

Graham joins students to watch debate

Former senator holds Q&A

By JESSICA DaSILVA
Alligator Writer

Though he remained silent for most of the night, former U.S. Sen. Bob Graham could not help himself from applauding the mention of his alma mater during a debate Wednesday evening.

Graham sat with UF students to watch the televised gubernatorial debate between Democratic primary hopefuls Jim Davis and Rod Smith in Tampa.

Though Graham remained quiet for most of the debate, students surrounding him reacted to candidate responses with sporadic laughter, nods of approval or faces of confusion.

The event, which was hosted by Gators for Davis and organized by Student Government lobbying coordinator Jason Lutin, drew about 100 Graham supporters to the Reitz Union to watch the event.

The debate was followed by a question-and-answer session led by Graham, who asked students for their opinions about the gubernatorial candidates.

Hands shot into the air as Graham addressed inquiries.

He listened to answers intently, maintaining strict eye contact and rocking back and forth on his toes until students had finished speaking.

When asked what his impression of the debates was, Graham said both candidates looked uptight and that he doubted that the debate "moved a lot of people."

Graham was in the Gainesville area for meetings about the construction of Pugh Hall, which will house a public service center to be named in his honor, but he said Wednesday he was glad to watch the debate alongside students.

Graham, a UF alumnus and former Sigma Nu Fraternity member, said that his family has very strong ties to the university.

Research site in UF's favor

A California-based research center will build a second facility in Orlando to forge partnerships with the state of Florida and two of its universities — including UF.

Gov. Jeb Bush and Dr. John Reed, head of the Burnham Institute for Medical Research, held a news conference Wednesday in Tallahassee to announce the location of the proposed biomedical research facility. UF President Bernie Machen also attended the conference.

Researchers at the proposed facility will collaborate with UF scientists to study areas such as cancer, genetics, diabetes and aging.

UF Provost Janie Fouke said in an interview Wednesday that the university's partnership with Burnham has been in the works for several months.

"The match was a good match," Fouke said. "They're interested in cancer, so are we.

Bush

They're interested in aging and neurosciences; so are we."

Fouke said she did not know how much the facility is expected to cost but added that "we expect the collaboration potential to be tremendous."

Both Orlando and Port St. Lucie made bids to house the site, but Burnham chose Orlando as the facility's future location.

VP office still vacant

With Fall Student Government elections just over a month away, SG executives have yet to select a student to fill the office of Student Body vice president.

However, officials from several SG political parties say they are hoping to run a vice presidential candidate in the election, which will be held Sept. 26 and 27.

When former Student Body Vice President Lydia Washington resigned from her post in July, Student Body President John Boyles said he hoped to announce an interim successor within the next few weeks.

But as of Wednesday, SG's No. 2 office remained vacant.

Once Boyles chooses an interim vice president, that student will remain in office until the September election, when students will then vote on a permanent replacement.

The Student Body vice president supervises the SG Cabinet and works with other officials to oversee SG's hefty $12 million budget derived from student fees.

Thomas Jardon, president of SG's newly registered Action Party, said the SG administration should have been more proactive in appointing a new official to the No. 2 post.

"They had all that time when it was still undisclosed to deter-

Program's first graduates transform into teachers

■ GRADUATES CHANGED COURSE TO PURSUE CLASSROOM DREAMS.

By DREW HARWELL
Alligator Writer

A lawyer, a doctor and a scientific researcher gathered Tuesday to celebrate their new careers as teachers.

The Educator Preparation Institute at SFCC graduated its first class Wednesday on campus.

Since October, these 12 graduates, and four more who will graduate in the Fall A semester, have participated in five eight-hour Saturday classes and several weeks of classes that meet two nights a week.

After completing the program, the graduates took three tests and then earned their professional teaching certification, which will last five years.

Robin Edwards, coordinator for the institute, began the program in October 2005 after noticing certain things missing in other colleges' teacher preparation programs.

A teacher for 12 years, Edwards wanted to create a "straightforward and honest" program that would strengthen teachers with work in the classroom.

"I don't want to paint a rosy picture and then have the teachers crying ... saying 'this wasn't in the textbook,'" Edwards said.

Carmella Bright-Phillips, 41, a program graduate, worked in insurance for 20 years, but after the painful period of Hurricane Katrina she decided to pursue teaching.

"She wanted to be a teacher so bad, but she couldn't afford to quit work and take the program," Edwards said. "Everyone in the family put together money to see her do this."

During her speech at the ceremony, Bright-Phillips began to cry.

"I was touched by how important EPI has been to me," she said. "The instructors were always very compassionate and understanding. They instilled a passion in us."

Melissa Diblin, 41, graduated alongside Bright-Phillips.

After working as a civil engineer for eight years and then working part time to take care of her four kids, Diblin approached the principal of St. Francis Catholic High School and told him she had always wanted to teach math.

"He laughed," she said. "But now I work there, so he wasn't laughing for long." She teaches five different levels of math to three grades of high schoolers.

Linda-Sue Rucarean, 48, another graduate, had always wanted to be an English teacher but was discouraged by her parents.

After working as an assistant teacher at Oak Hall School, she decided to enroll in the program.

"After working in a classroom, I wanted my own," Rucarean said.

She now teaches 140 sixth-graders at Fort Clark Middle School.

Purse jackers afoot

By JAMES RIGNEY
Alligator Writer

Windows were smashed, and purses and wallets stolen this week in a rash of auto burglaries at several Gainesville fitness centers.

Police are looking for two men in connection with eight burglaries that occurred Monday and Tuesday, GPD spokesman Sgt. Keith Kameg said.

Kameg said police believe Melvin Brooks, 23, and Carlton Lee Grate Jr., 27, are involved in the thefts.

“They’re targeting cars driven by women because they’re finding purses and wallets are being left in plain view,” Kameg said. “They’re in the car just a matter of seconds and they’re taking cash, credit cards, checkbooks and IDs.”

The two men and an unidentified female are driving a gray 2006 Chevrolet TrailBlazer with the Georgia license plate number ARE9765. They were last seen

Tuesday in the parking lot at Gainesville Health & Fitness Center for Women parking, he said.

“A witness saw them cruising through, stop the car and seconds later a vehicle was broken into,” Kameg said. “Then they fled the area.”

The witness gave police the suspects’ tag number, and the car was traced to one of the men. Police discovered they had been arrested recently in South Florida for breaking into cars in fitness center parking lots.

The burglaries occurred at the Gainesville Health & Fitness Center for Women, the Gainesville Health & Fitness Center and the Girls Club of Alachua County.

Police believe the suspects left Gainesville, and a statewide alert has been issued.

Police ask anyone with information to contact Detective Kim Edwardson at (352) 334-2352.

Cease-fire fuels debateBy ALEX TIEGENAlligator Writer

Citizens of Georges Khoury's northern Lebanese hometown, Batroun, have to drive three hours to work and three hours back home. After Israeli bombings destroyed major roads, drivers taking secondary routes must deal with traffic jams.

"It'd be like if the highway to Miami were destroyed," said Khoury, a UF computer engineering graduate student, who was in Gainesville during the 34-day war.

"It was a booming economy, and it just went back to zero."

Georges Khoury
UF graduate student

Ten days after peace was achieved between Israel and Hezbollah, UF students and faculty dealing with the conflict's aftermath are skeptical that the cease-fire will last.

Ayala Betzaleli, Israeli program director for Hillel at UF, lived near the center of Israel during the conflict. An acquaintance of hers, Capt. Gilad Balahson of the Israel Defense Forces, was killed during fighting in Lebanon.

Betzaleli thinks an effective cease-fire agreement would have rid Lebanon of Hezbollah. She does not expect the tenuous peace to last much longer than a year.

"I believe that this war is a war worth fighting," she said, "because we're fighting for all the countries that have ever been attacked by terrorists."

Khoury, too, feels uneasy about the cease-fire, which was strained Saturday when Israel launched a raid on Lebanon. He said the cease-fire will only last if Israel maintains a stable relationship with Lebanon.

Khoury's family, which runs an agricultural business, is adapting to now-unstable economic conditions in the country.

"It was a booming economy, and it just went back to zero," Khoury said.

Khoury said some of Beirut's government buildings, roads and factories were destroyed in this summer's bombings. Many Lebanese must now live in trailers, he said.

Dennis Jett, dean of UF's International Center, is unhappy with the cease-fire agreement. He said U.S. officials favor Israel when they should be unbiased arbitrators.

The 2,000-troop U.N. peacekeeping force that the United States supports is not enough, Jett said. He said it is only a sentry-like force that is not taking measures to repair relations between Israel and Lebanon.

"The solution being proposed by Washington is just to stick a bunch of peacekeepers on the border until a solution is found," he said.

Katrina questions

A year after the disaster, not much has changed

Next week marks the one-year anniversary of Hurricane Katrina. To mark the occasion (and to prove once and for all that he does care about black people) George W. Bush will visit New Orleans on Monday. What's left of it, anyway.

Sure, the reconstruction effort is chugging along. But to say that it's really succeeding would be stretching the truth. Take the levees, for example. The levees that failed last August have been rebuilt, but the Army Corps of Engineers says they wouldn't withstand a Category 5 hurricane — like Katrina. If another storm hit tomorrow, the city could be submerged again.

But arguing about the recovery misses the point. Bush watched — or rather, didn't watch, because he wasn't paying attention — as a major American city turned into a swamp. More than 1,800 Americans died, and thousands more were forced out of their homes, refugees in their own country. New Orleans went from the First World to the Third World in record time, and Bush presided over the whole thing.

One year later, not much has changed. It's not even that voters are blaming the wrong people — they don't seem to be blaming anybody.

So we ask: Where's the outrage? Where's the accountability? Michael Chertoff is still running the Department of Homeland Security. Ray Nagin is still mayor of New Orleans. Half of the city is still under water, and the president has the gall to stage a photo opportunity.

It's enough to make you think our elected officials don't care about people, period.

Shrinking vacations

Summer break was fun, wasn't it? Lazing on the poolside, hitting the beach with friends, watching "America's Got Talent" for 12 hours straight — however you spent your time off, we hope you enjoyed it. Because if you're graduating soon, you might not do that again for a long, long time.

That's right: American workers, who already put in longer hours and take fewer days off than pretty much anybody, are losing their summer vacations, too.

According to a recent study, 60 percent of Americans had no plans at all for this summer — the highest percentage of stay-at-homers in 28 years. Amid high gas prices, stingy bosses and the BlackBerry wireless e-mail device, the family fishing trip just didn't make the cut.

That's why Congress — which takes a four-month break, starting every October — should mandate paid vacations for American workers. It's not as crazy as it sounds. In fact, in most of the industrialized world, it's the norm. French workers get 25 days a year, by law. Italians and Britons get 20. Even the Japanese get 10. Don't we deserve some "me time" too?

If there's one thing that unites liberal and conservative, Democrat and Republican, frat boy and hipsters, this is it: We all like to go on vacation. So let's do something about it. Write your congressman. Hell, write the president. Just be sure to send a copy to Crawford, Texas — there's no telling when he'll decide to take a break from the hustle and bustle of running the country.

Signing Sharpton a mistake

When I first read that Al Sharpton was going to speak here — for $24,000 — I naturally assumed that he would be paying us. But then the coffee kicked in, and I realized that we're paying him to preach at us in a flashy suit. I'm not against him speaking, but seriously: $24,000 for that goof? We got ripped off. Accent couldn't bargain him down to 50 bucks and a coupon for free dry cleaning?

Instead of paying Sharpton, Accent should give the money to anyone who can answer three questions. One: Besides his shameless self-promotion, what about Al Sharpton is so “controversial?” Two: How can he claim to champion the poor while at the same time doing commercials for predatory lending firms? Finally, most importantly, three: What exactly does Al Sharpton do for a living, anyway?

Graham tells alumni tales

“At last count, 16 members of our family went, and most graduated, from UF,” Graham said in an interview after the debate. “I was born the same year that my oldest brother graduated.”

He also said three of his four daughters graduated from the school.

“I have 11 grandchildren, and I hope they graduate from here, too,” Graham said.

Though he said he has many fond memories of his stint at UF, Graham said one of his favorite memories was of talking to a “stunningly beautiful brunette” during his time as an undergraduate.

She told him that she was having difficulty in her physical science class, and he told her he was willing to tutor her — and the rest is history.

“We’ve been married for 47 years,” he said. “Jimmy Buffett wrote a song called ‘Love in the Library.’ Well, that’s where our romance started — in the library.”

Gators for Davis publicity director Krysten Rosen said she feels that Graham’s presence at the event could help get the word out about the Davis gubernatorial campaign.

“[The purpose] was to get knowledge out about issues and get people interested and informed,” she said.

mine a course of action or a list of replacements so that when she resigned, they could have hit the ground running with finding a successor," Jardon said.

Boyles and SG Press Secretary Matt Chamoff could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Jardon said the Action Party plans to run a vice presidential candidate, but officials have yet to select one.

Gavin Baker, a student senator with the Unite Party, also said he was not pleased with the way Boyles — who is charged with selecting a vice presidential replacement — is handling the vacancy in his administration.

"At first, he said there wouldn't be an application process and that he would just appoint someone he had a relationship with," Baker said.

"Then he reversed course, all within the span of a day or two, to say there would be an open forum application process," he said.

Swamp Party leader Keith Hardwick said that Boyles, who ran with that organization, has done a "spectacular" job dealing with the vacancy.

"This is something that we did not see and did not plan for," Hardwick said.

"For that, President Boyles and Treasurer (Ryan) Moseley are doing a fantastic job because they're demonstrating again that the Swamp Party is about opening up the doors," he said.

Baker

Hardwick could not confirm whether the Swamp Party would run a vice presidential candidate in the Fall election but said he believes the party will be searching for a qualified student.

The Pants Party, another newly registered SG political group, has announced it will run UF senior Bruce Haupt for vice president.

According to a press release, Pants Party officials hope to bring positive change to SG by establishing a "Pants Cabinet," or "perhaps an armoire."

Fouke said both Orlando and Port St. Lucie offered to provide space for UF to construct its own building nearby.

The building's close proximity will allow UF researchers and faculty members easy access to the Burnham Institute, she said.

The facility is expected to provide more than 300 jobs in the next decade, and UF officials said they hope those slots will translate to additional benefits for the university.

UF Research "The addition of the Burnham Institute is very exciting not just because of the research collaboration, but because there will probably be employment opportunities for our graduates," said Christine Chase, who teaches an advanced genetics course at UF. "I always like to see opportunities for my students."

Opportunities could be on the horizon for UF faculty, as well.

The Burnham Institute will give some UF researchers the chance for joint appointments at both UF and the Burnham Institute.

UF also has ties to The Scripps Research Institute, another California-based research center that is developing a facility in Palm Beach County.

At Romanian dig site, student sweats for treasure

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of columns in which students narrate their summer experiences.

Working in an archaeological trench in Romania, I was on my knees for eight hours a day. We dug in teaspoon-sized scoops so that we didn't miss any small coins or bone fragments. My hands ached, and dirt stuck to my sweaty skin. Every once in a while, we had to chase off a stray cow or horse.

My fellow excavators and I were digging up the long-buried Roman city of Porolissum. I had signed up for a foreign archaeological field school with no training or experience. I was with 20 strangers in a country where horses and buggies are as common as automobiles, and where the language was foreign to me, ready to spend a month doing hard labor in the sweltering heat — for fun. I received no pay, no credit and no letter of reference.

But we uncovered structures that proved the city was bustling long after it was believed abandoned.

We were briefed on the town before we began digging. Porolissum was conquered by the Romans in 106 A.D., and it defended the Roman Empire at its very edge. Over time it expanded into a civilian town.

The Romans withdrew in 271 A.D., and many scholars believe that once they abandoned the area, everyone left, including the indigenous people. But the Romanian director of our dig, Alexandru Matei, believed that people might have continued living there afterward.

We dug in Porolissum's forum, which is similar to a present-day town center. It held government buildings, shops and possibly temples. These buildings were set up in a rectangle around a central courtyard. We were attempting to define the dimensions of the forum and get a better understanding of life at Porolissum.

Early in the dig, in the first trench that we opened, we found a rubble layer composed of stones and roof tiles, indicating that a building had once stood there.

After we documented the rubble layer, we removed it to see what was beneath. We found what we were looking for: an intact wall that, we guessed, outlined the courtyard of the forum.

As we dug deeper, we found another wall at a perfect right angle to the original wall.

In the corner of these two walls, we found a pile of domestic animal bones. The building rubble we found earlier must have constituted the remains of the town butcher shop, which would have been located along the courtyard of the forum.

By analyzing those courtyard walls, we eventually proved correct Matei's theory about habitation after the Roman withdrawal. It was obvious that buildings had been converted for use other than their original purpose.

The walls of these buildings were not at perfect right angles to the original walls, which they would have been if the Romans had built them. They were also built in a different style.

The Romans used large stones and mortar to build walls, but people from later periods also used cement and small bits of marble.

Finding these two types of walls conjoined shows that the later people used the Roman walls to help in their construction, but changed the building plans for their own uses.

We also determined that most of the trading was done locally, not with major centers such as Rome or North Africa. This was rare because almost all of the Roman provinces traded solely with Roman commerce centers.

Throughout our dig, we found many ceramics that, according to past archeological findings, were fired in Romania.

At one point, one of our Romanian workers tossed a piece of this ceramic into a pile with a shovelful of dirt.

We saw the shard of orange amid the flying dirt, and we panicked. Two of us climbed out of the trench and raced over to the pile to dig through it and look for this artifact.

We found it, but from then on we kept a closer eye on the workers.

Special to the Alligator

Top: UF student Dani Jahn spent part of her summer in the trenches of the ancient Roman city Porolissum. Bottom: During the dig, the group uncovered animal remains where the town butcher shop was once believed to stand, proving correct the theory that the city had life after the Romans.

GETTING BACK TO BASICS

Oh No! chases the American dream

By SHEM FLEENOR
Avenue Writer

On the surface they're unremarkable, another band trying to be somebody. But dig beneath the surface and you'll uncover something much greater.

Oh No! and the Tiger Pit represents a part of America that is fading — the American dream.

However, in recent years a more sinister, appalling version of the dream has cast its specter across the cultural landscape — a dream of starting out rich and somehow, regardless of talent (or lack thereof), becoming famous.

Oh No! harbors no such idle fancies.

The idea of spending seemingly endless hours staring blankly out a tour van window fills the foursome with gooey, warm feelings.

The prospect of performing for disinterested strangers in half-empty bars in the middle of nowhere fills them with a sense of hope.

"A four-to-six-week tour would make me very happy," said drummer Evan Mitchell, 23. "It would be hard, uncomfortable and expensive, but we'd always have the bonding experiences to remember."

Many bands label themselves "garage bands."

Oh No! takes the term literally.

Mitchell's garage in east Gainesville has become a second home to the band.

And what a garage it is.

The once white, popcorn ceiling overhead is spotted brown by water damage.

For a moment, I feared the moldy blob might morph and swallow the whole lot of us, including the life size cardboard cutout of Yoda.

Once the paranoia passed, I was able to relax enough to enjoy five songs the band jammed out in preparation for their Friday show at the Atlantic.

The common thread between each track is a relentless, hard-driving beat and chunky bass lines.

However, they differ from many punk bands, because they explore far more than three chords. Many songs have intricate guitar solos from Jason Sanchez, 24, and Ben Mattison, 23.

"We're jet garage, soul rock 'n' roll with a punk rock mentality," Mitchell said.

But they're not just rockers; they're businessmen — or perhaps modern-day alchemists.

They're setting out to transform their time and money invested into something grander than a reputation as just a local favorite.

"We're starting to come around to the business side of things," said bassist Eric Gordon, 22. "But music is still the main priority."

Mattison, the least talkative during the interview but most vocal in the garage has taken a more Zen-like approach to the collective.

"I'm just kind of rolling with it," he said. "It's all gravy."

They are eagerly anticipating the next stage of evolution.

"We're hoping to get three to four new songs recorded, in addition to the nine we already have," Mitchell said. "Hopefully we'll have a full length out by December." Their demo is solid.

It was produced by Morningbell's Eric Atria, who is notorious for helping local bands record, book shows and promote.

The loyalty shown to one another comes at a time when many outsiders have been whispering of the scene's demise.

Oh No! feels that such talk is hogwash. "No musicians here bitch about the scene," Mitchell said. "They know how good it is."

Gainesville might actually be in the midst of musical renaissance.

Diverse bands such as Holopaw, Velvetten Pink and the Mercury Program are poised to make big splashes in the national scene.

The nationwide pretension that has infected the indie rock scene has seeped into Gainesville.

It's disconcerting to see musicians pouring their souls out on stage just to have the crowd of too-cool-pessimists stand motionless, as if lost in a lithium-induced trance.

"We feed off of the crowd's energy," Mitchell said.

Gordon put the process in perspective. "The best shows are when the band is feeding off of the audience and they are feeding off of the music," he said.

Photos by Jason Henry / Alligator

The undeniable talent of fresh upstarts like Oh No! is perhaps the best indication that Gainesville is currently reveling in a golden age of local musical talent.

"The framework for a great scene is already in place, the bands here are great," Sanchez explained.

There are tons of local publications and venues that give bands outlets to express themselves to an audience.

The sad irony is that many people who come to shows often don't realize the quality of the product in front of them. Or if they do realize, they don't let on. Sometimes making live shows feel more like nightmares than dreams.

Yet, the dream is the only thing keeping Gordon in Gainesville.

"Knowing that people like our music is a good feeling," he said.

He planned to go away to graduate school somewhere outside of Florida, such as New York or Chicago, after graduating from UF, but the music keeps him here. It is what keeps him motivated.

The band hopes their fall lineup of local shows, including Friday's back to school blast at The Atlantic, will help them garner some new fans, develop new songs — but most importantly, get paid.

They're saving up for a grasp at the good old-fashioned American dream — the version requiring skill, grit, perseverance and luck.

"It's important to have dreams," Mitchell said. "But it's an evolutionary process. We started out doing house parties, then gigs, then a CD and hopefully someday a tour."

Summerbirds in the Cellar headline tour, play at 1982

Band tauts 2 each on guitar, drums

By SHEM FLEENOR
Avenue Writer

Their toes are inching toward the edge of a precipice. Somewhere in the foggy murk below is either self-actualization or a fiery crash into oblivion.

They are unique, uncompromising, hard-working and talented.

One of their drummers, Tyson Bodiford, is the spitting image of '70s porn star John Holmes.

Needless to say, Summerbirds in the Cellar are ready for their proverbial close-up. They are not merely poised to be Florida's next great band — they have the potential to be indie rock's next big thing.

Ninety percent of baseball is pitching. Ninety percent of being a successful band is relentless touring.

Their show Tuesday in DeLand marked the beginning of the band's second tour in three months. This time around, they're headlining an East Coast jaunt.

The show Wednesday at 1982 Bar was the second leg of the 15-venue, 5-week adventure.

If you happened to catch them playing with Now It's Overhead at Common Grounds on Aug. 1, you might have wondered if you were experiencing déjà vu.

Summerbirds have been grinding in the studio working on a new album. They've been on the road promoting their full-length album, "With the Hands of a Hunter It All Becomes Dead." The strenuous commitment has helped the band earn a loyal fan base and respect from critics spanning the cultural landscape.

A catastrophe three years ago helped the program pick up steam. The band's friend, Chris Sapone, moved from Orlando to Los Angeles, hoping to crack into show business as a comedian. A few weeks after the move, Sapone was crossing a street on foot when a lawyer in a sports car speeding through a red light smashed into him.

After two weeks in a coma, Sapone awoke to a hefty settlement and a desire to start a record label. His first recording was of the Summerbirds.

Since its inception little more than three years ago, the band has been on two U.S. tours and four East Coast missions, and they have released a full-length album.

In addition to Now It's Overhead, Summerbirds have performed with Rilo Kiley, Human Television, Tilly and the Wall, Pedro the Lion, The Kills and Hard-Fi.

If not for a speeding lawyer and a friend's courage to put the band on blast, there is some lingering doubt the foursome would have shared so many incredible experiences together. It's doubtful they would have been in Gainesville Wednesday night.

Though they call Orlando home, Gainesville always seems to take on the aura of a homecoming for the quartet.

"It's the beginning of the tour, and a lot of friends will be coming out to send us off," said frontman Curtis Brown. "We have a lot of friends who grew up with us in Lakeland that we party with every time we're in town."

Bodiford has a fondness for Gainesville's music scene.

"It's had its ups and downs the past 10 to 15 years," he said. "But I think it'll always be a great place to find inspiring bands."

It's a bit odd to see Bodiford pounding away, with another drummer and two guitarists swaying back and forth just a few feet away. The obvious questions: "Where the hell is a bassist? And how can two drummers possibly maintain their balance without one?"

After 30 seconds of watching and listening — all questions are answered.

Their melodically infused, psychedelic soundscapes and their dark lighting scheme are — in a word — enchanting.

On paper, the modification doesn't seem like it should work. But the proof is in the pudding. The quality of the product being churned out by Brown and his counterpart, singer/guitarist/keyboardist Brad Register, along with percussions from Bodiford and Mike Yardley, seems like it would invite inevitable cacophony, yet every note is on point, refined.

Somehow they defy logic and make it work spectacularly.

Florida's indie scene is plagued by pretentious nihilists trying to be just like the person

"It's the beginning of the tour, and a lot of friends will be coming out to send us off. We have a lot of friends who grew up with us in Lakeland that we party with every time we're in town."

Summerbirds in the Cellar frontman

Orlando-based band Summerbirds in the Cellar is currently headlining a tour that will take them up and down the East Coast in their van.

standing next to them.

This fact alone is an indication of the skill and courage Summerbirds have to follow their own drummer. Hell — they're following two drummers.

How many underground bands dare to even try something new — let alone something so complex and innovative?

Their intellectual uniqueness is typified by their outspoken admiration for writer and social critic Noam Chomsky.

Brown summed up the admiration: "Chomsky once said, 'If we don't believe in freedom of speech for those we despise, we do not believe in it at all.'"

Their dedication to freedom of expression is the best indicator that their long jump over the edge has the potential to become a wondrous flight.

But in an industry full of witless, hack producers in search of bands who sound exactly like the latest flavor of the month, there is lingering doubt as to whether a band as inventive, uncompromising and talented as the Summerbirds can attain commercial success.

Collectively, the band naturally exudes the craftsmanship and the look that could make them indie rock's newest darling. But that's only 10 percent of the equation.

The other 90 percent is forming like Voltron in bars, juke joints, cafes and in the cosmos, somewhere along East Coast — at least until Sept. 28, when the tour grinds to a halt in Ybor City.

Time will tell whether Summerbirds in the Cellar will have the luck needed to transform 100 percent of their product into commercial success.

But Wednesday at 1982 Bar, they inched ever closer to the precipice.

The band ultimately seems unconcerned with whether they float or flounder.

"We've found it's best to just relax and let things unravel on their own," Brown said.

MTV devoid of substance

Video killed the radio star, but MTV destroyed the concept of cool.

The station has done more to erode the concept of the American dream than any other entity.

The old, romantic version of the dream has been replaced by an airbrushed version starring Paris Hilton, the Simpson sisters and Britney Spears, all of whom have at best mediocre talent.

The network recently turned 25 years old. However, unlike a fine wine, MTV just keeps getting worse with age.

It used to be a groundbreaking network, with cutting edge artists like U2, Run-DMC, the Wu-Tang Clan and REM.

Those days have long since passed.

MTV tries to pass corporately manufactured, bubblegum-flavored fecal matter off as art.

Who can blame them?

The show "Made" teaches smart, creative, sensitive and unique kids to be something they're not in order to fit into the status quo.

A show like "Laguna Beach" makes it seem like high school has some sort of profound relevance to life. In reality, it's a collection of confused kids facing adversity that their own selfish superficiality creates. They don't face any external adversity, like illness, abuse or racism.

MTV perpetuates absurdity that the "cool," rich girls are supposed to be evil bitches to everyone else. They perpetuate greed, arrogance and superficiality as status symbols of the status quo.

On every episode of "My Super Sweet 16," the birthday girl or boy bitterly declares, "there is no way that girl is coming to my party."

If I ever have a daughter that acts the way the girls do on "My Super Sweet 16" or "Tiara Girls," I'm going to give her up for adoption.

"The Andy Milonakis Show" is mindless drivel. Watch it for 60 seconds, and somehow you've wasted five minutes of your life. It's that bad.

"The Real World" used to be a unique social experiment. Now, it's just "hot" drunkards hooking up and arguing. I can see that any night of the week on University Avenue.

The absolute truth is that MTV is a cultural void, a microcosm of everything wrong with America. It celebrates mindless consumerism and anti-intellectualism.

MTV not only makes my brain hurt — it makes my soul hurt.

Cigs promote 'cool' image

Music Writer's Warning: Cigarettes cause lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema and may complicate pregnancy. Side effects may include coolness and increased indie cred.

Come on, let's face it. Despite the blackened lungs, yellow teeth and rank odor, smoking cigarettes looks damn cool. I mean, everyone's doing it. Well, not me. I swear, Mom!

Music and cigarettes is a marriage made in heaven, or rather, and more appropriately, hell. History lesson aside, cigarettes have been the most popular form of tobacco since the early 20th century. The cigarette became coveted for its "smooth flavor," "soothing" nicotine and undeniable visual appeal, which was bolstered by early musicians and especially by classic Hollywood cinema. Seriously, look me in the eye and tell me that Humphrey Bogart looks stupid smoking a cigarette. See? It's impossible.

The same results will occur when you look at a picture of Keith Richards. He would actually look silly if he didn't have a cigarette dangling from his lips. The reason is simple. In our contemporary society, we associate cigarettes as part and parcel of the time when The Rolling Stones were actually making good music, the time when what we refer to as "classic rock" was just "rock."

Think about all the bards of that era: The Beatles, Led Zeppelin, Pink Floyd, Jimi Hendrix, the Eagles, Queen, Boston. All smokers. All well-loved. All influential.

This may help explain why many rock bands today still smoke, even with the deadly effects in mind.

Genre matters when it comes to smoking and music. Take a rock 'n' roll musician — say Jack White of The White Stripes — and give him a cigarette. He looks arty. Take a pop musician, say Britney Spears. Give her a cigarette and she looks even trashier (check the tabloids, people).

It's actually good that most mainstream acts like Mrs. Federline are not visually enhanced by cigarettes, for the sake of the youth and other impressionable types; however, it is comforting to know that cigarettes still hold a place in music today with underground and indie music.

Now, I know there are some naysayers among us, but The Strokes are going to be playing the Stephen C. O'Connell Center in September. If you're still not convinced that smoking cigarettes looks awesome, you obviously haven't been to a show lately.

And everyone knows that if there's anything cooler than smoking prepackaged, filtered cigarettes, it's got to be smoking hand-rolled, unfiltered ones. I sure wouldn't want to watch Iron & Wine's Sam Beam eat soup, but I would love to see him lick that rolling paper.

Say what you will about them, cigarettes and music are here to stay. Live fast, die young, and leave behind a good-lookin' corpse. Except that cigarettes kill you slowly and age your body, but you know...

Play to premiere at Hipp

By JENNIFER PFAFF
Avenue Writer

It's difficult enough to get most college students to think about class material beyond the classroom, much less crack open a textbook.

But Christafer Sobbing, 27, became so interested in subjects he learned, he wrote a play about it.

Sobbing, who serves as the associate director of development for the Hippodrome Theatre, wrote the play "Amanda Huxley" two years ago as an undergrad at the University of Iowa. The play will come to life onstage at the Hippodrome Theatre only once: this Monday at 8 p.m.

Although Sobbing was a theater major in college, it was his sociology classes that inspired him to write the play.

"I was taking sociology classes, studying certain subjects — the state of mind in which people are able to commit atrocious acts," he said. "I thought it'd be interesting [to write a play] based on classes."

Sobbing was motivated to write a play after studying feelings of numbness and what drives people to take drastic measures to regain emotions. He said he spent roughly seven months researching the topic for his play, the ninth performance he's directed.

In "Amanda Huxley," the titular character experiences feelings of numbness and searches for ways to feel alive again. When every attempt fails, her friend Maddie manipulates her into committing a murder.

While the plot may revolve around a murder story, Sobbing said that on a grander scale, the story line is actually about what drives people to commit heinous acts, as well as the results that stem from those actions.

"(In) each scene, something happens that affects a bigger thing," Sobbing said. "Each scene could be a short one-act play. It has action, rising action, a problem, a solution and an end to it."

Instead of auditioning actors for "Amanda Huxley," Sobbing said he offered roles to three performers he had worked with before. The four-character play features Christine Sellers, who plays Huxley; Kellie Palladino as Maddie; and Armando Acevedo, performing as the characters Joshua and Nameless. The actors received scripts in May and will have had roughly 22 rehearsals before opening night.

Local Theater Although he's been involved with theatrical performances since he was 13, Sobbing said directing is one of the more stressful aspects of theater.

"It's all your fault — people like it or they don't like it," he said. "You have to let your hands fall into the actors and hope the designers understand exactly what you're trying to do. And then it all comes together, and it usually does, and it's amazing."

Until the curtain falls, Sobbing said he's anxious about the performance, but more so about the audience's reaction.

"I hope people talk about the subjects, not just the play itself, but I hope it gets people to think," he said. "I want people to leave thinking about the subject that was discussed there."

Tickets for "Amanda Huxley" are $5 and will be on sale until Aug. 28. For more information, 375-HIPP.

Fall promises sexy fun

Going back to school is not all gloom and doom. Okay, it's pretty close. But here are five sexy things to look forward to as you buy your books and miss the bus:

1. Dorms. Could they make it any more convenient? Hooking up is just a hop, skip and jump up the stairwell and down the hall. I've even heard of various RAs getting in on the action (but that's just between us). Did I mention that there's no curfew?

2. Free condoms. You've read right, folks. Along with free newspapers and joyrides on the RTS, members of the Gator Nation are showered with free condoms, lube and dental dams from GatorWell Health Promotion Services. We're not talking the boring stuff — they've got fruity flavors, psychedelic colors and extremely convenient individually wrapped samples (I speak from experience.) They are super easy to acquire; keep your eyes out for their "Health Hut," which pops up all over campus on any given day of the week.

3. The HPV vaccine. You should know about this by now. As of just this week, women can now get the vaccine at the Student Health Care Center. I strongly encourage you to get this, mainly if you're a virgin. At $150 for each of three required stages, it might sound a little pricey, but not only will your mom probably agree to pay for it, cervical cancer down the road would be an even bigger drag.

Maghan McDowell

Sex on the Avenue

4. Freshman. They're young, beautiful and ready to get crazy. Or at least I was. If this is your first year in college, I'm sure you haven't missed the fact that your graduating class will now be in the thousands, and that (relatively) no one knows you. The time is ripe for the debut of your sexy new look. If you're returning to the Swamp, you don't need me to remind you how refreshing it is to see a new face or two in the crowd. Kidding.

5. This column, of course! Look for tales of love, sex and related sports every Thursday in the Avenue section of the Alligator. And don't forget to write me at advice@alligator.org for my highly trained opinion on your latest adventures and most heartfelt hang-ups.

Eateries offer great food

Now that you've hopefully learned your way around campus, perhaps it's time to explore what off-campus dining has to offer.

For all the sushi lovers in the Swamp (such as myself), Dragonfly Sushi & Sake Co., 201 SE Second Ave., is the place to dine. If you're not a fan of raw fish, no worries — their cooked seafood is still worth a shot. You have probably never had anything like a curving roll of eel, crab and cream cheese. The setting is unique, as this restaurant is located in a historic downtown building.

Nathan Telaraja

Food for Thought

For our future national championship-winning football team, you can get all the wings you want on Tuesdays at Calico Jack's oyster bar, 3501 SW Second Ave., for $9.95 (not that we need any help crushing the Seminoles, but the extra weight is nice to have, especially with its fair price). You don't need to be a huge football player to enjoy this place. Their big-screen TVs provide for a great time when the Gators play away games. They'll also be running specials during away games, so keep an eye out for those.

Feel like Cuban food? Then Virtually Cuban Internet Café, 2409 SW 13th St., is where you can dine. They have two spacious and comfortable dining rooms. Pricing may seem a bit painful for college budgets, but that changes when you see how much good food you actually get. They serve you a bowl of rice and beans to keep you busy while they freshly prepare your sandwich.

Too lazy to get up and pick up the phone? You can order online from a great selection of places at www.chompmenus.com. They also outline specials at many of the restaurants they serve.

EVERYTHING FOR THE HOME IN THE ALLIGATOR CLASSICS

new releases

Fall semester promises bevy of exciting new albums

By TOM HARRIS
Avenue Writer

So far, 2006 has been a pretty solid year for music. Releases from Herbert, Comets on Fire, and Ghostface Killah have helped cement their already excellent reputations, while debuts from Beirut, Brightblack Morning Light and Lily Allen have introduced vital artists.

Despite all this, the fall is traditionally the time of year when the highest concentration of true classics are released to help keep them fresh in the minds of critics writing end-of-year best-of lists. While it might seem like a somewhat sly trick, it certainly makes the fall a pretty fruitful time to get into some new music.

Here are some of the upcoming season's most promising releases:

Bob Dylan — "Modern Times" (Aug.

29): This one comes out in less than a week, and I'm torn between preordering it or standing outside Best Buy waiting for the place to open on Tuesday. Dylan's last two albums, "Time Out of Mind" and "Love and Theft," have ranked among the best in his career, and there's reason to believe "Modern Times" might be a third latter-day masterwork.

The Black Keys — "Magic Potion" (Sept. 12): The Black Keys are a great band that keeps getting greater with each album. Their most recent full-length, "Rubber Factory," is an on-fire collection of blues-rock swagger. And unlike that other blues-worshipping, guitar-and-drums duo, these guys are never anything less than entirely sincere in their craft. Look forward to blistering solos, hoarse, front porch shouting and impeccable songwriting.

Nas — "Hip-Hop is Dead" (Sept. 19): Given that Nas has been partial to bombast in the past (i.e. crucifying himself and referring to himself as "God's son"), the album title "Hip-Hop is Dead" shouldn't come as too much of a surprise. Nevertheless, ever since Nas' much-publicized battle with Jay-Z, New York's second-finest emcee has stepped back from much of his self-aggrandizement while still retaining his righteous, literate sense of fury. His most recent album, 2004's "Street's Disciple," was a vastly underrated, kaleidoscopic articulation of his anger — and some of his best work since his staggeringly perfect debut, 1994's "Illmatic."

Akron/Family — "Meek Warrior" (Sept. 25): Between their first self-titled album and their split LP with Angels of Light, Akron/Family's structurally intricate, ambitious folk rock got a whole lot more intricate and ambitious. With the help of renowned free jazz drummer Hamid Drake, who has played on sessions with legends like Don Cherry and Pharaoh Sanders, there's a good chance the Family might maintain their ever-upward trajectory.

Beck — "The Information" (Oct. 3): Of the two tracks on this upcoming release available for preview on Beck's Web site, one, "Nausea," is promising. The other, "Strange Apparition," is, unfortunately, not. I've been a longtime fan of Beck, though, so I'll probably shell out the cash for "The Information." Here's to hoping Beck puts some teeth back into his music this time around.

Horschel's success continues

ALLIGATOR SERVICES

Billy Horschel continues to impress at the 106th U.S. Amateur Championship.

The UF sophomore defeated Ray Sheedy 3 and 2 Wednesday in his first round of match play and will advance to the second round Thursday.

Horschel joined the likes of Tiger Woods, Phil Mickelson and Fred Couples on Tuesday when he captured the individual medal at the U.S. Amateur with a two-day score of 5-under-par 138.

"Being in the company of the guys who have won the medal at this tournament before is something special," Horschel said. "To be the top guy out of 311 golfers feels amazing. I'm not in shock, but I'm overcome with joy."

"I didn't approach this tournament like I was happy to be here. I practiced hard and worked on my game. So far, it's paid off."

Horschel, who claimed medalist honors at the 2006 NCAA West Regional, is the first UF golfer to earn the individual medal at the U.S. Amateur since Brian Gay did so in 1993 at Champions Golf Club in Houston.

Horschel made headlines with his first-round effort Monday after posting an 18-hole tournament record score of 11-under-par 60. The previous record score was 65 by Marvin Giles III and Kurt Cox in 1968 and 1970, respectively.

Horschel's first-round score was not only an 18-hole U.S. Amateur record but also a United States Golf Association championship record. The previous mark was 62, set by Loren Roberts at this year's U.S. Senior Open and Christina Kim at the 2001 U.S. Girls' Junior.

Horschel's overall score bettered the score of his UF teammate, Andres Echavarria, (147, 4 over) by 9 strokes, and Horschel outshot his coach, Buddy Alexander, (159, 16 over) by 21.

Echavarria's score was good enough to qualify him for match play, but he fell to Australia's Bronson La'Cassie 3 and 2 in the opening round. Alexander failed to qualify.

Horschel's only collegiate win came in the NCAA West Regional last season, where he shot a 203 (-13) in his three rounds, but he has had nine top-10 finishes in 13 collegiate tournaments.

His 10th place finish in the NCAA championship was the best of any of the Gators.

Knee injury ends pitcher's career

■ UF SOFTBALL STAR LINDSAY LITTLEJOHN COULD NOT OVERCOME HER KNEE SURGERIES.

ALLIGATOR SERVICES

Promising sophomore pitcher Lindsay Littlejohn has decided to leave the UF softball team after sustaining what has become a career-ending knee injury.

Littlejohn, who has already gone through multiple knee surgeries, might have been forced to undergo knee-replacement surgery had she decided to make a comeback attempt.

"We feel very bad for Lindsay, the pain she had to endure and the decision she had to make," Coach Tim Walton said. "Lindsay's potential as an athlete was endless, but unfortunately her softball career has ended too soon. Lindsay is and always will be a Gator. We look forward to following her personal successes in the years to come."

Littlejohn

Littlejohn, the ace of UF's pitching staff for much of last season, played in 19 games for the Gators in 2006, making 17 appearances in the pitching circle, including 10 starts. She posted a 9-4 record in her 81.1 innings of work, boasting a team best 1.72 ERA before succumbing to the injury midway through the season.

The loss of Littlejohn means the Gators, who finished last season with a record of 43-25 and went 17-13 in Southeastern Conference play, will have to rely heavily on senior right-hander Stacey Stevens (20-8, 2.42 ERA) and sophomore Stacey Nelson (13-12, 2.22 ERA).

Littlejohn became the first freshman in school history to pitch a no-hitter when she blanked Longwood 6-0 on Feb. 19. She followed that up with a one-hit shutout against Canisius on March 12 and recorded a career-high nine strikeouts versus Seton Hall on March 3.

In high school, Littlejohn had a career record of 83-4 with a 0.12 ERA. She went 21-1 with a 0.05 ERA her senior year. Named to the SEC Freshman Honor Roll this spring, she received a medical exemption from the NCAA and will remain on scholarship to finish her education at UF, where she will continue to pursue a degree in health-science education.

Former UF star Reche urges younger Caldwell brother not to give up

to be."

Nearly one year has passed since he suffered the leg injury that could have ended his career. A missed blocking assignment left Caldwell vulnerable on a kickoff return against the Volunteers on Sep. 17. A Tennessee player slammed into his upper right leg, crushing the femur.

What ensued could have doomed his future. Caldwell shed 20 pounds and almost lost hope that he would be the same player again. It is a sickening feeling that often envelops players who suffer what could be career-threatening injuries.

Enter wide receivers coach Billy Gonzales, who worked overtime to lift his spirits.

"He got skinny and just went into a funk," Gonzales said. "The first part was getting his mind right again. He was extremely down, so you have to make sure you communicate with him. The whole staff just did a great job keeping him motivated and keeping him up."

Big brother and New England Patriots receiver Reche Caldwell helped as well. Reche, a former UF star, insisted Caldwell not give up, citing that a football player will always face pitfalls: It's whether you stumble or keep trucking that determines what happens next. The little brother bought into the logic.

"I had heard stories about Reche, but I've learned that he's all business," said UF coach

"That's my goal: to be the man and make every play."

Andre Caldwell
UF wide receiver

Urban Meyer, who chatted with Reche when he visited with New England during June. "Now I've seen that Bubba is all business."

The younger Caldwell — affectionately called "Bubba" by players and coaches — looks as good as ever. Gonzales said he squats more weight than he did prior to the injury. And the receiver claims he is faster, running a team-best 4.29 in the 40-yard dash this summer.

"I know he feels really good about himself which makes us all feel good," Meyer said. "He's a different guy."

Caldwell could be the difference-maker for the spread offense.

Last season UF wanted to use him in the backfield — he scored an 18-yard touchdown on a reverse in the Tennessee game — and send him deep. Now that plan is being transferred to 2006, when Caldwell will headline a prolific group of receivers.

"That's my goal: to be the man and make every play — just to get the fans on their feet and help this team win," he said. "I have the feeling that I can do that and will do that because I've worked hard enough to be back to where I used to be."

Meyer: Gators' players incapable of producing 12-yard gains will not play

have that this year."

UF boasts five receivers with 4.4 — or better — 40-yard dash speed: Caldwell, Cornelius, Harvin, Fayson and Riley Cooper.

The coaching staff anticipates capitalizing on this kind of talent in the backfield as well. By alternating its fastest players at the H-back position and spacing them from sideline to sideline, UF hopes receivers will take a short play, make some moves and convert it into a long gain.

"I know people want to hear that you're going to throw it deep down the field, but big plays also come from someone flipping the ball to someone who can make players miss," offensive coordinator Dan Mullen said. "We've spent a lot of times with the guys trying to figure out who can make something happen once they get the ball in their hands."

Meyer has grown obsessed with big plays. During the off-season, he discovered an NFL study that emphasizes the importance of recording a play of 12 yards or more. The study found the following: Without a big play during a drive, a team's chances of scoring are 10 percent; one big play boosts those odds to 50 percent; two big plays increase the chances of scoring to 80 percent.

"We are giving the ball to people that have a chance to go 12 yards," Meyer said. "If you have no chance, you will not touch the ball."

Speedy Caldwell vows rebound

By LOUIS ANASTASIS
Alligator Staff Writer
lanastasis@alligator.org

Andre Caldwell is going to make a lot of noise this season — in airports.

The senior wide receiver will likely infuriate the Transportation Security Administration as much as opposing coaches because of the metal rod inserted into his previously broken right leg.

"I'm going to set off [the detectors] every time I get checked [for road game trips] but oh well," Caldwell said.

Then, quickly making his football agenda clear, he added: "But I am going to be on that plane."

"I want to prove to the whole world that I'm back."

Andre Caldwell
UF wide receiver

And one more thing: "I think I'm faster than before," Caldwell said.

If you have never watched the devastating play against Tennessee, you wouldn't have a clue.

Caldwell has been practicing like any other player: sprinting, slashing, juking and ever. falling. When he was tackled two weeks ago for the first time since his injury, he quickly climbed back to his feet — a moment he hopes will typify the way his final season at UF will unfold.

"I probably want this more than anybody," Caldwell said. "I want to prove to the whole world that I'm back. A lot of people, they probably forgot about me because I haven't been out there in a long time. I just want to prove everybody wrong and show them that I'm back where I want

UF brings back big-play attack

The spread is supposed to be an offense, not a punchline.

Yet you probably could excuse the agent of former UF wide receiver Chad Jackson for confusing the two.

"I'm just glad he's alive and not running anymore 5-yard curls," said David Canter of his client last March.

Losing receivers Andre Caldwell and Jemelle Cornelius for most of the 2005 season was compounded with porous pass protection to eliminate the deep-play threat from Urban Meyer's famed spread offense.

Jackson

And without deep plays, UF's 2005 offense proved about as predictable as Chris Leak's speech patterns. Opposing defenses jammed receivers and crowded the line of scrimmage knowing that the Gators preferred the short game.

UF failed to execute one reception longer than 50 yards in any of its eight Southeastern Conference games. In five of those games, the Gators did not complete a pass longer than 31 yards. So what has changed, if anything?

How about the health — for the most part — of the receiving corps. Also consider that the position has been bolstered by the additions of speed demons Percy Harvin and Jarred Fayson. Then factor in Cornelius Ingram's debut at the position. The elusive 6-foot-4 player figures to create nightmares for opposing defenses by matching up against slower linebackers.

"We've implemented it," said wide receivers coach Billy Gonzales of the deep game. "The bottom line is you need depth and some bodies that can do it. We

LaPorta to return for senior season; won't sign with Red Sox

■ THE SLUGGER LED DIVISION-1 SCHOOLS IN HOMERS IN 2005.

ALLIGATOR SERVICES

The UF baseball team received a significant boost when first baseman Matt LaPorta attended classes Wednesday, signifying the slugger's return for his senior season.

LaPorta was selected by the Boston Red Sox in the 14th round of June's MLB Draft but chose not to sign with the team.

"We are excited about Matt returning to Florida for his senior year," Coach Pat McMahon said. "He feels that there are team goals to be taken care of, and he has made a tremendous commitment to the Gators. I am very proud of Matt. He is an outstanding person, and we look forward to his continued leadership, both on and off the field."

LaPorta's return means he will likely break Brad Wilkerson's record and become the school's all-time home-run leader. He sits just one long ball short of tying Wilkerson's mark of 55.

The 2005 Southeastern Conference Player of the Year, LaPorta was a consensus first-team All-American as a sophomore, leading Division I with 26 homers and driving in 79 runs.

This past season, he missed 13 games with an oblique muscle strain and hit .259 over 43 games, but he still led the Gators with 14 homers and a .410 on-base percentage.

Over his three-year collegiate career, LaPorta boasts a .298 average and ranks sixth on UF's career list with 154 RBI.

Before returning to Gainesville, LaPorta played in the Cape Cod Baseball League for the Brewster Whitecaps, where he earned the starting nod at first base for the East in the league's All-Star game and was chosen to the season-ending All-League squad.

LaPorta was one of UF's five draftees who still had a year of eligibility remaining. The other four — catcher Brian Jeroloman, third baseman David Cash, outfielder Gavin Dickey and infielder Adam Davis — signed with professional organizations and will not return to the team.

Offensive Outlook

Heisman hopeful Kenny Irons, who rushed for 1,293 yards and 13 touchdowns in 2005, is back to anchor the Tigers offense. Quarterback Brandon Cox is in his second season since taking over for Jason Campbell, making the Tigers one of the few teams in the conference who don't have serious issues at the position. Courtney Taylor is extremely talented and easily the team's best receiver, but behind him is a lot of inexperience. Auburn returns three starters on the offensive line, led by first-team All-SEC pick Tim Duckworth.

Defensive Outlook

The Tigers return six starters on a defense that was ranked just sixth in the conference last year but second in the red zone. Auburn also led the SEC with 39 sacks in 12 games. Linebacker Will Herring is the standout of the group, having started 36 consecutive games. Herring, however, is in his first season at linebacker after being switched over from free safety during spring practice. Auburn has brought in defensive coordinator Will Muschamp to amplify the team's defensive approach.

Auburn will ROCK because of Kenny Irons. With a solid offensive line, Irons should be good for at least 100 yards every time he steps on the field.

Auburn will GET ROLLED because it plays 12 consecutive games. While the Tigers will benefit from having eight games at home, they also don't have an off-week to give players a rest.

Impact Player Spotlight

WR Courtney Taylor, SR.

Courtney Taylor has always been able to talk a big game.

The question now is whether his talent on the field will equal his gift of gab.

Is he the best receiver in the SEC? "Most definitely," Taylor said. "I'm not going to shy away from it. I'm always ready to step up to the challenge."

How about in the country?

"Hey, I'll go there too," he said. "I feel like I'm the best in the country."

Those are big statements from a player who caught just 22 passes last season while nursing an ankle injury and has had just one career 100-yard receiving game.

Still, Taylor showed so much potential he almost considered leaving for the NFL.

"He came to Auburn when we weren't a rolling ball — a butcher knife, so to speak — trying to make a name for himself," Coach Tommy Tuberville said. "Courtney is one of our leaders; he's one of the more outspoken leaders of this team."

This does not mean Taylor is naïve.

"At the same time, I know I have to go out and prove it," Taylor said. "Words are words, but actions speak louder than words any day. I want to set the bar up there."

Offensive Outlook

Much of Georgia's fan base has been shouting obscenities following Coach Mark Richt's quarterback announcement earlier this week. After successfully recruiting prized arm Matthew Stafford — ranked the No. 1 quarterback by Rivals.com and No. 2 quarterback by Scout.com — Richt has appointed senior Joe Tereshinski as the starter and redshirt freshman Joe Cox as his backup. Oh, and Georgia lost stud tight end Leonard Pope to the NFL. One more thing: the Bulldogs suffered from Dropped Pass Syndrome last season. It should be a fun year in Athens.

Defensive Outlook

Georgia should be decent here, though nothing spectacular. Its defensive line is anchored by beast end Quentin Moses, but the tackle position is lacking. Linebacker should be OK with Jarvis Jackson, Tony Taylor and Brandon Miller. However, the secondary could be problematic. Gone is All-Everything safety Greg Blue. All-SEC cornerbacks Demario Minter and Tim Jennings left as well.

Last year's record: 10-3 (6-2 SEC)

Georgia will ROLL because it has always found a way to prove the doubters wrong. In 2002, a thin Bulldogs' team won the SEC title. Last season, D.J. Shockley led the David-Greene-less Georgia to another conference championship.

Georgia will GET ROLLED because starting Tereshinski and backing him up with Cox is nothing short of a demented decision.

Impact Player Spotlight

DE Quentin Moses, SR.

And now our Understatement of the Day provided by Georgia Coach Mark Richt: "Quentin Moses has certainly proved he's one of the better players in the league and in the country."

Moses is widely considered the top defensive end in the nation. But don't take our word for it.

Last season the 6-foot-5, 257-pound Moses racked up 20.5 tackles for loss and 11.5 sacks — good for second in the SEC. Moses has been selected a preseason First-Team All-American by the following publications: TSN, Lindy's, Street and Smiths, CBS Sportsline and Blue Ribbon. He is such a stellar player that he shouldn't even be in college right now.

The senior surprised many by deciding to skip the NFL Draft where Moses would have made a sure-fire first round pick.

There's more: This defensive end is well-rounded. He is a two-time member of the SEC Academic Honor Roll.

Back to football, though. What's interesting is that Moses does not necessarily consider himself the best defensive end on the team. He has publicly stated that junior Charles Johnson could hold that recognition by season's end.

However, Moses puts humility on the back burner on fall Saturdays. So is there anything he fears on the football field? Georgia's running backs.

"I hate to see Thomas Brown one-on-one," Moses said. "You definitely don't want to see Greg Lumpkin one-on-one, and if you sleep on Danny Ware, he'll run you over too."

UF volleyball coach Mary Wise hopes to lead her Gators to a 16th consecutive SEC title.

UF worry-free prior to opener

By JOSH ARMSTRONG

Alligator Writer
jarmstrong@alligator.org

If the Gators volleyball team is feeling pressure prior to the start of the 2006 season, it sure was hard to notice as players belly flopped across the practice floor.

No. 5 UF began Wednesday's practice with a rarely used "Follow the Leader" drill. The drill mandates that players mimic each other.

It began lightly, but sophomore Kelsey Bowers eventually busted out The Worm. Suddenly the Lemerand Athletics Center resembled a break-dance studio more than a practice facility.

The Gators feel at ease prior to the start of another expectation-packed season. The 15-time defending Southeastern Conference champions will kick off the 2006 season when it hosts South Florida on Friday at 7 p.m.

The Aquafina Invitational Tournament hits UF with tougher competition — No. 24 Utah — on Saturday at 5 p.m.

"The goal is to play teams that will prepare us," UF coach Mary Wise said. "Come October, in the heart of the SEC schedule, these weekends will play dividends."

Wise singled out freshman libero Elyse Cusack as a possible standout this weekend. The coach suggested that Cusack's experience with several years of softball has helped hone her passing skills.

"The goal is to play teams that will prepare us. Come October, in the heart of the SEC schedule, these weekends will play dividends."

Mary Wise
UF volleyball coach

"I used to think the best way to prepare young girls for the sport of volleyball ... was 'do gymnastics' and 'play catch,'" Wise said. "Now, I'm thinking it's 'play shortstop' as well."

One opposing player sure to draw UF's attention is 6-foot-7 Utah middle blocker Emillie Toone, at least 4 inches taller than any Gators player.

"Swing and duck," is the strategy Wise gave UF regarding Toone.

"She's every bit of 6-foot-7 but with great floor speed," Wise said.

Junior Marcie Hampton played against Toone in New Orleans this summer.

"We've seen girls that jump high, hit the 10-foot line," Hampton said.

"It's not intimidating, but it's definitely in the back of your head when you go up to block and you see big hands."

Still, the Utes have no seniors on its roster and have just four juniors.

"The more experience you have, the easier it will be communicating [to teammates]," senior Rhian Davis said. "There won't be that many players in their first weekend at the O-Dome not knowing how the crowd reacts. We've got to come out of the gate jumping."

The Gators were selected as the favorite to win the conference by the SEC Coaches' Preseason Poll. They received eight of 11 first-place votes, topping LSU's two and No. 11 Tennessee's one.

"It's something we try not to think about, but it's obviously hard not to think about it," Hampton said. "We get everyone's best shot."

Junior Kari Klinkenborg remains sidelined, wearing a protective boot on the reconstructed ankle she injured in December. Wise does not know when she will be able to return.

"We've learned the hard way you can't rush the healing process," Wise said. "It's a shame this player has to sit out, but in that comes an opportunity for someone to step up."
