Crew audience doesn't include State Attorney

KEVIN WISNIEWSKI-ALLIGATOR

2 Live Crew rapper Luke Skyywalker debuted a rap dedicated to Gov. Bob Martinez for his attempts to ban the group's latest album. The audience of about 300 people chanted along with the band to show their opposition to Martinez. The album, "Nasty As They Wanna Be," is banned in five Florida counties.

The rap group 2 Live Crew was as nasty as it wanted to be at a concert Wednesday night — but only because State Attorney Len Register is focusing his attentions on having two of their albums banned in Alachua County.

The Miami-based group, whose album "Nasty As They Wanna Be" has been judged obscene in five Florida counties, took the stage at Central City shortly after midnight without having to worry about being arrested.

Register said last week that if the group performed any of its sexually explicit songs, he would have the group arrested under Florida obscenity laws.

About five minutes into the show, one group member said "If we have to go to jail to give you all what you want, then we'll . . . do it."

However, Register said from his home Wednesday night that his investigators wouldn't be at the show and that he didn't anticipate any arrests. He said he will focus on getting the lyrics labeled obscene and ban the albums "Nasty" and "Luke Skyywalker" from Alachua County.

"In turn for not intervening in tonight's performance, we're going to ask the grand jury to consider those two albums," Register said. "The Supreme Court has determined that obscenity is determined on a community basis."

"Nasty" became the focus of public scrutiny earlier this year when Gov. Bob Martinez tried banning the album from Florida record stores because he said it was obscene and he didn't want minors buying it.

In tribute to Martinez's efforts, 2 Live Crew riled the audience behind a rugged rendition of "Fuck Martinez. Fuck, fuck Martinez."

The raps were filled with the lyrics Martinez warned parents about. Sexually explicit phrases and dozens of four-letter words did little more for audience members then get them more involved in the show. Most of them sang along with the group.

State officials said last month that the state could not decide what constitutes obscenity, so the responsibility was passed to local state attorneys who have succeeded in banning at least the "Nasty" album in five counties — DeSoto, Manatee, Putnam, Sarasota and Volusia.

Register said he wants to add Alachua County to the list of counties banning the group's music, and said he notified Wednesday two local record stores — Schoolkid's Records and Dancetrax Records & Tapes — that if they sell "Nasty" to minors, "they would be subject to arrest and vigorously prosecuted."

Register said he expects the grand jury to find both records obscene.

"I can't imagine that they wouldn't," Register said. "If you haven't read the lyrics, you really should. If a television station or radio station were to say these things on the air, the FCC would pull their license in a minute.

"There is no redeeming social value."

But fans who waited in line to see 2 Live Crew perform said they didn't agree, saying the four-man group has the right to sing whatever they want.

"I think (Register) is stepping over the line as far as the First Amendment goes," said David Bixlar, a UF student from Sarasota, where a 19year-old clerk was arrested after selling "Nasty" to an 11-year-old girl. The charges against the clerk later were dropped.

"We're adults. We can hear what we want to hear, and they can sing what they want to sing. I heard on the radio that this has been blown all out of proportion, and I think it has," Bixlar said.

Many of the more than 300 people who waited in line to buy tickets echoed the same sentiments to reporters from at least five television stations, three radio stations and six newspapers.

The scheduled opening act, Professor Griff, was canceled after Griff's van broke down on the way to Gainesville, Central City manager Cookie Cooke said. 2 Live Crew took the stage more than two hours after they were scheduled to but some fans didn't care.

"We don't mind," said Kerry Johns of Spartanburg, South Carolina. "We just want to see them get nasty."

Nader sees UF as potential leader

By ELIZABETH CLARKE Alligator Writer

UF has the capacity to become an environmental model for the rest of the country, consumer advocate Ralph Nader told more than 500 people in the Florida Gym Wednesday night.

By taking advantage of experienced researchers' and students' potential, UF can set an example for surrounding communities, he said.

Nader, considered the founder of the consumer rights movement in the United States, said universities should develop thorough recycling programs, take frequent energy audits and build micro-scale chemistry labs — which use 1 percent of the chemicals traditional labs use.

They also should take advantage of innovative forms of energy, like solar power.

"Solar energy is practical now but it is not the best way for energy companies to make money because it is super-abundant, omnipresent and the supply can't be cut off," Nader said.

Nader, who received a $5,000 honorarium for coming to UF, said power companies won't tolerate solar energy because they aren't willing to give up economic clout that comes with privileged access to limited resources.

The speech, sponsored by Student Government's Environmental Affairs Cabinet, the Environmental Action Group and Accent, SG's speakers bureau, was part of Earth Week.

Environmental concern that has spread through the country since the revival of Earth Day this year has turned many industrial leaders into hypocrites, Nader said.

Corporations such as Dow, Union Carbide and General Electric "greenwash" consumers by projecting an image of environmental awareness while lobbying against air and water regulations in Congress, he said.

"These corporations have no shame about doing one thing and saying another," Nader said.

Media deregulation and industry regulation will keep the public informed of actions regarding disposal of waste and attention to natural resources, he said.

Gainesville is attractive to developers because much land in the area hasn't been cleared for construction, Nader said.

"Gainesville has undisturbed resources that developers want to use," he said. But because the city still is growing, it can halt environmental problems before they become too severe.

Nader said community impact plans and fresh ideas from UF students could prevent unlimited and ecologically dangerous growth.

Local problems reflect every discipline UF students study, Nader said.

Students should receive academic credit for helping their communities, which would encourage them to remain active, he said.

"If there is a problem once you move from Gainesville, you will swing into action like a scarred veteran if you've had experience."

Senate clashes over open seats

By DEBBIE CENZIPER Alligator Writer

The Student Senate meeting turned into a threering circus Tuesday night with plenty of side shows for added entertainment.

Dozens of voices and accusations drew eyes and ears in all directions of the room. Senators fought over procedures, recommendations and finally after three hours — the budgets for next year.

Senators were supposed to review and vote on $4 million worth of proposed budgets for six large UF organizations, but instead spent more than half the meeting trying to fill three seats.

Disruption began soon after the meeting started when Sen. Glen Chancy disregarded a committee's recommendation to seat former senator Pat Siracusa, and nominated someone else instead. Siracusa came before Senate for approval after a 3-2 vote by the Replacement & Agenda committee.

"I think we need to take a look at this," Sen. Chris Gerardy said. "R&A's vote was too close and that's why it's important that it comes in front of Senate."

Chancy's nominee, Mary Rollins, won the seat after a secret ballot vote of 34-30. Before the meeting, Siracusa said he probably wouldn't get the seat because some senators have hostile feelings toward him.

"Some people have personal vendettas against me, people with less experience," Siracusa said before the meeting while relaxing in Student Body President Michael Browne's office. "They wouldn't want a real leader in Senate."

At the meeting, Browne told senators they should follow the committee's recommendation of Siracusa because that's what that committee is supposed to do.

Browne admitted that Siracusa is his fraternity brother and friend but said he was supporting the committee and not necessarily Siracusa.

Chancy said he felt anyone who ran against Siracusa wouldn't be given a fair chance because powerful senators had already made up their minds.

"There has been a travesty of justice and travesty of the rules," Chancy said. "Eighty senators in this room voting on a secret ballot is the closest thing to impartiality that we can get."

Siracusa told senators before the vote that he's politically experienced because he was the "driving force" behind SG's political parties the last three semesters, including Browne's Vision party.

"But I don't do those political things anymore," Siracusa said. "I don't want anyone in this room to vote for me because you think I can advance your

Reid Hall to end co-op status

By PENNY CARTER Alligator Writer

One of UF's three co-ops will cease to exist at the end of the semester because of declining occupancy and increasing lack of spirit among many of its residents.

Housing officials decided to turn Reid Hall back into a regular dormitory last month. Unlike UF's other two co-ops, Buckman and North halls, Reid has had difficulty filling its rooms, housing director James Grimm said.

"The problems with occupancy with Reid have been going on for five years," while students seeking regular housing have been denied rooms because there wasn't enough space, Grimm said.

Students who live in co-ops are in charge of their own dormitories. Residents elect officers and other representatives each semester who perform tasks usually reserved for housing officials.

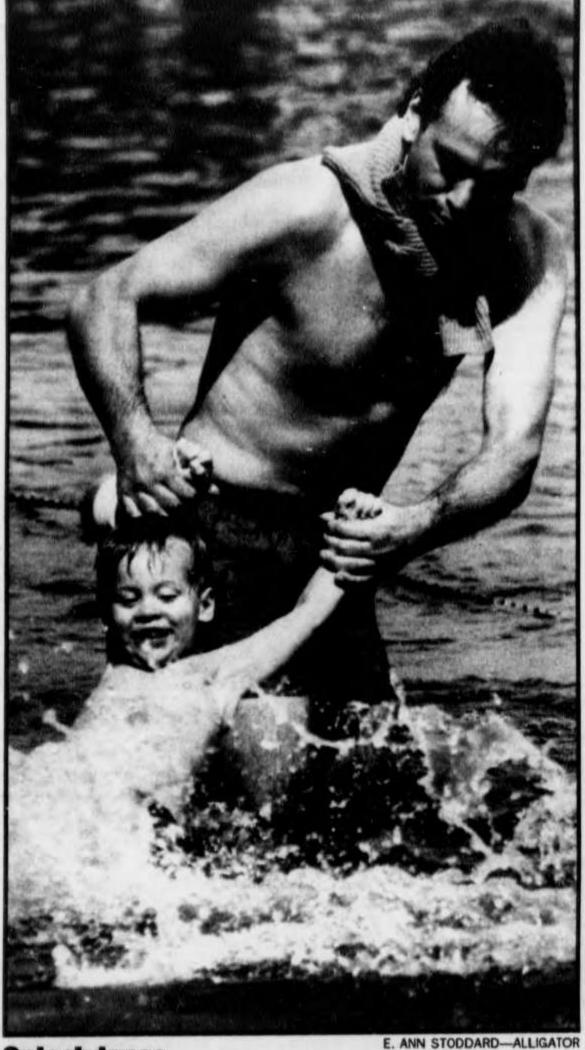

Representatives attract residents, make room assignments, plan activities, develop dormitory rules and supervise clean-up and maintenance.

In exchange for lower dormitory fees, residents must keep kitchens, bathrooms and lounges clean and make minor repairs, depending on their assigned duties. This semester, a double room in Reid Hall cost $362, compared to $514 for a double in similar, non-air conditioned dormitories at UF.

Like other non-air conditioned dormitories, Reid will be closed in the summer. In the fall, the cost of a double room will jump to $565 a semester, a price that reflects the 9.5 percent increase all dormitories will experience, as well as the increase incurred as a result of not being a co-op anymore.

Housing officials offered students a chance to maintain a co-op in the building's top two floors, but not enough students pre-paid their fees in time

American hostage to be released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - A pro-Iranian group have no comment on them," the official said. believed to be holding three U.S. hostages said Wednesday it intended to release one of the captives within 48 hours in response to Syrian efforts and an urgent appeal by Iran.

Islamic Jihad For the Liberation of Palestine made the declaration in a one-page statement delivered to a Western news agency in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital.

"In response to an urgent appeal by the Islamic Republic of Iran to make a goodwill initiative to close this (hostage) file and in respect to Syrian efforts, we have decided to move this issue by releasing an American captive within 48 hours," the group said.

Attached to the statement was a Polaroid photograph showing U.S. captive Jesse Turner, bony and haggard. The hostage appeared to be wearing a white T-shirt and bearing a thick, dark beard.

It was not clear whether the photograph meant the group intends to release Turner, but analysts suggested the fact he was shown alone in the photo may mean the captors intend to set him free.

A Bush administration official would not say whether the administration had independent confirmation of the reports. "We've seen the reports. We Turner, 42, a professor at the American-affiliated Beirut University College, was kidnapped along with two other U.S. professors Jan. 24, 1987.

Turner was an associate professor of mathematics and computer science at Beirut University College. He was educated in Idaho, receiving a bachelor's degree in psychology from Boise State University and a master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Idaho.

The two other U.S. captives who were snatched from the Beirut college compound by armed elements disguised as policemen were Robert Polhill, 55, a professor of accounting, and Alann Steen, 50, a professor of mathematics.

The pro-Iranian group called on Washington to dispatch John Kelly, the State Department undersecretary for Middle East and Asian affairs, to Syria to work out the details of the planned release.

However, State Department spokesman George Malleck said Kelly is traveling overseas "on a longstanding commitment," but that he was not in the Middle East and did not have plans to travel to that region.

14 earthquakes rock San Fransisco

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A swarm of earthquakes ranging as high as 5.3 on the Richter scale and numerous aftershocks jolted the San Francisco Bay Area Wednesday on the 84th anniversary of the great 1906 earthquake.

The U.S. Geological Survey recorded 14 quakes and other scientists said the tremors were aftershocks of the Oct. 17 quake that killed 62 people in the area.

The quakes Wednesday caused no major damage or injuries but were felt along the central California coast from San Francisco to Salinas. They swayed high-rise buildings, knocked books off shelves, set off alarms and created a rock slide.

The temblors were centered in the Watsonville area. which was hard-hit by last Oct. 17's 7.1 quake.

"We consider these events to be aftershocks of the Loma Prieta event of October," Willis Jacobs of the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said. "We expect there to be aftershocks in this area for many months."

The state Office of Emergency Services recorded four quakes as 4.5 on the Richter scale at 6:37 a.m., 4.1 at 6:41 a.m., 5.4 at 6:54 a.m. and 4.1 at 7:52 a.m. They were accompanied by numerous aftershocks, some strong.

The U.S. Geological Survey said another 4.9 quake struck at 8:46 a.m. and there were a total of 14 quakes ranging from 1.6 to 5.3 on the Richter scale in a 2 1/2-hour period.

"It really shook," Ralph Aguinaga, manager of Nob Hill Foods in Watsonville, said between quakes. "We weren't open for business, but the people I had in the store really got upset. A few pickle jars fell off the shelf and a couple bottles of wine. But it was very minor so far. I hope the worst is over."

Survivors of the 1906 quake had gathered at Mission Dolores Park in San Francisco at 5 a.m. to be presented with certificates of survival and to place a wreath at Lotta's Fountain.

"I thought it was carrying the celebration a bit too far," Steve Hyman said of Wednesday's quakes.

In the tragic 1906 quake and fire, 452 people were killed and there was $350 million in damage.

As the Bay Area was rocked again, rapid transit trains halted as a precaution, taking 5-minute holds before resuming service when no damage to its system was detected.

Alarmed workers fled as the federal Food and Drug Administration building in downtown San Francisco shook.

On Tuesday, Southern California also had seven sizable aftershocks to a Feb. 28 5.5 magnitude earthquake. The largest was a 4.6, 3 miles west of Upland in San Bernardino County. It frazzled nerves and shook loose chimney bricks but caused no serious damage or injuries.

Weapons and ammo stolen from base

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) -Suspected right-wing extremists seized a large quantity of government weapons and ammunition in a weekend raid at the South African Air Force headquarters, police reported Wednesday.

Police Commissioner Gen. Johan van der Merwe said three military conscripts had been arrested in connection with the theft, which coincides with rightwing threats to mobilize armed units in the wake of president Frederik de Klerk's racial reform measures.

In a statement issued in Cape Town, van der Merwe said "a large quantity of weapons and ammunition" had been seized from the air force headquarters in Pretoria on Friday night.

Police spokesman Maj. Gen. Herman Stadler said the cache included 9mm pistols, assault rifles and pump action shotguns as well as ammunition and night vision equipment - none of which has been recovered.

He said the thieves used a duplicate set of keys to open the arms safe at the headquarters.

The Johannesburg Star reported police were searching for self-styled extremist Piet Rudolph, a leader of the ultra right-wing Boerstaat Party, who is believed to have been involved in the raid.

The Boerstaat Party, which is demanding an exlusive homeland for white Afrikaners, has vowed to resist de Klerk's racial reform program.

Extremist leader Eugene Terre-Blanche of the Afrikaner Resistance Movement and Boerstaat Party leader Robert van Tonder announced earlier this month they had begun mobilizing armed commandos nationwide.

Terre-Blanche, declaring "you cannot separate a Boer from his rifle," said the movement was "not seeking a million votes but a million rifles."

In recent months de Klerk has lifted a ban on the African National Congress, released ANC leader Nelson Mandela and established plans to negotiate a power-sharing deal with the country's black majority.

De Klerk lashed out at the right-wing conservative party Tuesday for attempting to stir white hysteria over his reform initiatives.

In another development Wednesday, police reported the deaths of five more people in overnight violence in the strife-torn province of Natal. They said three women died when burning tires were placed over their heads, a gruesome practice known as necklacing.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said Tuesday that a total of 574 people died nationwide in political violence between Jan. 1 and March 31 this year.

Faculty Reminded Of "Review Week" Assignment Policy

Next week will be "Review Week," the final week of spring semester classes. During the week, faculty members are expected to follow the Last Week of Class Examination and Assignment Policy, which states that no final or comprehensive exams, projects or term papers are to be scheduled or assigned.

Written papers and/or oral presentations and periodic testing announced in the course syllabus distributed at the first class meeting may be collected or presented, provided they do not serve as a final exam.

The intent of the policy is to ensure that students are free to concentrate on class-room work for all courses taken and are able to begin reviewing for finals. Thursday and Friday have been designated as discretionary review days for instructors to review previous material.

Students or faculty who have questions or complaints on matters relating to the Review Week policy should contact the Office of Academic Affairs, 233 Tigert Hall, 392-1301. All changes in the published exam schedule must be approved by Academic Affairs.

Eight Will Receive UF Alumni Honors As Outstanding Spring '90 Graduates

Eight graduating seniors will receive Alumni Association honors as outstanding graduates in spring commencement ceremonies May 5 at 10 a.m. in the O'Connell Center.

Heather Stein, a telecommunication major from St. Petersburg, and Glenna Thornton, a public relations major from St. Petersburg, will receive the Outstanding Female Leader Awards.

Stein, president of Mortar Board honorary, is a member of Florida Blue Key leadership honorary, Omicron Delta Kappa national honor society and Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority. She was a Preview staff member and a peer counselor. Her other activities include serving on the Reitz Union Board of Managers, being a College of Education teaching assistant and peer facilitator, and participating in the Racial Retreat, in which 40 black and white students gathered to address racial tensions. She is listed in Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges and has received a UF Presidential Recognition Award. After graduation Stein plans to attend graduate school and pursue a master's degree in college student personnel programs.

Thornton has been active in Florida Blue Key, Inter-Residence Hall Association and Kappa Delta sorority. She was a delegate to the National and South Atlantic Associations of College and University Residence Hall Conferences. Through Florida Blue Key, Thornton served on the U.S. Senatorial Candidates Debate and Homecoming Committees. Other activities include the Reitz Union Board of Managers, Florida Cicerones/Student Alumni Association and the Caucus of Women Leaders. A dean's list student, Thornton served on seven UF committees and volunteered at Sunland, Shands Miracle Network and Trinity United Methodist Church.

Jason Rosenberg, a psychology major from Miami, will be presented the Outstanding Male Leader Award for his roles as Celebration producer and director, Student Government health director, College of Liberal Arts and Sciences student senator and Student Senate Minority Leader. He is a member of Florida Blue Key, Phi Kappa Tau fraternity, the Reitz Union Board of Managers, Omicron Delta Kappa, Order of Omega Greek leadership honorary, Mortar Board, Alpha Epsilon Delta Pre-Medical Honor Society and SA-VANT leadership honorary. A dean's list student, Rosenberg is listed in UF's Hall of Fame and Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges. He received the Florida Academic Scholarship and Valedictorian Scholarship as well as a UF Presidential Recognition Award. He will enter UF's College of Medicine in the fall.

Lisa Matthias, named Outstanding Four-Year Scholar for spring, is a finance major from Boca Raton who has maintained a perfect 4.0 grade point average while contributing to UF and the community. She was awarded several scholarships, including the NCNB, Distilled Spirits Wholesalers of Florida and the Outstanding Junior Initiate Scholarships. Matthias is on the dean's list and President's Honor Roll, and she has received a UF Presidential Recognition Award. Other activities include Florida Blue Key, Financial Management Association, Society for Human Resource Management, Career Expo host and Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. tems Sector and has worked at Sears, Roebuck and Company. Matthias plans to enter UF's College of Law this fall.

Pamela Rankin and Kathy Yeatter have been named Outstanding Two-Year Scholars.

Rankin is an education major from Trenton. She has maintained a perfect grade point average her two years at UF. She graduated from Santa Fe Community College with an associate of arts degree in 1988. She is on the dean's list and President's honor roll, and is a member of the Council for Exceptional Children, Golden Key National Honor Society and Phi Kappa Phi Honor Society. Rankin, recipient of a UF Presidential Recognition Award, is in the College of Education's Proteach program in special education, where she will earn her master's degree and ultimately will teach elementary special education in Florida.

Yeatter, a history major and education minor, received her associate of arts degree from Palm Beach Community College. Yeatter, who has maintained a perfect grade point average, has been on the dean's list and President's Honor Roll. Recipient of a UF Presidential Recognition Award, she is a member of Phi Kappa Phi History Honor Society and Golden Key National Honor Society. In addition to her studies, Yeatter has managed an independent book store in Palm Beach and written articles and entertainment reviews for a Ft. Lauderdale-based magazine. Yeatter plans to attend UF's College of Law this fall or next spring, where she will concentrate on environmental and consumer law.

Cassandra Washington, a health education major from Laurel Hill, will be presented the Tracy Caulkins Award. The award honors outstanding achievement in athletics and academics, as exemplified by former Lady Gator swimmer Tracy Caulkins, a gold medal winner in the 1984 Olympics. Washington has been a starter on the women's basketball team since her freshman year and received All-Southeastern Conference Honorable Mention. In 1989 she was the second-leading assist maker on the team, third-leading rebounder and fourth-leading scorer. Washington, a University Athletic Association Board of Directors representative, was named to the 1990 Southeastern Conference Academic Honor Roll. She plans to enter UF's College of Nursing in summer for a second bachelor's degree.

Cedric Smith, a rehabilitative counseling major from Enterprise, Ala., will be presented the Doug Belden Award, given for maintaining a balance of athletic and academic achievements, as UF quarterback Belden did in the early 1950s. Smith, a four-time football letter winner, served as Emmitt Smith's primary blocking back and is credited with playing a significant role in Smith's rushing achievements. For two years Cedric Smith started at fullback, and in 1989 he was team captain. He was named to the Southeastern Conference Academic Honor Roll all three seasons he was eligible. A tutor in the Alachua County school system, Smith was active in the "Say No To Drugs" campaign. He interned at the VA Medical Center and this spring worked in Shands Hospital Pediatric Unit. Smith hopes to play professional football and then pursue a master's degree in rehabilitative counseling.

The following students will receive Honorable Mention certificates as Outstanding Graduating Student Leaders: Patrick Nolan and Melanie Ann Ridge, College of Journalism; Brian Kissinger, Samuel Sears, Robert Shiffen and Mona Sadek, College of Liberal Arts & Sciences; and Haejung Mary Lim and Haekyung Martha Lim, College of Business.

Student Volunteers Needed For Career Expo Sept. 14

Students who would like to gain experience and get acquainted with potential employers can volunteer to help produce the Fall Career Expo, set for September 14 in the O'Connell Center. Volunteers are needed for 11 committees, including art and graphics, publicity and parking. Interested students should call Vicki Tyson, Career Resource Center, 392-1601, or stop by B-1 Reitz Union to fill out an application as soon as possible.

OPINIONS

TV politics

Welcome to another day of "As the Stomach Churns."
That's the best way to describe Student Senate lately. Before we get into today's episode, let's meet the cast and characters:

Michael Browne, Student Body President. As president, Browne has a lot of power. Unfortunately, he sometimes misuses it. At Tuesday night's senate meeting, he lobbied for one of his "sandbox buddies" to get a seat. And while Browne isn't usually at senate meetings (that's like the President sitting in on Congress), he must've thought this week's meeting was worth the trip.

Though Browne said he was supporting a committee decision, he was really lobbying for long-time friend, Pat Siracusa. "I cannot vote for Pat," he said. "And I cannot tell you how to vote (pause and smirk). Although sometimes some of you think I have telepathic powers and have my hands on the backs of senators (while they vote)."

Can you please, Mr. Browne, explain to the thousands of viewers what you mean by these invisible hands and if, by chance, one of the hands holds a Vision party whip?

Adam Tanenbaum, Vision party leader and Judiciary committee chairman. As party leader, one of Tanenbaum's tasks is to unite the party and get senators to vote for its platform. There is nothing wrong with that but Tanenbaum went too far at a party caucus Tuesday.

Tanenbaum cracked the Vision whip when he commanded senators to vote along party lines, not only on platform promises but for everything. "Even if you disagree with the majority, you have to support the majority," Tanenbaum said.

Luckily, some Vision members didn't think they owed the party their guts and minds and Siracusa didn't get a seat.

Andrew Meyer, senate president. As senate president, Meyer's role as outlined in the student body constitution and Senate rules is similar to the Speaker of the House — he presides over senate meetings, recognizes speakers on the floor and decides voice votes.

For some reason, Meyer argued Tuesday that tradition and precedents rule over documented procedures of order. He argued not to accept nominations for vacant senate seats off the floor. In doing so, the committee that recommends senators for seats has the last say because senators only vote on the person recommended.

The rules say students can be nominated from the senate floor to fill a seat. Mary Rollins was, and won.

Student Government is often the first step future politicians take. If they learn that intimidation and corruption are the only ways to get ahead, ethics aside, then the whole reason for democracy is undermined. Some of these senators will build long resumes and references while here and will get into state and national politics.

That scares us.

2 Live Crew ban violates rights

Editor: I think all this stuff about banning 2 Live Crew music is a bunch of bull crap.

Let's take Central City for instance. Everybody allowed in there is over 18, so what gives other people the right to dictate what music I listen to? If I don't know right from wrong by now, what the hell are you going to do about it?

This action is a white supremist ploy to control what they cannot. Now I don't mean to be racist or anti-racist, or whatever it is by saying "white supremacy," because there surely are blacks who protest.

But it is generally the white upper-class who choose to deny us of our music. The white society feels they can no longer manipulate the "regular" people and our choice of expression. So they would rather eliminate this option from our list of choices, then we would all have to conform to their standards.

This country was formed on the basis of many different cultures sharing the same grounds, while still retaining their individualistic ideals. So why now should we all be forced to become like the white supremists who try to manipulate us?

It is a sad day when our rights can be legally violated. It is also sick that we, as a people, can no longer choose the music we want to listen to — especially if we happen to live in a country where they have already banned much of this expression.

And who gets to choose? Not the people directly affected, but rather the supremist society: Don't we have any rights?

Oh, I forgot. I live in America. I guess I shouldn't expect so much.

Isn't it ironic though, that as Eastern Europe opens its door to freedom, America chooses to lock hers?

Maybe we'll meet somewhere in the middle.

Why don't these people concentrate their efforts on a more worthy subject. If they put this effort into pollution, drugs or homelessness, then maybe this world would be a better place to live.

"Save the whales" and "save the dolphins," why not save our rights?

I'm sure there are some people out there who are going to say, "If you don't like it, then get out."

Well, I don't want to leave. But isn't that the same attitude that is destroying the ozone layer, and the same attitude that tore this country apart in the Civil War?

The same attitude will take away the rights of those that may look or act differently.

Maybe you will be happy when this country is devoid of expression but I won't. I'm going to stand up for what I believe in — my rights.

Teach awareness for Earth Week

Editor: This message is to all professors and teaching assistants who are teaching courses April 19 and 20.

April 22 is Earth Day, 1990. There have been many events throughout the month focusing on the earth, such as brown bag forums and lectures. There are still more such events to come like the Earth Day celebration at the Florida Museum on April 21.

This may seem like enough attention to give one cause, but it's not. Especially since not everyone will attend these events.

To give Earth Day the recognition it deserves on this special occasion, and to ensure that everyone at least thinks about how important our interaction with the environment is on every level, please incorporate environment-related topics into your lectures and class discussions on April 19 and 20.

It might just make a difference.

P.S. Will everyone reading this please pick up any Alligators and soda cans you see on the ground and in the garbage and recycle them? Try and make it a habit — the Earth will definitely appreciate it.

Fine Line was totally out of line

Editor: I was thoroughly disgusted when I read Ray Boehmer's comic strip, Fine Line, on Thursday April 12, which described a date with "Jennifer Ampletop." This name implies that the identities of women are defined only through their bodies.

In the spirit of true chauvinism, Mr. Boehmer essentially reduced women to mere sexual objects which exist only to be felt and used by men,

The presence of this comic strip in The Alligator surprised and saddened me. Although the highest editorial positions with the paper are held by women, The Alligator chose to print a comic strip which is degrading to all females.

Unless women in positions of power begin to challenge these patriarchal definitions of women, it will continue to be acceptable to joke about women as sexual conquests who function only to boost the male ego.

UF cabinet formed to aid environment

By LISE FISHER Alligator Writer

The UF football team may have ranked behind Florida State and Miami last season, but UFs Student Government is first with an Environmental Affairs Cabinet.

Cabinet Director Missy Cameron, a 20-year-old accounting and finance junior, said the cabinet will advise SG on local environmental concerns and develop programs that affect UF directly, such as car pooling and recycling paper.

"We'll be looking at what affects students on campus daily, not at rain forests or other far-reaching issues," Cameron said.

Cord Grate, FSU recycling coordinator and a member of FSU's Florida Public Interest Research Group, said he thought the cabinet was a good idea.

"FPIRG doesn't get the respect and attention for the amount of work they do," Grate said. "We've had problems getting recycling going on campus. We offer the manpower, but then there are always other problems. A cabinet can make people take notice and do something about environmental problems."

FPIRG is the only environmental organization at FSU, Grate said.

UM's environmental group, the Earth Alert Group, has been organizing on-campus displays this week. But UM has no specific student government organization dealing solely with environmental concerns.

UF Student Body Vice President Kevin Mayeux said an amendment passed by Senate at the end of when we're wasting paper again."

February created the cabinet to look after environmental needs and show SG's voice in environmental concerns. "SG hasn't really had a voice in the environmental arena," he said.

Cameron was chosen as cabinet director from a dozen applicants because of her work with the Environmental Action Group, the Tuna Task Force, her leadership ability and "perky attitude," Mayeux said. "She's a good team player who works great with the other cabinets."

But Earth Day 1990 coordinator Heather Weiner said Cameron and the new cabinet should avoid the current trendiness of interest in the environment and take a stand on issues.

"If they did things that were easy, things the vice president told them to do and reinforced the status quo," Weiner said the group wouldn't be achieving its potential.

Although cabinet members are still brainstorming about future projects, Cameron said a program involving water conservation will begin this summer. Sprinklers on campus will be used at night, from 4 p.m. until 6 a.m., instead of during the day when 75 to 80 percent of the water evaporates.

She said the cabinet's main task will be to emphasize an improved recycling program this fall at offcampus apartment complexes as well as in dormitories.

"It will continue to be an active cabinet because of the nature of what it's about," Cameron said. "We can't ever come back to a time political career.

"I'm sorry if I'm an intimidating person and I apologize if I scare anyone in this room," he said. A few minutes later, Siracusa shot "Shut up you S.O.B's" to a group of senators talking on the side of the room during his speech.

After Rollins' victory, senators applauded. Camilo Munoz and Gloria Markus were elected to the other two seats. But the show wasn't over.

Vision party leader Adam Tanenbaum, Senate President Andrew Meyer and Sen. Tom Boyer had a 30-minute argument in the halls outside the Senate chambers.

In the noisy corridor, Boyer fought with Tanenbaum about the rules, with Sen. Nelson Miranda about the committee's decision to support Siracusa, and finally with former Sen. Charlie Grapski about his attempt to regain a senate seat.

In the final two hours of the meeting, drained senators approved the Activity and Service Fee Advisory Committee's about $4 million budget for the Reitz Union, Student Legal Services, SG, Board of College Councils, Recreational Sports and Student Nighttime Auxilary Patrol.

to meet the deadline, Reid president Eleanne Solorzano said.

One long-time Reid resident who will go to Buckman Hall is Nikki Breggia, who is working on her master's degree in education.

"I can understand why they're doing it," she said, referring to the decision by housing officials. "I think it's a shame.

"Sure, cheapness is the first thing that gets you here, but what's going on keeps you here," she said. With the lack of co-op spirit, there has not been much to keep residents interested in staying active, she said.

Breggia placed most of the blame on some of the past officers of the co-op, who she said did not work hard enough to attract enough residents.

Seems the self-abusive methods are still in vogue today. Of course, cold water in the face is passé. Rosalie (Tracy Ullman) and her mother Nadja (Joan Plowright) can't seem to kill Rosalie's husband in I Love You To Death.

* * I Love You To Death Royal Park

Five years from now, I Love You To Death will be only a minor footnote in the careers of a number of talented actors and director Lawrence Kasdan. But today it surely ranks as one of the major disappointments of the year.

It's the story of Rosalie (Tracey Ullman), the loving wife of a philandering pizza-maker named Joey (Kevin Kline). She is devoted to her man, but when Rosalie finds out he's been cheating, she decides to kill him.

This isn't as easy as it sounds. Rosalie's mom (Joan Plowright) tries unsuccessfully to blow up Joey's car. Later, Rosalie herself mixes bottles and bottles of sleeping pills into his spaghetti dinner. Joey merely complains about an upset stomach.

Rosalie then convinces a friend who's always had a crush on her to shoot Joey. This doesn't work er. "I've got a headache," Joey nplains as he stumbles around house with a gaping bullet und in the back of his head. In speration, she wires some doped-up druggies to shoot Joey again - but he still doesn't die!

This crazy plot about a woman who keeps trying to kill her husband but can't seem to succeed is actually based on a real story. And therein lies the problem. The script by John Kostmayer and the direction by Kasdan never attempt to spice up this marvelous conceit with the black humor and screwball zaniness it begs for. Instead, I Love You To Death is presented in a dull, matter-of-fact manner.

Only Plowright as Rosalie's mother manages a few funny moments. When Rosalie is angry she wasn't told about the attempted bombing of Joey's car, Plowright explains sheepishly that "I thought it would be a nice surprise." Later, when Rosalie is upset that the two men hired to shoot Joey are on drugs, Momma says, "Don't think of them as drug addicts; think of them as killers."

William Hurt and Keanu Records are dull as the wo killers. The seem to wander in, improvise little and then wander of River Phoenix plays off his pub persona to little effect as the lovestruck friend of Rosalie.

Kline and Ullman fare little better. He uses a cheesy Italian accent that wears thin early on. She is effectively grim as the betrayed wife, but it's hardly an appropriate performance for what is essentially a comedy.

As for Kasdan, there is no telling what made him choose this as the first film he would direct based on someone else's script. But, since he already has such movies as The Big Chill and Body Heat to his credit, this should prove to be a quickly forgotten aberration.

T'SACAN'S LIFE

story by nancie garmer art by craig baxter

"BRRR...IT'S CHILLY IN HERE."

Bud and his brothers stand on the steel-slated convenience store shelf patiently awaiting the string of events that will carry them beyond this cool, dark place that has been their home since early Thursday morning.

Bud's experience with the outside world has been limited to the past two days spent stacked amongst relatives behind the condensation-dotted glass door. Pushed, lifted and carried, Bud now stands, pressed against the glass, peering at the people and products illuminated by the fluorescent lights.

The beer cooler is a far cry from the muddy earth. One day, the flashlight-helmeted men came with machines to dig his core from the soil and throw him in a truck with the others. Bud has been through presses, processes and packaging to end up filled with this cold, carbonated liquid that is advertised in the front window for $3.19 a six-pack.

Bud knew his time at the store was nearing an end when the door opened, bringing in a current of warm air. He felt himself lifted from above by the plastic rings connecting him to his brothers. Suspended in air 50 degrees warmer than his steel shelf, Bud was soon covered with cold beads of water.

Tossed in a bag and thrown in a car, Bud was so jostled and shaken that the liquid inside him bubbled, expanding against his insides with soft pressure. Carried in the brown paper bag from the car to another warm room, Bud again is placed on a steel-slated shelf. But now, one plastic ring hangs empty.

Bud's brother has been popped - his pliable top bent and angled to release the liquid. With an extreme tilt that eventually turns him upside-down, the brother's contents are emptied, leaving him dry and without purpose. In a matter of minutes, he was ripped from his family, emptied and thrown in a plastic bag with damp paper towels, coffee grinds and cigarette butts.

On Monday morning, this bag will be picked up by Browning-Ferris Industries, the company that collects and disposes of all the garbage in Gainesville. Along with hundreds of other bags of trash, the bag with the Budweiser can will be trucked off to Archer and dumped into an ever-increasing mountain of waste that will sit and be smashed and sit some more, until it is eventually buried by heaps of dirt from which Bud's brother originally came.

In the refrigerator, Bud knows nothing of this. He knows only that two rings now hang freely and he is again being lifted and dropped into a bag and carried to a car.

Tilted against the tan-cushioned seat, Bud's contents swish inside him, tipping him forward and back with every acceleration and deceleration. Banging against each other, Bud and his brothers resonate a deep, metallic thud.

Another brother is torn from the pack and placed, his tab bent back, in a black plastic holder hanging from the car window. Bubbling over at every bump in the road, the open brother slowly warms to car temperature. As the engine slows and putters to a stop, the liquid is drained in five successive 4-second gulps. Tossed behind the driver's seat, Bud's brother spits his last drop on the padded ceiling and rolls down the brown vinyl onto the floor, where he lies next to a dirty plastic milk carton.

Out in the night air, Bud hangs diagonally from the ring held above him. Occasionally brushing against the warmth of a human leg, the beads on his side are wiped clean.

Confusion abounding, Bud is bumped and banged against various bodies and walls. The fourth brother loses his grip on his ring and thumps momentarily unnoticed onto the carpet. Kicked and rolled to a dark corner, Bud's brother lies still against the stucco wall until he is lifted, and like the three before him, opened and emptied.

Dropped in a plastic bag on the street corner, this brother will never make it to the landfill. The bag will be picked through in the morning by a woman combing the neighborhood for cans and bottles. With a shopping cart and a canvas bag, the woman retrieves the salvageable material and wheels it to the closest recycling center. At a rate between 32 to 40 cents per pound of aluminum and 1 to 2 cents per pound of glass, the woman makes enough money to survive. All five recycling centers in Gainesville offer money for aluminum cans and glass bottles.

Bud also will end up at a recycling center. Bud and his closest brother are pulled from the rings that bound them, popped and clanked against one another. Tilted sideways in mid-air, Bud's liquid pours out of him. In a firm grasp that crinkles his cylinder, crunch-in and clank-out, the draining tilts continue.

Empty and alone, Bud is set down on a cement ledge. Again, he stands awaiting the next string of events that will carry him beyond this place now that his purpose has been fulfilled.

After the sun has risen high in the sky, Bud is picked up from his ledge and tossed into a big blue container with other used and empty cans. Hidden from the sunlight by the cans above and around him, the rattling box is carried out to where Bud can hear sounds of passing engines. Dented in the middle and smashed on top, Bud lies still for two days and two nights.

On the third day, Bud is heaved upward and, thrown mercilessly into the depths of a thundering roar of clanking cans, clinking bottles and rustling papers. Stopping and starting, jerking and rolling, Bud is buried by the contents loaded onto the truck after him.

Like his brothers lost to the landfill, Bud has been picked up by a truck owned by Browning-Ferris Industries. But Bud is not being taken to Archer to add to the mountain of trash. He is taken either to Florida Central Recycling or Gator Recycling, the two centers that recycle all the re-usable goods collected from Gainesville's curbs.

There, the cans will be separated from the other recyclable products and flattened back into raw aluminum. The sheets then will be sold to the company with the highest bid for the metal. Thus, Bud's life is to begin again.

For over a year now, the city of Gainesville has run a full-time, voluntary curb-side recycling program. Forty-four percent of the 21,000 homes to which the blue recycling bins were distributed actively participate. Gainesville Recycling Coordinator Pamela Brown said the program originally was discussed in 1985.

"We really didn't have the space to land-fill garbage, and we needed to find another method to get rid of it," Brown said.

Sponsored by then-commissioners Jean Chalmers and W.E. "Mac" McEachern in 1987, the mixed-recycling program was tested on a small, northwest neighborhood of fewer than 1,000 homes. Met with success, the city-funded program was expanded at the end of the year to include 6,500 often!

homes.

In the midst of Gainesville's growing project, the state government passed a 1988 amendment to the Solid Waste Management Act mandating every county in Florida to reduce its waste by at least 30 percent by 1994. The amendment did not include provisions about how to reach that goal.

After a task force of city, county and university personnel studied the waste issue, recycling was found to be the most immediate method of reducing waste.

Although the city was not mandated to do so by law, Gainesville and Alachua County applied jointly for a grant from the state to start the city and county-wide recycling program. In a lump sum, they have received approximately $400,000 a year for the past two years.

"Everybody gets their own piece of the pie," Brown said.

The money is divided between the various city and county divisions that run or contribute to recycling programs. UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences receives a chunk of the grant to make compost from organic waste, and UF also receives money for its paper recycling program.

Pilot programs are under way to test recycling in non-neigh-

Sharkey Bryan hits the right groove Thursday nights at Club X. Ronnie "Rocco" Antevy, a Central City DJ, enjoys most musical genres, but he can't resist a good beat.

HEY, DJ, PLAYMY SONG!

Just one of a hundred requests. While clubbers shake themselves crazy on the dance floor, DJs are busy digging through hundreds of records. They only stop to change a record, to adjust the strobe lights or to take another request. The unsung heroes of dance mania, DJs work late and sleep late. And when awake and not working, they still listen to music.

That's an understatement for 26-year-old Troy Davis. Troy was MFP's (My Friend's Place) Monday night DJ last fall and is now the third-floor DJ at The Rev. Walking into his apartment is like entering a combined Record Bar and Radio Shack. His sound system looks too expensive to touch, and it would take hours to count his stacks of records.

One Friday afternoon after a long night at the club, Troy tries to sum up his eight-month career as a DJ. After politely offering something to drink, Troy walks over to his thousand-dollar stereo system. "Anything you want to hear?" he asks, glancing at several crates crammed with records.

This afternoon, Troy looks tired. "I didn't get to bed till after 4 this morning," he says, dragging his fingers through his curly hair. Last night was just like all the others. By the time everyone is leaving Skeeter's, Troy is just done at work.

Looking down at his shiny black shoes, Troy tries to describe house music, the bulk of what he plays at The Rev. Primarily imported from England, house music is characterized by heavy, repetitive rhythms and entrancing melodies. Often the vocals are closer to rap-like chants than to singing. Troy plays a house version of Soft Cell's "Tainted Love" in which the vocals are deep and emotionless. The soft, heavy bass is slower and more consistent than on Soft Cell's version. Technotronic is a current house music favorite. Anyone remember "Pump Up the Jam?"

Troy never names his favorite house song; instead, he changes the subject to the differences between the crowds at MFP and Club X, where he worked for a short time. At MFP, anything goes, Troy says. Wild hair. Wild clothing. Makeup on men. The crowd at Club X is a bit more conservative. He especially dislikes the glamour types who wear oxford shirts and penny loafers and snub people with dyed hair, black lipstick and nose rings.

Combat boots should be as acceptable as topsiders, Troy says, and hair is hair whether it's orange, blue or red. People should come to a club to have fun, not to ridicule others.

"People who'll accept new music will accept new people. It changes the whole atmosphere when you know people will be more accepting."

But Troy doesn't have much time to notice club patrons hamming it up on the dance floor. He's too busy deciding what song to play next. Most importantly, the songs in a block must have something in common - tempo, beat or vocals.

That doesn't mean that a few surprises are out of the question. "You can have one moderate song, then hit them with a hard song and have them moving again."

Troy will try almost anything except "mega mixes," or pre-recorded mixes of songs. Troy vows never to use one.

"I can mix myself," he says. "I don't want to take credit for someone else's work."

Troy also won't play Top 40 music because it doesn't go over well in an age where people like to think of themselves as progressive.

"If you're gonna be trendy, you might as well stay on top of it," he says. Staying on top of it means playing songs before they get to MTV. Troy was playing

Troy's mixes include songs by little-known dance acts like Front 242 and S-Express. CJ Watkins, a 20-year-oldUF architecture student, plays more familiar music by Paula Abdul and Taylor Dayne-a-likes. CJ won't even touch any-

And if you think Technotronic is a new group, tough to stay with what's new. His favorite performers are Prince (in his upbeat moods), Janet Jackson (in all moods) and Information Society. Dead or Alive's "You Spin Me Round (Like a Record)" still wins as thing labeled "progressive." He says it's too his ultimate dance favorite, though. As Troy spins obscure house records for hip college students at The Rev, CJ entertains teens at high school dances and the thirtysomething crowd at wedding receptions with more famil-

CJ's first DJ experience was five years ago, when he threw a party for a science-research group. When the DJ got tired, CJ took over and a new career was born.

Since then, CJ has seen many songs and dances come and go. When he first started in high school, breakdancing was the trend. Today, more choreographed moves have taken over, he says, citing Bobby Brown and Paula Abdul as examples.

Dirty Dancing steamed up dance floors for a while. "There was a lot more contact out there," he says, smiling.

Still, big-time crowd pleasers rarely change. "'Rock Lobster' is still big, and 'Mony Mony' is sort of a timeless thing," CJ says. He swears "Pour Some Sugar on Me" is destined to become a dance classic.

CJ is pretty confident in his ability to fill a dance floor. "I can usually see in the crowd what's working and what's not."

He once told the DJ at a dance where the floor was empty, "You give me two songs, and I'll have these people on the floor." He played "Nasty" by Janet Jackson followed by Prince's omething scary is going on in the building that once housed the Vatican at 6 E. University Ave.

Downstairs, things are steaming with disc jockey Alan Trueba. "Fight the power, fight the power," rappers Public Enemy shout from the vinyl as a group of people draped mostly in black continue stomping, jumping and thrashing.

Upstairs, the action climaxes with the house-music sounds of DJs Simon on Friday nights and Troy Davis on Thursday and Saturday nights. The room is a gallery of frantic movement. Several people stand on the sidelines, but they can't resist. Downstairs, the ceiling quivers from the action above.

In early March, 28-year-old Tom Levy and 24-year-old Eric Forrest unveiled The Rev for Gainesville's "sophisticated dance crowd." Hogtown may never be the same.

"Something scary is going on here, and people are really responding to it," Levy says.

That's putting it mildly. The club already has extended its Friday and Saturday closing times from 3 to 4 a.m. to accommodate the earlymorning dance crowd. As late as 2:30 a.m. (or as early as 2:30, depending on how you want to look at it), a swarm of people stands outside The Rev, waiting to get a piece of the action inside.

More than 350 people came through The Rev's doors on opening night, and the people keep coming. But that first night almost never happened.

Four days before, Levy and Forrest still had no liquor license, and for that they needed to pass safety, fire, health, electrical, mechanical and plumbing inspections. No inspections had even been scheduled.

By that Friday, Levy and Forrest had been up two nights straight, and it looked as if The Rev still wouldn't open. After failing a couple of inspections and quickly correcting the errors, they had their liquor license by 5 p.m., but they had no beer. Five hours later, The Rev was open for business.

And business couldn't be better, thanks to the incredible energy that house music brings to the second floor. Trueba has his following, but Levy and Forrest save most of their praise for the upstairs room.

"House music is becoming the international language," Forrest says. "It's almost a drug. We're hoping it becomes more addictive than crack."

"And it's legal, too," Levy adds. Forrest says he would have nightmares at night if Troy and Simon weren't upstairs to keep things pumping. The two DJs have contradictory styles that keep people dancing for hours non-stop. Troy is technically correct in mixing, while Simon is wild, Forrest says. Troy is precise and tries to play similar kinds of house music, while

Simon plays music from the entire house realm. Dancers move shoulder to shoulder and hip to hip in Simon and Troy's domain. As a female rapper shouts over a heavy, hypnotic beat, a group of guys under the DJ booth dance circles around each other. In the corner, a bottle blonde dances alone, head high and eyes closed, entranced by the beat. Peppered throughout the dance floor, couples grind and make out.

Against the wall is a large board scribbled with signatures. Every few weeks, Forrest paints over the board, and the process begins anew.

Three platforms were added to the top floor recently - where people dance to be seen. A few people catch their breath on one platform close to the upstairs entrance.

Downstairs, there's no real dance floor, but rather a small area by the bar where a smaller crowd moves to hard-edged industrial dance rock. As The Pixies' "Here Comes My Girl" segues into "Wildflower" by The Cult, their motions are rough, almost violent. Between the bar and the make-shift "dance floor," onlookers socialize and gape at the display of dancers. A balcony above overlooks the action.

The diversity between Simon and Troy and The Rev's upstairs and downstairs is just what Levy and Forrest hope will keep the club

"Usually (a club) opens up, has a couple of good years and is a real happening place," Levy says. "Then another place opens up, and the crowd kind of moves from place to Levy and Forrest want to keep things exciting to ensure The Rev's crowd keeps coming back.

"The way to stay fresh would be to change things as much as possible when there's a need for change," Forrest says.

"But we don't want to give it a face lift every eight months," Levy adds. After all the energy Levy and Forrest have put into The Rev, success is a must. Levy, who graduated from UF with a journalism degree, has given up law school, haircuts, bike riding and just about every penny he has. Forrest hasn't sacrificed quite so much, besides an occasional night's sleep. After a little more than a month, neither have any green to show for their efforts.

"We haven't paid ourselves yet, and we probably won't for a long time," Forrest says.

But if the crowds keep coming, Levy and Forrest shouldn't have to wait too long. The Rev might soon be opening its doors more than three nights a week, but for now, they want to take things slowly.

"We don't want to grow too fast," Forrest says. "We're a couple of guys with no money, and we're doing what we can do with no money."

"Yeah," Levy agrees. "This is a big animal for two little guys like Eric and me."

"Kiss." Soon enough, the bleachers were bare.

At $30 an hour, CJ had better be good. But $30 is a little low by his normal standards. When he was a DJ in Panama City, CJ says he was earning up to $75 an hour. But with Gainesville's "amateur" competition, CJ makes less money and gets fewer jobs. Maybe Gainesville just isn't ready for a $75-an-hour DJ.

"Yeah, I've been cursed out over the phone," he says. "But if you're paying less than $125 for four hours, you're not getting a good DJ."

CJ may know a lot about rates, but he probably hasn't heard many of the songs that 25-year-old Alan Trueba plays. "Fight the Power" by Public Enemy will never see the turntable at one of CJ's dances or wedding receptions. Slam dancing would probably not go over too well at Club X or Central City. But with Alan spinning the records, both are the rule rather than the exception.

While Troy is secluded in a booth above the dance floor, Alan works at floor level beside The Rev's bottom dance floor. Troy may not dance because standing so long makes his legs feel "rubbery," but Alan continues to move to the beat, even as he looks for another record.

Madonna's "Express Yourself" might get a big response from CJ's crowd, but Alan's visitors would have to go elsewhere to hear such blonde ambition. Alan's favorite group, The Pixies, is a far cry from Information Society. He likes progressive music all right, but he hates house music.

"I don't like it," he says. "I played house music four years ago. It's old to me."

Last fall, Alan created Club 201, a Wednesday-only club on Central City's second floor. Alan left 201 several weeks after its debut and re-christened his concept The Big Buddha. (He had to change the name because Central City retains legal right to the name "Club 201.") After several Mondays at MFP in January, The Big Buddha became the Hardback Cafe's Wednesday night mainstay until last month. Now the Big Buddha can be found Fridays and Saturdays on The Rev's ground floor, just two flights down from Troy's house jams.

Alan says Club 201 stemmed from his desire to create an "alternative to the alternative," which he explains as music that no one has heard before. Trends are taboo. Alan would prefer to be associated with something unique. Moev or Ministry, maybe. No Fine Young Cannibals or B-52's.

"I'm not trendy," he says. "I don't play what everyone else is playing." Instead he plays Nitzer Ebb, Public Enemy and Nine Inch Nails.

Alan's music is apparently effective. He measures his success by dance floor reaction. And boy does he get a reaction!

"I see people jumping. I see people running into walls," he says excitedly. "I see people just totally losing themselves on the dance floor.

"I like for people to go into a place and feel an energy, regardless of whether there's one person there or a hundred people."

Dressed completely in black, except for a white shirt buttoned to the collar, wearing eyeliner and pale-red lipstick, Nathan Sams, 19, might stand out at Club X or Central City. But among other Big Buddha patrons, he's just another face in the crowd.

Nathan, a UF psychology major, feels at ease with Alan at the turntable. To him, The Big Buddha is the "fraternity version of progressive." He sees many of the same people every night, and everyone seems united by the music. People may come as strangers, but they somehow leave as friends.

Dancing slowly and ever so smoothly to a slow, funky beat as well as to a furious, jolting groove, Nathan remains the center of attention. Alone he radiates that energy that Alan strives to create.

Nathan's moves are as effortless and constant as Alan's music is unpredictable.

"I take risks. I change the mood and the energy all night," Alan says. "I'll go from very high to very low to in the middle to funky."

Like Troy, Alan approaches his work as an artist. But Alan goes even further. He tries to bring attention to obscure music.

"If you pay attention to the music I'm playing, you'll realize that I'm not gonna play Madonna. It's just not gonna happen," he says. "The whole idea of a club is to play music they've never heard before."

Alan also sees himself as an artist in the way he puts music together.

It's my creation," he says. "I try to create something to make the people go crazy."

Ronnie Antevy, known by his friends as Rocco, would agree with Alan that exceptional DJs are artists. Rocco, a UF engineering student, has been pleasing Central City crowds for two years with his mixes of house, Top 40 and Miami-style music.

More than a year before his Central City career, Rocco created The Brooklyn Beat, a DJ service that's still going strong. Working at parties with The Brooklyn Beat has little in common with spinning tunes at Central City, Rocco says.

"When I'm at Central City, I'm on a pedestal where nobody can tell me what to do," he says, referring to his quarters above the dance floor.

At parties, he has to deal with drunk people who won't wait five minutes to hear a song. Despite the occasional inconsiderate drunk, at parties Rocco gets to play more of what he really likes — New York-style dance music.

New York dance music is more electronic than Miami dance music, Rocco says. New York dance songs, such as "Too Turned On" by Alisha and "Set It Off" by Straffe, are usually in minor keys, which give them a tinge of melancholy.

People categorize Miami music as "that Stevie B. kind of stuff," he says. It's happier music in major keys, more Central City's style. Still, Rocco throws in a little New York dance music, but only in small doses.

"If I play it a tad too much, I'll lose them," he says. "They want happy, jump-up-anddown music."

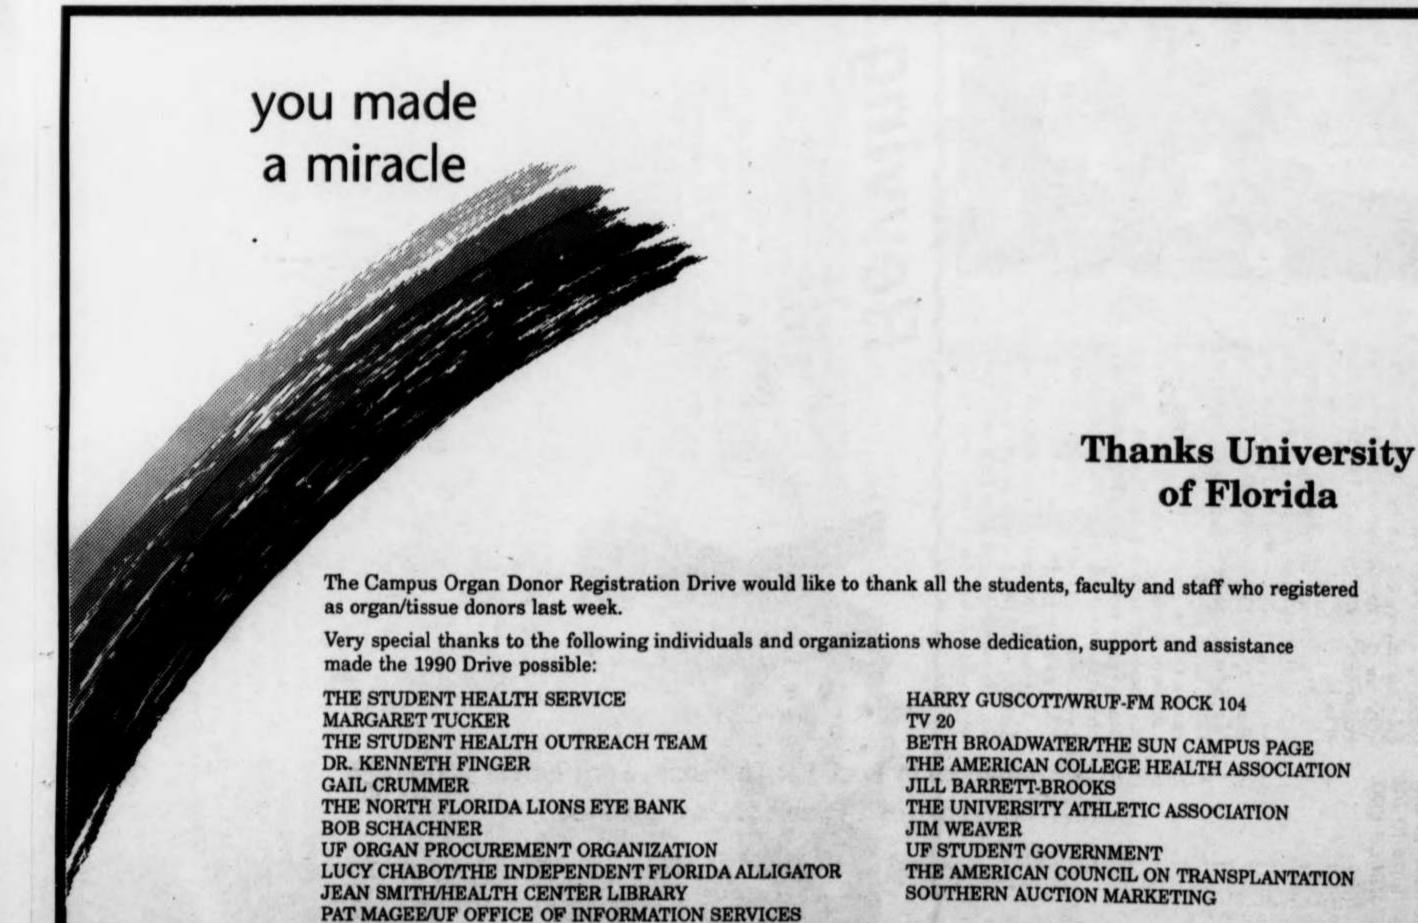

And the crowd gets what it wants. Technotronic, 2 Live Crew and Paula Abdul are big favorites at Central City. About the latter, Rocco says, "I play a little to get everyone off my back." But like Troy, he does have his rules.

"If I hear something played on the radio extensively, I won't play it," he says. "I like to give more of a variety . . . something you can't find."

Troy and Alan have a lot in common, though it's a bit harder to find a Moev or Front 242 record than, say, Paula Abdul's Forever Your Girl.

But when Troy and Alan are still shuffling records at 2 a.m. (The Rev usually doesn't close until after 3 a.m.), Rocco is ready to don his dancing shoes. Central City closes at 2 a.m., and after hours of non-stop blaring music and bright strobe lights, Rocco is just getting started. He usually goes to Club X, where he can hear something a little different from what he plays.

"For all of us who work at Central City," he says, "it's like we just got off work at five and we're ready to go out."

Catherine Wheel keeps on rollin' toward dream

By Penina J. Freedman

Gainesville has been stomping ground for quite a few bands before their fairy tale ascents to stardom.

U2, The Police, and Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers are just a few examples of bands that came through Gainesville and played on campus before anyone knew who they were. And unknown bands continue to file through Gainesville, hoping a similar formula will catapult them to exalted status.

The Catherine Wheel, formerly ICU, is far from unknown in its hometown of St. Petersburg. But in the constant search for a broader audience, a band must extend its on Wednesday. But this is not the first time UF students have welcomed the Catherine Wheel. They have played at fraternity parties in the past, and recently they performed at the Orange & Brew.

"We thought the crowd at the University of Florida was very receptive and we really enjoyed playing for them," Hammill says.

The band members, all in their early 20s, are lead vocalist Jonathon Harrison, bassist Martin Conner, drummer Doug Prescott, keyboardist Geoffrey Stuart and lead guitarist Hammill.

The band formed in 1979 when Hammill and Prescott got together to play covers in their garages. Conner, Hammill's best Ancient Colours is the puberty stage of what we are now."

The band is looking for a label to fund its next cassette, which the members want to release this year. "But chances are we are going to fund the second tape ourselves," he says. "We don't need any strings attached."

The name change from ICU to the Catherine Wheel marks the maturing of a band that has gone through many changes, Hammill says.

"The name ICU was thought up in 1983 when our music was really laid back and fun, so the name fit," Hammill says. "But then we grew up and our music changed.

"It is fun to watch them grow and see how much they have changed and expanded musically," Fincher says. "They're just not the type of band you get bored of."

Under the ICU name, the Catherine Wheel was voted best local band in a 1988 student poll published in the University of South Florida college newspaper, The Oracle. And in 1989, the St. Petersburg Times voted them most outstanding new music band. In the same year, the band beat several others to represent a St. Petersburg radio station in the Snickers New Music Search. Although the band did not win, Hammill says it was exciting just qualifying for the contest.

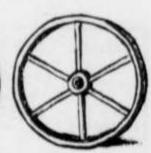

boundaries of familiarity. Gainesville is as good a place as any, lead guitarist Gerald Hammill says.

The group plays their brand of "alternative" music and writes songs based on their moods and feelings, Hammill says. He prefers the freedom to write what he wants—an impossibility in commercial music played on the radio.

Although the group would welcome a record label, they do not want to have to conform to what a record company wants. "What's playing if you're not playing what you want to play?" Hammill says.

The Catherine Wheel will play at The Rev friend, joined them two years later, and they played at community centers and high schools. It wasn't until 1986 that the entire band began playing as ICU. Shortly thereafter, the band recorded its debut, Ancient Colours.

The tape was recorded practically for free at Full Sail Studios in Orlando. Hammill says about 1,500 tapes were sold and 200 others are still floating around.

"The tape is old; we play different music now," he says. "Making the tape was kind of a joke. We just figured we had nothing to lose because the cost was so minimal.

"We have been through a lot of changes.

"Now our music is more spiritual in nature. It asks the listeners to choose their own destiny and to be themselves."

The new name was inspired by St. Catherine of Alexandria, a martyr who was tortured and killed on an instrument called the Catherine Wheel.

"A lot of our music is serious in nature, but you don't want to take yourself too seriously because you lose the fun of it."

The band has attracted quite a following over the years. UF junior Julie Fincher is a friend of the band members who has been watching them perform for more than two years.

"Contests are fun, but we are not out to win," he says. "We just want to have an audience of people that enjoy what we are doing."

In May, the band is going to take some time off from performing and start writing some new music. They are also planning a trip to Los Angeles, possibly to relocate.

"Making music is just in our innerselves," member Stuart says. "We enjoy the response we get from people when we play, and we are proud of the music we write. None of us do drugs, and by playing we get our high and we need to feed that addiction."

Marat-Sade makes revolutionary debut despite odds

By Marti Upton

The latest endeavor from the Acrosstown Repertory Theater, Marat-Sade, will open in just six days despite its shaky start. This revolutionary play, true to its turbulent subject, has led to a baptism in fire for first-time director Jim Evangelist.

The drama, which recounts the ssassination of the French rebel Marat as performed by the inmates of the asylum of Charenton, presented Evangelist with probems recruiting enough extras to lesh out the unusually large cast. o complicate matters, actors seemed to vanish off-set as swiftly s they arrived. Scot Davis, who plays Sade, compared the attrition ate to "the turnover at McDonald's." The original musial director, to mention one casuilty, left after a few rehearsals and wasn't replaced until just last week. Despite these past probems, Evangelist claims producion is now running smoothly.

The play's successful continuance owes much to assistant director and stage manager Laura Glenn, who came to the scene hoping to play a patient, asking Evangelist "if he needed help getting everything together." Although her past experience is limited to time at Seminole Community College in Orlando "sort of learning about theater," Glenn has handled the job admirably.

She notes that Marat-Sade represents a "change of venue" since the play won't be performed at the Acrosstown, but at an old building on Southeast Second Place that was once the Florida Sign Shop. Securing the building temporarily was one hurdle Glenn had to overcome; she met with numerous city officials "from the mayor down" to obtain the permit. Consequently, she says that the play reflects "quite a community project." In fact, community service workers will help paint the dilapidated Sign Shop, and women from the Gainesville Community Correctional Center will play extras.

Describing the rest of the cast, Evangelist says, "Most have never acted before; they are all very different people." Ironically, the president of Acrosstown, Bob Freeman, is filling the role of Coulmier, director of the asylum. However varying the actors may be, Evangelist recognizes their common resiliency and says that since beginning work on Marat-Sade, "the actors have bonded together."

I had the chance to slip into the Sign Shop to check out a rehearsal. There, the character of Sade (Scot Davis) delivered a bellowing soliloquy as he paced about in red hightops, long blond hair flying everywhere. Ex-priest and radical socialist Jacques Roux (Mike Gotch) enacted his rabble-rousing scene barefoot - and wearing an R.E.M. T-shirt. Neither the dimly lit, empty interior of the decrepit building nor the casual dress and colloquial speech of the actors during the workshop took away from the emotional impact, but rather they demanded a tight focus on the players' reactions to each other and to the essential message of Marat-Sade. Yes, the story does occur in France in 1808; however, its vibrancy and riotous mood transcend such a narrow framework.

Laura Glenn expects to see a large turnout opening night. The play will be performed in the round, which means that the audience will surround the players on all sides. This way, the audience can almost feel like participants in what should prove to be a highly energetic and chaotic show.

Marat-Sade opens Wednesday at 19 SE 2nd Pl. and will run for three weeks, Wednesdays through Saturdays. Tickets are $4 during the week and $5 on weekends.

Did You Know?

by TomKurrus
Attorney

Where a road intersection is under the control of the State, it is not the duty of a county to warn motorists of hazards created by a new traffic light, a Michigan appellate court ruled. Imagine the tangled legal mess that this ruling might create. For example, what if the county erected a warning, but the sign was inadequate? Or, the sign was adequate to warn about the impending hazard, but the sign itself created a new hazard? And so on.

Where there is a dispute over contract terms, handwritten provisions in a contract prevail over typewritten ones. Nice to know.

"I believe in my right to be wrong, and still more in my right to be right." — Owen Lattimore, American author.

Smith knows there's no biz like pro biz

There's a scene in the movie North Dallas Forty where John Matuszak's character, an offensive lineman for the fictitious North
Dallas Bulls, throws a temper tantrum because he can't distinguish whether professional football is a game or a business.

Emmitt Smith won't have that problem.

The former UF running back said he has been told time and time again to treat his upcoming experience in the NFL like a

Smith will throw on his business suit and grab his briefcase Sunday as he watches the annual NFL draft from his parents' home in Pensacola.

The 5-foot-10, 205-pound tailback will faithfully wait for NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue to walk up to the podium at the Felt Forum in New York City and call out his name.

The (insert team here) select ... running back, Emmitt Smith, Florida.

"This draft thing is very funny," Smith said at a news conference Wednesday. "I've been watching it the past two years, and every year there is someone who gets upset and heartbroken. I'm very nervous about the situation. I have no control over where I'm going."

Nervous or not, Smith, who holds 58 school records and is UF's all-time leading rusher, will be drafted in the first round.

The question is where.

"I don't know where I'm going, to tell you the truth," Smith said. "There hasn't been any hints or one team standing out and paying more attention to me at all."

There's no telling where he might end up. But it wouldn't be a draft if media types didn't speculate where Smith will go. So here goes:

■ 1. Seattle. The Seahawks have two first round picks, the eighth and the 10th, and are in desperate need of a tailback after releasing Curt Warner. Smith, rated by most scouts as the second- or third-best back in the draft, probably will be around when Seattle picks. This is the best bet for Smith.

■2. Atlanta. The Falcons love Smith and Smith wouldn't mind living within driving distance of UF and Pensacola. The only problem is their first pick of the draft will be Illinois quarterback Jeff George. Their second pick is the 20th of the first round. If Smith is still there, Atlanta will take him.

■ 3. Pittsburgh. The Steelers need a running back badly, and with the 17th pick of the first round, Smith could be available.

■ 4. New York Giants. Getting Smith would be great for the Giants, but with the 25th pick in the draft, the chances that he still will be around are slim and none.

■ 5. San Diego. The Chargers have the fifth pick of the first round, so it's almost a lock that Smith will be there if they want him. With star tailback Gary Anderson refusing to return to San Diego, the Chargers need someone to fill his shoes.

Don't look for Miami or Tampa Bay to be picking up Smith. The Dolphins, as always, need help at linebacker. And Tampa Bay, with the fourth pick in the draft, will go for Penn State's Blair Thomas, if available.

Bruce Haddad has settled down from his early-season temper flares.

Haddad coming to terms with game

By GUERRY SMITH

Alligator Writer

When the UF men's tennis team opened its dual-match season in February, freshman Bruce Haddad was playing No. 4 singles, a position both he and Coach Ian Duvenhage knew was too low.

Haddad, a 5-foot-7, 138-pound baseliner who compiled an excellent juniors record, had come to UF with a deserved reputation for going haywire on the court, and Duvenhage did not think he was prepared mentally to face top college players.

But after thrashing his first five opponents without losing more than three games in a set, Haddad played in and won his first No. 1 singles match, and eventually became a fixture at the top spot. He is 14-6 in dual matches and 17-9 overall, with wins against 29th-ranked Curtis Hollinger and 35th-ranked Juan Rios. He has moved into the top 100 in the latest rankings at No 96.

Although he did not like playing in the middle of the lineup at first, Haddad realizes Duvenhage made the correct decision.

"He thought that if he put me at No. 1 or 2 to start with, and I wasn't doing that well, that I would lose my confidence," Haddad says. "I wasn't happy because I thought I deserved to be playing higher than that, but after it happened, I totally agree with it."

A New Jersey native, Haddad initially was attracted to UF because his sister had attended the school, graduating two years ago. Duvenhage knew about Haddad's troubles—the Eastern Tennis Association twice suspended him from playing tournaments—but a talk with Haddad convinced him that he would help the team.

"I got to realize that in spite of the fact that he had severe control problems on the court, he is basically a very nice kid," Duvenhage says.

Before signing him, however, Duvenhage outlined what he would have to do to remain on the team. Haddad would not play if he had a negative attitude on the court.

Duvenhage had to enforce his policy at the Southeastern Conference Indoors in January. While playing poorly in a first-round match against Mississippi's Nick Barone, Haddad spent more energy berating himself than trying to win, prompting Duvenhage to pull him out of the consolation draw.

"I just said, 'Look, you're not ready to play for the University of Florida yet,' " Duvenhage said.

The disciplinary action apparently worked, as Haddad beat Barone 6-2, 6-2 two months later in a rematch at the Varsity Courts.

"I don't feel he's conquered the problem, but he's certainly come a long way," Duvenhage said. "I'm sometimes surprised at the progress he's made, I have no doubt that if he can get it completely under his control, he's going to be able to beat top people consistently."

While Duvenhage has tried to change Haddad's behavior during matches, he has not tampered with his image. Haddad is distinctive for a reason other than his size — he is the only player wearing a plain white T-shirt.

"I started that when I came here," he says. I always like to do something different. It's the image of a fighter."

His cocky demeanor on the court extends to his attitude about his opponents.

"When I walk off the court, I never feel the guy is better than me in the long run," he says. "I always say that I won't lose to a player twice, and it hasn't happened so far."

Haddad plans to stay a couple of more years at UF before turning professional. He also has an interest in psychology, citing his own experience in therapy learning how to behave on the court, but admits tennis is his meal ticket.

"I think with hard work I could make it," he says. "It's definitely in my future."

Southern Mississippi shuts down Gators

MOBILE, Ala. — Pitcher Damon Pollard went the distance Wednesday, limiting UF to six hits, leading Southern Mississippi to a 3-1 victory over the Gators in the consolation game of the Diamond Club Classic.

AROUND SPORTS

Doug Brennan (3-2) took the loss for UF (21-22), surrendering all three runs in the fifth inning. In two innings of relief, Brennan gave up four hits and two walks.

The Gators responded in the seventh, when Bill Minnis scored from third on a Jim Bell sacrifice fly.

Pollard (9-1) struck out four batters four Southern Mississippi (27-18).

Emmitt not priority for Bucs

TAMPA — Even though former UF running back Emmitt Smith said he has talked about becoming a Buccaneer, he apparently isn't Tampa Bay's No. 1 priority for Sunday's draft, in which it has the No. 4 pick.

"We've got (Penn State's) Blair Thomas rated as the No. 1 back in the draft and I don't have any squabbles about that," Bucs coach Ray Perkins said. "But as far as a lot of great backs, I don't think they're there."

At a news conference Wednesday, Smith said he has spoken to Bucs representatives about playing for them.

Smith: "I feel like the Bucs are probably going to go after the best guy, and if I'm not the best, then they're going to get the best. I feel my ability speaks for itself."

Compiled from Alligator staff and wire reports.
