Machens seek Iran-U.S. team research

By THOMAS STEWART

While UF President Bernie Machen was able to let loose and lose the tie, his wife, Chris, complained she had to don a head scarf during the couple's excursion to Iran in November.

The Machens took the stage Tuesday night in UF's Pugh Hall Ocora in front of about 60 people to discuss their recent trip, which was part of an effort to foster science research exchange between the U.S. and Iran.

On Campus Machen was one of six university presidents selected to visit Iranian universities in a delegation organized by the Association of American Universities.

Other universities involved included Cornell University and the University of California, Davis. Most of the travel costs were picked up by the Richard Lounsbery Foundation.

Machen told the audience he hopes his trip will encourage more Iranian students to apply to UF.

"Ultimately, what (the trip) means for us is faculty and students should come here and go there," he said after the speech. "There should be a free flow." However, he said, strict U.S. visa policies would have to change in order for that to happen.

Machen said he is also looking forward to UF collaborating with Iranian researchers.

He said he is working with Dennis Steindler, executive director of UF's McKnight Brain Institute

SPECIAL REPORT

People on the Streets: Tent City shelters homeless

Editor's Note: This story is the second of a two-part series in which Staff Writer Hunter Sizemore reports alongside Gainesville's homeless.

The Corner of Southeast First Street and Southeast Second Avenue, Saturday 11:50 p.m.

The downtown clubs are swinging. Women wearing mini-dresses move briskly from the warmth of one club to the next. Billy Hunt and Matt, both homeless, stroll toward the St. Francis House shelter, watching.

"I know lust is a sin Lord, but sometimes they make it so hard," Matt said, holding his head back and staring at the sky.

Bo Diddley Community Plaza, Saturday 11:05, 45 minutes earlier

Fire of God Ministries' refurbished school bus makes a stop on the south side of Bo Diddley Community Plaza, dropping off people the church has just fed.

A dozen people, nearly all of them homeless, get off the bus.

"It's hard just being a human and homeless."

Loretta Herring
 Homeless woman

Loretta Herring, 57, is among them.

Many of those who stay on are headed to shelters where they will spend the night. Herring, who has been homeless for seven years, doesn't know where she will sleep tonight and asks those around her if they know of a nearby shelter.

She wears all black, clean clothes, a scarf, and carries several bags of possessions. Rhinestone-rimmed sunglasses shade her eyes, even though the only light is from scattered street lamps.

Being a homeless woman may be difficult, but Herring has sympathy for all people in her situation, she said.

"It's hard just being a human and homeless," she said.

Herring said she is waiting for money from family in California so she can join them. She has waited for years.

A small group of homeless and needy gather at a plaza bench.

They keep an eye on their watches while chatting, smoking cigarettes and eating the take-home that Fire of God hands out after church service.

There is an 11:30 curfew for the plaza and police usually enforce it strictly.

Four police officers ride by on horseback and the group breaks up, heading in different directions. Two of them, Billy Hunt and Matt, walk toward St. Francis House.

St. Francis House, Saturday 11:45 p.m.

Matt splits off to visit the Foodmax convenience store while Hunt continues to St. Francis House.

Hunt was recently released from jail after being transferred

Alligator bites off part of man's hand

LAKE WORTH, Fla. (AP) — An alligator bit off part of a man's hand at a park in Palm Beach County Tuesday afternoon.

Palm Beach County Fire Rescue workers said the attack happened Tuesday at 1 p.m. near John Prince Memorial Park.

He was flown by helicopter to a trauma center for treatment.

The man's injuries are not life-threatening. Authorities are searching for the alligator.

Christian groups win battle

After an 18-month legal battle with a Christian student group, UF will allow student organizations registered with the university to choose members and award leadership positions based on religion.

Beta Upsilon Chi, or BYX, which bills itself as a Christian fraternity, filed suit in July of 2007 because it wanted to limit membership to Christians, which violated UF's nondiscrimination policy for registered student groups.

However, On Jan. 15, UF changed the policy and sent letters to three student groups that had been denied the ability to register.

In addition to BYX, UF addressed Gator Christian Life and Kappa Upsilon Chi, another Christian fraternity that hasn't registered this semester, according to UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes. UF also filed a motion to dismiss the suit brought by BYX, Sikes said.

The last action in the case occurred in December, when it went before the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. A ruling has not been issued yet.

Sweeper causes oil spill

Several gallons of oil were spilled in front of Smathers Library early Tuesday morning.

"A street sweeper broke during the night around 4 a.m.," said Reggie Jacobs, a UF Physical Plant Division employee who helped clean the spill.

UF's spokesman Steve Orlando said the spill was caused from a hydraulic leak.

The oil ran on the sidewalk and road between UF's Peabody Hall and Plaza of the Americas. It did not spread to any sewage drains or grass, Orlando said.

According to Jacobs, two dump truck loads of sand were brought in to absorb and clean up the oil. Cleanup began at 7 a.m. and continued through the afternoon, he said.

Orlando said once oil was absorbed by the sand, it was placed into four 55-gallon drums and deposited at UF's Department of Health and Safety.

First 'green' fire rescue station opens in Gainesville

By ASHLEY ROSS
Alligator Writer

Featuring waterless urinals and a natural gas power generator, Florida's first environmentally friendly fire station opened in Gainesville Tuesday.

A ribbon cutting was held at the new facility, where about 50 people, including city commissioners, firefighters and the public, gathered to see what the new station had to offer.

The 5,521-square-foot station was about 5 percent more expensive than a non-green facility, according to Bryan Schneider, project coordinator.

However, it was completed under the $1.8 million budget and will ultimately save more money in energy costs.

"Green is the only way to go," said Charlie Jackson, Alachua

"Green is the only way to go."

Charlie Jackson
Alachua County facilities manager

County facilities manager.

The station's green features include water-conserving dual-flush toilets, waterless urinals, solar panels for heating water and an energy efficient heating, venting and air conditioning system.

Builders also tried to have minimal environmental impact.

More than 63 percent of construction waste was recycled, said Ivan Oelrich, general contractor. Recycling cost less than sending the waste to landfills, he added.

Even the building's peachy paint color was chosen for its low sunlight reflection, making it cooler inside.

The idea for the station originated in 2005 and construction started in 2008. Schneider said plans are in progress to renovate two other Gainesville stations, but the city won't begin construction until the economy picks back up.

Fire Chief Ed Bailey said the fire station will serve the environment and benefit the public.

"(This station) will have two units and will allow better responsive time to fires," he said.

FBI to meet with Machen, other university presidents about Iran trip to bring Iranian faculty and students to the institute.

"The one area that I looked at and we're working on right now is stem cell research," he said.

"They're not on the same restrictions as our country is," he said. "Our government restricts the kind of stem cell research we do."

Machen also mentioned that the FBI has taken an interest in the trip. The six university presidents will be meeting with the agency next week in Washington, he said, to share their experiences.

During his speech, Machen said he talked with students, faculty and administrators from three universities in Tehran.

He said the students were bright, spoke English well and were not as isolated from the rest of the world as he had imagined.

Every dorm room he visited was wired with the Internet, and students were browsing the same type of content as their peers in the U.S., he said.

Machen also said many of the professors were not shy about criticizing Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, Iran's president.

"The intellectuals with whom we interacted quickly separated themselves from their president," he said.

"We had a lot of common conversation at that point in time about a people that are not in sync with their president," he said. "And we could relate to that."

There were some things Machen couldn't quite relate to, though.

"One thing I can tell you is there's no alcohol in Iran," he said. "I learned to like that no-alcohol beer, that's about the best you can do."

People on the Streets

Residents estimate the homeless 'city' is comprised of 40 to 45 tents to Gainesville from Polk County on Dec. 31, according to a Polk County police report.

He was released with no money and no way home.

Because it isn't yet below 45 degrees the Cold Nights Shelter program is not in effect and it takes permission from the police to get into one of the shelters.

Hunt spots a man lying on the ground on a side street next to St. Francis House. He is wrapped in a sleeping bag and lying with his head against the wheel of a bike.

When asked if it is a safe place to sleep, the man on the ground replies, "You see where I'm sleeping don't you?"

But Hunt isn't convinced. He'd rather walk around Gainesville all night than have another run-in with the police, he said.

Special Report

After wandering the nearby neighborhood, Hunt considers searching for Tent City, a homeless community in a nearby patch of woods.

He doesn't know exactly where it is. People who live there usually don't talk about its location.

Just outside Tent City, Sunday 12:30 a.m.

As Hunt wanders toward Tent City, he tries to recall second-hand descriptions of how to get there.

A man on a bicycle rides up and asks Hunt if he is looking for Tent City.

His name is Rod. He says God sent him to live in Tent City to help others like himself.

"When it's cold I won't let nobody sleep on the ground," he said. "Now in the summertime, that's a different story."

Rod offers an extra tent, and Hunt accepts.

Because Tent City has no power, the camp is dim, illuminated only by sporadic campfires.

"Remember that thing about how there are whole different worlds out there?" Billy asked while entering Tent City, "This is one of them."

Residents estimate between 40 and 45 tents make up the city, but the people change from one day to the next. Rod's extra tent is a red, black and tan Sports Dome tent, and it easily fits two people

As Hunt falls asleep, a nearby woman shouts wildly while a man's low, mumbling voice fills in her silences. Hunt guesses that she caught her man cheating.

A clear sentence surfaces: "I want you out of my life!"

Hunt chuckled.

"That's gotta be it," he said.

"The ten year plan to end homelessness is out of sight, out of mind. There are some of us out here who do want to get on their feet."

Anthony Davis
Homeless man

Tent City, Sunday 8:30 a.m.

Hunt wakes up and rummages through his plastic grocery bags, retrieving a tube of toothpaste and a toothbrush.

He donated plasma the day before to get $35 for necessities: hygiene products and packs of cigarettes, brand 308.

Going a day without brushing his teeth isn't an option, Hunt said.

Nearby is a nearly empty water jug and small bottles of shampoo and conditioner sitting on a wet, wooden clock face. The items belong to Rod.

He has left for the morning and Hunt decides to explore tent city.

Some of the camps are simple, just tents sitting alongside fire pits. Others are more elaborate.

Canvases stretched between trees create walls and give privacy to some of the sites. Found art hangs everywhere. At one site, Christmas ornaments dangle from nets.

Two men built a giant dream catcher with rope above a tent. Al, who helped construct it, said it was done out of boredom.

Like most others in tent city, Al wants to find work, but can't, he said.

He said many homeless are plagued by criminal records and no money for a driver's licenses, which makes finding even low-paying jobs nearly impossible.

Starbucks 201 SE 1st St. Sunday 10 a.m.

Hunt decided he wanted a cup of coffee.

On his way, he stopped by St. Francis House and ran into an old friend, Anthony Davis. Davis suggested Starbucks because of the cheap refills.

They sit at an outside table with their coffee and cigarettes to chat.

"The ten year plan to end homelessness is out of sight, out of mind," Davis said. "There are some of us out here who do want to get on their feet."

Spliff Seizure

Local weed grow-op takes a hit

Straight out of a scene from “Pineapple Express,” local law enforcement and federal agents seized more than $800,000 worth of marijuana plants in Williston.

When news of the bust hit North Central Florida, the Editorial Board can only imagine area pot smokers held their collective breath — quickly texting their dealers to assess what this meant for future orders.

Located in an underground grow house mere miles south of UF, authorities seized nearly 200 pot plants discovered 10 feet beneath a barn on Monday.

What truly epitomized the sophistication of the scheme was the trap door covered in hay designed to ward off any suspicion of illegal activity.

We wish the Alligator building could magically disguise itself at night so work could get done on time without having to deal with uninvited mystery guests banging on our door.

According to an article in the Gainesville Sun, the operation may have started as far back as 2005, when a fire brought officials to the property to assess the situation. Apparently the person who spearheaded the operation told the officers at the time that he was burning insulation with hopes of constructing a storm bunker for his family.

The Editorial Board confesses such an operation is quite the impressive feat. On top of performing the day-to-day diligence of maintaining the plants, keeping the grow house a secret must have been especially challenging.

Heck, we have trouble just keeping petty newsroom gossip to ourselves.

Tequila Tax?

Arguably one of the finest traditions of The Gator Nation, the relocation of The World’s Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party should not be taken lightly.

While the Editorial Board understands Gainesville’s desire to crack down on underage drinking, the proposal to eliminate the rite-of-passage jaunt to Jacksonville is not the answer.

We suggest you leave the UF-Georgia game alone and worry about what takes place in our city — not what happens one weekend in October over an hour’s drive away.

One reasonable solution to cut down on drinking for students of all ages would be to impose the suggested 5-cent alcohol tax at local bars.

The City of Gainesville could then pat itself on the back for at least appearing to take a stance against underage drinkers while also collecting a pretty penny to pad its budget.

If imposed, such a tax would reap the city monetary benefits at the upwards of $10 million to $12 million per year — not exactly chump change.

The Editorial Board offers our support for the tax, as it would hardly drain the pockets of even UF’s biggest drinkers. Not to mention the fact the proposed tax would provide funding for police salaries, DUI prevention and alcohol education.

We may not be good at math, but we are pretty sure a round of five beers at Gator City would only cost a quarter more — one less gumball at the supermarket.

On second thought, do they even make those anymore?

Host’s dissent harms bipartisanship

A week into his term, President Barack Obama faces stark opposition while trying feverishly to gain bipartisan support.

His most outspoken dissenter comes in the form of blowhard radio host Rush Limbaugh. After years of defending President George W. Bush, Limbaugh is eager to go on the attack — rooting for Obama’s failure.

Stating, “I hope he fails” on day one of Obama’s presidency, Limbaugh used his radio talk show as a soapbox on which to rather proudly proclaim that he would rather see the country fall apart than leave it in the hands of a left-wing president.

Limbaugh’s dissent over Obama’s call for bipartisan support within Congress is nothing more than an attempt to drive a wedge between the two parties. He has made it clear that he has his own objectives in mind, and if the country has to fall in order for his objectives to be met, so be it.

This is not a man to be taken lightly. An honorary member of Congress, Limbaugh has a great deal of influence within the GOP. With thousands of listeners tuning into his nationally syndicated radio show, Obama may have met his match in someone so outrageously drawn to bipartisan bickering.

We cannot forget that this is the same man who accused Michael J. Fox of exaggerating the effects of Parkinson’s disease in order to gain support for stem cell research. Limbaugh unabashedly revels in the attention that the media give his outlandish comments, so why are they adding fuel to the fire?

There has to be more going on in the world right now than some pompous old man pledging his disloyalty to our current president’s policies.

Naudia Jawad
letters@alligator.org

Nevertheless, it is one thing to disagree with the president — Obama himself was, along with many others, against Bush’s troop surge during the Iraq War.

We have the right to speak out when we think our president is steering us in the wrong direction. However, opposition is not the same as hoping for failure; Obama’s failure would mean our failure.

Even if Limbaugh wants to see the policies fail, and not the man behind them, then the implications of such a failure are massive. If the country goes down, we’re all going down with it whether we like it or not.

It is justifiable and very American to be skeptical of our president, and while Limbaugh’s comments can be seen as selfishly unpatriotic, they do illustrate that we still have the freedom to express dissent. If anything, Limbaugh is displaying our Constitutional right of free speech.

We also have the liberty of turning the radio switch to “off” when we hear Limbaugh’s smug prattle come on air.

A failing economy, terrorists running amok and wars going on for years and years — that is what we can look forward to if Limbaugh is granted his wish for Obama’s failure. A lack of success by the new administration will certainly teach us all a lesson for voting “that one” into office.

Just don’t think for a moment Limbaugh won’t be there to tell us he was right if it happens.

Budget cuts limit recruitment

In Monday's edition of the Alligator, UF spokesman Steven Orlando was reported as saying, "Although budget cuts forced UF to reduce undergraduate enrollment, graduate schools are not affected."

The article goes on to say that grants and research funding do not support UF's graduate schools. While graduate school acceptance and enrollment may not be threatened by past and future budget cuts, the ability of the departments to entice top candidates to the university is greatly limited without the availability of decently-paid stipends, flexible assistantships, etc.

Moreover, I would also consider the merging of departments and the suspension or elimination of entire graduate programs (i.e. foreign languages or philosophy) as major effects on the graduate schools.

What is the likelihood of attracting the best potential candidates to an academic institution, a former bastion of intellectualism, when productivity is measured only by financial gains?

I saw today's issue of the Alligator at work. I have to ask, are you proud of the front-page photo? Did someone at the Alligator get off on publishing it? Why are you people at the Alligator constantly harassing Christians? That seems to be a popular pastime for many people these days.

If Preacher J.K. were Muslim, would the photo ever have been taken, much less published? A lot of people are fearful of Muslims, is one reason.

If J.K. had been a Krishna, would that photo be in the paper? If J.K. was Buddhist, would you have taken the trouble to allow it to be printed? If he were a Wiccan, would anyone have ever seen the photo? If J.K. were one of the too many 'Obama freaks' around here, would such a photo grace the front page of the Alligator?

Again I ask, why do you do such things, and by all appearances, only toward Christians? Are you lacking in worthy articles or photos to put in your paper, or was the Alligator photographer just having a dull day? It's funny that your paper sometimes provides listings of some churches in Gainesville that one can attend on Sunday, yet you'll publish a trashy photo like that. Seems to me like a double standard.

You people have no respect, especially it seems for Christians, even though you claim you value freedom of religion. I also can't help but wonder if Scott Paterson would have flipped off Tim Tebow had he had the chance, Tebow being the outspoken Christian and missionary that he is.

Another thing you need to consider is that children can see the front page of the Alligator at various places where it is distributed. I can just hear a 5-year-old girl asking, "Mommy, what's that man doing with his finger?"

Unless Comrade Obama and his "communist democrap goons" take away our freedom of religion, among other freedoms, we still have such.

I don't know J.K. personally, but J.K. has the freedom to preach about the ills and abomination and immorality of homosexual behavior, whether students or professors or administration like it or not. He may not deliver the message gently or quietly, but it's getting out.

Obviously there are liberal professors at UF who will only condone premarital or illicit sexual behavior of any sort, but not the moral, upstanding, wait-until-marriage, one man and one woman type. Strange, I've never seen any articles in the Alligator about the dangers of STDs or AIDS or the emotional or spiritual consequences of sex of any sort outside of marriage. Perhaps I've missed them.

Most people are ignorant; they know homosexuality does involve sex in some fashion. It's not just about attraction, emotions and companionship.

Paterson and Brett Passa are like others: they have to show their butts. If they don't want to hear what J.K. is saying, they should avoid him instead of showing off and making asses of themselves.

If they can't handle what he says, that God himself through the Holy Bible does speak out against not just homosexual perversion but other perversion as well. Like all people, they have legs, they can walk some other direction.

Paterson and Passa could well pull their foolish, asinine stunts on some Christian that is not yet fully sanctified and has little patience or "tolerance" for such stunts, and they could wind up on the wrong end of someone's fist.

Good thing it wasn't me who Paterson flipped off, or me having to deal with such an untalented artist like Passa. In their cases, sometimes people need some sense knocked into them. I, for one, am tired of the anti-Christian agendas and attitudes running amok in this country.

Again, we know there are professors at UF (as well as other universities and community colleges) that absolutely hate and despise Christianity, the Bible and Creation and will stop at nothing to destroy students' faith and confidence in Jesus Christ, the Bible and Creation.

They feel Christians are mindless robots that can't think for themselves. That the Bible is inaccurate, unreliable, bigoted, hate-filled and outdated. I've got news for them. They could not be further from the truth. Are Paterson and Passa examples of the kind of people UF is turning out, or did they just have a bad upbringing?

I also can't help but wonder if by chance Paterson and Passa are frat boys who might have been drinking too much that day.

The thing is, MTV, trashy, foul-mouthed (C)rap music, garbage for movies, sorry anti-Christian TV shows (I could name a few here), the theory of evolution, so-called atheism, sex outside of marriage, drunken parties, false religions and cults, overdone sports fanaticism, occult-oriented comic books, among many other things, don't help benefit students' lives either.

We want a public apology from Paterson and Passa for their foolish actions toward J.K., and a public apology to J.K. as well. I'm sure my wife and I are not the only ones that feel this way.

Many of us Christians around here are praying for a revival and a re-awakening at UF and in Gainesville. Not just those places, but for the United States as a whole, including with those in Washington D.C., at the White House and Congress and Senate.

Just because The Lord God calls homosexuality an abomination does not mean he hates the person, just the perversion. He still loves the person and that person's soul and has a better plan and life for them. I could also recommend a good solid church here in Gainesville for Paterson or Passa, anyone at the Alligator or at UF or in Gainesville for that matter.

As far as I'm concerned, I try to avoid the Alligator as much as possible. Today's front-page photo is one reason why. Sometimes however, I'll see one laying around somewhere and may look through the classified section, as that is all it's good for.

Here we are asking for a public apology from Paterson or Passa, but how? For them to send in a letter of apology to the Alligator would be a start.

They have been forgiven, but what they have done or may still do is uncalled for. So it is with the photo. I forgive whoever ran it, but that too was uncalled for.

I'm sure you and the Alligator staff don't like being flipped off, even in regards to whatever those of you there may have.

Dean S. Early is a Gainesville resident.

UF to face test from reigning SEC Tournament champ

By MIKE DIFERDINANDO

Alligator Staff Writer
mdiferdinando@alligator.org

Last season, Georgia became the Southeastern Conference's Cinderella story after an improbable run to the SEC Tournament title.

The Bulldogs entered the 2008 SEC Tournament as the conference's lowest-seeded team.

Georgia proceeded to win four straight games to secure its first NCAA Tournament berth since 2002.

That run included the Bulldogs playing three games in two days because of scheduling conflicts after a tornado damaged the Georgia Dome in Atlanta.

When the Gators play host to the Bulldogs (9-10, 0-4 SEC) tonight at 8 in the O'Connell Center, they will try to make sure the glass slipper no longer fits.

Georgia is led by senior Terrance Woodbury, who is averaging 13 points per game this season.

"He's really important just because they play him in two different spots," UF coach Billy Donovan said.

Woodbury will line up at small forward and power forward for the Bulldogs.

"They've got the ability to change the complexion of the team," Donovan said.

"So, Woodbury's one of those guys that gives them as a coaching staff a different dimension and a different-looking type of team."

The Gators (17-3, 4-1 SEC) come into the game after a roller coaster week that saw UF lose to South Carolina on the final play of the game last Wednesday and then bounce back with a 25-point thrashing of Vanderbilt on Sunday.

"You talk about a game on Wednesday that was emotionally heartbreaking to a game on Sunday where we shot the ball very, very well and were able to win on the road," Donovan said.

"Our guys' ability to keep the perspective of how quickly you can change (is important).

"I would hope that what happened on Wednesday and what happened again on Sunday is a great case to really, really show the ability (to learn from a loss),"

Strong duos fuel Gators

By JOSEPH R. HOLZER

Alligator Writer

The UF women's tennis doubles teams had a whole lot of love for Stetson.

All three Gators' (2-0) duos posted an 8-0 score on its Hatters opponent in a 6-1 dual match win on Tuesday.

The freshman pair of Jo Mather and Barbara Pinterova beat Shannon Gunning and Katherine St. Clair.

"The young team is coming around a lot," UF coach Roland Thornqvist said. "The other two, I think, have played probably above expectations so far."

The No. 18 pairing of Marrit Boonstra and Megan Alexander defeated Breanna Atkinson and Katherine Nowicki on Court 1, while Jessica Alexander and Anastasia Revzina dominated Valentina Galbarini and Natalie Gorham.

"Doubles is good. That's traditionally been one of our stronger points," Thornqvist said of the No.

7-ranked Gators.

Jessica Alexander is enjoying her time in the doubles court.

"I really like playing with Nastia," Jessica said of her partner. "She has a lot of power, so I just have to smother the net and make sure to clean up everything else."

Revzina shares the sentiment.

"We get along so good, and our chemistry is good," the junior said.

After posting a 3-0 lead in her first singles set, Jessica retired from the match due to a wrist injury. The forfeit was precautionary.

"(Her wrist) was not a problem," Thornqvist said. "It was just my call. I told her she would play doubles and three (singles) games, sort of

Recruiting not worth hype

National Signing Day is one week away.

Whoop-de-freaking-doo. I understand that many fans care deeply about the annual groping for high school athletes, but what I don't understand is why fans care.

Every season, we are expected to learn the names, stats and life histories of about 20 new players, all of them supposedly capable of making a gigantic impact on the Gators. Every season, 18-year-olds (and, for that matter, 11-year-olds) get hyped up beyond belief thanks to the ability of anyone with an Internet connection to post a grainy highlight package on YouTube. Every season, it is made to seem like the future of athletic programs — maybe the world

National Signing Day, and recruiting in general, is not worth wasting time on forums and recruiting Web sites because you never know what you're going to get from these kids.

SUPER BOWL XLIII

Bus stops in Tampa

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

TAMPA — Pittsburgh is back at the Super Bowl, and so is retired Steelers running back Jerome Bettis.

The Bus broke out his NFL championship ring from three years ago for interviews Tuesday as part of NBC's broadcast team for Sunday's title game. He said it feels a little strange to be here as a pregame analyst rather than playing for his former team.

"It's kind of weird because you know the experience and you're familiar with it, and you're familiar with the guys. But now you're kind of on the outside looking in, instead of on the inside looking out," Bettis said.

"But it's fun because for me there's no pressure. I get a chance to interact with the guys. ... I can still get access without the other pressures. A little part of me says, 'Man, you possibly could be in that game.' But the other side of me says, 'Naw, I wouldn't have been able to make it to this point.'"

Bettis, who rushed for 10,571 yards and 78 touchdowns for the Steelers from 1996-2005, retired

Jerome Bettis

Retired Steelers running back after Pittsburgh won its fifth Super Bowl by beating Seattle 21-10 in his hometown of Detroit.

He's made a smooth transition from the playing field to life after football and said he rarely wears his championship ring.

"The first couple of months I wouldn't take it off," he said. "Now, it's just media situations."

Bettis has spoken with several of his former teammates, but hasn't offered any advice for Sunday's game against the Arizona Cardinals.

"I really haven't told them anything. I've just talked to them as a friend, as a confidant, not really as 'Hey, do this, do that,' because they've all been here before. ... They know what needs to be done. So it was really just congratulating them and letting them know this is a great opportunity for them and don't lose sight of it."

UF GYMNASTICS

Gators look forward after first loss

By EUGENIO TORRENS
Alligator Writer

The first thing the UF gymnastics team talked about on the bus after it lost to Arkansas last Friday was quarterback Tim Tebow's speech after the Mississippi game.

Following the football team's loss to Mississippi on Sept. 27, Tebow promised no one would work harder on the field, and the team rode his promise to deliverance: a national championship.

It seems the Razorbacks may prompt the No. 5 UF gymnastics team to do the same: work harder.

"This (loss) is going to cause them to go back in the gym and train harder than they've ever trained before," UF coach Rhonda Faehn said.

Injuries and the toll they are taking on the team may have played a role in costing the team the meet against Arkansas.

"This (loss) is going to cause them to go back in the gym and train harder than they've ever trained before."

Rhonda Faehn
UF gymnastics coach

That could change this week with UF coach Rhonda Faehn telling her team to face its fears.

"We can't be afraid of any more injuries," Faehn said. "We have to go out and train and compete exactly how we normally would for the best results."

Injuries to juniors Rebekah Zaiser and Amanda Castillo and now freshman Nicole Ellis have prevented the team from having a meet-to-meet lineup, especially on balance beam.

"We have to just get consistency in the lineup," Faehn said.

Consistency will develop into a comfortable rhythm, yielding better results, she said.

Inconsistent performances plus three falls in a row against the Razorbacks on Friday mean a new beam lineup for the fourth consecutive meet.

Freshman Kailey Tissue will be performing on beam for the first time in orange and blue.

Even though veterans Castillo and Corey Hartung suffered uncharacteristic falls Friday night in Fayetteville, Ark., Faehn said they will be back on beam as well.

Sophomore Alicia Goodwin, the third Gator who fell during the Arkansas meet, will not be competing on beam.

She will instead be doing exhibition work.

The team will take its new beam lineup and look to rebound against Kentucky in the O'Connell Center Friday night at 7.

Fans are encouraged to wear pink, as the meet, officially called the Gators Link to Pink meet, is aimed at raising breast cancer awareness.

"We love our blue and orange," Faehn said, "but they get excited to be able to put pink on."

UF gymnastics coach Rhonda Faehn leans on the balance beam during a break in the Gators' narrow loss to Georgia on Jan. 18, 2008, in the O'Connell Center.

Fish show plans for new digs

■ MIAMI COMMISSIONERS WILL VOTE ON FINAL CONTRACTS.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI — Designs for the Florida Marlins' new ballpark were released for the first time Tuesday, more than two weeks before Miami and Miami-Dade commissioners vote on the stadium the team has long craved.

The plans show how the $515-million ballpark is expected to help invigorate the Little Havana neighborhood on the site of the now-demolished Orange Bowl near downtown. The retractable-roof stadium has a mostly white exterior with windows beyond part of the outfield seats and palm trees lining the entrance.

Since their first game in 1993, the Marlins have played at Dolphin Stadium, which is also where the Miami Dolphins and Miami Hurricanes play football. The ballpark is a major piece of a $3 billion public works package that includes a tunnel for the Port of Miami and a downtown trolley line. City and county commissioners are scheduled to vote on the final contracts Feb. 13.

The Marlins, who perennially have one of the lowest payrolls in the major leagues, say the ballpark will ensure higher revenue, allowing the team to spend more on players.

The team did not want to comment Tuesday.

A National Study of 2,500 girls 18-24 indicates that nearly 90% of girls agree that hard, crusty, over-gelled hair turns them off.

UF looks to make statement after dropping from top 25 this week he added. The Gators knocked off the Commodores for an emotional 22-point win at home last season, only to fall off the map shortly after, losing eight of their final 11 games, including a 3-point loss at Vanderbilt.

Donovan hopes that this time around, his team will keep enough composure to deal with the same kind of success.

"As much as I said after the South Carolina game that we had the greatest opportunity for growth and development on our team, I think the same is the case coming out of this game on Sunday," Donovan said.

Despite falling out of the national rankings Monday, the Gators' postseason hopes are alive and well after their win against the Commodores in Nashville, Tenn.

UF received 65 Associated Press votes, the fourth-most for teams outside the Top 25.

The Gators also received 59 votes in the ESPN/USA Today Coaches' poll, the most of any team outside the Top 25.

"There are experiences during the course of the year that can do two things: The experience can really bring the team together, or it can really divide your team," Donovan said.

"That's what conference play is all about. It's all about dealing with adversity, and I think adversity comes in a lot of different forms.

"It comes through winning, it comes through losing, and it's all about how you handle that."

keeping her at a pitch count and not try to overdo it."

"It's feeling pretty good," the freshman said of her serving wrist. "I could've gone longer."

Thornqvist might have pushed the point. "I told her, 'If you go down three, I'm gonna make you play three more,'" he said.

Jessica is enjoying recovery time before Saturday's Intercollegiate Tennis Association

National Team Indoor Championship opener against Oklahoma State.

"Originally, (on Saturday), I didn't plan on playing the full match, but it felt really good and I did," she said. "Yesterday it was pretty sore, so today Roland and (associate head coach Dave Balogh) wanted to make sure I wasn't going to be so sore for the weekend."

Revzina followed up a hard-fought singles win Saturday with a 6-1, 6-1 rout of Atkinson.

"She played today like she did in the (10-1) tiebreaker on Saturday," Thornqvist said.

"We've spent some time just talking about focus and the mental side of her play more so than the physical side, and I thought she did a great job today."

Tennis

Revzina was pleased by her own performance.

"I really like that (Saturday's) match was that way," the No. 99-ranked singles player said. "It's a good opportunity to learn, and now I know what I have to work on."

The difference was patience and confidence.

"She played very disciplined tennis," Thornqvist said. "She was hitting the ball but hitting it with the right shots, which is key to her game."

Pinterova captured the crowd's attention in the day's longest match (1:44). She defeated Gorham 6-4, 6-3.

"It's always nice to have a first-year player in that spotlight and handle it well," Thornqvist said.

The five-star wide receiver out of Hillsborough, ranked No. 3 in his class at the position on Scout.com, came to Gainesville with much fanfare.

On Sept. 9, 2006, his first outing in Ben Hill Griffin Stadium, Fayson rushed three times for 28 yards and saw one catch for 9 yards.

But after two years in town with average statistics, Fayson decided being a Gator wasn't for him. He transferred to Illinois and coach Ron Zook, and no one here cares anymore.

In five years, will anyone remember the mark Jai Lucas left on the UF basketball program? How about Mon Williams' tenure in orange and blue? Does the name Nyan Boateng ring a bell to anyone? And could anyone have predicted the horrible turn for the worse Cam Newton took that now has him at a junior college in Texas? The answer is almost certainly no.

Recruiting is a crapshoot, plain and simple. It can't be trusted to produce the results you expect. Most highly touted players coming out of high school are simply not mature enough — physically or mentally — to make an immediate impact at their school of choice.

Of course there is always going to be a player like Tim Tebow, Percy Harvin or Jeff Demps who comes out swinging his freshman year. Andre Debose of Seminole High might be that player this year.

But for the most part, we won't be hearing names like Mike Gillislee, Nick Alajajian or even Jordan Reed for another year.

I'm not discounting the importance of recruiting. Believe me, I understand that Urban Meyer wouldn't take plane trips across the country if he didn't think an athlete was going to help bring another national championship to Gainesville. What I am discounting is the hype and hullabaloo surrounding a bunch of unproven athletes putting pen to paper.

National Signing Day also discounts players whose effect on a program will be felt earlier than expected. Was anyone making a big deal about Brandon James? The two-star recruit out of St. Augustine wasn't ranked at all as a running back, but has turned into one of the nation's best kick returners.

This whole off-the-field mess just isn't for me. When these new recruits make their presence known on the field, then I'll start paying attention.

NOTE: We're still taking suggestions for video games to include in our poll for the best sports video game ever. E-mail me your suggestions and I'll get the votes tallied. I'll stop taking e-mails Friday and put up a poll that night.
