

Economic woes hit UF students studying abroad

By DREW HARWELL

Study-abroad students, beware: Street peddlers pushing tacky souvenirs won't be your only obstacle as you travel the globe this summer.

The falling value of the American dollar, an unbroken trend since 2002 that has recently become more severe, will increase the costs of international flights, food and foreign goods. However, that hasn't deterred UF students from signing up to study overseas. Turmoil in the domestic economy, brought on by factors like the subprime housing crisis and the country's large trade deficit, have influenced investors to distance themselves from dollars before a possible recession hits, UF economics professor David Denslow said.

Student Life

And as the greenback falls, many investors have looked to other currencies like the European Union's Euro for a more stable and attractive replacement.

According to an estimate from The Economist magazine, as of last week one U.S. dollar can buy only .63 Euro dollars.

Students hoping to see the world this summer may face the biggest hit, Denslow said, as costs for American travelers will have increased about 35 percent since the dollar's peak in 2002.

GAINESVILLE CITY COMMISSION

Commissioner draws heat

By KATIE GALLAGHER

 kgallagher@alligator.org

By researching the relationship between Gainesville crime and homelessness, Commissioner Ed Braddy has riled a local homeless advocate, who officially denounced Braddy in a public e-mail.

Braddy made a public request for information on the city's past crimes that involved the homeless. It was made in response to constituent concerns that a proposed one-stop homeless shelter on North Main Street would increase crime in that area, Braddy said.

The Rev. Milford Griner, who wrote the March 22 e-mail, said Braddy's actions showed prejudice. "The issue was the purpose to which the list was used," Griner said, "and I think the purpose was to spread fear around those who have misguided concern about homeless people."

He said he and other Gainesville leaders would hold a rally outside city hall before the commission's hearing on the shelter April 3.

"The issue was the purpose to which the list was used, and I think the purpose was to spread fear around those who have misguided concern about homeless people."

Rev. Milford Griner

Braddy's records report, as thick as a telephone book, shows there were 3,832 crimes in Gainesville involving homeless people — as suspects, victims or witnesses — between January 2004 and February 2008.

Albright to talk on campus

TICKETS TO FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE'S SPEECH SNATCHED UP.

Those still hoping to attend former Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's Wednesday speech are out of luck.

The 200 advance tickets to the free event were claimed by Monday morning, ensuring a full house at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Pugh Hall Ocora Room, said Graham Center for Public Service Assistant Director Michael Bowen.

Albright will speak free of charge to UF, Bowen said. Albright and former U.S. Sen. Bob Graham, the namesake of the Graham Center who invited Albright to speak, have been friends since working together in Washington, D.C.

Albright

Following membership in former President Bill Clinton's Cabinet and serving as the U.S. Permanent Representative to the United Nations, Albright became the first female U.S. Secretary of State in 1997. She is now chairwoman of the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs.

Lunch-box urination lands UF alumna in hot water

By KATIE SANDERS

Alligator Writer
ksanders@alligator.org

A first-year Orlando teacher and UF alumna is on paid leave following a sixth-grader's allegations that she told him to hold his urge to use the bathroom or urinate in a lunch box. He chose the latter.

Jameeka Chambers teaches language arts at Meadowbrook Middle School and received bachelor's degrees from UF in English and political science, according to her page on Meadowbrook's Web site.

Chambers could not be reached by phone or e-mail for comment.

Kathy Marsh, spokeswoman for Orange County Public Schools, said Chambers has had several meetings, including one on Monday, with the Orange County Public School system board that will decide whether she is at fault.

Marsh said she could not divulge details of the investigation, and the earliest date Chambers' fate would be announced is April 8, at the school board's next meeting.

Marsh said the boy and his mother broke the story to local media before telling the school about the incident on March 13.

By then, Chambers was in New Orleans for a teaching conference until March 18, when she was put on paid leave.

As for the sixth-grader, Marsh said no disciplinary action has been taken because the burden to prove what really happened is on Chambers.

Marsh said it is still unclear whether Chambers' remarks were meant to tease the 13-year-old or to be taken literally.

"I personally have never had to talk to the media about a case involving urination in a lunch box."

Kathy Marsh

Orange County Public Schools spokeswoman

Theresa Vernetson, assistant dean for student affairs at the UF College of Education, said using sarcasm with students of any age is a poor decision because humor and sarcasm are not interchangeable.

"Students are part of a classroom community, so it's probably never appropriate to be intentionally sarcastic to embarrass anyone," Vernetson said.

She said Chambers' alleged comments to her student seem like they were made out of frustration.

"Sometimes we do say things out of frustration that we wish we would have never said," Vernetson said.

Marsh has only been in her position for a year, but she said this is certainly one of the oddest cases she has ever heard.

"I personally have never had to talk to the media about a case involving urination in a lunch box," she said.

SFCC switches to Gmail; UF continues to look at options

■ SFCC WILL DELETE ITS WEBMAIL SYSTEM IN MAY.

By ILEANA MORALES

imorales@alligator.org

SFCC started its transition to replace its e-mail system with Google's Gmail on March 18, while UF is still working on a switch of its own.

Tim Nesler, SFCC's associate vice president for information technology services, said about 500 students have switched to Google's Gmail so far, and SFCC's Webmail would be deleted May 4.

UF Student Body President-elect Kevin Reilly said he couldn't estimate when a more efficient e-mail system would replace UF's WebMail until Student Government had done more research. Changing e-mail systems was announced as a Gator Party goal during spring SG elections.

Santa Fe Community College

Government members, who found that most students were more familiar with Google's system. SFCC students would still log in through SFCC's Web site and use the same domain name, he said.

Marc Hoit, UF's Office of Information Technology interim chief information officer, said research comparing Microsoft's Windows Live Mail, another replacement option, to Google's Gmail began about four weeks ago and would be ready for analysis the first week of April.

Hardware and labor for WebMail's upkeep is about $250,000 a year, Hoit said.

Though SFCC's Gmail service is provided for free, Hoit said he thinks there could be fees that might creep up over time.

UF needs to determine cost-effectiveness, perform more tests and analyze more peer institutions before choosing a system or setting a date for a switch, he said.

"If it was just turn the switch, and we're done, that'd be great," he said. "But it's not."

SFCC recruits for program

By APRIL DUDASH
Alligator Contributing Writer

Whether it's managing hospital ventilators or giving breathing therapy, respiratory care practitioners are in high demand locally.

SFCC will hold an open house today and Wednesday for its Respiratory Care Program from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. at its Northwest Campus in Room W-50.

Program Director Paul Stephan said while UF has pharmacy and nursing schools, some of SFCC's health care programs, like the respiratory one, are unusual and the public may not know they exist.

About eight stations will be set up to allow visitors to practice respiratory procedures on a mannequin and practice drawing fake blood, Stephan said.

The program, which lasts 18 months, is composed of classroom lectures, laboratory skills training and hospital vocation training. Graduates have a 100 percent job placement rate and have a starting salary of $38,000 to $44,000, Stephan said.

Applications for the program, which starts spring 2009, are due Nov. 1.

The program scheduled an early open house because they wanted to let students know what prerequisites they need in time for summer class registration, Stephan said. Out of about 65 applicants, 30 will be selected.

"You're excited, but at the same time you're nervous because you don't want to do anything wrong."

Will Winkler

SFCC Respiratory Care program graduate

About 25 students end up completing the program, Stephan said.

Will Winkler, 41, graduated from the program in 2003, and he said he remembers being anxious during his first hospital visit.

"You're excited, but at the same time you're nervous because you don't want to do anything wrong," Winkler said. He is now a full-time respiratory care practitioner at Shands at UF and a part-time teacher at SFCC.

UF leader named fellow

dswerdlow@alligator.org

When Debra Walker King came to UF in 1994, she said she was a "young kid on the block," watching the wheels of administration turn as a new English professor.

Fourteen years later, King, now associate provost for faculty development, said she plans to help UF move to the future with her latest accomplishment: a 2008-2009 American Council on Education fellowship.

She was one of 36 educators selected for the fellowship and the only one from a Florida university.

"I see it as, in many ways, a nod from some of the top leaders in academia," King said.

As part of the program, she will choose a project to work on at UF and visit another university to gain ideas about improving administration.

She said she hasn't chosen a project yet, and she hopes to discuss her prospects with Provost Janie Fouke this week. Some of her proposals include finding a place for cultural studies at a research institution like UF and increasing UF's work in the community.

UF Administration Although the fellowship requires her to visit another university next year, King said she'd still be able to fulfill her duties at UF through e-mail and regular trips to Gainesville.

King has a doctorate in interdisciplinary studies from Emory University and is also a UF associate English professor. She joined the provost's office in 2003.

"The University of Florida has really been good to me," she said. "I have been given opportunities to explore my dreams."

Japanese-constitution writer speaks

By RACHEL ARROYO
Alligator Writer

Beate Sirota Gordon was only 22 when Gen. Douglas MacArthur ordered her to draft the women's rights section of the democratic Japanese constitution.

Gordon spoke of her experience as the only woman to help write the constitution to a crowd of about 100 in Turlington Hall on Monday night.

After World War II left Japan war-torn and powerless, the American government called for a democratic constitution to replace the Meiji constitution that had been in place since about 1890.

When the Japanese government failed to effectively rewrite the constitution, MacArthur selected 20 members of his staff to form a constitutional assembly and demanded that they crank out the document within seven days, Gordon said.

"We were, in a way, amateurs from all walks of life," Gordon said. "But of course, no one was an expert on constitutions."

Despite her inexperience, Gordon said she crafted Article 24 of the Japanese constitution, which gave women equality with the opposite sex, freeing them from arranged marriages and discrimination in the workplace.

To prepare for the task, Gordon borrowed copies of constitutions from Tokyo libraries and studied the sections referring to women's rights, she said.

While the Japanese government was not satisfied with the newly drafted constitution, particularly the section on women's rights, Japan's people were happy with it, Gordon said.

The new constitution took effect in 1947 and has stood strong for 60 years.

Today, the old traditions, such as women living with their in-laws and confining themselves to the role of housewife, are not as prevalent in Japan, she said.

"All the money that women earn, they can use for themselves: fashion, iPods," Gordon said.

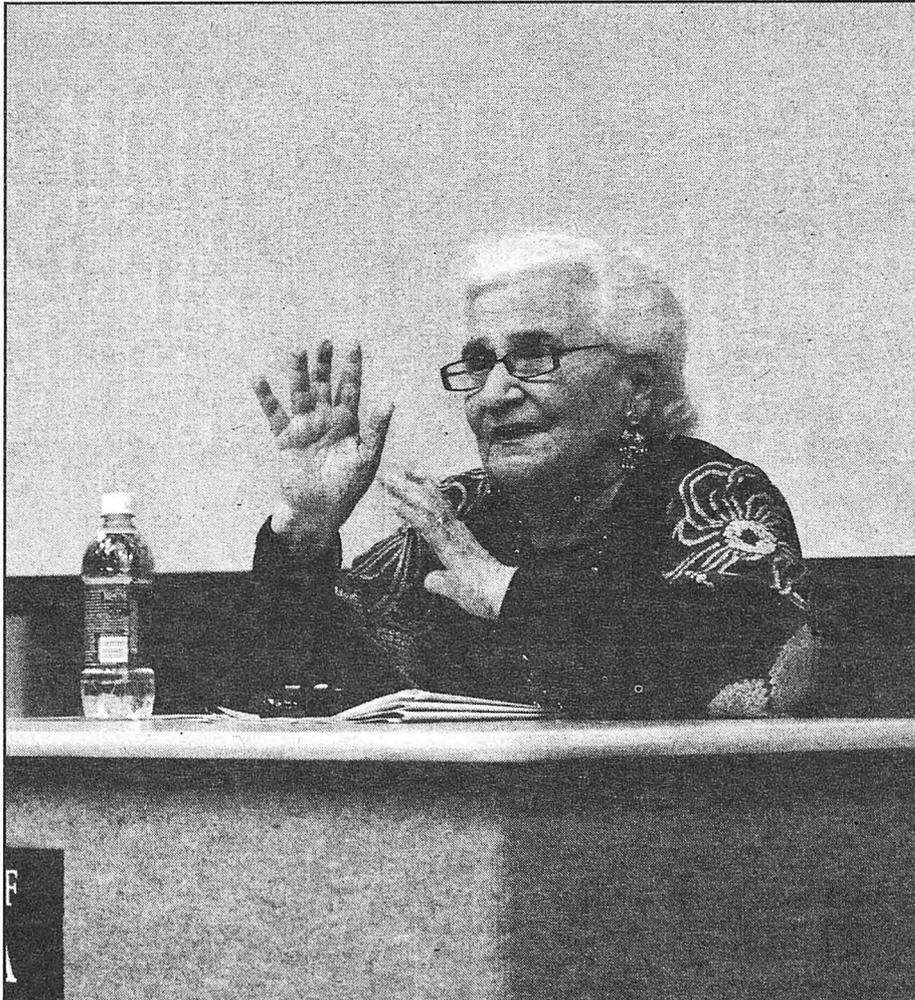

Erica Ervin, a second-year journalism student, said she was impressed by Gordon's presentation and her charisma.

"I think it's tremendous to see what women can do, not just in America but in other countries," Ervin said.

Gordon is proud of the role she played in empowering the Japanese and women around the world.

"Being able to write something that plants the seeds of democracy in another country was unbelievable," Gordon said.

Church lot sizes upped by ordinance

After over a month of controversy and meetings, city commissioners passed an ordinance 6-1 Monday night bringing Gainesville into compliance with a federal law.

In addition to fulfilling an order by the U.S. Department of Justice to comply with the Religious Land Use and Institutionalized Persons Act, the ordinance increases the minimum lot size for any new churches built in residential zones to an acre per 100 members.

Commissioner Jack Donovan, who voted against the ordinance, said he favored a more detailed breakdown of lot-size requirements for churches of less than 100 people and suggested nine possible formulas at the meeting.

The commission chose to adopt the ordinance in the interest of meeting federal requirements as quickly as possible but will continue to discuss alternative options for lot-size requirements in committee. Also to be discussed is neighborhood compatibility and regulations for churches that provide overnight shelter.

Privacy Privilege

Breaches affect many, not just candidates

When news broke last week that the passport files of presidential candidates Sens. Barack Obama, Hillary Clinton and John McCain were illegally accessed by employees at the U.S. State Department, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice quickly issued a public apology.

The curious employees are now under investigation by the State Department's inspector general, and two have been fired.

But where is the apology for the American public?

The high-profile nature of the breach certainly has Rice looking embarrassed and incompetent, but this is neither the first nor the last of this blatant disregard for the privacy of all American citizens — not just high-profile politicians.

Since January 2005, the Privacy Rights Clearinghouse has documented more than 900 individual data breaches by U.S. companies and government agencies, which together have involved more than 200 million records containing sensitive personal information, many revealing the holy grail for those seeking to steal identities: social security numbers.

And just last Thursday, it was revealed that a laptop computer containing sensitive medical information on 2,500 patients from a National Institutes of Health study was stolen — in February. The information was not encrypted, a clear violation of the government's data-security policy. More importantly, NIH officials made no public comment about the theft and did not send letters to notify the affected patients of the breach until almost a month after they knew about the theft.

This is unfortunately not a unique incident. So, as the major media outlets took the passport story and ran with it, millions of Americans who have had their private information more dangerously disregarded are left wondering why nothing has been said or done about their own — and sometimes more serious — privacy violations.

This month, the Government Accountability Office found that at least 19 of 24 agencies reviewed had experienced at least one breach that could expose people's personal information to identity theft.

With the knowledge that identity theft and fraud is one of the fastest growing crimes in the United States, costing victims over $5 billion annually, it's a mystery why the federal government is not doing more to bring attention to the risks.

A decade ago, the Identity Theft and Assumption Deterrence Act of 1998 made it a federal crime when anyone "knowingly transfers or uses, without lawful authority, a means of identification of another person with the intent to commit, or to aid or abet, any unlawful activity that constitutes a violation of Federal law, or that constitutes a felony under any applicable State or local law."

A lot has changed since then. With the widespread use of electronic databases and unsolicited credit card offers, the need for stronger federal laws that not only make identity theft a crime, but also make consumer privacy a priority, are now more than necessary.

In 2007 alone, the Identity Theft Resource Center documented 448 paper and electronic breaches, potentially affecting more than 127 million records.

And there is still no national law to protect the privacy of the information you share online.

So, as Obama calls for an investigation into how the security of the passport files of the three presidential candidates was breached, who will call for an investigation into the countless others?

We're not holding our breath on that one.

Statistics do not reveal the whole story

Thomas Mortenson, senior scholar at the Pell Institute for the Study of Opportunity in Higher Education, raised the alarm in gender bias across campuses recently.

"If you study enrollment data the way I do, the imbalance just slaps you in the face ... today there are 2.7 million more women than men in higher education," he said.

And last week, the Alligator reported on another kind of bias — that minority enrollment has remained "stagnant" over the past few years at campuses across the country. Last year, the degree breakdown was 69 percent white, 11 percent Hispanic, 6 percent black, and 6 percent Asian — indicative of the still unconquered racial "degree attainment gap."

What do these two viewpoints have in common? They both consider the statistics to indicate a societal wrong, which devalues what statistics can tell us about the world. More specifically, they make an absolutely absurd assumption: The national proportions of races and genders should be maintained at every institution.

So if 13 percent of the country is black, this logic says that 13 percent of the UF student body should be black. About 49 percent of the population is male, but 41.1 percent of UF's freshman class this year was male — so this assumption concludes that something must be wrong.

This would make the world conveniently simple: A perfect society will have a perfectly uniform distribution of demographics. But this darn world just seems determined to be complex.

I want to reemphasize that I'm not saying statistics are useless, but we absolutely must stop relying on them as open-and-shut case evidence. The fact that men are not going to college as much as women right now does not prove that there is a societal disorder. As a heterosexual male, I think it's great that there are more women at UF, though I must admit that opinion has less to do with social justice than personal interest.

Are gender and race still issues?

Of course they are. But the answer to dealing with them is not an agenda to evenly distribute race and gender ratios throughout the country — that would be racist and sexist. Towson University in Maryland and Dickinson College in Pennsylvania are actively recruiting men for their campuses — not the best students that apply regardless of gender. I don't need to see a single number to recognize that as unjust.

Maybe I'm naïve.

Perhaps striving for utopia means trading with historically black colleges so UF can achieve that 13 percent and do whatever needs to be done to have a one-to-one ratio of men and women.

Our obsession over statistics and quotas has inflamed what I think will always be a latent competition between the races and genders.

Simply put, we are beginning to seriously over think it.

"Subtle racism based on underlying assumptions" is no bogeyman — it's real and afflicts all of us both as victims and perpetrators. But it becomes a far worse monster when everyday decisions require heavy consideration of a person's gender and race, which is exactly what our census-obsession has done to us.

Bush administration's original intentions for Iraq were noble

It is fair to say that nothing in Iraq has gone as the United States planned or intended, but the war was hardly built on lies or oil. Mistakes were made, and the Bush administration is to blame, but its plan was bold and its intentions were noble.

The Bush administration targeted Iraq because it was the best candidate for immediate democratization. The population was small, the military was weak, the oil-based economy was set to prosper with the end of sanctions and the international community was unable to aid Saddam Hussein's criminal regime.

Most importantly, the administration was able to advance the weapons of mass destruction argument in soliciting international support and securing public opinion.

Had all gone well, Iraq's democracy would have flourished and the country would have rebuilt itself flush with oil investment and petrodollars. The nation would have risen to become one of the greatest in the Middle East, sparking widespread protests and instability in neighbors Iran, Syria and Lebanon. Democracy could have marched across the region and changed it forever.

Perhaps that's a far more idealistic vision than the Bush administration held, but the results of it were at the heart of the Iraq policy.

Unfortunately, the Bush administration failed and Iraq was reduced to the chaos it has endured for the past five years. We can find myriad explanations for the Bush administration's failure, but ultimately those are unimportant since we can't reverse the past.

In breaking Iraq we bought it. The problems there now are the result of our intervention and it is our responsibility to clean them up. That task will be expensive and unpleasant, yes, but it is warranted and certainly right.

To suggest that the Bush administration entered Iraq knowing that the weapons of mass destruction didn't exist is ludicrous. Why would such a large group of educated men believe that the basis of their war would simply fade away when it didn't pan out?

Matthew Young

Were they really willing to stake their careers, reputations and legacies on an argument that would ultimately be exposed as a lie?

We know that the intelligence community failed, and we know that Saddam Hussein had engaged in an elaborate campaign of deception to convince the world and, perhaps more importantly, his neighbors that Iraq still possessed the devastating weapons that kept him in power. Where is the lie?

Proposing oil as the real cause of the war in Iraq is equally absurd. The United States is importing less oil from Iraq than it was before the war began, and the price of that oil has skyrocketed. Neither the United States nor its oil companies are making money from those supposedly conquered oil reserves. If we're getting less, paying more and not making any money, how does the oil argument make any sense? Obviously, it doesn't.

The costs of the Iraq war in blood, treasure and international support will plague the United States for decades to come.

We cannot get back what we've already given up, and we shouldn't try. Instead, the United States must finish what it began in Iraq at whatever cost, lest the price of oil double or our enemies gain a new base of operations.

The Bush administration failed, but not because of lies or oil — it simply made mistakes. Looking back it's easy to say that the war wasn't worthwhile (the Bush administration would certainly agree, along with almost anyone else), but imagine where the Middle East could have been had their plan proven successful. Imagine what Iraq could have been.

Suspended fraternity leases its house to TKE

By ILEANA MORALES
Alligator Writer
imorales@alligator.org

UF's chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity, suspended in 2006 until 2011, is leasing its house on University Avenue to another fraternity.

The fraternity, known as Pike, was suspended after it was found guilty at every level of UF's judicial system for holding an unregistered party in September 2006, allegedly serving alcohol to minors and for disregarding the possible endangerment of an individual or group.

Those charges were dropped by the State Attorney's Office due to lack of evidence, but UF's suspension continues.

Tau Kappa Epsilon, known as TKE, will rent the Pike house, 1904 W. University Ave., for the 2008-2009 academic year.

TKE members will begin moving in on July 1.

Patrick Duffey, Pike's president, said he could not release the exact price of TKE's 12-month lease.

"TKE is going to be paying us a good lease rate, and we view this as an opportunity to help out some fellow fraternities," Duffey said.

He said under UF's suspension, the fraternity is not allowed to host any activities, and its property operates as any other apartment building, not as a fraternity house.

Kevin Mayeux, TKE's CEO, said UF's chapter rented Phi Gamma Delta's house on Fraternity Row for two years, but TKE would benefit from the doubled size of Pike's house.

Mayeux said the chapter has 100 members, up from the 30 it claimed in 2003, and this house will allow more meeting space. The house is in a "highly-visible" location and conveniently across from Ben Hill Griffin Stadium, he added.

"TKE is going to be paying us a good lease rate, and we view this as an opportunity to help out some fellow fraternities."

Patrick Duffey
Pike's president

Mayeux added that the chapter is looking for locations to build its own house in 2010.

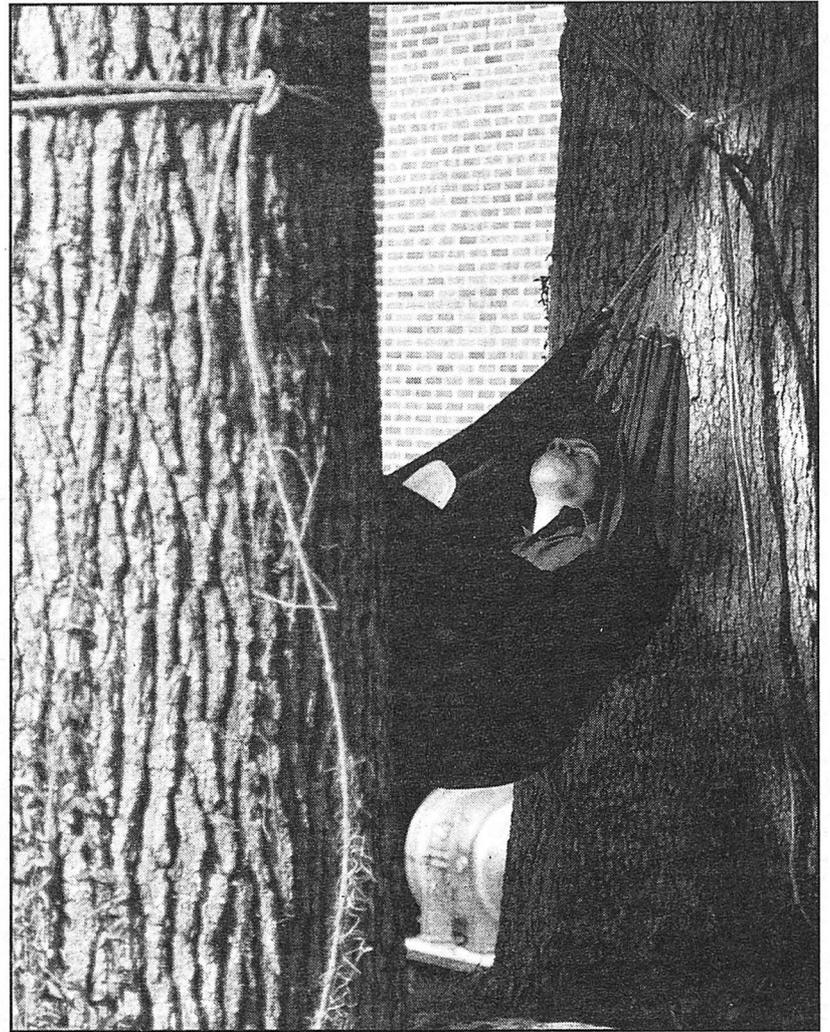

Duffey said Pike is unsure about its own property plans after TKE's lease expires.

The fraternity's suspension is being challenged before the Florida First District Court of Appeal today at 2 p.m. in Tallahassee.

Duffey said Pike would challenge the way UF handled the fraternity's investigation and punishment.

"It's about making sure we don't check our constitutional rights at the gates of UF," Duffey said.

UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes said she couldn't comment until after today's hearing.

Breed-banning proposal unlikely to affect local dog owners

■ COUNTY LEADERS SAY CURRENT LAWS EFFECTIVE.

By WILL PAFFORD
Alligator Writer
wpafford@alligator.org

Although a new state bill may give local governments the power to ban certain breeds of dogs, local officials say they have not seen evidence that would support banning certain breeds in Alachua County.

Florida House Bill 101, which has been proposed in Tallahassee, would lift an 18-year-long restriction banning local governments from prohibiting their residents from owning "dangerous dogs" based on breed.

Florida House Rep. Perry Thurston, D-Plantation, who sponsored the bill, said it just gives local governments the authority to ban certain dogs but does not force them to.

"It gives them a complete arsenal to protect the citizens," he said. "Whatever authorities want to do, they should have the authority to do it."

Currently Florida, Texas, California, New York and eight other states do not allow breedspecific legislation.

Gainesville defers to the decisions of the Alachua County Commission for dangerous animal law.

"I personally do not support, just from my own standpoint, banning dogs by breed," County Commissioner Paula DeLaney said.

DeLaney said while the commission would have the ability to get involved, she has not seen any evidence that certain breeds of dogs are more dangerous than others. In addition, Alachua County already has laws in place to deal with dangerous pets, she said.

Many animal specialists and owners agree that current local laws based on the behavior of individual dogs are more effective in protecting people from danger.

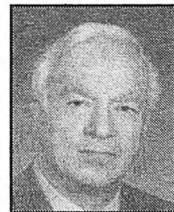

Lin Santerfeit, an investigator for Alachua County Animal Services, said the laws in Alachua County are adequate.

According to the Alachua County Animal Services Ordinance, a dog is considered dangerous when it has attacked a human, injured or killed a companion animal, been used for dog fighting or chased a human unprovoked.

Once a dog is considered dangerous, the dog must wear a collar indicating it is a threat, and the owner must post signs on the property to warn others.

"The law is already there," said Jude Piccola, president of the Society to Protect Animal Young-Legislation, Education, Enforcement Inc. in Ft. Myers. "Ban the deed, not the breed."

Donovan

City Commissioner Jack Donovan was on the public safety committee two years ago when the city investigated dangerous dogs and proposed rules for dog owners.

Donovan said that most of the time, when evaluating why a dog is dangerous, "owner misbehavior seems to be the first place you go."

He said he has not seen any data to suggest one breed of dog is more dangerous than another.

Santerfeit also said it is not possible to tell if a dog is dangerous based on its breed.

"There is some really good in every breed, and there is some really bad in every breed," she said.

However, according to a study conducted by Animal People, an online publication about animals, pit bull terrier is the deadliest breed based on newspaper reports from 1982-2006.

According to a September 2000 study by the Centers for Disease Control, while other breeds have fatally attacked people, rottweilers and pit bulls were responsible for 67 percent of dog bite-related human fatalities in America between 1997 and 1998.

A report published by the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association concluded that although it appears pit bulls and rottweilers are more deadly to humans, determining a dog's breed is usually difficult.

Therefore, even if a ban were passed, it could be difficult to enforce.

Kenneth Phillips is a personal injury lawyer based in Beverly Hills, Calif., who specializes in national dog bite laws.

Phillips said that although the Florida bill would not require any local government to ban dogs by breed, governments that do are addressing the problem short-sightedly.

"It is a knee-jerk reaction to a problem that needs a broader solution," he said.

Banning a breed of dog to combat dog attacks is like trying to reduce gun crime by banning all Smith & Wesson firearms, he said.

Miami-Dade County is the only Florida county with a breed-specific ban, which prohibits pit bulls. The ban was instituted before local governments were prevented from doing so.

Thurston said he created the bill after a woman complained to her homeowner's association that she was scared to walk in her neighborhood because of loose dogs.

"You got old ladies afraid to walk around," he said.

Alachua County resident Jay Jolicouer, who owns a Labrador retriever, said it's not fair to determine if a dog is dangerous based on its breed or size.

"I've been bitten by four dogs," Jolicouer said, "three poodles and a mutt."

More students sign up for study abroad

ordinator Susanne Hill said that due to the dollar's decline, study abroad programs across the country, including UF's, have gotten pricier.

Some of UF's trips, which range from about $2,800 to about $5,800, now cost as much as $500 more than they did last year.

"Before you travel, try and make friends with European students here who are enjoying the good life and see if they can treat you to lunch."

UF economics professor

Independent programs outside of the university, which about 25 percent of UF's study abroad students attend, have also said their upcoming fall trips will feature higher price tags.

Still, the price increases haven't negatively impacted UF's study abroad programs, Hill said.

In fact, Hill said, more students applied for this summer's trips than last year's — about 1,200 students in total.

UF advertising junior Jennifer Meyerson, who will be visiting Greece and Spain this summer, said the opportunities are worth the costs.

"I know I'll be traveling with some really amazing professors who are really talented," Meyerson said. "I know I'll learn a lot more from them there than when I'm on campus. I think it's worth it."

In the short term, Denslow had little advice for world travelers other than to save money.

"Before you travel," he said, "try and make friends with European students here who are enjoying the good life and see if they can treat you to lunch."

Braddy: Records meant to help constituents

In addition, there were 1,116 trespassing warnings, 18 campsites broken up, 30 panhandling incidents and 1,226 registered homeless felons.

Griner said he was most concerned with Braddy's use of a statistic that there are more than 1,000 homeless felons in Gainesville.

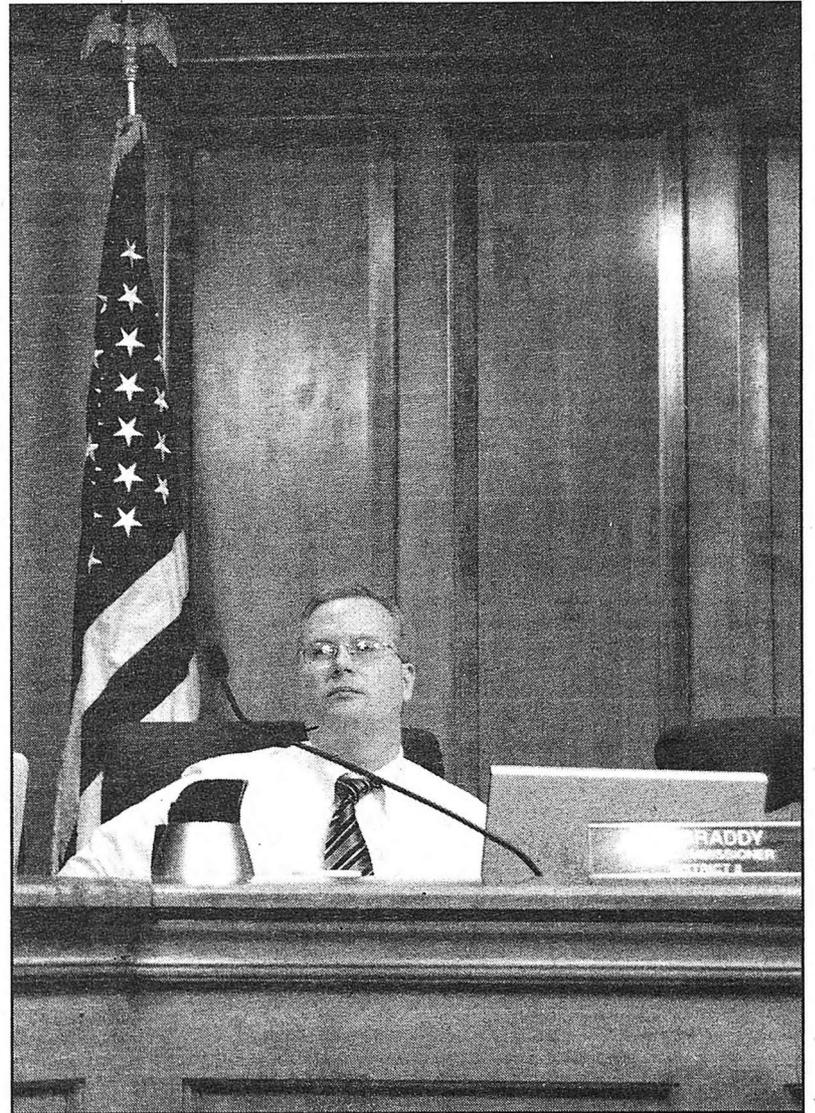

Local News "To me, that's fear-mongering," he said.

Though he did not deny the accuracy of the number, Griner said many of the felonies were committed long ago or were for non-violent crimes and compared them to Braddy's own drunken-driving arrest in 2006.

Braddy said it's still too early to draw conclusions from the reports but added that they should be in a more readable format by the April 3 hearing.

Though he does not want the shelter to be built in its proposed location, Braddy said his intention in requesting the documents was to find information his constituents asked for, he said.

"They're using the loaded terms," he said of Griner and other homeless advocates. "'Fear-mongering.' 'Hate the homeless.' They're the ones using them. I'm not."

Renewed Gators travel to Arizona St.

■ A UF WIN WOULD SEND THE GATORS TO THE NIT SEMIFINALS IN NEW YORK.

How much can one team grow in a week? Since suffering an embarrassing loss to Alabama in the first round of the Southeastern Conference tournament, the Gators have turned a complete 180 in just a matter of days.

It began when the young players were shunned by their own coach, kicked out of their practice facility, stripped of their apparel and told to start over.

It was evident in the intense practices, which started just a day after the loss and continued into Sunday, when the world was watching the NCAA Tournament selection show — something the Gators knew they would miss.

"We're still playing for a championship."

It was there when the National Invitation Tournament selection committee didn't think UF was worthy of a No. 1 seed in the No. 2 tournament.

It was still there when the team's first home game against San Diego State didn't draw enough fans to fill half the arena.

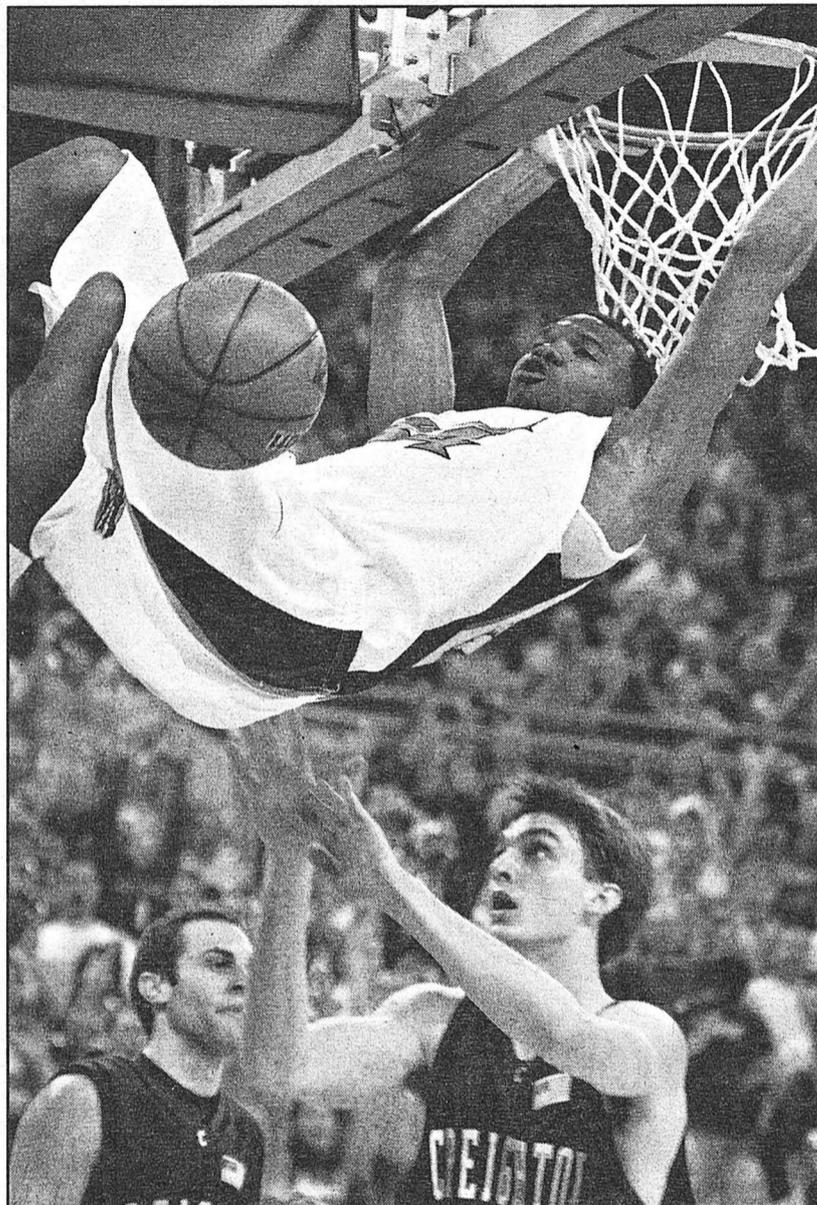

But then something happened. We may never know what it was.

The Gators have won their first two games by an average of 26 points, and one week after all this began UF is riding high.

"We're still playing for a championship," guard Jai Lucas said. "We're going to play like it."

In the last two games, UF has crushed two up-start programs. It started with a 73-49 thrashing of San Diego State, a 20-win team that never stood a chance.

UF squeaks past FGCU to move on

Sometimes it just feels good to survive and live to play another day.

That's the UF mentality after a 60-55 escape at home Monday against a Florida Gulf Coast team that it defeated by 26 back in December.

Despite leading by 14 with 13:34 left in the game, it took a Marshaé Dotson offensive rebound with 19 seconds left to secure the Gators' victory.

"I was just sitting there watching, like, 'Oh, please grab that ball because we needed that rebound,'" said sophomore guard Jennifer Mossor, who finished with a team-high 14 points but missed the shot that led to Dotson's rebound. "That was huge for us."

Women's Basketball

After the key rebound, junior guard Sha Brooks iced the game with two free-throws that put UF (19-13) up by 5 with 17 seconds remaining. UF advances to play North Carolina State in a third-round National Invitation Tournament matchup in Raleigh, N.C. on Thursday. The Gators improved to 10-3 in games decided by 6 points or less on a night when they shot 1 of 17, or 5.9 percent, from behind the 3-point line.

Florida Gulf Coast (22-9) played much differently than the team that allowed 6-foot-3 Aneika Henry to score 17 points during the regular-season matchup. Henry played just nine minutes Monday and scored only 2 points before fouling out with 6:08 to play.

"You have to give them some credit for creating those situations where (Henry) may or may not have fouled," UF coach Amanda Butler said. "It's tough for Aneika to defend a kid that's 5'8", 5'9", 5'10", just as it's tough for one of their kids to defend her on the low block. I thought that was the great adjustment from first game to this game. We weren't as able to get the ball as easily inside to Aneika."

Women's team makes more progress than men's

Hey ladies, you know the times when you give your guy "the look" after he says something, ahem, unintelligent?

Hey fellas, you know those moments when you shove your toes, feet, ankles and lower calves down your mouth into your esophagus — and then immediately realize the craziness of what you said?

Yup, I've been there, too. And I'm about to go there again right now.

The UF women's basketball team has made more progress than the men's basketball team this season.

This is not a test of your Emergency UF Sports Broadcast System.

There are no hidden messages, and I have not been hypnotized by any of the women's hoops squad.

Last season, I covered these same women as they were bowled over almost every game. Sometimes, it was like watching a team from Division II.

While Joakim Noah was off saying how his teammates were going to party for weeks and not do homework, the women were still coming to grips with the firing of Carolyn Peck and a pathetic 9-22 season.

But this season, from start to finish, the women have improved more than the men have. In fact, the women may have been closer to making the NCAA Tournament than the men were.

As much as bigger, stronger teams have outmuscled the men all season, if

HARVIN INJURED

■ UF wide receiver Percy Harvin has a heel injury that could cause him to miss the rest of spring practice, coach Urban Meyer said Monday. "He has had issues with his heel," Meyer said. "He's in a boot right now. It's obviously not going to affect the fall." Meyer added that it is a lingering injury. "He has had this now for a year and a half. We have treated it as tendinitis, but I think it might be something more than that."

Sun Devils pose toughest NIT challenge yet for UF

Then came Creighton, a squad that has appeared in the NCAA Tournament 16 times, including seven of the last nine years. UF dominated the Bluejays 82-54.

"I feel just being around the guys there's a different air and different spirit about the whole team," Lucas said. "We're just coming out and competing now."

Whether or not UF has truly turned things will be tested when the Gators play Arizona State on Tuesday at 9 p.m.

The Sun Devils were the main focus of this year's NCAA Tournament snub discussion. Arizona State enters tonight's contest with a 21-12 record and features a resume with wins against Big Dance participants Stanford and Southern Cal, and two victories against Arizona.

Many experts expressed concern over how Arizona State could be left out of the field while Arizona, who lost twice to the Sun Devils, was let in. In addition, the Sun Devils had a better conference record than their in-state rivals.

While this debate rages in the desert, the Gators must focus on their toughest opponent to date. On paper, Arizona State might be the strongest team in the NIT standing between UF and a trip to New York.

"That's going to be a heck of a game," center Marreese Speights said. "That's a good team, we're a good team — so we're just gonna go at it."

Speights said he understands things are about to get a lot harder. To this point, UF has played teams that are good but miles short of great.

Arizona State has defeated elite teams this season, and even though the team failed to make the NCAA Tournament it represents the type of competition UF would have faced if the Gators had made it through.

"We would like to win by 30, but we know it's not going to happen," Speights said.

So far, Arizona State has won its two NIT games by double digits, defeating Alabama State 64-53 and Southern Illinois 65-51.

of Division I play but could not pull off the upset Monday

"We are a much different team now [as opposed to December]," Florida Gulf Coast coach Karl Smesko said. "We still have lapses in play that were too long to win the game. But the first time we played, our lapses were for much longer periods of time. Florida is too good to make too many mistakes."

UF came out rusty in its first game after a 17-day layoff and trailed by as many as 7 early. But Florida Gulf Coast went without a field goal for a nine-minute stretch from the late part of the first half through the beginning of the second, allowing the Gators to build a double-digit advantage.

Questionable foul calls abounded Monday night and forced Butler to shuffle her lineup on many occasions. Dotson played just 21 minutes, including only 9 of the opening 20 after picking up two first-half fouls. Butler used 5-foot-7 Kim Critton as a post player, and Critton responded with 5 points and seven rebounds in 15 minutes of play.

Butler

all that matters is UF advanced and will play again Thursday.

"You don't get any credit for losing pretty or losing close," Butler said. "Just get the win and get ready for that next one no matter what today's game looked like."

Still, Florida Gulf Coast made a furious late-game comeback, using a 15-6 run to cut the lead to 54-53 with 2:25 remaining. Back-to-back jumpshots by Depree Bowden and Sharielle Smith put the Gators up 5 with 1:20 to go before the final possessions played out.

But this is the postseason, and you want to talk about being undersized, look at the women.

Monday night, they didn't even start one player over 6 feet tall.

And let's not even compare the toughness. Marshae Dotson has gotten more bruises in one game than Marreese Speights has had all season.

"From the beginning of the season to the end of the season, that's certainly improved," UF coach Amanda Butler said. "Probably, if there's one aspect of basketball that we've talked about more than anything this year, it's toughness. The toughest teams are the ones that can endure and succeed in a season that starts in October and hopefully goes to April."

The women at least made a show of it in the SEC Tournament, handily defeating South Carolina — a team they had two close games with in the regular season. The men, on the other hand, looked like a Division II team against Alabama — a team they beat up on in the regular season — and were embarrassed.

Those are two teams on different paths and different maturity levels.

UF didn't play well Monday night in the WNIT.

But the difference is, up by just 3 with 1:20 left, senior Depree Bowden made a gutsy jumper to bring the lead to 5. I haven't seen many of those shots from the men this season.

Then, after Florida Gulf Coast had cut the lead to 3 again, Dotson tipped the ball three times among a group of opponents and got the rebound. When was the last time the men got a rebound like that?

Let me know when you think of something.

I'll probably have an answer for you in about seven months when the next season starts.
