

Election inquiry shows no signs of stopping

The Student Government Elections Commission plugged along late into Thursday night, hearing multiple complaints from both The Gator Party and the Impact Party.

But the commission's job is not done yet. Several complaints could not be heard due to notice requirements.

By a 3-2 vote, the commission issued Impact a public reprimand for illegal campaigning.

Gator filed a complaint that Impact campaigned a day before election codes allow, alleging that the opposition's Aug. 24 mock wedding to Spring's Progress Party was a part of Impact's campaign.

Impact maintained that although platform issues were discussed at the wedding, votes were not solicited, which is required by statutes to qualify the speech as campaigning.

"I think it's really dangerous to get into prohibiting useful political speech," commission member Josh Curry said. "But at the same time, campaigning before the campaigning period begins should be illegal."

Impact spokeswoman Allison Cullin said the ruling signified the denial of free speech at UF.

"To try to say that this is political speech and slide the issue around is just unnecessary," Curry said.

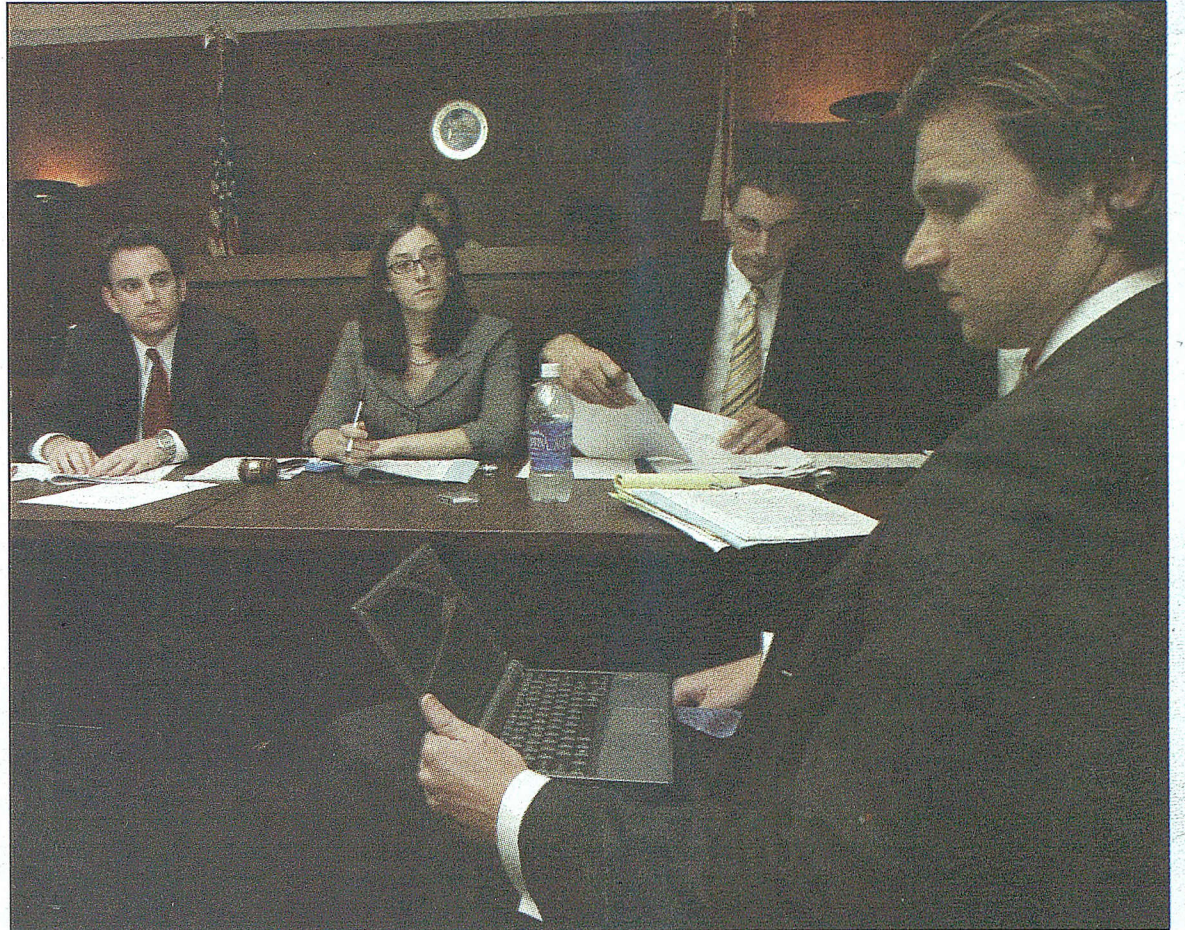

The commission denied Impact's complaints against The Gator Party regarding banners hanging in front of houses on Fraternity Row.

Impact had alleged that because the banners stated they were paid political advertisements and named Gator Treasurer Brian Seel, the banners were Gator's responsibility.

The Gator Party dropped a complaint against Impact for posting a sign without Supervisor of Elections Daniel Maland's approval.

The poster featured a quote from Gator Party senator and Senate Budget and Appropriations Committee Chairwoman Jackie Pace that read, "In the past we kind of tended to give away money."

Math seeks lovers of art

By NICK PATRICK
 Alligator Contributing Writer

The days of the liberal arts-inclined dreading math class may be over.

UF computer science professor Paul Fishwick is one of the pioneers of Aesthetic Computing, a developing concept for middle and high school students which changes the way they learn math by combining it with art.

"The idea behind Aesthetic Computing is to leverage the arts and design in trying to help students get motivated to learn algebra," Fishwick said.

The idea has already received praise from local high school teachers.

"There has been a long history of a marriage between art and mathematics," he said. "A good example is if you plot an equation. What you're doing is taking a graphical representation of the solution of the equation."

Aside from improving test scores, Fishwick believes Aesthetic Computing will also help students outside the classroom.

"Individualism is important. Creativity is important. Motivation is clearly important," he Construction on Southwest 13th Street and Williston Road will mean lane closures and rerouted Regional Transit System buses throughout the Spring.

The $6.6 million project is already under way on 13th Street from 16th Avenue to 14th Avenue. Construction eventually will include 13th Street from Archer Road to Williston Road.

Further construction will take place at Williston Road from 13th Street to Southwest 34th Street.

The project, funded by the Florida Department of Transportation, involves resurfacing the roads, remodeling the crosswalks at five major intersections, closing off medians, lengthening turn lanes and adding sidewalks.

Project spokesman Chip Skinner said there will be lane closures on both roads until the completion of the project.

"Just be aware of shifts in the lane closures," Skinner said. "Shifts may change on a daily basis."

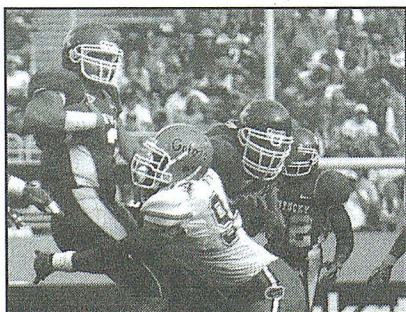

There will not be closures on Williston Road from 6 - 9 a.m. and 4 - 6 p.m. There are no time restrictions for lane closures on 13th Street.

Construction will halt Friday through Sunday during home-game weekends and holidays, Skinner said.

Resurfacing of Williston Road is expected to begin mid-October.

Groups gather for Gandhi

The South Asian American Student Alliance and other organizations will host and participate in several events honoring Mahatma Gandhi's birthday, Oct. 2.

The alliance, along with the Indian Student Association, Hindu Student Council and others, will paint a part of the wall on Southwest 34th Street tonight at 6:15 p.m., said Prasanna Durairaj, alliance spokeswoman. They will meet at the Reitz Union Circle at 6 p.m.

Two community service projects scheduled for Saturday are already closed to more volunteers because of limited space, she said. One group will assist at a literacy festival and the other will work on a house with Habitat for Humanity.

The India Cultural & Education Center is bringing renowned sitar maestro Nishat Khan to play for about an hour at the center, 1115 SW 13th St., starting at 7 p.m., she said. UF students will volunteer at the event, and proceeds will go to hurricane victims.

Burglary suspect arrested

A Gainesville woman was arrested Wednesday for breaking into a home and stealing items totaling more than $1,840, according to the Gainesville Police Department.

Ida Felicia Mosley, 23, broke into a home, at 1912 NW 16th Way, stealing a laptop computer, two watches, 50 rare coins, a wireless computer mouse and a backpack Tuesday at 11 a.m., the arrest report stated.

Mosley admitted to entering the home through the unlocked front door, saying she chose the house because it was unoccupied and some windows were open.

UF political science professor Button dead at 63

Memorial service to be held today at 5 p.m.

By OLIVIA ORMOS
Alligator Contributing Writer

Political science professor James Button, known for his in-depth studies of the politics of social change, died Monday at age 63.

A service remembering the professor will be held today at 5 p.m., at the United Church of Gainesville, located at 1624 NW 5th Ave.

"We all are very sad. He was an incredible scholar, teacher and mentor and did so much for all students," said David Hedge, a political science professor and undergraduate coordinator. "He had a very quiet commitment to social justice, gay rights and all the way up to civil rights. He was a real gentleman."

Button was born in Rochester, NY., and came to UF in 1973. He earned his doctorate from the University of Texas in 1975 and specialized in the study of minority and urban politics.

Hedge said Button was an astounding mentor and role model to many minority students and made an enormous impact on students and the university.

Button taught a variety of courses at UF, including race, gender and politics, politics of poverty, minorities and change, and gay and lesbian politics. In 2004, he was named the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences Teacher of the Year.

Over the course of his career, Button authored numerous publications and books, including "Black Violence: Political Impact of the 1960s Riots," "Private Lives, Public Conflicts: Battles over Gay Rights in American Communities" and "Blacks and Social Change: The Impact of the Civil Rights Movement in Southern Communities."

Button served as interim chair of his department for a year as well as on the editorial board of the University Press of Florida. His book "Blacks and Social Change" won two book awards including the V.O. Key Prize.

Christian fraternity seeks new dimension in brotherhood

By KYLIE CRAIG
Alligator Writer
kcraig@alligator.org

The members of Kappa Upsilon Chi consider themselves a fraternity in every sense of the word, but they are not stereotypical frat boys.

There's no drinking. No allegations of hazing, either.

Sure, they have socials, pledges and require the same commitment as other fraternities on campus. But unlike other fraternities, every facet of this organization is biblically based.

Kappa Chi's pledge process is focused on time commitment toward faith. Pledges are required to attend church, Bible study, study hall and an accountability group with brothers once a week.

In its second semester at UF, the fraternity has 14 active members and 17 Fall pledges.

Kappa Chi founding member and President Gary Bernau said he attributes the fraternity's success to its uniqueness.

"The fact that it's so different — it's not that there's any other Christian fraternities on campus," he said. "Everybody in the group is an individual. They're all very different, but we can all come together for one purpose." Carlos Reyes, 18, said he decided to pledge Kappa Chi because of the new surroundings and pressures that come along with being a freshman at UF.

"I need a group of Christian men to keep me accountable in my walk (with Christ)," Reyes said. "I don't like to use the word awesome for many things, but it's definitely up there."

As a fraternity, Kappa Upsilon Chi claims it has something different to offer to students than the numerous larger Christian organizations.

"This organization offers the opportunity for it to be just men. ... It's a very personal setting to get to know each other and get to grow in your faith," Bernau said.

Without a house, or plans for one in the near future, Kappa Chi has been holding chapter meetings and initiating members at the Reitz Union and local churches.

Bernau said the fraternity's goal is to "create a solid foundation so that in the future we don't stray from what we started this organization as."

"When you see a group of guys come together like within this fraternity, it really starts to make sense."

Kappa Chi is registered with the Student Activities Center as a religious organization.

The fraternity was founded at Texas Tech in 1993.

Freshmen trying to open 'Closet' in Gainesville

By GALEY GRAVENSTEIN
Alligator Contributing Writer

With more than 10,000 dresses hanging in Becca's Closet, would-be Cinderellas never have to worry about finding a dress for the ball.

And two UF students are working to bring the dream to Gainesville.

UF freshmen and friends Jenna Goldstein and Chelsea Koff are searching for a storage location in Gainesville to start a UF chapter of Becca's Closet, an organization founded by their friend and former classmate, Rebecca Kirtman.

"We want to bring it to high schools here and get UF involved," said Goldstein, who knew Kirtman since elementary school. "With all the sorority functions, I'm sure we could get girls to donate their dresses."

Kirtman launched a dress bank in her hometown of Plantation in 2001 to collect formal dresses for girls unable to afford them for prom or Homecoming.

Two years later, just before the start of her junior year of high school, Kirtman was driving home from an orientation at Nova High School when her Mustang collided with a sport utility vehicle and skidded under a truck.

After the accident, Kirtman's friends and family continued her efforts and formed Becca's Closet, a nonprofit organization that has expanded worldwide with chapters in Singapore and London.

Before the accident, Kirtman single-handedly collected more than 250 dresses, and since her death, Becca's Closet has benefited more than 9,000 high school girls.

"Girls come into it not knowing what to expect, but they soon realize these are more than your average dresses."

Chelsea Koff
UF freshman

All donated formalwear and accessories, including jewelry and purses, are stored in cities where an official chapter is located.

"Becca would be very proud that Jenna and Chelsea are taking it upon themselves, in a school of 48,000 students, to help keep her dream alive," said Kirtman's brother, UF junior Ian Kirtman. "It means a lot to me and my family."

No proof of financial need is required. Only a student ID is needed to schedule a fitting appointment. Gowns can be kept, but returning it to the Closet is encouraged.

"We can give away the dresses for free because everything, from the storage places to the hangers, is donated," Koff said. "We even have services like dry cleaning, manicures and pedicures donated to the girls."

The Closet's large collection means that finding a gown is possible for most anyone.

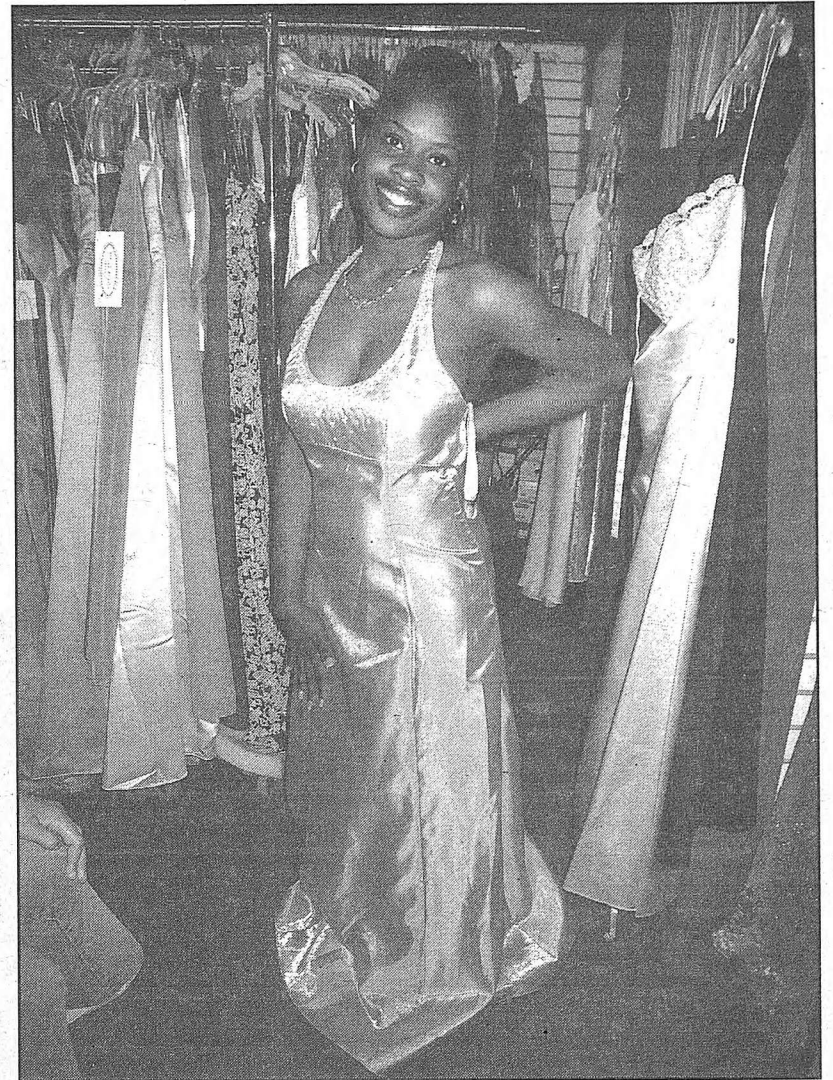

"Girls come into it not knowing what to expect, but they soon realize these are more than your average dresses," Koff said. "We have every size, style and color imaginable. The soap opera 'The Young and the Restless' even gave us a bunch of dresses straight off the set of their prom episode."

Koff said she would happily walk around campus all day in a prom dress if it would provoke questions about the cause and get UF students involved.

Donations have arrived from across the country, including an anonymous shipment of gowns worth $10,000 from Mississippi, she said.

Individuals such as Koff and Goldstein maintain the organization.

For more information about Becca's Closet, visit the national Website at www.beccascloset.org or contact Goldstein at (954) 292-8749.

Vigil for victims extinguished

By TIM HUSSIN
Alligator Contributing Writer

Students waited on the steps of the Reitz Union Amphitheater with the hope of watching a slideshow and taking part in a candle-lighting ceremony in remembrance of Hurricane Katrina victims Thursday night.

The candles didn't burn, and the projector waited idly at the bottom of the steps.

The candlelight vigil organized by the Gator Hurricane Relief Team was postponed Thursday night due to low turnout.

"Tonight's turnout was not what we desired it to be, and we wanted it to affect as many people as possible," said Jared Hernandez, the coordinator of the Gator Hurricane Relief effort.

The event was supposed to start at 8 p.m. but was called off about 15 minutes later after only 20 people showed up. The group plans to reschedule the event for sometime in October.

"We're looking forward to making this event as it could and should be — for students to participate as much as possible," said Alana Rush, co-director of Gator Hurricane Relief. "We expect a much bigger turnout."

The event will not change from its original agenda.

"The vigil will be an event of remembrance," Hernandez said. "It's an evening to honor those that have been affected. It will give hope for people to move forward."

The event will feature a performance by the University Gospel Choir and speeches by Student Body President Joe Goldberg, Dean of Students Gene Zdziarski and students from the Gulf Coast area.

The choir and speakers showed up, but gradually trickled away once Hernandez postponed the event.

Goldberg maintained an optimistic outlook.

"I feel very warm inside to see our students come together to affect the lives of the victims," Goldberg said.

Rush said the event is an opportunity for students to develop an emotional connection to the relief effort.

"The event symbolically shows solidarity — that everyone can make a difference and shine some light on the lives of the affected people," Rush said.

The group has collected a total of $30,000 for the American Red Cross so far.

UF dentistry students to hold field day at Wauburg

A cow and the College of Dentistry's molar from teaming up with dental students and faculty for a day of competition at Lake Wauburg.

On Saturday, UF's chapter of the American Student Dental Association will host Mighty Molar, an event for UF pre-dental ASDA undergraduates, dental students, college faculty and their families.

"It's just something for us to get out of the dental school and have a little friendly class competition," said Jose Sarasola, 22, a sophomore dental student and president-elect of ASDA at UF.

The annual field day will include tug-of-war and a three-legged race.

The dental students will get a chance to shine during the "trayless alginate impressions" competition, in which the four classes' teams and pre-dental students' team will race to take the best impromptu impression of a team member's mouth.

The cavity guard will step aside, however, for the sweetest competition of the day, the Mighty Molar bake-off.

ASDA cabinet member-elect Michelle Martinez is in charge of the bake-off and said she is looking forward to the apple pie and flourless chocolate cake with raspberry glaze and homemade icing that will be among the entries.

Although four faculty members will be in charge of judging, Martinez said the sweetest part will be when the table is opened for all to do their own taste-testing after a winner is chosen.

"That is what I am looking forward to," Martinez said. "It's going to be a lot of fun."

Election follies

Gator should ensure fair play in next election

Election week is over, and the Greek tyranny will continue.

A few rogue redshirts broke through the barrier while no one was looking, but Impact largely lost. The Gator Party took at least 37 of 46 open Senate seats.

The Editorial Board is willing to play nice and give the new Gator senators a chance. We're in the here and now. The past is over.

Hopefully, Student Government officials will keep an open dialogue with reporters so the student body knows how SG is working for them.

But maybe next election will be our day to shine.

Keeping with this optimism, we have come up with a brilliant plan that's sure to make everyone happy.

We want the Student Senate to get rid of "I Voted" stickers once and for all.

In this election, there were reports of some students asking for others' stickers. It seems as though some fraternities and sororities give members a quota. This not only ensures that members vote but that those members get a few friends to vote as well.

It's not that this method is bad — it encourages voting.

But to prove that The Gator Party isn't dependent on the votes of students in fraternities and sororities, senators should pass a bill ridding elections of the stickers.

We're not saying they should prohibit Greeks on their ticket. Outlawing stickers will just give opponents a lot less to say.

However, if Gator Party officials want to come out and admit that they win solely by the Greek vote, we're all for that too.

We just want them to take a stance either way. Otherwise, we might start giving out free voting stickers.

But even if senators don't nix stickers, the election process should be as fair as possible. This time, it was tainted with needless deceit.

The Gator Party was almost guaranteed to win. So why does it seem that some officials went out of their way to tip the scales even more?

It just doesn't make any sense.

Take Supervisor of Elections Daniel Maland. He said he didn't approve two Impact posters because he thought they contained material offensive to the student body.

One quoted Sen. Jackie Pace as saying "In the past we kind of tended to give away money," followed by "Vote Impact." The other included the phrase "Vote Naked," referring to Impact's support of online voting from home.

Both are examples of excellent advertising.

Maybe we can stretch our imaginations to see how the second one is offensive. Maybe we can pretend UF students are a bunch of prudes who can't handle the word "naked." Maybe.

But probably not.

The first one is unfortunate for Sen. Pace but in no way does it fall under offensive. Pace said it.

Maland extended his power outside of what is detailed in the election codes. It would seem like he was studying everything that came to him with a microscope.

Then why did he allow several fraternities to put up "banners" that were over the size specified in the codes for posters? And why did he not know that those Greek houses fell under the codes in the first place (at least according to University Police)?

It's all so unnecessarily fishy.

There's one thing that can be done that will at least give every student a fair chance to vote, fishiness aside.

Next time, put up some signs so we know where to vote.

Democrats should live without filibuster

Way to be classy, U.S. government.

No really, I'm serious this time.

Republicans nominated a seemingly levelheaded Supreme Court candidate when they could have opted for a raging fundamentalist, and then Senate Democrats let him through after appropriate scrutiny.

We far too rarely see that sort of rational behavior in American politics.

Now we'll have to wait to see whether or not both parties can do it again.

I think the Republicans will do their part. They have to realize that a heavily conservative candidate won't fly, considering the shaky political climate.

That's especially true considering the moderate leaning of retiring Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, whom the new candidate will replace.

But I'm not so sure Democrats will play nice.

At this point, any suggestion from the media that Republicans may select anything other than a hard-line moderate prompts Senate Democrats to raise their fists to the sky and mutter "filibuster" under their breath.

I'm sure plenty of irate readers will accuse me of being a rampaging conservative because of this, but it's time for us to set aside our petty affiliations and deal with something that's been plaguing American politics since its earliest days.

The filibuster is one of the dumbest things ever to come out of our country.

This never is an acceptable political retort: "Oh, is that what you think? In response, allow me to read out of the phone book for 37 hours."

Our government is based on simple principles. Citizens vote to elect representatives, and those representatives make decisions.

When more representatives support a decision than oppose it, that decision comes to pass — unless it's the sort of decision that can't be made when the margin is too close.

You can't stop something that has clear support from the majority by sticking your fingers in your ears and screaming until you get your way.

To be fair, I have no doubt Republicans would do the same thing in the Democrats' place. It's hard to blame anyone for using our political system to his or her best possible advantage.

That's why we need to remove this loophole.

If you think the minority party doesn't have enough say in the legislative branch, do something constructive about it. Fight for legislative reform, not for the right to whine.

If Democratic senators feel they aren't heard, they can push for procedural changes — or get on their party about working harder in the next election.

Don't hide behind meaningless complaints about "checks and balances" or "the tyranny of the majority."

Legislation passes if it has enough support. That's how our system works.

People have a problem realizing there's no inherent right for your party's views to be represented in the government.

If you elect enough representatives, you get heard. If you don't, you don't.

So, Republicans: Don't abuse your power, because your nominee will shape U.S. law for many years to come.

Democrats: Rally all you want, gather support and make your individual decisions as to whether the nominee is right for the job. If enough of you believe he or she is wrong, and if you can solicit some bipartisan support — which if the nominee is poor enough, you will — you can make a stand in the great tradition of American politics.

If not, put down the cookbooks, megaphones and caffeine pills, step away from the lectern and let it go.

Parking decals should correspond to spot

I am a commuter from Northwest Gainesville. It is too far to bike, and I can't take the bus because I have to get to and from work between classes. I have purchased a parking decal and enjoyed its wonderful benefits, as well as the boost to my sarcasm index.

I have received several parking tickets because there have been no spaces for me to legally park in order to attend classes.

The pinnacle was Tuesday, when I found out the university closed much of the commuter parking so vendors could park there for the career fair.

I certainly agree that the career fair is an important and valuable event. But why must I lose my already slim chance of finding a parking space for it when there are other options? For the record, I show up one-and-a-half hours early on average to find parking each day.

I politely asked the individual working the "gate" to let me park so I wouldn't be late for class. I was answered with an "absolutely not."

This brings up a pertinent question: What is the university here for? My understanding is that its main mission is to create and foster higher education.

I believe the university does have this in mind but needs to establish it to help build collegiate community. I contend that not being able to make it to class on time, even though

I looked for a spot for over an hour, does not further my higher learning.

The career fair certainly helps many students, but it seems as though they could meet elsewhere; I cannot hold my class off campus.

I am not one to bring up a complaint without having a potential and viable solution.

I suggest the following:

1. The university continues to sell decals.
2. Each decal has a number that corresponds to a particular space somewhere on campus.

Obviously, people might not be pleased with their designated spot. Maybe it is far away from the building in which they usually attend classes. I do not propose the school spend lots of time and money on fixing this when they can be using this money to make new parking spaces for the decals sold.

So I have a third recommendation: Students should be able to trade decals via an online bulletin board.

Students could then work out their spots using their own resources. Once traded, they can update the university online.

While there are issues that need to be worked out with such a system, I feel that they would be miniscule in relation to the current parking crisis. This would be a fair system that treats students with equality, respects the student population as a real community and provides an effective and ethical opportunity for UF to make money on parking.

Cartoon reaction mirrors UF experience

The buzz that swirled around the Kanye West cartoon was similar to my and many other African American students' experiences at UF. The Alligator only reminded us why many minorities leave Gainesville without the gleeful school spirit of our colleagues.

I would like to address your chosen responses to the outrage expressed by current students of all races.

I am interested to know Marlette's frame of reference in depicting an educated African American woman such as Condoleezza Rice saying this word. This statement implies that Marlette is assuming that the use of the n-word by other blacks is accepted by all blacks as a cultural standard. Rather, it is used by certain African Americans within certain media, such as music and comedy. For example, just as the language used by rock musicians is not representative of the entire Caucasian community, neither are all of the words used within rap and hip-hop music representative of the African American community.

However, I paused prior to writing this letter because as Marlette stated, "[He thinks] there are a lot more rational and reasonable people who like the cartoon and understand that it's not a racist statement." As an attorney, logic and reason are my trade. However, I could not justify the use of the n-word in a cartoon as an appropriate political statement.

Although Marlette selectively used the word as entertainment, its historical sting was not selective. It was used to justify the death and oppression of people based on the color of their skin. Further, the fact that certain blacks use this word is no justification for its use by the Alligator. Many would argue that African Americans have the ability to use the word (without the same protest) based on the fact that they were "victims" of the word.

For example, I, as an African American, would never use derogative words used against persons of Jewish ancestry, even if they chose to use these words. I also think Marlette would never think of using words spoken against Jews during the Holocaust or persons who have immigrated to this country to further a political point.

For although the Alligator is an independent paper, the fact that you cater to UF students makes the articles and cartoons you decide to print a reflection of the points of view of the entire Alligator and the university.

Machen infiltrates FBI board

■ THE ADVISORY PANEL IS INTENDED FOR 'OPEN DIALOGUE' BETWEEN UNIVERSITIES AND THE FBI.

By LYNDESE LEWIS

Alligator Writer
llewis@alligator.org

Amid efforts to become a Top 10 university, UF President Bernie Machen has joined an FBI-sponsored group of educators working to increase interaction between prominent universities and tackle national security issues related to higher education.

Earlier this month, FBI Director Robert Mueller III established the National Security Higher Education Advisory Board.

The board is composed of presidents and chancellors from 16 American universities, including the University of Pennsylvania and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"It's meant to be an open dialogue with college presidents so they can express their concerns."

William Carter
FBI spokesman

FBI spokesman William Carter said the board's primary purposes are to establish lines of communication between universities about security concerns, provide research opportunities for members of school communities, and advise the FBI about higher education issues.

"It's meant to be an open dialogue with college presidents so they can express their concerns," Carter said.

The board will meet three times a year in Washington, D.C. While the first meeting is scheduled for later this Fall, Machen and other university presidents will be attending other related meetings in each of their respective regions.

Additionally, students and professors from participating universities may get the opportunity to do work for the FBI.

"If you have an expert on Middle Eastern studies, they could come lecture FBI officials," Carter said.

However, the board will not be focusing on all international issues.

Although international-student enrollment in many U.S. colleges is declining, Carter said the board was not created to increase those numbers.

"If the issue comes up, we'll look at it," Carter said, "but that's more of a state department immigration issue."

Several issues not addressed by commission COMPLAINT, from page 1

Impact had filed a complaint that Maland's rejection of this and another poster was an abuse of power.

The second poster read "Vote naked," advocating a vote-from-home Internet-voting system.

The commission invalidated Impact's complaint because it did not name a violated election code.

But in a phone interview, commission Chairman Jimmy Morgan said Impact should bring the issue to the SG Supreme Court because Maland did act outside his jurisdiction.

He said SG statutes dictate only that Maland be alerted of campaign material before it is used.

"He doesn't have any power to deny someone the ability to put something up," Morgan said. "That's probably a free-speech violation."

The commission also could not deliberate on a number of complaints because the defendants were not notified to appear within 12 hours of Thursday's hearing.

Complaints to be discussed include allegations of sexual harassment and battery against William Perry, Gator's Rawlings-area Senate candidate. Also, advertisements hanging out of houses along Fraternity Row were alleged by Impact to violate size requirements and have no approval from Maland.

The commission did not set a meeting to hear the remaining complaints at press time.

Distinguished Faculty chosen

■ SIX PROFESSORS WILL BE HONORED AT HOMECOMING.

By KATY LAYTON

Alligator Contributing Writer

Six UF faculty members will be acknowledged on Florida Field during Homecoming weekend after being selected for the 2005 Florida Blue Key Distinguished Faculty award.

Professors Nora Alter, Marc Branch, Kenneth Gerhardt, Gerhard Ritter, Carlos Risco and the deceased William Frazer were announced as the award winners Wednesday at the Education Celebration luncheon in the Keene Faculty Center in Dauer Hall.

The recipients were chosen from a group of about 18 applicants and nominees, said Matthew Wein, Homecoming general chairman.

They will cruise in a convertible at the front of the Homecoming parade, dine as honored guests at the President's Brunch, attend the FBK Homecoming Alumni Reunion and stand on the field during the Homecoming game at the end of the first quarter, said Danny Miller, the Distinguished Faculty coordinator.

Carlos Risco, a professor in the department of large animal clinical sciences in the College of Veterinary Medicine, said he was "totally shocked and surprised" when he finally dug through his mail Tuesday after a busy semester and found a letter from FBK about the award.

"The award winners are chosen because of their dedication to the university, research, students and the greater Gainesville community."

Matthew Wein

Homecoming general chairman

"All my life, since I played football at Dixie Hollins High School in St. Petersburg, I have wanted to go on the [UF] football field," he said, though he will be unable to attend the festivities because of a conference in Spain. "I was devastated to find out I couldn't make it."

Wein said the opportunity for the Distinguished Faculty recipients to be announced at the Homecoming game is something new this year, and he is grateful to the University Athletic Association for making it possible.

FBK has been giving the Distinguished Faculty award to outstanding UF faculty members since 1945.

"The award winners are chosen because of their dedication to the university, research, students and the greater Gainesville community," Wein said.

The Education Celebration happens to coincide with Teacher's Appreciation Day this year, he said.

The luncheon was held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. so faculty members and students could come and go casually, said Ashley Hinton, director of the Education Celebration.

About 50 people attended the event, which was sponsored by the Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils.

said. "The education world says these are the up-and-coming things."

In Fishwick's undergraduate course on Aesthetic Computing at UF, the concept is explored on a deeper level.

"The method as we teach it on the university level deals with learning other things, such as how a program is structured or how data is structured," he said.

In the course, students work on structures that represent mathematical equations. These are eventually transformed into 3-D art forms and displayed at the end of the semester in a campus gallery, Fishwick said.

Experiments are being performed at UF to determine if college students would be more interested in learning computing through Aesthetic Computing.

"It is a natural way of putting creativity, design and arts into the computer science curriculum," Fishwick said.

In addition to helping students learn, Fishwick believes Aesthetic Computing will help people discover a wider definition of mathematics and computing.

"One of the goals of Aesthetic Computing is to analyze the role of aesthetics in mathematics and computing to see whether we can broaden those areas to be of the same richness we find in the arts," he said.

Freshman Tartt to start; Brooks to miss 4-6 weeks think that it's third-and-12, throw the ball 12 yards. We don't believe that at all.

"We might get the boos once and a while and all that. But follow the plan to win: do not throw that ball at the opponent. If you need to punt it away, punt it away."

As one of five collegiate quarterbacks without an interception this season, Leak has aided UF to a Southeastern Conference-best plus-9 turnover margin, tying No. 3 Virginia Tech for best in the country.

But, is it possible for a quarterback to complete a pick-less season?

After a brief disclaimer and a good-luck tap on the lectern from where he spoke, center Mike Degory had an answer: "We'd like to try."

TARTT TO START: Meyer announced senior Tavares Washington and freshman Jim Tartt will start at guard Saturday but said sophomore Drew Miller and junior Steve Rissler also will play.

Tartt's tenacity in his first collegiate start against Kentucky on Saturday impressed Meyer so much that the coach decided to keep the freshman in the starting lineup even with Washington now healthy.

"Tartt gave us something," Meyer said.

"He gave us some movement, and we're facing some powerful defensive linemen. So he's the kind of guard you're looking for [with] a big block. He's got a lot of talent."

THIS AND THAT: Backup cornerback Nick Brooks underwent arthroscopic surgery to repair damaged cartilage in his left knee on Thursday.

Meyer said he expects the junior to sit out about four weeks.

While players might fear Meyer's wrath, Meyer's son Nathan showed everybody at Thursday's practice who's really in charge, sporting a T-shirt saying: "My dad's the coach, but I'm the boss."

"All of a sudden we've got news press standing outside our doors," Hodge recalled. "It was like, 'Oh my gosh.' It just blew us away."

Looks like Hodge wasn't the only one blown away. And on that note...on to the Picks!

Playing center in first place with a 27-13 record is gay-wannabe Bryan "I'm going to have battle with my bowels and lose" App, who continues whining about being body-slammed and choked by Louis in the Bullpen. Hey, he never gouged out your eyes, did he?

In the goalie box for Iran and in second place with a 26-14 record is Middle East correspondent Farzad "I communicated with the raccoons while you guys were in Lexington" Safi, who is currently writing a term paper on Nancy Drew for his Adolescent Literature class.

Sliding into third place with a 25-13 record is Publix water boy Eric "I really don't know what direction my life is headed in" Esteban, who has taken the lead in Alligator homerism with his Chris Leak MySpace.com backdrop and Gators cell background.

Playing backup point guard and debuting a three-way 23-17 scrum for last place is scruffy Andrew "this Picks Column fits my weekend activities perfectly" Abramson, who knows he would have let those two male escorts in if he was only sober.

Also bringing up the rear, sporting yet another crap-ass 23-17 record is resident fingernail fencing champion aka Louis "The All-American Rejects are the best band ever" Anastasis, who had to splurge on set of plastic sheets after a particularly intense wet dream involving Rejects' front man Tyson.

And capping the suckiness with a 23-17 record is jockey Ian "My gecko smiled at me yesterday" Fisher, who wishes he hadn't passed out before Amber the escort dropped by.

UF-Bama Timeline

1916	The Gators lose to Alabama, 16-0, in the first-ever meeting between the schools.	1923	The bookies didn't give UF a chance with 10-1 odds, but that didn't faze the Gators. Some orange-and-blue diehard must have struck it rich as UF snuck away with a 16-6 victory.
1930	Coming to Gainesville for the first time ever didn't faze Alabama much, as the Tide rolled on to a 20-0 blowout of the Gators.	1948	After a 17-year absence, the UF-Alabama series resumed with a 34-26 Crimson Tide victory.
1951	After a 27-year drought, the Gators finally pulled one out against the Crimson Tide and in Tuscaloosa nonetheless.	1963	From 1958-1982, Alabama coaching legend Bear Bryant lost just one game in Tuscaloosa. Astonishingly, it came at the hands of an unranked Gators team. The Crimson Tide hadn't allowed more than 7 points in a game in nearly three years, but the Gators broke the streak with a 10-6 win.
1987	Emmitt Smith jump starts his record-setting freshman season, rushing for a UF-record 224 yards and leading the Gators to a 23-14 win at No. 11 Alabama. Smith would go on to break his single-game record and become the quickest freshman to gain 1,000 rushing yards.	1990	Steve Spurrier foreshadows his decade of SEC dominance with a 17-13 victory in his second game from the sideline and first road trip as the Gators' coach.
1992	The Gators' first trips to the SEC Championship Game were parallel matchups with opposite results. After losing, 28-21, in '92, UF turned the Tide on Alabama to claim the title with a 28-13 victory in '93.	1999	In arguably Spurrier's worst season at the helm, No. 21 Alabama shocked No. 3 UF at the Swamp, 40-39 in overtime. The Crimson Tide followed up with a 34-7 pounding of the Gators in the SEC Championship.

FLORIDA How They Match Up ALABAMA

FLORIDA RUN vs. ALABAMA RUN DEFENSE:

Florida rushes for 149.2 yards per game; Alabama allows 87.8 yards rushing per game.

KEY PLAYERS: UF: Jr. TB DeShawn Wynn (43 att., 194 net yds., 4.5 avg., 5 TD), Jr. TB Skyler Thornton (16, 75, 4.6) UA: Sr. LB DeMeco Ryans (15 u.a.t., 15 a.t., 30 t.t.), Jr. LB Juwan Simpson (8-12-20)

ANALYSIS: DeShawn Wynn may have scored four touchdowns against Kentucky, but going up against Ryans could make this more challenging. Florida's running game had trouble against Tennessee, and Alabama's run defense could be just as tricky.

ADVANTAGE: Alabama

FLORIDA PASS vs. ALABAMA PASS DEFENSE:

Florida passes for 268.2 yards per game; Alabama allows 144.8 yards passing per game.

KEY PLAYERS: UF: Jr. QB Chris Leak (1,037 yds, 9td-0int, 71.1 pct, 173.5 rating), Jr. WR Chad Jackson (32 rec., 401 yds., 12.5 avg., 6 TD), Jr. WR Jemelle Cornelius (14, 217, 15.5, 0) UA: Sr. FS Roman Harper (11-12-23), So. CB Simeon Castille (9-6-15)

ANALYSIS: Alabama's pass defense, ranked No. 1 in the nation last season, returns with a roster loaded with talent. Leak has yet to throw an interception, but this will be a major test for the junior quarterback and the rest of Meyer's offense.

ADVANTAGE: Alabama

ALABAMA RUN vs. FLORIDA RUN DEFENSE:

Alabama rushes for 184.8 yards per game; Florida allows 79.0 yards rushing per game.

KEY PLAYERS: UA: Sr. RB Kenneth Darby (77-412, 5.4, 1), Jr. FB Tim Castille (26-65, 2.5, 5) UF: So. LB Brandon Siler (11-9-20), Jr. LB Earl Everett (11-4-15), ANALYSIS: While Darby is one of the better tailbacks in the Southeastern Conference, the majority of the touchdowns come from fullback Castille. Still, neither has faced a team with two linebackers as forceful as Siler and Everett.

ADVANTAGE: Florida

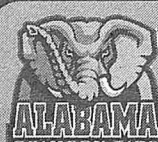

ALABAMA PASS vs. FLORIDA PASS DEFENSE:

Kentucky passes for 216.5 yards per game; Florida allows 138.0 yards passing per game

KEY PLAYERS: UA: Sr. QB Brodie Croyle (828, 6-2, 56.9, 135.2), So. WR DJ Hall (12, 231, 19.2, 3), Jr. WR Tyrone Prothro (12, 191, 15.9, 1) UF: Sr. CB Vernell Brown (19-1-20), Sr. SS Jarvis Herring (10-5-15)

ANALYSIS: Croyle may be one of the best quarterbacks in the SEC, but his numbers have been just slightly above average so far this season. The emergence of free safety Kyle Jackson has given Florida's secondary an added boost.

ADVANTAGE: Florida

SPECIAL TEAMS:

KEY PLAYERS: UF: Jr. kicker Chris Hetland (5-5, 47 long), Sr. punt returner Vernell Brown (14 rec., 4.3 avg., 22 long) UA: Jr. punt returner Tyrone Prothro (9, 9.2, 21), Jr. kick returner Tyrone Prothro (6, 29.5, 66)

ANALYSIS: While Alabama has a new place-kicker and punter this year, so do the Gators now with Nick Fleming in the game. Alabama gets the edge because of the explosive Prothro who pulls double duty as kick and punt returner.

ADVANTAGE: Alabama

INTANGIBLES: This one is a toss-up, but Alabama will be psyched thanks to trash-talking from the Florida camp and the first meaningful home game in years. Still, it's tough for a program to go from the bottom of a conference to the top so quickly, meaning that Alabama seems due for a reality check. Then again, so do the Gators. ADVANTAGE: Alabama

Mediocrity not an option as Leak looks to climb in Heisman race

He will flourish or he will fade.

He will light College GameDay on fire or he will succumb to Alabama's scorching defense.

Think this game is big for 'Bama? Think this is an afternoon when Mike Shula takes a step toward his father's legacy or starts wading through a Crimson Tide of Tuscaloosa malcontent?

Even bigger, even better, this could be a landmark game for Chris Leak's career. It's Heisman Trophy or bust for 12-Gauge.

Four weeks into the season, Leak is drowning in a pool of run-of-the-mill Heisman candidates.

Ever heard of Arizona State quarterback Sam Keller, Texas A&M quarterback Reggie McNeal or Wisconsin running back Brian Calhoun? None of the three are a

Louis Anastasis
Louis in the Bullpen
lanastasis@alligator.org

household name, yet all are treading Heisman water right there with Leak.

This is a game where Leak can catapult himself into the national spotlight, an opportunity for him to join the three-man race between Reggie Bush, Matt Leinart and Vince Young.

Actually, Leak has no choice. He must torch Alabama with a big game Saturday if he wants a shot at the Trophy.

As much as Urban Meyer wants to preach balanced offense, no one will get fooled into thinking that any of UF's backs could cut through a pile of Jell-O.

As much as everyone says this game will be won by defense, it has to be Leak that sings, "I'm Bad," and does the moonwalk after a couple of touchdown passes. It's time to lose the spread training wheels, to be a Smooth Criminal.

So far, Leak is right on Heisman pace.

The last four Heisman winners have been quarterbacks - flush Eric Crouch down your bowl because safeties don't count - and for the first four games of their Heisman seasons, they averaged a completion percentage of 63.3 percent. No one had higher than Leak's 71.1 percent through four games this year.

Through their first four games, those quarterbacks totaled 10 interceptions. Leak has none.

Most importantly, each of the Heisman winners, except Carson Palmer in 2002, accumulated 4-0 records.

A bad game from Leak against Alabama, a loss for the Gators at Alabama, will all but eliminate any Heisman hopes.

Shredding Wyoming was nice. Hammering Kentucky was refreshing.

Showing America Leak can lead the Spread 'n' Shred to victory against a top-caliber team? Priceless.

Because there's no value you can slap on the Trophy. And there's no getting that Trophy without laying a fat passing performance on the Elephants.

A 250-plus-yard game, a two-touchdown game, another win for the Gators, would nudge Leak beyond Keller, McNeal and the rest of the wannabes who don't belong in this conversation.

Against Tennessee, his biggest test so far, Leak marched UF down the field to seal the win - but he failed to throw a touchdown and break 200 yards passing.

Considering the win, that's nothing to complain about. But considering that the voluptuous, Rogaine-hounding writers and college-football know-it-alls who vote for the Heisman get high off stats, it won't get Leak a round-trip ticket to New York City's Downtown Athletic Club.

Saturday can be Leak's statement game.

Will you fire, 12-Gauge? Gator Nation hopes your safety won't be on.

Gators seek revenge on Vols

■ DESPITE A SLOW START FROM TENNESSEE, UF IS TAKING THE VOLUNTEERS SERIOUSLY.

SPENCER DAVIS-VANNESS

Alligator Writer
sdvanness@alligator.org

Look at the Tennessee soccer team, and it's likely that you won't quite understand what you're seeing.

Starting the season at No. 11, the Volunteers turned more than a few heads with a sluggish 2-4-1 start. Then, just as surprisingly, they surged back to win their first two Southeastern Conference matches and returned to the polls at No. 20.

But the No. 17 Gators (6-2-1), who will take on the Volunteers in Knoxville, Tenn., tonight, won't spend one minute worrying about the record or ranking of the team that UF coach Becky Burleigh said is being misperceived.

"This is a very good team," Burleigh said. "They just played a very, very aggressive non-conference schedule, and they got a couple of good wins out of it."

"They took a lot of hits, but I think it's conditioned them for the rest of the season. Their record is no indication of what type of team they are at all."

The history of the UF-Tennessee competition has been one of hard-fought battles.

Since 2001, the teams have met eight times. Four of these matches ended in a Volunteer victory and six continued into overtime.

More importantly, the Gators have not managed a win in Knoxville since 1999, when a defending national champion UF squad crushed the Volunteers 5-1.

Fresh in the minds of this year's squad, however, is defeat at the hands of Tennessee in an overtime heartbreaker at home last season. It's a loss that likely cost the Gator's a SEC regular season championship, forcing them to settle for a tournament title instead.

This year's team is outspoken in its goal to claim both titles in 2005.

"Friday's a big game," sophomore forward KeLeigh Hudson said. "They beat us at home last year in overtime, and we got revenge on them in the SEC tournament."

"But we're looking to get the regular season SEC and tournament championship this year, one of the first steps is beating Tennessee."

Red, White, Orange and Blue

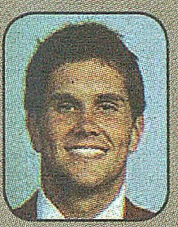

UF assistant coach and former Gators All-American Danielle Fotopoulos will miss some time with the team this October when she travels to California to prepare for the U.S. Women's National Soccer Team's Oct. 16 match with Australia.

Fotopoulos and fellow former UF players Heather Mitts and Abby Wambach were selected for a 24-player practice squad that will eventually be narrowed to 18.

Only North Carolina is as highly represented on the squad.

Leak for Heisman?

Here's how Leak compares to past winners through their first four games.

 Chris Leak 2005 81-114 passing, 71.1%, 1037 yards, 9 TD	 Matt Leinart 2004 85-125 passing, 68%, 1047 yards, 8 TDS, 1 INT	 Jason White 2003 86-132 passing, 65.2%, 1088, 11 TDs, 3 INTs
 Carson Palmer 2002 86-150 passing, 57.3%, 963, 5 TDS, 3 INTs	 Chris Weinke 2000 87-139 passing, 62.6%, 1244, 9, 3 INTs

 2001 Heisman winner Eric Crouch's stats not reflected due to lack of passing attempts.

Fighting the pain

By LOUIS ANASTASIS

Alligator Staff Writer

Jarvis Moss woke up on a regular morning on a regular school day in Denton, Texas, expecting to go out and do great things.

This was a day in the senior season of one of the top defensive ends in the country. Texas loves its high school football. Ryan High sure loved its Moss, a Parade All-American and USA Today First-Team All-American.

This was supposed to be a normal morning, full of promise, hope and big hits.

There was just one problem: Jarvis Moss could not walk.

His chest tightened like a sheet of steel. His stomach hardened into a knot of excruciating pain. Moss climbed up in bed. The pain intensified. He slumped to the floor and reached for a pair of jeans.

He could not dress himself; he could not walk.

Desperate for guidance, confused beyond belief, Moss phoned Ryan coach and confidant Joey Florence.

Florence could hardly make any more sense of the situation than Moss.

"That was the crazy part," Moss said. "One day I'm at practice running like my old self, and the next day coach was the first person I called, and I told him, 'Coach, I can't walk. I don't know what's wrong with me.'"

Moss had been headed for Gainesville, where Coach Ron Zook was giddy to add a speedy, powerful, 6-foot-6 end to the defensive mix. But all of a sudden, out of nowhere, Moss was going nowhere.

Deep inside his body, a heartless, carnivorous illness was dropping anchor.

The day before Moss awoke crippled, he had received a cortisone shot. His pelvic bone was bothering him, and he was in no mood to bail on his team and miss some games. The shot was administered into the bone; that's the only clue Moss had as to what was wrong.

Moss missed seven high school games.

"Even when I came back to play, I was still hampered by it, kind of like I would be when I got to college," Moss said. "I couldn't run well or anything like that."

Florence volunteered to take him to doctors, but it didn't matter. After every visit Moss and his coach left confused. After every episode the questions would multiply.

And so the changed player, the physically morbid player, arrived at UF in 2003 in crippled fashion.

"I knew he was hurting," said defensive end Jeremy Mincey, who joined the Gators one year after Moss' arrival. "Everybody knew he was hurting."

But no one knew why. Zook described Moss' ailment as tendonitis in the knees. Moss' weight began plummeting. After battling with ongoing pelvic pain, Moss received a medical redshirt in 2003.

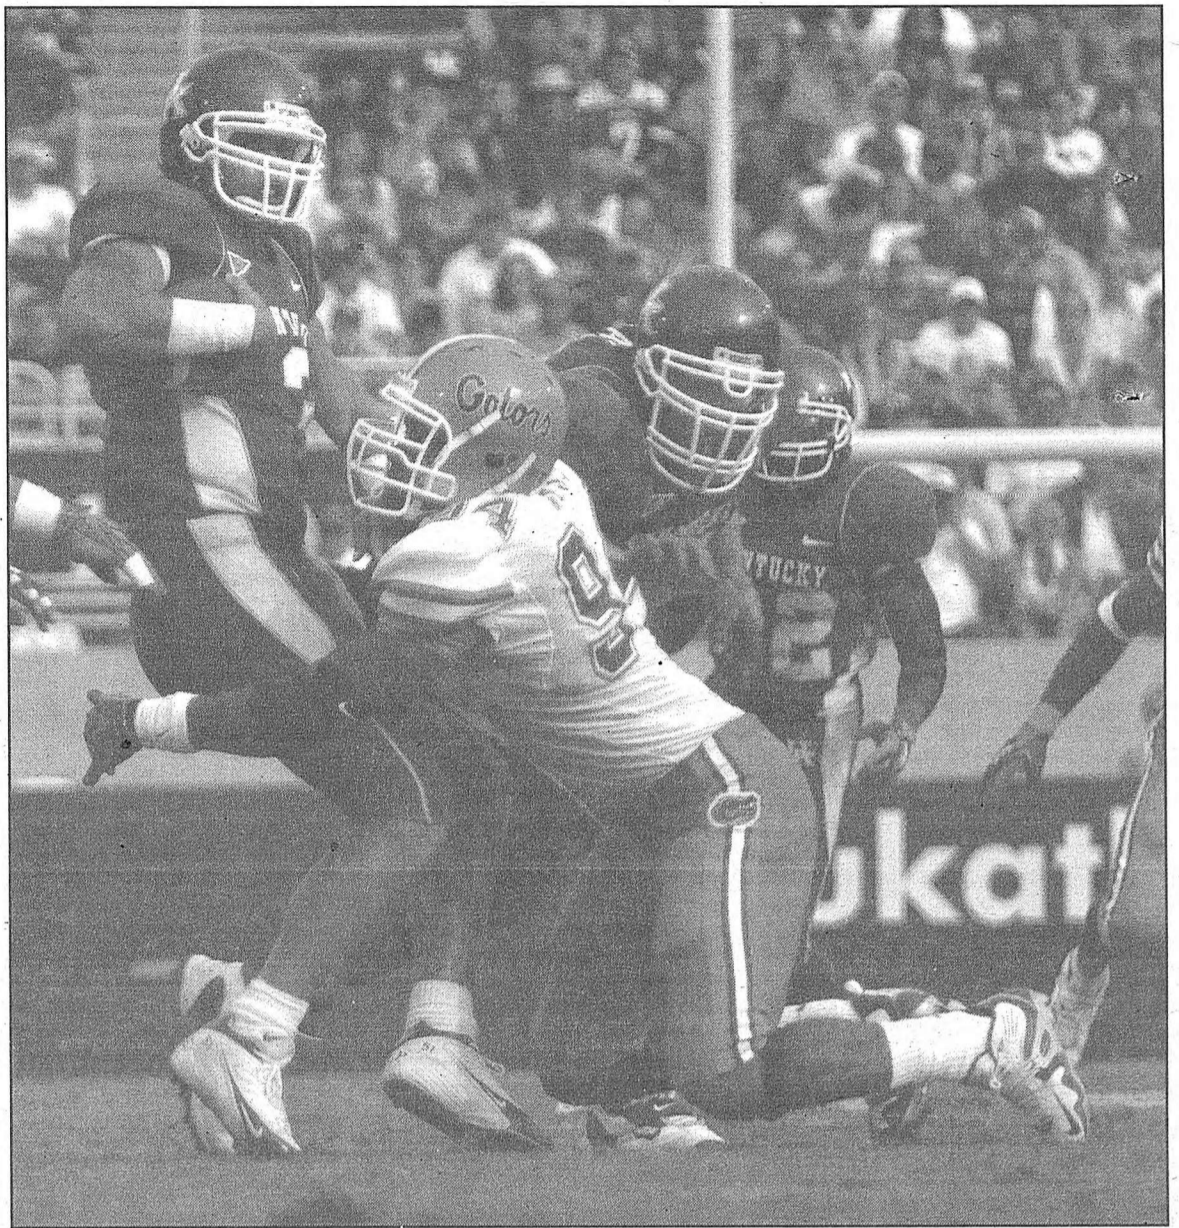

His spirits falling, his hopes dwindling, Moss wished there was an answer. The weak freshman didn't get one from UF's training staff.

"I knew it was something internal, but the old trainers with the old staff were just telling me that I needed to stretch - that it was my flexibility," Moss said.

Urban Meyer and his staff arrived and asked the same questions. But this time, they were going to find answers.

"He didn't look like the big strong football player that he is," said Anthony Pass, UF's head athletic trainer who is in his first season. "He was frustrated, and that frustrated me because I wanted to know what I could do to help this guy out."

Blood tests revealed that Moss' sediment level was 11 times higher than average. After analyzing bone chips from his pelvis, doctors concluded that bacteria had penetrated Moss' pelvic bone during the high school injection, causing a staph infection that feasted on his body.

With Moss on the verge of quitting football and moving on, the training staff hooked him up to an IV to pump nutrients into him for six weeks. His weight increased from about 218 to 240 pounds.

"When we first put on the treatment, you just saw this kid just go from someone who was completely dejected and who was at the end of his rope just start getting some fire back into him, some hope and excitement," Pass said.

Assuming he doesn't suffer additional setbacks, it is just a matter of regaining all his strength, of acclimating himself to Meyer's defense.

of redemption, Moss recorded three tackles and a sack against Kentucky.

"I was just happy inside," Moss said. "I just want to keep working to contribute to the team."

Yet, it doesn't seem to matter how good he'll be, just as long as Moss can enjoy life. As long as he has a reason to wake up in the morning.

UF VOLLEYBALL

UF wins despite hectic traveling

The long, twisting road home finally ended for the No. 6 Gators volleyball team.

What UF completed, despite its utter dominance in Southeastern Conference play since Coach Mary Wise's arrival in Gainesville, can only be described as its most difficult conference stretch of the season.

It wasn't, however, the three opponents against whom the Gators squared off that presented much of an issue, but rather the conditions under which the three matches were played.

UF had road matches at Mississippi State and Mississippi last weekend then had to turn around and play at Georgia on Wednesday night.

Wise, while proud of her team's efforts, was left wondering if any team anywhere had to face such obstacles.

"I still would love to know how many teams in the SEC, in any sport, have to play in three different cities in six days," Wise said. "It's just brutal."

Perhaps the best sign for the Gators is that every player on the floor is producing results, and every night seems to yield a new leader whom UF will be able to count on.

Kari Klinkenborg turned in the best performance of her career against Georgia with 13 kills and five blocks.

Angie McGinnis had 50 assists, 10 digs and nine kills against Mississippi State, only one kill short of the first triple-double in school history.

Marcie Hampton had 10 kills and 16 digs against Mississippi.

It is that type of balance that most excites Wise.

"We have told our team that we have so many different talents," Wise said. "That any one player on any given night can lead this team."

With the road trip behind them, the Gators open up a four-match home stand this weekend that will begin with just one match: a Sunday afternoon date with Kentucky.

The Wildcats have had a less-than-successful history against UF, with just a 7-33 record all time, including a 0-31 mark during Wise's tenure.

"This team is certainly well-deserving of a day off," Wise said. "It has been a brutal schedule."

"That's the schedule that was handed to us, and I think only this type of team with as much as heart as they show could handle this."

and show everybody this isn't the Gators that you're used to looking at.

We're trying to show them that we're really tough and that we're really going to go out and play."

Mincey

The Gators continue to use the same mentality that has led them to a 3-0 record: If the defense holds the opponent scoreless, or close to it, UF wins.

"They're going to try to run the ball down our throat," defensive end Jeremy Mincey said. "We like games like that."

We're planning to control the line of scrimmage.

"I expect our defense, if we come out with the right state of mind and play hard, we should come out a good victory. "I know if our defense stays focused the way we have the last couple weeks, anything is possible."

"It could be from a blowout to just a regular victory."

It's Stripper Month at the Alligator. And so, one week after profiling Kentucky billboard queen Kitten, we breakdown Florida Booby Headquarters, Pensacola strip joint Arey's Angels.

As you might recall, former Alabama head coach and nudity-junkie Mike Price went on a little sexcapade at Arey's in 2003 and was fired. Reports allege that Price dropped a few Benjamins on drinks and even more on girls that were young enough to be his daughters. They also allege that Price engaged in intercourse - as the Princeton grads prefer to call it - at a hotel with one of the strippers.

Seeing how the Price is always right at a strip club, we interviewed Gary Hodge, the manager who was on duty the night Price Spread 'n' Shred (forgive us, Urban) some girls. Hodge, a 10-year Florida resident and avid Gators fan who still works at Arey's Angels, confused Price for some nursing home escapee the night of the incidents.

"A friend pointed him out to me and asked, 'Do you know who that is?' And I said, 'No I don't have a clue,' Hodge recalled. "I wasn't surprised because all ages come here - from 18 to 80."

But why stop at 18? We know a lot of corrupted 15 year-olds who would empty their piggy banks for a live introduction to the Facts of Life.

Anyhow, reports claim Price started fondling a stripper in the semi-private dance area. And of course, we all know there is one big line separating the black from the white when it comes to watching and touching.

"We have a touch 'n go policy; ask anybody," Hodge said. "We have a six-inch rule for the girls between the guys. The customer is just not allowed to touch. We can tell when people start catching a buzz and we always warn everybody."

Guess Price must have left his hearing aid in Tuscaloosa cause he didn't

Gators face a worthy opponent in 'Bama

Top-10 defenses face off

For Gators fans still reeling from the Ron Zook era in Gainesville, imagine what the Alabama faithful have suffered in recent seasons.

After winning 12 national championships and 21 conference titles, the Crimson Tide withered away on probation. A 6-6 record last year was far from Alabama's worst season in the last decade.

"These guys are just as good, if not better than, Tennessee."

Mike Degory
UF center

No, the 2000 season proved Alabama's worst, when Mike DuBose's team limped to a 3-8 finish.

But suddenly the Tide is back, undefeated and one victory away from a possible top-10 national ranking.

The only team standing in its way is UF, also on a path of redemption after three mediocre 7-5 seasons.

Somebody has to lose.

"We thought Tennessee was going to be one of the toughest defenses we'd have to play, and then all of a sudden we look at the film and say maybe not," UF center Mike Degory said.

"These guys are just as good, if not better than, Tennessee."

It will be a battle of wills, and no one is expected to score easy points on Saturday.

UF and Alabama enter this game nationally ranked No. 5 and No. 7, respectively, in total defense.

While both teams boast talented tailbacks trying to break into the conference's elite (DeShawn Wynn for UF and Kenneth Darby for Alabama) and quarterbacks among the nation's best (UF's Chris Leak and Alabama's Brodie Croyle), it is defense that has defined the early season success for both the Gators and the Tide.

Alabama's season began with two less-than-inspiring wins against Middle Tennessee State and Southern Mississippi, but the Tide has picked up and outscored South Carolina and Arkansas by a combined 61-27.

The Gators have played just one other ranked team this season, defeating Tennessee 16-7.

That victory came as a surprise to many because the Gators were perceived to be an offensive-minded team that could win shootouts but not close, low-scoring affairs.

Now, UF enters Saturday's game viewed as equal with Alabama in terms of defensive prowess.

"We've always been known as a soft program, a finesse program - all about speed, whatever," UF senior safety Jarvis Herring said.

"We're just trying to go out

Leak hopes to continue pick-free season

Everybody's seen it before. A pitcher breezes through 7.2 innings without surrendering a hit. Then, just as the commentator reminds viewers of the no-no ... whap ... the batter hits a single down the baseline.

UF coach Urban Meyer knows such a scenario could translate to the gridiron.

Quarterback Chris Leak has thrown 114 passes in four games this season, and not one of them has been an interception.

Now, Leak is seven passes short of tying former Gators quarterback Danny Wuerffel's school record of attempts without an interception during the 1995 and 1996 seasons.

With the Gators facing arguably the best defensive secondary they've seen all season at

No. 15 Alabama on Saturday, the streak could be in jeopardy.

Still, Meyer's faith in his quarterback supersedes his superstition. He knows Leak will follow UF's "plan to win."

"We don't want him forcing things," Meyer said. "There's nothing wrong with dumping that ball down. There are some people that
