Meyer let out of jail

By KIM WILMATH

 kwilmath@alligator.org

Andrew Meyer, the UF student who was Tasered and arrested by University Police Department officers Monday, was released from jail about 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Meyer, a telecommunication senior, spent the night in jail but was in good spirits, said Robert Griscti, his attorney.

Griscti said Meyer and his family are very surprised at the UPD officers' actions and do not think Taser use was appropriate.

He said UPD has not attempted to communicate with the family.

Meyer left jail around noon with his parents and attorney.

UPD released an offense report Tuesday revealing details of Meyer's arrest.

According to Officer Nicole Lynn Mallo's account, Meyer told UPD officers: "I am not mad at you guys, you didn't do anything wrong, you were just trying to do your job."

During a news conference Tuesday afternoon, UF President Bernie Machen said he had not talked to Meyer or his family.

But he said he would be willing if they wanted to.

Machen announced UF will ask the Florida Department of Law Enforcement to conduct an investigation of the appropriateness of Taser use.

Two officers, Eddie King and Mallo, have been placed on paid administrative leave.

Protest attracts hundreds

Standing outside the University Police Department on Tuesday, about 300 sweat-drenched UF students demanded explanations for the Taser use of a student by UPD officers Monday.

Students gathered on the Plaza of the Americas and marched to UPD and Emerson Alumni Hall in protest of the censorship, arrest and Taser use of Andrew Meyer during a Monday speech by Sen. John Kerry.

Meyer, a UF telecommunication senior, asked Kerry, a Democrat who represents Massachusetts and a former presidential candidate, about his involvement in a secret society at Yale University and the 2004 presidential election.

At noon, the 300 students, some wearing shirts that read "End pig violence" and "Don't tase me, bro," gathered on the Plaza of the Americas to make signs and get ready for the march.

A sign made by Emily Soergel, a 22-year-old UF alumna, asked, "Who will guard the guards themselves?"

Soergel said UPD's Taser use was disgusting.

"When the people who are supposed to protect you go beyond the law themselves, it's scary to think who will protect you now," she said.

On the way to UPD down Newell Drive, students chanted, "Hey, hey, ho, ho, police brutality has got to go" and "No justice, no peace, no Taaasers for po-lice."

Packed closely together, students stood outside UPD.

Office overwhelmed with calls

■ PEOPLE ARE PHONING IN OPINIONS ABOUT THE TASERING OF ANDREW MEYER.

By APRIL DUDASH

Opinions bombarded the UF Office of University Relations after University Police Department officers Tasered telecommunication senior Andrew Meyer on Monday.

Steve Orlando, UF spokesman, said the office received hundreds of calls and e-mails Tuesday.

Students, alumni and concerned people from all over the community have called in, Orlando said.

People have seen the video and it's very upsetting to them, he said.

"Quite frankly, it's compelling video," Orlando said. "It captures the television viewer's attention."

People expressed concern about the use of Tasers and whether they were used because of the questions Meyer was asking Sen. John Kerry, Orlando said.

The office's goal is to have the Florida Department of Law Enforcement review the use of Tasers by UPD officers, he said.

Many of the responses the university relations office has received have been rude and full of bad language.

Orlando said the staff will answer the reasonable comments, adding that he feels bad for office employees who have answered calls.

"They've been abused," he said. "It's all part of the day, I guess."

Videos contribute to Taser debate

By AMELIA BECK
Alligator Writer

Videos and online coverage of the Taser and arrest of UF student Andrew Meyer have fueled a firestorm of controversy, prompting mixed reactions from UF students about the incident and the national attention surrounding it.

Alexandra Weissman, a UF microbiology senior, said she is embarrassed for UF that the footage has circulated nationally but is glad that Meyer's arrest was caught on tape.

"What scares me is what the police would have done had cameras not been there," said Weissman, who marched with students from the Plaza of the Americas to the University Police Department on Tuesday as part of a protest.

Students watched with mouths agape as footage of the arrest played in some university classrooms. Debates among students about the incident replaced Tuesday's lectures in other classes.

Facebook groups were also formed in response to Meyer's arrest.

"Don't Taser Me, Bro!" had more than 1,200 members as of Tuesday night, and "Gators for the Tasing of Andrew Meyer" had 56.

Meyer's friends posted news and video clips of the arrest on his own Web site while he was in custody.

Messages on Meyer's Facebook profile read "you are a celebrity!" and "you're a star, milk this for all it's worth." One student asked Meyer to sign his copy of Tuesday's Alligator.

One of several videos of the arrest posted on YouTube was viewed more than 540,000 times, and a Wikipedia entry titled "University of Florida Taser incident" was created.

Alex Sommer, a UF senior who also marched in protest Tuesday, said he thought video of the arrest attracted much of the attention.

"With this technology, people can see what happened firsthand, unedited and unbiased by the media," he said.

Other students said the media attention has blown the incident out of proportion.

"It seems like people are making a bigger deal out of this than it should be," said senior Daniel Blackman.

Machen 'embarrassed,' says FDLE will investigate

By KIM WILMATH
Alligator Writer
kwilmath@alligator.org

At a news conference Tuesday afternoon, UF President Bernie Machen said he was "embarrassed" by the events at Sen. John Kerry's speech Monday.

Machen said he regretted that civil discourse did not occur at the meeting between Andrew Meyer and University Police Department officers.

Meyer was Tasered and charged with a third-degree felony and a second-degree misdemeanor after officers said he resisted arrest with violence and disturbed the peace.

Machen said the Florida Department of Law Enforcement would conduct a full investigation of the officers' actions.

He said two officers involved, Eddie King and Nicole Mallo, would be immediately suspended with pay pending further investigations.

According to a UPD offense report, King gave the order to Taser Meyer. Mallo Tasered him in the left shoulder, according to both King's and Mallo's accounts.

A panel of faculty and students will review UF's police protocols and suggest ways to improve. UPD will also conduct an internal investigation.

The State Attorney's Office will decide whether to go forward with Meyer's charges.

Machen said he expects fast investigation results.

He said he had seen the video but was not prepared to make any judgment about whether the officers' response was appropriate.

"The protesters are concerned about the same things we are."

Bernie Machen
UF president

Because Meyer used profanity during a question-and-answer session, his microphone was turned off, said Steven Blank, chairman of Accent, Student Government's speakers bureau. The group hosted Kerry's speech.

When police tried to pull Meyer from the microphone, he began to struggle. Six officers held him to the ground, while one Tasered him.

Machen said safety has been a heightened concern since the Virginia Tech tragedy, and he is still confident in UPD's capabilities.

UPD is the "most professional and sensitive group of officers I have ever worked with," he said.

He said the amount of phone calls and e-mails he's received the past two days "reminds me of hiring a football coach."

Machen said Meyer is allowed back on campus immediately.

Gene Zdziarski, UF dean of students and assistant vice president of student affairs, said students charged with misdemeanors or felonies would be suspended from classes if they were dangerous to other students.

Meyer does not pose a threat, he said.

Downstairs, protesters waited, cooling off in the air conditioning after marching from the Plaza of the Americas to the UPD office and finally to Emerson Alumni Hall.

"The protesters are concerned about the same things we are," Machen said.

UPD document outlines circumstances for Taser use

■ THE DOCUMENT WAS PASSED OUT TUESDAY.

By KATIE GALLAGHER
Alligator Contributing Writer

Tasers may only be used in "specific circumstances," UF President Bernie Machen said Tuesday at a news conference.

At the conference at Emerson Alumni Hall, a University Police Department document concerning the use of Tasers was passed out.

According to the UPD document, the circumstances for using a Taser include trying to avoid an officer's attempts to control a situation.

This can include people bracing themselves, pushing or not allowing an officer to approach. A person does not have to strike or harm an officer to justify use of a Taser, according to the UPD papers.

The document, titled "Use of Force," was last revised in March and also deals with other policies on violence.

The document classifies violence on a scale of one to six, with level one being intimidating body language and level six being attempts to kill or badly hurt an officer. Tasers are an accepted response to level four and above.

But officers must also take into account the person they are dealing with.

"For instance, an unarmed small framed female juvenile may be displaying level five resistance but would probably only require level three response by the average officer," it reads.

All police officers who carry Tasers receive annual training.

Any time a person is Tasered, even if it's accidental, the incident is subject to internal review.

If someone is Tasered, according to the UPD paper, paramedics will be called after that person is taken into custody.

Meyer's attorney will fight for dismissal of charges

■ ANDREW MEYER WAS CHARGED WITH A THIRD-DEGREE FELONY.

By KIM WILMATH

Alligator Writer
kwilmath@alligator.org

On Tuesday, Andrew Meyer rested. His attorney, Robert Griscti, said the stress of being tackled, Tasered and jailed took its toll on the UF telecommunication senior.

In an interview before a news conference, Griscti said Meyer wouldn't comment because everything is "moving too fast."

During the conference, Griscti said Meyer would cooperate with all investigations into the incident.

As far as what happened at the campus forum Monday afternoon, Griscti said, "The videotape speaks for itself."

Griscti said he would fight for complete dismissal of Meyer's charges.

During a speech hosted by Accent, Student Government's speakers bureau, Meyer asked Sen. John Kerry questions about politics, Kerry's involvement in a secret society during college and the 2004 presidential election.

After a few minutes, Meyer's microphone was cut off because he used profanity, said Steven Blank, Accent chairman.

As Kerry attempted to answer Meyer's questions, several University Police Department officers began to pull Meyer away from the microphone.

In an official statement, Kerry wrote that he asked police to allow him to answer Meyer's questions and was doing so when Meyer was taken away.

"I regret enormously that a good, healthy discussion was interrupted," Kerry wrote, adding that he believes he could have handled the situation himself.

"In 37 years of public appearances, through wars, protests and highly emotional events, I have never had a dialogue end this way."

John Kerry
Massachusetts senator

"In 37 years of public appearances, through wars, protests and highly emotional events, I have never had a dialogue end this way," Kerry wrote.

As Meyer struggled, more officers tried to pull him outside, finally tackling him to the ground.

Six officers held Meyer down while one officer Tasered him.

Meyer was arrested and charged with a third-degree felony for resisting arrest with violence and a second-degree misdemeanor for disturbing the peace.

The maximum penalty for the felony is five years in prison and a $5,000 fine. The misdemeanor could mean 60 days in prison and a $500 fine.

Griscti said he thinks it's extremely unlikely that Meyer will receive those maximum punishments.

Andrew Stanfill / Alligator Staff

Robert Griscti, Andrew Meyer's attorney, speaks to members of the media Tuesday about Meyer's reaction to his arrest. He said Meyer did not have an official statement and was resting but would cooperate with the investigation.

At his arraignment Tuesday morning, Meyer accepted his criminal charges and was allowed to leave on the condition that he would return for a criminal trial. The trial date has not been set.

After the arraignment, Griscti said he thought the Taser use was inappropriate.

He said he didn't think Meyer posed a threat to anyone at the speech, and there were enough officers to usher him outside without using force.

Amos Eshel, a UF computer science and math senior and friend of Meyer, sat quietly in the back of the courtroom.

Later that day, Eshel said he has known Meyer since middle school.

"He does like to speak his mind," he said.

He added that Meyer is not the type of person to start major trouble.

"This has been blown way out of proportion," Eshel said. "He's being made into a martyr."

Moseley will appoint four students to review panel

■ MOSELEY SPOKE AT A STUDENT SENATE MEETING.

By DEVIN CULCLASURE

dculclasure@alligator.org

Though the national spotlight is focused on the Taser incident at Sen. John Kerry's appearance, discussion of the affair was limited at the Student Senate's meeting Tuesday night. Student Body President Ryan Moseley and Steven Blank, chairman of Accent — Student Government's speakers bureau — briefly answered questions from senators.

Moseley told senators he wanted to ensure students were involved during the Florida Department of Law Enforcement's review of the incident.

He said he would be appointing four students to a panel of faculty and students designed to review police protocols, UF management practices and the FDLE report.

Student Government

Moseley said he also wants students to be patient before passing judgment on the issue.

Students have told him that they believe police acted correctly, and others expressed outrage, he said.

"There's a lot of information that's still to be collected," he said. "I want more time to hear students' opinions."

Sen. Heshan "Grasshopper" Illangkoon, a Gator Party senator representing graduate students, asked how many senators thought the level of force used by the police was appropriate.

About three or four raised their hands.

Illangkoon then asked the Senate to watch the entire video of the incident.

He said he thought the minutes leading up to Meyer's arrest make it clear that police acted correctly, but news networks were only showing a small portion of the video.

Illangkoon said CNN is defaming UF.

"When you have someone screaming down the aisle toward a political figure, what do you expect?" he asked.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Accent policy won't change

By DEVIN CULCLASURE

dculclasure@alligator.org

Despite Monday's Taser incident, Student Government's speakers bureau will continue to operate normally, a top official with the organization said Tuesday.

Steven Blank, Accent chairman, said he didn't think the incident warranted any major changes in Accent's security policy.

"In 40 years, we've never had this sort of situation," Blank said. "We have been doing the same thing for a very long time, and we will continue to do it."

Andrew Meyer, a telecommunication senior, was arrested and Tasered by UPD officers during a question-and-answer session with Kerry, a Democrat who represents Massachusetts and a former presidential candidate. Accent hosted Kerry's speech.

Police moved in after Blank ordered Meyer's microphone to be cut off when Meyer used profanity.

"We make it clear that any profanity and vulgarity by anyone asking questions will result in a cutting off of the mic," Blank said.

Police are typically present when a prominent figure speaks, Blank said.

But he declined to comment on whether he thought the use of a Taser was necessary.

"In 40 years, we've never had this sort of situation."

Steven Blank
Accent chairman

"The police are there with the general understanding that they are there to keep order," he said. "They acted independently of Accent."

But the UPD police report stated that Accent officials asked police to remove Meyer from the room.

Blank also declined to offer his personal reaction to the incident, only saying, "It was a wonderful speech on behalf of Senator Kerry."

Students proceed to Emerson

Benjamin Dictor, a political science junior, approached Lt. Stacey Ettl, who handed him five pamphlets on how to file a complaint.

When Dictor told the crowd, protesters booed and chanted, "This is what incompetence looks like."

Then Steve Orlando, UF spokesman, came toward them.

Dictor quieted the crowd so people could hear Orlando's message.

"Let the man speak!" he shouted. "We are bigger than them! We don't suppress freedom of speech!"

Orlando informed the crowd of investigations that would be performed, in addition to UF President Bernie Machen's news conference in Emerson.

Students walked back to the Plaza of the Americas to wait until the conference.

There, they shared stories about police experiences and censorship, and they began a second march at 1:30 p.m.

About half the students made the trek to Emerson.

Dictor was one of two representatives allowed into the conference. With the paid suspension of two officers, he said he thought UF took a step in the right direction.

On Campus After Machen's address, Dictor spoke to dozens of news crews and asked for help on behalf of UF students.

Later that afternoon, the American Civil Liberties Union issued a press release expressing disapproval of the Taser use.

"We are not safe," Dictor said. "We are students who are fearful of asking questions."

Under Pressure

UPD must update Taser-use policy

The UF administration is in trouble.

It has the task of figuring out if using a Taser gun on UF student Andrew Meyer during Sen. John Kerry's appearance Monday was justified. A document from the University Police Department would suggest its officers were well within their bounds to use a Taser on the disruptive student.

But maybe UPD's policies need a few changes. Thousands of UF students and thousands of people across the nation seem to think so. At the very least, the overwhelming opinion is that Meyer's actions didn't merit a Taser, regardless of what the UPD handbook says.

Tasers shouldn't be banned from campus. In light of what happened at Virginia Tech, there may be a time when using a Taser is necessary. And it's completely possible someone could become very violent on campus and an officer would be justified in using a Taser.

A Taser is a much better alternative to a gun, especially in Florida, where it's perfectly legal to shoot first and ask questions later. But just because it's a less deadly weapon doesn't mean it can be used with abandon.

The police have the responsibility to be very careful any time they consider applying pain in exchange for compliance. There's a fine line between using power and abusing power.

Even though it updated its Taser policies in March, UPD must revise them if it hopes to regain credibility among students. UF announced it will ask the Florida Department of Law Enforcement to look into when it's appropriate to use Tasers.

Accent, Student Government speakers' bureau, said it won't change its security policy at speeches and events, and we applaud that. But we hope UPD considers changing its Taser policy.

Thanks to Technology

We'd be lying if we said we weren't overwhelmed with the response to Monday's event. We're overwhelmed with the work it's generated for our newsroom, but mostly we're overwhelmed by the community's response.

On Monday, UF student Andrew Meyer was Tasered at Sen. John Kerry's town-hall forum after refusing to leave the auditorium quietly.

On Tuesday, students staged protests and sit-ins. Rumors about riots swirled about the city.

National news networks covered the event. Letters poured into our inboxes. Administrators issued statements left and right, trying to cover their asses.

And to think, none of this would have been possible without YouTube and Facebook.

Thanks to several videos of the incident posted online, ranging from television-clarity to cell-phone-fuzziness, millions of people have seen what happened.

Technology's a bitch, man.

Without Facebook, we can't imagine students would have organized themselves quickly enough to hold a protest one short day after the now-infamous event happened.

We're not saying Taser-ing a student wasn't bad enough. Much of the world would have been outraged without video and photographs.

But technology adds a new element to the equation. Instead of relying on news reports, which often sensationalize or omit some things, raw video footage brings the event away from the subjective and into the objective.

One online video is a small step for man, and technology is one giant leap for mankind.

Police correct to use force on student

Andrew Meyer's arrest on Monday has no doubt sparked debate about how much force officers can use. Some believe Taser-ing him was out of line; others think the punishment fit the crime. But before we pass judgment on anyone, consider this snippet from Florida law:

"A person is justified in using force, except deadly force, against another when and to the extent that the person reasonably believes that such conduct is necessary to defend himself or herself or another against the other's imminent use of unlawful force." -Title XLVI, 776.012.

Unless Sen. John Kerry came down from the podium and started throwing punches, Meyer had no other reason to fight anyone. However, because University Police Department officers believed he was becoming a threat to Kerry, they were justified in using their own force to restrain him.

The only exception to this rule is the use of deadly force; even then, the officers prefer saving lives to taking them, suicides included.

Monday's event has implications beyond an arrest and a jail stay.

UPD is accredited by the Commission on Accreditation for Law Enforcement Agencies (CALEA) and the Commission for Florida Law Enforcement Accreditation. Ten years ago, when the department first received CALEA certification, it was one of only 14 university police departments to do so.

Yes, the officers in the orange-and-blue-trimmed cars are real officers. Because they are real officers, they are allowed to dump out your keg and give you a speeding ticket like officers with the Gainesville Police Department.

So if you get in trouble, don't say I didn't warn you.

Vincent Gagliano

letters@alligator.org

Besides, the police do these things to protect us in the first place; this should be trivial to anyone aware of the dangers of crime. The alternatives to having any law enforcement around are ugly indeed. Imagine a campus run amok with criminals, illegal drugs and chaos.

I guarantee you no one will voluntarily go to a place like that, even if they got a full ride.

If UPD stepped over the line in restraining Meyer, it will become a black spot for campus security in general. If abuses of power become a recurring pattern, no one on campus will feel safe, which will hurt the credibility of a school that prides itself as the premier educational institution of the entire state.

Don't forget, this happened a mere five months after the Virginia Tech disaster.

It might not seem obvious, but Meyer inadvertently became UPD's first real test of policies implemented in response to April's tragedy. If he had been armed with a gun instead of his fists, wouldn't you feel relieved the cops responded as they did?

Instead, we're spending our time questioning the decision-making of the very people hired to protect us in the first place. What a tangled web we weave.

Andrew Meyer was not wrong in asking Kerry about the 2004 election. What was wrong was the way he expressed his displeasure. Hopefully, he learned a lesson about losing his temper.

Vincent Gagliano is a sophomore majoring in physics. His column appears on Wednesdays.

Defenseless student didn't need Taser

I am appalled at the aggressive tactics used by University Police Department officers to remove Andrew Meyer from the presentation by Sen. John Kerry. How does using profanity or asking why you are being arrested justify the use of a Taser gun on a defenseless college student?

Since the video is accessible online, students and university administrators should take the time to find out if such force was necessary and hold the officers accountable for their actions. Why were there so many officers in the first place?

It is a sad day in academia when students cannot voice their opinions without being censored or Tasered. How much further are we going to allow our individual rights to be trampled on?

Fernando Diaz

Meyer no match for UPD officers

UPD was most definitely justified in using a Taser on Meyer. If it hadn't, he might have overpowered those police officers. Who knows what could have happened then — he might have asked Kerry another question.

Accent to blame for Taser incident

Some people seem to be confused about Monday's events surrounding Meyer, accusing the UPD of censoring Meyer's free speech. This is not the case, so let's give credit where credit is due.

Don't get me wrong, the police were way out of line to arrest and Taser a lone, unarmed student. Despite the officers' claims, Meyer was not being violent. They should be punished, and all charges against Meyer should be dropped.

But the cops, in true pawn-like, we're-just-following-orders fashion, were not responsible for the decision to censor Meyer's speech. No, the blame for that lies squarely on Accent, which "cut off the microphone because Meyer used profanity," said Accent chairman Steven Blank.

Accent deemed it necessary to protect a room full of adults from hearing the word "blowjob," the uttering of which was not entirely inappropriate, and certainly not profane in the context of its use.

In 1969, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that free-speech rights extended to students in school. Accent, as an agency of Student Government, infringed on Meyer's First Amendment right when it silenced him and must be held accountable. Perhaps this issue should be taken to the SG Supreme Court.

UPD should take its violence to Iraq

"To Surge and Project electrified probes into your body," should be the new motto for our University Shock Troopers (formerly the UPD).

Kerry mentioned that in order to successfully end the Iraq war, adequate law enforcement would have to be established. We should send the UPD over there. After all, it seems trigger-happy and ready for battle.

At least next year we won't have to worry about a campus overpopulated with incoming freshmen. What parents in their right minds would send their children to a college where the police are the biggest threat?

Microphone shouldn't have been cut off

The broadcast media's spin on this situation is akin to that of a reality television show. Every video I've seen, including on CNN and MSNBC, has shown only the most controversial parts of what happened.

Obviously, the Taser incident is what caused the outrage, but people need to see the story in its entirety — not necessarily to change their minds, but to better understand.

His microphone was cut off because he said "blowjob," not because Accent was trying to censor him. He was out of control the whole time and needed to be escorted from the auditorium.

Everyone saw what happened next, and I disagree with it as much as everyone else. But we should all try to get the whole story before demanding the officers lose their jobs.

Adam Wynn

Meyer should have listened to police

For all of those vehemently against what happened at Kerry's speech Monday, I say this: There are two sides to every story.

I am disgusted at how not only students, but the media decided not to look into the whole incident and learn all of the facts.

UPD didn't do anything wrong. A student was making a scene and acting incredibly irrationally in the presence of a U.S. senator, and UPD had to take precautions.

Meyer is not a victim. If Meyer would have just listened to the cops, he wouldn't have gotten Tasered. UPD had no other alternative. So before you go out and protest this incident, think twice to see if this person is worth protesting for.

UF students must stand up for rights

The UF administration needs to Taser UPD after its recent display of excessive force, poor judgment and downright bullying of unarmed student Andrew Meyer. These "officers of the law" should be ashamed of themselves.

They abused their power and crushed the spirit of freedom of speech across this campus for years to come. UPD is simply on a power trip.

College is supposed to allow for healthy political discussions. Instead, this incident has cast a dark, disturbing shadow on UF.

UF administrators must take a stronger stance. They cannot allow for some thick-headed officers to set the mood and atmosphere of the campus.

Students must stand up, as well. Favor free speech. Stand on the side of academia. Support Meyer until all charges are dropped, the police officers are relieved of duty, and UF issues an apology to Meyer and every Gator, past and present.

The Gator Nation must be governed in a way that safely promotes the ideals of freedom and security, rather than simply existing in a police state.

Steve Campion
2JM

UPD not a 'progressive' agency

I just watched the video of Meyer being arrested on CNN, and I was horrified.

The actions of those officers are repugnant to me for many reasons, including free-speech rights and the fact that Meyer didn't do anything that warranted that kind of reaction.

But what floored me most was the way your officers escalated their response so quickly.

What happened to asking Meyer to leave and escorting him out? I think it's pathetic UPD had to resort to force.

On the UPD Web site, Chief Stump says her officers belong to a "progressive law enforcement agency." I would say the UPD is the opposite, displaying Draconian-like force in a situation that could have been handled much differently.

It was just one student — was every other option tried? That may be a huge "what if" for UPD, because now the entire nation can see the lack of judgment displayed that day.

Andy DePew
Tucson, Ariz.

Meyer is new free-speech martyr

When I first saw the Andrew Meyer video, I was stunned that a conservative activist could act so foolish and immature. When it was revealed that he is actually a Kerry supporter, the whole ordeal made much more sense.

The police allowed Meyer's combative resistance to carry on for a disproportionately long time before using nonlethal force. I do not suspect that anything negative will happen to the officers. They performed their duties appropriately and professionally.

The only unfortunate event that occurred here is that Meyer has now been cast into the national spotlight as a martyr to many, inspiring untold numbers of the unwashed masses to create social disturbances and chaos for their shot at celebrity.

Michael Bosworth
7EG

Student's protest showed immaturity

The UF student's arrest brought back memories of my years at Florida and students' protests for civil rights. It seems this student was more interested in his 15 minutes of fame than in his message.

He seemed to live up to the lyrics of Buffalo Springfield's "For What Its Worth" rather than Peter, Paul and Mary's "The Great Mandala." The student's protest is genuine, but his protest was juvenile.

Robert Keyserling
Odessa, Mo.

Constitution Day ironic day for Taser

The irony of the Taser incident is that it took place on Sept. 17, the day the country celebrates Constitution Day. It is unfortunate both sides could not remain calm and work to a peaceful resolution. But that could be said about anything, including our own national government.

Rusi Patel
St. Simons, Ga.

Meyer should have controlled himself

Reading all the comments people have made, whether online or in the paper, I think that people are somewhat misguided in their anger. What happened to Meyer was wrong, but what didn't happen was even worse.

Everyone is clamoring that this is evidence we live in a police state or that we no longer have freedom of speech.

That's not correct. If Meyer had been able to control and present himself like a more reasonable person, this wouldn't have happened.

I know that he was probably riled up and has a strong belief in what he was saying, and that's alright with me. But if he could have done it in a more reasonable tone, it would have been more effective.

The real shame is that people didn't care enough to stop it. One woman yelled for the officers to stop, but no one else cared.

I guarantee people who were there are now outraged that it happened. They're yelling at UF President Bernie Machen to act. But what were they doing to stop it?

We don't live in a police state, or somewhere without the First Amendment. We live in a country where people are happier to protest and complain after the fact, when they know they are safe, sound and free from Taser.

Tasers painful, but not vicious weapons

A Taser is hardly "vicious weaponry" as Kyle Cox's Tuesday column stated. The whole point of a nonlethal, safe weapon is to avoid bringing out the actual "vicious weaponry."

Is being Tased a painful experience? Obviously, and that's exactly the point. Tasers are an effective and efficient means of rendering an uncooperative subject cooperative.

Anyone who's seen the video saw that perfectly demonstrated. The student involved had plenty of notice and the actions taken by the UPD officers were justified.

Anyone who refuses to follow instructions given by police officers, violently resists them and continues these actions after being warned deserves to be Tasered. Then he or she will comply and officers can do their jobs.

Matthew Young
1BA

Meyer's questions not irrelevant

Kyle Cox seems to believe he, above respected political scientists, historians and sociologists has full and perfect knowledge of those things that are acceptable to protest and those that are not.

I beseech Cox to use his next column to offer students a full list. I would like to keep it with me at all times, right next to my Bible and pamphlet on treating Taser wounds.

Cox theorizes, loosely and poorly, that issues are not of importance once they have "sat on the backburner too long."

No one told Bobby Kennedy Jr., who wrote an extensive piece for Rolling Stone Magazine titled, "Was the 2004 Election Stolen?" He produced some very intriguing data to suggest one of our most basic rights had been violated.

Ballot integrity is such a pressing issue in this state that one of the first acts of Gov. Charlie Crist, a Republican, was to institute a paper trail in Florida's voting process. I guess we should have taken Cox literally when he exclaimed, "Human rights be damned!"

For those who care about the validity of our democracy as much as me, Meyer, Crist and Bobby Kennedy Jr., please take the time to become educated. Meanwhile, please refrain from labeling certain protests as overboard, embarrassing, obnoxious, inappropriate or a waste of time.

Jackson not discouraged by sub-par performance

By MIKE MCCALL
Alligator Staff Writer
mmccall@alligator.org

If free safety Kyle Jackson emerges as a playmaker in the UF secondary this year, a late-night phone call may be the reason.

The senior missed a tackle on Tennessee receiver Lucas Taylor in the first quarter of Saturday's game, allowing the Volunteers to convert on third-and-12.

The play led to a Tennessee field goal that cut the Gators' lead to 7-3, and Jackson was pulled from the game in favor of freshman Major Wright.

Wright finished the game with six tackles — third-most on the team — while Jackson tallied none.

On Sunday, Coach Urban Meyer began to worry about his player and gave Jackson a call.

"I called him at about 10 [Sunday] night on the way home," Meyer said. "I love Kyle Jackson and his family. He's such an invested player. If he wasn't so invested, we'd just kind of move on and do what we've got to do. But he's certainly a leader of this team."

Jackson said the call was to reassure him of his spot on the team.

"I guess he thought I had some intentions on giving up, but I told him that I've invested too much to quit," he said. "I'm a Gator, and I'll be here. He said he's still not giving up on me and to just come out and practice, that I'm too good of a player (to quit)."

Jackson has been virtually invisible from the UF stat sheet this season. In three games he has managed just one tackle and no pass breakups.

Football

Meanwhile, Wright is third on the team with 14 tackles and one breakup.

Jackson is quick to acknowledge his tackling problem as his biggest issue.

"I just need to make that extra step on a tackle," he said. "This week I'll be out there doing extra tackling and bringing that extra step. I've been playing football for too long and I know I've got it. It's just that extra step on tackles and that's what everyone wants to see, so I've got to bring it."

Jackson's biggest weakness has been

Safety deserves one more chance

Kyle Jackson has gotten second, third and fourth chances — and maybe even more.

But the senior free safety deserves one final shot this weekend.

Jackson, a popular — and deserving — scapegoat for defensive letdowns against Alabama and South Carolina in Coach Urban Meyer's first season, was due to have a bounce-back senior season.

It was supposed to be one of those feel-good stories, a can't-miss freshman who lost his starting job as a sophomore and watched the national championship game largely from the bench as a junior.

The Ron Zook recruit would use those memories as motivation his senior year to end his tumultuous UF career on a high note.

If you have watched Jackson's play so far, you've probably noticed not much has changed.

He's still looking lost at times and missing tackles, opening the door for true freshman Major Wright to possibly become the second player to pass him up in the last three years.

Wright announced his arrival with a smack, slamming Chris Rainey to the ground in preseason practice.

He was the first de-striped freshman.

He replaced Jackson in the starting defense on the fourth series of the season.

Against Tennessee, Jackson started and finished with as many tackles as Smokey the bluetick coonhound.

Wright recorded six tackles and a pass breakup.

That's five more stops and one more pass breakup than Jackson has on the entire season.

The question is not if, but when Wright

Senior year starts strong for versatile Killingsworth

■ SHE EARNED SEC DEFENSIVE PLAYER OF THE WEEK.

By PHIL KEGLER
Alligator Writer

The Gale Lemerand Athletic Center practice gym featured some light-hearted pickup action before practice Tuesday.

Elyse Cusack and Marcie Hampton took on Kisya Killingsworth and Christina Diaz, but a few stipulations made the impromptu play a tad more interesting.

The players switched their normal positions — Cusack and Diaz did the spiking while 6-footers Hampton and Killingsworth set — and only use of the left hand was allowed.

It only makes sense that Killingsworth, a self-proclaimed jokester, would be in on the action.

"I am the leader of goofiness," Killingsworth said. "I can try and be the leader on the court, but I'm more the person that goes up to Angie (McGinnis) and says random things on the court and Angie looks at me like, 'What are you talking about?'"

The senior knows she has to keep the laughter inside when the team heads out on the road later this week.

"It's kinda funny to hear some of the things they say," Killingsworth said. "But it's one of those things — you have to block it out. If you don't, you will be for sure riding the bench the rest of that match."

Opposing teams haven't been laughing recently.

The senior tied her career high with seven block assists Friday night against Georgia, and she leads the team with 34 total blocks on the year.

Her blocking effort throughout the weekend earned her the Southeastern Conference Defensive Player of the Week honors on Monday.

What makes her success so special

Thompson not likely to leave

By JENNA MARINA
Alligator Staff Writer
jmarina@alligator.org

Contrary to reports circulating in southern Florida, wide receiver Deonte Thompson seems to be content in Gainesville, Gators coach Urban Meyer said Tuesday evening.

On Sunday, InsideTheU.com cited a source close to Thompson who said the freshman is not happy with his lack of playing time at UF and is considering a transfer to Miami.

"I talked to Deonte and he said he loves it (here)," Meyer said. "He's ready to go."

The former five-star recruit has not yet played a down in any of the past three games, but Meyer said the depth at the receiver position factors into Thompson's lack of time on the field.

Football

The coach also said he's cautious about using up the freshman's eligibility too soon.

"I think he's going to be a great player," Meyer said. "I just don't want to waste a year, and that's a fine line."

PASS RUSH. POSSIBILITY: After Saturday's game against Tennessee, Meyer is considering implementing defensive end Carlos Dunlap into the mix to help the Gators' pass rush.

UF has totaled five sacks in three games, but four were against Western Kentucky, and the team has failed to record a quarterback hurry so far this season. Dunlap is a 6-foot-6, 240 pounder, so Meyer hopes to utilize the freshman's length during games to deflect passes.

QB SHOWDOWN: Come Saturday, the Gators may face an unfamiliar foe — a starting quarterback who has actually defeated them.

There are only three current quarterbacks in the nation who have started against the Gators and pulled out the win. Mississippi's Brent Schaeffer is one of them.

Since Rebels' quarterback Seth Adams is questionable for Saturday's game, Schaeffer has the opportunity to step in and face UF for the first time since he helped defeat the Gators in 2004 as Tennessee's starting quarterback.

South Carolina's Blake Mitchell and Auburn's Brandon Cox are the other two quarterbacks who claim victories over UF.

Meyer reassures safety with late-night phone call his counterpart's strength.

Wright was widely known for his hitting prowess in high school, and he has already shown it off in practice and games this season.

The freshman's aggressiveness has led to speculation of a change in the depth chart at free safety, but Meyer isn't ready to put Jackson on the sidelines.

"There's a role for Kyle Jackson, and there will continue to be," Meyer said.

Jackson said that Meyer's loyalty has already improved his mindset.

"Once your confidence gets dropped like that in The Swamp, having the coach call you the next night to say he hasn't given up on you and he still loves you, it puts things back in perspective," Jackson said.

Jackson

"Before I left the field (Monday), Coach pulled me back to the side and said that he watched the film of me missing the tackle. He said he sat up all night watching it, and it's just that extra step.

"He said I've got everything else: the reading ability and that knack for the ball. I know that. I feel myself out there and my angles and everything are good, it's just that tackling."

Middle blocker totals double-digit kills in previous 4 matches is the fact that Killingsworth hasn't played two consecutive seasons at the same position.

She played right-side hitter her freshman year, moved to middle blocker her sophomore year and switched to left-side hitter her junior year.

UF coach Mary Wise feels the move back to middle suits Killingsworth best.

"There's a comfort zone for Kisyia," Wise said. "It's what she does most easily."

The senior looks to have it down by the end of the season.

"This whole season, I will still be learning," Killingsworth said. "Hopefully by the time we get down to the end of November, I won't be learning anymore. I'll have it down like a pro."

"This whole season, I will still be learning."

Kisyia Killingsworth
UF volleyball player

Despite her "blocker" title, Killingsworth has provided plenty of offense lately.

The senior has recorded double-digit kills in the last four matches, including a match-high 12 kills Sunday against Auburn, and her .420 hitting percentage ranks second in the SEC.

Killingsworth's ability to attack causes the other team to change its blocking schemes to account for her.

That's when attack lanes start opening up for UF's outside hitters.

"It's really what our offense is based around," Wise said.

That's the part Killingsworth enjoys most.

"I can go up and hold the middle and let the outside get a clearer shot," Killingsworth said.

"It's just like, 'haha, we just tricked you,' kind of thing. It's fun in my perspective, maybe not fun for the other middle blocker."

will fully supplant Jackson in the starting lineup.

For now, I ask to give Jackson an umpteenth chance to prove himself.

This weekend against Mississippi marks a brief respite before a rough Southeastern Conference stretch.

After pounding the Rebels, UF faces losable games against Auburn — though that matchup is becoming less and less of a concern — at LSU, at Kentucky and in Jacksonville against Georgia.

Meyer could make a statement by starting Wright this week, but the big-hitting freshman has done just fine in his reserve role so far.

Wright has two or three more years to develop.

There is no need to rush him too quickly, especially against the worst team in the SEC.

He proved last week he can play against SEC teams.

That's what Jackson needs to show this week.

Meyer could exhibit some faith in Jackson — which he has done admirably so far this year — and let his experienced senior play for his job one last time.

The fun and games are over after this week.

If Wright is still outperforming Jackson, there is no excuse not to make the switch after Saturday.

Well, unless Auburn loses again.

It seems so long ago when Jackson picked off two passes against South Carolina in 2004.

Writers actually described him as a playmaker. I looked it up.

Then Tyrone Prothro burned him ...

and Keith Brown ...

and Sidney Rice ...

and, eventually, Reggie Nelson bumped him off the field completely.

This week could be the climax of the Kyle Jackson story, or it could be the start of a new chapter.

Either way, give Jackson the pen and let him write it.

Meyer no stranger to controversy

By KORI FREDERICK
Alligator Writer

Monday's Taserung did not mark the first time Andrew Meyer has been surrounded by controversy.

On Sept. 11, he protested with a giant sign on Furlington Plaza that claimed President Bush was responsible for the terrorist attacks of 2001.

On March 11, 2005, he wrote a column for the Alligator detailing his love of being confrontational.

"I absolutely love the thought that some nonsense I wrote irritated people enough for them to take time out of their day to let everyone know how much they disliked what I wrote," the column said.

Monica Alvarez, a UF telecommunication alumna, was one person he irritated.

While Alvarez doesn't know Meyer personally, she said she is not a fan of his writings. She thinks he tries to get people riled up.

Alvarez defended Meyer's right to question Sen. John Kerry, but she thinks he should have left when UPD asked him to.

"It's unfortunate it came down to that," she said. "But UPD didn't know what his intentions were. They were just trying to protect Sen. Kerry and the crowd."

Meyer's friend, Ricky Cuellar, doesn't think his buddy is too over the top.

Cuellar, an events management junior, thinks that Meyer, or The Andrew Meyer as he calls himself online, simply wanted to ask Kerry some tough questions.

"That's just how he is," Cuellar said. "He's really into asking the difficult questions, and he loves conspiracies."

Cuellar called UPD's tactics "a little more than ridiculous."

"It made me think of when someone speaks out at an assembly in high school. They would get sent to the principal and get a referral. But he got tackled by six officers and Tasered."

"It made me think of when someone speaks out at an assembly in high school," he said. "They would get sent to the principal and get a referral. But he got tackled by six officers and Tasered."

Meyer, who celebrated his 21st birthday Sept. 15, runs a Web site — www.theandrewmeyer.com — where he airs his views on music, movies and politics. The site has had more than 45,000 hits since the arrest.

Meeting the 'other' Andrew Meyer

■ MEYER SHARES HIS NAME WITH ANOTHER UF STUDENT.

By ILEANA MORALES
Alligator Writer

One Andrew Meyer didn't get Tasered or arrested on Monday. He wasn't even at Sen. John Kerry's speech.

Because of the rain and the death of his cat on Sunday, he slept in.

This Meyer is a mechanical engineering junior at UF with the same name as the student Tasered and arrested at the University Auditorium.

The name confusion explains the calls to his family from NBC, the "well over 200" Facebook friend requests and the new default picture that reads, "I am not the guy who got tasered. He has disappeared from facebook."

While doing homework at a friend's house, Meyer first received notice of the incident from his parents, who had just been phoned by NBC.

Meyer said his parents jokingly asked, "Hey Andrew, did you get Tasered today?"

His friends and family knew right away that he wasn't the Andrew Meyer who was arrested.

"I'm the good son in the family," Meyer said. "If it was my sister, they might have believed it for a second."

News networks including CNN and FOX called his parents in Orlando, but Meyer did not receive any phone calls about the incident.

He did, however, receive about 10 e-mails from news outlets. Some knew there were two students with the same name and addressed the e-mails "to whom it may concern."

To be "more efficient," Meyer had a generic e-mail ready to respond to any media inquiries.

"I'm sure Andrew wants to get news out about him," said Meyer. "So if they contacted me, I redirected them to him."

Student Life

The confusion was harder to evade on Facebook.

Friend requests began to appear at 3 a.m. Tuesday. They came in groups of 3 or 4 every hour, Meyer said.

The two Meyers have never met but have been Facebook friends since they discovered they had the same name three years ago.

He said he thought the other Meyer's behavior was inappropriate but didn't warrant a Taser.

"It's pretty bad what happened to him, but a lot of good will come from it too," Meyer said. "Since he's a journalism major, this will get him publicity since it actually got on the news."
