Lombardi: Education key to easing tension

By GEOFF BOUCHER
Alligator Staff Writer

There are no "quick fix" solutions to racial discord, and the best way to tackle the issue is through the education process, new UF President John Lombardi told a campus task force Tuesday.

Lombardi spent his second day at UF discussing campus racial issues with the Quality of Life Task Force, a group set up to examine the status of UF's black and Hispanic students. Lombardi, wearing a racial harmony button, told task force members not to expect instant answers.

"We need to learn to be tolerant and learn to remove institutional obstacles," Lombardi said. "It's relatively easy to say, and it's relatively difficult to achieve."

Lombardi said the proposal to create a cultural awareness course, a concept that has recently dominated task force discussions, can be successful if it informs students, has them question what they learn and lets them make up their own minds.

"I'm always reluctant about spending scarce resources on preaching," said Lombardi, former provost of Johns Hopkins University. "I'm a major believer in changing behavior instead of attitudes.

"I'd rather see us work on a content course addressing races and classes in historical context," said Lombardi, who is also a Latin American history professor. "Let's give a sense of 'who we are' and 'why we're here' instead of 'what we ought to think.'"

Lombardi, who previously has taught a race relations course, said he would be willing to teach the class at UF. He said the best approach would be to get several instructors from different disciplines to offer the class, each using the same syllabus.

Lombardi also told task force members that before ways can be found to boost UF's "significantly low" minority graduation rate, the different causes have to be identified.

He said some minority students are driven off by an imposing or hostile environment, while others bring disadvantages with them, such as a poor high school curriculum or a language barrier. He said these "out-of-synch" students are the targets of tutoring and mentor programs.

Lombardi said others leave because they find college just isn't for them, which is part of a "natural process." Still other students drop out because of expenses and the pressure an outside job can put on academics.

"They get these minority financial aid packages and then they come here and they find they don't quite have it all together," Lombardi said.

He said students who leave without degrees hit UF with a "double whammy", not only putting a dent in the student body, but costing the school potential educators.

The task force was set up by Lombardi's predecessor, Interim UF President Robert Bryan, last December in response to the growing racial tension at UF. The 19 members were given an April 15 deadline to submit their recommendations.

President's fund-raising ability impresses leaders

□ This is the third of a 5-part series examining the issues facing President John Lombardi as he leads UF into a new decade.

By RONALD DUPONT JR.

Ask administrators and alumni whether new UF President John Lombardi will be a good fund-raiser, and they'll look stunned. They say it's a dumb question — sort of like asking if Michael Jordan can play basketball or if Emmitt Smith can play football.

Indeed, inquire about Lombardi's ability to raise money and some UF officials jumble their words in an effort to say several positive things about the man in one breath.

After all, they say, here is a man who is arriving at UF when it is boasting about its $250 million fund-raising campaign — the largest in UF history. Lombardi, however, just finished participating in a $600 million campaign at the Johns Hopkins University.

Here is a man who is arriving at UF when it is touting the $107 million it spends on research — a big moneymaker for the school. Lombardi just left a university that spends $557 million on research.

And here is a man who is arriving at UF when it is thanking former President Marshall Criser and former interim President Robert Bryan for their efforts in raising money for the fund-raising campaign. Lombardi started raising money for UF even before he began as its president.

"A man for all reasons," declared a headline touting Lombardi in the March issue of UF's Today magazine.

That sentiment is echoed in the comments of administrators and alumni alike.

"He will be great at fund raising," said

Candidates come to UF

Campus forum features District 3 candidates

By BLAKE FONTENAY
Alligator Writer

Due to a recent change in the structure of the Gainesville City Commission, students may have a greater impact on elections this year than ever before.

The four candidates for the District 3 commission seat plan to participate in a forum on campus today that could help students use their newfound voting power more wisely.

The candidates will field questions about local issues at 5 p.m. in McCarty Auditorium. The forum, sponsored by Florida Blue Key and Student Government, will be free and open to the public.

For years, the city commission was composed of five members elected to "at-large" seats. The city was divided into three districts in 1988. Under the new system, voters in each district elect a commissioner to represent their interests, while two commissioners still are chosen at-large.

Although voters in District 1 elected a commissioner in 1988, the other two district seats have not been contested until this year.

UF's Hispanic faculty organizes group

Goals include assisting students, providing role models, recruiting

By CHRISTY HARRIS
Alligator Writer

The newly formed Hispanic Faculty Association wants to help UF increase Hispanic representation on campus, support Hispanics already here and provide them with a cross-cultural meeting place.

The group got its charter, elected officers and adapted a constitution two weeks ago. Its purpose, as stated in its constitution, "is to support the University's efforts to increase the participation of Hispanics . . . , to articulate current needs and interests of Hispanics and to offer a collegial network for the advancement and welfare of Hispanic faculty members"

Membership is open to "all faculty, administrators and professional employees who are Hispanic or concerned with Hispanic issues." About 25 people are members.

Gerardo Gonzalez, the group's president and Quality of Life Task Force co-chairman, said Hispanic faculty members are the second-least represented group on campus, with the least being Native Americans. Of UF's more than 3,000 faculty members, 37 are Hispanic. About 35 more Hispanics are administrators or professional employees. He said members will help increase the number of Hispanic faculty by telling others about job openings.

"We're all involved in various professional organizations," Gonzalez said. "We can serve as recruiters and advocates."

UF needs more Hispanic faculty as role models for Hispanic students, and to show non-Hispanic students that people from other cultures are successful, he said.

"One of the most important factors in a student's adjustment is developing meaningful relationships with faculty who are of similar background," Gonzalez said. "By increasing the number of Hispanic faculty, we can contribute to their success. Faculty can serve as mentors to the students."

Hispanic Faculty Association Secretary Celia Martin, a clinical and community dietetics professor, said she joined the group because Hispanic faculty members' opinions often went unheard.

"We all kind of felt like the Hispanic faculty had no voice in the university," Martin said. "We were almost invisible. We wanted to let them know we're there."

Hispanic student enrollment has hovered at about five percent, not changing much in the past few years, Gonzalez said. UF is projected to fall 17 percent short of the Board of Regents' 1992 goal for increased Hispanic enrollment. The faculty group wants to help UF reach or come closer to that goal and become more proportionate to Florida's general Hispanic population.

"Hispanic faculty can advocate for greater recruiting efforts (for students)," Gonzalez said. "Hispanic students are also underrepresented in scholarship support."

Gonzalez, who also is the interim counselor education chair, said the group is looking at ways to make evaluation criteria and entrance requirements, such as standardized tests, fair for everyone. Members would speak for the need to revise such tests if they're biased against minorities. He explained why some Hispanic students don't score well on the College Level Academic Skills Test.

"One possible explanation is that for many Hispanic students, English is their second language," he said.

The faculty group is counting on UF President John Lombardi's support of its mission. Lombardi, a Latin American studies expert, will be the guest of honor at the group's inaugural reception March 14.

Increasing Hispanic representation on campus is only one of the faculty group's goals. Another is to better support Hispanic faculty and students already here by lending talent to Hispanic Heritage Week and opening a cross-cultural meeting place where minority students can feel comfortable.

"There's been some concern expressed that there really isn't a place on campus where Hispanics can gather to celebrate their own cultural events — a place to call home, where they can feel welcome," Gonzalez said.

He said the meeting place is more likely to be included in a building yet to be constructed because there isn't enough room in existing buildings.

Milena Lanzas, Hispanic Student Association public relations officer, said Hispanic faculty members and students need to work together and that she would like Hispanic faculty members to become more involved in her group's activities, including Hispanic Heritage Week.

"Just knowing they're behind us, that we're not alone," Lanzas said. "That would help a lot."

UF student's murder trial postponed

By DUANE MARSTELLER
Alligator Writer

The trial of UF graduate student Jens Peter Hansen, charged in connection with the Sept. 1 shooting death of a pathology professor, will be delayed another month because of pending motions, a judge decided Tuesday.

Circuit Judge Robert P. Cates postponed Hansen's trial, originally scheduled to begin March 19, until April because of a pending defense motion that seeks to throw out evidence found in Hansen's car.

Hansen, 43, is charged with first-degree murder in connection with the shooting death of Arthur Kiyoshi Kimura, a professor of pathology at Shands Hospital.

Kimura, who died at Shands two hours after being shot in the head, was chairman of a committee that denied Hansen a doctorate. Police say that was Hansen's motive.

Steve Bernstein, Hansen's attorney, said the State Attorney's Office has not had time to respond to his motion to throw out evidence Alachua County Sheriff's deputies found in Hansen's Ford Mustang the day after the shooting.

Chief Assistant State Attorney John Carlin, who is trying the case, was out of town and could not be reached for comment. Assistant State Attorney Gordon Groland, who represented the state at Tuesday's hearing, also could not be reached for comment.

Afghan coup attempt unsuccessful

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Rebels led by the Afghan defense minister tried to overthrow Afghanistan's Soviet-backed regime Tuesday but their coup attempt failed following fierce fighting in which the presidential palace was bombed in the capital city of Kabul, the government and news reports said.

"Defense Minister Shah Nawaz Tanai and a handful of warmongering and extremist elements and power hungry persons resorted to armed action against the interests of the people and the country," said a communique from the Afghan defense council led by President Najibullah.

The council, in a statement broadcast on official Kabul Radio, said the "heinous designs have been foiled by the armed forces deployed in Kabul City and that the situation is under control by the government."

Earlier Tuesday, reports from Moscow and the United Nations headquarters in New York said fighting had raged around Kabul. Moscow reports said the fighting broke out at the airport, around the Defense Ministry and that the presidential palace was bombed. There were an unknown number of casualties.

A later communique broadcast by the radio said Tanai had "fled to an unknown place." At one point, officials called for his return "dead or alive."

Najibullah came to power in 1986, seven years after the Soviets invaded in December 1979 to support the first of a series of Marxist rulers against anti-communist Moslem rebels.

The Soviet Union withdrew its more than 100,000 troops last year and Najibullah's Marxist administration defied predictions it would fall to the U.S.-backed rebels within months of the pullout.

Tanai is a professional soldier who rose quickly through the ranks to become army chief of staff. He was appointed defense minister by Najibullah in 1987.

Oil drilling in Everglades considered

FORT LAUDERDALE (UPI) — The Florida Cabinet next month will consider expanding oil exploration into the Everglades as recommended by state environmental officials despite 81 oil spills in south Florida in the last 18 years.

State Department of Natural Resources officials made a tentative recommendation in December favoring exploration in western Dade, Broward and Palm Beach counties, which are already designated as Everglades water conservation areas.

The report made no mention of the spills that have allowed an estimated 163,000 gallons of crude oil to seep into South Florida's soil along with 120,000 gallons of saltwater, which is a by-product of pumping oil. The law only requires oil companies to report spills of 210 gallons or more.

Eight of those spills occurred in the Big Cypress

National Preserve where two fields are active. One of those spills occurred seven years ago, leaving a three-acre stand of cypress trees dead.

Officials said about half of the spills are the result of corrosion or punctures in the oil companies' network of pipelines.

Exxon, the largest driller, insisted that it is not responsible for pipeline spills since Sunniland Pipeline Co. of Fort Lauderdale pumps the oil to Fort Lauderdale's Port Everglades for distribution, a Department of Environmental Regulation official said.

Gov. Bob Martinez has stated his opposition in the past to any oil exploration in the Everglades. Attorney General Bob Butterworth has initiated a review of the state's oil policies. However, the five remaining Cabinet members are expected to give great consideration to the report's recommendations.

Ciskei homeland declares state of emergency

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Military officers responsible for ousting President-for-life Lennox Sebe in the nominally independent homeland of Ciskei declared a state of emergency Tuesday as violence subsided in the region.

Foreign Minister Roelof "Pik" Botha told Parliament of the state of emergency made by Ciskei's four-member ruling military council.

No immediate information on the declaration was available from Ciskei, where doctors reported Tuesday as many as 20 dead and 300 wounded in the aftermath of a bloodless coup ousting Sebe.

Pretoria has pledged not to crush the popular rebellion led by Brig. O. Josh Gqozo, who said he moved against Sebe Sunday because of widespread corruption and violence "ordered and sanctioned" by the 64-year-old leader.

Gqozo urged calm and an end to the looting and arson that erupted in the 48 hours after he took control while Sebe was out of the homeland. Sebe has ruled Ciskei with an iron hand since the territory accepted Pretoria's controversial independence offer in 1981.

No official casualty reports were available, but doctors reported 20 dead and 300 injured during the rampages Sunday and Monday, most from stabbings and gunshots. Injuries also were attributed to drunkenness, brawls and car accidents.

Since the Feb. 11 release of black nationalist Nelson Mandela, protests and violence have been on the increase in the homelands amid calls for reunification with South Africa. Police in Ciskei launched a crackdown last month on anti-Sebe protests and as many as eight people were killed on Feb. 11 during celebrations for Mandela's release.

Gorbachev against unified Germany in NATO

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, meeting with East German Premier Hans Modrow, dismissed the idea Tuesday of a united Germany being a member of NATO, Soviet officials said.

Modrow met both the Soviet president and Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov for talks on German reunification.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said that Gorbachev "dismissed the idea of a united Germany remaining in NATO."

East German spokesman Wolfgang Maier, who also briefed the press, said a new united German state could not be a part of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"The two sides agreed that the inclusion of one Germany in NATO is unacceptable because it would be a threat to European security," Maier said. "The inclusion of one Germany in NATO would be a continuation of the Cold War in a new era."

Gorbachev has accepted the idea of a united Germany but he has said the four Allied powers and two Germanys must decide on security concerns such as participation in military blocs.

East Germany currently is a member of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact while West Germany is in NATO.

The Soviet side has proposed that the so-called four-plus-two talks — involving the Soviet Union, Britain, France and the United States plus the two Germanys — should deal with issues other than internal problems caused by creating a single Germany.

Modrow, who flew into Moscow Monday, immediately agreed on the four-plus-two talks on unity for the Germanys divided since the end of World War II.

In Brussels, West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher confirmed Monday that the officials of the four World War II allies will start talks next week with representatives from the two Germanys.

Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told Soviet journalists Monday that a Warsaw Pact meeting scheduled before the March 18 East German elections will be held after the balloting, the Tass news agency said.

The East German elections could indicate how fast East Germany may move toward unity with West Germany.

Duke Crittenden, president of Gator Boosters, the 10,000-member UF alumni organization. "He's the type of person who demands respect. He's very articulate. He's excellent at explaining why they need the money."

Lombardi uses a mixture of humor, literary quotations, statistics and a strong voice in his speeches and has already appeared before several groups, including the powerful West Palm Beach alumni group. That group gave Lombardi a standing ovation at a January event, then proceeded to give UF more money than has ever been given at a UF fund-raising banquet.

"We have an opportunity (to be a national top-10 public university) because we come somewhat late in the game," Lombardi told the West Palm Beach alumni, his voice rising in preparation for his next two sentences.

"We come after Berkeley has made its mistakes, and UCLA has screwed up, and Michigan's getting tired, and Hopkins is over-extended, and Columbia is running into deficit," he added, his open hand lightly hitting the podium in front of him. "We come at a time when we know what needs to be done in a new academic environment."

Lombardi's speeches have been part of UF's Capital Campaign, a fund-raising effort started in 1988 and scheduled to raise $250 million by December 1991. UF already has $223 million, with about $90 million coming in the last year from more than 40,000 individuals and organizations.

The money raised in the $250 million campaign is particularly important to UF because there are no restrictions on where that money can be used, said Robert Lindgren, vice president of UF Development and Alumni Affairs.

That means the money can be spent to make top programs even better or placed in a special interest-bearing account that can be used later for scholarships, minority recruitment or other special programs, he said.

"Unrestricted money coming into a college gives them a lot more flexibility," Lindgren said.

Perhaps the only fears about the Capital Campaign have been over the fact that Lombardi is not from Florida and will have trouble winning Florida alumni, Student Body President Ed Scales said.

"Lombardi is a crackerjack academician, but he is not a Floridian," Scales said. "He is going to have to make the contacts he needs just to get it (the campaign) status quo, much less progress."

Lombardi said he doesn't see it that way. Alumni don't simply look at him when deciding whether to donate money, he said.

"What sells the University of Florida, in addition to the president selling it, is the university itself," Lombardi said. "There's an illusion that the president is a lone ranger going out there selling it. That's not the case."

The Capital Campaign is the first such fund-raising effort ever started by UF. UF attempted to initiate such a campaign as early as 1972, but not enough personnel were assigned to do fund raising, Lindgren said.

In fact, in 1972 there were three people assigned to fund raising. Now there are 35. And it is the enlarged staff, along with the commitment from administrators, that has made the campaign successful, Lindgren added.

Lombardi agreed.

"UF is just starting in this game," he said. "It's the first round, and UF is doing spectacular."

Police nab escaped prisoner

Canine tracks down escapee near Alachua County jail

By MIKE BRUSCELL
Alligator Writer

A chase through about five miles of woods near the Alachua County jail ended with the arrest of a Gainesville man who escaped from police Tuesday afternoon, Gainesville police said.

George Quinn III, who is being held in jail on $1 million bail for previous drug violations, was found by Sgt. Ron Suereth and police dog Alf hiding in a swampy area about a mile from the Alachua County jail, 3333 NE 39th Ave., Gainesville police Lt. Sadie Darnell said.

Quinn was first arrested Tuesday at about 1:30 p.m. after being stopped on a traffic violation by Gainesville police. Quinn was handcuffed and taken to the jail in an unmarked police car driven by Officer Reginald Johnson. When they reached the jail, Quinn escaped from the car.

"He was handcuffed in front, and he was able to get out of the car," Darnell said. "It's not really equipped to handle prisoners."

Suereth and Alf, along with other Gainesville police and Alachua County Sheriff's officers, tracked Quinn through five miles of heavily wooded, swampy ground before finding him at about 5 p.m., Darnell said. Quinn tried to escape, but was bitten by Alf. He was taken to Alachua General Hospital for treatment, and was scheduled to return to the jail Tuesday night.

On March 13, voters will elect the first commissioners to represent District 2, which includes the Student Ghetto and northwest Gainesville, and District 3, which includes southwest Gainesville and the precinct where students living on campus may vote. Only the District 3 candidates will be involved in today's forum.

One candidate who would seem to have a "home field advantage" in the forum is Michael Murphy, a UF student who lives and works as a resident assistant at Yulee Hall.

"It'll be a good chance for the students to come out and grill the candidates," he said. "It will put pressure on them if they realize that students are going to come out and vote this time."

But Tad Delegal, Blue Key's director of divisions, said he wanted the forum to be fair to all the candidates.

"We're not trying to rig this for Michael Murphy," he said. "We want to give the students a chance to become familiar with all of the candidates."

The "non-student" candidates say they welcome the chance to face the college crowd.

"I think it's a good thing for me to bring my ideas to campus," said Craig Hedgecock, a consulting engineer and part-time UF engineering professor.

Realtor Tom McKnew said he would be at no more of a disadvantage today than Murphy was when he appeared at forums sponsored by the Gainesville Board of Realtors and the Gainesville Home Builders Association.

"Every faction ought to have a forum," he said. "I'm delighted that Florida Blue Key is doing one."

W.E. "Mac" McEachern, a retired telephone technician, said Sunday he might not attend.

"That's right in the time that I need to be in the neighborhoods," he said Sunday. Alfredo Alvarado, Blue Key director of community affairs, said Tuesday that McEachern had agreed to attend.

FUNDED BY STUDENT GOVERNMENT

OPINIONS

What are you waiting for?

This is it. Tonight could be your last chance.

Tonight, the first student candidate for city commission in "a long time" will be part of a forum at McCarty Auditorium. ON CAMPUS. FOR FREE.

Management major Michael Murphy and the three other candidates for District 3 will be discussing city issues and students' role in them. City people have sort of been saying under their breath — and some to Murphy's face — that Murphy has no chance of getting students to vote, let alone winning.

Well, wake up Gainesville. UF students, faculty and staff, along with those at Santa Fe, make up about 50 percent of the population of this city. If they were an ethnic or racial sector, you can bet your sweet petunia that they'd have at least one, probably two members representing their views on the city commission.

But the sheer number of students doesn't scare the people of this great city because they know students don't vote in any capacity that would make a difference. But homeless people don't vote, yet they are provided for and their concerns are addressed. Statistically, the poor don't vote either, yet their needs are considered — at least during election time.

Some students will vote. More than 500 registered in last month's Student Government voter registration drive and many more were already registered. When they do vote, they might not have enough power to elect a fellow student, but they will at least demand some recognition.

Tonight is the last chance in this campaign that students have to let the candidates know they are a faction in this city that needs to be dealt with. But if 20 people show up, we have no one to blame but ourselves.

It would be an embarrassing showing, not only for the university community as a whole but for the student candidate, if the auditorium isn't filled to capacity.

Murphy has spent the last month sitting in front of forums sponsored by the likes of the Gainesville Board of Realtors basically being laughed at. Students and faculty have a chance to show the city that UF has to be involved in city government.

Whether you already support a candidate or still are undecided, tonight's forum is a chance to hear what the candidates in District 3 have to say. Everyone who lives on campus votes in District 3, and this is one of the only forums for the voters of that district.

Listen to the candidates and vote. Even if you aren't registered, one of those four candidates will serve as your next city commissioner. Confront them with the issues that bother you.

The forum starts at 5 p.m. and is open to the public.

Stop eating tuna to save dolphins

Editor: Recently, I attended a meeting with Students for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

The things I learned angered and disgusted me. I think that if more people knew how industries treat animals they would reconsider their purchasing and eating behaviors.

For example, the next time a person thinks about eating a tuna sandwich, they should first think about the hundreds of dolphins that are killed each day by the inhumane fishing practices of the tuna industry.

It seems that tuna swim underneath pods of dolphins. Tuna fishing boats locate these pods and chase them with speedboats until they are tired.

The fishers throw underwater bombs into their midst to disorient and deafen the tuna and dolphins. Then both the dolphins and tuna are encircled with a nylon net and hauled in.

Many dolphins drown or are fatally injured in the process. More than 100,000 dolphins are killed each year by these murderous fishing practices.

I think this is outrageous. So many people are working to preserve animals from extinction, but the tuna industry is allowed to kill massive numbers of gentle sea mammals.

Consumers have to make a stand and show the tuna industry that their actions will no longer be tolerated.

The only way to get to big business is through their profits.

Therefore, everyone must boycott tuna and let the companies know why.

Together, we can force the tuna industry to stop using tuna that is caught by slaughtering dolphins.

Faculty does not use decompression

Editor: As chairman of the University's Animal Care and Use Committee, I, too, am concerned about some of the animal studies that are proposed. But I am also concerned about the human problems we are still struggling to overcome like disease, addiction, poverty, pollution and ignorance.

Someone has to speak for animals and humans, and this committee has been given this federal responsibility.

Our committee meetings are open, and I encourage all interested people to attend. You can observe the discussions of why animals are used and what will be done with them.

Cassie White's concern about high altitude hypoxia — lack of oxygen — caused by the use of decompression chambers for animal euthanasia, is shared by many.

Our committee does not approve decompression chambers for euthanasia. The American Veterinary Medical Association does not recommend decompression. UF faculty do not use decompression chambers.

All methods of euthanasia have their advantages and disadvantages. Our committee reviews euthanasia methods proposed by faculty to make sure they're appropriate. If anyone has other information that would help our committee continue to make responsible and humane decisions, please contact me.

Men are rewarded for violent actions

Editor: Why, it appears a reader wants to know, does The Alligator print articles about the shoddy treatment of females by males, and not the abuse of males by females?

Why? Because there is simply no comparison, in both occurrence and severity, between the two issues.

Go to the emergency room in any hospital. Who beat-up, shot and stabbed most of the people there? Not women.

Ask the one out of every three women in the United States who will be raped by a man during their life who has it worse!

If that weren't enough, the majority of these rapes will be committed by men they know, in their own homes!

The problem is that violence has been reinforced, encouraged and rewarded in boys and men their entire lives. From war toys when one is five, to football in high school and Slugfest in college, men are trained to enjoy and appreciate conquest through violence.

Meanwhile, most little girls are given Barbie dolls and later in life get congratulated for being prom queens or Diamond Dolls.

Quite frankly, women are tired of violence, especially at this campus. We are outraged that men do not take our complaints seriously — like the frat boys laughing as the Take Back the Night march against rape went down frat row.

This is why there are so many articles about mens' unfair treatment of women. This is why there will be even more.

Panel argues issue of drug legalization

By JACK REJTMAN
Alligator Writer

One speaker was caught off-guard Monday when the National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week forum topic was changed from legalizing marijuana to legalizing all drugs.

Charles Willett, chairman of Gainesville's chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, argued for the legalization of drugs but said he wasn't aware of the change until one hour before the forum. He said he wasn't given enough time to research the broader issue.

"I thought we were only dealing with marijuana," Willett said.

Kristin Oelstrom, spokeswoman for the Campus Alcohol and Drug Resource Center, which helped organize the event, said that the topic was expanded one week earlier and that Willett couldn't be reached.

Gerardo Gonzalez, interim counselor education chairman, said broadening the topic had no effect on his argument against legalization.

"I think to draw a distinction between marijuana and other drugs would create a false sense of security," he said.

Gonzalez and UF junior John Skornicka, a College Republicans member, said that legalizing drugs would compound social problems and increase the number of drug-related crimes.

Law school student Mike Fender, president of UF's College Libertarians, joined Willett in arguing that present laws are ineffective and restrict civil liberties.

"Any kind of substance abuse is an illness, not a crime and it should be treated, not punished," Willett said.

Mediator Harvey Oyer, a senior in economics, said the debate — sponsored by Drug Alcohol Resource Educators, BACCHUS and the CADRC — wasn't designed to yield a winner.

"It was meant to inform, entertain and let people go home and formulate their own opinions on drug use and drugs in their lives," Oyer said. "We're all confronted with it everyday."

Organizers originally had planned to let each side state its position and then allow the audience to ask questions, said Oyer, a DARE member and former UF debater. But earlier in the day, participants agreed to a more confrontational format in which they could cross-examine their opponents. Journalism junior Andres Bejerano said the forum suffered from speakers' lack of preparation.

"Neither side was prepared enough to address the issues," Bejerano said. "Anyone who had an opinion could have said what they said. It was more a battle of morals than just a debate."

There is a road.

Many cancer patients need transportation to and from treatments. That's why we ask for volunteers who can give some time each month to drive them. A cancer patient's road to recovery can be a long one, but it's made much easier when there's a friend who can help along the way.

Davis named to conference third team

UF forward Dwayne Davis has been named to the Associated Press' All-Southeastern Conference third team.

Davis, a junior from St. Petersburg, is the only member of the Gators squad that went 7-20 overall, 3-15 in the SEC, to receive postseason honors from the AP.

AROUND SPORTS

Sophomore Chris Jackson of Louisiana State was named SEC Player of the Year for the third consecutive season and headed the first-team squad. He was joined by senior Alec Kessler of Georgia, freshman Allan Houston of Tennessee, senior Gerald Glass of Mississippi and freshman Shaquille O'Neal of LSU.

Hugh Durham, who led Georgia (20-7, 13-5) to its first conference crown, was named SEC Coach of the Year.

The conference teams were voted on by media panels responsible for covering the SEC.

Bush mum on baseball lockout

WASHINGTON — President Bush nearly took a swing at the baseball lockout Tuesday, but the former first baseman, whose son is a part-owner of the Texas Rangers, held up. His chief spokesman fielded the question instead.

Speaking at his daily briefing with reporters, White House Press Secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Bush wants the issue resolved.

Earlier, Bush, at a picture-taking session in the Oval Office with Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti, smiled when asked by a reporter if he believed anything should be done about the lockout.

Bush turned to Andreotti and said, "She got very close to something I might answer. Very close there. I was tempted."

Ware nears NFL decision

HOUSTON — Heisman Trophy winner Andre Ware of Houston says he is close to deciding whether he will return for his final college season or enter the NFL Draft.

Ware was the NCAA's leading passer last season.

Under the revised NFL policy for undergraduates, Ware has until March 22 to forgo his senior season and apply for the April 22-23 draft. Former UF tailback Emmitt Smith was one of the first players accepted for the draft.

Poole party: Stacey becomes a star

By GREGG DOYEL
Alligator Staff Writer

Every once in a while, a can't-miss type of prospect comes from the prep ranks, someone who can shoot the 18-footer or bang away on the inside with equal propensity.

And every now and then, people, even potential superstars, get hurt.

UF redshirt freshman Stacey Poole, one such potential superstar who has taken a detour on his way to stardom, has done his time on the so-called comeback trail. Twice.

Back on Nov. 4, 1988, on just his fourth day of practice as a Gator, Poole cut across the lane and felt his right Achilles' tendon snap.

After six months of rehabilitation, where the forward's basketball action consisted of tossing a ball in the air in the confines of his room, Poole was given the OK to play again.

Weeks later, when he tore his left Achilles' tendon, Poole didn't know whether to laugh or cry.

"When it snapped the second time, I laughed. It was almost funny it was so unbelievable," Poole said. "After all the rehab, it was the last thing I thought would happen."

"The second time hurt more mentally than physically, because I knew it would be another six months before I could get back on the floor. I could dribble the ball in my room, but I couldn't shoot a real jumper because of the injury."

The transition from high school to the college ranks hasn't been quite as smooth as it probably should have been for Poole, a Mr. Basketball nominee for the state after his senior year at Jacksonville Forrest and one of the most highly sought recruits in the country.

But this season, where he has emerged as UF's top offensive threat, Poole has been one of the few bright spots in an otherwise dreary year for the Gators.

"After I went through all that rehab for a solid year, I wasn't going to let anything get me down," he said. "This season has been like icing on the cake. It was unfortunate that (Dwayne Schintzius and Livingston Chatman) quit, but it opened the door for me."

Poole started the year as UF's first man off the bench, a backup to what some considered the top front line in the country in All-America center Schintzius and All-Southeastern Conference forwards Chatman and Dwayne Davis. But the midseason departure of Chatman left a gap at small forward that Poole quickly filled.

And when Schintzius left the team 11 days later, Poole was asked to wear another hat — that of power forward.

Poole has flowered in that role, scoring in double figures in 10 of the final 11 games — a 15-points-a-game clip — despite facing the likes of Georgetown's Alonzo Mourning and Louisiana State's Shaquille O'Neal.

"I've always felt like there are advantages to any matchup, whether they're two feet tall or eight feet tall," Poole said. "Not just because I've played well against Mourning and O'Neal, but because I've always had confidence, even while I was coming back."

Last Tuesday night, against one of the biggest, baddest teams around, Poole let the country know he has come back.

He led UF to a surprising nationally televised 76-63 victory over then-No. 15 LSU, ending the Gators' school-record-tying 14-game losing streak. Poole led all scorers with 22 points — against a team that boasts one of the most formidable front lines in the country, featuring two 7-footers.

After scoring another 18 against Alabama on Saturday, Poole was named the SEC's Rookie of the Week for the final week of the regular season. But Poole said he'd rather win games, not awards.

"That's wonderful," Poole said when told of the honor. "But it's wins I'm after, and winning the (SEC) Tournament would make my season."

Battle at quarterback shaping up in spring football

The irony is incredible.

After having two quarterbacks who did little last season in terms of being leaders for the UF football team, there now are five in the Gators' spring camp, and they're all doing fairly well.

That makes choosing a leader even harder, UF coach Steve Spurrier said.

"They're all doing pretty good, so deciding who's ahead is tough to call," Spurrier said after getting his first look at the quarterbacks in a game situation Friday.

Kyle Morris, Donald Douglas, Lex Smith,

Brian Fox and Shane Matthews have been battling to step forward as Spurrier's No. 1 man when UF opens its season Sept. 8 against Oklahoma State.

But Spurrier said he is not ready to remove any of the five from contention.

Morris, who started six games last year until his suspension for gambling, has appeared sharp in workouts. Fox, a sophomore transfer from Purdue, was the only quarterback to drive the offense for a touchdown in UF's first scrimmage last week.

Fox completed five consecutive passes at one point, and threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to tight end Kirk Kirkpatrick.

Douglas likely will be out of consideration under Spurrier's more pass-oriented offense. Douglas, arguably a better runner (226 yards on 53 carries) than passer (29-for-59 for 330 yards), had been rumored to be considering transferring.

Smith, who handled much of the passing duties during Morris' absence, is considered a darkhorse candidate for the starting job, behind Morris and Fox. Matthews, who was suspended along with Morris, is a backup quarterback who never has seen playing time.

Spurrier has no time frame for making a decision.

"You make decisions whenever they hit you," Spurrier said. "But we have to start making them."

Elsewhere, an interesting race is under way for someone to replace pro-bound Emmitt Smith at tailback. The leaders appear to be junior Willie McClendon and redshirt freshman Errict Rhett.

The 6-foot-1, 223-pound McClendon would seem to be the top contender, considering he was UF's second-leading rusher last season, gaining 529 yards on 97 carries.

Rhett, however, received the praises of former offensive coordinator Whitey Jordan before breaking his elbow and being lost for the season against Louisiana State. Rhett, 6-1, 210, is more of a finesse runner, while McClendon's forte is his strength.
