Breakfast motives questioned

■ THE IMPACT PARTY ANNOUNCED ITS EXECUTIVE TICKET AT FRIDAY'S GATOR NIGHTS.

Gator Nights officials are raising eyebrows to possible foul play with the Impact Party's method of informally announcing its executive ticket candidates for the Spring Student Government election.

The Lady Monarchs, a multicultural sorority-hopeful organization focused on community service, were scheduled to serve the traditional free midnight breakfast at Gator Nights on Friday. Instead, Impact Party members announced their executive candidates to students before they plopped the free food onto students' plates.

"It all sounds very fishy to me," said Farrah Morrone, Gator Nights supervisor and assistant director at the Office of Student Activities.

Morrone wasn't working during the midnight breakfast but said Impact Student Body presidential candidate Dennis Ngin told the Gator Nights student manager on duty that he was there to help the Lady Monarchs.

"I'm really going to be frustrated if someone else posed as another student organization to promote their political party," Morrone said when she initially heard about Impact's involvement.

Student Government

Impact spokeswoman Jessica Goodwin, who also holds the liaison officer position within the Lady Monarchs, said nothing was fishy about Ngin and Impact Party supporters serving the breakfast.

"Dennis asked to work in association with them," Goodwin said. She added the Lady Monarchs were happy to hang around the food court while Ngin introduced himself to everyone in line waiting for food.

Impact's candidate for vice president, Robert Mack, and the candidate for treasurer, Elda Auxiliaire, also used

Less hassle for students' visas

New papers last 4 years

By STEPHANIE GARRY

The U.S. government gave UF's nearly 3,000 international students a break Friday, cutting the paperwork required for students and scientists in "sensitive" fields.

The U.S. Department of Homeland Security eased visa requirements, a move higher education officials hope will help counteract a national drop in foreigners studying in the United States last year.

"This is a significant step," UF International Center Dean Dennis Jett, who is out of the country, wrote in an e-mail. "It eliminates the useless repetition of the clearance process which sometimes stranded people" overseas.

International students who work in "sensitive scientific and technical fields," such as engineering, have had to undergo a security clearance process since 1998, when the Visas Mantis program was introduced to discourage the illegal transfer of technology. The process was annual, but now students can use one screening for the length of their academic program up to four years.

"This change sends a clear message that the U.S. highly encourages those with great scientific minds to explore studying and working in our country," Asa Hutchinson, former undersecretary for the department's border and transportation security, said in a statement.

UF's College of Engineering has the highest international student enrollment in the university, with more than 1,000 foreign students making up about 40 percent of UF's total foreign student enrollment in 2003.

"We think it's going to be a beneficial step for us," said Pramod Khargonekar, dean of UF's College of Engineering. "We have a number of foreign students who come to study in the college, and this will make it easier for them to extend visas to come and study."

UF's international student enrollment dropped 6.8 percent in Fall 2004, and the number of new foreign students dropped even more significantly, nearly 15 percent. Though the decline is a national trend, UF tries to recruit foreign students to augment domestic students' college experiences, support programs that don't have sufficient domestic demand and sustain research.

Though Jett and Khargonekar said they agreed that the Mantis program may have contributed to the drop, they suspect other factors played a part as well.

Growing economies in China and India are keeping students in those countries, and competition from Europe, Australia and Canada is diverting international students from U.S. universities, Khargonekar said.

"We saw a significant drop of international students this year," Khargonekar said. "Difficulty in getting visas has been a part of the problem."

The college regularly receives e-mails from international students who have had visa delays, oftentimes when they go home to visit their families and try to return, Khargonekar said. Many of those students are likely to fall under the Mantis program, he said.

■ UF forward Adrian Moss will fight through therapy treatments for the rest of his life, but has returned to the team from a herniated disc. Said Moss: "I didn't think I was going to play too much more this year." See story, pg. 20.

Kushner hopes students will get excited because "it's part of our cultural history." Good music, he said, transcends generations and is just as important now as it ever was.

Local woman charged with child neglect

A Gainesville woman involved in a traffic accident was arrested after authorities found she left her two children home alone, according to reports.

Rhonda Maria Perry, 24, told William Jason Powell she collided with his vehicle because she was in a hurry to get home to her children, reports state.

Authorities went to Perry's residence, at 641 NE Waldo Road, to find a 6-year-old and 5-month-old child alone in the house Sunday night.

Perry told authorities she left her children under the supervision of Anethia E. Curtis, of 653 NE Waldo Road, while she went to McDonald's to get dinner for her children, reports state.

Curtis said she planned on coming to Perry's home to borrow a bicycle, but Perry never asked her to watch her children, according to reports.

Perry said if it were not for the accident, she would have been home in less than twenty minutes.

Perry was arrested Monday around 3:15 p.m. and charged with felony neglect of a child.

Legendary jazz orchestra to honor founder's 100th

Gainesville and Frank Sinatra now have something in common, and it isn't a collection of fedoras.

The city will join Sinatra in the ranks of hosts to the Count Basie Orchestra, to celebrate what would be the 100th birthday of its founder, William "Count" Basie.

The concert is also a timely celebration of Basie's great impact on black history. During the 1930s, Basie was one of the only black band leaders, and along with contemporaries such as Duke Ellington, he helped define jazz music. His piano playing shaped modern jazz with his trademark "comping," which is a syncopated and precise style of play.

Basie also pioneered musical integration, recording and performing with white artists such as Frank Sinatra and Tony Bennett.

Basie formed his orchestra and toured extensively in the South amid great success and deeply divisive segregation - they were denied stay in certain hotels or service in restaurants.

However, Basie often played to all-white audiences.

"The impact was enormous,"

Slating ends today

Potentials may qualify at Reitz

By STEPHEN MAGRUDER

Alligator Writer
smagruder@alligator.org

Students seeking political careers at UF have until 5 p.m. today to qualify as a candidate for senator in the Spring election.

Today marks the third and final day of slating, when students interested in Student Government may join the political party of their choice or choose to run as an independent.

To qualify, students must fill out the appropriate paperwork located in Reitz Union Room 123 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., where they also may get directions to party interview rooms stationed in the Reitz Union.

Slates are due by day's end.

Of the 12 parties either registered or in the process of registering, only four have held slating events so far: Gator, Impact, Progress and Voice.

The Progress Party encourages students who want to be involved with its campaign to write an essay so party leaders can "get to know them a little better," Moritz said. But even without an essay, those who apply can still answer the essay question verbally.

Impact Party candidate for vice-president Robert Mack says his party's method to "select the best possible people on campus" lies in long, thorough interview sessions.

Party leaders largely agree that the candidates they have seen and interviewed are as varied as the parties themselves.

"We've been getting candidates from all over," said Michael Schuster, Gator Party president.

With a full executive ticket, Schuster said the Gator Party saw at least 70 legislative candidates Monday and 20 to 30 candidates Friday — more than enough to run a full slate of 46 senators.

"If we could, I wish we could give every single one of them a seat," he said.

Gator Party interviews are scheduled to take place in Reitz Union rooms B60 and 122 today.

Touting itself as a party of independents, the Voice Party said Monday it has seen enough candidates since Friday to meet its minimum requirement of senators.

Voice, with Student Sen. Justin Lauer as its sole executive candidate for the position of Student Body treasurer, needs to run six senators in the election, compared to three for parties running a full ticket.

The Progress Party, which plans to run a full Senate slate, has seen fewer than 20 candidates.

"We're definitely looking for a big turnout [Tuesday]," said MacKenzie Moritz, Progress presidential candidate.

As of Monday, Impact Party officials said they had met with about 60 candidates for Student Senate seats, many of whom were leaders of campus organizations.

One notable student who slated was Graduate Student President Michael Bowen, who applied to run with the Gator Party to fill the graduate student seat.

"If we could, I wish we could give every single one of them a seat."

Michael Schuster
Gator Party president

Last Tuesday, Bowen spoke in front of Senate criticizing Voice Party chairman Christian Duque's promotion of his party's platform to improve graduate student life, and that current SG doesn't do much to work with graduate students.

Voice's Web site, www.voiceparty.org, later stated Duque sought legal counsel, describing Bowen's speech in front of Senate as slanderous.

Impact presidential candidate Dennis Ngin, who played a small part in Access' 2004 efforts, said things have changed since.

"This is a totally different campaign," Ngin said, calling this year's efforts an "uphill battle." "We don't have all the same support," he said.

Dean of Students Dr. Gene Zdziarski shares a kiss with wife Cheri on the Plaza of the Americas. The two renewed their wedding vows while promoting commitment to UF's Honor Code.

Students take honor 'vows'

By DAN ONEY

Alligator Contributing Writer

The Plaza of the Americas was converted to a wedding pavilion Monday, where Dean of Students Gene Zdziarski and his wife renewed their vows as part of the Public Relations Student Society of America's Renew Your Vows campaign.

"It is important to convey to students the importance of making a commitment to something, whether it is a wife or academic honesty," Zdziarski said after the ceremony held before a dozen students.

His wife, Cheri, said, "Making a pledge is not just about academic integrity. It is about making a commitment to a life-long value system of integrity and honesty."

Interfraternity Council President John Dicks said he came out to support both Zdziarski and the honor code.

"It's kind of fun, kind of cool," he said.

PRSSA, in its Gators have High Standards campaign, set up tables across the plaza encouraging students to follow Zdziarski's example. In exchange for signing the honor code, students received a pocket-sized copy of it, which gives discounts at local businesses.

"UF is a community where academic dishonesty is not acceptable," said PRSSA President Ashley Zandy.

Zandy is one of five members of PRSSA's Bateman Team who helped organize the event. The vows renewal was the peak event of the yearlong campaign. More than 500 students signed pledge cards during the event.

"The card is just a symbol of truth and honesty," political science sophomore Marvin Simeon said shortly after he signed. "Signing the pledge just showed my support for something I already believed in."

The campaign will continue over the next few weeks as Bateman Team members talk to classes about academic honesty and integrity.

Students 'I do' with Elvis

■ HELD IN HONOR OF VALENTINE'S DAY, THE WEDDINGS WEREN'T LEGAL.

By LINDSAY TAULBEE
Alligator Writer
ltaulbee@alligator.org

Students took comfort Monday in knowing that what happens in Gainesville stays in Gainesville.

In honor of Valentine's Day, an Elvis Presley impersonator, eager to join students in not-so-holy matrimony, greeted those passing through the Reitz Union Colonnade.

The Reitz Union Board hosted the mock weddings for anyone who was interested.

Couples received Ring Pops, phony marriage certificates and a photograph with Elvis to commemorate the event.

Jaclyn Rubio, co-chairwoman of the board's special events committee, said the marriages were just for fun.

"It's Valentine's Day; we thought it'd be cute," she said.

During the three hours Elvis was on the colonnade, between 30 and 40 couples took the plunge, Rubio said.

The day started off rocky, as students were unsure of what to make of the situation.

"It seems like people have commitment phobia," she said jokingly.

Later, students warmed to the idea, and several large groups came to exchange vows, she said.

Elvis, played by UF student Butch Tanner, approached UF athletic training students Bianca Villa and Alexandra Bayona, who agreed to be "married."

On Campus They joked they were going through with it because their boy-friends wouldn't marry them.

Holding a bouquet of plastic flowers, the friends laughed as Elvis, dressed in a red-and-white pantsuit, sunglasses, a black wig and zebra-striped platform shoes, began the ceremony.

"Do you, Bianca, swear to uphold the finest laws and to keep her as close as possible and not let her talk to strangers?" he asked.

Tanner affirmed the shoes were an essential part of the outfit.

"That was something Elvis held very close to his heart," he said.

Tupac's mom to speak

By DAN ONEY

Afeni Shakur will speak tonight at the University Auditorium as part of Black History Month.

Shakur is a former Black Panther and civil-rights activist, as well as the mother of rapper Tupac Shakur. Jasmine Guy, who wrote the biography of Afeni Shakur's life, will appear with her.

This is the first time BSU has booked two female speakers to appear on the same stage. Elda Auxiliaire, executive director for Black History Month events, said BSU chose to book the pair because of their perceived ability to reach audiences of all ages.

"In planning Black History Month in early summer, we wanted to pick a speaker who would touch people," Auxiliaire said.

Russell Simmons was last year's keynote speaker for Black History Month.

"They all bring a message," Auxiliaire said. "The fact is that the things that happened in the past shape our future."

The topics of the speech are still unknown, but Auxiliaire said she did not see this as a problem.

"Because the students do not know what will be talked about, the students may be impacted more," she said. "We try to bring people who can touch everyone's lives."

Auxiliaire expects the 845-seat auditorium to fill. The event will also include a question-and-answer session.

It will begin at 6 p.m. and is free to the public.

Auctioned dates raise heartfelt money for relief

Mike Lamire, Kamphrey, Holly Allen and Andy Jean enjoy dinner with the highest bidders for their eBay auction. The group auctioned the dates to raise money for tsunami relief efforts in Asia.

■ DUE TO AN EBAY SNAFU, THE AUCTIONS ENDED EARLY.

By KYLIE CRAIG

krcraig@alligator.org

Four UF students who auctioned themselves as dates on eBay raised more than $250 for tsunami relief but not without a few technical difficulties.

The students were up for grabs as Valentine's Day dates to raise money for the cause, but two hours before bidding was set to end, eBay pulled their auctions off its site.

Mike Lemire, organizer of the auction, said eBay pulled the auctions because it wanted the students to use the Web site's own charity program to collect the funds.

Lemire said he called several times before starting the auction to ask eBay for permission but that the company didn't respond until a week after the auction's start.

"I didn't go through it because they take away 10 percent to cover their fees," Lemire said, adding that he felt the amount was too significant.

He also said stopping the auction two hours before its ending time had a negative effect on the amount raised because many wait to enter bids.

"I had e-mails throughout the week where people said they weren't going to bid until the last minute," Lemire said.

Ultimately, the students decided not to let the technical problems keep them from following through.

Lemire said he contacted people with the highest bids at the time the auction was stopped and negotiated donation amounts to determine who would win the date.

The students and the winning bidders all went out for a Valentine's Day dinner and movie Monday night.

Lemire said everyone was pleased with how it turned out.

"No one was left out, and we had a great time because we were all there for a good cause," he said. "We still raised money that wasn't there before."

Despite what happened, Lemire said he is looking into starting another auction to raise even more money for the cause.

Blue Key members serve Valentine's cheer to homeless

By LINDSAY TAULBEE

On a night when many in town were making reservations and heading out to their favorite restaurants, a few UF students instead prepared and served dinner for about 35 of Gainesville's homeless community.

With food donated by Kash n' Karry and Phi Kappa Tau fraternity, five Florida Blue Key members dished out pasta and meat sauce, garlic bread, rice, vegetables and brownies Monday night at the St. Francis House homeless shelter in downtown Gainesville.

Jason Goldman, FBK service director, said few other volunteers from the community had signed up to help with food preparation Monday.

"They get a lot of help, but no one else wanted to do it on Valentine's Day," he said. "It's a nice way to spend your Valentine's Day, helping other people."

Goldman said he hoped to reach out to the community while helping to give UF a better name.

He said those who volunteered hopefully will benefit from a broader perspective of Gainesville and get a better understanding of the realities of the place in which they live.

Ozell Boyd, volunteer coordinator for St. Francis House, said he appreciated FBK's efforts.

He said the shelter always needs volunteers to help perform a wide variety of tasks throughout the day.

"We really need some good long-term volunteers - people that don't mind helping out the community," he said.

Those interested in volunteering at St. Francis House may reach Boyd at 378-9079, extension 319, or at coordinator@bellsouth.net.

Ballot boostOnline voting would raise turnout, increase access

When students gather in March to determine their representatives in Student Government, they also will weigh in on an issue that will drastically affect future SG elections: online voting.

And though there are outspoken opponents of online voting — some of whom have valid points — the possible benefits far outweigh the negatives.

The immediate benefit of online voting would be increased voter turnout. The easier a process gets, the more likely college students are to participate.

Under the online voting system, students could surf over to the voting Web site whenever they pleased and be in and out in a few minutes at the most. Furthermore, according to Student Sen. Adam Roberts, SG's technology cabinet director, it's possible online voting would be open 24 hours during election days.

Instead of going out of their way to queue up in the hot sun, students would be able to vote at any time during voting days from the privacy of their homes. And the evidence says that students will take advantage of this. According to the Chronicle of Higher Education, online voting has produced significant increases in student election turnout at universities such as Clemson University, Emory University and Boston College.

In addition, online voting would save money. Last year's election cost more than $20,000, while the expected cost of operating the program would be about $2,000 — which includes 24-hour monitoring from Accelerated Data Works, the company that developed the voting software.

The numbers speak for themselves, but there still are other benefits, including easier access to elections for disabled students and reduced waste due to elimination of paper ballots.

Of course, concerns about the security of online voting are valid. While there is no way that the possibility of voter fraud, including hacking and block voting, can be removed from the online voting process, solutions to help lessen this possibility have been discussed by SG and Accelerated Data Works.

Hacking certainly is an issue in a university with as large and tech-savvy a student body as UFs, but the chances of this happening can be limited by the process' regulation by an independent party such as Accelerated Data Works. Another layer of security could be added by the separation of the voting Web page and the database where the information would be stored, as well as keeping a backup server that could compare data with the original in order to detect tampering, Roberts said.

Another concern is that the system will make it easier for organizations to require their members to vote for particular candidates. It is possible that leaders of these organizations could collect GatorLink IDs and passwords from members and then use those to vote for the same candidates.

But Roberts and other members of SG have worked to determine ways in which this practice could be discouraged. For instance, individual computers — identified by their IP addresses — could be allowed to vote only a few times within a specified period of time. Exceptions could be made so students could still vote on multi-user computers such those in CIRCA labs.

Even better, the voting process could require students to answer a security question based on information already in ISIS, such as their mother's maiden name or their place of birth. Students still could then be coerced to vote for a candidate — but only if someone was standing over their shoulder.

Ultimately, however, students have to take responsibility for their vote. If they allow themselves to be coerced, not much can be done.

The simple fact is that online voting will greatly simplify the voting process, which is an important step toward increasing student participation.

Republican chooses a blue Valentine

Howie, Valentine's Day has passed, but my love for you remains. In the past year, we've been through good times and bad, primaries and elections, scandal and intrigue. But, in the end, two things remain: love and politics. While we never agree, times change, and so do people. You now run the Democratic National Committee, and while I'm still a Republican, I can't help but love your plan for your party.

You plan to rebuild your party and return it to the liberal roots that created your base. The hippie liberalism of the past has been abandoned by the American public, but the Democratic Party clings to old standards like a captain to his sinking ship. Growing numbers of citizens are identifying themselves as Republicans, not because of trendy campaign rhetoric, but because of a dramatic shift in the perception of American values. While you cling to your first love — the Democratic Party — America moves forward into the future with the Republican Party's clear vision for the next century.

You say you want to build the Democratic Party back up from the bottom. I've always loved your management style. While you spend time with the common man, the non-voter, the apathetic citizen, your party's base of real voters will dwindle from neglect. You'll court the unemployed, the felon and the disenfranchised, the people who need the attention of the party but don't care to vote. Your love "for the people" is profound, and I'm sure that 50-year-old who never has voted before will go to the polls because you asked him to.

Your bid for the Democratic Party's nomination for president was admirable; you built a base of supporters who never had voted and raised huge sums of money from average citizens. Your armies of supporters couldn't turn out the vote for you, though, and as we continue the eternal battle between Republican and Democrat, it's heartening for me to see the huge numbers of people who are willing to campaign but not to vote.

It's clear that America is changing, and the past liberalism has begun to fade away as young citizens realize the value of conservative fiscal and moral values. Time has changed the views of the majority of voters. While we work for the future, you remember the past glories of your party. It's time for you to realize that the future of the Democratic Party has to be with the mainstream of America.

The times we face demand leadership within the parties and throughout the nation. While you choose to lead your party to the left, you choose to ignore the needs of the people you claim to serve.

Remember, it's hard to work for the future when you cling to your past. We'll see what happens with the future, but the changes you look for will only push America further to the right, and I love you for it.

While I love your campaign style and your general charisma, I love you most because you'll make my life easier. Come election season, the time again will come to do battle. You'll bring out your army of Deaniacs, and my party will send out its seasoned veterans. We'll see then what the map looks like.

Judging by your past failures, I think I'll be celebrating again as I gaze at a map that's redder than ever before.

Letters to the Editor

Board's decision leaves much to be done

Editor: The Florida Board of Governors should be commended for exercising its constitutional responsibilities in turning down the chiropractic program at Florida State University. This program had been approved by the Legislature but had not been authorized by the board. Its constitutionality is questionable given that the 11th Amendment to the state Constitution, passed in 2002, says, "The Board of Governors shall operate, regulate, control and be fully responsible for the management of the whole university system."

In dealing with the proposal, the board shows it accepts its constitutional authority over the university system. In a constitutional sense, it did not matter whether it accepted or rejected the proposal. The important point is that it recognized and exercised its authority over a major higher education issue.

Although the chiropractic program has been turned down, the legislation authorizing the program called for an annual appropriation of $9 million to go to FSU to be used as the university wished until the chiropractic program was implemented. After the board's action, there is no justification for continuing this appropriation, and it should be rescinded.

Other governance issues still need clarification. As a result of efforts by Johnnie Byrd, former speaker of the House, the Legislature has approved $52 million for an Alzheimer's Center at the University of South Florida named for Byrd's father, though the board had not authorized it. The constitutionality of such action obviously is questionable.

With the passage of the 11th Amendment, a number of actions by the legislative and the executive branches of Florida government appear to be inconsistent with the state Constitution. A private, not-for-profit organization called Floridians for Constitutional Integrity has been formed to ask the courts to determine the legality of such actions.

As Floridians and Americans, we are governed by laws — both constitutional and statutory. At the heart of this university governance issue is the fact that constitutional laws override or supersede statutory laws. This is why the courts are being asked to rule on a matter which, to many, appears to be quite clear.

Some offensive words can't be defended

Editor: I am shocked and offended that columnist Jason Levitt is not shocked and offended. It is one thing to uphold the values of the First Amendment and the marketplace of ideas. It is an entirely different thing to defend a man who compares the innocent victims of Sept. 11, 2001 to the Nazis and actually condones their deaths.

Levitt says opinions like this that stray from the mainstream "signal a strong and healthy public sphere." Forgive me, but I believe that anyone who says a secretary with three kids working at her job on a Tuesday morning deserves to have a 747 smash into her office does not signal a healthy public sphere.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Parties miss financial report deadline

By NEIL HUGHES
Alligator Writer
nhughes@alligator.org

Only three parties made the Monday deadline for parties to submit their expenses for the upcoming Student Government elections.

The Impact, Voice, Strike Force and Phoenix Parties failed to submit their reports to the SG supervisor of elections by 5 p.m., according to public records given to the Alligator on Monday.

According to SG statutes, all registered parties are required to submit itemized weekly finance reports. Monday was the first deadline.

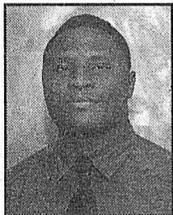

"I was not contacted regarding any fliers or any regulations," Impact presidential candidate Dennis Ngin said, "which is kind of weird since my phone number is readily available."

Traditionally, the campaign treasurer is responsible for submitting the financial reports, who, in the case of Impact, would be UF quarterback Chris Leak.

The SG Election Commission, along with supervisor Ali Blye, are responsible for dictating the penalty for failing to meet the deadline, according to SG statutes.

Parties are required to submit information even if they have incurred no expenses up until the deadline.

Samuels

Impact member Andre Samuels said his party did not have any expenses to report, and the missed deadline was a communication error.

"Once we start making professionally made things, then we'll have something to report," Samuels said.

Blye refused comment Monday, but told the Alligator on Sunday she contacted parties about an earlier dispute regarding the violation of advertising rules.

However, Christian Duque, chairman of the Voice Party, disputed Blye's comment, stating that he had not been contacted regarding either the advertising rules or the finance report deadline.

"It's no one's fault but ours, but we don't really have a clue as to what to turn in or anything like that," Duque said.

The Phoenix Party, which has since morphed into Impact, also failed to submit finance reports. Samuels said Phoenix had not made any expenses and added that the party name would likely be retracted at some point.

The Mad Hatter Party did not submit a hard copy of its report before 5 p.m., but Scott Gilton, the party's presidential candidate, said it was e-mailed to Blye at 5 p.m.

"We didn't know the proper format of it until today when we got our hands on the statutes," Gilton said.

The Gator, Progress and Block parties submitted on time, as well as independent senate candidate Alexander Hadjilogiou.

Parties will be expected to submit reports every Monday when class is in session until SG elections, to take place March 15 and 16, have concluded.

Nights nonpartisan

the breakfast line as a meet-and-greet and to make their candidacies official to the public.

Morrone said she doesn't have a problem with parties setting up informational booths or conducting a meet-and-greet with passers-by, but she doesn't want official campaign announcements in front of a podium beckoning student attention.

And unless all parties running can be equally represented at the free, tuition-funded Gator Nights, she said it might imply the union has a party preference.

"I don't want to act like we're affiliated with one party or another," Morrone said.

But volunteers who dished out were not sporting any Impact-particular political gear.

The Lady Monarchs would have shared their breakfast volunteer time "for any candidate that approached them," Goodwin said.

Morrone said it has been commonplace in past elections for political parties to serve breakfast as a grassroots method of campaigning - with her prior approval.

It's not nice to fool with Mother Nature.

"For those whom Islam has embraced, the greatest witness to God's unremitting, pursuing, sustaining, and guiding love is the Quran. Like a vast magnificent ocean, it lures you deeper and deeper into its dazzling waves until you are swept into it. But instead of drowning in a sea of darkness, as described above, you find yourself immersed in an ocean of divine light and mercy. As I read the Quran and prayed the Islamic prayers, a door to my heart was unsealed and I was immersed in an overwhelming tenderness. Love became more permanent and real than the earth beneath my feet; its power restored me and made it so that even I could feel love. I was happy enough to have found faith in a sensible religion. But I never expected to be touched by such intoxicating mercy."

STUDENT GOVERNMENT Vote may soon go to Web

By LINDSAY PETER
Alligator Contributing Writer

Impact Party leaders hosted a discussion forum Monday expressing their support for a change to voting procedures.

About 20 students assembled in the Reitz Union listened to positives and negatives for a Spring election ballot initiative that, if passed, will implement online voting for future Student Government elections.

If approved, the new system would allow students, even those studying abroad, to vote using their GatorLink e-mail account any time during the two-day election.

Human interaction at polls would be eliminated, reducing ballot-related error, said Student Sen. Andrew Hoffman.

Risks in implementing online voting, according to forum participants, include computers possibly crashing, the network link disconnecting and authenticating users.

Hoffman

Experts from Accelerated Data Works, designer of the online voting program SG has already purchased, plan to monitor the system during the voting period, Hoffman said.

The database would not be directly accessible from the Internet, which would prohibit access to hackers, he added.

Online voting would also reduce costs of hiring poll workers and renting the ballot boxes and voting booths, according to SG documents, which currently cost as much as $40,000 for each election. Online voting would reduce that cost to about $2,000 for one election.

Block voting, an individual or group voting for multiple students, is one concern that forum participants agreed cannot be prevented. However, the practice violates the Student Conduct Code, and offenders could face judicial action and even expulsion if caught.

All voting would remain anonymous, but students would receive an electronic confirmation code to verify their vote.

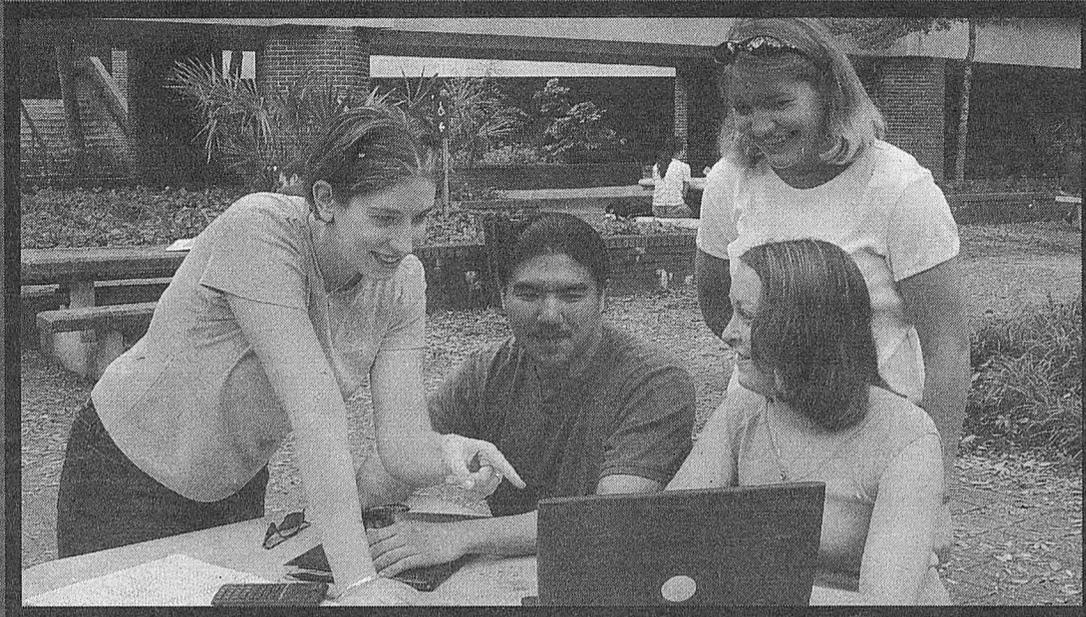

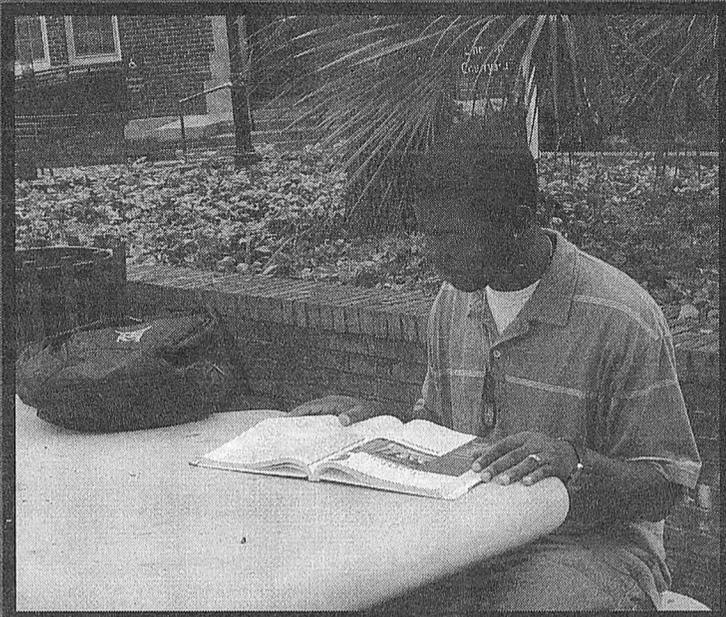

Hybrid voting, combining online and ballot voting, was tried in Fall 2001 without any apparent technology-related problems, but costs would not be reduced, Hoffman said.

Forty-five other universities that use online voting for student government elections were contacted, and the response was overwhelmingly positive, he said.

"This initiative will allow students to vote for change by changing the way they vote," Hoffman said.

Junior falls back on faith had to lie on his stomach and watch TV all night. Rest became the prescription of choice. Some days he could practice; some days he couldn't.

But the worst part about the injury was its unpredictability. One day Moss would practice at full speed, twist his body in every imaginable fashion and not feel a shred of pain. The next day he would do the same thing and his leg would not comply.

"They've given me all the anti-inflammatories and pills, but I have a strong faith, You go through things for a reason and God's my pain pill. If He wants me to have the pain, then I'll have it. If He doesn't want me to have the pain, then He'll take it from me."

Adrian Moss
UF forward

"God, he was hurt so bad," Brewer said. "People don't realize how bad he was hurting. But he came to practice and was working as hard as ever. I don't know how he does it. I really appreciate it."

Moss will never be the same again. He says he feels fine, but the herniated disc likely will rag him for the rest of his life.

He'll always continue his therapy, and, of course, the stretching. Moss stretches his legs, especially his hamstrings, every night before he goes to sleep and every morning after he wakes. Still, despite it all, on any day, at any time, the disc could flare up again. Moss has options to dull the pain, but he'd rather just head-butt the ailment.

"They've given me all the anti-inflammatories and pills, but I have a strong faith," Moss said. "You go through things for a reason and God's my pain pill. If He wants me to have the pain, then I'll have it. If He doesn't want me to have the pain, then He'll take it from me."

Another alternative would be surgery at season's end. But Moss won't go there, either.

"After basketball I have a lot of living to do," Moss said. "If I get a bad doctor and he messes up my surgery, I won't be able to pick up my son when I have my son. That's a lot more important to me than playing basketball."

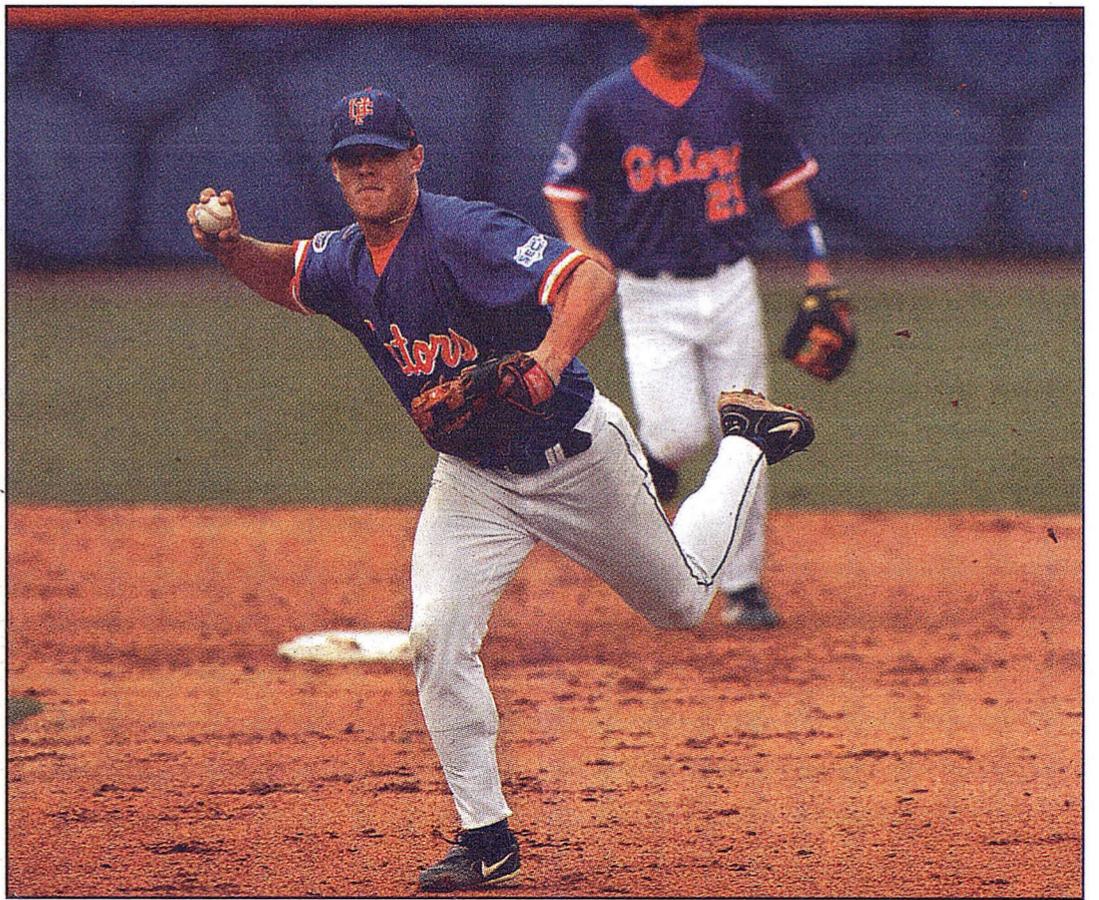

Moss has widened his life's horizons and has seemingly burst pain's threshold. But for now, he's set on basketball. He admits he's rusty, but unless his condition worsens, Moss expects to play 20-25 minutes by season's end.

"I'm pumped 'cause I'm feeling no pain," he said. "I'm back to being the old Adrian — all excited and jumping around."

Moss' role will likely be one of energy and motivation.

"I told my guys we'd use him as a Band-Aid," Coach Billy Donovan said.

The hurt has become the healer.

Second baseman Adam Davis and the Gators might seem far better than Florida A&M at first glance, but both teams have struggled with errors. Davis has recorded two of UF's 10 errors this season.

including a 11-5 loss in Gainesville: good for third in the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference. The Gators have a 12-0 record in the all-time series between the teams.

Junior pitcher Bryan Ball said the Gators aren't looking ahead to the Miami series.

"We're not worried about Miami right now; we're worried about Florida A&M," Ball said. "That's who we play first. We're not even thinking about Miami right now."

Sophomore second baseman Adam Davis echoed those sentiments.

"Those guys are on that team, playing Division I baseball. They had to do something right to get there," Davis said. "I'm sure they have some kind of baseball ability. Everything can go right for them and they can win just as easily as we can win."

Will the Gators go from being favorites tonight to underdogs this weekend?

"People make it out that way, but that's definitely not how we feel whatsoever," Davis said. "I would venture to say that 90 percent of the people that are in the stands don't feel that way either. They know how we play, the ability our guys have. On paper, we're just as comparable to them as they are to us. I don't see it that way."

2002: Sweet season soured by UM

By TIM CASEY
Alligator Writer

During Coach Pat McMahon's debut season at UF in 2002, his baseball team hosted an NCAA Regional post-season tournament for the first time since 1998.

"It was our first club here," McMahon said Monday. "A group of young men; I can't tell you how much they have meant to our program. A veteran group. A lot of them hadn't really played that much, but they played their hearts out and put together an outstanding season in so many ways.

"I'm so proud of those clubs and what they have done," McMahon said.

His team finished second in the Southeastern Conference Eastern Division with a 20-10 conference record, and entered the Regional tournament with a 43-17 record overall.

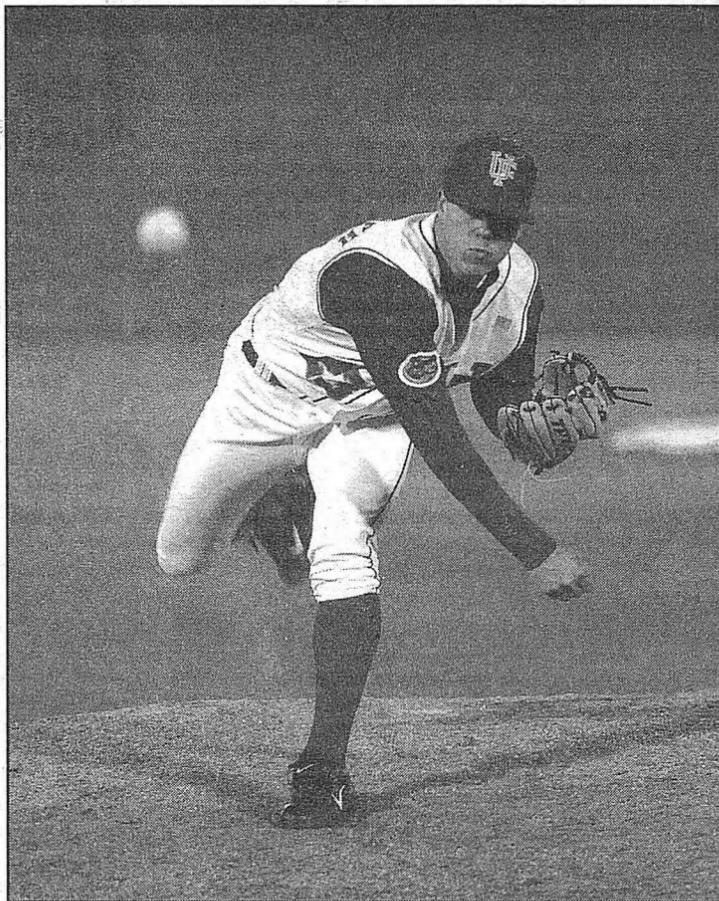

The No. 1-seeded Gators crushed No. 4 seed Bethune-Cookman twice, but lost to Miami 7-2 in a Saturday afternoon matchup.

On Sunday, June 2, the Gators once again met the Hurricanes on the diamond.

Current UF senior Mike Pete pitched the first four innings, allowing four earned runs.

Kevin Coleman pitched 4.2 innings in relief, giving up five earned runs.

Keith Ramsey entered the game in the ninth after Coleman allowed four runs that tied the game at 10-10.

Ramsey did not allow a batter to reach base in the ninth or tenth inning, setting the stage for a dramatic ending in the bottom of the inning.

"We won an extra-innings game, the first one, in order to play the second," McMahon said. "We needed Mark Kiger's home run to win, and what a great, great win it was."

Kiger led-off the tenth with a walk-off home run to left field, giving the Gators a chance to advance to the College World Series if they could defeat Miami again that evening.

"It was so hot. Our guys battled through the first series playing late, late in the evening, and our guys showed tremendous determination, tremendous grit and heart," McMahon said.

Corsaletti would pinch hit again in the second game, singling up the middle in the seventh inning. The Gators took a 5-4 lead in the top of the inning.

"Those were two of the most intense games I've been involved in: two outstanding efforts, two outstanding games," McMahon said. "We battled our way through the loser's bracket to be successful."

Miami tied the game in the bottom of the seventh, leading to an even score entering the ninth. UF scored two runs in the top of the inning on one hit and one error, but left two valuable runners on base.

With two outs, third baseman Kevin Howard singled to center field, setting the table for left fielder Jim Burt.

Burt knocked a double to left-center field, scoring both runners and giving Miami an 8-7 win and a trip to Omaha.

"That club, I'm so proud of what they achieved, in playing themselves into hosting a Regional," McMahon said. "It was phenomenal."

ter another early postseason exit.

While the season has just begun, UF has a chance this weekend to get some sort of revenge on Miami. The stakes are much lower, but not to the Gators.

You never know if the baseball gods will once again pair UF and Miami this postseason, so this could be the last chance for those few seniors who have witnessed every loss.

Jeff Corsaletti, Connor Falkenbach, Mike Pete and Tommy Boss are the only Gators who have endured the entire Miami debacle from the start.

The first loss was also the most unexpected. In 2002, the Gators were on top of the baseball world. The heavily favored Gators were playing in Gainesville. The matchup against Miami was supposed to be little more than a gateway to the College World Series. Until Miami won. In the ninth inning of the final game. From behind.

The next two years the Gators would travel to Coral Gables as underdogs and the result was the same. Miami: Advances. UF: Maybe next year.

The Gators still have to face Florida A&M today, and McMahon will tell you that the team is focused on the Rattlers.

Sorry, but that's just not possible. Not when the Gators have been waiting for a Miami rematch since June of 2004. And 2003. And 2002.

Tough junior stays strong for team

■ ADRIAN MOSS SAID HE DIDN'T THINK HE WOULD PLAY TOO MUCH MORE THIS YEAR.

By LOUIS ANASTASIS
Alligator Staff Writer
lanastasis@alligator.org

Adrian Moss struggled to find the right analogy. "Have you sprained your ankle and have it balloon like a grapefruit?" Moss asked a reporter. "No," replied the reporter. "Have you ever sprained your ankle?" Moss asked again. "Yes," replied the reporter. "You know how you have the sharpness of that?" Moss asked. "Imagine eight times worse than that."

Brewer

That's the best way Moss — a junior forward for the Gators — can describe the pangs of his herniated disc. The disc began bulging and pressing against the nerves in the side of his right leg early this season.

The result? Sharp overwhelming jolts of excruciating pain.

Moss began feeling the pain so often that he stopped practicing with the team.

"I really didn't think I was going to play too much more this year," he said.

Last week the pain subsided. A MRI scan revealed that his disc was healing. Thursday, Moss survived a team practice and was cleared to play by team doctors. Saturday, after missing seven consecutive games, Moss returned to the hardwood against Tennessee. The experience lasted just three minutes, but Moss managed to score a pair of points. His impact, however, transcended the stat sheet.

"He's a glue guy," UF guard Corey Brewer said. "When he comes in he's going to bring the energy and the little things. He's gonna knock people out. He's the enforcer and we really need that."

For months, UF missed that Red Bull-on-legs-type presence. But it was one of those very legs that ultimately stapled Moss to the sidelines.

One night, the pain worsened to the point that Moss

Another rival emerges for UF

Painful. Gut-wrenching. Harrowing. No, I'm not reminiscing about the Ron Zook era.

I'm talking about a baseball team that is in dire need of redemption this weekend.

It's a team that has been through it all over the last three years, only to watch its season crushed by the Ibis.

When you're asked to name UF's best rivalries, baseball may not be on the tip of your tongue.

But after a couple of football foes, (Florida State, Tennessee) you get the ugliest engagement in town.

Just a week ago, I wrote about how desperately the basketball team needed a win against Kentucky.

This is worse. And it's not even close.

While the Wildcats have handed it to the hoopsters time and again, the outcome hasn't meant the season for UF.

Since Pat McMahon took the baseball coaching reigns in 2002, the Gators have somehow faced the Miami Hurricanes in every postseason.

And every June the same photo has graced the Alligator. The faces of UF baseball are barely visible, staring at the dirt af-

Gators not rattled by prospect of facing Florida A&M

By TIM CASEY
Alligator Writer
tcasey@alligator.org

After winning their opening weekend series in a somewhat sloppy fashion, the Gators host Florida A&M tonight at McKethan Stadium. UF will attempt to solidify its defense and jump-start the bats in a game that features two young starting pitchers.

While the FAMU game might appear an easy win, Coach Pat McMahon's players say they are not looking ahead to the upcoming weekend series against Miami.

"One of our goals is to play our game, and we're still working hard to figure out some things that we need to do to get better," McMahon said Monday. "That's what we're practicing hard today to do, to continue to improve to what we do tomorrow night."

"I'm anxious to see how we stay focused and respond to that," he said. "That's a good test for us in a lot of different ways."

The Gators (2-1) are slated to start freshman Stephen Locke, a 6-foot-1 left-hander out of King High School in Tampa.

"We're not worried about Miami right now; we're worried about Florida A&M. That's who we play first. We're not even thinking about Miami right now."

Bryan Ball
UF pitcher

FAMU is expected to counter with Clearwater native Mike Tavernier, a 5-foot-10 right-handed freshman (0-1, 6.1 IP, 9.95 ERA, 4 K).

"We're just not swinging the bat," Florida A&M coach Joe Durant said Monday.

When told of UF's defensive struggles last weekend against Charleston Southern, Durant said it sounded like his Rattlers. FAMU has committed 25 errors to start the season while averaging only two runs per game.

"That's the way we've been playing, errors and no hits," Durant said. "Florida is a top-20 team. That's probably just first-game jitters. I voted for them."

UF has committed 10 errors and has hit four batters in three games.

"They're probably going to be mad," Durant said. "I kinda hoped they'd beat Charleston Southern. We just have to come play a competitive game and hope they take it easy on us."

The Rattlers (0-9) finished last season with a 22-30 record.
