Ever wonder what happens to that $8.64-per-credit-hour Activity & Service Fee that trickles out of students' bank accounts every semester?

Last fiscal year, $14,325.66 of it went to Student Government memorabilia, including a stylized SG water bottle, a squeezable SG foam alligator and SG-packaged and monogrammed chocolates and mints.

This administration's challenger in next week's election, the Impact Party, is questioning these and other expenditures.

"They've become comfortable spending other people's money, and no one has told them 'no,'" said Impact Party President Thomas Jardon, who classified himself as a fiscal conservative.

But SG executives said the promotional material is important for enticing student interest. The items — all but the chocolates and key chains — are marked with the phone number, Web site and/or e-mail of the SG office, thereby informing students of how to get involved.

Other student-funded promotional merchandise includes pens, notepads, folders, highlighters, plastic cups and stress balls — a total of 14 items.

From Summer C to the first week of Fall 2005, SG and its offshoots Student Government Productions, Accent and Student Legal Services spent $67,187 on advertising. The new SG logo alone cost $1,600.

"We don't need to be flaunting SG if SG is doing its job," Jardon said. "A&S fees are paid for by every student at this institution. Therefore, every student should benefit from them."

Jardon said that free printing in all CIRCA labs and expanded wireless Internet would

UF crowns three for Homecoming finals

By OLIVIA ORMOS

As the minutes ticked down to pageant time, the contestants for this year's Miss Florida nibbled on low-calorie snacks, applied their last touch of bronzer and made sure each strand of hair was perfectly in place.

The Phillips Center for the Performing Arts was transformed into a runway Monday as 31 contestants made their way across the stage for the Florida Blue Key Homecoming Pageant.

But only the three winners would be on this year's Homecoming Court, and they are Anne Imanuel, Cat Jackson and Catherine Hough.

"I was nervous, but it was really great to hear my sorority sisters of Alpha Delta Pi cheer me on," Jackson said. "It really helped me get through the night."

Mari Wilensky, current Miss Florida, and Jess Johnson, executive assistant to the vice president for Student Affairs, presided as the masters of ceremonies.

Wilensky will crown this year's Homecoming queen at Gator Growl on Oct. 7. Other winners included Miss Photogenic Julia Weiss, and Miss Congeniality Rebecca Gaff.

To start the pageant, the contestants danced a choreographed routine in black cocktail dresses to "Simply Irresistible."

All contestants entered the stage and stepped up to the microphone receiving applause while introducing themselves and their sponsors to the audience and judges.

The audience consisted mostly of female supporters who cheered and held cut-out letters spelling their sororities' Greek letters.

■ MURALS ON THE WALKWAY TOWARD NORMAN HALL ARE ERASED.

By ZACH WEISSMUELLER

Obscene messages, local band Web sites and student artwork — most of these are gone after a student painted over years' worth of murals and graffiti Monday.

Inside the Southwest 13th Street underpass from Norman Hall to the UF campus, graffiti has covered nearly every inch of wall space for years.

But a UF civil and coastal engineering graduate student who asked to remain anonymous decided to take on the project of covering the south wall with white paint because he said it was an "eyesore."

He plans to return occasionally to paint over the fresh graffiti, he said.

"I come through here a couple times a day, and it bugs me to see this," he said.

Shirtless, with greenish shorts, sandals and ruffled blond hair, the student smiled and continued working with his paint roller as a passerby called his effort a "waste of time."

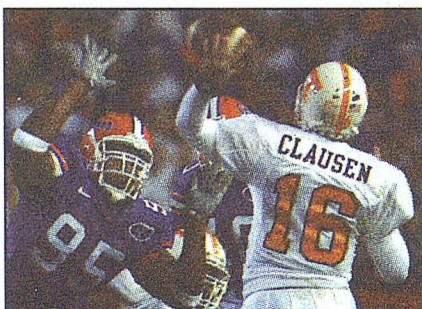

"A lot of people walk by and mumble stuff like that," he said.

Because the underpass was not the graffiti artists' property in the first place, he doesn't feel bad for destroying their work, he said.

"I had some friends that said they like the graffiti," he said. "But they said, 'If this makes you happy, go ahead.'"

UF offers Constitution forum

Built on its the free-speech cornerstone, civil-rights bricks and the pillars of the three branches of government, the United States relies on the mortar of its Constitution, which will be the centerpiece of a campus forum Wednesday.

UF will hold "The U.S. Constitution in the New Century" panel discussion as part of a nationwide observance of the first annual Constitution Day.

"I see it as an opportunity," said David Hedge, UF political science professor. "The world has changed. The country has changed."

Hedge volunteered to plan the university's Constitution Day event and decided that a round table discussion featuring a panel of government officials and university political science, history and law professors would offer interesting debate on constitutional issues.

"I can't think of anything that affects people more," said Hedge, picking up a pocket-sized copy of the approximately 4,440-word Constitution. "It's just barely a Gordon Rule course."

This will be the first year schools around the country observe the occasion after Congress passed legislation mandating that all schools receiving federal funding should host events focusing on the Constitution on Sept. 17, the day the document was signed in 1787.

Since the date fell on a weekend this year, schools had the option of observing Constitution Day a week earlier or later.

Hedge said that while most people need a better understanding of the Constitution, the nation is engaged in constitutional debates all the time on issues from corporate crime to the powers of the presidency.

As moderator Hedge will lead the panel in discussions on issues including euthanasia, gay rights, women's rights and the changing Supreme Court.

Elizabeth Dale, UF legal history professor and a former civil rights attorney, will be a panelist.

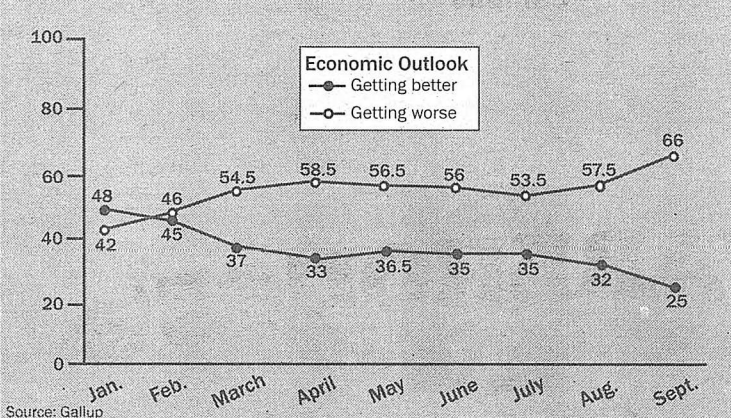

"One thing we can say is the Supreme Court in the next couple of years is going to be one of the great detective stories of all time," Dale said. "We don't know what justices will do until they do it."

She said many of the issues the

Americans' Dour Economic Attitudes Little Affected by Katrina

What impact has Hurricane Katrina had on consumer confidence in the United States economy? Gallup's first September update suggests that the hurricane has had little effect. Confidence in the economy, which was low and dropping in August just before Katrina's landfall, continues to be low in September, showing little change in either direction after the events of the last few weeks. These results are based on Gallup's sample of 921 Americans interviewed Sept. 12-15.

court has made close decisions on in the past, such as affirmative action and the panel's topics, will continue to be important in the coming decades. Others have come to the forefront in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, including environmental laws, race and poverty.

Political science junior Marissa Noel said she worries about the effects the Patriot Act and the Supreme Court's recent ruling on eminent domain — the right of government to seize private property for public use — will have on her constitutional rights to privacy and property.

"I just pretty much think that it may be a precursor to other infringements," Noel said of the Patriot Act.

Although she didn't know about Constitution Day or the event, Noel said forums for discussion of citizens' constitutional rights were important to inform and empower people to fight back on issues such as eminent domain.

"Knowing about the Constitution is knowing about your world and how it affects you," Noel said.

The round table is being hosted by the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the Levin College of Law. It will begin at 6:30 p.m. in the Grand Reading Room in Smathers Library East and is open to all in the university and the community. The program will also be available at video.ufl.edu.

Gator Growl talent show tonight at new location

By ZACH WEISSMUELLER
Alligator Contributing Writer

Gator Growl Talent Night will proceed as planned tonight despite a change in venue.

The event, originally scheduled at The Venue, will now take place across the street at Abbey Road, 238 W University Ave.

The show will feature singers and dance groups from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. followed by a battle of the bands competition until 2 a.m., said Ashley Metzel, director of Gator Growl Talent Night.

She said she expects the battle of the bands competition to draw a large crowd, and the singers and dancers will draw their own fans. "We're going to have a real diverse group coming out," Metzel said.

All of the show's participants will have the opportunity to be selected to perform at Gator Growl 2005. A panel of judges will choose winners in each talent category and award prizes.

Metzel said The Venue recently underwent management changes, and Talent Night had been double-booked.

Peter Gonzalez, an associate producer for Gator Growl, said both clubs were cooperative in the effort, but Abbey Road offered the ideal date of today made in the original announcement of the event.

On Campus

"It's kind of hard to go do this thing on a Monday or something when everybody is at The Swamp," he said.

Gonzalez also works in promotions for Abbey Road, but he said he will make no money from the change in venue. Neither club was planning to charge Student Government for space. There is no cover charge for the event.

"Either way there's no money being spent," Gonzalez said.

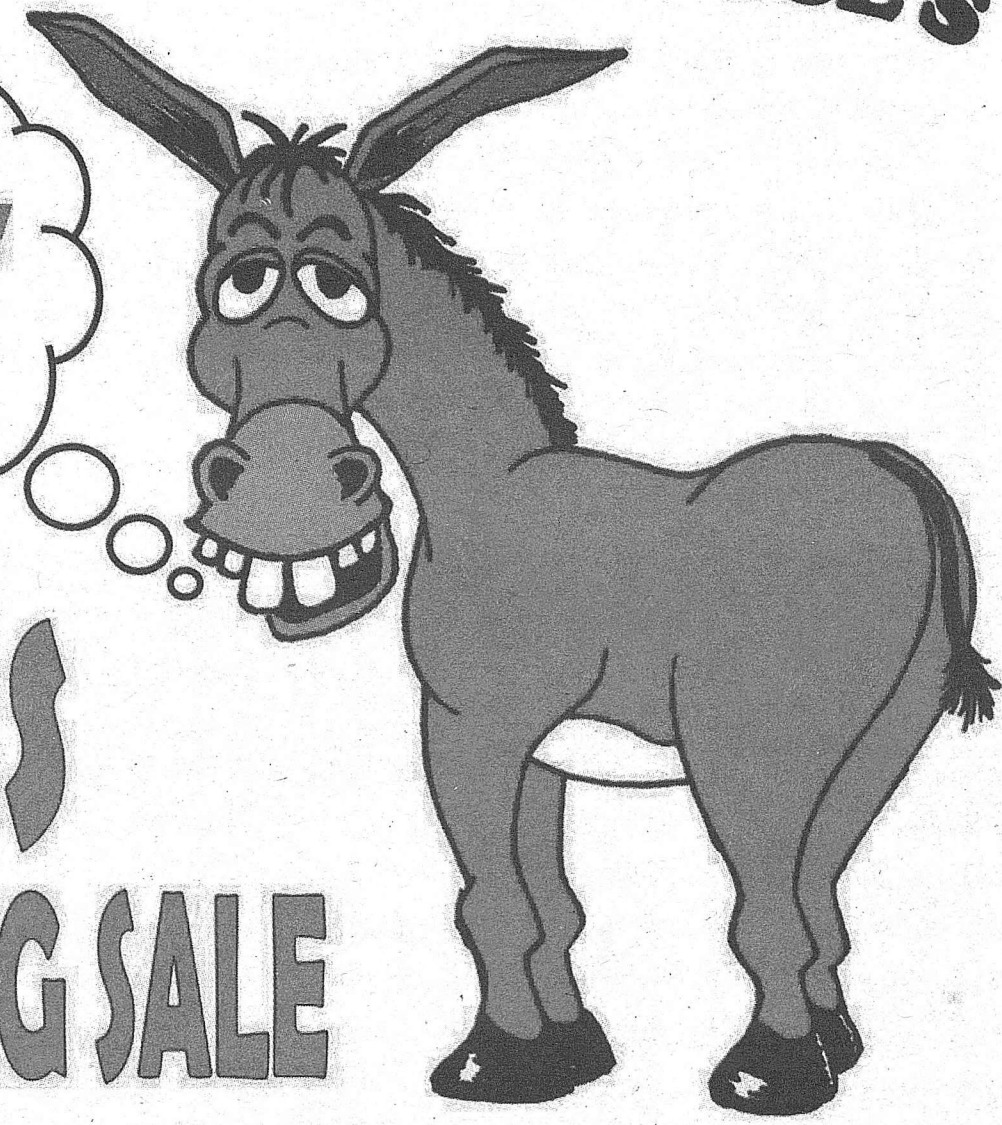

The owner of Abbey Road, Randy Grinter, said he is not paying Gonzalez for bringing the event to his club, and the only money his business will make will be from beverage sales. He said he thinks of it as a public service.

"There's no downside," Grinter said.

Metzel said stage presence was a strong consideration in selecting participants for Talent Night.

"So many people can just sing, but not everybody can sing in front of a crowd," she said.

Soulful singing helps heal hurricane-damaged lives

By TIM HUSSIN

Alligator Contributing Writer

After packing 15 people into a small pickup truck, Alexis and Jonathan Hunter finally escaped Louisiana five days after Hurricane Katrina hit.

Holding back tears, Alexis held a poem entitled "I ain't no refugee," which she read in front of approximately 250 people during the University Gospel Choir Charity Concert in the Reitz Union Grand Ballroom on Sunday.

The concert was organized to collect canned goods and supplies to send to the American Red Cross for survivors of Hurricane Katrina.

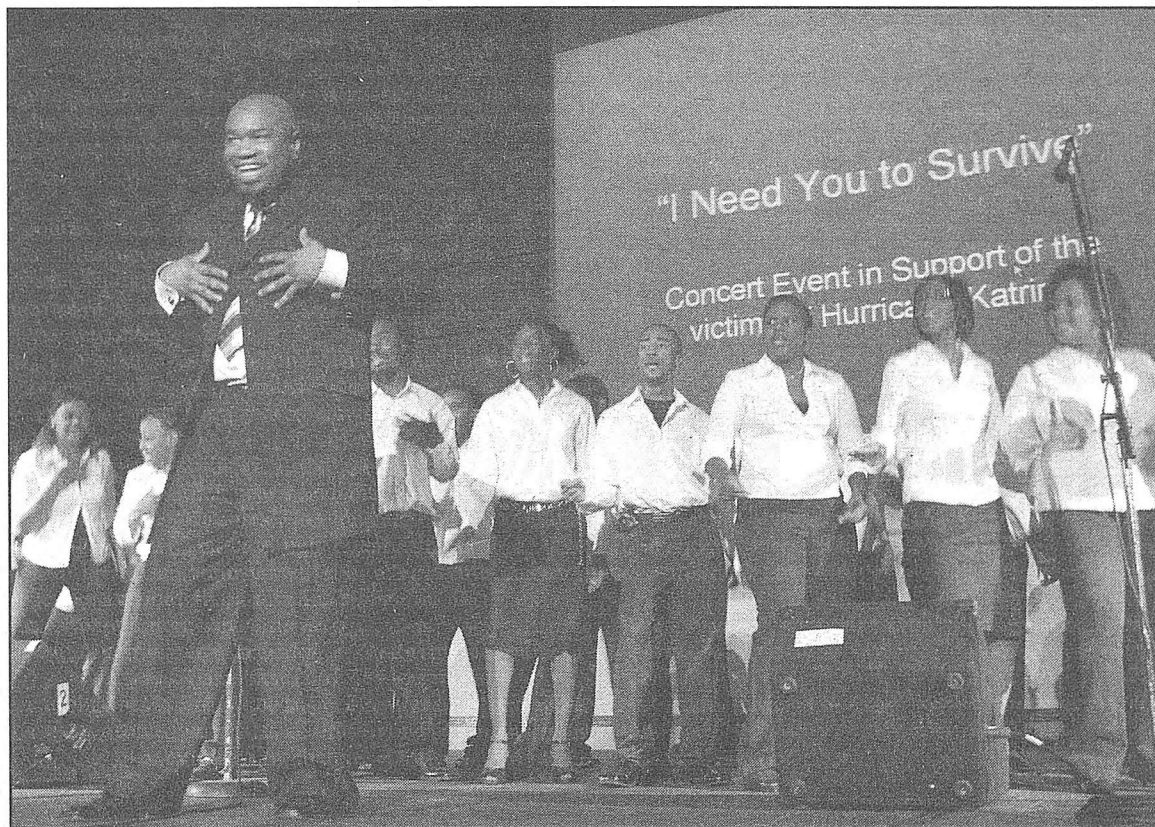

The poem described perceptions of those living in Louisiana and the issues surrounding the disaster.

Alexis brought up issues of delayed supplies, disorganized aid, and lost family and friends.

"Too little, too late," she recited. "Why is security the question when we are just hungry to survive? Are we refugees because of the food and water we looted?"

Attendees were asked to bring canned goods or other supplies as an admission charge.

"We collected over 250 cans

Alex Marshall, spokesman for the University Gospel Choir.

"We even got a few bags of clothing and almost $100 in cash."

The choir entertained the crowd, singing songs following the theme,

"I need you to survive." The crowd was encouraged to stand up and participate throughout the show, clapping and dancing.

"Gospel music requires some hand clapping and some foot stomping," said David Richardson II, the conductor of the choir. "We want you to stand up with us and groove with us."

Swaying, the choir sang out, "You are important to me. I need you to survive. I need you. You need me. Stand with me. Agree with me."

Two Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority members contributed a dance and song in the middle of the show.

The performances expressed the need to find a spiritual sanctuary in the midst of disaster.

The choir ended with a song that inspired audience participation. Afterward, information about helping the survivors who were unable to escape the hurricane was posted.

Unlike many, the Hunters said they were able to leave the city with their health.

■ STUDENTS CAN DONATE
BACKPACKS AT TIGERT HALL.

By IVETTE MENDEZ
Alligator Contributing Writer

From backpacks to blood, UF students are getting creative in their efforts to help Hurricane Katrina victims.

Instead of having students dig through their pockets for loose change, campus political organizations have found more innovative alternatives for students who want to help in Katrina relief efforts.

A backpack drive sponsored by the UF College Democrats was kicked off Monday night to benefit the victims.

The organization is collecting backpacks and small bags in which victims can store the items they are receiving through other donations.

Victims are getting money and other items from different places, but what "they don't have is something to hold their belongings," said Andrea Garces, vice president of philanthropy for the UF College Democrats.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency is paying for the UPS shipment, she said.

The collection will continue for a week or two, Garces said. Students can donate backpacks at 140 Tigert Hall.

UF College Republicans just finished a weeklong blood drive in remembrance of Sept. 11, 2001, which is also helping victims of Hurricane Katrina.

As far as efforts dedicated solely to Hurricane Katrina victims, the organization is still in the planning process.

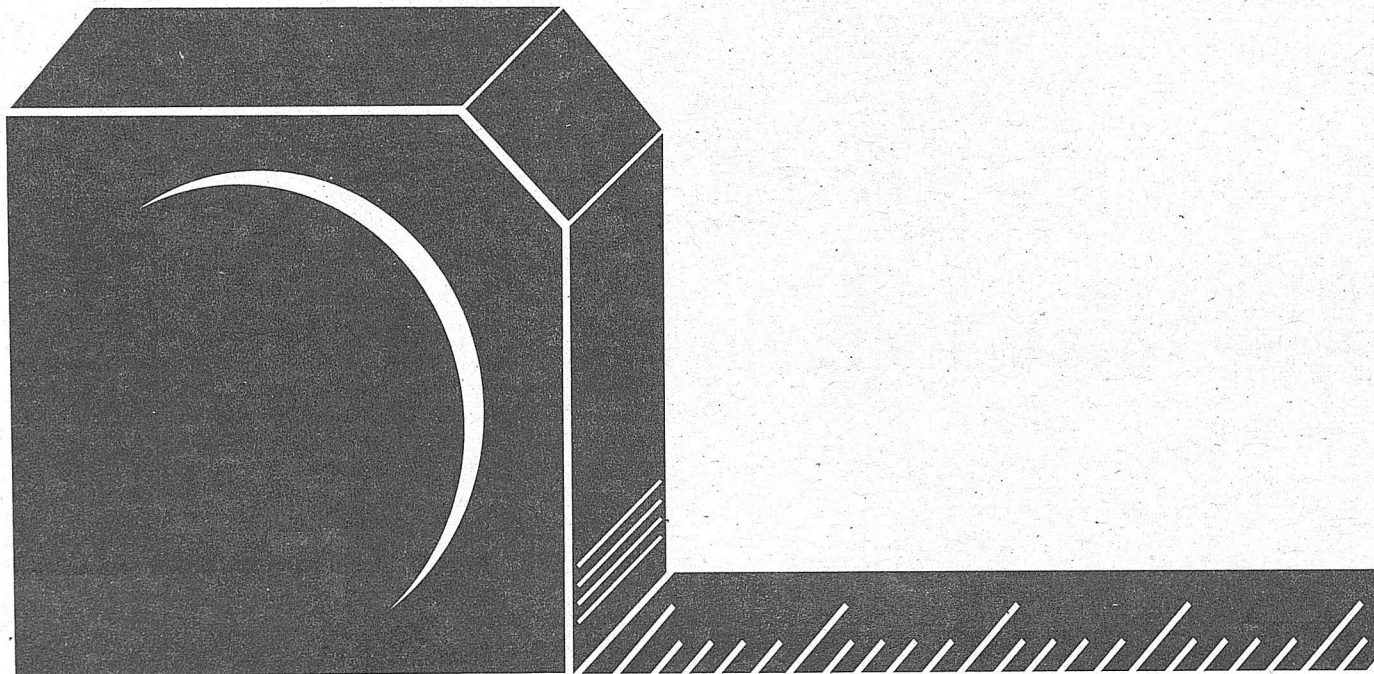

"We haven't done any monetary donations yet," said College Republicans' Chairman Ashlee Black.

Black said she expects they will collect money or hold a fundraiser soon to donate money to the survivors.

The Red Cross indicated that the number one thing it needs is money, Black said.

"Right now the only idea that we've had is to pass a hat at the meetings or a silent auction, off campus, of course," she said.

Black said she is encouraging all active College Republicans to donate as much as possible to the cause.

Crazy leader

New Orleans mayor needs to be locked up

New Orleans is screwed. There is a crazy man at its helm. Mayor Ray Nagin recently announced plans to allow 180,000 residents back into sections of the city by Sept. 26. Fortunately, he suspended his plans Monday, citing the chance that Tropical Storm Rita may hit Louisiana. Even he can be convinced that some duct-taped levees aren't going to survive God's tiniest sneeze. But his complete incompetence wasn't completely halted. Thousands of residents, mostly business owners, already returned to the Algiers neighborhood when Nagin flipped his outlook.

Although Algiers received a minimal hit by Hurricane Katrina and is reported to have safe drinking water, Nagin should be fired immediately for displaying such incompetence and insanity. Then we should put a sock in his mouth and tie his hands behind his back to prevent any further tragedies.

This same kind of political maneuvering led to the deaths of so many New Orleans residents in the first place.

Nagin refused to organize an effective mandatory evacuation before Katrina because he apparently couldn't grasp, or didn't want to face, the catastrophe on his hands. Now he is hoping to repopulate the city to show the world that everything is OK.

Is he willing to sacrifice his constituency for a public relations campaign? We're afraid to hear the answer to that one.

His own words reflect his disconnect from reality. "We're bringing New Orleans back," he said. "I'm tired of hearing these helicopters. I want to hear some jazz."

Apparently, Nagin has tuned out the nation's discussions on how difficult reconstruction will be.

It's preposterous for Nagin to endanger residents simply because he doesn't want to see any more death and destruction.

It's even more nuts to think tourists will return to the city any time soon.

The only tourists Nagin will be seeing are those hoping to help Katrina victims, since he seems bent on creating more chaos.

Most of the city has no water or electricity, no 911 service and no working hospitals.

That's no place for people to live, and it's the government's job to keep them out.

Displaced residents always want to go back home. That doesn't mean the mayor should let them.

After making this mistake and letting some people in Algiers on Monday, Nagin almost immediately told them to evacuate.

So he created another mini-evacuation. We all know how good he is at those.

And what would he have done if more of the city were repopulated when Rita threatened?

The levees are useless. Buildings are unsafe. Shelters are nonexistent, and roads are less than perfect.

Nagin could have created a repeat of his past mistakes. He should be relieved of his position, and the federal government should take over. At least the latter is beginning to show signs of intelligence.

Coast Guard Vice Adm. Thad Allen made his disdain of the move public. To this valid criticism, Nagin brilliantly retorted that Allen had made himself "the new-crowned federal mayor of New Orleans."

These are obviously the well-thought-out words of a born leader.

Following this name calling, however, Nagin reversed his position on the repopulation after a serious talk with Allen.

This mayor is like a 5-year-old playing dress-up.

He needs to go to the naughty corner before he causes any more damage.

Media should hold off praising coach

Can we put the ball washing on hold for a couple of weeks?

With the win over Tennessee, Urban Meyer is already being heralded as the second coming of Steve Spurrier.

This is ridiculous.

The man has coached the Gators for all of three games this season, not nearly enough time to make any definitive judgment. As coach of the Gators, Meyer has now won exactly one more big game than I have.

You know who else won a big game against Tennessee early in his first season as Gator coach? Ron Zook.

I'm not saying Urban Meyer isn't a great coach. My point here is that we just don't know yet.

The Gators won on Saturday because their defense was incredible. Who can say if that was due to outstanding coaching or simply a highly talented group of players? Who can say they'll be this good on the road against LSU? No one can.

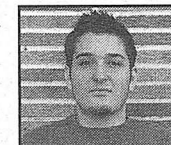

That's why I want everyone to slow down a bit before deciding Urban Meyer is the best thing since sliced bread (or Fun N' Gun, for that matter).

The sports journalism establishment has a horrible tendency to give coaches too much credit after wins and too much blame after losses.

For instance, in the euphoria after Saturday's win, a columnist from this very paper called Meyer names like "The Urbinator" and "Mr. Destiny."

Why? I wouldn't call him those names even if everything that happened in the game were directly due to his influence.

The Gator offense, for the most part, looked terrible. I credit the Tennessee defenders for that, but Meyer was the man calling the shots, and his play-calling was so conservative, I could have sworn the Gators hired Dave Wannstedt.

Andrew Meyer
Editorial Notebook
ameyer@alligator.org

Except for the misdirection play that netted the Gators their only touchdown, the offense could not have been more basic. Every run was straight up the middle, every pass attempt was to the same tired hook routes. I was screaming during an entire quarter for the Gators to try a slant (which they eventually did, for a 20-yard gain), or a play-action pass (they didn't even attempt one.) They managed only a pair of field goals the two times they were given outstanding field position.

But just as I don't give Meyer all the credit for the defense, I don't give him all the blame for the offense either.

I think the defense was incredible mostly because they have incredible players.

Similarly, I think the offense was poor because it's run by a poor quarterback.

That's right, I think Chris Leak is a bad player.

I'm not questioning his arm strength or his tools. Instead, I think he makes terrible decisions. He doesn't know when to throw the ball away. That, coupled with a weak offensive line, means he is always getting sacked. He focuses on one receiver, which makes his passes infinitely easier to defend. He can run, but he rarely does, and even then he never goes for the extra yard. He can throw on the run, but the Gators never roll him out.

Honestly, I wish Josh Portis was starting.

Again, if we give the coach all the credit or blame, then Leak's shortcomings are Meyer's fault. And I don't think that's fair either.

I think Urban Meyer, and his spread offense, will ultimately succeed.

But to deify him after three games? Please.

Andrew Meyer is a journalism sophomore.

The views expressed here are not necessarily those of the Alligator.

Kanye West was hasty in his comment

I did not see the original cartoon printed by the Alligator on Sept. 13. However, after being told of its contents, I laughed.

Yes, I — an African American female and a double minority — laughed.

It's preposterous that Condoleezza Rice would ever stoop so low and use such a term.

And it's preposterous that everyone expects the Alligator to apologize.

We didn't protest the cartoons about (former Student Body President) Jamal Sowell or Joe Goldberg, both prominent campus politicians who were ridiculed for their views. We didn't ridicule the Alligator when it printed a cartoon depicting sorority girls with worms on their heads being hazed by fraternity boys. Yet we want to march across campus when it uses the "n-word."

It has to be all or nothing. You can't condemn a paper — an independent paper at that — some of the time, whenever you feel like it. Frankly, the whole point of the political cartoons in the Opinions section is to voice the paradigms of an individual or group.

I think Kanye West, although a great performer, was hasty in his comment.

Whether or not the comment he made about Bush was true, his stating the fact did nothing to ameliorate the matter and instead created a tension among Americans.

Rice's status is not a leap for blacks

With regard to his depiction of Condoleezza Rice with Kanye West, Alligator cartoonist Andy Marlette stated, "I can picture a black woman saying that to a black man."

If it was realism Marlette was aiming for, can he really see that particular black woman, Condoleezza Rice, using that terminology?

His further willingness to defend his use of the word "nigga" on the basis of its frequent use in pop culture indicates that the full extent of his knowledge of how black people communicate with each other is derived from movies, TV and rap music. Reliance on portrayals in pop culture leads to complete ignorance of the ongoing, emotional debate among black people about the use of the word "nigger" and the nuances surrounding use of the word.

A more significant issue here is the meaning of the cartoon. Condoleezza Rice's status as Secretary of State doesn't represent any great leap forward for black people, nor is it any indication of Bush's interest in setting an agenda addressing racial inequality. Willingness to embrace individual blacks is not equivalent to addressing systemic inequities. Anyone who thinks so is woefully underinformed.

Given that Rice was playing tennis and shopping on Madison Avenue during the week of the Gulf Coast debacle, it's apparent that setting such an agenda is of little concern to her. In fact Marlette might have more aptly and realistically depicted Rice saying, "Forget them! I'm doing all right myself!"

SG used more than $14K of student money on self-promoting swag

Impact has also questioned the $3,338.72 lobbying trip to Washington, D.C., that five top SG officials took during Summer B.

But SG Lobby Coordinator Thomas Philpot said it was "absolutely imperative" that the Florida congressmen who legislate financial aid meet the representatives of UF's student body.

"I think that made [the congressmen] pay a lot more attention to the real issue and the real face of federal financial aid," Philpot said. "I didn't take it as a personal trip."

Earlier last summer, the offices of Goldberg, Student Body Vice President Joyce Medina and Student Senate Pro Tempore John Boyles were refurbished for a total of $4,466.66.

"The desks were falling apart,"

Goldberg said. "I tried to pull out the keyboard tray to type, and it fell in my lap."

He said new chairs were purchased because the old couch was not appropriate for his work space.

"I needed to have a more professional atmosphere in my office," he said.

SG executives and bureau chairs also receive monthly cell phone stipends. Goldberg's is highest at $50.

Goldberg, Accent Chairman Evan Tyroler and SGP Chairman Joey Van de Bogart have student-funded Blackberry devices with unlimited data plans.

Goldberg's service costs $107.94 monthly, plus a $99 start-up fee.

Van de Bogart said he gets about 100 e-mails per day on his BlackBerry. He said it increases his productivity, noting that he has planned twice as many Fall concerts as his predecessor, Jeff Yeatman, did.

"The student body, by providing me with a phone, made me work harder for them because I am constantly working for them," he said.

Impact spokeswoman Allison Cullin denounced SG's use of student money for self-promotion.

"Go up to the SG offices," she urged students. "Ask for your water bottle. Ask for your little alligator — you paid for it."

Queen will be chosen at Gator Growl

PAGEANT, from page 1

The five judges who critiqued the ladies were Shelley Meyer, Michael Blachly, Darius Dunn, Roslyn F. Levy and Cynthia Thibault.

"The judging for the pageant is not just based on beauty but rather 65 percent goes to the contestant's GPA, formal interview and resume of campus and community involvement," Garrison said. "The remainder of the judging is based on formal and casual wear and, of course, the final question."

Before going on stage, Randi Lieberman of Delta Phi Epsilon Sorority said, "Win or lose, after the pageant I am going out to eat a cheeseburger and fries, something very unpageant-like."

Entertainment was provided by the UF Danza team, which performed two dances between the casual and formal wear segments.

The final question of the night asked what contestants saw themselves contributing to the Gator Nation after graduation.

Finalists all had similar responses, stating they would want to become mentors to students of the university.

Scarborough Insurance, Gainesville Floral Exchange and the Village Jeweler were sponsors of the Homecoming Pageant.

Student undid years of murals, art

GRAFFITI, from page 1

Though some students shared the painter's dismay over the graffiti, others preferred a colorful wall to a white one.

"I prefer it being decorated," painting major Matt Hill said. "I don't think any art should be covered up unless it is derogatory."

Ed Poppell, vice president for finance and administration at UF, said the university treats the underpass as part of its property, maintaining the lights and the pipes that run through it.

He said the university has taken steps to prevent graffiti on the underpass, such as allowing sanctioned artwork from local schools and clubs on the walls.

He would prefer students work with UF in efforts to fight graffiti, he said.

The student wrote in an e-mail that he prefers to remain anonymous because his effort is still "kind of a personal thing" and "it is too soon to be taking credit."

He only painted the south wall of the underpass because the other wall is covered with chill water and steam pipes that would make the job too time-consuming.

The student said he lived next to the 34th Street Wall for a few years. He respected the artistry of the murals and was dismayed to see them ruined by graffiti.

"[The art] used to be tasteful, but now they just do not care. They will spray paint over anything," he said.

McDonald to miss 4 to 6 weeks

■ EARILEST POSSIBLE RETURN FOR DEFENSIVE END COULD COME AGAINST LSU.

By ANDREW ABRAMSON and ERIC ESTEBAN
Alligator Staff Writers

The No. 5 Gators received somewhat relieving news on Monday when the team learned star defensive end Ray McDonald would miss just four to six weeks with a partially torn ACL in his right knee, suffered in UF's 16-7 victory against Tennessee.

While McDonald's absence will certainly hurt a defense currently ranked No. 2 in the nation, it was initially feared that McDonald would miss the entire season.

After leading the team with 10 tackles for losses a year ago, the new UF coaching staff shifted McDonald from defensive tackle to end, the position he played in high school. The move allowed McDonald to play more freely and utilize his speed.

Now the Gators must regroup. Joe Cohen will return to the starting role he held a year ago, while redshirt freshman Derrick Harvey — who could be one of the more talented players on the team — will also see time at defensive end.

"I feel good about Derrick Harvey and Joe Cohen. I trust them," said senior Jeremy Mincey, UF's other starting defensive end. "Harvey's young, but the more he plays, the more snaps he gets, the better he can get."

"That's a big plus that Joe Cohen is already experienced."

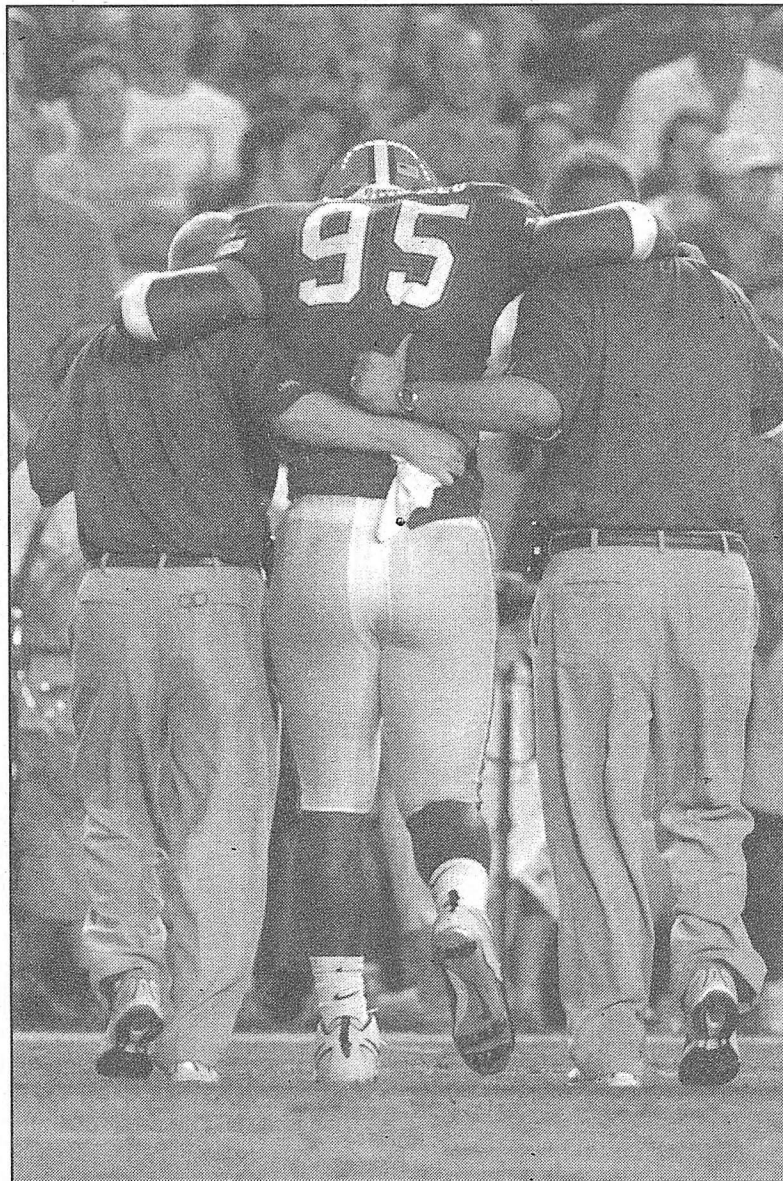

The news came one day after receiver Andre Caldwell underwent surgery to repair a broken leg, also suffered in the Tennessee victory.

"We're talking about two great young men," UF coach Urban Meyer said.

"Ray McDonald is a different man [this year] as is Andre Caldwell. They were making such a good push up to right now."

NOT ON THE OFFENSIVE: While UF's defense is suddenly overshadowing an offense expected to be among the best in the nation, Meyer — a coach often critical of his offense — said he's satisfied where the Defensive end Ray McDonald limps off the field after partially tearing the ACL in his right knee. He will miss 4 to 6 weeks of action.

Impact of injury unclear

Andre Caldwell honed in on the end zone. Ten wayward Tennessee defenders could only glance back in disbelief. Tens of thousands of Gators fans could only gaze into the future.

For Caldwell, this is how it was supposed to be.

Urban Meyer's spread option was to catapult the junior to the upper echelon of collegiate football stardom.

The Gators' sole touchdown against the Vols on Saturday seemed to provide a glimpse of that.

As Chris Leak ran an option play to the left, Caldwell sprung back behind the quarterback to the right.

As the Tennessee defense collapsed on Leak, Caldwell took a reverse pitch.

With wheels like Caldwell's, it should've been illegal.

Eighteen yards and one block later and Caldwell began to realize his destiny.

This was why he came to UF.

This was to be the season. Little more than one quarter later, it was finished.

Running back the opening kick of the second half, a helmet to the right thigh ended his season. But as Caldwell was carted off the field wincing in pain from a broken leg, it was harder to tell who hurt more — him or his fellow receivers.

"I didn't think it was that bad of a hit, but the more I saw, my stomach dropped a little bit," junior Jemalle Cornelius said. "We were just in a bit of a daze because everybody expected him to just pop back up. We saw he was down for a pretty long time, and it just took the wind out of you for a little bit."

When a guy like Caldwell goes down, responsibility tends to set in as subtly as a freight train to the solar plexus.

But it's OK. Breathe, Jemalle, breathe.

Without question, the Gators will feel the strain of Caldwell's departure.

With his kind of speed, it seems Caldwell was born for Meyer's system.

And the coach kept no secrets about whom he considered his top playmaker during spring and summer workouts. Now,

Gators dismantle overmatched FSU

By BRYAN JONES

It was clearly a mismatch on paper, but you can't spell rivalry in Gainesville without F-S-U.

Unfortunately for Florida State, the match looked more even on paper than on the court. The No. 6 UF volleyball team crushed in-state rival Florida State Monday night (30-20, 30-23, 30-16) in the Gators' final match before heading into Southeastern Conference play against Mississippi State on Friday.

"Anytime Florida State and UF suit up, it is going to be a rivalry, and we're thinking about that."

Amber McCray
UF volleyball sophomore

The Gators have now won 14 straight matches against Florida State. Despite recent domination of the Seminoles, opposite hitter Amber McCray admitted the match means a little something extra to the Gators. But she said the team does not let the rivalry become a distraction.

"Anytime Florida State and UF suit up, it is going to be a rivalry, and we're thinking about that," she said. "But it is not as big as football, so we were just basically working on coming out and taking this game as a game we can use to get better and work on ourselves."

The Gators did not forget about last season, when FSU launched into raucous celebration after winning a game against UF. Although the Gators eventually won that match, sophomore Marcie Hampton group currently stands.

He even singled out wide receiver Jemalle Cornelius, whose role suddenly triples now that Caldwell is out for the year.

"We had no turnovers [against Tennessee] and we had the ball for a long time," Meyer said.

"Jemalle Cornelius came out a winner, and Chris Leak played extremely hard."

CHAMPION DEFENSE: In past weeks, making Meyer's postgame Champions Club hasn't been an easy feat, even though the Gators have won all three of their games.

On Monday, Meyer rewarded the Gators' defensive performance against Tennessee.

Steven Harris, Marcus Thomas, Jeremy Mincey, Brandon Siler, Earl Everett, Todd McCullough, Vernell

Brown, Kyle Jackson, Reggie Nelson, Dee Webb and Jarvis Herring all made the club, but it was the members of the secondary that graded out as the biggest difference-makers.

"Jarvis Herring had 11 opportunities to make a play and he made all 11," Meyer said.

"If you are wondering how we won that game, it's those two stats right there."

After holding the Volunteers to just 7 points, UF's defense is ranked second in the nation behind Connecticut. The Gators are giving up an average of 8 points a game and 199 yards to opposing teams in the Swamp.

"I don't think I've been around a team that's played better defense," Meyer said.

"They played an excellent football team who has a great tradition of running the ball, and they shut them down."

three unproven juniors and a former quarterback must fill the void.

Even as Caldwell writhed in a hospital bed Saturday night, Meyer already was busy challenging Cornelius and other receivers to dive into Caldwell's Nikes.

Only, nobody is quite sure how big they are.

Coming to UF rated as a No. 1 receiving prospect in the country, Caldwell never fully lived up to the hype, scoring just three touchdowns before that nifty reverse.

Even in all its beauty, the play callers, not the playmakers, made Saturday's reverse play.

With 10 of Tennessee's 11 defenders halfway to Newberry, 320-pound offensive guard Tavares Washington could've stuck that one in.

So while Caldwell's immediate future appears murky, the Gators' is simply unclear.

Killingsworth stands out as inside presence

said head coach Mary Wise had the team prepared for FSU's emotional outbursts.

"[Wise] knew they were going to be an emotional team coming in here, so she made sure we were focused on what we were doing and not worried about what is going on over on their side of the net," Hampton said.

The Gators took game one 30-20, clinching the game on an attack error by FSU's Lauren Scott. McCray led the Gators with five kills on six attempts in the opening game, while FSU hit for an anemic .049 percentage in the game. UF scored 6 of the last 7 points to claim game two 30-23. Angie McGinnis led the Gators with four kills out of the setter position while tallying 12 assists in the process.

McGinnis has been working on her offensive game, employing a sort of hook shot with her off-hand to try to catch defenses napping.

"I think you have to try to catch them off-guard, you have to be tricky with it and know when to do it," McGinnis said. "Hopefully by the end of the season I'll get at least five kills a night — that's my goal."

UF cruised to a 7-0 lead in the third and deciding game before the Gators ended the game and the match with a 30-16 score.

Sophomore Kisya Killingsworth had a career-high nine blocks in the match, and finally began to look like the strong inside presence the Gators have lacked all season.

"Wouldn't you like to play defense around Kisya Killingsworth?" Wise asked. "You don't get many opportunities, certainly today, because of the way she blocked."

UF receiving contributions from array of players

■ ROLE PLAYERS TAKING LARGER ROLE IN OFFENSE

By DAN TREAT
Alligator Writer

Prior to this season, UF coach Mary Wise was asked whether Jane Collymore could be counted on to be a dominant star — a player who would have the ability to take over a match the way Aury Cruz did during UF's run to the NCAA Championship match in 2003.

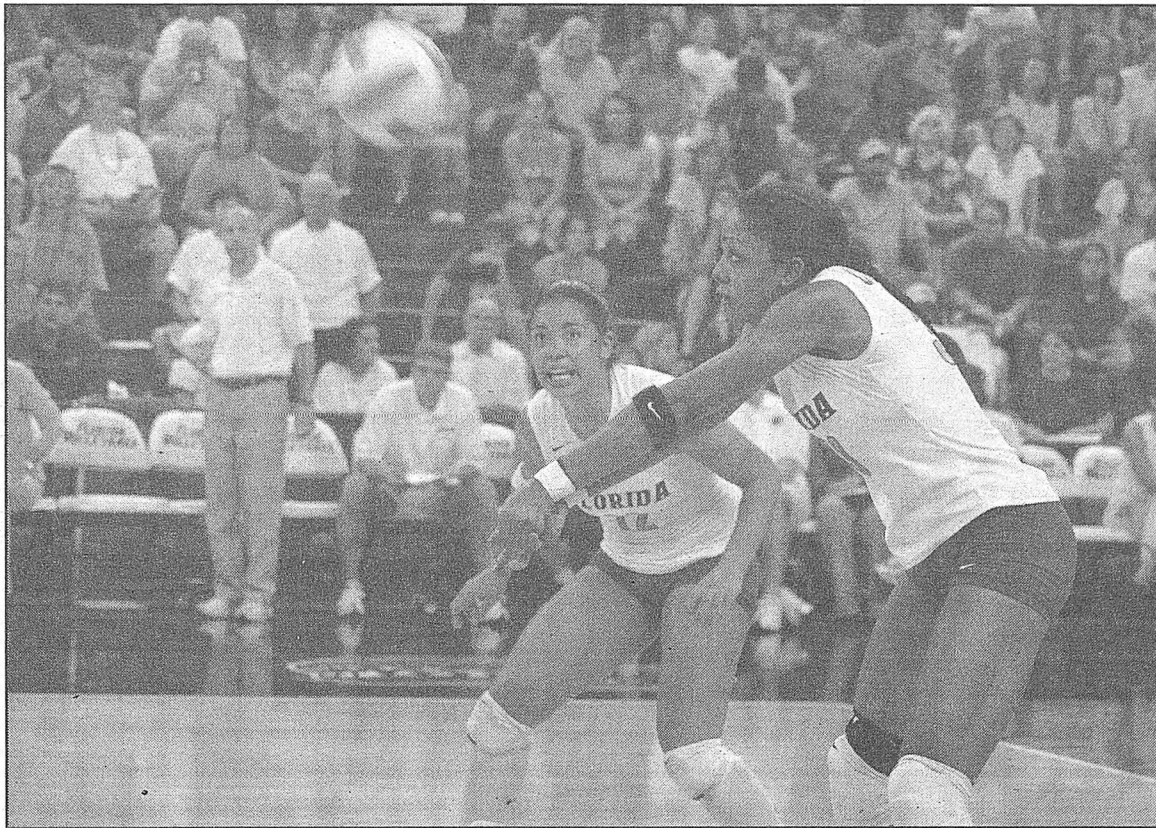

It's a tough comparison to make.

Cruz was a three-time first-team All-American, while Collymore enters her second season as the Gators featured player.

Collymore has shown that ability to take over a match. In UF's Sept. 10 win against Southern California, she racked up 30 kills, including 11 of the Gators' 15 kills in the second game.

While Collymore continues to get the most swings on the team, UF has been spreading the love around all season. Monday night was no different, as eight different players recorded kills for the Gators in their 3-0 sweep of Florida State.

"Bottom line, when in a three-game match when four players are in double-digit points, that's great point production," Wise said. "That means that we're getting kills, blocks and ace serves. We're getting contribution in lots of ways."

Luanne Dietz / Alligator

While UF volleyball star Jane Collymore is counted on to lead a young UF team, her teammates are pitching in as well.

Those double-doubles came from Marcie Hampton, Amber McCray, Kisy Killingsworth and Collymore. Combine the statistics of Angie McGinnis and Kari Klinkenborg and UF recorded five double-doubles.

Wise has emphasized to her team that getting scoring out of all six spots on the floor is the best way for her team to be successful, and a lot of that distribution comes from pre-game scouting.

"A lot of it is game-plan specific and based on where we think we can get points," Wise said. "There are times when it may look like [McGinnis] is favoring one hitter over another, but that is by design."

Wise has preached patience with outside hitters Collymore and Hampton, who see the bulk of the sets.

While the two took 31 and 24 swings respectively against the Seminoles, they also opened the door for the opposite hitters and middle blockers to step up and make plays.

Killingsworth had nine kills and a career-high nine blocks out of the middle, and McCray recorded eight kills and two blocks.

"We have so many players averaging over two kills a game," McCray said. "Teams have to worry about defending all different spots on the floor, so it's really going to help us."

As last year's Southeastern Conference Freshman of the Year, McGinnis has the task of getting the ball to where all of her various weapons can hit it. She doesn't, however, take into account how many sets are going to each player.

"As a setter you really don't think about it that way," she said. "It depends on what they're doing. If they're going to block our outside hitters then I'm going to try to give most of the balls to our middles."

For her part, Collymore believes that distributing the ball among all the team's scorers can only help the Gators.

"We're a much more effective team if the ball can go to five or six really strong players rather than one person," she said. "Because if you think about it from a blocking standpoint, if the defense knows the ball is going to one person over and over again, they'll kind of stand there."

New defensive scheme showing results

By ANDREW ABRAMSON
Alligator Staff Writer
aabramson@alligator.org

No offense Urban Meyer, but Chris Leak and Co. are getting overshadowed by an unlikely bunch of headliners.

After shutting down Tennessee's offense in Saturday's 16-7 victory against the Volunteers, UF's defense is second to just 5th.

Not only are the Gators giving up the least yards in the Southeastern Conference, but also the 199 yards allowed per game is second best in the entire NCAA, trailing only Connecticut.

Meyer's spread offense and UF's array of talented receivers received all the preseason buzz, but the Gators scoring offense currently ranks just sixth in the SEC and 45th in the nation.

And it was UF's defense that spent much of the summer trying to shed the label of late game choke-artists.

"If you watch film on us, you can see we're chasing the ball better than last year," linebacker Earl Everett said. "The d-line is playing better, the linebackers are holding it down more. I think we're more aggressive than last year."

Last year's defense ranked just sixth in the SEC, and virtually the same unit returned minus star linebacker Channing Crowder.

But the defensive players credit much of the turnaround to new defensive coordinator Greg Mattison, who splits duties with Charlie Strong, the only holdover from the previous coaching regime.

While the defense was put through the same grueling off-season workouts as the rest of the team, Mattison brought a new aggressive, blitz-heavy philosophy to the defense. Suddenly players that were mediocre at best last season rank among the SEC leaders in various statistical categories.

Although the defense may experience a slight drop-off now that starting defensive end Ray McDonald is expected to miss four to six weeks with an ACL injury in his right knee, even career backups have been starring for UF this season.

At 5-foot-8, Vernell Brown spent much of his career floating from position to position while seeing little action. This year, the senior nabbed a starting cornerback job and currently leads the Gators with 18 tackles.

"After seeing these kids work all winter, I knew they had a chance to be pretty darn good because they showed pride and they showed work ethic," Mattison said.

"They're a year older. I really think they believe in what we're doing and I think they want to leave here knowing that they've had a chance to do something special."

Mattison said head coach Urban Meyer knew exactly what he was doing when he assembled a staff that included Mattison, Strong and other respected defensive minds like cornerbacks coach Chuck Heater and safeties coach Doc Holliday.

"There's no egos," Mattison said. "That to me is special. We all have the same goals."

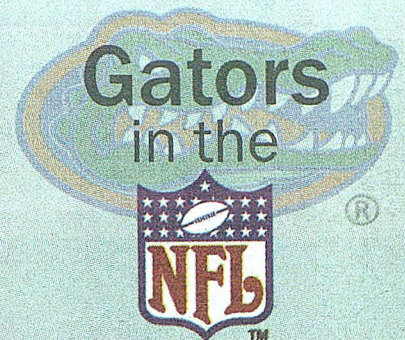

Mattison realizes it takes more than motivational speeches for his defense to realize what its capable of achieving. So he spends hours showing game film from the NFL and highlights of some of Mattison's previous stars at Notre Dame, including current Baltimore Ravens star defensive end Anthony Weaver.

"If they know the way you coached that guy on film is the same way you're coaching them, I think they listen better," Mattison said. "They say OK, it must work."

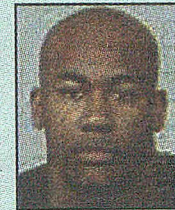

Andy Apicella / Alligator

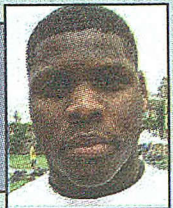

After linebacker Earl Everett and the Gators held Tennessee to -4 rushing yards in the second half, UF's scoring defense ranks No. 2 in the nation.
