UF ignores union ruling

By JUSTIN RICHARDS
Alligator Writer
jrichards@alligator.org

UF remains the only state institution not to acknowledge the faculty union United Faculty of Florida after a July 28 Florida Supreme Court ruling.

Union representatives believe the ruling confirms what they've been arguing for several years: The university is obligated to recognize their union.

"It's time for the University of Florida to follow the law," said Tom Auxter, statewide president of the faculty union.

"The University of Florida has always maintained that it is different from the other institutions."

Pam Bernard
UF general counsel

But the university administration is waiting for a state mandate before it acts, saying that UF stands apart from the other state universities that have begun bargaining with the union.

"The University of Florida has always maintained that it is different from the other institutions," said Pam Bernard, vice president and general counsel for UF.

UF is a member of the Association of American Universities, an elite group of research-intensive institutions that includes Yale, Harvard and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Bernard said AAU schools traditionally have stronger systems of faculty governance, which may limit the need for a union.

The faculty union had a relationship with every state university's administration from 1976 until 2001, when the statewide higher-education governing body, the Board of Regents, was dissolved and the universities' individual boards of trustees were established.

With this restructuring of the State University System, most campuses stopped honoring the union's contract, as it had dealt with the Board of Regents.

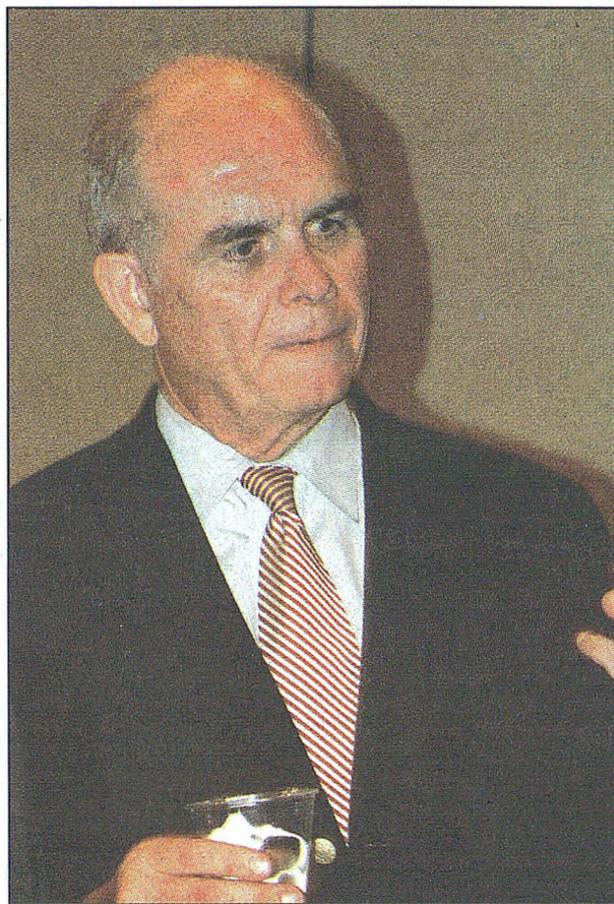

In Fall 2002, 72 percent of the faculty in UF's nonprofessional colleges signed union cards in

Machen addresses UF's condition

By STEPHANIE GARRY

UF President Bernie Machen made it clear his fight against binge drinking has just begun in his annual State of the University Address on Thursday.

Andrea Morales / Alligator Staff

UF President Bernie Machen mingles in the Reitz Union Grand Ballroom on Thursday afternoon after his State of the University address.

While some critics have laughed off his attempts to moderate drinking, Machen won't back down, he told a crowd of about 200.

"This is a secret that we don't like to talk about, but it is a deadly problem," he said.

But the president has other concerns for the student body besides drinking.

As admissions figures show, fewer black freshmen have registered at UF this year. Machen announced a scholarship program he said hopefully would bring more minority and underprivileged students to the state's flagship institution.

The Florida Opportunity Scholarships will be aimed at students who have economic need and are the first in their families to attend a four-year college or university, he said.

The program will receive $1 million in startup money from the university. Machen said he expects to raise private funds to support it as well, adding in a later interview that he predicts huge alumni interest in donating to the scholarships.

"I think that'll get us started," he said.

This year's freshman class includes about 60 fewer black students than last year, a drop of about 8 percent. That's about the same drop that other universities around the state have experienced.

Many underprivileged students come from families that traditionally fear going into debt, Machen said.

Though many of the targeted students would qualify for the Bright Futures Scholarship, that award only covers tuition. The Opportunity Scholarships would help pay the estimated $12,000 a year students spend for living costs to keep them from going into debt, he said.

That way, students who otherwise would attend college while living at home to cut costs can afford to come to Gainesville for a top-notch education.

"We want them at the University of Florida," Machen said.

The president said he didn't know how many students might take advantage of the program or how much it would cost. But money is not a factor, he said.

"I hope it costs a lot," he said, because that means students would be taking advantage of it.

The Student Financial Aid Office will handle the program, which Machen said he hopes to promote to students as young as high school sophomores to make sure they include UF in their college search.

Group to become sorority

The Lady Monarchs will "emerge" as Theta Nu Xi Multicultural Sorority, Inc. with a step show on Turlington Plaza this Saturday.

The founding members of the new sorority will be introduced at 7 p.m. with a step and dance show, followed by an afterparty which will take place at Arkadia Nightclub with Iota Phi Theta Fraternity, according to a press release.

As an organization the Lady Monarchs focused on HIV/AIDS awareness, training members as counselors and conducting information sessions in high-risk areas in Gainesville with a partnership through the Alachua County Health Department.

Founded in April 1997 at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, Theta Nu Xi is the country's fastest-growing historically multicultural sorority. The UF chapter will join two others in

No towels yet at rec centers

■ THE GATOR PARTY PROMISED IN THE SPRING TO BUY TOWELS FOR STUDENT USE.

By DAVID COHEN
Alligator Writer
dcohen@alligator.org

A Student Government promise to provide towels at the Southwest Recreation Center is in limbo after discovering the future closing of Campus Laundry Services.

The Gator Party campaigned in the Spring 2005 election to spend about $25,000 of student-funded money from SG reserves for 15,000 towels at Southwest Recreation Center.

The plan was for students to be able to use the provided towels at the gym and have them washed on campus.

But the plan has yet to materialize.

"It's going to be done," Student Body President Joe Goldberg said. "We made a promise to students. It's not a hard thing. We're going to deliver on our promise."

Students are required to bring towels to use the strength and cardio rooms at UF gyms.

Goldberg said many students have stopped him on campus and asked him, "Where's my towel?"

An unexpected roadblock Goldberg said he ran into this summer was learning that Campus Laundry Services, located near the Physical Plant, is about to close. Therefore, Goldberg and his team need to find a new place to wash all the promised towels.

He said that while he was campaigning, he was not up to date on plans to cancel the laundry service.

"I was running for office at the time," he said. "It's not a big deal."

A facility manager at the center, Valerie Wideroff, said the estimated $25,000 towel cost is unwarranted.

"I really don't think there is a need," she said. "I haven't seen that many complaints."

But Director of Recreational Sports David Bowles said it could be helpful to provide towels because there is the occasional student who forgets to bring one.

Goldberg said there are up to 60,000 visits to the cardio and strength rooms in peak months.

Director of UF Business Services Jim Morgan said news of the closing came in December because Shands at UF decided to expand.

If Laundry Services wanted to stay alive, it would cost $5 million to expand the building - a growth that was "not economically feasible," Morgan said.

Morgan said UF is in the process of drafting a lucrative contract with a replacement laundry service in Clermont.

"We'll still arrange for options," he said, of allowing SG to enter the spin. "That shouldn't be an issue at all."

Goldberg said a bill about the towels would be presented to the Student Senate on Sept. 6.

O'Dome convention caps UF's hectic first week

■ UP TO 7,500 JEHOVAH'S WITNESSES WILL BE ON CAMPUS THIS WEEKEND.

By NEIL HUGHES
Alligator Staff Writer
nhughes@alligator.org

The second Jehovah's Witnesses convention to hit Gainesville in less than two months may cause problems for an already jam-packed campus today and Saturday.

As many as 7,500 are expected to attend this weekend's convention at the Stephen C. O'Connell Center, which happens to coincide with the first week of Fall classes.

Lionel Dubay, the building's director, said the event is expected to cause major traffic concerns, as the O'Connell Center has never hosted an event this large during an afternoon in the first week of classes.

Friday is anticipated to be the most problematic because the event runs during the same hours many students have classes — from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. — and as many as 6,500 visitors will be on campus, with 1,000 more coming Saturday.

Dubay stressed that the financial benefit to the community outweighs the hassle drivers may experience for the weekend.

"We had one of these conventions back over the July 4 weekend which generated $2.2 million to the local community," he said.

The O'Connell Center is expected to host similar events for the Jehovah's Witnesses for the next four years, with three or four conventions each summer, which, according to Dubay, could generate between $40 and $50 million for the area.

"I'm confident that people will understand that this does have a real positive financial impact to the local community, which, in turn, is positive to the university," he said. "There's a lot of part-time positions out there where students are working, and those dollars are being generated out there."

Dubay said future conventions will not be held during the first week of Fall classes.

"The impact obviously would not be as critical as it is right now," he said.

A number of buses, including eight from the Gainesville Regional Transit System, are being commissioned to attempt to keep auto traffic to a minimum during the worshippers' stay in Gainesville.

In addition, the Gainesville and University Police departments will patrol "critical intersections" on campus, Dubay said.

Dubay advised students to steer clear of the major roads and intersections around the O'Connell Center to avoid traffic — specifically, Gale Lemerand Drive, Stadium Road and University Avenue.

UF laundry product speeds drying

By CRYSTAL HENRY
Alligator Writer
chenry@alligator.org

As Gainesville Regional Utilities awaits approval from the City Commission to raise electric, water and wastewater rates in October, UF researchers have developed a product that could help abate the rising costs.

UF Center for Surface Science and Engineering Director Dinesh Shah and chemical engineering doctoral student Daniel Carter formulated a compound that, when added to a load of laundry, makes clothing shed 20 percent more water during the spin cycle, according to a university press release.

"We feel it's very cost-effective research and convenient for consumers."

Dinesh Shah

UF Center for Surface Science and Engineering director

Since the clothes take less time to dry, households will use less electricity.

"We feel it's very cost-effective research and convenient for consumers," Shah said.

The U.S. Department of Energy's Web site states that if a dryer is used for one hour each day, homeowners spend from $657 to $1,825 each year on the electricity for the dryer alone, making it one of the highest-draining appliances in the home.

After experimenting first with a centrifuge, then a real washer and dryer, the researchers found that five parts of a common detergent and one part fabric softener added before the spin cycle forced the clothes to shed 20 percent more water than untreated clothes.

Carter and Shah said consumers could reduce drying time by more than 10 percent, saving a total of $266 million annually, with the water-shedding compound.

The key to the research, Carter said in the release, was that the spaces between the fibers in fabrics make small tubes that hold in water with surface tension.

It's the same reason a submerged straw will hold water when covered at the other end and lifted out of the surface.

By reducing surface tension, the fabric retained less wa-

After his friend received a $74.50 ticket from the University Police Department for lacking head and taillights on a bicycle, Vermeer avoided potential headache by buying some for his bike.

"I had about three friends who received tickets last semester," Vermeer said. "It's the little things that [UPD] catch you on."

Vermeer, a third-year electrical engineering major, was one of about 500 students who attended the UPD open house on Thursday.

Editorial

We here at the Department of Darts & Laurels are proud of our newspaper status.

After all, we get to insult and ridicule those members of society who displease us. And occasionally, when we get a burst of alcohol-induced goodwill, we raise a good deed up on a shiny pedestal.

But the first week of classes has coincided with a spike in the idiocy of our mother hen: the media.

Yup, she's been plopping out bad eggs all over our nice, clean kitchen floor. OK, maybe it wasn't clean, but at least we Febreezed it once in a while.

So burn all those new textbooks, light up a fat cigar and tap that wondrous keg of cynicism as we head into this week's edition of...

Darts & Laurels

We'll start off by asking our own sniper to take aim and shoot a just-cut-out-your-tongue-and-settle-down DART at Rev. Pat Robertson for telling his followers that the United States should kill Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez because "it's a whole lot cheaper than starting a war."

We think the reverend needs to check his phone connection to the Almighty, or soon he might find himself at the wrong end of the immortal spectrum.

But our real beef is with the media for even reporting this drivel. Do we want to know when every crazy TV preacher weighs in on international issues? God no. Pun intended.

Instead of focusing on how the government will really deal with the problem, newspapers have published countless stories on one uninformed and off-handed comment. And we're a little worried that the government even bothered to issue a response against Robertson's idea.

Did the leaders of the free world actually consider taking advice from a man who organizes prayer sessions to solve political problems? If so, we at the Department of Darts & Laurels suddenly are feeling very unsafe.

But Robertson isn't the only nut job who's been in the news this week. We also throw a somebody-needs-a-nap-and-an-injection-of-self-esteem DART to the woman who filed a complaint with the state of New York against her doctor because he hurt her feelings. Dr. Jerry Bennett told the anonymous woman she was obese and needed to lose weight before it killed her.

Whoa. Are people now using the government as their personal therapist? We hate to think of our tax dollars being used to soothe a typically obese American. That is, if we actually paid our taxes.

Which brings us to our next victim. We softly toss a drop-the-fries-and-eat-just-one-peanut DART to Americans. A recent report showed that almost every state's obese population has increased since last year. Nationwide, obesity plagues 22.7 percent of Americans.

Stop. Eating. We mean it.

In the spirit of our newfound diet, we spill a more-sugar-doesn't-mean-we'll-be-awake-during-class DART on to UF administration for signing a contract with Pepsi and limiting most of the vending machines to 20-ounce plastic bottles. Not only is Pepsi evil, now we have to pay a whole dollar for our beverages, instead of the 60-cent price tag on 12-ounce cans.

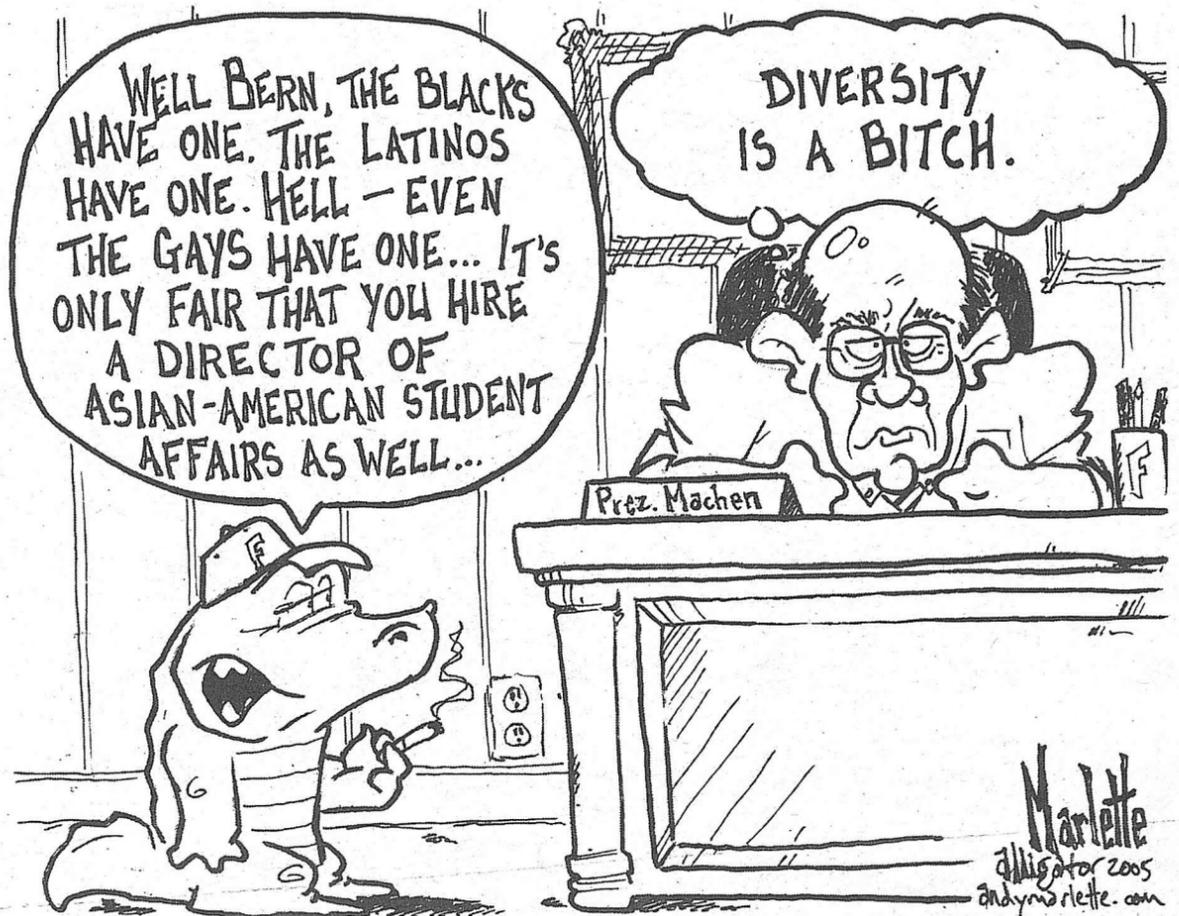

We could have used that dollar to buy something from the McDonald's value menu.

Lastly, just so you don't think the Department of Darts & Laurels is made up of cranky old men, we drape a thank-god-you-finally-figured-out-how-to-use-computers LAUREL on the GatorMail staff for allowing students to forward a copy of their UF-account e-mails to other e-mail providers. Originally, administrators insisted students would have to completely stop forwarding the e-mails because of problems with Yahoo! and AOL. Now, they only have to make sure a copy is saved in the original account.

We were really dreading the extra exercise we'd have to exert if forced to check another e-mail account.

Brand-new UF slogan needs update

After years of sacrifice and hard work, UF is well on its way to achieving the goal we've all been pushing so hard for: becoming one of the Top 10 public research institutions in the country.

Lately, however, it's become clear that one aspect of the university isn't living up to the high standards required to reach that position.

Call me crazy, but I think our official slogan has become dated.

Don't get me wrong: There's no doubt that "the foundation for The Gator Nation" has served us well.

During the motto's three-day tour of duty, UF's status as ground zero for everything related to Gator sports has been proven beyond all doubt.

Similarly, everyone who previously believed that Bud Light, in fact, was the foundation for The Gator Nation, has been reminded duly that the university itself holds that honor.

In our quest for U.S. News & World Report glory, however, I don't think the slogan gets across the message we need to send.

The hard fact is public university ranking experts these days don't care as much as they once did about a university's ranking in the hierarchy of The Gator Nation.

I think it's telling that not a single Top 10 public university makes any reference whatsoever to The Gator Nation in its slogan.

It's time we finally found the phrase that truly can sum up everything you need to know about our university in 15 words or fewer.

But this time we won't be able to hire another marketing firm to come up with a new slogan for us, as the $85,000 we spent last time used up our budget allowance for MBEs (miscellaneous branding expenses).

The views expressed here are not necessarily those of the Alligator.

Matt Sanchez
Pure Foppery
msanchez@alligator.org

One option would be to recycle one of the many inspirational phrases that have occupied the position of chief UF motto before.

After only a six-month run, "An unparalleled university experience that lasts a lifetime" still has some fight left in it — except that everyone now is hip to the fact it doesn't actually mean anything.

Or there's always the old standby "Gator football... you pretty much have to."

But this seems redundant with morale already riding so high after the ascension of Pope Urban Meyer to UF's highest appointed office.

So maybe the old slogans were retired for a reason. It's hard to imagine a revival of the original, from back in the days when UF and FSU were the only choices: "UF: Because you don't want to go to the all-girls school, do you?"

Unfortunately, the administration likely won't be much help either.

After spending a couple of years on the job, the best President Machen has been able to come up with has been the probably still-too-optimistic "UF: Definitely no booze here."

So, where can we find a slogan that represents both the essence of UF now and the high aspirations we have for the future?

Maybe we should try being honest — play to our strengths while not turning people off by sugarcoating things.

In that vein, my personal recommendation is "UF: Cheap and good. Plus you get to beat on the 'Noles."

After all, that's pretty much the answer the average UF student would give for why they came here anyway.

Intelligent Design not a true science

In Eric Wang's well-written (but somewhat short-sighted) column, he cries foul that, "...there is not a marketplace of competing ideas in our public schools today, but only a monopoly of evolutionary theory." Today is the result of more than 2,000 years of competing ideas.

Aristotle and Plato argued that living things showed "final causes" in their apparent design. Empedocles argued that change could occur in organisms to allow adaptation, giving the appearance of design. Darwin argued 150 years ago the same.

The crux of the issue is whether or not a "Designer" moves us toward a presumed goal.

The error in Wang's thinking is that science can reject or accept this philosophical notion.

How? It can, and does, subject the premise of change and adaptation, both of which are natural phenomena, to its method of inquiry. Science is by definition methodological naturalism, and as such tests and questions only physical and natural phenomena. Science is limited in scope (and "on purpose") to questions of natural philosophy, not whether a "Designer" had it all in mind. It ignores the question because science is constrained to natural explanation of natural phenomena.

So the question remains — can science empirically detect God's fingerprints? Is it possible to know scientifically, rather than "by faith," if we were "designed"?

S. Daniel Morgan
Speaking Out

What is the natural evidence of supernatural creation? How does one distinguish ignorance of natural phenomena from knowledge of supernatural phenomena?

For hundreds of years, gaps in knowledge were filled with "God did it." Now they are being filled with "Designer did it." Has science proven either one philosophically wrong, or simply shown us that the mechanism by which posited Designers work is inextricable from the natural universe, and that the universe and its natural laws are all that science can and will comment upon?

If we want to teach science, we teach natural mechanisms and processes, without invoking supernatural causes. If we want to teach anything else, Wang and others had better realize we may no longer honestly call it "science," but must admit we have moved into metaphysics, philosophy, or theology. Is there a "monopoly" of thought, or is science the one way of rationally, and objectively, viewing our natural universe?

Why did the Kansas board consider redefining science itself into one of these three categories? Is it the job of the state, or of families, to lay the foundation for those?

Letters to the Editor

Israel disengagement motives not peace-oriented

While Israeli settlers have faced "boxes, bubble wrap and masking tape" in their disengagement from the Gaza Strip, the Palestinians have faced barbed wire, bullets and barricades over three decades of occupation.

Since the blood of innocent civilians on both sides began to flow on the streets in the latest conflict, a vast majority of citizens within Israel favored withdrawal to assist in the peace process. To assume that Ariel Sharon shares these same intentions would be naive. The leader's motives for withdrawal are to save the resources that were spent on settlers who make up 0.7 percent of the population of the Gaza Strip but owned around 33 percent of the land.

Instead of exhausting funds on a futile cause, Sharon has decided to re-allocate these resources to expand settlements within the West Bank. Based on recent developments, the disengagement shouldn't be perceived as a step toward peace, but rather a perfunctory measure to conserve funds and to satisfy the international community.

The essential matter at hand, and a major obstacle to peace, is the illegal presence of 380,000 settlers in the West Bank. Not until Israel gets serious about discussing withdrawal from the West Bank will the Palestinian Authority get serious about bringing security to the state of Israel.

favor of union representation.

This majority was higher than any other state school's, union member Candi Churchill said.

The same year, most Florida universities voluntarily recognized the union as a bargaining group. When FSU and UWF refused to, the union took them to court. That case ultimately resulted in July's Supreme Court ruling.

Associate Provost Joe Glover said the university is waiting for a state labor agency, the Florida Public Employees Relations Commission, to interpret the court ruling.

In a recommendation issued July 14, two weeks before the ruling, the commission stated it would validate the union's old contract if it determines there is "substantial continuity in the employ-

UF Administration ing enterprise."

In the past, university officials have maintained that the Board of Regents' dissolution caused a break in continuity, and therefore UFF did not need to be recognized.

The court ruling makes the precedent-setting statement that FSU and UWF are "successor employers" to the Board of Education, which temporarily replaced the Board of Regents. Union advocates say UF's legal situation is the same as that of FSU and UWF, so the decision should apply to UF as well.

Todd Reynolds, who works closely with UFF as president of Graduate Assistants United, said UF's active resistance of the union is "just wasting money."

"It's basically costing the University of Florida millions of dollars when they could just be recognizing the union," he said, adding that students should be frustrated with UF for throwing away their money.

Reynolds' union was recognized by the administration, as were the University Police and custodial workers' unions, after their constituent employees' votes were taken.

Black student enrollment declines

Patricia Telles-Irvin, vice president for student affairs, said first-generation college students add a new perspective to a student body. Telles-Irvin, a first-generation college student herself, knows this from experience.

Telles-Irvin, who is Mexican American, said UF is likely to see more Hispanic-student enrollment as the population grows in the state and UF builds an alumni network in places like Miami.

This year's freshman class has 130 to 150 more Hispanic students than last year, a jump of about 17 percent.

Aside from the drinking problems and diversity needs of the student body, Machen admitted the university may have more work to do in the area of faculty resources.

Though UF came out No. 50 in the U.S. News & World Report's best-college ratings this year, the university ranks 120th in faculty resources such as compensation.

"There's no mystery as to what the problem is," Machen said.

Though UF failed to persuade legislators this year to hand over control of tuition — one of UF's main revenue gen-

"The University of Florida probably had to make a decision as to who they're going to fight the most," he said.

Reynolds added that the administration was engaged in a "power play."

"They want to control curriculum, academic freedom," he said.

In an e-mail, UF President Bernie Machen responded that the GAU president "doesn't know what she/he is talking about."

The bargaining unit, the group represented by the union, did not include the professional colleges of law and medicine and the Institute of Food and Agriculture Sciences in the original contract.

The university has said it wants its entire faculty to vote.

Vice President for Human Resources Kyle Cavanaugh said those colleges should be included if the union is to be recognized again.

"Our interest is to have the faculty have the opportunity to have a voice, not just a subset," Cavanaugh said. "Our faculty has not had a choice since the '70s as to whether or not they will be represented."

Former UFF President Kim Emery said nonmember faculty have always had the opportunity to be represented and that they had input in their exclusion.

"I don't think it's my place or the Board of Trustees' place or the Legislature's place to tell them that they have to be in the unit," she said.

The commission also addressed the question of the bargaining unit's composition.

The UF Board of Trustees "also claims that the bargaining unit must be defined differently from the current bargaining unit," the recommendation's author, Sharon Zahner, said. "I reject this argument."

The commission is expected to issue a final order regarding the university's obligations to the faculty union.

Emery said "the odds are extremely unlikely" the commission will ask for the bargaining unit to be changed.

erators — Machen said his fund-raising campaign has gone well.

The Faculty Challenge, the fund-raising campaign to support professors that he announced at last year's State of the University Address, has raised $42 million in its first year.

Machen said he will break that down into $16 million to support faculty, $7 million to graduate students and $19 million to research and programs. But the challenge will continue until it meets his goal of $150 million, he said, and he plans to hire more fundraising staff to do it.

The total UF endowment reached $835 million by July 1.

Kim Tanzer, the president of the Faculty Senate, said another way to raise money is through tuition. UF receives about half the tuition money that the University of Michigan rakes in.

But it's not so easy to get the Florida Legislature to loosen its stranglehold on tuition caps. The more students contribute to universities' revenue, the less they rely on taxpayer money, she said. But so far it seems legislators have been reluctant to cede ground on either.

"They want everything for nothing," Tanzer said.

A sign warns motorists driving on Southwest Second Avenue of construction of turning lanes coming from Southwest 34th Street on Thursday afternoon. Ahead, a police officer responds to a minor two-car accident while drivers waiting in traffic look on.

timated to take more than a year, FDOT spokesman Chip Skinner said.

The construction will be done in sections, and FDOT plans to create a temporary asphalt lane in order to keep traffic backups to a minimum. The first segment of the project will take place on Second Avenue from Southwest 28th Street to just east of 34th Street.

"We're going to maintain a safe roadway and create the least amount of inconvenience to traffic as possible," Skinner said.

Bicyclists and pedestrians will face the greatest disturbances, he said, since the temporary vehicle lane will replace the existing sidewalk.

They will be detoured to University Avenue via 34th Street and can re-enter Second Avenue through Southwest 28th Street.

Residents living along Second Avenue may also be inconvenienced by the construction.

"Most of the work will be done in the daytime, but at night we will come in to do repaving just because traffic will be lighter,"

Skinner said. "We are going to try our hardest to keep the noise to a minimum."

In order to eliminate the problem of vehicles cutting across several lanes of traffic, Skinner said the plan includes the creation of a median on the west end of Second Avenue from Newberry Road to 34th Street and a narrower divide from 34th Street to the last driveway of Westgate Plaza.

The project also includes the construction of a park called the Western Gateway to Gainesville in the triangle of land on the west end of Second Avenue near the fire station.

"It's a beautification project for the county and the city. It'll be a nice park for residents in the area to go," Skinner said.

FDOT included UF in the planning to ensure the phases of construction will not impede UF home football traffic.

The only part of the project that will completely close down lanes is the reconstruction of Hogtown Bridge, which will begin after the last UF home football game Oct. 26.

Regional Transit System lines 5, 43, 34 and the on-campus Family Housing route also have been detoured.

For maps of the redirected routes, visit www.go-rts.com.

ADMINISTRATION

New survey shows faculty opinion of UF improving

By ASHLEY JONES
Alligator Contributing Writer

The UF faculty's second review of its superiors shows that workplace attitudes have improved in 11 out of 15 areas.

The surveys, which allowed faculty to evaluate the performance of the UF administration, were posted on the Web sites of the president and the human resources department. Responses will be returned this week to individual departments, UF President Bernie Machen said in his State of the University Address on Thursday.

The survey shows that confidence in the administration increased significantly, Machen said.

"The message from the campus is that we are heading in the right direction," he wrote in a letter addressed to his colleagues.

Out of the 3,933 surveys issued, 1,784 were returned, a 45 percent return rate and a 2 percent increase from last year.

"The results are encouraging, but there's still room for improvement," Machen wrote in the letter.

Machen

Since the survey was done before the new vice president for human resources was hired and before a salary plan was announced, "I didn't really expect much improvement," Machen said in his Thursday speech to the Faculty Senate.

Kyle Cavanaugh, UF vice president for human resources, said communication with faculty and staff is his biggest priority.

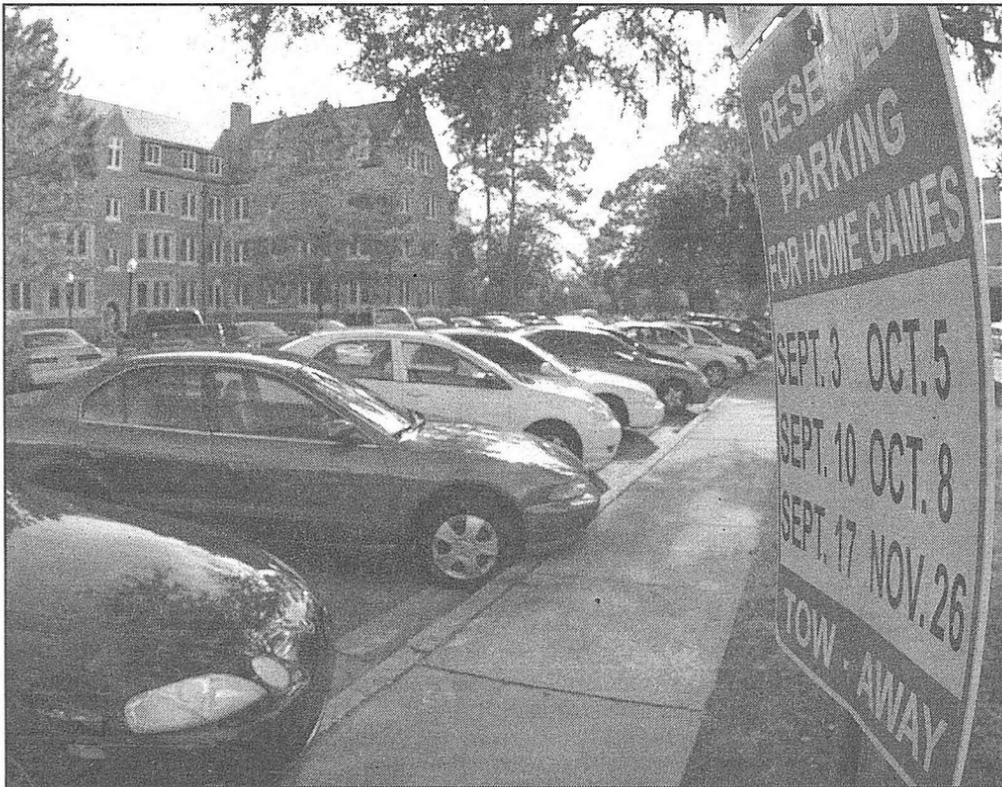

In his first 90 days in office, the human resources Web site was completely redesigned, using inspiration from peer institutions, the private sector and data on how people use Internet sites, he said. Cavanaugh also plans to develop contacts in all of UF's departments to bring together monthly and discuss human resources issues.

Cavanaugh also hopes to see a "serious discussion" about same-sex partner benefits this semester. He implemented partner benefits at Rice University, which became the first university in the state of Texas to offer them. He said he thinks UF would be the first state university in Florida to offer partner benefits if the plan goes through.

Across the board, the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences rated the administration the lowest in improvement, stating an 11 percent decrease in satisfaction of its evaluation of benefits. The college also rated the administration poorly in the areas of communication, university image and leadership.

The College of Nursing's staff rated the administration with higher marks than the previous year in areas of communication, leadership and faculty-administrative relations.

According to the survey, the main concerns for the entire faculty are improving resources and efficiency, leadership, and for 36 percent of faculty members, compensation and benefits.

Ingram considers returning to basketball team

By BRYAN APP
Alligator Staff Writer
bapp@alligator.org

Just when his basketball days seemed to be in the rearview, freshman quarterback Cornelius Ingram could grace the hardwood again – perhaps sooner than later.

After opting to concentrate solely on football during the summer, Ingram said he has contemplated a return to a basketball team with desperate needs at his former guard position.

Following the departures of guards Matt Walsh and Anthony Roberson, top incoming recruit Derwin Kitchen was denied entry to the university after not attaining an acceptable score on the FCAT, limiting the Gators to a pair of freshmen as reserves at guard.

"I can't lie. I have [thought about returning]," Ingram said. "I didn't see the paper or anything, but [forward] Chris [Richard] told me about the situation. Before it happened, he told me what was going on."

Ingram

A possible return to the court could come at the end of football season, but Ingram didn't make it clear if he would consider an earlier comeback.

"Maybe [I'd return] after the season, but who knows," Ingram said. "I might be a little behind. If I can get out there and pick it up, I'd definitely be willing to do it."

Football coach Urban Meyer considers freshman Josh Portis and junior Gavin Dickey as top candidates to back up starting quarterback Chris Leak. Basketball coach Billy Donovan said he would welcome Ingram back in the future.

"More than likely, [Donovan] will give me an opportunity to get back out there," Ingram said. "So I'm going to try to get back out there."

For a team that has claimed at least a share of the last 14 Southeastern Conference championships, it might be a bit of a stretch to be playing the role of underdog.

For a team coming off a 28-5 season and ending with its earliest NCAA Tournament exit in over a decade, it might be difficult to find their way back to the top.

For a team that lost four highly-accomplished seniors, it might be difficult to replace their record-setting production.

Welcome to the 2005 edition of UF volleyball, a year full of both promise and potential problems.

"There were so many things about last year's team that I'm not sure those outside the program could appreciate," UF coach Mary Wise said. "What that group went through and the success they had, dealing not only with graduation but with injury. It was one tough year."

Two years ago, UF lost two All-Americans when Aury Cruz and Benavia Jenkins graduated. Now, the 2005 squad faces another big challenge with the loss of middle blockers Sherri Williams and Michelle Chatman.

While Wise feels sophomore Kisyia Killingsworth has the potential to be a great middle blocker, she admits that her team is very inexperienced at the position.

"I think the analogy would be starting the season where you've got an experienced sophomore quarterback," Wise said. "And you've got some really good wide receivers, but you have no idea who's going to be starting on the defensive line, and that's our issue right now." That sophomore quarterback would be 2004 SEC Freshman of

Gators give Meyer trouble-free summer

The Gators have the right to remain obedient. Every beer they drink can and will be used against them.

The Gators have the right to arrest-free entertainment.

If they cannot afford such entertainment, the Pit and/or expulsion will be provided for them free of charge.

No, these aren't the Miranda rights with which some of us may already be familiar. They are the Urbana Rights, and they have already been successfully enforced for an entire summer.

Big deal, you say?

Let's backtrack to last summer when the football team was succeeding in its attempt to lure Cops TV headquarters to University Avenue.

There were kegs, drinking and club arguments about who had the loveliest tattoos. When it was all said and done, there were a number of sworn complaints, a handful of arrests and one not-so-responsible coach. Here's what everybody's favorite ex, Ron Zook, had to say about last summer's behavior at the 2004 SEC Media Days: "This is the time of year when we're not able to be around, and you always worry about what's going to happen."

Here's what safety Jarvis Herring, one of last summer's police-blotter casualties, has already said this summer: "The guys are actually scared now, scared to make a mistake."

Here's what happened to Herring and fellow arrestee Channing Crowder after the 2004 summer incidents: they were named defensive captains in UF's SEC opener against Tennessee.

Here's what happened to me after I publicly critiqued Zook's decision to do this: I nearly entered the Witness Protection Program as Crowder began staring me down after practices. At the opening of Friday Night Lights, our coincidental meeting in the theatre almost resulted in my own premiere in Friday Night Lights Out. Then, after a later practice, he but-

Fresh team roster brainstorms new plan of attack

By NICK ZACCARDI
Alligator Writer

A top-heavy and senior-laden offensive attack in 2004 has given way to serious questions concerning the UF offense in 2005.

How does the No. 13 UF soccer team replace Southeastern Conference Player of the Year Stephanie Freeman and assist leader Ashley Kellgren?

Can former defender Melanie Booth make the transition across the midline?

Will Jasmine Johnson respond well to increased playing time coming back from injury?

Who, out of an offensive-minded freshman class, will step up?

Fans will receive answers starting at tonight's 7 p.m. home opener against Drake.

Quantity up front will replace the quality of Freeman and Kellgren. The UF forward arsenal runs six deep, and Coach Becky Burleigh will start the season scouring her depth chart to keep fresh players on the field.

"We're really excited about some of the people who are going to have an opportunity to step up now that those people are gone," Burleigh said. "So, I think it's just a matter of our team figuring out who those go-to people are. We don't think it's going to be just one person. That will make us a lot more dangerous."

Only two returning starters found the net more than twice in 2004 - Keleigh Hudson (five goals) and Cherry Pickman (four goals).

The addition of Booth, a two-time SoccerBuzz.com All-America defender, forms a trio of veteran starters amidst the six-player rotation at forward.

"She's going to play a little bit of both [forward and defender]," Burleigh said. "She may start in the back and then play up top. You'd just like her to play 90 minutes because she's capable of playing 90 minutes. She's fit enough."

Being fit was a problem for midfielder Jasmine Johnson in 2004. An ACL tear in her right knee had hindered the sophomore since high school.

Johnson underwent surgery to repair the knee in the offseason and tested her movement in an admittedly tough preseason.

"It's a lot more stable," Johnson said. "I feel like I have a lot more durability in it than I had before."

After coming off the bench exclusively last season, Johnson's improved stamina could lead to more playing time.

"Her fitness level is way higher," Burleigh said. "That was obviously an issue last year. She couldn't really push it because it would wear on her knee. Now, she can push herself harder, and I think it's shown big dividends. When she's in there, the quality will be better."

Battling Johnson and others for playing time at midfield and forward is a host of newcomers with an attacking style.

With six out of eight freshmen positioned at either midfield or forward, UF has restocked with a bevy of options.

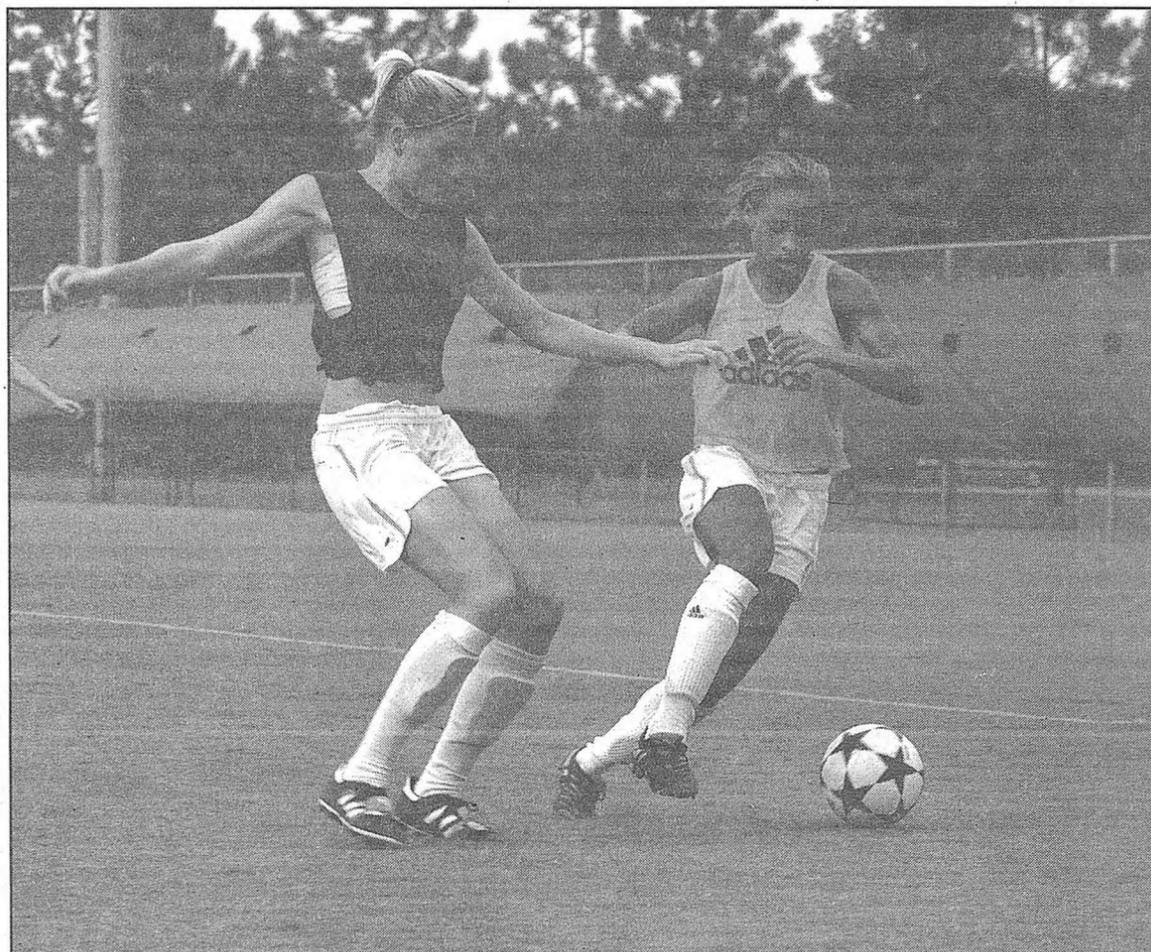

"This is the best freshman class that I have seen since I've been here. I think that there will be a number of people who contribute right away."

Cherry Pickman
UF senior

"This is the best freshman class that I have seen since I've been here," Pickman said. "I think that there will be a number of people who contribute right away."

Megan Kerns, an All-Tournament player at the preseason Westfield Cup, Ameera Abdullah and Katie Green have all already impressed Burleigh.

"There are several freshmen who are going to play a lot," Burleigh said. "That's pretty outstanding for Megan to get All-Tournament. Ameera Abdullah has shown a lot of versatility playing the midfield and up front and Katie Green has a tremendous amount of breakaway speed."

Three vie for goalkeeper position, playing time

■ FIFTH-YEAR SENIOR
PUSHED FOR SPOT IN STARTING COMPETITION

SPENCER DAVIS-VANNESS
Alligator Writer
sdvanness@alligator.org

Jen Gardner may be a self-described "Super Senior" on the UF women's soccer team, but that doesn't mean she'll be able to take playing time in her fifth year as a given.

Gardner, along with redshirt junior Brittini Goodwin and freshman Katie Davis are locked in a three-way race for goalkeeper so close that even the veteran can't name a leader.

"There are three of us currently training for goalkeeper, and the coaches haven't let us into the know on who will be starting,"

Gardner said.

"We're pretty much splitting time right now, and [tonight's match against Drake] will pretty much be the first indication of who they're leaning toward."

In 2004, Gardner recorded 15 starts and finished second among Southeastern Conference goalkeepers with seven shutouts, while Goodwin started eight matches, including the first six of the season.

Despite her youth and inexperience, Davis has already worked her way into the picture with strong play in exhibition matches this year.

Junior Melanie Booth, who has seen time on offense as well as defense throughout her career at UF, said that she's confident in whoever is eventually picked for the job.

"From practice you can see that everybody's in there. They're working hard."

Melanie Booth
UF junior

"I really have confidence in all three of our keepers," Booth said. "It's proof from our [exhibition matches] on the weekend. They all came out. They all played equal time. They all demonstrated really good confidence throughout the game."

"Right now I'm not sure who they're going to put in the net on Friday because it's just such a tight fight for the position, but I know personally that I'm confident in all three of them."

UF coach Becky Burleigh was equally undecided on the matter.

"We haven't made any decisions yet, the job is still up for grabs until the end of the week," she said on Tuesday.

"I'd say Jen and Brittini have an edge right now just because Katie is still kind of learning everything," Burleigh said. "But Katie's going to push them. She made some good saves in the exhibition matches and she's come along quicker than I expected her to."

However the decision at goalkeeper turns out, the remainder of the Gators defensive squad must be ready to protect the net as well.

UF's roster includes 14 defensive players, nine of whom are upperclassmen. But that's offset by the fact that many of them have seen little playing time in their careers.

It's possible that having spent years in the program may prove just as important as real-game experience to a group of players whose success depends heavily on chemistry and teamwork.

"Defense is a position that you have to know your teammates really well, and so we're finally getting into the groove of being familiar with each other and starting to click," Booth said.

Although Booth has spent much of the preseason developing on offense, she believes that the defense is beginning to gel nicely.

"From practice you can see that everybody's in there. They're working hard," she said. "They're tackling hard. We'll have to see how it pans out [in Friday's match against Drake]."

"As far as I've seen, we're starting to work together."

UF VOLLEYBALL

Volleyball star takes leading role

By BRYAN JONES
Alligator Writer

This summer brought the early departures of key UF athletes such as Matt Walsh, Anthony Roberson, Channing Crowder and Ciattrick Fason, but arguably UF's most dominant team-sport athlete still will be donning orange and blue this season.

Already a two time All-American volleyball player, Jane Collymore will enter her senior season as the key component to the Gators' offensive attack — an attack that is ranked eighth in the nation — and will look to win its 15th-consecutive Southeastern Conference title.

Of course, when you are as physically gifted as Collymore, the pressure seems a little less daunting.

"Athletically, Jane is in the same group as some of the elite athletes we've had come through this program," Coach Mary Wise said. "She's a special talent because of her jump and foot-speed."

Collymore capitalized on that athleticism last season en route to SEC Player of the Year honors and All-American status. Her 604 kills and 707 points last season both rank second in school history.

While she will look to build upon those numbers, it is her leadership skills that she has truly set out to improve this year.

"I think that when I first realized I would have to take on a leadership role, I would always kind of see myself as a lead-by-example type of leader," Collymore said.

Collymore

"But I have been working on becoming more vocal, because although that's not something that is as natural for me, I think it is important to the team for me to be more vocal."

Leadership aside, it is Collymore's ability to get high above the net that has been driving opposing teams crazy.

"She jumps so high, you can throw a ball up to the ceiling and she'd go up and get it," sophomore setter Angie McGinnis said. "She just hits so much higher than most people do."

Collymore attributes most of her success to her coaches and to her commitment to the game.

"Coming out of high school, I didn't have a lot of experience under my belt at all, but I knew that I had a lot of potential, and I just wanted to sit back and absorb as much as I could," Collymore said. "I knew I always wanted to do great things in the sport and I had potential. It was just a matter of getting the right experience and the right instruction."

This summer, Collymore was selected as the starting outside hitter for the U.S. Women's National Team in the Pan American Cup, and she aspires to make the U.S. Olympic team once her playing days at UF come to an end.

For now, Collymore will direct her focus on the upcoming season, in which the Gators will look to recover from a hard-fought loss to eventual National Champion Stanford in last year's NCAA tournament.

For a perennial powerhouse like the Gators, the goal is always to win a national title, and Collymore may be the key to achieving that goal.

"Jane has the physical ability to dominate a match," Wise said. "She is the type of player that can take a team to the next level. To be successful, you have to have a player like that."

tered me with an F-bomb when I tried to interview a fellow linebacker.

Now, less than one year later, Herring and Co. appear to be smarter and wittier, while Crowder and fellow Dolphin Ricky Williams are, well, let's not speculate.

Point is, this summer's lack of news is good news for Meyer. And it's no coincidence. Just call it Urbine intervention.

As for the remainder of the SEC?

Gainesville's Golden Boy Steve Spurrier has grimaced as 12 current or former 'Cocks have been arrested since November. Rumor has it that Tennessee's 13 charges or arrests since February 2004 induced Coach Philip Fulmer's first-ever documented weight drop. And Georgia's coach halted proceedings to change his name to Mark Right when four Bulldogs were arrested during the off-season.

Gone is keg-tosser Taurean Charles. In is team supervisor and part-time angel Brandon Siler. Out is a combustible Crowder. Welcome are the Urbana rights and the coaching staff to enforce them.

In various preseason polls, the Gators are ranked 11, 10, three and unpredictable. In arrest logs, the Gators are 0-262 (the number of arrests since Meyer first arrived in Gainesville 262 days ago) and nowhere to be found.

And so, despite the fact that UF must prove itself on the field, one thing is for certain.

There's isn't one ranking good enough for UF's un-arrested development.

Kerns greets friendly competition from hometown

By NICK ZACCARDI
Alligator Writer

No matter where the match is played, it's a home game for UF freshman Megan Kerns tonight.

Kerns, a native of Ames, Iowa, will make her James G. Pressly Stadium debut tonight against the Drake Bulldogs, who play their home games in Des Moines, a half-hour drive from Ames.

Not only does Kerns' mother work at Drake, but her former Olympic Development Program coach and former high school and club teammate suit up for the Bulldogs. Corbin Stone, who coached Kerns for two of her seven years in the ODP, will man the opposing sideline tonight.

"I'm not looking forward to it," Stone joked. "I know exactly what she can do to us. She can score goals against us."

Aside from a victory, impressing Stone would be an added bonus.

"He was a big mentor for me," Kerns said. "I just can't wait to show him everything that he's helped me do and all the progress that I've made here."

Kerns could also be staring down a former teammate. Drake freshman and fellow Ames High standout Sarah Eggert's trip to Gainesville hinges on an ACL injury.

"We were actually very good friends," Kerns said. "We've played together since we were U-10. She's played on all my club teams and all my ODP teams and my high school team. If she's there, I think it'll be fun getting to play against her again. I can't wait. I wish that she could play. I hope she can play." Kerns doesn't have much to prove Eggert, Stone or anybody else following her performance in a pair of exhibition games. The forward highlights an impressive group of incoming freshmen at UF and opened her collegiate career by recording an assist at last weekend's Westfield Cup in Akron, Ohio.

As the only freshman to tally a point in the Gators' two exhibition games, Kerns dished the ball to Cherry Pickman for the game-winning goal Saturday.

"It felt really good," Kerns said. "It also felt good that our team could finally start to score. It really helped loosen things up for everybody."

Kerns' play didn't go unnoticed. She joined junior midfielder Ananda Erickson as the only UF players to earn all-tournament honors.

"Going in, [the freshmen] were told that we'd all get equal playing time," Kerns said. "But I did not expect anything like all-tournament. That was the biggest surprise for me."

Kerns' ability to tally points was no surprise to Burleigh, who knows Kerns can produce near the net.

"Megan has been a scorer on every team she's played on," Burleigh said. "Sometimes scoring isn't a knack as much as it is a skill. I think she's just good around the goal. She's strong, can hold players off and she's got a great shot. She works hard."

She works just as hard off the field. A National Merit Scholar Finalist, Kerns ranked among the top .06 percent of students who took the high school test.

"That's really, really impressive," Burleigh said. "We talk all the time about balancing academics and athletics, and she's really a role model for that."

UF to face 11 NCAA tournament teams from '04, including rival Tennessee

the Year Angie McGinnis, and the wide receivers are outside hitters Marcie Hampton and 2004 SEC Player of the Year Jane Collymore. All three spent the summer playing overseas for U.S. national teams.

"Anytime you play volleyball, you get better," Hampton said. "So, I think spending a lot of time this summer in the gym really helped me just tune up and get a lot better."

Hampton and her team will need all the experience they gained over the summer as the Gators embark on another brutal schedule this year.

UF will face 11 NCAA Tournament teams from 2004, including Southern California, Texas A&M and Notre Dame in early September at a tournament in San Antonio.

"Come match time, I might ask myself, 'What the heck was I thinking?'" Wise said. "But we've always understood for success that you have to risk failure. The way you do that is by scheduling as tough opponents as you can."

One team that UF doesn't have the option of facing is Tennessee. Twice this season the Gators will face the Volunteers, who have emerged as a consistent rival in the SEC — something UF hasn't seen in some time.

Tennessee and UF sat just one spot apart in the preseason rankings at No. 9 and No. 8 respectively, marking the first time in SEC history that two teams have been ranked in the preseason coaches' top-10 poll.

Wise even indicates that the Knoxville squad, which won an SEC tournament title in Gainesville last year, might be the in-conference team to beat this season.

"Hats off to Tennessee, they beat us two out of three times," Wise said.

"They only graduated one player, so, on paper, I think you have to give Tennessee the nod because of those two things.

"I think it shapes up to be two, potentially three, great matches."

It's Just a Ball.

So, the other day I see two guys arguing over a ball. The one guy says, "It's just a soccer ball buddy." I thought the other guy was going to pass out! He says, "Just a ball??? Where I come from, this 'ball' divides households. This 'ball' pits brother vs. brother." So it got me thinkin' that I may want to check out what this "ball" is really all about.
