UF finance student dies in car accident

Friends remember sports enthusiast

By ELIZABETH PRANN

Alligator Writer
lprann@alligator.org

Gainesville's first traffic fatality of 2005 claimed the life of UF student Christopher James Small early Friday morning.

Friends and family remembered Small, 21, for his outgoing personality. The UF finance junior was an honors student as well as a member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and Kappa Sigma Fraternity.

"He was a devout Christian," his father, Larry Small, said. "But he walked the walk; he was full of love, love for people and love for life."

Small was driving alone southbound on Northwest 34th Street at 2:35 a.m. Friday when he sped through the intersection of Northwest 16th Avenue at an estimated 90 mph, Gainesville Police spokesman Keith Kameg said. The speed limit was 35 mph.

Kameg said Small's 1997 Acura Integra became airborne shortly afterward and rolled before impacting a telephone pole.

"The speed is the main factor," Kameg said. "It was a tragic accident."

Though toxicology reports won't be complete for a few weeks, a small amount of marijuana was found near the crash site, Kameg said. Gary Goldberg, Small's former roommate, was skeptical of a correlation, calling the possibility "uncharacteristic" of Small.

Small, a lifelong fan of cars, according to his father, paid for the vehicle himself in the Fall.

"He was so excited; he wanted to keep getting better cars," Larry Small said.

Longtime friend and Fellowship of Christian Athletes member Kevin McClure said he learned the most about Small, his former football buddy, during their freshman year in Hume Hall.

"He always liked to be around people," McClure said. "He knew a lot of people in FCA. Everyone knew him and who he was."

McClure said about 50 friends met Friday evening after hearing about the accident to share their favorite memories of Small and pray for his family.

"[It's] really hard on the organization as a whole," McClure said.

Goldberg smiled as he remembered "Smalls," a nickname given to Small because of his short stature. However, one thing Goldberg said couldn't be underestimated was his character.

"He just had boundless energy and enthusiasm. If you were having a bad day, he would be there at the drop of a hat," Goldberg said.

All three men were quick to include their memories of Small as an avid sports fan across team lines, though his favorites were the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, New York Yankees and, of course, the Gators.

"He loved being at college, he loved all of his friends, and just loved being there," Larry Small said. "He loved being a Gator."

Machen evaluates university goals, may get bonus

It's bonus time for UF President Bernie Machen.

UF's highest governing body, the Board of Trustees, is reviewing Machen's self-assessment of how well he's met four top university goals during his first year in office.

As UF's first long-term president since the board was created, he is the first to go through the annual review process, which may yield him a bonus of up to $75,000, according to his contract.

"This is really the first formal as-essment," Trustee Dianna Morgan said. "Our hope is that Dr. Machen is with us for the long term, and therefore

I think having a good process of evaluation is important."

Machen wrote in his assessment that the four goals — improving faculty support, increasing research funding by $40 million, boosting donations and reworking the organization of the administration — have been accomplished.

The Trustees are writing assessments of him as well, which will go first to the Committee on Governance before the full board in March. Also at the meeting, Machen will announce his proposed changes to the strategic plan drafted in 2002 by then-President Charles Young and then-Provost David Colburn. The plan outlines how UF will posi-

Petition may come to vote

By BRIDGET CAREY
Alligator Writer
bcarey@alligator.org

If the more than 1,000 signatures gathered Thursday pass judicial muster, students could soon decide on an on-line voting initiative in addition to casting Spring votes for student body officers and senators.

And according to Student Government officials, such an initiative has not been on a Spring ballot in seven years.

Petitioners from the Phoenix Party — formerly known as the Access Party before their name was claimed by a Florida Blue Key member — as well as members of the Progress Party, turned in nearly 1,300 signatures from students who say they support the idea of voting online in future SG elections.

The last ballot effort, pushed by Students for Fair and Equal Representation in 1998, garnered 1,400 signatures to force onto the ballot an initiative to remove then-

Student Body President John McGovern from power. The action came because the president and FBK were found liable in court for the campaign-time defamation of opposing candidate Charles Grapski during the Spring election. The Board of Masters, SG's Supreme Court, controversially denied the initiative, killing chances for the president's removal.

It's now up to the same board to verify Thursday's signatures as valid before the issue can be placed on the ballot. Only about 970 signatures were needed — roughly 2 percent of the student body — which gives the petitioners a comfortable 30 percent margin of error for invalid signatures.

Supreme Court Chief Justice Tobi Butensky said she will check that the wording of the initiative will not be confusing for students. Her staff will begin signature verification after Tuesday when a new justice is scheduled to be sworn in.

Students tear down stereotypes

By LINDSAY TAULBEE
Alligator Writer
ltaulbee@alligator.org

With a "Three! Two! One!" and a startlingly loud crash, UF students pulled down a wall Friday that represented oppression and hate.

The wall, part of the Inter-Residence Hall Association's "Writing on the Wall Project," was constructed from 360 cinder blocks students had painted with words depicting stereotypes.

"We hope people see these blocks and get angry by them," project co-director Joey Wilson said. He said he hoped people would use that anger for positive change.

About 200 people gathered on the Plaza of the Americas for the brief ceremony.

Then students from the crowd grabbed ropes that were anchored into the wall and pulled.

They dismantled the wall amid a rising cloud of dust, raised the separated blocks high over their heads and crashed them down once again.

The blocks, which once had displayed words like "Trailer Trash," "Transgendered Freak," and "Towel Head," were reduced to piles of rubble.

"We've had a wide variety of reactions to it (the project)," said Wilson, noting that some students have complained that the wall just perpetuated stereotypes.

"The purpose of this is not to learn new bad words, but to react to them," said Wilson.

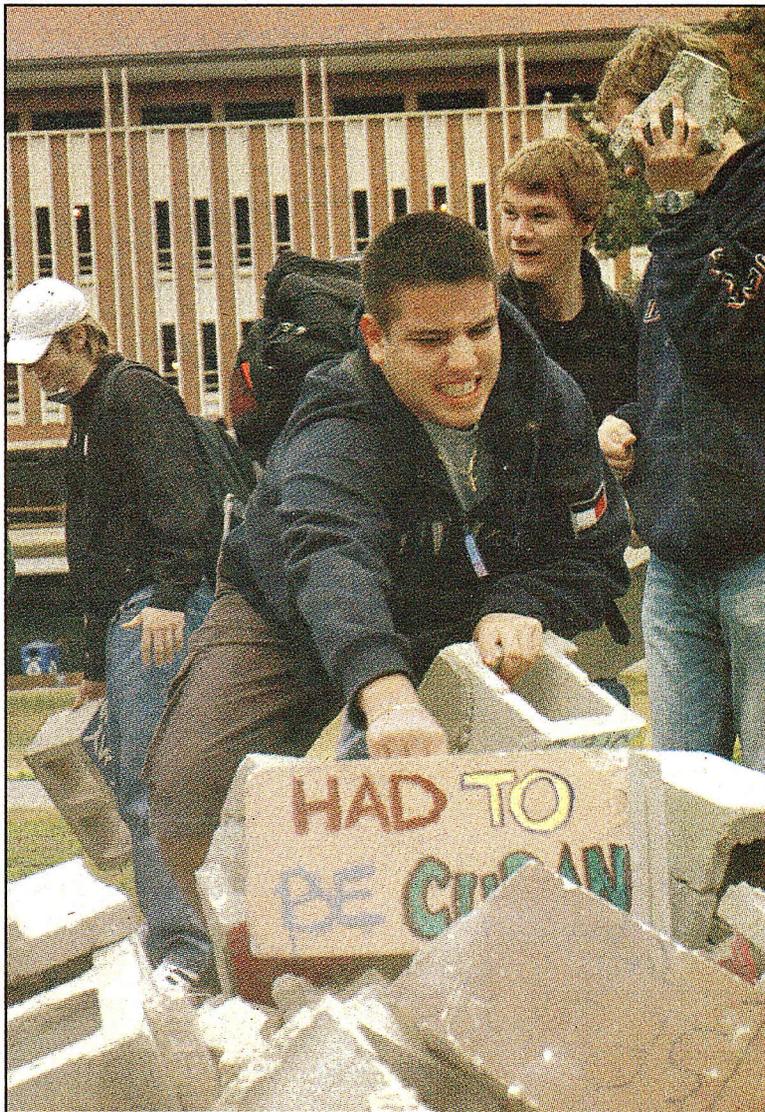

Katherine Cox, project co-director and secretary for IRHA, said the project was meant to make people realize these words are still in society's vocabulary and shock them into creating a change.

"As long as there are hateful words, there will always be a wall," Cox said.

Prior to the wall's downfall, UF Vice President for Student Affairs Patricia Telles-Irvin; Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Affairs Director Tamara Cohen and Honors Program adviser Vikram Rangala spoke to the crowd.

Cohen urged students to repeat an oath to stop using all discriminatory language.

"All of us deserve the freedom to be our complex selves," she told the crowd.

Hanrahan praises UF

By BRIAN HAGEN

Mayor Pegeen Hanrahan praised UF for receiving an invitation to join the Florida High Tech Corridor in its pursuit of expanding its research ambitions in her State of the City address Friday.

"As UF seeks to break into the ranks of the top 10 public universities, Gainesville must be an eager partner," Hanrahan said.

The corridor is a partnership between UF, UCF and USF to attract technical industry investment in microelectronics, information and medical technology, aviation, aerospace and optics.

The proposed Gainesville Regional Utilities plant and rebuilding East Gainesville are among the city's highest priorities for 2005, Hanrahan said.

In recalling 2004, the mayor praised the city's hurricane response, commending the work of city employees and GRU in rebuilding and restoring the damage left behind by hurricanes Frances and Jeanne.

"Despite these tremendous and sometimes heart-wrenching challenges, I am very proud to be able to report to you that your city is strong and growing stronger every day," Hanrahan said.

Despite Gainesville's Building Inspection Department's record year in the number of development project permits issued, Hanrahan noted that it's "past time" to develop East Gainesville, and the City Commission allocated $50,000 last Monday for improvement planning.

The Gainesville Police Department was cited for its partnership with UF and SFCC in the Phoenix Initiative, a neighborhood after-school program, and its newly created Domestic Violence Unit.

Gainesville Fire Rescue received state awards in 2004 for fire chief, investigator and firefighter of the year.

"Three state recognitions in one year is a great accomplishment and reflect the high degree of professionalism maintained by the fire department," Hanrahan said.

Though sales-tax initiatives for parks and roads were voted down in Alachua County, Hanrahan noted the "overwhelming" support of Gainesville residents for the measures and intends to pursue related community park projects.

SG Treasurer Ngin to learn presidential fate tonight

■ THE PHOENIX PARTY CONVENTION WILL BE HELD IN THE REITZ UNION.

By STEPHEN MAGRUDER
Alligator Writer
smagruder@alligator.org

Tonight, Dennis Ngin could follow in the footsteps of treasurer-turned-president Jamal Sowell if nominated to lead the executive ticket of the Phoenix Party's campaign.

From 9 to 11 p.m., Phoenix Party delegates and leaders will hold a presidential nominating convention in Reitz Union Room 282.

Ngin, who will go up for nomination against a few unnamed candidates from within the Phoenix Party, said he has wanted to run since the semester began.

"It's been lingering for a while," said Ngin, the Student Body Treasurer.

The candidate who receives the party's nomination may choose the vice president and treasurer candidates.

Ngin said he has considered running with Robert Mack, the Student Government lobbying director, as his vice presidential candidate.

During an online voting petition drive last week, presidential adviser Lowell Wong said although the two don't yet have approval from the Phoenix Party, little competition stands between Ngin and the nomination tonight.

"I don't see any major challengers," Wong said.

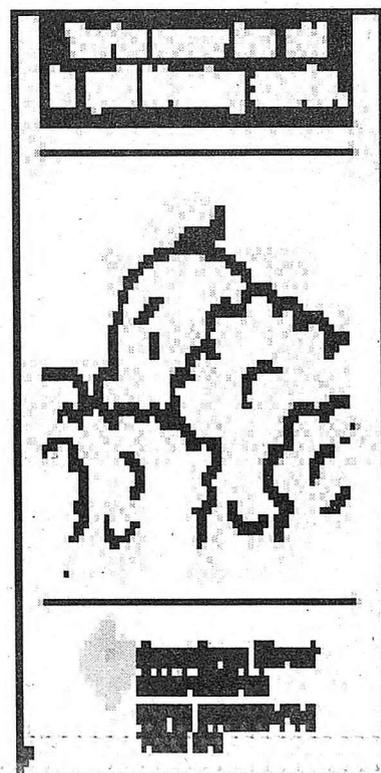

Elected last Spring with the former Access Party, Ngin said he would like to finish his career in SG with those same people, who now have formed the Phoenix Party since Florida Blue Key member Michael Shine claimed the name Access for himself.

"I'm kinda nervous because we've never done anything like this before," Ngin said.

The convention, which is open to the public, will strive to make the nominating process as democratic as possible, Phoenix Party adviser Andre Samuels said.

"I know that Dennis [Ngin] has quite a few supporters," Samuels said.

However, he added that other candidates are strongly seeking the nomination. The candidate nominated tonight may end up running his or her campaign under a different party name as convention-goers can also vote on alternative names for the party tonight.

Democracy in Iraq still in question

If anyone was ever an outspoken critic of the war in Iraq, it was me. There never were any weapons of mass destruction, and Saddam Hussein did not have any ties to Al-Qaeda. I believe that we went into Iraq for the wrong reasons, but we need to make sure we leave for the right ones.

Immediately withdrawing our troops from Iraq is not an option. Whether you agree with President

Craig Singleton
Editorial Notebook

Bush's rationale for war or not, picking up and leaving Iraq will lead to much more harm than good. After World War I, America quickly pulled out of Europe and cut ties with most of the world. Americans were exhausted and frustrated by the casualties of a war that had little to do with them. By leaving the way we did, a vacuum was created in Europe that fostered Adolf Hitler's rise to power and subsequently led to World War II. I, for one, don't want the same to occur in Iraq.

Attacks by the insurgents have been steadily increasing — one of the few things the Bush administration has accurately predicted over the last three years. The insurgents mostly are composed of the Sunni population that ruled during Saddam Hussein's reign, and their goal is to prevent Iraq from becoming a democratic state by disrupting

Democracy draws closer in Iraq after first election

While most Americans slept, Iraq took its biggest step thus far toward democracy.

Though it was by no means the "resounding success" declared by President Bush, the elections in Iraq this weekend proved democracy could establish a foothold in a country that had not held a legitimate election in 50 years.

The vote, once finalized, will determine the 275 members of the transitional National Assembly, which is charged with drawing up a constitution and selecting a president and two vice presidents, and the members of 18 provincial legislatures. These officials will provide the basis of Iraq's new democratic government.

As expected, insurgents did their best to circumvent the democratic process. During the voting, at least 44 were killed, 71 or more were injured and at least eight suicide bombings occurred.

Even worse, reports say insurgents threw grenades at Iraqis who bore the distinctive voting ink stains on their fingers.

According to American officials, however, the attacks were less severe than expected.

Sabah Kadim, a senior adviser in Iraq's Interior Ministry, said it best when he told CNN, "We have [terrorists] today, we had them yesterday, we will have them tomorrow. The difference will be that the Iraqi people have elected a government that is legitimate that will be much stronger in dealing with them."

These acts of terrorism, however, were not enough to stop Iraqis from voting. Though any figures are highly speculative at this point, the current voter turnout estimate is on the high side of 50 percent to 60 percent of the 14.2 million registered to vote — comparable to the 2004 presidential election, which boasted the highest voter turnout in the United States since 1968.

Not bad for a first election.

The process, however, was not without its problems. The names of most of the 7,000 candidates for office were kept secret until the last days of January, and the locations of most of the 5,300 polling places had not been announced even 12 hours before the election.

Four Kurdish districts outside of Mosul did not receive voting supplies, forcing as many as 100,000 potential voters to go unheard.

And voting among the Sunni minority, because of both apathy and problems with polling locations, was deplorably low.

For all this, it seems the election was as legitimate as could be expected. If the vote counts in the coming days come out as they should, the situation looks good for Iraq to have the foundation set for its new government.

If so, the success of the election — and future of democracy in Iraq — will fall upon the new Iraqi government. It must prove its ability to stabilize relations in the country, primarily by working with the insurgent minority to stamp out terrorism.

The relationship between the democracy and the insurgent minority will certainly define the political climate of Iraq for the foreseeable future.

But if the new government is willing to compromise with all of its constituent peoples, use its power to foster cooperation instead of competition and dedicate itself to a peaceful Iraqi state, there will be much hope for the future.

And the sooner the path is laid for that future, the sooner America will be able to bring its sons and daughters back home.

Election should draw praise from all

Bush has done it again, confounding the critics, cynics and skeptics.

The Iraqi elections were an incredible success and will help validate Bush's vision of himself as the supreme leader of freedom in the world.

Though many Americans have good reason to question Bush's vision, we all should unite and praise the administration, coalition forces and Iraqi voters on a job well done.

Reuters reported the national turnout in Iraq's landmark election on Sunday was estimated at 72 percent of registered voters. Election official Adel al-Lami said attacks by anti-U.S. insurgents did not dissuade more than nine million Iraqis from voting. Some areas reported a 90-percent turnout.

And the administration seems to have successfully framed the elections as a fight between good and evil.

"Freedom has won, we have conquered terrorism," al-Lami told Reuters. "It has exceeded expectations. Crowds have been queuing up outside polling stations."

Planning Minister Mehdi al-Hafedh sounded an equally uplifting note.

"Iraqis are looking at these elections as an issue of dignity," he said.

I challenge all of you hardened skeptics not to feel a twinge of pride when you look at pictures of the elections. Some show the huge lines of brave Iraqis at the polls. One picture on The New York Times' Web site shows a beautiful little Iraqi girl carrying her mother's voter registration papers.

Another picture on the site shows Iraqis lined up to vote next to a gutter filled with blood from a recent mortar attack. Bush may have praised America's resolve in his inaugural speech, but it is the Iraqis' resolve that deserves the praise now.

Every American should celebrate these elections, no matter what you think about Bush's true motivations for going to war or what you think the long-range implications are of Bush's policy to spread freedom into the "darkest corners of our world."

Bush said in his inaugural speech, "We can feel that same unity and pride whenever America acts for good, and the victims of disaster are given hope, and the unjust encounter justice, and the captives are set free."

Well, America has acted. There is new hope for justice and freedom in Iraq. But can we expect there to be unity and pride in America because of it?

I hope so. It will be telling to see what position the Democratic opposition will take on the Iraqi elections. Maureen Dowd, a left-wing columnist for The New York Times, chose to ignore the elections and instead focus on the mistreatment of Iraqi prisoners.

And according to The Washington Post, Sen. John Kerry chose to ridicule the elections. "It is hard to say that something is legitimate when whole portions of the country can't vote and doesn't vote," he said.

If leading Democrats follow their example, they will be making a big tactical mistake.

Yes, Democrats should keep pressuring the administration to clean up the prison camps. Yes, Democrats should push for the most representative elections possible in Iraq. But for now, they should unite with the administration behind the good news.

Democrats should not only be the voice of conscience and dissent, but also occasionally of optimism and pride.

It could help lead to something advantageous for our democracy — a close election in 2008.

Students, SG should cooperate

Editor: This semester will be crucial for the student body because of the agenda that is set for the legislative session that starts in March. The four major issues that will be addressed are devolution, block tuition, protecting Bright Futures and assuring Florida's tuition remains low.

Student Government needs the help of the entire student body as it fights for an agenda that is student-friendly.

SG needs your input and assistance in formulating an opinion on these issues and, most importantly, coming up with a better alternative to block tuition. I ask that you attend the series of forums that SG will be hosting this semester, and together we can make recommendations to our university administration and our state legislators. I urge you to begin a dialogue about block tuition and the cutting of Bright Futures. We already have begun to fight against these unwarranted changes. SG Treasurer Dennis Ngim authored a resolution opposing block tuition, and because of that we have made it an official stance that SG is totally against the proposal.

So let's take a stand against these issues as one body, because every voice counts. Collectively, as Gators, we can ensure that none of the agenda items that are negative to the student body will pass during the upcoming legislative session.

Editor: The pornography debate on Wednesday was informative and entertaining, but was something missing?

The issue is not what happens to those in the porn industry. The question is, "What is the correlation between watching pornography — singly or together — and unwanted pregnancy, disease, date rape (a hot topic now) and loss of self-esteem?"

voting. Recently, they have focused less on attacking American soldiers and more on attacking their political opponents in an attempt to start a civil war. Their target is democratic reform, as they argue for a return to a fundamentalist Islamic state.

It is in our best interests that democracy takes hold in Iraq, but this will take a long time and will not be without great sacrifice on our part. Sunday's vote was far from perfect and not one that most democratic nations or most independent international electoral organizations would recognize as legitimate. For the only time in memory, electoral candidates were afraid to be seen in public and were forced to campaign from underground cells, with many afraid even to link their names to their faces in the media or hold a public rally.

The ultimate irony is that, despite its enormous cost of human life, physical destruction and deepened hatreds, this election will in no way make life easier for the American soldiers, the new government or Iraqis. In the end, the problem in Iraq is not this election, but a profoundly flawed U.S. policy that relies almost exclusively on the use of force and ultimatum. Despite our power and spending of billions of dollars to win over the impoverished Iraqis, the United States has won little popular support in the country, let alone the Arab world.

Peace in Iraq is dependent on the United States and the newly formed Iraqi government developing an exit strategy — one that ensures enough Iraqi troops have been trained, that the insurgency has been contained and that an international force is brought in to help the country become genuinely democratic.

President Bush has been seduced by a benign version of the domino theory and likely will proclaim victory no matter what happens in Iraq. Truthfully, it will take months, if not years, to determine whether our intervention in Iraq has been remotely successful. Even if we are able to create a democratic Iraq, there is no guarantee that other countries will follow without at least the threat of American force. I wouldn't be shocked if Iraqis fell into civil war after the election, but it has to be a war of their choosing. We gave the Iraqis freedom, and it might just be time they understood what that means.

Despite corny, cheap laughs, Copperfield astonishes

■ THE ILLUSIONIST PERFORMED AT THE PHILLIPS CENTER ON SUNDAY.

By BRETT KELMAN
Avenue Writer

It is very possible that David Copperfield actually has magical powers.

Unfortunately, he does not possess the power to tell a good joke from a bad one. Nor does he have the ability to pick the right song — only an annoying, cliché tune will do.

But the man can teleport a duck. And that is something.

In his two Sunday performances at the Phillips Center for the Performing Arts, the great illusionist did just that.

He teleported a duck named Webster. He created a classic car from thin air. He even got his "baby" to reveal the three-of-hearts via ultrasound.

And man, I can't even guess how he did a bit of it. Copperfield always was a step ahead.

Sure, some of it was hokey, but around the fluff of too-long lead-ins and corny Copperfield fishing for cheap laughs, his performance produced what all good magic shows should: some damn-crazy tricks.

Tricks that, despite all their grandeur, would have bored me on TV.

David Blaine, for example, freezing himself on national television loses all magnitude through the lens of a video camera. But, I must say, when Copperfield shrinks himself to nothing but feet and a head four rows away, I couldn't help being impressed.

So eventually, when Copperfield offered peeks into his magic to the people who could catch the Frisbees he flung off the stage, they sent just about everyone, myself included, clambering after them. When that silver balloon — my ticket on stage — went bouncing overhead to someone else, I visibly was disappointed. I yearned to go up there and figure these things out.

I think not knowing is going to haunt me. I'm going to lose sleep.

In fact, my guess is I'll be so bothered by it, I'll round up some buddies and go see Copperfield's next nearby show — as should you — and throw some elbows until one of us catches a Frisbee and gets some questions answered.

Worst-case scenario? I fall through a trap door into the orchestra pit. Best-case? Copperfield really does send me to Hawaii.

Maybe I'll mail you a souvenir.

SFCC spruced up

By SKYLER SMITH

Alligator Writer
ssmith@alligator.org

On Friday's windy, overcast afternoon, a bundled Laura McCormick cheerfully wielded a paint roller as she bopped along to her MP3 player on SFCC's northwest campus.

Fifty students, including McCormick, president of Student Government at SFCC, took part in the college's first Project Santa Fe Campus Change-Up.

Sponsored by the SFCC Office of Community Service, the event included beautification projects for the northwest campus, such as repainting walls, planting shrubs and picking up trash.

On the other side of the building from McCormick's band of painters, SFCC's Students for Environmental Harmony Club president Hunter Pomeroy was helping to re-sod and replant shrubbery.

"It brings people together with a common goal of making the campus better and getting outside and doing some hard work," Pomeroy said.

This was the first time SFCC Student Government has participated in a community service project directly benefiting the campus, McCormick said.

Working with McCormick, Pomeroy and other students was political science professor Vilma Fuentes, who also serves as faculty adviser for the Model UN Club.

Hunter Pomeroy

The student group conducts mock debates of international issues.

"If I was going to ask my students to [participate], I should do it too," Fuentes said.

SFCC's community service office considers Friday's project a success, office coordinator Ella Tabares said.

Her office got the idea for the campus clean-up day from UF's Gator Plunge, a student-faculty collaborative community service effort last Fall involving cleanup of wetlands and weeding and planting trees around the UF campus.

Trustees seek more control of tuition

tion itself to become a top 10 public research university in the next decade. This year's goals were based on achieving that status.

Machen wrote that the university is on track to exceed $470 million in research awards for the fiscal year that began July 1, 2004, and ending June 30, 2005. The president also plans to double research funding.

"If you look at what happens over the years, research growth at this institution has been very large and it's been very successful, and the president endorses the idea that we'll continue increasing in dollars," Vice President for Research Win Phillips said. "We'll have to grow the faculty and the infrastructure, but if you look at recent years you'll see that's the course we've been on."

Phillips expects UF's graduate program to benefit from an increase in research, since most graduate assistantships are paid for through research funding, he said.

Machen made a huge effort in Spring 2004 to introduce himself and boost donations, meeting 2,200 alumni and other donors, according to the assessment. The UF Foundation has raised $10 million for the Faculty Challenge, a $150 million fundraising drive to support and hire faculty.

The president's office and cabinet have undergone big changes since Machen arrived, with three vice presidents hired and searches for vice president for human resources and provost approaching a close.

"Some might question the wisdom of so much change in such a short time," Machen wrote in the assessment. "While I admit some initial trepidation, it is now clear UF will benefit sooner and more significantly from this rather rapid transition. It was the right thing to do."

One goal not specifically mentioned is getting the most out of the upcoming legislative session. The Trustees would like more higher education funding and the ability to set in-state tuition, two things Gov. Jeb Bush's proposed budget lacks.

"I've been around this process long enough to know it rarely looks the same at the end of the session as it does in the beginning," Morgan said, adding she hopes revenue projections will improve. "I'm hoping that they'll see fit to invest it where it has the greatest return, which is higher education."

Machen's four goals

Machen or UF has accomplished the following:

1. Faculty support
  - surveyed faculty in May 2004
  - created position of vice president for human resources
  - began 4 percent merit-based raise program
2. Research
  - expects research awards to exceed $470 million in the fiscal year ending June 30
  - constructing cancer/genetics building
3. Donors and Development
  - received $133.4 million in donations and $50 million in state matching funds in the last fiscal year
  - launched the Faculty Challenge, a $150 million fundraising drive aimed at supporting faculty
4. Organizing Tigert Hall
  - hired Vice President for Student Affairs Patricia Telles-Irvin and Vice President for University Relations Jane Adams
  - conducting national searches for provost and vice president for human resources

Soul Cypher brings dose of hip-hop culture to UF

Crowd estimated at 1,000

By KIMBERLY GOUZ

Alligator Contributing Writer

Breakdancing competitions, emcee performances and live music were just a few of the attractions that brought more than 1,000 onlookers to the Reitz Union Rion Ballroom on Saturday for the fourth-annual Soul Cypher.

The three-day event, organized by The Hip-Hop Collective, a group based out of UF and SFCC, brought breakdancing crews from Georgia, Colorado, New York, California and Florida.

"This is the largest student-run event of its kind," said Ben Fedeles, an assistant director of Soul Cypher and secretary of The Hip-Hop Collective.

The projected $3,500 event was sponsored by Red Bull, Gainesville Health and Fitness Center and the Reitz Union Board.

Highlights of Friday's performances included the MC Rap Olympics, breakdancing battles and the Africa 2000 Drummers.

Saturday's activities, which showcased breakdancing and popping battles, an open cypher and The Gainesville Groove League, a live funk band, brought in the largest crowd.

"It took me about three and a half hours to get here," said a member of a breakdancing crew from Savannah, Ga. who goes by the name X-Man. "We planned a very long time for this."

Sunday featured free barbecue and an open graffiti wall.

"Graffiti became a tool and a voice of the disenfranchised youth in the mid-1970s," Fedeles said. "Today, many writers and painters have turned to legal routes of expression like graphic design, modern art and apparel."

Soul Cypher featured three types of dance: b-boying, popping and locking.

B-boying is what most people consider traditional breakdancing, said Soul Cypher host RoboticFlava. It features acrobatic, technical and flavorful moves. Popping is more of a funk-style dance, and locking is a form of hip-hop that made its debut with the group The Lockers on "Soul Train" in the late 1970s.

"It's almost like doing the funky chicken but with points, wrist rolls and kick outs," said a guest judge from Manhattan who uses the alias Dementia.

"All of our judges are nationally known and respected," Fedeles said. "They have all been innovators in the field and are recognized as having exceptional style."

Hip hop has been influenced by everything from the heavy rhythm of African dance and martial arts to the release of "Get on the Good Foot" by James Brown.

Soweto Gospel Choir makes U.S. debut at UF

By NEIL HUGHES

Alligator Writer
nhughes@alligator.org

The internationally acclaimed Soweto Gospel Choir made its U.S. debut in front of a sold-out crowd at the Phillips Center for the Performing Arts on Friday, leaving an impact on the Gainesville community.

The 26-member group out of South Africa performed close to 30 songs in a smattering of their native languages, including Zulu, Xhosa, Sotho and Swahili.

But before they hit the stage at 7:30 p.m., six members volunteered to do multiple performances at Shands at UF, including in the bone-marrow transplant section and the pediatric dialysis room, said Elizabeth Auer, assistant director of UF performing arts.

"You wouldn't believe how much I've cried in the last 24 hours," she said, noting the group's slogan is "voices from heaven."

The show began with a single voice piercing through the dark auditorium, before a spotlight revealed a woman dressed in traditional South African clothing.

As she sang in Xhosa, whistles emanated from the darkness.

Finally, the stage lights revealed the 23 other singers and two drummers who joined in the song.

Songs were accompanied by the choir, bongos and, occasionally, electric guitar, bass and a drum set.

Members of the group danced, joked, shared stories with the audience and danced their way into the crowd for the finale.

The most recognizable pieces were the original South African versions of "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," called "Mbube," and "Amazing Grace."

The choir's vocals-only rendition of "Amazing Grace" featured a total of four soloists and brought the applauding crowd to its feet.

One song featured two members performing South Africa's version of hip-hop, known as kwaito.

A member of the group noted that although South Africa has 11 official languages, music is the "strongest language of all."

The event served as a lead-in to Black History Month, though it wasn't associated with the month's events.

"From the standpoint of the performing arts, we should be doing artists of African descent for every month," said Michael Blachly, associate dean and director of UF performing arts.

The Soweto Gospel Choir will be visiting about 35 cities in its eight-week tour.

Aside from the concert dates and television appearances scheduled, they also have planned church and hospital visits, Auer said.

Mr., Ms. BSU named Friday

By LINDSAY TAULBEE

Alligator Writer
ltaulbee@alligator.org

With crowns on their heads and $750 in their pockets, two UF students now face a host of new responsibilities.

The Black Student Union's annual pageant, which for the first time was included in Black History Month, named UF students William Atkins and Ashley Gantt as Mr. and Ms. BSU on Friday.

They each will receive a $750 scholarship and a place on the organization's executive board.

"I was really surprised, and I was happy and I was excited. It was a stream of emotions," Gantt said.

About 300 people filled the Reitz Union Rion Ballroom to watch nine contestants compete in talent and question-and-answer categories.

Students also were judged on academic achievement and a prior interview.

As Mr. and Ms. BSU, Atkins and Gantt will serve as a visible force within the organization and on campus, said Elda Auxiliaire, director of events for Black History Month.

"These people are our representatives, and if you do have a question, they are here to assist you," Auxiliaire said.

During the talent portion, Atkins recited a poem he had written, addressing the audience as though he were a professor speaking to a classroom.

Later, when asked if racism still exists, Gantt said she thinks it does.

"Racial profiling still exists. Hate crimes are still committed," she said, adding that society needs to work together to resolve these issues.

Auxiliaire said she was glad the pageant had been successful.

"Just everything from the talent to what the contestants had to say, I was mesmerized by all of it," she said.

Gators vault over No. 4 Alabama in final rotation

The scene was set. The spotlight was on. And like an All-American should, Savannah Evans stepped up and delivered.

As UF's last performer in the final event, Evans tied her collegiate best with a 9.95 on the floor exercise to propel the No. 5 Gators to a 196.55-196.35 win over No. 4 Alabama at the O'Connell Center on Friday night.

"We don't really concentrate on scores very much," Evans said. "We go out there and have fun with it and show off to the crowd. I just knew that I had to go out there and do what I could do."

Trailing 147.375-147.175 entering the final rotation, UF (6-2, 1-1 Southeastern Conference) made up the .2 point difference with stellar floor routines that included a 9.90 from Samantha Lutz and a personal best-tying 9.925 by Breanne King.

"We worked really hard this week with Amy [the team choreographer]," Coach Rhonda Faehn said. "She volunteers to help with the floor routines and I think it really showed tonight."

The Gators' late rally was aided by the struggles of Alabama's Ashley Miles on balance beam. Miles was the night's all-around winner, but she bobbled on the beam and on her landing, leading to a score of 9.625, the lowest of either team in that event.

Tiffany Murry took the vault title with a 9.95, and Orley Szmuch was close behind with a 9.925.

Alabama (5-3, 1-1 SEC) Coach Sarah Patterson was impressed with the performances of both teams after the meet.

"Our conference championship is just going to be one heck of a championship," Patterson said. "It's meets like this makes you a better team."

Although UF came up with one of its biggest wins in recent team history, the team feels like it can do more.

"I think what's most exciting for us about this win is that we still didn't perform all the way to our potential," Lutz said. "To come out with this victory knowing that we still are capable of much more than we did tonight speaks so much to the talent and potential this team has."

NO. 500 IS PROVING ELUSIVE: Despite shooting 48.4 percent, the UF women's basketball team fell to No. 23 Vanderbilt 84-73. It was UF's third chance to win the its 500th game.

Down 43-42 at halftime, the Gators (12-8, 3-4 Southeastern Conference) built a 59-51 second-half lead.

But Vanderbilt (15-5, 4-3 SEC) used three-pointers from guard Abi Ramsey to spur a 21-4 run over the next nine minutes. Ramsey led all scorers with 30 points and had eight 3-pointers.

Coach Carolyn Peck said her team was more patient on offense in the first half. When the Gators took the lead in the second, they ran more isolation plays against the smaller Commodores lineup. She said that change was part of the reason for the Vanderbilt comeback.

"We went away from what we had been doing so very well," Peck said. "We have got to keep that concentration for 40 minutes so we can close the deal."

UF played most of the second half without forward Bernice Mosby. In the first half, Mosby was fouled and came up favoring her left ankle. Peck said she was not sure about the extent of the injury. Mosby finished with 15 points in 20 minutes.

Also, Danielle Santos played for the first time since mid-December. The junior guard had been out with a stress fracture in her right foot. Santos played 12 minutes and had just one point, but Peck said she was happy with her play.

"I think Danielle was full go," Peck said. "In a game like this, at this level at this intensity, it is the best way to get her back in rhythm with us."

The Gators have lost three consecutive games and four of their last five. Their next game is Thursday against No. 5 Tennessee in the O'Connell Center.

Radio and television broadcasts contributed to this report.

doesn't get to play much."

Day, who came into the game averaging 3.3 points per game, hit four 3-pointers sandwiched around a layup after not seeing any time in the first half. His outburst sent the Gamecocks bench into a chest-bumping frenzy at midcourt when the Gators called a timeout.

"[South Carolina coach] Dave Odom made one of the greatest coaching moves of all time throwing Day in there," Donovan said. "I asked [assistant coach] Donnie Jones, 'Who is this guy?'"

But with a couple high-light-worthy plays, the Gators regained the momentum and secured the win.

With 5:44 remaining and a 7-point UF lead, freshman forward Corey Brewer scored the last of his 12 points after stealing the ball, driving the length of the court for a layup and sinking a foul shot for a 3-point play.

Walsh, who had 8 points and five assists in his first start since recovering from a high-ankle sprain, made sure the Gators kept the momentum with a touch pass to an isolated Lee under the rim for a dunk that got the 11,753 in attendance roaring.

"Last year, the wheels would've come off if we shot the ball the way we did in the second half."

UF Coach

"I see it day in and day out," said Anthony Roberson, who finished with 15 points. "This is my third year playing with Matt, and I don't know how many practices we've had together. Everything he does, I know he can do it."

easily come up dry for recruits already committed elsewhere. Randy Phillips, ranked the No. 16 safety in the nation by Scout.com, is a Miami oral commitment who stopped in Gainesville and Tallahassee over the weekend.

"Coach Meyer is a good guy, but I'm still committed to the Hurricanes," Phillips said. "Everything was all right, but I feel good about my original choice."

In other recruiting news, Texas natives R.J.

Jackson and Brandon La Fell, long considered a package deal, both visited this weekend. They will make their decision public today. Jackson is ranked the No. 10 running back in the nation and La Fell is Scout.com's No. 34 wide receiver.

Today marks the start of the final quiet period before signing day. Coaches are not allowed to visit or call recruits, but recruits are allowed to initiate contact.

Oral commitments are non-binding until a national letter-of-intent is signed on National Signing Day on Wednesday.

ence, so we won't have a true idea of where UF is at until after these games. My gut says buckle up, Gators fans. (Uh oh. I just wrote something negative, which can almost get me in a fight, as I learned this weekend.)

I think these games will show why all three are ranked higher than UF. Especially since two are at Kentucky's Rupp Arena and Mississippi State's "The Hump," which is not just the name of the arena, but also the only thing to do in lovely Starkville.

But starting there on Tuesday, we'll see what the Gators are really made of.

The Gators did what they have needed to do so far. They needed to get off to the hot start they did in the SEC because of this tough stretch.

Winning one of the next three games would be big for UF.

Only then you can start the tournament talk — three losses in a row and the tournament isn't even guaranteed.

Hard road faces UF after 80-72 win

By BRYAN APP

Alligator Staff Writer
bapp@alligator.org

A first-half offensive surge followed by a second-period shooting slump used to turn the mighty Gators into frightened ostriches.

As forward Matt Walsh said: This was the type of game UF would've lost last season.

Against South Carolina on Saturday, this season's Gators (13-4, 5-1 Southeastern Conference) used aggressive rebounding and key plays to survive a second-half Gamecocks run for an imperative 80-72 win.

The victory puts UF one game behind No. 7 Kentucky in the SEC Eastern Division before a rigorous stretch of conference games, beginning Tuesday at No. 24 Mississippi State. The slate continues on Saturday against No. 14 Alabama and concludes Feb. 8 at Rupp Arena against the Kentucky Wildcats.

Volleyball "Five and one sounds a lot better than 4-2 does," said senior forward David Lee. "Especially going on the road here and having some tough back-to-back games. We knew we had to get this one."

Lee finished with a team-high 18 points and grabbed a game-high 10 rebounds, gaining his third double-double in conference play. His play aided UF's 39-24 rebounding advantage, helping to offset a poor-shooting second half.

"Last year, the wheels would've come off if we shot the ball the way we did in the second half," Coach Billy Donovan said.

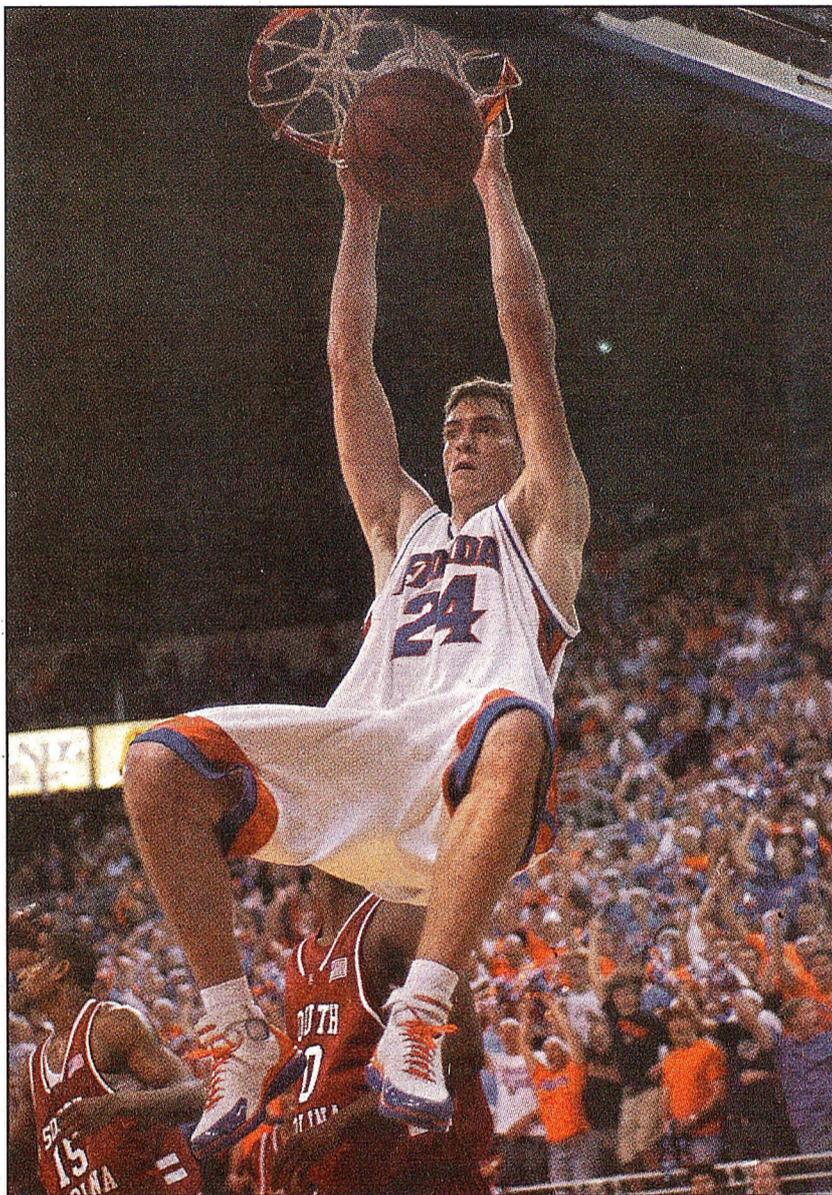

After shooting 60 percent in the first period, UF emerged from a 43-26 halftime lead to sink just 38.5 percent of its second-half attempts.

And less than 8 minutes into UF's dry spell, a little-used, little-known South Carolina reserve attempted to take advantage.

With 12:33 remaining and his team trailing 56-39, Gamecocks freshman forward Dwayne Day began a five-possession 14-0 solo run to cut the UF lead to 7.

"It was unbelievable," Lee said. "I think that kid was a Rashid Al-Kaleem-type: just a pure shooter but UF forward David Lee recorded another complete performance against South Carolina, scoring 18 points and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Tournament talk still premature for the Gators

Wow! The Gators are 5-1 in the Southeastern Conference! They're so good! No first-round loss this year!

Spare me.

So the Gators held on and beat South Carolina despite Dwayne Day coming in and trying to ruin UF's, well, day, with four 3-pointers in a row.

Big deal.

I don't know if you noticed, but none of the Southeastern Conference teams UF beat are exactly top-notch. Even the team the Gators lost to, Tennessee, isn't great.

Yes, the 5-1 in the SEC is somewhat impressive and better than where I thought the Gators would be. Yes, they've won 13 games and may be on their way to 20 wins for like the millionth year in a row.

But here's the thing: those five wins came against lesser teams in what is turning out to be the lesser conference that everyone thought it would be this year.

Look at it this way: Miami has the fifth-best record in the ACC and Florida State is tied for the eighth, yet they both beat the Gators, who have the third-best record in the SEC.

That record is merely a product of the way UF's schedule worked out.

The six SEC teams UF has played so far have won a combined 13 conference games this year. Not a single one of them has a winning conference record.

The next three Gators opponents have won 16 between them and all have winning SEC records. It's amazing what kind of research I can get done when there's no football to distract me.

Mississippi State, Alabama and Kentucky are the only three SEC teams that are ranked, although Mississippi State will probably fall out today after losing to Louisiana State last week.

These are the best teams in the confer-

RECRUITING

Meyer still raking in recruits

Coach Urban Meyer may not have a lot in common with pitchers Mariano Rivera or Eric Gagne, but after the last recruiting weekend, Meyer is looking to join the ranks of the nation's best closers.

With two days left before recruits can sign their letter-of-intent on Wednesday, the Gators had one final attempt at steering eight future athletes toward the orange and blue.

UF received one oral commitment Sunday from Daytona Beach Mainland High tight end Brian Ellis. Ellis, ranked No. 22 at his position by Scout.com, had scholarship offers from Oklahoma, Tennessee, Louisiana State and Florida State. A 6-foot-3, 235-pound prospect, Ellis played some defensive end in addition to tight end during his senior year, recording four sacks.

Ellis is a teammate of long-time Gators commitment Avery Atkins.

While Atkins was in Gainesville to see the best of campus, he also played the role of salesman to other recruits. Jon Demps, a 6-foot-4, 228-pound linebacker from Pensacola, came away from the weekend wowed by the team chemistry and opportunity for playing time, he said.

"I was very impressed with the great team atmosphere among the players and coaches, the academic center and the support they provide," Demps told Gatorcountry.com. "[Brandon Siler] told me he really wants me to be a Gator and play right next to him."

Demps will decide between UF, FSU, Auburn and LSU on Wednesday.

While Meyer was able to sway five recruits toward the Gators last weekend, the recruiting well can just as
