GATOR CHOMPS

For Gator Party candidate Joe Goldberg, hearing his name announced as the winner of the Student Body presidency was like a dream come true.

"We started this campaign as a team, and we've remained a team the whole way through."

Joe Goldberg
Student Body president-elect

At 12:05 a.m. Thursday, Supervisor of Elections Ali Blye announced Goldberg's win in this week's runoff election after garnering 53.31 percent of the votes.

Gator's Lindsay Cosimi won the runoff for treasurer against Michelle Lightbourne of Impact, receiving 53.11 percent of the tally.

Blye first announced Cosimi's win, and after that, the cheers from Gator supporters only grew louder.

When Blye matter-of-factly announced Goldberg's win, the new president-elect went into a wild frenzy of hugs with his closest friends and parents before kissing his girlfriend.

Ngin nodded silently as the Gator victories were announced, bookmarked by ticketmates Robert Mack and Lightbourne.

As Gator Party cheers partially drowned out Goldberg's announcement, Impact supporters gathered in a circle around Ngin and silently raised their index fingers, showing No. 1 signs.

Several supporters cried and embraced.

Despite the somber mood among the Impact supporters, Mack remained pleasant.

"Somebody came down and hugged me like my dog died," Impact's vice-presidential candidate Mack said. "If my dog died, I'd be crying."

For Mack, it was the "weirdest election" he'd ever been involved in, he said.

Goldberg wasn't allowed the microphone to give a victory speech but instead stood on a chair and shouted so hard he nearly lost his voice.

"We started this campaign as a team, and we've remained a team the whole way through," Goldberg

Officials talk insurance

TAMPA — Students at any Florida public university may receive free or subsidized health insurance, thanks to the State University Presidents' Association's support of the plan Wednesday.

Because some say the state may soon require students to have health insurance before enrolling, the 11 universities now will search for health insurance together, to achieve lower rates.

"The more people we have, the cheaper the rates for health insurance are," said the association chairman and University of West Florida President John Cavanaugh.

The vice presidents of finance and administration at each university will work together to find cheaper health insurance plans that will fit the needs of their university.

"Each campus may have different benefit structures already in place, so we will have to work together to plan out what fits all of us best," said Ed Poppell, UF vice president of Finance and Administration, who did not attend the event.

Florida International University, for example, offers insurance to graduate students, and its university officials hope this initiative will enhance the healthcare to undergraduates.

"The more benefits we offer to students, the better the quality of students we teach are," FIU Provost Mark B. Rosenberg said.

UF President Bernie Machen soon will create or bolster a top-level administrative position dedicated to improving campus diversity, bringing diversity issues to the forefront of his agenda.

After reading a special assignment report on the state of diversity at UF, Machen discussed the recommendations with two senior vice presidents but decided to delay action until UF finds its next provost, the university's chief academic officer.

"We believe that we need the new provost before we move on it," Machen said, adding that it will be one of the first issues to come before the provost this Summer.

This move would represent Machen's first substantial step toward improving diversity, an issue he championed even before coming to UF a year ago. The president also sees diversity as a requirement to UF becoming a Top 10 public research university.

In 2003, black and Hispanic professors made up only 6.1

LEADERSHIP OPPORTUNITY

Recreational Sports Board of Directors & Reitz Union Board of Managers

Applications are available for student representatives to serve on these boards. These boards are chaired by students and have a student majority.

This is an excellent opportunity for students to get involved and assist in making decisions that affect the UF community.

Applications are available at the following locations:
Dean of Students Office, Reitz Union Information Desk, Student Activities Center, Student Recreation & Fitness Center, and Southwest Recreation Center.
Also available at www.union.ufl.edu (Reitz Union Board of Managers) and www.recsports.hhp.ufl.edu (Rec. Sports Board of Directors).

Application Deadline is Thursday, March 31, 2005 at 3:30 PM

TALLAHASSEE

Pending academic freedom bill comes under fire

By JAMES VANLANDINGHAM

Alligator Staff Writer
jvanl@alligator.org

TALLAHASSEE — The pending Florida House bill that would establish a statewide code of academic freedom is unnecessary, UF officials say, because the university already has significant safeguards in place to protect student and faculty rights.

UF spokesman Joe Kays said the university's Ombudsman's Office investigates student and faculty complaints, and helps enforce existing university policies protecting students and faculty from political discrimination or retaliation — concerns bill sponsor Rep. Dennis Baxley, R-Ocala, cited as reasons for the law.

The Legislature passed a law mandating colleges and universities to establish similar offices in 2002. UF had one much earlier.

"We feel that the legislature has already addressed this issue, and university procedures already address all the concerns Rep. Baxley has in his bill," Kays said. "Students are pretty well-protected."

Baxley recently sent a letter to UF President Bernie Machen explaining his reasons for pushing the bill. Kays said Machen received the letter and is formulating UF's response.

The House Choice and Innovation Committee approved the bill Tuesday.

UF: Restating the obvious

Bob Jerry, dean of the UF Levin College of Law, said the language of Baxley's bill restates principles of academic freedom enshrined in opinions of the U.S. Supreme Court.

The problem, Jerry said, is that by codifying these principles as Florida statutes, the bill could have serious consequences.

"It is possible that if this were statutory law, academic freedom principles that we test and apply in university and faculty governance forums could be cited in the courts," Jerry said. "That would be a very different environment for all of us and not one that, in my opinion, would be appropriate."

Those concerns were echoed in a legislative staff analysis warning that the bill may allow Florida students to sue their professors and universities if they feel ridiculed in class, or if their professors fail to teach "alternative" theories on controversial subjects.

Making an example

At the Tuesday hearing, an example Baxley cited of when students should be allowed to sue is when biology professors teach evolution as fact, failing to acknowledge Creationism.

UF evolutionary geneticist Charles Baer said while he wouldn't mark down students for not believing in evolution, they would still be expected to complete course work.

"We're not talking about 4-year-olds here. Students have critical thinking ability. If they don't like what they hear from their professor, they can ditch it."

Pierre Ramond
UF physics professor

"If I was asking them to write a paper on one aspect of evolution, and they said they didn't believe in evolution so they wouldn't write a paper, they would be marked down," he said. "If someone said, 'I don't believe in evolution, but if I did, this would be what I'd write,' that would be OK. I'm not going to flunk someone for not believing in evolution."

Baer said even if he knew he could be sued he would continue teaching the same way.

"Students should not be ridiculed in class, and in any context, it's not appropriate, but some students may be touchier than others,"

Baer said. "What seems as discussion to some people may seem inappropriate to others."

Who teaches the teachers?

In urging lawmakers to pass the bill, Baxley said university classrooms have morphed into "niches of totalitarianism" where leftist professors are "dictators who control the indoctrination of the next generation."

UF physics professor Pierre Ramond, who serves as chairman of the Faculty Senate, said that demeans students' intelligence.

"We're not talking about 4-year-olds here," he said. "Students have critical thinking ability. If they don't like what they hear from their professor, they can ditch it."

And as far as indoctrination goes, professors combat that threat when they ask questions and force students to think on their own.

Baer said that if students in his class said they believed in Intelligent Design or another theory of Creationism, he would ask them questions in the Socratic method, forcing them to explain the reasoning behind their beliefs.

According to the UF Faculty Handbook, university policy maintains full academic freedom to discuss subjects frankly, select instructional materials and determine grades.

ELECTIONS 2005

Candidates offer alternatives to anti-rave ordinance

By BRIAN HAGEN

Alligator Writer
bhagen@alligator.org

Candidates for the Gainesville City Commission took one more chance to spell out ideas for the proposed extension of bar closing hours.

If approved, the new ordinance would mean any liquor-licensed establishments would stop serving alcohol at 2 a.m. but would be allowed to stay open until 3 a.m.

The student-heavy Safe and Fair Entertainment Committee is promoting the change.

In competition for the At-Large seat are incumbent Rick Bryant and candidates Dyonne McGraw, Rob Brinkman and Gabe Kaimowitz.

McGraw, a former parole officer, supports the change, saying a later closing time will help keep intoxicated patrons off the streets.

"Ninety-five percent of my case load was DUIs," she said. "DUIs stay on your record for 75 years."

After their driving privileges were suspended for a DUI conviction, nine out of 10 of her clients drove with their suspended licenses, she said. If caught, they would spend 10 days in jail.

"It's common sense that later is better," McGraw said, "because it could be you or me walking down that street."

McGraw

While Bryant said bars should not be allowed to serve alcohol after 2 a.m., he reserved judgment on extending hours until he receives cost analyses and reports from the Gainesville Police Department and safety experts.

"The system isn't working," Bryant said. "[But] we've got some real good discussion now."

To improve safety, Gainesville has added extensive police and staff coverage downtown, he said.

Kaimowitz suggested specific alcohol-free alternative activities to lure people away from bars and give them alternatives to drinking.

Street musicians and entertainers could play on blocked-off streets, he said. Dramatic performances, such as "American Idol"-style events, could command audiences.

Brinkman supported the 3 a.m. closing time and had ideas for the elimination of noise violations and underage drinking.

Policy now dictates that police must ignore many noise violations at closing time to concentrate on public safety dangers, Brinkman said, advocating modernizing the code enforcement department.

It could become an independent department, possibly by even putting code enforcers on the streets at night, writing citations.

Drinkers in Tampa, identified by bracelets, can buy only one drink per bracelet at the bar, he said, curbing underage drinking and keeping excessive consumption at bay as well as controlling end-of-night alcohol abuse, Brinkman said.

GPD will follow the city's wishes but supports the 2 a.m. closing time, spokesman Keith Kameg said.

A 2 a.m. closing provides an hour overlap in police shifts, giving the city twice as many officers on the streets from 2 to 3 a.m., he said.

GPD has been asked to limit input on the issue but will provide a cost analysis of the 3 a.m. closing to the Gainesville Public Safety Committee, he said.

University Police also likes the current closing time but has no way of knowing how any changes would affect crime on UF's campus, spokesman Joe Sharkey said.

"We will deal with the situation as it's being dealt to us," he said.

UPD now fights alcohol abuse with education and patrols, including officers stationed on the campus side of University Avenue to watch for drunk drivers, Sharkey said.

"I don't see why they couldn't limit this," said Ed Clarke, owner of Eddie C's Pub & Billiards. "It'd be cool on weekend nights, but not seven nights a week."

When Florida lawmakers passed a bill in 1997 forcing all establishments with liquor licenses to shut down at 2 a.m., Gainesville chose to let the party continue by passing no such matching ordinance.

Gainesville's lack of standardized closing times for night clubs and bars attracted both raves and drugs such as ecstasy and Ketamine.

But it wasn't until two students died during parties following a home football victory over the Tennessee Volunteers that the movement for a 2 a.m. closing time in an effort to curb such partying began.

The proposed change was met with student protests at City Hall and a divided Commission.

However, in 1999 establishments with liquor licenses were officially mandated to close at 2 a.m. In 2000, the Commission passed the Dance Hall Ordinance, which closed even alcohol-free clubs at 2 a.m.

McGraw brings balance

By STEPHEN MAGRUDER

Alligator Writer
smagruder@alligator.org

City Commission candidate Diyonne McGraw will face off Tuesday for the At-Large seat.

Emily Harris / Alligator Staff

On the Gainesville City Commission ballot, no candidate looks like Diyonne McGraw.

That's because McGraw, a candidate for the At-Large seat, is the only woman in the race, as well as the only black candidate.

"I decided to run because I thought Gainesville needed, for one, more diversity," McGraw said. "I think I'm the candidate that brings the balance."

McGraw noted that the last time a black woman sat on the City Commission was Cynthia Chestnut in 1990 — just before McGraw moved to Gainesville 14 years ago.

As an only child growing up in Memphis, Tenn., McGraw became fascinated with politics at an early age because of her mother's involvement in local campaigns.

"She really surrounded herself with quality people," McGraw said. "I just followed in her footsteps."

McGraw moved to Tallahassee in 1987 to start her freshman year at Florida A&M University, where she devoted herself to a life of activism and servitude.

She took part in more than 150 service projects involving underprivileged children and feeding the homeless. It's something she still feels passionate about as the local alumni president of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

The sorority's motto, "Service to all mankind," is manifested in McGraw's plans for Gainesville if she is elected.

McGraw said she plans to empower local women, children and war veterans — all of whom she said deserve the highest quality of life possible.

"You have to be fair and remember who you serve," she said.

McGraw has several roles outside of her candidacy for public office. She's also a realtor, a mother and a wife, which doesn't leave much time for anything else.

"There's not a whole lot of time to relax right now with the campaign," she said. "Sometimes I just sit in the bathtub and try to relax."

When she's not working, volunteering or campaigning, McGraw enjoys movies, seeing her friends, watching college basketball and spending time with her husband and four children.

"They have been so understanding and very supportive," McGraw said.

As a former resident of East Gainesville, McGraw said she would like to see the area developed, which she said continually is left behind compared to the west side of town.

"There's a great sense of community [in East Gainesville]," McGraw said. "You can walk out your door and everybody's like, 'Hey! How you doin'?"

Some of McGraw's favorite places to go in Gainesville are Westside Park on Northwest 34th Street and UF's Harn Museum, both of which she said her kids adore.

With an already long history of community service, McGraw's past mirrors her philosophy on life.

"I think you're put here on earth to be a mover and a shaker for others," she said.

Officials say requiring health insurance for students may be in best interest comes in stride with Florida's tentative move to join the majority of states in requiring health insurance as a prerequisite to enrollment, University of South Florida President Judy Genshaft said.

"It's in the best interest of the state that every student have health insurance," Genshaft said.

Florida State University trustees are discussing whether to make health insurance coverage mandatory for admission, said Anne Blankenship, assistant vice president of academic affairs at the university.

This program would not affect students already insured by their parents, but rather, it would help provide coverage only to students who need it.

Other issues discussed included the role the Board of Governors, the body that oversees Florida's public universities, should have in establishing university rules.

The governors will discuss today a proposal requiring their oversight of university rule changes, such as the hiking of student tuition fees.

Under the proposition, the university must submit any rule change to the board. If the board does not respond within 30 days, the rule stands. Otherwise, it must work its way through the board, but Florida Atlantic University President Frank Brogan said the drawn out process could be ineffective.

"That rule would create more mischief than the original problem the rule was trying to fix," Brogan said. "I understand that the Board of Governors wants to protect itself from significant rules being passed without their interaction, but do they really need oversee what color our parking lines are?"

Double take

Gator Party wins second time, takes control of SG

The students have spoken.

Well, sort of.

With the turnout at the polls over the past two days being as bad as the weather has been lately, it hardly can be said that there was a mandate from the students offered to the victor today.

But regardless of that and of any claims of wrongdoing, Joe Goldberg and the Gator Party will be your Student Government leaders for the next year.

While there has been plenty of anti-Gator sentiment from the Alligator editorial board this election season — all of it deserved and based on compelling evidence, we feel — there is no point in retreading old grievances.

Instead, we want to congratulate the Gator candidates on their victory, and offer our hopes and requests for their tenure in office.

But don't take that to mean we've all of a sudden jumped onto the bandwagon.

We always have maintained that Goldberg and Gator are the most qualified for office and the most likely to accomplish the goals that they have set forth.

We also always have maintained that we have not been convinced their actual goals remotely resemble the changes students want and need.

For the students' sake, we hope Gator's claims that it will offer student access are more than just a campaign tactic.

If the newly elected Gator members do turn out to be more respectful of what is right for the students, instead of what is right for themselves, then they have the ability to do a lot of good during their time in SG.

If they shut down the small increases already made toward student access, then they equally have the opportunity to do a lot of damage.

We hope that, no matter what decisions they make in terms of representation, they will take into account what is best for students in terms of policy and bring their experience to bear in making it happen.

We are not yet writing off this election as a total loss to the elite minority, and it would be pointless to complain about abuses of power until we see them in action.

But we cannot help but fear this will be a step backward to a system we hoped was on its way out.

It is up to our new leaders, then, to prove us wrong through decisive action.

Prove to us that your concern for the students is genuine by enacting legislation that students support, such as online voting.

Prove to us that none of the newly elected Gator candidates were selected in order to fill diversity quotas or as gifts to organizations for electoral support by showing through their work that they are qualified for the job.

Prove to us that our fears that legacy positions will be solidified are unfounded by bestowing positions upon only the most qualified candidates.

Prove to us that rumors of corruption were unfounded by running the sort of clean, open and honest organization that is less likely to receive such criticism.

We want to believe you. We really do.

But it's going to take a lot of work on your part.

Alligator, others have SEVIS fee wrong

In his article "GAU Slams Fee," Jeff Sirmons makes the common mistake of conflating the federal Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS) fee with the international student fee. The Department of Homeland Security implemented SEVIS, a Web-based system for maintaining information on international students while they are residing in the United States, in response to the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

International students pay for the cost of operating the SEVIS system through a $100 fee that must be paid before international students even can apply for a visa. In addition to the $100 SEVIS fee and $100 visa fee required by the federal government, international students at UF are being charged a $50-per-semester "international student fee" to meet the extra demands placed on UF by SEVIS.

While most universities in Florida have absorbed these costs into their general operating budget, UF administrators chose to pass these costs on to their international students despite protests and appeals from Graduate Assistants United (GAU) and the international student community.

The administration's argument for the international student fee seems simple when described last semester by UF International Center Dean Dennis Jett.

"When you have a service provided to students, it is paid for by the students who use it or by all students or by taxpayers from Florida," he said. "The position at the federal and now, presumably, the university level is that students who use this service have to pay the fee."

One of the major problems with Jett's rationale is it implies that only those students who utilize a university service should pay for it. Under this logic, all services provided by the Disabilities Service Center should be paid for only by those students with disabilities, and Latino students exclusively should pick up the tab for the Institute of Hispanic-Latino Cultures.

Fortunately, people realize the value added from having these students and institutions on campus and are willing to help fund them. Why should the costs associated with having international students on campus be any different? Why should international students be the only demographic group on campus that has to pay their own special fee?

Realizing the hefty economic burden placed exclusively on international students by charging them a $50-per-semester fee, UF's Student Government passed a resolution against the fee. Dean Jett has stated that alternatives to the current fee would "help UF project a more welcoming image to international students" at a time when "we find ourselves competing for international students as the number of nationwide applicants drops."

GAU, the university's graduate student employee union, has taken the position that the fee being levied upon all international students since the 2002-2003 academic year was imposed illegally and without proper authority. GAU lawyers are in the process of bringing their case before the Florida Board of Governors for a final decision. In the meantime, graduate applications and admissions from abroad steadily have been declining.

If UF President Bernie Machen's vision of making UF a Top 10 university is to become a reality, administrators must realize the importance of recruiting and retaining quality international students. To make itself competitive, UF needs to continue to draw from an international pool of applicants.

When the very best international research and teaching assistants choose to attend UF, we all benefit. Hence, it is the responsibility of administrators to make UF as internationally appealing as possible.

Unfairly charging international students to study and work here is a step in the wrong direction.

Victor Romano is co-president of Graduate Assistants United.

Victims, not criminals, are denied rights

Editor: Gavin Baker's aim was a bit off in yesterday's column. We should be concerned with the victims in capital punishment cases, not the criminals. They are the ones who have been denied their choice to live or die. Those convicted of capital punishment made their decision when they committed the crime. The two people we should be concerned with in this matter are Michael and Terri Schiavo. Because Terri has, according to every medical opinion, lost her life, Michael has lost his wife and been slandered by her family — who are trying to overturn the order of guardianship that has been established in the courts for 200 years via the sanctity of marriage.

True Gators always stand with the team

Editor: I was disappointed in the team's performance, but did it merit a cartoon about Matt Walsh choking? Please. If anything, it was Roberson who was lackluster. At least Walsh scored in the double digits. What happened to "It's great to be a Florida Gator?"

I have been living in Philadelphia for two years, and there is one distinct difference between Philly fans and Gator fans: In Philly, no matter how well the team performs, they hang the players in effigy if it isn't a win. In Gainesville, no matter how disappointing a loss might be, we acknowledge how much we love our team and we move on.

There were numerous times during the past two years when Lito Shepard, a former Gator and current Eagle, had a few bad games, and the entire Philly area went on and on about how bad he was — not about how he is a Pro Bowler.

I remember a few losses (Tennessee, FSU and Kentucky) where we were upset, but we still left the Swamp or the O'Dome chanting, "It's great to be a Florida Gator." I am all about holding a team accountable for a loss — but "team" is the important word, not "player."

Your cartoon embodies a mentality of crudeness and immaturity. I am sure the team feels disappointed enough without having their loyal fans write stupid cartoons. Don't we criticize Kentucky and Tennessee fans who chant "Walsh is gay" when he plays at their schools? How is this any better?

Professor bias legislation is hypocritical

Editor: As a Republican, I am appalled by the legislation that is trying to be passed about professors. In life, you will have people that you do not agree with — should you be allowed to sue them? I have had many classes with professors who lean to the left, and I have had many debates with them in the middle of class. If you have a theory and are intelligent, you should be able to defend yourself. If you have no basis for your belief, then maybe you should start to listen and get evidence. In a country that is fighting a war to save our freedoms and promote democracy, we look hypocritical when eroding away the First Amendment and the right to free speech.

Turnout dips from last week

Goldberg's father Barry made the plane trip to Gainesville from his home in Miami for the second time in a week, he said.

"I'll have to fly in again for the inauguration," Barry Goldberg said.

Ngin, Mack and Lightbourne addressed Impact loyalists a few minutes after the announcement.

"We gotta continue to be a voice," Mack said.

"It wasn't an overwhelming mandate — it was a close election."

Goldberg

A total of 7,740 students voted, said Blye, who oversaw ballot counting until 10:30 p.m.

The turnout comprised just 16.13 percent of the UF student body, piling by more than 1,400 tallies in comparison with last week's general election turnout of 9,150.

Unlike last year's Student Body presidential runoff, which featured nearly a quarter of the student body voting, this year saw a surprise dip from the first week to the second.

After the election, Ngin said life for him would return to normal.

"I plan to continue to be active on this campus, whether or not it's in SG," Ngin said.

Impact Party president Richard Rodriguez approached Ngin and interjected.

"He's sleeping before anything else," Rodriguez said.

"He hasn't slept in three weeks."

Administrator ignores SG law

Student Activities Center Assistant Director Chris Cupoli directed Blye to break election laws for what he called the best interest of the student body.

Because the Orange & Brew swarmed with more than 200 students during last week's general election announcement, Cupoli said it broke the maximum legal capacity. He also said he wasn't about to see that happen Wednesday.

A total of about 180 wristbands were given out to ensure the legal capacity was not exceeded. Both Impact and Gator received 70 bands each to distribute among their members. Only about 40 were available for the general public.

Not only is it tradition for election results to be announced at the Orange & Brew at midnight, but it is also written in the SG statutes.

Election winners must be announced there unless the Brew is "unavailable." In that case, a change in location must be decided a week before the end of the election by a vote of student officials.

Gator and Impact expressed disappointment at the decision.

Goldberg said it was not made clear to him that the announcement would be made outdoors near the amphitheater and game room.

Mack said he wasn't pleased at the last-minute news since Impact had "well over" 180 volunteers.

Cupoli said the new election headquarters were "close enough" to the restaurant so that the change was not drastic and that if it was not held outside, Gainesville Fire Rescue could have intervened.

"They think our laws are not real laws, our courts are not real courts, our government is not a real government," said Student Sen. John Boyles, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Blye said she had no choice but to announce the results outside per Cupoli's advice.

"I wasn't given an option," Blye said. "I was told we weren't allowed to do it."

percent of UF's full-time faculty, and only 25 percent were female, according to the report.

"It didn't surprise me," Machen said. "I know where we are and I know where we want to be."

Providing a diverse social environment is crucial for UF students because that's what they'll face in the real world, said Terry Mills, sociology professor and associate dean for minority affairs in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences.

He called the numbers "shameful," but said the president has been moving in a positive direction.

"We have to be extremely proactive," Mills said. "We have to adequately fund these efforts at diversity, and it cannot be done without a real commitment of dollars."

The report had 10 recommendations, including diversity training and establishing an office for institutional diversity that reports directly to the president.

Machen said he will either create the position or assign more responsibilities to an associate provost.

He said he wants the person to raise visibility and be a "beacon for diversity" on campus, holding events, helping find jobs for faculty members' spouses and recruiting.

The position may hold the authority to give departments incentives for improving minority representation or penalties for failing to meet those goals.

Rafael Giro, chairman of the Association of Hispanic Faculty and Staff at UF, said a reward system was not necessary.

"I don't really think that it should be tied to that," Giro said. "If the leadership is embracing it, I don't think that rewards need to necessarily be put into effect to achieve it."

Funds for the office would come from the existing budget, Machen said.

"Our record is not stellar," Machen said. "We can do a lot more, I think."

Dangerous Minds

By CHER PHILLIPS
Avenue Writer

Prisoners only are supposed to get three books. Three books from the library. Three books in a package.

But last Friday night, UF graduate Chris Campanaro chose a mix of five science fiction and fantasy paperbacks to send to a prisoner in Gatesville, Texas.

"In jail, prisoners would just read anything," he said.

Friday was Campanaro's first night volunteering with Gainesville Books for Prisoners, a collective that sends books to prisoners across the United States.

Campanaro spent a month in the Alachua County Jail, where he was allowed to check out three books every two weeks.

He knows what a book means to a prisoner, even if it wasn't the book they meant to get when they wrote to students on the other side of the country whom they've never met. Or will likely ever meet.

Campanaro chose five books, not three, and no one stopped him.

"Books are priceless," he said.

Priscilla Faas, a 28-year-old rehabilitation case worker, likes volunteering with Books for Prisoners because she said the work is a hands-on form of activism.

"This is a choice they get to make for themselves," she said.

With about seven other volunteers, Faas reads letters and order forms from inmates across the country and then tries to match up the inmates' requests with a book from the organization's library at the Ark, a self-named "art gallery space" situated at 22 NE 11th St.

For Faas, choosing which books to send is part of the enjoyment in this work.

"I can only imagine how happy they must feel when they get the books," she said.

Bret Bostock, who helped found the collective four years ago, estimated the group sent out 360 packages and more than 1,100 books since mid-December last year, when he began tracking inmate requests.

Bostock, a 30-year-old graphics design student at SFCC, pinpointed that more than half of Books for Prisoners shipments go to Texas because of the state's huge prison population. He said the group tried to shift some of the letters coming into Gainesville

Tricia Coyne / Alligator Staff

Tammi Arford, a Books for Prisoners volunteer, searches stacks of donated volumes to select reading-material requested by inmates.

to a Texas volunteer program called Inside Books, but that group is even further behind than Books for Prisoners in meeting requests.

"We try to prioritize letters from Florida prisons," Bostock said. "But the main thing is focusing on catching up and not being four months behind."

Last Friday, volunteers filled requests made in November, which is slightly longer than average for prisoner book programs.

Beyond books, Bostock said the group needs two elements: people and money.

Most of their books come from a drop-off box at Wayward Council Record Shop at 807 W University Ave. Campus drop-off boxes are located at the women's studies department and the the Levin College of Law Student Guild. Though prisons only accept shipments of paperback books, Books for Prisoners sells hardback donations through the Wayward Council to cover shipping costs, which hit about $100 each week.

'Girly' band fights stigma

By JACQUELINE DAVISON
Avenue Writer

"We aren't raging girl-powerites, and we aren't posable Barbies," says Maria Carter, guitarist and co-front woman for local indie-folk group redboy.

"We're musicians."

Considering four of the five members of redboy are in fact female, it's surprising that the band lacks the "girl power" persona associated with most bands of similar ratios.

"It's not about girls being better than boys or vice-versa," Carter says. "We don't believe the difference in our sexes should separate us."

Redboy's story began in the summer of 2003 when Carter met fellow co-front woman Meredith McCall.

That evening, she dreamt they were in a band together.

In the dream, her women's studies professor said, "Red because we're guilty and can't conceal it. Boy because we're not, and we won't become it," giving the band its name.

"When I woke up, I wrote everything down," Carter says. "Gradually, Mer and I began to think it would be a good idea for us to play together."

Redboy, which has been playing shows in Gainesville since October, will be sharing the stage with Alaco Affair (Indie-acoustic) and Mercy (solo female acoustic indie) Saturday at Faces for $5.

Mercy, also founder of female musician collective Tomboy Entertainment, is "a very intimate songwriter, and her voice is beautiful," Carter says.

"Try getting a crowd out to see women play guitar and you'll understand what I mean," she says. "It seems like we have to be twice as good and twice as engaging on-stage to get the audience to listen."

Redboy's influences range from Nirvana to Ani DiFranco, making their sound what best is described as 'a mix.' McCall even grew up in an acapella church.

"More than anything, we just want to share our passion with the audience," Carter says.

Beer flows at festival

By COLIN MCCANDLESS

Calling all beer aficionados ... it's time for the ninth annual Greater Gator Beer Festival Saturday from 1 to 5 p.m. at a great new location, Magnolia Parke.

Don't worry about weather conditions putting a damper on your drinking plans. This beer-lover's Christmas happens rain or shine, so bring an umbrella or SPF 30 and come soak up some suds.

The Beer Festival features samples of hundreds of the world's tastiest beers, coupled with complimentary food and music included in the price of admission.

The festival is similar in structure to a wine tasting. Patrons are welcome to enjoy unlimited samples of the brews and food offered at the event.

Beef O' Brady's, Gator's Dockside, Hops Restaurant, Kazbor's Sports Grille, Gainesville Ale House and others comprise the list of restaurants participating in the celebration.

On past occasions, the festival drew crowds of 2,500 people, and a similar turnout is expected this year.

The inaugural Beer Festival was in 1997 at the Sun Center next to the Hippodrome State Theater, but it grew after two years and moved to the parking lot at 238 W University Ave., where it remained for six years.

It has expanded once again, justifying the transition to the new spot at Magnolia Parke, which boasts room to accommodate larger crowds.

Advanced tickets are $15 and can be acquired them at Spin Cycle, CD Warehouse, Gator Beverage, Kazbor's Sports Grille, Gator's Dockside, Hops Restaurant and Beef O' Brady's. Entrance at the gate is $20.

The Beer Festival is a fundraiser, and a portion of the proceeds will benefit WRUF AM/FM at UF. For more information, call Advertising and Innovative Marketing at 407-383-2331. Magnolia Parke is situated at 4700 NW 39th Ave., in Gainesville.

Atmosphere keeps it real, takes beats to new level

Atmosphere. And maybe you don't like us. But of all the stars in the sky, believe we're one of the brightest." From the opening line of 2002's album "God Loves Ugly," it is clear Atmosphere believe they are a force that can't be reckoned with. How right they are. And they're bringing that force to Common Grounds tonight.

For years now, the underground hip-hop legends Slug, Ant and DJ Mr. Dibbs, collectively known as Atmosphere, not only have turned the heads of anyone who hears just one beat or one line, but they also have caught the attention of the entire hip-hop community.

Oh, did I mention they're white? Above the hip-hop underground, respected white rappers are few and far between for any number of reasons. The intangible that separates Slug and Atmosphere from the rest is an undeniable sense of honesty surrounding them.

There's nothing fake about the lines Slug spits.

There's nothing fake about Atmosphere's in-your-face approach.

As hip hop becomes more and more embedded into mainstream music, passion — or any sort of message — has been blinded by diamonds and rims. But not Slug and Atmosphere.

Chad Smith
Playlist

theavenue@alligator.org

He has kept his eyes and pen fixed on blank paper, creating rhymes of already legendary proportion.

Aside from their sincerity and pure talent, another weapon in the Atmosphere arsenal is an eclectic fan base. From hardcore hip-hop junkies to skateboarding punks, the rhyme and reason of Atmosphere is felt and appreciated by all walks.

A large part of that can be attributed to the release of Atmosphere's latest album, "Seven's Travels," on Epitaph Records, the punk-rock label that has released seminal classics from the likes of Bad Religion, Pennywise and the Descendents.

Sharing the stage with Slug and company will be Grayskul, the up-and-coming, gloomy "rhymefighters" that already have garnered the praise and support of some of the hip-hop underground's biggest names.

Their debut album, "Deadlivers," so named to represent both sides of the world — the living and the deceased — features appearances from Aesop Rock, Abstract Rude and Mr. Lif.

Grayskul's brand of "rhymefighting" includes comic-book-esque alter egos apart from their solo names, Onry Ozzborn, JFK and bassist Rob Castro.

When they step on stage as Greyskul, they are Reason, Fiddle Back Recluse and Phantom Ghost El-top, respectively.

"It's symbolic of being an emcee. Like when you wake up you're Jeff, but when you're on stage you're an emcee. It's like being empowered with a skill," explains JFK, aka Recluse. "Every emcee is like a comic book character."

Watch these real-life Clark Kents turn Supermen tonight with Atmosphere. You'll get why they're "one of the brightest."

Harn project aims to inspire students' inner-muse

BY ALICIA PEREZ
Avenue Writer

Everyone wants to find out who he or she is. Sometimes, it's even hard to begin thinking about why we are here and what constitutes our identity.

Artists throughout the years have addressed the idea in their paintings and sculptures. Tonight, students will have a chance to explore their own identity at the Harn Museum of Art.

The Museum University Student Educators came together with the help of Brandi Breslin, Harn Museum staff member and education coordinator for adult and docent programs, to create new types of programs to engage college students in the world of art.

"The idea of identity is a broad human theme that, of course, is going to come up in art," Breslin said. "The MUSEs looked at the collection at the museum, and they were interested in this idea of identity, thus creating this program."

The 15 members of MUSE, all juniors and seniors, have internships within the museum as docents, volunteer tour guides. About seven or eight students are active in each program.

Tonight from 7 to 9 p.m. will be "Illuminating Identity." This themed night will have four stations, all revolving around the idea of identity, Breslin explained. Donations are more than welcome, of course, but the event itself is free.

The first station will be a tour of different galleries through the museum, all pertaining to identity and culture. They will begin at 7:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m., respectively. The last three stations will run continuously until 8:45 p.m.

"Creating identity" is the second station in which people can create their own original artwork.

"Altering identity" is another aspect of the evening, when people can try on African royal adornment and take photos.

There also is "Communicating identity," a slide show exploring personal and cultural identity. Finally, the night will end with a performance by Agbedidi dance company at 8:45 p.m.

Breslin said she wants people who never have been to the museum to "learn something from the experience and feel a sense of growth for the visual arts."

The second program will be called "Art Scene Investigation" and will present a variety of programs and activities related to investigating art and the art scene.

MUSE will present mini tours, slide shows, interactive games and hands-on activities to help visitors gather clues toward object interpretation, uncovering hidden meanings and discovering the secrets of success in the art world.

'Lullabies' seems a stellar new notch in band's belt

Some bands rock hard. Some bands are melodic. But few fuse the two styles quite like Queens of the Stone Age.

On their latest effort, "Lullabies to Paralyze," QOTSA are at the top of their game, bringing artsy rock, dark and hypnotic moods, rich epics, powerful blasts of noise and even some cowbell — all without founding member/bassist Nick Oliveri, kicked out of the band for undisclosed reasons before recording.

While Oliveri's penchant for straight-up metal is noticeably missing on the album, lead singer/guitar player Josh Homme and the rest of the band's lineup put together a solid record that is every bit as compelling as any previous QOTSA release.

QOTSA always has been a revolving cast of musicians, which may help explain how Homme and company survived the absence of the integral Oliveri, a major factor on previous albums.

Like past QOTSA recordings, "Lullabies to Paralyze" offers warm vocals and fuzzy guitars

Nathaniel Deas
Playlist

theavenue@alligator.org

one unified sound that invites listeners to get lost in the shifting mood.

Homme's lyrics display a supreme sense of wit, while drummer Joey Castillo picks up where Dave Grohl left off on 2002's "Songs for the Deaf." Several highlights on the album include guest vocalist Mark Lanegan's (Screaming Trees) dark and brooding contribution to the gloomy "Burn the Witch," Homme's ghostly vocals on the creepy and surreal epic "Someone's in the Wolf," the explosive power and steady keys of "Broken Box" and, of course, the heavy dosage of cowbell on the album's first single, "Little Sister."

It is hard to describe accurately exactly how so many elements can fit together so seamlessly. But nonetheless, "Lullabies to Paralyze" is a unified album that flows from beginning to end.

With their new release, Josh Homme and the rest of QOTSA prove the normal rules of rock music do not apply to them, and they are miles ahead of today's major radio rockers. Again, while dark and gloomy, the album also is beautiful and melodic and definitely worth listening to over and over again.

Jury finds local man guilty of murdering his brother

By MEGAN V. WINSLOW
Alligator Writer
mwinslow@alligator.org

It took just under two hours Wednesday evening for a jury to find Terrance Lee Looney guilty of the second-degree murder of his brother.

"We're not surprised by the verdict," State Attorney's Office spokesman Spencer Mann said. "I think if anyone sat and listened to the evidence, listened to the closing, it was abundantly clear that Terry Looney killed his brother."

According to prosecutors, Looney, 42, strangled his brother James Ralph Looney, 47, in late September 2002, placing his body in a trash can within a utility shed in the backyard of the brothers' childhood home, where they lived. It would be about seven months before the body was found.

Throughout the two-day trial, defense attorney Matthew Wells maintained his client was in the Alachua County Jail for a violation of probation when the defendant's brother was killed. Contradictory witness testimony concerning when James was last seen alive, which varied from late September to around Thanksgiving or Christmas, left room for doubt as to Looney's guilt.

The medical examiner was unable to determine an exact date of death, and it is possible that temperature — which was recorded at nearly 80 degrees the night the body was found — could have contributed to the body's rapid decay, Wells said.

However, a jailhouse confession and other comments from the defendant also may have proven damaging for the defense.

Senior relishes in sprints, gives UF different look

By TIM CASEY
Alligator Writer
tcasey@alligator.org

The UF pitching staff sweats wind sprints every day.

But while most of the pitchers find the drills grueling, senior pitcher Mike Pete routinely outruns his teammates by 20 yards.

"We always — as a school, and especially the baseball team — have tons of athletes on the All-SEC Academic team. When we go perform in the classroom as well as we do, then go back it up on the field, that's exciting."

Mike Pete
UF senior pitcher

His game-day duties are less taxing, but unforeseen. As a relief pitcher, Pete never knows when he'll get the ball.

"A lot of the times, it's not really much time to warm up," Pete said. "You could have a starter out there doing fine, and then you have to get loose in two minutes to be ready to go. It's pretty much an up-and-down experience out in the bullpen."

His career has been a roller-coaster ride as well.

Pete was drafted by the Chicago Cubs as a senior in high school with the 1,439th overall pick in the 49th round.

UF coach Pat McMahon looks to Pete for leadership because of his status as one of the team's four seniors, despite throwing just 17.1 innings in 2004.

"I think that if you asked Michael about last year, he'd probably tell you that he was trying to overthrow a little bit," McMahon said.

Pete agrees with that assessment, using his coach's advice to improve his mid-80's fastball and 12-to-6 curveball.

"I struggled a little bit. I wasn't getting ground balls," Pete said. "We had some other guys step up in those roles. [Pitching] coach [Ross] Jones and Coach Mac and I have been working on straightening that stuff out with my delivery."

In 2003, Pete recorded the fourth-best single-season walk-per-nine-innings ratio in UF history, walking 11 in a career-high 71.1 innings.

In 2004, Pete was named to the Southeastern Conference Academic Honor Roll for the sec-

NCAA MEN'S SWIMMING

UF takes strokes toward snapping Auburn's streak

By BRIAN STEELE
Alligator Writer

The bully on the playground no longer has everyone behind him.

After failing to dethrone Auburn as Southeastern Conference champions, the No. 4 UF men's swimming and diving team will try again on a bigger stage this weekend. Today starts the 2005 NCAA Championships, hosted by Minnesota.

While the Gators know how close they came to stopping Auburn's nine-year SEC championship run, the Tigers' depth became one of the larger obstacles for UF to overcome. With a larger number of qualifiers for the NCAA Championships, the Tigers' advantage may not be as clear as before. UF qualified 14 swimmers and diver Zach Wilcox, while the Tigers are sending 20 total athletes, just five more than the Gators.

Even though the numbers gap is slimmer, the Gators know that their 15 athletes must perform.

"Everyone has got to do their own part and just race tough," junior Ryan Lochte said. "I know we don't have the advantage; we're not the top team. If we won SECs [then we may have been the favorite], but we didn't. There are other teams besides Auburn that have more guys than us that are going to NCAAs. It's going to be a good meet."

Coach Gregg Troy sees even more reasons why the Gators will improve upon two consecutive sixth-place finishes at the NCAA Championships.

"I think that we're more experienced and more seasoned," Troy said. "We have a better advantage with our tough conference. [Being the underdog at NCAAs] might take the pressure off."

Even though the Auburn men hold a monopoly on college swimming right now, that may not be to the disadvantage of underdogs like UF.

Lochte

"Everyone's not looking at us, they're looking at Auburn," Lochte said. "We're just one of the teams looking for them. Hopefully, we're going to sneak past them, then."

All it takes is one bad day to open the door for others. Lochte knows that the Gators are capable of coming home with the team's first national title in 21 years.

"We all feel really confident that we're capable of winning," he said. "Anyone can win on any day, so hopefully it's a Gator day. It's something Florida hasn't been able to do in so long, and I think we have the best chance this year. It'd be awesome to win it."

Though Lochte may be earning more and more publicity, he points out that he is only one of 15 UF athletes. If the Gators are to come out on top, it will be because everybody contributed, not just a select few.

"I don't think I'd be one of the main components," Lochte said. "It's a team effort, and everyone does their own job."

While Lochte may deny that he is one of the focal points of the team, his presence and abilities are certainly a positive attribute. Troy believes there are other advantages, too.

"Having as high a profile as Lochte helps other teams overlook most of our other guys," he said. "They use that as a source of motivation. We have more athletes than Lochte."

Gators regain killer look after squashing No. 7 Duke

■ UF DEFEATED ITS SECOND CONSECUTIVE TOP-10 TEAM.

By MICHAEL MAURINO
Alligator Writer
mmaurino@alligator.org

Occasionally, all the elements line up: perfect day, perfect conditions and perfect play.

For the UF women's tennis team, all of that happened Wednesday night, as the No. 17 Gators defeated No. 7 Duke 4-0.

The win follows Sunday's victory against No. 10 North Carolina, capping a stretch during which UF (8-2, 2-2 Southeastern Conference) faced four consecutive top-10 teams. After losing to Vanderbilt and Kentucky to start the run, the Gators now appear to have reacquired their killer look.

Coach Roland Thornqvist said he loved the grit and fight his team displayed.

"I thought we clearly outthrustled them, outworked them, just wanted it more," he said. "To me, that's worth more than just hitting well."

Thornqvist, a UNC grad, relishes his last two wins, especially the one against Duke.

"I grew up getting ready for these matches," he said. "It was nice to beat my alma mater Sunday, but it's twice as sweet to beat the Duke Blue Devils."

UF relied on its youth Wednesday.

Playing in the sixth position, sophomore Nina Suvak defeated Kristin Cargill 6-2, 6-0.

After her win, freshman Whitney Benik sealed another point with a 6-3, 6-1 win on court five.

With two matches and the doubles point in hand, freshman Alex Liles was in the position to clinch on court three.

Falling behind 4-1 to open the match, Liles got her timing back and converted unforced errors into winners. Liles won 11 of the next 12 games, defeating Jenny Zika 6-4, 6-0.

The freshman exhibited confidence on the court by dictating play, but she was not always so sure she would win.

"When I was down 4-1," she said. "I was hoping everyone else would win fast so I wouldn't get a loss."

The Gators made quick work of the Blue Devils during the doubles competition. Benik and fellow freshman Lolita Frangulyan, who lost 8-1 on the top court Sunday against UNC, dropped down a court and won 8-2 against Duke.

Gonzales: tough road to triumph

By IAN FISHER
Alligator Staff Writer
ifisher@alligator.org

Last week, UF wide receiver Chad Jackson said he and his fellow receivers would be the best group in the country.

According to their coach, though, they've got a long way to go.

"The University of Florida needs to have the best receivers in America," wide receivers coach Billy Gonzales said. "Are we there right now? I would say we're very, very far off from that right now." Gonzales said the talent exists in the UF receiving corps, but they haven't worked hard enough. He compared the UF receivers to the ones he coached at Utah the last two years.

Gonzales

"One of the reasons why we were so good at the last place is because those guys worked," Gonzales said.

"They were overachievers. Now what I need to get my guys here who are physically blessed talent-wise — they need to become overachievers. When we can do that, I'll say we got a good group."

Jackson and redshirt junior Jemelle Cornelius stood out for their work ethic, Gonzales said. However, he wasn't happy with Wednesday's practice effort.

"We're taking small steps; today, I think we took a step back," he said.

What happened with Mosby?

While most students will be talking about UF's latest football practice or the occasional editorial cartoon, many will not notice that Bernice Mosby is off the women's basketball team — permanently.

And while the team had a low home attendance and went to the women's NIT this year, there are fans that still care about the team.

They want to know what the heck happened. Whether we'll ever know what happened is a good question.

It shouldn't be expected that Coach Carolyn Peck will open up and tell everyone why she decided to make what she said was the "the hardest decision I've ever had to make as a coach." Which is unfortunate.

I would like to think Urban Meyer would tell us why a player got kicked off the football team. I would like to think Peck would do this as well.

No one is asking her to divulge all the behind-the-scenes details or even get into the situation at all. Only that it may be a good idea to state the reason to the fans that came to see Mosby play, who came to see her become the 2004 Southeastern Conference Sixth Woman of the Year and then lead the team in points and rebounds with 15.5 and 8.6, respectively, this season.

I won't use the "we have a right to know" card either. More appropriate is the fact that the fans want to know.

If I had to make a prediction, I'd say someone's going to find out the critical "why" one way or another. Maybe it will come from the basketball program. Maybe it will come from Mosby while she's still attending UF. Or maybe it will appear in another college town's newspaper in the event she transfers.

Hopefully, the fans will get the answer soon.

Another important question in the meantime is how the women's basketball team is going to recover. One of the many reasons Peck's decision was a hard one was undoubtedly because Mosby was productive. With the loss of Mosby and with Tashia Morehead, Tishona Gregory

Mosby dismissed from women's team

■ CAROLYN PECK SAID IT WAS HER HARDEST DECISION AS A COACH.

STAFF REPORT

The best UF women's basketball player is no more.

Junior forward Bernice Mosby, who led the Gators in points and rebounds this season, has been dismissed from the team.

"This has been the hardest decision I've ever had to make as a coach," Coach Carolyn Peck said in a statement released by UF.

"This decision is in the best interest for our basketball program and for Bernice. I wish her the best of luck in the future."

Mosby can choose to retain an academic scholarship.

If she declines, UF will grant her a release from the team, allowing Mosby to further her collegiate basketball career elsewhere.

Mosby's descent from Gators stardom began on Feb. 24 when she was suspended for the first half of UF's loss against Georgia. When the second half began, the forward was nowhere to be seen.

She left the team indefinitely the next day.

Mosby concludes her UF career with 1,124 points — No. 17 in program history — and 625 rebounds. She averaged 15.5 points and 8.6 rebounds per game in 2004-05.

Mosby started all 25 games she played, averaging a team-best 30.3 minutes per contest.

She was a Second Team All-Southeastern Conference selection by the coaches and media this season. Mosby was also voted the 2003-04 SEC Sixth Woman of the Year.

Her departure leaves the Gators in a dire situation for next season.

Second- and third-leading scorers Tashia Morehead and Tamia Williams have run out of eligibility.

The highest-scoring player returning to UF is junior Brittany Davis, who averaged 8.1 points per game this season.

30. UF scores 144 points... in football? - 10/6/1913 - On one insane day in Gainesville nearly 100 years ago, G.E. Pyle's Gators crushed Southern College (now Florida Southern) 144-0. The Gators scored 22 touchdowns.

29. Maxwell nets the record... sort of - 1/23/1988 - Guard Vernon Maxwell passed Ronnie Williams for the UF men's basketball career scoring record. Two years later, Maxwell, UF's all-time leader in points, would have his title stripped for supposed NCAA violations in a controversial move. The Alligator still recognizes Maxwell's records.

28. Kentucky at last - 1/23/1965 - UF actually defeated Kentucky in the 1934 SEC Tournament, but it was considered a fluke under old basketball rules. In '65, the Gators finally scored a shocking 84-68 victory against the Wildcats in front a first-ever national TV audience.

27. Zook's Last Stand - 11/20/2004 - FSU's stadium was renamed Bobby Bowden Field, but the already-fired Ron Zook stole the show, leading UF to a surprising 20-13 victory against the Seminoles. Zook was carried off the field a hero.

26. UF meets Big Apple - 3/13/1969 - Today the NIT is second-tier, but in '69, when only one team per conference made the NCAAAs (see: Kentucky), it was a big deal. The No. 10 Gators, in their first postseason, lost to Temple in the first round of the NIT.

25. Probation - 10/24/1984 & 9/21/1990 - Twice UF went on probation for various NCAA violations. The result? Two missed SEC championships ('84 and '90), Emmitt Smith never playing in a big bowl game and Vernon Maxwell's scoring record stripped.

24. Gold rush - Summer 1984 - Maybe they were swimming in Gatorade. UF swimmers exploded in the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, capturing a total of 13 gold medals.

23. Final what? - 4/1/1994 - After UF cut down the nets in the NCAA regionals, the Gators were so surprised they only cut down one net. UF defeated UConn and Boston College before falling to Duke.

22. Billy Ball - 3/28/1996 - When Billy Donovan was hired, nobody questioned his youthfulness - he represented Kentucky. Donovan, only 30, would eventually land big recruits.

21. The Choke at Doak - 11/26/1994 - Steve Spurrier held a 31-3 fourth-quarter lead against FSU. The Seminoles scored 28 points, ending the game in a 31-31 tie that ruined UF's championship hopes.

FOOTBALL, from page 23

NOT-SO-FULL BACK: Meyer's offense eliminates the fullback position. That presented a problem for two UF players.

Former fullbacks Eric Rutledge and Billy Latsko were moved to linebacker. Meyer was impressed with one.

"They're doing good," Meyer said. "Latsko is a little further ahead. Latsko is going to play, though; he's doing really well."

Meyer said Rutledge's speed is a problem.

Position aside, both just really want to play, Meyer said.

"You're dealing with two — all they want to do is play," Meyer said. "Latsko — you can tell him, 'Your position is going to be hanging off that goalpost for the whole game.' 'OK, coach, I'll go do it.'"

DEFENSIVE REVENGE: Meyer has dubbed Wednesdays and Saturdays winner-loser days. On Saturday, the offense won on the last play.

On Wednesday, there wasn't any competition.

"Defense kind of handed it to the offense today, which you'd probably expect this time of year," Meyer said. "I think there were some positives on defense. Can't think of a whole lot of positives on offense except it was a good attitude."

While the defense left practice, the offense had to run around the practice fields.

JOINER RE-JOINS: Sophomore safety Tony Joiner returned to practice Wednesday after missing practice since Friday for personal reasons.

"I'm glad to be back out here," Joiner said. "Feeling good, feeling good."

and Tamia Williams being outgoing seniors, the Gators will have quite a year ahead of them.

Someone's going to have to step up.

It's a good thing the crop of freshmen that came in for 2001-2002, all five of which played at the same time in their first season, will be around. Minus Mosby, of course.

The four that remain will provide excellent senior leadership, which is why there's hope for the 2005-06 season.

After all that has happened this season, hope is a good thing.
