

When he came to UF, Malbog joined the Filipino Student Association and began to spin at some of their parties. From there, he made contacts with The Hip Hop Collective, another UF-sponsored club, for whom he has spun several times.

Malbog was unsuccessful with his attempt to be on the radio, but answering an advertisement for Sky Nightclub downtown, proved to be a life-changing event, he says.

"I called different promoters, and Sky was the only club that gave me a chance," Malbog says as his fingers play with the click-wheel of his white iPod. "I have been there for three months now, spinning on Thursday and Saturday nights."

Malbog says his alias is unique because of its origins.

The name, he explains, comes from the fact his friends tell him he is a low key person. Yet, it holds a double meaning in Sweden, where Loki is the god of mischief, he says smiling.

But rather than continuing to explain his growth as a DJ, Malbog says proudly that he does not aspire to be a DJ.

"It's no surprise that because I am Filipino I am destined to be in the medical field," the third-year nursing student says grinning. "But I chose to become a nurse, not because my parents wanted me to."

He says he hopes the experience he has creating remixes at the club will transfer to helping people who are in need at the hospital. In both aspects of his life, he will be interacting with people, which is what he enjoys doing.

"The crowd's response to my spinning is amazing," he says. "I like doing blends, which is when I use lyrics of one song and put it on top of the music of another. I get paid to do what I love, what more can I ask for?"

Dirty dialogue can be silenced

My girlfriend is really cool, except for one thing. She demands that we talk dirty during sex. She suggested it awhile ago, and I thought it was hot at first. Now it feels like a porno every time we go at it. Sometimes I just want sex to be like it was before she discovered her dirty mouth, but it's such a turn on for her that it's hard to make her stop. '2 Pianos' not just for pianists

As the darkened theater is illuminated by the soft glow of overhead lighting, two characters stand on stage. Not two people, but two grand pianos.

Soon after follow two men, the characters of Richard Greenblatt and Ted Dykstra, the same names as the creators of the most recent production at the Hippodrome State Theatre.

After several minutes of the two men nervously whispering, making faces and shuffling around, their fingers meet the ivory keys and "2 Pianos, 4 Hands" bursts to life with a full classical piano duet.

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands," however, is more than just classical music.

In fact, the musical selection ranges from John Lennon's "Imagine" to Elton John's "Bennie and the Jets," with everything from Bach to Beethoven mixed in between.

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands" follows the

Angie De Angelis At the Hipp

theavenue@alligator.org

as the show's associate director.

Richard and Ted are the show's main characters, but the actors also play the roles of parents, teachers and piano instructors.

This production is a little bit of everything. Part comedy, part musical and part drama, "2 Pianos, 4 Hands" follows the Richard and Ted's lives from their childhood lessons to their adult searches for fame.

"2 Pianos, 4 Hands" will appeal not only to those who have endured lives of two pianists, Richard, played by Richard Todd Adams, and Ted, played by Tom Frey also serves musical lessons, but to anyone who has had to work to perfect a talent. It is a story of the aspiration to follow a dream and the loss of letting it go.

Though lighthearted, the play illustrates the delicate moment when the characters come to terms with reality in their searches for stardom. It contrasts the humor that comes with learning an instrument with the more serious moments of moving on.

Frey and Adams are no strangers to their characters. Frey has performed in more than 200 productions of "2 Hands, 4 Pianos," more than half of them opposite Adams. The actors switched roles for their Gainesville productions.

"2 Hands, 4 Pianos" runs until Jan. 30 at the Hippodrome State Theatre, located at 25 SE Second Place.

To purchase tickets, contact the Hippodrome at 375-HIPP or online at www.thehipp.org.

'Pit' traps critic in odd scenario

Sex, violence and profanity aren't what I normally imagine when going to the theater; however, "The Votive Pit" isn't a normal play.

Shamrock McShane's unsettling piece deals with the problems and issues of the public school system, and it does so in a way I definitely did not expect.

Heather Berger Curtain Call

theavenue@alligator.org

I just don't remember having teachers killing students at my middle school.

Things start to get strange right around there.

Suddenly there is blood, echoing voices and an old woman making sexual innuendo with two Barbie dolls. It might have been a dream sequence, but I didn't get it.

Despite what seemed to go over my head, "The Votive Pit" has some great aspects that kept me very interested.

It presents important issues in today's schools such as illiteracy, violence and cultural diversity. I loved how the teachers have the audience playing the students.

They even sent an audience member "to the office" for not obeying the dress code.

The spooky set establishes the mood for the play — eerie, yet somehow credible.

I am not used to small venues like The Acrosstown Repertory Theatre, but it certainly added to my appreciation of the play. I was so involved that it kept me wondering, and that's why I am so unsettled about it today.

Maybe that was the point after all.

For all of you intellectuals who love to analyze, "The Votive Pit" should be a great match. Maybe afterward, you can explain it to me.

"The Votive Pit" plays at The Acrosstown Repertory Theatre from Thursday to Saturday until January 29. The show begins at 8 p.m., and tickets are $7 for students and $9 otherwise.

Warrior Within worth time despite pitfalls

I skip Vin Diesel movies for a reason.

Angst-ridden one-liners, terrible metal themes and my-way-or-the-highway attitudes don't make characters tough. They make them generic.

So when I played Ubisoft's "Prince of Persia: Warrior Within," I was disappointed to see a gaming series with such inventive gameplay fall prey to character clichés.

While the series' last installment, Sands of Time, had the flair of an Arabian swashbuckling adventure, the bleak atmosphere of Warrior Within turns it into a hackneyed tale of revenge, fate or something I quickly learned not to care about.

The Prince's persona, darkened by years of fleeing an unstoppable beast, is not the inventive series twist its makers must have imagined, marring an otherwise fun game.

The combat is a constant reward. Sands of Time veterans will be thrilled to find the Prince deadlier than ever. He can throw, strangle, kick, disarm and pick up enemy weapons for impressive dual-wield moves or throw

Brett Kelman
Don't Hate the Playa
theavenue@alligator.org

them for long-range decapitations. If it ain't broke don't fix it. It wasn't, so Ubisoft didn't. But that's not true for the game's abysmal sound. The trademark Arabian music is almost completely absent, and even if you like the trash Godsmack contributes, you'll get sick of hearing the same two guitar tracks over and over.

The sound effects are no better. Screeching death throws are painful, and the Prince's one-liners are so bad, you almost want to let him die.

But the core gameplay of improved combat and magnificent platforming make Warrior Within a worthy installment to a great series.

I advise you to play this game. Just skip the cut scenes and mute the sound. Trust me, you don't care what's going on and won't want to hear about it.

Labor singer to play benefit

By NATHANIEL DEAS
Avenue Writer

Forty-nine million Americans are uninsured. Planned Parenthood constantly is under threat. Migrant workers are exploited in Immokalee. Folk singer Anne Feeney covers it all.

"It all inspires me," she says. "And I enjoy being the messenger, letting others know about all the cool things that are happening that Fox News doesn't cover."

Feeney, whose style is reminiscent of Joan Baez, brings her message to the Matheson Museum, located at 513 E. University Ave., tonight at 8. Proceeds will benefit the Civic Center and Alachua County Labor Party's campaign to put universal healthcare on Florida's ballot in 2006.

"It'll be a great time," Feeney says. "The Matheson Museum is a wonderful place to hear music, and you'll be supporting the Just Health Care Campaign of the Labor Party. Even if you're not one of the 49 million uninsured folks in this country, you ought to be concerned about this crisis."

Joe Courter, a founding member of the CMC, says he's thrilled to have Feeney in Gainesville.

"Anne Feeney is a treasure," he says. "She sings about labor and topical information that's typically not heard on the radio."

While she could lend herself more to radio and larger audiences, she chooses to stay true to her roots. We're really lucky to get someone of her talent."

Renowned musician Utah Phillips also praises Feeney, calling her "the best labor singer in North America."

"Honestly, Utah Phillips is one of very few people that I would accept that praise from," Feeney says. "In my opinion, and probably lots of other folks, he is the best labor singer in North America. But it's really not about being the best for me, I'm just thrilled to be able to do this work."

Perhaps Feeney's highest compliment comes from Peter, Paul and Mary, who cover her tribute to those who stand up for their beliefs, "Have

To have Peter, Paul and Mary learn a song of mine - I bought my guitar so I could learn all of their songs when I was 16 years old. It's a pretty marvelous turn of events.

- Anne Feeney "Carry It On."

Paul and Mary learn a song of mine — I bought my guitar so I could learn all of their songs when I was 16 years old," Feeney says. "It's a pretty marvelous turn of events."

The lyrics sung by Feeney, whose raw and honest voice often takes on reggae, hip hop and ska styles, should resonate with fans of artists like Woody Guthrie or Rage Against the Machine.

Tickets are $7 at Goerings and Wild Iris book stores, or $10 at the door. Expect an intimate setting with a lot of audience interaction.

"[My live show is] kind of like coming over to my house and rooting through my closets," Feeney says. "I'm never sure exactly what's going to unfold over the course of the evening."

Writer crosses into dark side with sordid short stories

I wonder how often Rod Liddle heard he could go blind from whacking off.

Because in his debut book, "Too Beautiful for You," virtually no sexual act goes unpunished.

Reading Liddle's collection of interconnected stories is like having sex in the backseat of a "Tales from the Crypt" episode.

One woman, Anna, slowly turns into a cockroach from a combination of depilatory cream and hours in a tanning booth. She also could have metamorphosed due to a one-night stand with a married man who has a demon in his espresso machine.

Or maybe, just maybe, poor Anna's skin turned black and shiny because the insect life featured in another strain of Liddle's world finally rose up to overtake humanity.

The author, the associate editor of a British news magazine called The Spectator, gave up a position as news editor of BBC's "The Today Program" because of a conflict of interest in writing his column in the British newspaper The Guardian.

I can't imagine what kind of journalist Liddle is, but he's a master at holding back what journalists are trained to shove up front: This man paints a story in the negative space.

He is British, after all, and everything is backward over there, right?

But the unveiling of critical details turns all rules ass-end up. Suddenly, a tale of a man getting a blow job in a park from his mother-in-law falls into a whole new light.

His stories no longer are sordid bits of gratuitous fiction but departures in which Liddle succeeds in taking the reader with him without judgment, to view humanity's darker side — even though Liddle often takes the reader where no person in his right mind wants to go.

Liddle succeeds in being almost funny — even titillating — in a

Cher Phillips
Off the Press
theavenue@alligator.org

"Very Bad Things" sort of way. His writing is rich with heady details, though many have British references, like the man who craved his ex-girlfriend because all her important parts tasted like Marmite and Worcestershire sauce.

Liddle tipped his hand as a novice in the art of fiction the book's final story, "The Lost Honor of Engin Hassan." I knew I'd be cleaning my mental palate with some chick lit and waiting for his next book before I proclaimed him a great read.

He wrote dialogue for a Muslim terrorist using the exact turn of phrase that fell out of the mouths of his twenty-something South Londoners. Proximity might have sold "It's just not on" as a colloquialism but not to the point of crossing countries and cultures and into the mouths of terrorists.

Just because the devil lived in the espresso machine does not still mean he's not still in the details.

WE'RE CONCERNED ABOUT YESTERDAY'S NEWS.

News can appear one day and be gone the next. But the paper news is printed on an and should live on.

Last year, more than one third of all U.S. newsprint was recycled. And that number is growing every day.

Recycling is the one way we can all give something back.

Read. Then Recycle.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Lee disappears in lackluster first half at Auburn

By BRYAN APP

Alligator Staff Writer
bapp@alligator.org

AUBURN, Ala. — After his 4-point, two-rebound performance against Florida State, forward David Lee put in extra hours of practice and seemingly earned his penance with a team-high 17-point, seven-rebound game against Arkansas.

In the first half of UF's first SEC road game Wednesday, however, Lee once again disappeared.

Against Auburn, Lee had three turnovers, two fouls, one rebound and no points while attempting one shot in the opening period. Lee scored his first points of the game with 18:28 remaining in the second half.

SIZE DOESN'T MATTER: Despite the vast size advantage the Gators had against the Tigers, Auburn outrebounded and outscored UF in the paint in the first half.

With only one player taller than 6-foot-6 on their roster, compared to UF's seven, the Tigers held a 15-14 rebounding advantage and a 20-16 scoring advantage in the paint at halftime.

Lee

But according to Lee, the energy a team has playing on its home court can outweigh any physical advantage.

The key to success, Lee said, is to remain humble, yet aggressive.

"It comes down to not going anywhere and expecting to blow anybody out," Lee said. "If you go in there thinking it's going to be an easy game because of a team's record or a team's height, every team in the SEC is very tough on their home floor. You've got to go in there and grind it out, possession by possession."

BEYOND BASKETBALL: For Donovan, coaching goes beyond the hardwood.

Despite the fact that he doesn't agree with some of the decisions made by some of his former players — including Teddy Dupay's alleged gambling and Major Parker's indictment on federal drug charges, Donovan said he feels obligated to help his former players recover in their private and professional lives.

"I am disappointed at the decision some young people have made," Donovan said. "But for me, as a coach who coached them and told them during the recruiting process 'I'll be by your side, I'll work with you,' and things like that, I think I have to be somewhat supportive and understand that decisions were made that weren't right."

In the wake of Parker's indictment Donovan said he needs to aid, rather than shun, his former staff assistant.

"Now I have to try and help some of those people," Donovan said. "I need to help Major Parker after this whole thing finishes to be a contributor to society and get his life back in order."

rebounds and four steals in the final 25 minutes.

"In the first half, I was really taken out with foul trouble," Lee said.

Along with Lee, a pair of UF freshmen played physically to shift a halftime deficit into a momentum advantage.

Center Al Horford grabbed a team-high 10 rebounds, while Brewer ignited UF's play on both ends of the court.

Brewer, who finished with a career-high 14 points, scored on three consecutive shots less than four minutes into the second period, capping a 10-0 half-opening run.

But perhaps Brewer's greatest contributions came on the other end of the court.

With UF leading 67-65 with less than a minute remaining in the second half, Brewer stole the ball from Auburn guard Ian Young at midcourt and raced down the floor for a fast-break layup while being fouled.

"I was reading them all game," said Brewer who finished with three steals. "I was just waiting for him to show me the ball. And I went for it."

about Peck receiving Southeastern Conference Coach of the Year consideration, let me be the first. UF has done nothing but improve or find ways to overcome obstacles since Peck's painful first year in 2002-03.

Now, before you think this column is meant to gush over the Gators, a word of caution: this all could come crashing down in the SEC, perennially the best conference in women's basketball. Even with the slip-ups Tennessee has had, the Vols could turn around and whip UF's Gator-hide.

UF showed in 2004 that they can stand up to the bullies in the SEC and pulled off the huge upset against New Mexico in The Pit. It's time for the ladies to take the next step.

I'll give them this: if they can go where no UF basketball team in the last three years has gone, then they would be the success story that trumps any success story from 2004 in Gainesville.

Likely, though, only 3,000 die-hard fans will notice.

Crispers® Presents...

Everything You Need to Know About College.

Thing Number One: a hungry Gator is a hurtin' Gator. That's why it's so important to be well fed at all times. But (and here's the critical part) don't fall for those murderburgers, substandard subs, or pitiful pizza.

Thing Number Two: Come to Crispers instead. That's where you'll eat right and SAVE. Fortunately, there's a Crispers restaurant near the UF campus, where you can consume (relatively) mass quantities for only a few bucks.

You'll SAVE $1 on any of our gourmet-recipe salads or hearty stacked sandwiches. Then, next time you come in, you'll get a FREE smoothie or shake. Not too shabby. By the way, don't forget to try one of our prepared-fresh soups, gumbos, or chowders.

If you're a sweet freak, you'll love our creamy cheesecakes, rich layer cakes, cookies, and brownies. And then there are all the sundaes and milkshakes made with delicious Publix Premium Ice Cream.

Coach's exit could be costly

LOCKSLEY OFFICIALLY JOINED ILLINOIS STAFF.

By ERIC ESTEBAN
Alligator Writer

As the college football recruiting world turns, so do theators.

The past three months have been a period of transitional recruiting for UF as coaching staff members have come and gone. Now, Wednesday's loss to Illinois recruiting coordinator Mike Locksley could turn the Gators' recruiting world upside down.

locksley

Locksley, who also served as the running backs coach, was one of two members remaining from Ron Cook's staff. Without him, the Gators might lose out on several prospects that were highly recruited by Coach Urban Meyer and the new staff.

"I think it's a significant loss," said Jamie Newberg, Scout.com's national recruiting analyst. "He was the glue that held the recruiting together during the transition period with Coach [Charlie] Strong."

"Losing a guy like Mike Locksley will definitely prove costly. There is a handful of prospects that the Gators could lose out on."

As recruiting coordinator, Locksley was in charge of central Florida and Georgia, as well as recruiting in the Northeast and west of the Mississippi.

Jerome Hayes, of Bayonne, N.J., ranked the No. 14 linebacker in the nation by Scout.com, also said that Locksley's departure could hurt UF's chances.

Losing Locksley to Illinois will translate to even more work for Meyer and his staff. Meyer will prepare to host his second wave of visiting recruits Friday. Next week, he'll hit the recruiting trail for in-home visits.

"This is a good coaching staff and Urban Meyer is a good recruiter," Newberg said. "However — and this goes with all coaching changes — there is a smaller recruiting window and shorter amount of time for recruits to get to know Meyer."

With signing day fast approaching, Meyer will have just three weeks to establish relationships with recruits. But Newberg said that if the new staff works diligently, it could still finish with a top recruiting class.

"In a perfect world, kids would choose a school based on the school and that's it," he said. "The bottom line is that the coach/player relationship is huge in the recruiting process."

Oral commitments are non-binding until a national letter-of-intent is signed on National Signing Day on Feb. 2.

Peck: UF shouldn't focus on Tigers' ranking doesn't matter what kind of uniform the other team has on. You have great respect for them, but you just go out and play the game."

'Hoosiers' is the tale of a small-town Indiana high school basketball team who defeats a large city high school to win the state title. In the movie, the coach constantly reminds his players to play to their potential and to ignore the hype surrounding the opposition.

The Gators were in a similar position earlier in the season when they traveled to then-No. 6 Baylor. UF struggled early, but after drawing close in the first half, fell 89-62.

For some players, the hype surrounding that matchup affected them.

"I think I had a lot of nerves coming into that game," said junior forward Bernice Mosby, who spent much of the contest in foul trouble. "So I think I learned a lot from that game. And even though you're facing top opponents, you've still got to take it one game at a time."

Peck and her players agree it will take a team defensive effort to win. However, LSU's Augustus and senior guard Temeka Johnson provide a dual scoring threat.

"I don't think we're going to shut down Seimone Augustus. I don't think we're going to just shut down Temeka Johnson," Peck said. "We're going to have to play great team defense and then execute well on the offensive end."

After relying on departed center Vanessa Hayden to carry the team last season, Mosby said defense no longer comes down to one player.

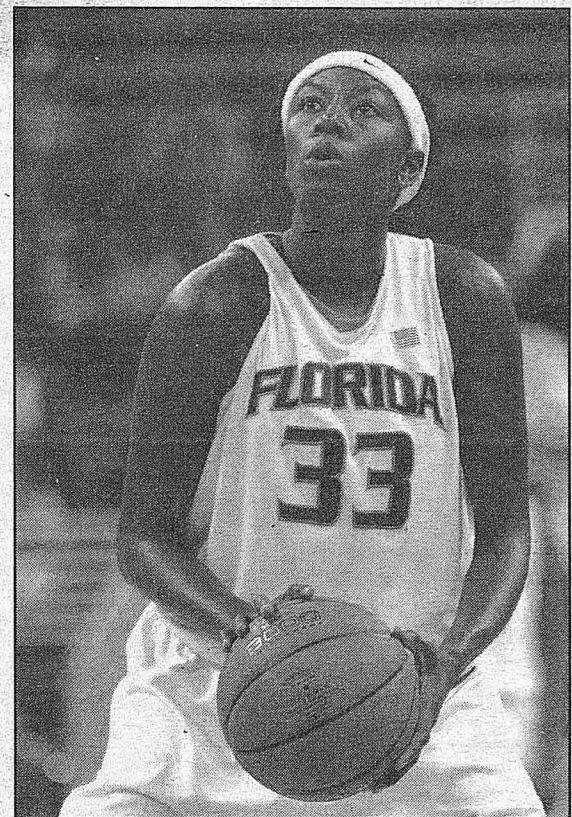

"We're more as a team, more as a unit," she said. "We trust in each other a lot more, especially on defense."

Following the losses of starting guard Danielle Santos to a stress fracture in her right foot and sophomore Kim Dye to torn left knee ligaments, only nine players will dress for UF.

Yet, others have stepped into the spotlight to cover for the lost personnel.

Senior guard Tamia Williams enters the LSU game after scoring 45 combined points against Arkansas and Auburn, earning SEC Co-Player of the Week honors. Filling in for Santos, Williams gives the team credit for her success.

"I have to give all credit to my teammates for having total confidence in me and supporting and encouraging me," she said. "Coach is very encouraging and she's given me an opportunity to play some good minutes. And I think so far I've been going pretty good."

Forward Bernice Mosby led UF with nine rebounds against Auburn on Sunday, but she'll have to be a giant-slayer tonight. Mosby and the Gators have relished the underdog role against No. 3 Louisiana State.

UF bests Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. — Coming into his team's first Southeastern Conference road game against Auburn, Coach Billy Donovan vocalized a key concern: He didn't want the Gators to get into a three-point shooting contest. Fortunately, they did.

After a last-second Auburn three-pointer sent the game into overtime, the Tigers just couldn't keep up with UF's SEC-leading offense, falling 84-78 to the Gators (10-3, 2-0 SEC).

With 1.5 seconds remaining in the game and Tigers fans filing out, Auburn guard Toney Douglas caught a three-quarter-court inbound pass, turned and hit a three-point shot before the buzzer, tying the score at 71 and pumping life back into a deflated home crowd.

"I knew it was going in," Douglas said. "For real — I be practicing that shot."

But the Gators' leading scorer, Anthony Roberson, had an answer.

After missing one of two free throws with 1.9 seconds remaining to keep the UF lead at 3, Roberson opened the overtime period with three consecutive shots, two of which were three-pointers, to put the Gators ahead 79-75.

"It was just going back and forth," Roberson said. "[Douglas] would hit a three, and then I'd hit a three. I just prayed to God that I could make one more shot than he could."

But Douglas, who finished with a team-high 32 points, made another three-pointer to cut the UF lead to 2 with 1:07 remaining.

"I don't know if I've ever seen a freshman in our league as good as him," Donovan said. "It's unbelievable the way he scores."

On the Gators' ensuing possession, the Tigers trapped freshman forward Corey Brewer at midcourt, forcing a UF timeout.

After play resumed, forward David Lee drew a foul and hit two free throws. Roberson followed with two more to put the game out of reach.

Roberson finished with a game- and season-high 34 points while sinking 6 of 10 three-pointers.

With some sharp shooting and defensive pressure, the Gators overcame a first half in which the small but quick Tigers outrebounded and outscored them in the paint for a 39-36 lead.

Despite looming over all of Auburn's starters by at least three inches, Lee had a quiet first half, failing to score and grabbing just one rebound.

Lee, however, assumed a dominant role in second half, accumulating 10 points, eight

Expect the unexpected with Peck

Since starting at UF in the fall of 2000, I hadn't seen a year like 2004.

The Gators were, collectively, a shank short of a double bogey. It wasn't a good year.

In fact, any 17-year old Gators fan could challenge Frank Sinatra's song right now.

But 2005, at least on the surface, has the makings of a great year in Gators sports. Between the arrival of the Urban Meyer era and Billy Donovan's struggles in postseason play, it will certainly be a groundbreaking one.

Which is why the charge for a better 2005 for UF will come from...the women's basketball team?

Yeah, it may seem like a stretch. But look here Gators fan: you haven't had much to cheer about these days. Beggars can't be choosers. Plus, baseball finishes in May, so they really wouldn't be "leading the charge."

And while the RED-hot No. 3 Louisiana State Tigers stand a good chance of taking over the O'Connell Center (which could be a totally better playground than even the $3-million digs LSU boosters are building for their live mascot, Mike the Tiger), Coach Carolyn Peck's squad has made a habit of defying expectations.

No Vanessa Hayden? No problem. UF has adopted a faster style that has caught its first two conference opponents off guard.

Injuries to Danielle Santos and now Kim Dye? No problem. UF will use the other nine evenly and still wear opponents down.

Really, if there hasn't been talk

Gators host red-hot No. 3 LSU Tigers

In the marathon that is a season, one game will not determine success.

But one game can change a lot.

Tonight, the UF women's basketball team hosts No. 3 Louisiana State at 6:30 in the O'Connell Center. The Tigers are the highest-ranked team to come into Gainesville since then-No. 2 Tennessee in 2002.

UF (11-4, 2-0 Southeastern Conference) has only beaten three top-five teams in its history. If the Gators can pull off the upset, it will be arguably the biggest win in team history.

"It's going to be an exciting time for our program and for our team to take on a tough challenger like LSU," Coach Carolyn Peck said.

LSU (14-1, 1-0 SEC) had been the No. 1 team in the country until last week's overtime loss to Rutgers.

That aside, the Tigers have three players scoring in double figures, including junior guard Seimone Augustus, who is ESPN's midseason MVP. Augustus bruised her elbow Saturday against Georgia but will play tonight.

Peck said her team must focus on themselves, not LSU's ranking. To make her point, she turned to the a classic David versus Goliath matchup.

"Taking from a page out of 'Hoosiers,'" Peck said. "You just got to go out and play. It
