Coordinator's post offered to Allison

While you were away

Exams ended and you split for Miami, Minnesota, Mozambique or wherever. Bet you didn't think about UF once during break, did you? It stayed right here, hummin away as it always does. Since last quarter ended, some graduate assistants are out of jobs due to the funding crunch, and the Board of Regents has ordered other measures to deal with tight money in universities. But, if you've got savings in the on-campus student credit union, you're in the money. To find out the details, turn to page three. A lot happened while you were away.

Executive Vice President Harold Hanson has offered the position of affirmative action coordinator to James Allison, a former administrator at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, effective July 1.

In a Dec. 20 letter to Allison, Hanson said he had accepted the recommendation of the coordinator search and screen committee to hire Allison.

THE COMMITTEE met in closed session Dec. 4 and selected Allison, Robert Albert, and Ann Duncan Glasgow as its nominees for coordinator.

Allison's salary will be $25,000 per year, according to the letter.

Hanson said he would not comment about his choice until the Affirmative Action Council meeting Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the President's Board room.

ALLISON could not be reached for comment.

Hanson said the job offer had not been accepted, and he had not set a deadline for acceptance.

Dorothy Neville, UF assistant dean of academic affairs, said "a strong probability" she will accept the job of interim affirmative action coordinator until the permanent coordinator takes over on July 1.

FORMER interim coordinator Louis Murray left UF Jan. 1 for a staff position with the Board of Regents.

Because of a freeze on university system hiring, the permanent coordinator cannot begin work until July 1.

Neville said she was offered the job of interim coordinator by Hanson after he and UF President Robert Q. Marston reviewed a list of candidates to fill the vacancy.

NEVILLE said she would discuss her appointment with the Affirmative Action Council Wednesday before deciding whether to accept the job.

She said she has been involved in affirmative action through the office of academic affairs, and she is a member of the Affirmative Action Council.

Allison is on leave from his job as assistant to the president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and has a masters degree in education administration.

The coordinator will serve as staff assistant to Hanson, UF's director of affirmative action, who supervises UF's equal employment opportunities plan.

UF'S PLAN has been in effect since last spring, but final approval from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has been delayed, pending correction of several deficiencies in the plan.

Near the end of last quarter, Murray met with HEW officials in Atlanta to get feedback on UF intended response to the deficiencies in UF's affirmative action plan.

Hanson said HEW's response was favorable to Murray's proposals to rectify the plan, and a formal response is being prepared.

No grievance procedure, no methods for solving tenure, and low goals for hiring women are among the deficiencies cited by HEW in a letter to UF on Nov. 21.

UF censure 'likely' to end

By GARY BALANOFF
Alligator Staff Writer

It is likely UF will be removed from national censure by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), according to the associate general secretary.

AAUP secretary Jordan E. Kurland said he thought something could be worked out by spring which would satisfy the AAUP and the offended persons, Dr. George Cornwell and Councillor Blye.

The AAUP put UF on censure in 1971 and cited several instances of UF abusing the academic freedom of UF professors.

The two main cases which have kept UF on the AAUP censure list were the Cornwell and Blye cases, according to Kurland.

"I RATHER suspect a cash offer is simplest," he said.

"I hope that is what is forthcoming."

A cash settlement would be a payment from UF to Blye for the damages incurred by him as a result of his being fired by UF.

Arbitration had been mentioned earlier as a possible settlement.

KURLAND met with UF President Robert Q. Marston, Executive Vice President Harold Hanson, and local AAUP officials on Dec. 13.

"It was a productive meeting," David T. Smith, UF AAUP president said.

But Smith had words of caution for those hoping for an easy settlement.

"WHAT MIGHT be acceptable to the national AAUP might not be acceptable to Mr. Blye," Smith said.

Blye said he had no comment about the possibility of accepting a cash settlement from UF.

"Something could happen next month or the month after" which would keep UF on censure, Kurland said, but he indicated nothing negative has happened over the past few months which would extend the length of time UF would be kept on censure.

HE SAID HE had "very constructive discussions" with Marston, Hanson and the local AAUP officials.

A committee of the AAUP national organization is scheduled to meet in June, at which time a decision will most likely be made on whether or not to remove the censure.

Marston said the UF strategy has been to let the court cases run their course.

BUT HE ADDED he would be "quite willing" to work out something out of court, such as the suggested cash settlement, if UF could be taken off the AAUP censure "without admission of guilt" on UF's part.

Marston said there is a lot of uncertainty about arbitration now that Blye and Cornwell cases are in court.

"We're probably past that time," Marston said, referring to the possibility of bringing in an arbitrator selected by the national AAUP.

Harris to eye graduate enrollment

By BRIAN JONES
Alligator Layout Editor

Former State Rep. Marshall Harris of Miami, the man behind last spring's "enrollment padding" disclosures, said Sunday he "will be looking at enrollments very closely" now that he is on the Board of Regents.

Governor Reubin Askew named Harris to the BOR last week replacing outgoing regent Carolyn Pearce in the nine-member group which makes policy for Florida's nine state universities.

HARRIS MUST be confirmed by the Florida Cabinet and by the state senate, which meets in April. He will have full voting privileges on the board until confirmed.

Harris and the regents came into conflict last spring when the House Appropriations Committee, which Harris chaired, charged that UF and other state universities were inflating enrollments in some graduate programs in order to get state funding that they did not deserve.

Sunday, Harris termed the enrollment irregularities "essentially a management problem" and said he will bring "dollars and cents knowledge" to the regents.

"DOLLARS and how they are spent has always been interesting to me, and I think my appointment will give the board a better balance in finance."

Harris actively sought appointment to the regents and sent a letter to Askew Dec. 19 informing the governor of his desire to be named to the regents.

Harris did not get the support of the rest of the regents in seeking the appointment. Board Chairman Marshall Criser nominated two black Miamians for the vacancy, and university system Chancellor-designate E.T. York wrote Askew, telling him it is "extremely important that a woman be appointed to replace Mrs. Pearce for reasons that are many, and, I'm sure obvious."

Harris said he is not yet sure the universities should increase class sizes and require teachers to spend more time in the classroom, as state Senate President Dempsey Barron, D-Panama City, has suggested.

Harris will serve a nine-year term. He served eight years in the state legislature, four of those as appropriations committee chairman.

Research shows drugs could be cheaper

WASHINGTON UPI — The price consumers pay for prescription antibiotic drugs could be cut by more than 50 per cent if drug stores were able to buy the lowest priced drugs available, a private research group said Sunday.

The cheaper drugs are not always available to pharmacists because companies producing the more expensive brands often dominate the market, said the report by the Council on Economic Priorities.

There are wide variations in price for drugs that have the same common or generic name but which are sold by different companies to doctors under specific brand names, even though they may be the same in effectiveness, the report said.

C. Joseph Stettler, President of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, called the study "interesting" but said "The basic thrust appears to be against the patent and brand names systems, which constitute the bedrock for innovation and quality in all of American Industry."

"Hence," he said, "they study gives woefully short shrift to the incentives that spur drug innovation and the quest for new products and services."

WASHINGTON UPI — President Ford named Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller Sunday to head an eight-member commission investigating accusations that the Central Intelligence Agency has illegally spied on thousands of Americans within the United States.

Among those named to serve on the panel under Rockefeller are former California Governor Ronald Reagan; Erwin Griswold, a private lawyer who was U.S. Solicitor General from 1967-72; and Joseph Lane Kirkland, secretary-treasurer of the AFL-CIO since 1969.

FORD ANNOUNCED Saturday the establishment of a "blue ribbon" commission to investigate the charges against the CIA.

The commission will determine whether the agency "exceeded its statutory authority" and violated a 1947 law barring it from domestic surveillance activities.

The President's action was triggered by allegations in news reports and from congressmen that the CIA carried out burglaries and electronic surveillance during the 1960's and early 1970's and that it spied or kept files on as many as 10,000 Americans, particularly activists opposed to the Vietnam war.

Ford directed the commission to report any evidence of illegal activity to the attorney general. In addition, the president said the FBI already has begun its own investigation of whether the CIA broke the law.

OTHER COMMISSION members names Sunday included Ret. Army Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff from 1960-63; Douglas Dillon, Secretary of Treasury from 1960-65; John T. Connor, chairman of the Allied Chemical Corp.; and Edgar F. Shannon, who retired this year after 15 years as president of the University of Virginia.

Meanwhile, Rep. Lucien N. Nedzi, D-Mich., said Sunday his Congressional committee will also investigate charges the CIA spied on Americans — meaning the supersecret agency now faces scrutiny from three sides; the commission, Congress and the Justice Department.

Policy maker backs tax cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., a top economic policy-setter in Congress, said Sunday that personal income taxes should be cut by $10 billion within the next 60 days to help control the nation's "intolerable" recession level.

He proposed that taxes be pared by either allowing a $225 credit to low and moderate income wage-earners or by reducing the Social Security payroll levy, which he labeled "the cruelest tax of all."

"ONE OF the primary sources of our economic troubles today is that there is not enough purchasing power by the average middle class family in this country," Reuss said. "We do need a tax cut."

Reuss, a member of both the Joint Congressional Committee and the House Banking Committee, strongly criticized the administration for "running around in circles for so many months while the economy has deteriorated."

"We've got the kind of recession that is absolutely intolerable (and) which shouldn't have been allowed to get this bad," he said. "We ought to start turning it around tomorrow instead of playing this Rip Van Winkle act that the administration has been playing."

REUSS WAS interviewed on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

President Ford, who once favored a tax surcharge on middle-income families, has been studying recommendations from his advisers in recent days that would cut personal income taxes by between $10 billion and $20 billion. He apparently has not reached a decision.

Auto industry putters into 1975

DETROIT (UPI) — The beleaguered U.S. auto industry begins the first full week of 1975 Monday with 14 of its assembly plants closed and nearly 8180,000 workers off the job.

Thousands more will be out of work in the coming weeks, the automakers say, because production of just 450,000 cars is planned for January—29 per cent below last year's already depressed pace and the lowest for the month in 14 years.

Sales figures for December are due Monday and were expected to bear out the warning from Ward's Automotive Reports, the industry statistical agency, that automakers haven't faced such a potentially depressed car market since the 1930's.

December sales are expected to total about 507,000 cars, including imports, as the industry completes its worst year since 1970 with sales totaling 8.85 million cars. Last month's sales were the lowest for any month since December of 1970 when a strike against General Motors cut deep into deliveries.

With first-quarter output slated to be the lowest since 1961, the four U.S. auto manufacturing companies have already idled or plan to idle before March close to 300,000 workers—40 per cent of the hourly work force. Close to 160,000 of them are on long-term layoffs, awaiting an upturn in sales so they can return to work.

Ford Motor Co. will close six car plants and one truck assembly plant for the week, idling 36,175 workers temporarily with another 28,750 on indefinite layoffs. GM will have just two of its 23 car assembly plants closed.

BOR fund affects UF grad students

By TOM SHRODER
Alligator Staff Writer

A less-than-requested allocation from the Board of Regents (BOR) reserve fund will put the squeeze on some UF graduate students and may result in larger classes.

Dr. Gene Hemp, UF interim assistant vice president for academic affairs, said there would be "no problem" with firm full-year graduate assistance commitments UF has already made. However, a number of graduate students without commitments will not be receiving assistantships.

A GRADUATE assistantship provides tuition and expenses for graduate students in return for teaching and research duties.

Hiring 'freeze' used to cut budget

By BRIAN JONES
Alligator Layout Editor

A hiring "freeze" will remain in effect at UF until the budget for employee salaries shrinks by two per cent.

No employees are to be laid off during the hiring freeze, which was adopted by the Board of Regents at their December meeting. The policy instead calls for all state universities to stop hiring replacements for outgoing employees until the salaries budgets are reduced.

REGENTS adopted nine other money-saving policies, designed to comply with Gov. Reubin Askew's order that all state agencies, including the university system, must reduce spending below the amounts approved by the state legislature last April.

A general decline in Florida's economy has choked expected tax revenue, and the state is receiving less funds than called for by the budgets approved by the legislature.

Among other university money-saving policies are:

- REDUCE the number of small classes and the frequency of course offerings, "if possible;"
- Limit long-distance telephone calls, duplicating, and use of outside consultants;
- Reducing electrical consumption.

HOW budget cuts will affect students is in question, but slightly larger class sizes for next fall are a certainty.

"It's too early to make sharp predictions."

UF President Robert Q. Marston said Sunday. Marston said he is watching how much tax revenue comes into the state treasury in order to decide how severely UF's budgets must be reduced.

Harold Hanson, UF executive vice president, said Saturday "for next fall, (the money-saving policy) will mean two per cent larger class sizes."

NEITHER Marston nor Hanson said there would be an immediate effect on class sizes because of the money-saving policies, however.

In other regents action, the board rejected an admissions policy which would have prohibited convicted felons from entering crowded university programs.

graduate assistants and the hiring freeze will create larger classes and heavier class loads.

Two factors have combined to cause UF's present financial squeeze—an unanticipated increase in university enrollment and a decrease in state revenues.

MANNING DAUER, UF political science department chairman, said statewide university enrollment was up 5,000 from the figure the legislature used to formulate the budget.

In this case Florida reflects a national trend. National university enrollment was projected to increase by about 1.2 per cent this year but actual figures indicate the increase is as high as 3.8 per cent, Dauer said.

Another national trend Florida reflects is a decrease in revenues. Revenues are presently lagging behind appropriations by more than $90 million.

However, UF Executive Vice President Harold Hanson found cause for optimism in this winner's record-breaking tourist season.

"The national economy is in trouble, but maybe Florida's is not," Hanson said.

First dividends paid to credit union depositors

By STUART EMMRICH
Alligator Staff Writer

For the first time in its three-year history the Florida Student Federal Credit Union has declared a dividend for depositors.

Student Body Treasurer Greg Sherman said Friday a 6 per cent dividend will be paid to all 1974 credit union members. Sherman estimated 2,500 students belong to the union, the only student federal credit union in the country.

ALTHOUGH there were reports last quarter that the credit union was in financial trouble, Sherman said the union is now "very stable. It is not on the verge of going bankrupt."

Sherman said the union was "at a low ebb" before because of a large number of delinquent accounts and low deposits.

He explained that a change in management resulted in greater efficiency and lowered the number of delinquent accounts which put the union in a "position that we can now declare a dividend."

THE UNION is now being managed by Beth Auxter.

Auxter and Sherman also managed to obtain a $6,000 grant from the National Credit Union Association which Sherman said will be used to defray general expenses, primarily salaries.

Sherman said he hoped the improved financial position of the union, shown by the dividends, would increase the number of members.

TO BECOME a member, a student has to deposit at least $5. The member is then eligible for loans from the union.

Sherman estimated the union has made 2,300 loans since it opened in January, 1972. He said the loan interest is usually 12 per cent. The Union currently has assets of approximately $40,000 he said.

The credit union is located on the third floor of the J. Wayne Reitz Union.

Harris blasts investigation of Honor Court

By JOE MORAN
Alligator Staff Writer

An investigation into the effectiveness of the Honor Court "is the administration's attempt to satisfy someone," Robert Harris, chancellor of the court said Sunday.

The UF Task Force on Student Judicial Systems held its organizational meeting Dec. 5 to study the shortcomings of the 61-year-old honor code and the court which was founded in the 1940s.

HARRIS' CHARGE was leveled primarily at Robert Bryan, interim vice-president for academic affairs.

Harris said Bryan had been "uncooperative and cynical" toward Honor Court attempts to correct deficiencies in the system and had repeatedly failed to respond to phone calls and memos.

"I feel he's the one exerting a lot of the pressure to investigate the Honor Court," Harris said.

BRYAN indicated he was surprised at Harris' accusations.

"I don't remember Mr. Harris ever calling me," Bryan said. "I return all calls no matter who they're from."

"He must have me confused with someone else," Bryan added.

HARRIS SAID the Honor Court was not officially notified of the organizational meeting, even though he had received assurances from UF President Robert Q. Marston and Vice President for Student Affairs Arthur Sandeen that input from the Honor Court would be given top priority.

Sandeen said a representative of the Honor

Court, Craig Mitchell, was present at the meeting.

Harris said Mitchell, who serves on the court's attorney general staff, was relatively new and could not speak with as much knowledge as many others could.

The student members of the task force were appointed by Student Body President Steve Merryday, according to Sandeen.

In his state-of-the-campus speech at the end of fall quarter, Merryday said restructuring the Honor Court would be attempted this winter.

Plane wrecked; escape blocked by 1400 pounds of marijuana

By BRIAN JONES
Alligator Layout Editor

Investigators are trying to determine the cause of a plane crash south of Gainesville Saturday which left two men in county jail and about 1,400 pounds of marijuana in the hands of Alachua County Drug Task Force Agents.

Appointments set for financial aid

Students who cannot meet their appointment to pick up financial aid should set up a new appointment, according to Irving Loeb, UF's assistant financial director.

Two 45-minute periods scheduled each day from 8 to 8:45 a.m., and from 3:45 to 4:30 p.m., will be used to handle rescheduled appointments or emergency cases, Loeb said.

HOWEVER, students who missed their appointments will not be able to go during the free period without first rescheduling.

Approximately 4,000 appointments were sent to students during the break to "see if we could cut down on the length of time students have to stand at the Hub," Loeb said.

TWO additional windows at the Hub will be open to handle service deferments and waivers—a system that could cut down the number of students having to wait in line by approximately two to three thousand students, he said.

Loeb said students with deferments should avoid waiting in line by dropping the papers in the night depository box at the Hub, since no money is being exchanged.

Appointments were mailed to students on the basis of financial need according to a code on UF financial aid records.

Although no information about the crash is being issued officially until the Federal Aviation Administration completes its investigation, the plane was probably coming from Jamaica and may have crashed because of engine trouble.

ON THE SCENE at the crash site Saturday, Task Force Director Lt. Clint McGraw said papers recovered from the plane indicated it was coming from Jamaica.

Local resident James Ramsey and his family, who witnessed the crash from their home about a mile away and reported it to police, said the plane's engines "sounded funny" and "sputtered" as it circled Levy Lake once before crashing and flipping over in three-foot deep muck.

Dennis J. Conroy, 22, and Michael P. Timmins, 26, were trapped upside down in the Piper P-31 aircraft until rescued by sheriff's deputies and volunteers from the Micanopy Rescue Unit.

THEIR ESCAPE was blocked by the 20 to 25 pound bags of marijuana they were allegedly transporting, which shifted to the front of the plane on impact, according to McGraw.

Conroy and Timmins suffered only minor injuries, according to the sheriff's report, and were arrested for possession of more than five grams of marijuana.

Their bond was set at $20,000 each Sunday.

SHERIFF'S deputies removed the marijuana from the plane by airboat, but the airboat pilot, Ricky Robinson of Gainesville, said "there's still a whole lot of that stuff floating around in the marsh—like skum."

Neither Conroy or Timmins would give authorities any information but their names upon arrest.

McGraw estimated the value of the marijuana seized at $300,000 and said "that's a conservative estimate." McGraw valued the plane at $100,000 new and at about $55,000 in its post-crash condition. Authorities will keep the plane until it can be auctioned.

EDITORIALEvening up

"People think we won the trial but they're wrong. We really lost all the way around."

So spoke Scott Camil, unofficial spokesman for the Gainesville Eight, a year after he and his fellow anti-war activists were acquitted of federal conspiracy charges.

And indeed, after the jury took a mere four hours in August 1973 to finally end the government's 14-month harassment of the Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW), it was hard to argue with Camil.

Chalk up, on the side of an administration obsessed with smothering dissent, the fact that for 14 months the leadership and resources of one of the most effective—and embarrassing—anti-war groups was tied up with legal wrangling. The result was the virtual decimation of the VVAW.

Chalk up, on the other side, what the defendants won: costs of $80,000 not including lawyers' fees for which there just wasn't any money left, 14 months of anxiety with no time to hold a steady job, and, as Camil put it, "our constitutionally guaranteed right to be free."

If you accept the premise that the Nixon administration's purpose in prosecuting the eight was not to put them behind bars but to cripple their organization and scare the dickens out of anyone else who might emulate their brand of free speech, it's clear who won.

And there's ample evidence that the government's intent was just that. The Gainesville Eight case was the culmination of a long series of "conspiracy" trials of anti-war activists. Their call numbers read like the signals of a frustrated quarterback gone berserk: The Harrisburg Seven, the Chicago Seven, the Camden 28.

They all followed similar patterns. Trumped up charges were based on the testimony of borderline psychotics turned informers. And the results followed: no significant convictions but a lot of time, money and energy lost by the defendants.

But the point of all this is that a New York Congressman named Ed Koch is sponsoring a bill designed to give victims of malicious prosecution a chance to recoup their losses.

The bill ensures that in any trial involving alleged violations of federal criminal law, the defense can introduce evidence to show the charges were an "unreasonable administration of justice."

Thus, defense efforts against prosecutorial mischief can't be quashed by a bang of the gavel and a judge's decree: "The government's not on trial here."

And, the bill states, if a jury or the court finds the prosecution was unwarranted, the government must pay attorney's fees and "reasonable costs" to the defendants.

The bill makes sense. Right now, the Gainesville Eight defendants are embroiled in a suit trying, among other things, to get reimbursed for their attorneys' fees and compensation for the 14 months they had to fight an attempted railroad rather than be employed. The case is tied up in legal knots.

We don't take much comfort in assurances the Gainesville trial is the last of the hard times for law abiding dissenters. A peek at recent headlines about illegal CIA domestic surveillance of private citizens is enough to bring back the shudders.

Our Rep. Don Fuqua should lend his support to the Koch legislation. Fuqua is scheduled to be in Gainesville today and it might do him some good to stop by for a chat with one of his constituents, namely Scott Camil.

The subject was money*GARY BALANOFF*STAFF WRITINGS

The rich have once again gained more influence and stature with UF administration officials. The gain was promoted from within the administration rather than from an outside influence group.

During fall quarter, President Marston sent out a "Dear University of Florida Parent" letter. The subject was money.

The subject is always money, but there was something different about this letter—the first sentence.

"We all have an interest in providing the finest education for our children," Marston wrote.

"Children?" Isn't this the new president with the new ideas of involving the student in the affairs of the university? Why then does he choose the word "children" to describe the young people at this campus?

Assuming this was an oversight on President Marston's part, let's continue with the letter. Marston goes on to say he is organizing the Gator Parents Club. Sounds a lot like the P.T.A. back in your home town, doesn't it? Or maybe the booster club?

Assuming the naming of the club was an oversight on President Marston's part, let's continue with the letter.

"To provide the extra resources for excellence which will make this institution competitive the nation's best, we ask you to support the University of Florida as generously as you can," Marston wrote.

Marston reminded parents a gift of $1,000 or more will qualify them as a member of the President's Council. He called this Council "a prestigious group of outstanding alumni and friends of the University."

Keep in mind, each parent can donate less than $1,000, which seems to be a generous gesture on the part of the administration. A parent can donate $25, $50, or $100, the last of which entitles the donor to membership in the Century Club, another special group of special people.

"But whether your gift is $25, $50, $100 or more, please know we are most grateful for your interest," Marston told the parents.

Marston finished the letter by inviting "those of you who are interested in active participation to make yourselves known."

If you were a parent of a UF student, would you heed Marston's call?

It seems clear that a parent who contributes $25 to the cause would have four times less power with the UF administration than a parent who contributes $100. Likewise, if someone felt rich enough to give $1,000 to an untried program such as this, he would have 40 times as much power as the $25 contributor.

Now Marston can hold up his hands and say it ain't so, but he must realize as well as anyone that money talks, and big money screams.

What about the parent who worked hard to put his son or daughter through college, and can't throw $25 "or more" into the till? Must he be forced to slink into silence with all the other parents who aren't rich enough to have two Cadillacs, a motor boat, and a summer house in the Bahamas?

This glorified country club approach has led to the situation our nation's higher education system faces today. Let's not forget the many families who can't afford to send any of their kids to college.

The rich and the middle class can send at least a few of their young people to college, enabling them to achieve a higher pay scale when they graduate. The cycle continues—the rich keep sending their sons and daughters to college, and the kids breed richer kids.

Meanwhile the poor stay poor because they don't have the financial ability. How can they get the financial ability without going to some kind of college where they can graduate and receive a higher salary?

Now the parents able to send their kids away to college are being segregated into those with enough money to get their "child" through college, and those with the real money, the elite whose money counts in the minds of the UF administration officials.

The money from the elite counts because there is so much of it, so the cycle continues.

Parents with money count, but the ones who are a little humbler financially, well, as the Secretary of Agriculture said, "He no playa the game, he no maka the rules."

Translated to UF, "He no paya for the game, he no maka the rules."

Say what?

To the readers of that establishment tool, The Alligator: Hello to all you potential right-on student brigands from your right-on hip mouthpiece. There's lots of un-groovy things going on out there in Gatorland and beyond, but if we right-on enough, groovy brothers and sisters, we'll disestablishmentarianize the proletarian precincts and let revolution rule.

Horrors of horrors, however, my many brothers and sisters, the right-wing, right-off establishment's right-hand rag that you are now reading, with its pro-Irish immigrant bias and its anti-carrot crop repressionist tactics has corrupted all you unenlightened and underexposed brothers and sisters.

Repeat after me: Down with the Alligator, up with right-on-ness. Now we know we're hip, oh comrades, so let us share our hipness with all the suppressed proles. That's right-on, we'll use the dreaded Alligator to get the word to these latent brigands. Cheer-Cheer-Cheer for our liberal leftist right-on thinking. If we're not hip I don't know who is.

Just make three thousand copies of this un-holy gospel and shove it-not there, oh fellow impotentates-up the mouth of the dreaded Alligator. Don't worry it won't bite you; it hasn't any teeth. Well, die for the cause and all that revolutionary rhetoric and see you later fellow brothers and sisters.

Health fee hit

Editor: It is my opinion that the mandatory health charge should be placed on a voluntary basis.

The present system represents an escape from freedom and Big Brotherism of the most insidious sort. If people aren't willing and or able to care for themselves UF, i.e. Big Brother will.

I am a human being who makes choices. I am competent to choose my own system of health care should I desire it. The present system restricts my freedom to do so. I accept responsibility for my freedom to choose. If my choices are wrong in the case of health care I will be the only one to suffer.

I realize that not all people are freedom-loving or competent. That is why I advocate a voluntary system. It would allow people to join the present system. It would also allow the individual the option of withdrawing from the group action.

A voluntary system would allow the individual the option of forfeiting options and joining. It would not, however, allow one group of individuals to make other individuals join against their wills.

I do not recognize the right or moral justification of a group of individuals to extort $10 from me to pay their health care. Let those who use the health services pay for them. Let the healthy be free to use their $10 in a manner more in accordance with their enlightened self-interest.

Marston's position reflects contradiction

Editor: I comment on the position President Marston takes on the situation with student informers on this campus. It is lamentable that his attitude is simply to follow police thinking. One expects more of the president of a major educational institution.

Specifically, the policy manual statement is contradictory. It states reasons why student informers are undesirable, and then condones them.

THE THIN LINE of separation in the police manual seems to be the word "solicitation" (however irrelevant) and the series of tricks recently exposed shows, perhaps contrary to Dr. Marston's information, that whether or not these people were actually paid, solicitation and encouragement took place.

It would seem, as a physician, he should recognize that while the ill effects of available hard drugs are serious, those of marijuana are, from the best studies available questionable.

When we talk about police activity with drugs, marijuana is the most important in terms of arrests. And from this example we know that police thinking is the worst source of information about drugs, also that under the authority of the law, the state produces drug addiction by dangerous maintenance programs, drug activity within the police, and false propaganda.

IN BRIEF, THE fact that UF is a state funded institution does not mean that its leaders must follow the lowest line of thinking which is currently available from our honest legislators and state officials, and that students in the university dorms should be fair game for future FBI agents who wish to enhance their career possibilities.

Former English head died at home Saturday

Dr. C. Archibald "Archie" Robertson, 79, chairman of the UF English department from 1946 to 1965 and honorary curator of rare books, died of a stroke Saturday night at his home.

Dr. Manning J. Dauer head of UF's political science department and a long-time friend of Robertson, described him as a "peppery type. He was very famous for his readings of plays, and he had a great interest in his students," Dauer said.

DR. C. ARCHIE ROBERTSON
...a peppery type'

DAUER ADDED that Robertson had been instrumental in bringing the late Robert Frost to UF to read his poetry and also in getting authoress Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings to dedicate her papers to the university.

Robertson brought graduate research English professor Aubrey Williams to UF in 1957.

"He was the main reason I came," Williams said. He also described Robertson as a "good scholar."

"In my estimation he was one of the finest scholars, and he had an awareness of good scholarship," Williams said.

"IF HE HAD not been here after World War II up to the time he retired, we would have missed a man of the greatest integrity. I have never met anyone quite like him," Williams added.

Robertson received an honorary doctorate in literature in 1965 for his efforts in building up the humanities collection in the university's libraries.

Robertson attended UF from 1912 to 1915 when he received his baccalaureate degree. He earned his Master of Arts degree in 1919. He also studied at Harvard University from 1919 until 1922.

ROBERTSON taught at UF until 1927, returned to Harvard to continue his studies and then became acting head of UF's English department.

Robertson was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Kappa Alpha Order and Florida Blue Key.

He is survived by his widow Alleyne Redding Robertson and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be held at Williams Thomas Funeral Home Tuesday at 11 a.m. Interment will be in Tallahassee City Cemetery.

Many major champions fell in 1974

By Alligator Services

Nearly all of 1973's major champions were felled in 1974; a couple of old champions— returned to their thrones, and some brash new ones spearheaded by Jimmy Connors, Chris Evert and the Philadelphia Flyers gave hint to long and colorful reigns of the future.

In a year that saw such proud titlists as the Miami Dolphins, UCLA, the New York Knicks, George Foreman and Australia's tennis Davis Cuppers all take their lumps, those battling, brawling Oakland A's reigned again atop the baseball world.

FOR ALI and the Celtics, the year 1974 marked a return to the glory that was theirs through most of the 1960's.

Ali, heavyweight champion of the world from 1964 until involuntarily deposed by the governing agencies in 1967, regained the title from the supposedly invincible George Foreman in one of boxing's all-time upsets on Oct. 30 in Kinshasa, Zaire, Africa.

At one point a better than 5-to-1 underdog to the 24-year-old Foreman, Ali, 32, knocked out his younger opponent in the eighth round to cap a comeback that was launched four years earlier when the Supreme Court ruled that he was within his constitutional rights to refuse induction into the military service.

THE CELTICS, who ruled the National Basketball Association in dynasty-like fashion from 1959 - 1966 and '68-'69 knocked off the defending champion, New York Knicks in the Eastern Division finals and then went on to edge the Milwaukee Bucks in a seven-game final series for the title.

The Celtics thus completed an overall rebuilding of the club with one notable exception being John Havlicek from the Bill Russell-Bob Cousy-Tommy Heinsohn title teams of the '60's. It was only fitting that the 1974 renaissance took place under the coaching of Heinsohn.

The Miami Dolphins enjoyed a bittersweet 1974, spending the first month of it winning the Super Bowl championship for the second straight year. The Dolphins were to spend the rest of 1974 sliding down.

AFTER SOMEHOW managing to get his champions into the playoffs despite a rash of injuries and the knowledge that superstars Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield would soon be departing to the fledgling and now-floundering World Football League. Dolphins Coach Don Shula saw his dream of an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl championship dashed in Oakland on a heartbreakingly last minute 28-26 loss to Oakland Raiders in an AFC playoff game.

The tennis scene saw Chris Evert dethrone Billie Jean King as the number one women's tennis player in the world. Chrissie's former fiance, Jimmy Connors also rose to the top of the heap as he became the world's top men's player.

UPI's regular season national champion, Alabama, saw their hopes for a national championship destroyed when they lost to the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame in the Orange Bowl.
