Mayor: Domenech, Goldberg conspire

Incumbent City Commissioner Tony Domenech, up for re-election in a runoff Tuesday, allegedly colluded with Student Body President-elect Joe Goldberg to back extending bar-closing hours in exchange for campaign support, Gainesville's top official said Sunday.

Domenech

Gainesville Mayor Pegeen Hanrahan told the Alligator that in an earlier meeting she had with Goldberg, he admitted to her that Domenech "promised to vote for changing the closing hours" in exchange for Goldberg's student supporters also lending help to the commissioner's campaign.

Goldberg and Domenech have discussed the issue before - Domenech is a member of the city's Public Safety Committee, which met several times with Student Government's Safety and Fair Entertainment Committee, of which Goldberg is president.

The majority of these meetings earlier this year specifically dealt with the contentious issue of changing bar-closing hours in town from 2 a.m. to 3 a.m.

Additionally, Domenech was inducted into Goldberg's fraternity, Phi Delta Theta, as an honorary member about a year ago.

Domenech is up for District 3 re-election in a runoff with local hospice chaplain Jack Donovan on Tuesday. In a telephone interview

THE NEW PRESIDENT OFFICIALLY WILL TAKE OFFICE MAY 1.

The commencement of new leadership in Student Government was celebrated Saturday night as Student Body President Jamal Sowell passed the torch to President-elect Joe Goldberg.

Goldberg was sworn in at the 88th annual Student Government Inaugural & Recognition Banquet in Emerson Alumni Hall.

"I am ready to be a leader that the entire student body can believe in," Goldberg told the banquet attendees.

"Joyce (Medina), Lindsay (Cosimi) and I stand before you tonight to let you know that we will not let you down," he added, invoking the names of his party's vice president- and treasurer-elect.

Although he was sworn in, Goldberg does not take office until May 1.

"I am ready to be a leader that the entire student body can believe in."

Joe Goldberg
 Student Body President-elect

Goldberg was welcomed into his position by UF President Bernie Machen, who cautioned that SG should do all it can to reach out to disenfranchised students.

"Many students don't feel that Student Government works for them," Machen said.

He noted that there is a belief that SG largely has been run by a small number of student groups, an assumption that, he said, has "historical justification," but has become "increasingly inaccurate."

Despite having endorsed the Impact Party in the spring elections, Sowell was complimentary of Goldberg's accomplishments and placed faith in the Gator Party's leadership.

"I know that the school will be in good hands," Sowell said.

Sowell also spoke of the accomplishments of his Access Party during his tenure in office, including efforts to fight the implementation of block tuition and the Chomp the Vote voter-registration drive.

"After I ran, many students who would never have run for a position in Student Government or for Student Body president ran because I gave them the courage to do so," he said.

The night also featured videotaped segments poking fun at SG officials and accusations made about them.

Group to give pill

Citing feminist crusader Margaret Sanger's efforts to distribute then-illegal birth control in the 1920s, members of the Gainesville Women's Liberation community-education class have scheduled their own form of civil disobedience.

As part of a larger movement to gain Food and Drug Administration approval of the "Plan B" morning-after pill as an over-the-counter medication, members plan to distribute illegally the emergency contraception on the corner of Southwest 13th Street and University Avenue on Tuesday at noon.

The group's 10 pills came from personal prescriptions.

"Unfortunately, we only have a limited amount of pills we can pass out, but we still want to pass on information about the campaign and the urgency of the issue," UF student Claire Beach said.

On Campus In January, four women representing area feminist groups were arrested after blocking the entrance to the FDA offices in Rockville, Md., also in protest of the delay in approving the Plan B pill for over-the-counter sale.

Among those charged with disorderly conduct was UF alumna Stephanie Seguin, who said the group blocked access to the FDA because the FDA is blocking access to the pill.

Senior Tashia Morehead was selected as the 32nd pick of the 2005 WNBA Draft. She averaged 10.7 points and 4.9 rebounds during an injury-plagued Gators career. See story, pg. 22.

ADMINISTRATION UF pushes version of tuition control

By STEPHANIE GARRY
Alligator Staff Writer
smgarry@alligator.org

Despite the Legislature's moves to keep tuition-setting power in the hands of the lawmakers themselves, UF officials remain hopeful that the university might win the tuition tug-of-war by the time the session ends.

Jane Adams, UF vice president for university relations, has developed proposed legislation that would pass down the ability to set out-of-state, graduate and professional tuition to university boards of trustees.

That power is UF's No. 1 legislative priority this year and one of the first steps in giving local boards control over all tuition.

"It's been great that we've had expressions of support for the concept," Adams said, including from state Rep. J. Dudley Goodlette, R-Naples, who sponsored the bill that would keep tuition control in the Legislature.

"But at this point in the legislative session it's dangerous to speculate."

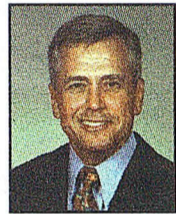

Adams would not say whether Goodlette's bill, which passed the Senate Education Committee last week, would be a threat to universities' goals of setting tuition.

The bill would clarify the often-ambiguous relationship between the Board of Governors, which was created through a constitutional amendment two years ago, and the Legislature, Adams said.

It would charge the Board of Governors with the task of overseeing academic policy but leave the Legislature with the power of the purse, that is, the power to set tuition.

"It doesn't do all the things we would like to see happen in devolution," Adams said. "But we can live with it."

Manny Fernandez, chairman of UF's Board of Trustees, the university's highest governing body that would have tuition-setting power under Adams' amendment, said if the bill passed, it might pose problems for UF's overarching goals.

Fernandez

"I'm somewhat disappointed at this point in time," Fernandez said.

Goodlette's bill has already passed the House and has the potential to give boards of trustees that power and settle the conflict once and for all, Fernandez said.

Instead, it may conflict with a pending lawsuit that claims the Florida Constitution grants the Board of Governors power over tuition.

If the bill is passed without Adams' amendment, the matter only may be resolved in court, Fernandez said.

"I would imagine that there would be litigation and eventually the Supreme Court of the State of Florida will have to decide where the powers do reside," Fernandez said.

THE LOSING TEAM HELPED VOLUNTEERS PLANT MORE THAN 400 ON CAMPUS.

By NATALIE KOULOVARIS

After the Blue team lost to the Orange team in the Orange and Blue Debut spring football game April 9, players from the Blue team were required to participate in a community-service activity Saturday — but they were not alone.

The Blue team's supporters during the game helped with the project.

The Inaugural Orange and Blue Campus Beautification Project took place Saturday morning along UF's Radio Road.

"This is the first year of the event and the first-ever student athlete/student body campus beautification project," said Gary Goldberg, the Orange and Blue cabinet director for Student Government and coordinator of the event.

Players and coaches from the losing side helped students plant more than 400 trees along Radio and Museum roads and down Bledsoe Drive.

The community-service concept was head coach Urban Meyer's idea, Goldberg said.

Meyer stressed that he wanted to do the project on campus and wanted to make it meaningful.

Meyer wanted a way to get students more involved with the football team, Goldberg said. He really wants the students to feel like it is their team.

Linebacker Brian Crum said he believes the idea to have the students pick sides was a great way to bring people together around campus.

"We are becoming closer as a team, especially since Coach Meyer got here," Crum said. "He told us we can only go as far as the team goes."

SANTA FE COMMUNITY COLLEGE

NFL stars score charity funds

■ GAINESVILLE PRODUCT
CLINTON PORTIS DONATED $100,000 TO CHARITY AT
THE STAR-STUDDED EVENT.

By JOHN W. COX

Alligator Contributing Writer

University of Miami graduates Clinton Portis, Edgerrin James and Santana Moss were among more than 20 celebrities from across the country that played in the Clinton Portis Charity Weekend basketball game Friday night at SFCC.

More than 300 people attended the event, which turned into a closely contested game.

With seven seconds left in the game and his team down by three points, Minnesota Vikings' pro-bowl quarterback Daunte Culpepper stepped to the foul line and knocked down three free throws.

"Daunte came out and played great," said Portis, a Gainesville High School graduate who became a star running back for the Washington Redskins.

Despite the heroics, Culpepper's Playaz fell to Portis' Macks 95 to 90 in overtime.

The Clinton Portis Foundation

hosted the star-studded event to raise money for charity, said Alachua County Commissioner Rodney Long, head of the foundation.

The foundation raises money for local youth, community activities and general scholarships, Long said.

"It's an opportunity for the community to see a bunch of guys that came from the same community they came from."

Clinton Portis
NFL star

At halftime, Portis presented a $100,000 check to the foundation.

The weekend also involved a comedy show after the game and a free picnic on Saturday, Long said.

"We had hoped to get about 1,000 people for the inaugural event," he said.

This year was the first weekend hosted by the foundation that featured a basketball game, Long said.

Portis was responsible for all the celebrities' attendance, including Green Bay Packers' tight end Bubba Franks, New York Jets receiver Laveranues Coles, Oakland Raiders cornerback Phillip Buchanon, Jacksonville Jaguars defensive tackle Marcus Stroud and Houston Texans' wide receiver Andre Johnson, Long said.

Many fans came out to just support Portis, local resident Sam Small said.

"They'll definitely come back next year," Small said.

Portis said he thought the event was a success.

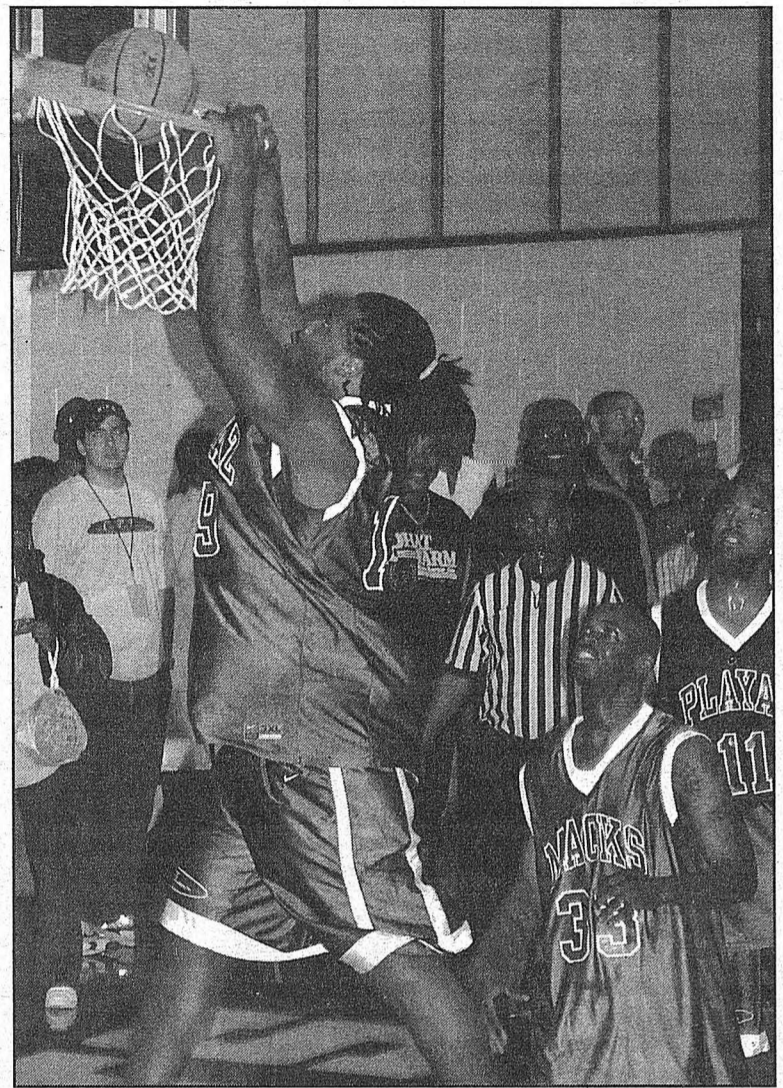

"I appreciate all the players comin' out," he said. "We (are) not no NBA stars."

Staying in touch with your neighborhood is important, Portis said.

"It's an opportunity for the community to see a bunch of guys that came from the same community they came from," he said.

Although the weekend's events fell short of what he had hoped, Long said he thought the charity weekend was a good start. Long earlier said the cost of the event could reach more than $50,000.

"I don't think we broke even," he said. "But it was a great first step."

Guardian program gives hope to lives of abused kids

By AMY TILLEY

Alligator Contributing Writer

The Florida Guardian ad Litem Program was created in response to the growing problem of child abuse.

A guardian ad litem, or guardian in the law, is a court-appointed volunteer who, by serving as the "eyes and ears of the judge," represents the best interests of an abused child.

Clarkson Cantrell, director of Guardian ad Litem and circuit director of the Eighth Judicial Circuit, has worked for more than 24 years to assist battered women and children and said she understands the influence of abuse on a child's mental health.

"Domestic violence has a profound long-term effect on children," Cantrell said.

"We are not trained therapists. Generally, we're counseled just to be good listeners," said Angie Tipton, a guardian for three years.

If a guardian believes that a child needs help, he or she can recommend it to the judge and check up to see if the child has been given the needed attention, said Tipton, who heard of the program while working for University Police.

"Not all people respond in ways that require specific counseling," she said. "Everyone has different ways that they cope."

When she first enters a case, she said the children are usually "dazed and confused."

But at the end of the case, many display a complete change.

"You see a whole different child, literally a complete personality change," she said.

"You walk away knowing they've got a good chance now," Tipton said.

As the guardian works on behalf of the child and spends time with him or her, the two often become very close.

The abuse, followed by removal from their home and placement with strangers,

"I encourage students to look into Guardian ad Litem. They won't be wasting their time. They're really going to make a difference."

Leslie Utiger

UF law student and guardian is absolutely the worst thing that could happen to a child, said Betty Jennings, who has worked with the Guardian ad Litem Program since 1982.

Everyone around the boy or girl is a stranger, but the guardian becomes the one consistent person in the child's life, Jennings said.

One of the biggest mental-health problems comes from the destruction of children's trust. The guardian can give them back the ability to trust, she said.

"The guardian is the only one that goes out to the home and spends time with the child," Jennings said.

The guardians not only spend time with the child, but they do a complete investigation of the case. They talk to the parents and the foster parents about the situation. They visit the children's teachers and look at their medical records.

Children may keep in touch with their guardian even after the program is finished.

Guardians must be 21 years old and are asked to give several hours a week to their work for at least a year. They may work on more than one case at a time.

UF students have given their time as guardians while continuing as students.

Leslie Utiger, a second-year law student at UF, has been a guardian for more than a year.

"I encourage students to look into Guardian ad Litem," Utiger said. "They won't be wasting their time. They're really going to make a difference."

Two resident students charged with weapons violations

State law forbids gun possession in campus dorms

By DANIELLE LEVY

Alligator Contributing Writer

Two UF students who kept guns under their beds were charged with weapons violations last month.

A UF staff member reported his suspicion of a gun on campus to officials, and the other incident involved a student firing a BB gun from a residence hall, said University Police Maj. Brad Barber.

Neither Barber nor Sharon Blansett, an assistant director of UF's Division of Housing, were willing to release the names of the students involved. UPD refused to provide copies of the police reports without prior knowledge of specific case information.

"On the west side of campus, one of our staff that works the information desks took delivery of a box clearly marked that it was ammunition," said Blansett.

UPD looked into the delivery and found that the student did have a gun.

"I don't necessarily believe it was a malicious intent; however, the law is pretty clear on a possession rule," Barber said.

The BB-gun shooter on the east side of campus hit some people and damaged property.

The people were not injured,

Blansett said.

These are not the first cases involving students who live in dorms and possess guns.

On Campus

"Once or twice a year we'll get a report sometimes from a roommate or sometimes from a neighbor that they 'believe' that there might be something in this room, and typically when our students 'believe' it means they've seen it," Blansett said.

Following these events, the housing department put up fliers to alert campus residents of the safety infringements.

The bright green notices also provided a list of banned weapons that include paintball guns, switchblades, sling shots, firearms and bow and arrows.

"It includes this list but is not limited to this list because it would be impossible to list the entire set of weapons that somebody could or could not use," Blansett said.

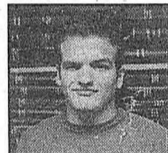

Time to set a ridiculous rule straight

The filibuster is nothing more than a loophole that has grown so famous that we think it's a natural part of the legislative process. If you're a Democrat who has been following the controversy, calm down: This has nothing to do with blue vs. red.

Just think about what it really is: If a bill has enough support to pass through Congress but not to stop a filibuster, then opponents can stop it from passing simply by talking for a while.

How can this possibly be a good thing? When a member of the whining minority — whether that be Republicans or Democrats — doesn't like something, he can step up to the lectern, pull out a cookbook and proceed to make policy decisions by explaining why he prefers his omelets with two eggs instead of three.

There only is one valid argument as to why this silliness should continue: Filibusters (theoretically) can make decisions more fair and balanced because (theoretically) bills or nominees without enough support are too extreme to be effective for the public good.

Matt Sanchez
msanchez@alligator.org

If we had a government in which legislators were free to vote for themselves, maybe this would be true.

However, this does not apply when both sides vote straight down the party line. The fact that Democratic senators oppose the most-conservative judicial nominees (read: most-Republican) is not indicative that the nominees are too extreme for the public — it's indicative of the Democratic Party waving their skinny little fists at their oppressors.

In order to make this concept accessible to everyone, here's an analogy of what filibusters would be like if we allowed them at Gators football games: FSU is down 37 points after being slapped around the field all day long. In the final seconds, they call timeout.

However, because they're living in the bizarre world inhabited by Congress, their last time out is a special, infinite "filibuster time out." So, the FSU players take off their pads, roll up some sleeping bags and pull out some homework (porn).

The Gators, to use the technical term, are "screwed." They played hard and outscored their opponents by a margin that would be physically impossible to overcome. But there's nothing they can do. They can't force the FSU players to get off the field, and there's a rule in the Bizarro-world Laws of Football that says any game that isn't over by dawn automatically is declared a draw. The record books will show that UF was in the lead, but the teams' records will show a draw.

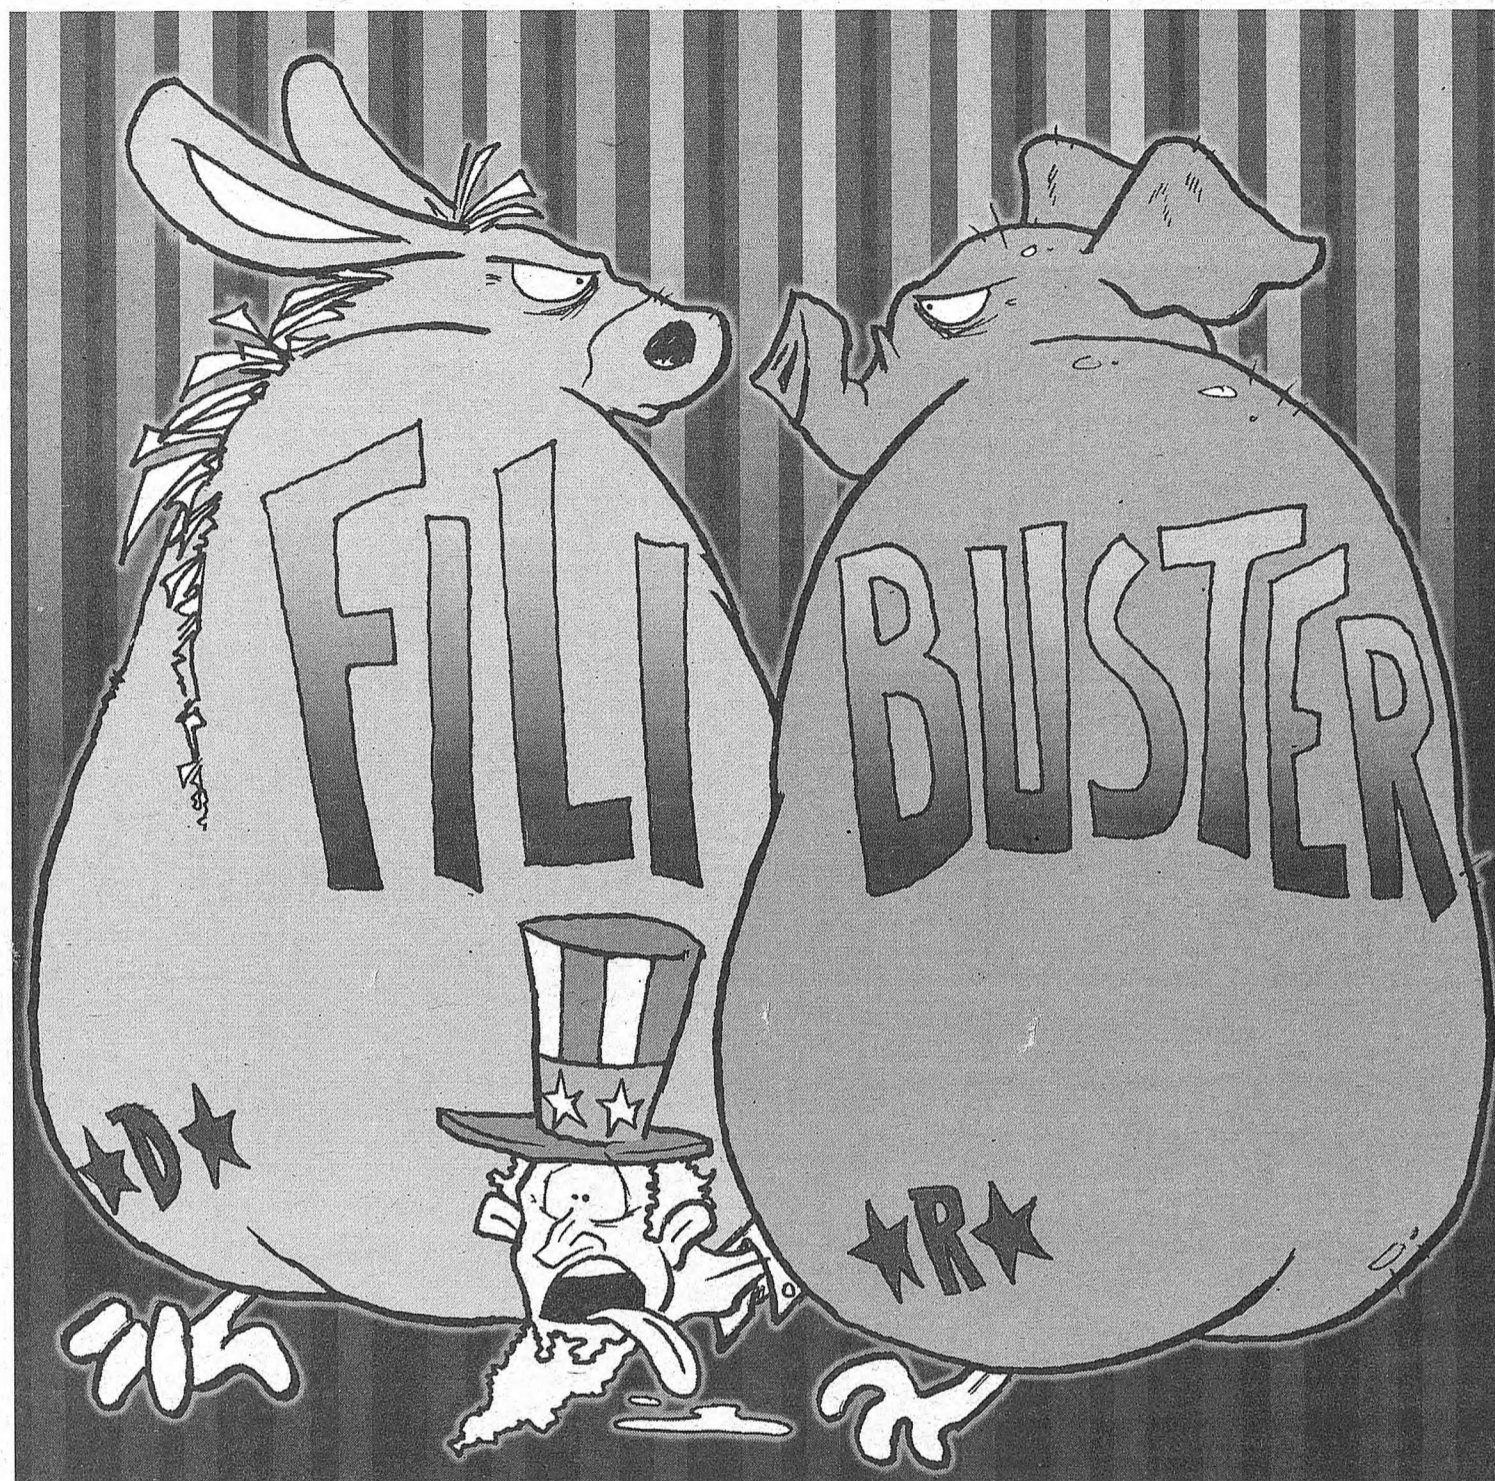

I hope your general thoughts about this are something along the lines of, "That's retarded."

Tell that to congressmen who aren't interested in changing the filibuster rules.

Right-wing moral mongers are short on morals

What are those crazy Republicans up to now? For a party that claims to be of the highest moral certitude, it sure is an unethical group. Here is a wrap up of what they have accomplished so far this year: Republicans changed the House Ethics rules so that their leader could keep his job while under investigation for a slew of illegal deals with shady lobbyists; voted to drill for oil in the Arctic, which will have absolutely no effect on our country's oil demand; and have led the campaign to end judicial filibusters in the Senate.

For a country facing the highest oil prices in history, skyrocketing health care costs and an endless war on terror, aren't you thrilled that Republicans in Congress are fixated on pushing a group of radical, right-wing judges through Senate confirmation?

After the Terri Schiavo debacle and less-than-lackluster support for President Bush's Social Security plan, the Republicans have set their sights on ending the one way the minority can stand up to the majority. If that doesn't scream democracy, I don't know what does.

The Republicans need to look down the road and realize that they are not always going to be in the majority. Just think, 10 years from now, it may only take 51 votes to appoint judges who will uphold Roe v. Wade or legalize school prayer. I don't know about you, but anything that makes the blood of evangelical Christians boil is music to my ears. Amen for those crazy Republicans, each and every one.

Dirty doings?

Recent actions make the commission race unclear

The Alligator has chosen to withhold its endorsement of a candidate for Tuesday's City Commission runoff election.

We have no doubt whom we'd feel more comfortable endorsing in the battle between incumbent Tony Domenech and challenger Jack Donovan. We endorsed him once before.

Domenech has a boatload of ties to UF and to the community.

Donovan, to put it simply, does not.

But recent events have further muddied the waters of the already murky pond of Gainesville city elections.

Now, even more than in the Student Government campaigns, it is clear that elections make strange bedfellows.

When else would political entities like Pegeen Hanrahan be accused of behavior as erratic as that of her and her supporters' alleged introduction of controversial issues in an attempt to discredit Domenech in the days before the elections?

And when else would Hanrahan's views contrast so much with those of, say, failed Commission candidate Gabe Kaimowitz? The latter lashed out in anger over the past week about a Donovan advertisement emphasizing the Presbyterian minister's "relationship with God."

But Kaimowitz's campaign was a self-described experiment, which we will go further to describe as an outright joke. So we're back at square one.

It would be stupid for us to conclude that Donovan or Domenech would be unfit for the job.

What holds us back from reaffirming Domenech as the best candidate for students is the same plaguing problem that effectively precluded any support from us for the Gator Party in the SG elections — we don't like accusations of political collusion, no matter how legal or innocuous.

We said the same thing when Joe Goldberg ran: We don't want to feel our representation is being sold on the open market.

With SG, of course, the stakes involved often are along the lines of, say, chocolate alligators (or orange-and-blue M&Ms, as the case may be).

If students choose not to speak out, they themselves are the only ones who are hurt when their money is spent on candies rather than on improvements to their university experience.

It's different on the City Commission: Everyone in Gainesville is affected by the decisions commissioners make — and these effects can last for generations. Gainesville has a number of decisions to make in the next three years on issues of transportation, utilities, public safety and poverty to name a few, which SG has the luxury of avoiding.

And while we may or may not support Goldberg's highly politicized battle to extend bar-closing times by an hour, we feel that extending the UF political machine to support the proposal could hurt what little student voice the City Commission currently has.

There are times in politics when you can see corruption for what it is and take steps to support the side that is fighting against it.

There also are times when both sides are so mired in deceit at the basic level that it's foolish to think you know who you can trust.

Bad political weather coming for Asia

Another Asian tsunami is brewing — except this time it's political. The two great powers in the Far East, Japan and China, are vying for the top position in the region, and the dangerous tides are digging up all the unforgotten bones of the past.

Their beef starts with borders. They have not agreed on which country owns a certain stretch of land in the East China Sea — land that is thought to have deep natural-gas reserves. For both China and Japan, the world's second- and third-biggest oil consumers, this land is a valuable commodity.

They both also claim ownership of a group of uninhabited islands in the East China Sea, known as the Senkakus in Japan and the Diaoyus in China, according to Reuters.

The islands are around 255 miles west of Okinawa and give access to rich fishing grounds and possible oil deposits. Japan has claimed them since defeating China in 1895.

But history is another thing in dispute. Early this month, Japan approved a new edition of a textbook that downplays the wrongs of its militaristic past.

The most contentious issue is how the book refers to the 1937 Nanjing Massacre in China, which was an orgy of sexual violence and murder the likes of which rarely is seen in human history. More than 300,000 people were killed. But the new textbook changed the "massacre" into an "incident."

This incident also is called "The Rape of Nanjing." A Japanese soldier was quoted in a BBC News story as saying, "There were about 37 old men, old women and children. We captured them and gathered them in a square. There was a woman holding a child on her right arm... and another one on her left. We stabbed and killed them, all three — like potatoes in a skewer. I thought then, it's been only one month since I left home... and 30 days later I was killing people without remorse."

According to Reuters, the book explains that Japan's imperialism and militarism during World War II was motivated by "self-preservation" and a desire to liberate Asia from the West's control.

Only a few Japanese schools are using the contentious textbook, but a few is too many, and the Chinese are rightfully angry. Now the flames of rage, at first fanned by the Chinese government, now are threatening to burn out of control.

According to the New Zealand Herald, the thousands of protestors who marched in the streets began committing acts of mob violence, smashing the windows of Japanese-style restaurants and injuring a few Japanese people. Demonstrators also hurled bottles and eggs at the Japanese consulate in Shenyang, the capital of once-Japanese-occupied Manchuria.

China also is wary of the fact that Japan is trying to gain a permanent seat on the U.N. Security Council. It should be.

Colin Powell said last year that America supported Japan's bid for a seat on the council and was quoted as saying, "If Japan is going to play a full role on the world stage and become a full active participating member of the Security Council, and have the kind of obligations that it would pick up as a member of the Security Council, Article Nine would have to be examined in that light."

Article Nine of Japan's constitution reads in part, "Japanese people forever renounce war as a sovereign right of the nation and the threat or use of force as means of settling international disputes."

Many Japanese don't want this fundamental change in the character of post-war Japan. But America needs a strong ally in the War on Terror, and it sees in Japan great potential for war. So does China, and that's the problem.

Letters to the Editor

ROTC students are not to blame for war

Editor: I routinely sit on the grass on the Plaza of the Americas nursing a book and eating Krishna lunch. I view the lunchtime plaza as a very positive place on which a motley crew congregates to discuss what's worth discussing.

But alas, a bothersome trend that has been going on for some time has finally gotten the better of me, and I feel the need to bring it to light.

Many people pass the plaza, but none garner as much attention as those in military uniform. Many uniformed ROTC students naively walk by the plaza, which obviously is a bastion of leftist politics (righties aren't comfortable enough to hang out with Krishnas, nor do they have the sense to have a meatless diet). These military students are hit with catcalls and insults. The provocateurs know they are on safe ground and feel no remorse in heckling students on their way to class.

The behavior of these plaza people is completely unjustified. Heckling some student on campus isn't going to stop the occupation of Iraq, and doing so only deters others from that very cause. Nevermind the thoughts of the uniformed students, who very well may be doing service just so they can attend UF and whose views may differ from those of the administration.

Again, to any ROTC student or any other person in uniform: From myself and any others who have stood by and watched these despicable acts and dared to do nothing, I apologize.

My humblest apologies are due to former coaches Spurrier and Zook if I am incorrect.

I had previous plans for this Saturday; otherwise, I would have been happy to join the group. Nonetheless, thank you for the invitation, Coach Meyer, and thank you as well for helping to restore my faith in the public image of our football team.

POPE JOHN PAUL II 1920-2005 Ceremony honors memory of Pope

By LINDSAY TAULBEE
Alligator Writer
ltaulbee@alligator.org

Cupping candles while bundling up against the cool evening, more than 100 students and residents gathered Saturday at the Reitz Union Amphitheater to honor the life of Pope John Paul II through words and song.

The candlelight vigil, organized by the St. Augustine Church's Catholic Student Center, provided a lively celebration of the pontiff's life following more solemn services, Catholic Student Fellowship co-coordinator Larry Lataif said.

"We wanted to do something uplifting, so that we don't just leave off on a negative tone," he said.

Students and local clergy — including those from Hillel, the Latter Day Saints Institute of Religion and the Emmanuel Mennonite Church — sang hymns, spoke of the pope's life and recited his words.

"Pope John Paul encouraged each one of these by word and by deed."

event coordinator

Some participants hoped to express the values of peace, unity, faith, hope and life — words which they said both crossed all religious barriers and were encompassed by John Paul.

"Pope John Paul encouraged each one of these by word and by deed," said Michelle Troche, one of the event's coordinators.

A slide show presented images of John Paul, some of which were humorous. One photograph showed him making a face for the camera.

Other photographs showed him speaking with various world leaders or praying.

UF student Anna Clark related a personal experience from one of the last days of the 2002 World Youth Day in Toronto.

"I consider it one of the greatest gifts of my youth," she told the audience.

The pope addressed thousands of spectators, saying that despite the age difference, he identified with their hopes and aspirations.

Clark teared up as she explained to the group how she felt he genuinely understood them.

UF student Gloria Santayana said she attended the ceremony as a Catholic who had felt the pope's influence.

"I just wanted to pay my respects, because he had a huge impact on the entire world, and he impacted me and my faith," she said.

■ A TURLINGTON PLAZA MACHINE DISPENSED THE GOODIES.

By BRIDGET CAREY
Alligator Staff Writer
bcarey@alligator.org

Students hankering for an overpriced vending-machine lunch may be out of luck — that is unless they want to eat a sandwich slice tucked inside a box of Marlboro Ultra Lights.

A group of UF art students turned a Turlington Plaza vending machine into an art exhibition Friday by putting unusual objects in the majority of slots once occupied with sandwiches and other traditional food items.

UF student Jon Navarro said he would not spend his money to buy a sandwich out of the machine. But he didn't hesitate to spend $2.50 to open a slot to grab a prescription-only women's birth-control ring for a few laughs.

A "Mystery Box" caught the eye of UF student Cavin Smith, who said he couldn't pass up the opportunity to spend $2.50 to find out what was inside. After ripping through layers of masking tape, he found a pink heart-shaped pillow.

On Campus

Some objects in the machine at the time were toy figurines, plastic food, a fake tongue and messages written on graph paper.

One slot was stuffed to capacity with tiny, unwrapped ham and cheese sandwich squares — all for $2.50.

"It's disgusting cause its not packaged, but it's a good value," Smith said. "It's like five sandwiches."

UF student Lauren Turner, who knew about the organized art demonstration, said a woman named J.

Higgins put the "show" together. Turner said the project was planned for many weeks, but she wasn't clear just how many art students were involved.

Higgins could not be reached for comment.

Vending machines dishing out forms of art are not something new. Around the nation, there are 76 cigarette vending machines transformed to "Art*O*Mats" dispensing cigarette-box-shaped art.

Exactly how much money the art students spent to open all the slots is unclear, as is how long this art exhibition will last or if the bought items will be replaced to keep the "show" going.

But for now, it appears the machine is attracting more fans and ogglers than it did when it was packed with mouth-watering, day-old ham sandwiches.

ELECTIONS 2005

Two face off for Commission seat

■ NEITHER TONY DOMENECH NOR JACK DONOVAN WON 50 PERCENT OF THE VOTE ON MARCH 29.

By IVETTE MENDEZ
Alligator Writer
imendez@alligator.org

After three extra weeks of anticipation since the Gainesville City Commission general election, District 3 candidates Jack Donovan and incumbent Tony Domenech will face each other again in a runoff election Tuesday.

The March 29 election did not yield a winner in District 3, representing west and southwest Gainesville, because neither of the candidates received more than 50 percent of the vote.

Domenech received 48.34 percent of the total votes from the seven precincts, and Donovan tallied 44.19 percent. UF student Mike Belle, who is not a candidate in the runoff, got 7.47 percent.

The last chance for early voters to cast their ballots is Monday at the Supervisor of Elections Office in downtown Gainesville.

So far, about 125 early votes have been cast as well as 284 absentee ballots, Supervisor of Elections Pam Carpenter said.

"Everything has been running very smoothly," she said.

Due to the election only being between two candidates, Carpenter said she expects a higher turnout and that voters will be much more focused on the candidates.

"I'm hoping it's going to surpass the turnout from last election," she said.

Precinct information is available at the Supervisor of Elections Web site at <http://elections.alachua.fl.us>.

Goldberg denies agreement with candidate

Sunday, Domenech admitted to having a close relationship with Goldberg and UF.

"I know Joe Goldberg very well," he said. "I have never really disconnected from the university."

When directly questioned on the issue of his allegedly promising to vote for extending bar hours, Domenech deferred comment to Goldberg.

"It would be a violation of the protocol to come out one way or another," he said, asserting that he has never committed to a position one way or the other on extending the closing time.

The mayor and Commissioners Craig Lowe and Warren Nielsen have already said they would vote for the extension, Domenech said.

Thus, he said, telegraphing which way he was leaning would make further study of the problem meaningless by revealing that four of the seven sitting city commissioners would vote for the extension.

As far as his association with SG and student groups, Domenech said, "I always listened to them."

Domenech, a UF alumnus, was the only City Commissioner at the Orange & Brew restaurant to hear results for the initial SG election as well as that race's runoff between Goldberg and the Impact Party's Dennis Ngin.

Goldberg, in turn, put in an appearance downtown at the Supervisor of Elections Office to hear the campaign results in the March 29 election.

However, Goldberg said he was there merely to show his support for city government.

"I don't recall this conversation," he said when asked about the alleged meeting with Hanrahan.

Several campaign signs promoting Domenech for Tuesday's election surround the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity house.

Domenech was being supported in the election as a Phi Delta Theta Fraternity brother in the same way those fraternity brothers supported Goldberg for Student Body president, Goldberg said.

Patrons of the Swamp Restaurant said they saw Goldberg and companions passing out campaign stickers promoting Domenech before Sunday.

"I wasn't at the Swamp this weekend," Goldberg laughed. "I know where my vote is going, but I'm not going to use my position as the next Student Body president in that way."

"Tony's absolutely a friend of mine," Goldberg said, adding he continues to include Hanrahan on his list of friends.

Weapons lead to arrests

A UF student was arrested and charged with aggravated assault after she allegedly threatened a group of people with a switchblade early Saturday morning.

According to Gainesville Police, Swan Moon, 19, was at a friend's apartment when an unknown person broke a window of the Boardwalk Apartment Homes dwelling, 2701 SW 13th St.

Moon allegedly followed the person to apartment G4 where a heated argument, involving approximately 20 people, ensued.

Then, Moon pulled out the knife and said she would not allow anyone to leave until the window was paid for, a GPD report states.

One of the people Moon allegedly threatened was Derek Scott Dyer of Tampa.

During the disturbance, Dyer, 18, left the group and returned armed with a black pellet pistol, according to GPD reports.

He then allegedly proceeded to place the barrel of the gun about two feet from the face of another man, Gainesville resident Rafael Enrique Caban Rivera told Dyer to back off.

Police later found four prescription narcotics in a plastic baggie in Dyer's front left pocket.

Dyer later told police he used the pellet gun because it looked real - like a Baretta - and he knew it would scare people.

Both Moon and Dyer have been charged with aggravated assault and taken to the Alachua County Jail.

MAN BITES MAN: Allegedly out of anger at his girlfriend, a Hobe Sound man punched a fence and then went on to bite the man attempting to restrain him early Saturday morning.

Colin Michael Grover, 19, also known as "Twister," caused approximately $100 worth of damage to Gainesville resident Donald Thomas Fox's fence, located at 109 S. Main St.

When Fox's friend, James Joseph Johnston of Newberry, tried to stop Grover, the teen allegedly bit Johnston on the hand, reports state.

Grover has been charged with simple battery. Johnston sustained a minor cut to his knuckle.

IFC holds brain battle

■ FRATERNITIES FACED MULTI-SUBJECT QUESTIONS.

By KYLIE CRAIG
Alligator Writer
krcraig@alligator.org

It was a battle of the brains for Interfraternity Council members at the first ever IFC College Bowl on Sunday.

The competition took place in Turlington Hall and was hosted in conjunction with UF's College Bowl team, which judged the event.

Seven teams represented different IFC chapters, and one was made up of IFC executive board members.

The teams were quizzed on science, literature, art, music and other categories.

IFC director of scholarships Daniel Maland said the event marked a shift in the Greek community's emphasis on academics, which will equal athletics and other Greek activities.

"It's getting back to why the Greek community was founded," Maland said. "It's an alternate means of promoting academic interest in the Greek community, rather than just relying on GPA."

The team represented by IFC executive board members won the event.

IFC administrative vice president Jeremy Martin, who competed on the team, said he was pleased with the way the event turned out.

Greek Life

"The event was a good overall showcase of the commitment to academics within the IFC," Martin said.

The winning team took home a large cup honoring their accomplishment.

"This is the first part of what will be a long-lasting tradition," Maland said.

Following the IFC College Bowl was an awards banquet honoring IFC members who earned a 4.0 GPA in the Fall semester.

Alligator forum hosts criticism

By STEPHANIE GARRY
Alligator Staff Writer
smgarry@alligator.org

A panel of seven editors and a cartoonist met in the "bat cave" of Weimer Hall to atone for a semester's worth of sins Friday evening, but some members of the audience left feeling there was more to be forgiven.

About 20 readers dotted the 250-seat Gannett Auditorium in the College of Journalism and Communications to ask questions and offer criticism of The Independent Florida Alligator staff.

On Campus "We're interested in constructive criticism and deconstructive criticism," said moderator Mike Foley, master lecturer in the journalism college.

Some of the audience consisted of Alligator writers and reporting students from Foley's class. But a few, including Journalism Department Chairman William McKeen, had genuine grievances to air.

McKeen said the Alligator significantly misrepresented his position on bringing The Gainesville Sun on campus in a March 28 article and showed poor judgment in choosing what to print and what to cut.

Alligator Editor Dwayne Robinson attributed the duplication and deletion of paragraphs to a production error that occurred in submitting the paper for print.

Another reader told the Alligator staff that students get sick of reading about Student Government. She thought the Alligator printed too many stories about corruption in Florida Blue Key and Student Government, past the point where students got the message.

Rachel Wyzan, executive vice president of Gators for Israel and a reporting student who covered the event for class, told the panel she found stories about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict to be ignorant of basic terminology.

Alligator editors responded that words were complex in describing the Middle East and that freelance writers, usually those new to writing, covered campus events, but Wyzan said their explanations were excuses and made it sound like they couldn't do anything to improve.

"I have problems with the Alligator sometimes, but I made it my business to show up."

Rachel Wyzan
Gators for Israel executive vice president

Nevertheless, the forum was a positive gesture on the part of the staff, she said.

"I have problems with the Alligator sometimes, but I made it my business to show up," Wyzan said.

Cartoonist Andy Marlette also explained the controversial cartoon depicting UF basketball player Matt Walsh crying tears that read "choke." Some fans felt the cartoon betrayed the team, but he said his job was first as a cartoonist and second as a fan.

"As much as I hate to do it as a Gator fan, I love to do it as a cartoonist," Marlette said.

Man warns of lead

By SKYLER SMITH
Alligator Writer
ssmith@alligator.org

Marc Edwards stood in front of a crowd of about 50 people Friday and insisted that he wasn't crazy.

Edwards, a civil-engineering professor at Virginia Tech, spoke of his experiences in Washington D.C. trying to protect consumers from dangerous lead levels in drinking water.

"Disinfecting water has probably saved more lives than all the medical breakthroughs combined," he said.

However, when chlorine is added to rid the water of germs, it can produce carcinogens. Recently, the chemical chloramine, which is ammonia mixed with chlorine, has been added to public water to kill these carcinogens.

But the addition of chloramine can raise lead levels. In Washington D.C., lead amounts spiked after the D.C. Water and Sewer Authority began adding the chemical.

Edwards did tests in consumers' homes that showed lead content could be as high as 1,250 lead parts per billion. The Environmental Protection Agency stated a mere 40 ppb was enough to endanger children.

Gainesville Regional Utilities spokesman Dan Jesse said that the Murphree Water Treatment Plant does not use chloramine in its treatment of Gainesville's water supply.

UF golf teams finish short in SEC Championships

STAFF REPORT

For the second consecutive year, the UF men's golf team entered the final round of the Southeastern Conference Championships with at least a share of the lead.

For the second consecutive year, the Gators saw that lead slip away.

UF stumbled on Sunday, shooting its highest round of the tournament, a 22-over 302, and slipped to fourth place, 13 shots behind tournament-winner Kentucky.

"It's disappointing when you don't perform well on the final day of a tournament, especially when it's the SEC Championships," UF Coach Buddy Alexander said. "It's definitely tough to take, but I told our team that the day is ruined but the season isn't. There are still goals that this team can accomplish and we'll come back and work hard to give ourselves a chance of accomplishing them."

The No. 6 Gators entered third round play at the Seaside Course in Sea Island, Ga., with a five-shot lead over Auburn.

Juniors Brett Stegmaier and Matt Every placed in the top 10 for UF.

Finishing seven shots behind individual champion David Skirns of Tennessee, Stegmaier shot rounds of 75, 70 and 72 en route to a fourth place finish at 7-over.

UF next travels to Nashville for the NCAA Regionals beginning May 19.

WOMEN SIXTH: At least some good came out of a sixth-place finish at the Southeastern Conference Championships for the UF women's golf team.

The three-round tournament marked the return to form of freshman Whitney Myers, who followed an even-par 72 on Friday with successive 74's, good enough for a solo runner-up finish.

Myers earned the highest finish for a UF golfer this season and her first top-10 since the opening event of the fall.

"Whitney played to win today and she did a fantastic job," Coach Jill Briles-Hinton said. "She didn't back down and just kept going at it. She put three solid rounds together and I am proud of her. Whitney was the leading lady on our team with a cast that couldn't come through."

The cast of four freshmen and a senior took sixth in the 12-team tournament with a final tally of 911 (+47), seven shots behind SEC champion Auburn.

"The team had a much better day today," Briles-Hinton said. "I am proud of them for hanging in there from start to finish. They played hard and it was very disappointing."

"We finished just seven strokes out of the playoff. The girls know we are better than what we played. We just couldn't play well. We shot a 304, 307 and 300. The way we started off wasn't good, but I am proud of the way they came back today."

No. 11 UF will host the NCAA Regionals from May 5-7.

man's playing time. You never know how freshman are going to react to a certain situation," Telep said. "But make no mistake, Walter Hodge was recruited to play early."

Assuming Roberson departs, another scholarship will open up, and the Gators could very well look at Keith Brumbaugh.

The 6-foot-8 athletic forward has said he may jump to the NBA, but Telep said Brumbaugh probably wouldn't be a first-round pick, so he'd have to "scratch and claw just to stay in the league."

Although he's rated as the top recruit in the state of Florida, there's been some concern about Brumbaugh's attitude and if Donovan would be willing to sign a guy some consider a head case.

Telep said it should be a no-brainer. "Brumbaugh is an immensely talented offensive basketball player," Telep said. "This is a guy who's 6-8 and can play on the perimeter. He [should fit into] the style of offense Florida wants to play. If he wants to come to Florida, they would have to take a long, hard look at him."

Telep also is high on incoming freshman Derwin Kitchen, a 6-foot-4 guard who he believes could receive the most playing time of any freshman next season.

"Kitchen's a combo guard that can play both positions for them. He's also a proven winner," Telep said. "He's a versatile a guy who can play both guard positions and defend both spots."

Tennessee players, not our guys. We've not had any knock down, drag-out fights amongst our players."

Fulmer took a shot right back at Spurrier.

"He needs to take care of his own house. He's got plenty of issues over there. We've had a lot worse things than this that we've gotten through," Fulmer said last Thursday. "I don't [care] one way or the other what anybody says except the people that count."

These two and UF Coach Urban Meyer are going to put the fun back into the SEC this year.

To see how much things will be different this year, all one needs to do is look at South Carolina's spring game attendance.

The 'Cocks usually get about 10,000 fans - this year over 38,000 showed up. With Spurrier, people care.

"I'm glad [Fulmer is] listening to us," Spurrier said. "In the past, I don't think he'd worry about what a South Carolina coach said, do you?"

Nope, not at all. And we thought Fulmer caused a circus at SEC Media Days last year when he didn't show up because of a subpoena.

With Meyer, Spurrier and Fulmer, it just may be a three-ring circus this year.

Donovan brings in talent

By ANDREW ABRAMSON

Alligator Staff Writer
a Abramson@alligator.org

If Billy Donovan can't convince Anthony Roberson to stay at UF – and it's unlikely he will – the men's basketball coach did the next best thing.

Donovan signed a prospect who could be the next Roberson.

Walter Hodge, the Florida Gatorade State Player of the Year out of Florida Air Academy in Melbourne, doesn't have quite the same accolades of Roberson – a McDonald's High School All American – heading into UF, but the 6-foot guard's style of play sounds very similar to Roberson's.

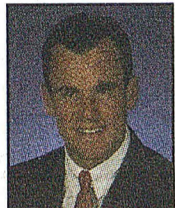

"Hodge is a guy who is extremely fast baseline to baseline," said Scout.com recruiting analyst Dave Telep. "The guy will fire threes; he's not a pure point guard, but he's a speed guy that can run your offense."

Hodge averaged 25.4 points, 5.4 steals and 4.2 assists as a senior.

In the Class 3A title game, Hodge scored 33 points, winning MVP of the state tournament.

"Walter adds speed, quickness and shooting to our backcourt," Donovan said. "He has the potential to be a very good defender and is coming out of a great high school program, so we're certainly excited to have him join us."

Donovan

Despite the loss of senior David Lee and the likely departure of Roberson, UF could be loaded with young talent next season.

The potential battle between Hodge and soon-to-be sophomore Taurean Green for the starting point guard job should be extremely competitive.

Green had a solid freshman season backing up Roberson. Unlike Hodge, Green is a true point guard, looking to pass first.

But if Hodge turns out to be as explosive as Donovan hopes, it may be tough to keep him on the bench for long.

"It's way too early to talk about a fresh-

SEC coaches already at it

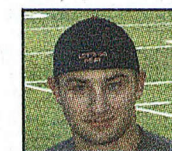

I remember asking Tennessee coach Phil Fulmer what he thought of Steve Spurrier returning to the Southeastern Conference just two days after Ron Zook was fired.

He chuckled, and then said, "Coach Spurrier is obviously a great football coach and a really fine man. I think it'd be really good for our conference if that's the direction Florida chooses to go."

Well, sure enough, Spurrier is back in the conference, and the fun has already begun. So what if Spurrier isn't at UF? Gators fans seem plenty pleased with Meyer so far.

With Spurrier and Fulmer bickering again like schoolgirls, it's easy to say it's going to be fun in the SEC next season.

The two coaches made headlines last week for taking verbal jabs at each other about their players getting in trouble.

Spurrier started it by defending receiver Syvelle Newton, who was accused of punching another student a couple weeks ago before the criminal charges were dropped.

"I guess at one time somebody accused [Newton] of slapping him or something," Spurrier said last Wednesday. "But this was not a full-blown fight. If you want to read about some full-blown fights, read about the

Mystics pick Morehead in third round of WNBA draft

Nick West / Alligator Staff

Senior Tashia Morehead was selected as the 32nd pick of the 2005 WNBA Draft. She averaged 10.7 points and 4.9 rebounds during an injury-plagued Gators' career.

■ THE SENIOR FORWARD
WENT 32ND OVERALL.

STAFF REPORT

After a disappointing season, the UF women's basketball team has a reason to celebrate.

Senior Tashia Morehead was selected by the Washington Mystics in the third round of the WNBA Draft on Saturday.

The 5-foot-11 forward will be joining a team that finished 17-17 in the WNBA Eastern Conference.

However, the Mystics took the eventual conference champion, Connecticut Sun, to a decisive third game in the playoff's first round.

Morehead is the first signee of Coach Carolyn Peck to be selected in the WNBA. Since 1997, a Gator has been selected in the WNBA Draft in every year except 2003.

Morehead, who began her college career at Panama City's Gulf Coast Community College, was surprised by her selection.

"I still can't believe it," she said. "It's been a dream to play professional basketball, and now, I'm one step closer to that becoming a reality. I'm numb, and it hasn't even sunk in that I was drafted. It didn't care which team picked me, I'm just so happy."

The Mystics already have two former Gators on the roster; forward DeLisha Milton-Jones and center Murriel Page. While connected to Morehead through alma mater, the two left UF in 1997 and 1998, respectively.

After winning the 2003 Junior College Championship with Gulf Coast, Morehead fit right in with UF. Scoring 12 points per game, and starting in every one, Morehead was key to UF's surprising 19-11 record and finish in the second round of the NCAA in 2004.

This season, Morehead was hampered by injuries from the start and did not regain her form until Southeastern Conference play. Starting with a heartbreaking loss to Tennessee at home on Feb. 2, Morehead scored in double figures in eight of the next nine games. She averaged 14.2 points during that span.

This season, Peck put Morehead on the back line in part to utilize Morehead's 34 percent three-point shooting. Morehead may find herself in the same situation in Washington, as the Mystics' lineup is stacked with players at least six feet tall. With the sixth overall pick, Washington selected guard Temeka Johnson from Louisiana State.

UF ROUNDUP

Gators stagger in final inning of Alabama series

For 26 innings, the fifth-ranked UF baseball team (27-9, 10-5 Southeastern Conference) played like the best team in the SEC.

The problem is that the three-game series consisted of 27 innings.

UF fell to No. 17 Alabama on Sunday 9-6 after leading 6-3 as the Gators entered the ninth inning, with pitchers Stephen Locke and Connor Falkenbach having held the Crimson Tide to just seven hits up to that point. UF closer Darren O'Day took the mound, having already recorded two saves on the weekend.

"It didn't look too good, I can't say that our dugout was sitting in there going 'It's just a matter of time,'" Alabama coach Jim Wells said. "We were pretty down and beat up."

For complete stories, visit www.alligatorSports.org

Just as things looked bleak for Alabama (26-12, 9-6 SEC), first baseman Evan Bush hit a single. Wells then sent four consecutive pinch hitters to the plate.

After another single by senior Matt Grooms, Alabama freshman Matt Bentley leaned into a pitch to load the bases.

"I'm a little upset about that," O'Day said. "The pitch was right over the middle of the plate. If you stick your elbow out there, that's fine, but the umpire has to see it. It's not an excuse; it's still my fault."

The Crimson Tide was on a roll, led by former football player Spencer Pennington's two-run double and shortstop Cale Iorg's RBI single that tied the game.

Iorg's ball was a high blooper that landed between diving UF shortstop Justin Tordi and sliding leftfielder Gavin Dickey.

UF third baseman Brandon McArthur extended his hitting streak to 14 games, batting 4-for-11 in the series.

Despite the loss, UF Coach Pat McMahon's team remains in first place in the conference after defeating Alabama 9-8 on Friday and 7-4 on Saturday, recording 14 hits in each game.

"You have to give Alabama credit, they're an outstanding ballclub," McMahon said.

VOLLEYBALL: As spectators struggled to find an empty chair, a couple of fans stood in the corner of the gymnasium playing a game of hangman. It was the kind of relaxed atmosphere that can only take place in an exhibition match. For the UF volleyball team, however, it was business as usual.

UF's spring practice season came to an end Saturday. The Gators swept their exhibition doubleheader, defeating Georgia Tech 3-0 in both matches.

"This was as complete a performance as we've had all spring," Coach Mary Wise said.

MEN'S TRACK: The UF men's track and field team claimed six first-place finishes and posted a total of 17 NCAA regional qualifying marks at the Miami Gatorade Classic on Saturday.

The No. 2 Gators were led by outstanding performances from seniors Kyle Farmer and Josh Walker, and freshman Wes Stockbarger.

Farmer finished second in the 100-meter dash and first in the 200-meter dash.

WOMEN'S TRACK: Some would call it a killer road trip. For the Gators, however, it was just another weekend at work.

The No. 5 UF women's track team completed a West-coast trip that produced 10 NCAA regional qualifying marks from 10 athletes. The Gators participated in the Mt. Sac Relays in Walnut, Calif. on Friday and Sunday, the Mesa Invitational in Mesa, Ariz. on Friday, and the Sun Angel Classic in Tempe, Ariz. on Saturday.

Rachel Longfors took home her second individual victory of the weekend with an NCAA regional qualifying toss of 56.05m/183-10 in the discus. Candice Scott secured a second-place finish in the hammer throw while Liz Wanless was the top collegiate and American finisher in the shot put with a heave 17.37m/57-00 to place third.

"This was a remarkable weekend for Rachel," associate head coach Larry Judge said.

SOFTBALL: The No. 15 Gators (34-12, 13-5 Southeastern Conference) softball team enjoyed a successful series against No. 6 Tennessee (45-9, 13-6 SEC) this weekend, taking two of the three games. Both games Saturday featured a pitcher's duel between Tennessee's ace, Monica Abbott, and the Gators' top starter, Stacey Stevens. Luck was on the Gators' side Saturday, as they were able to squeak by the Vols 2-1 in the first game and 1-0 in extra innings in the second.

However, Sunday was a different story, as the Gators fell to Tennessee 6-2. Stevens, pitching in her third consecutive game, got rattled early on, surrendering two runs in the first three innings.

Even though Stevens pitched all three games, she said she felt fine. In the series, Stevens struck out 12 and gave up 14 hits.

"It's a little tough because we know we could have swept," Stevens said.

Third baseman Brandon McArthur slides into second base to break up a double play against Alabama. McArthur now boasts a 14-game hitting streak.

MEN'S TENNIS: The Gators could not have asked for a better end to the regular season.

With a 7-0 sweep against No. 17 South Carolina on Saturday, the No. 6 UF men's tennis team brought home a shared Southeastern Conference championship.

The Gators' regular season ended at 17-5 overall and 10-1 in the conference. The SEC title is the second for UF under Coach Andy Jackson, the last one coming in 2003.

"The SEC is definitely one of the best tennis conferences in the country, and to win a title is something pretty special," Jackson said. "I'm very excited and proud of the team and felt they deserved everything with the way they played this season."

WOMEN'S TENNIS: With the regular season finished, the Southeastern Conference Tournament-champion Gators are ready to defend their title.

The No. 7 UF women's tennis team finished its regular season Sunday afternoon with a 4-0 victory over No. 23 South Carolina. It was the ninth consecutive win for the Gators, who were able to remain undefeated at home this season.

"When we are in the position to finish off points, we are finishing off points," associate head coach Dave Balogh said. "When we are in the position to finish off games, we are finishing off games. That's a result of discipline, and as coaches, we're pleased to see that."
