Sexuality, gender identity removed

Gainesville voters will soon decide whether to amend the city's discrimination policy amid controversy.

The city election will be held on March 24, and the ballot will include a proposal, Amendment 1, to remove local anti-discrimination protections. Instead state-level protections would apply.

Amendment 1 supporters claim the vote will decide if male sexual predators will continue to have access to public areas designated as women-only, like bathrooms.

For those who oppose the amendment, the future of civil rights in Gainesville is at stake, in particular the rights of transgender, lesbian, gay and bisexual people.

Local News The amendment would nullify Chapter 8 of the Gainesville Code of Ordinances, titled "Discrimination."

Instead, protections would be provided by the Florida Civil Rights Act at the state level, which outlaws discrimination based on race, color, creed, religion, gender, national origin, age, handicap, marital or family status.

In effect, this would remove protected status for transgender, lesbian, gay and bisexual Gainesville residents and loosen protections for other classes.

The amendment would also prevent the city from creating any new protected statuses.

The objective and impact of this amendment is heavily contested in Gainesville.

Problems arise during elections

By CHELSEA KEENAN

Political party supporters were out in full force on Tuesday to pull students to the polls on the first day of Student Government elections. However, the day was not without conflict.

Although votes were not counted at the day's end, SG Supervisor of Elections Dan Siegel said he expected voter turnout was comparable to fall elections, which racked up about 5,000 votes on the first day.

Voting continues today from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.

While candidates in competing parties were pleased with student turnout, partisan bickering reached new heights after the Orange and Blue Party aired commercials Monday and Tuesday night through Cox Communications' cable services.

The commercials, which can be viewed on YouTube, criticize the Unite Party and its executive candidates. The three commercials, which cost $702, appeared on Cartoon Network, MTV and Comedy Central between the hours of 10 p.m. and midnight.

In one commercial, Jordan Johnson, presidential candidate of the Unite Party, appears, saying he does not "have to follow state laws."

The video was recorded during an Elections Commission meeting earlier this semester.

But Johnson said he was misrepresented in the ad.

"I promised a clean campaign to talk about the issues and qualifications of the candidates," Johnson said. "In return, I am seeing professionally made attack ads against me for statements taken out of context."

But Orange and Blue Party Sen. Sam Miorelli said he didn't

Restraining order petition dropped in love triangle case

BOTH PARTIES AGREED TO DISMISS THE COMPLAINT.

A sworn complaint against UF associate professor Anthony Falsetti for simple battery and the restraining order sought against him by UF assistant professor Martha Burt have been dismissed.

Burt's attorney filed paperwork on Tuesday to dismiss his client's petition for a restraining order.

Judge Robert P. Cates granted the motion in a hearing Tuesday morning.

Burt also filed a sworn complaint against Falsetti with the Gainesville Police Department in January.

Falsetti

this month, said Spencer Mann, spokesman for the State Attorney's Office.

In the complaint, Burt alleged that Falsetti became violent with her when she found him in bed with another woman, a lecturer at UF.

Burt and Falsetti had been in a romantic relationship for about two years, according to the complaint.

The incident occurred in December, according to the complaint.

"The matter has been resolved," said Nick Zissimopoulos, Falsetti's attorney, adding that it was a collaborative effort between both parties.

Burt's attorney, Brian S. Kramer, could not be reached for comment.

Obama: U.S. troops in Iraq to be removed by August 2010

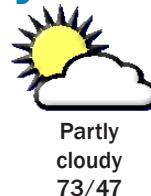

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama plans to remove all U.S. combat troops from Iraq by August of next year, administration officials said Tuesday, ending the war that helped define his upstart presidential campaign.

The withdrawal plan could help Obama turn his attention to another campaign pledge: Deploying more troops to Afghanistan, a region he calls the central front in the war on terrorism. The timetable is a compromise. Removing people equipment presents logistical difficulties. Some commanders and advisers worry that security gains could backslide in Iraq if troops are brought out too soon, while others think the bulk of U.S. combat work is long since done.

Man arrested after chase

A Gainesville man was arrested Monday after trying to hit a Gainesville Police officer with his car.

After being stopped by an officer for a traffic violation, Terry Lee, 26, told GPD Ofc. Mose Rochelle he didn't do anything wrong and restarted his vehicle.

When Rochelle told Lee to stop the car, the man in the passenger seat dug in his pocket, prompting Rochelle to call for backup, the GPD report stated.

According to the report, Lee reversed his 1993 silver Mercury in attempt to pin Rochelle against his patrol car.

"I was in great fear of my life as I dove out of the vehicle's path," Rochelle said. "If I would have not jumped out of the way I would have been killed."

Lee drove away, and Rochelle chased him in his patrol car.

The chase continued across East University Avenue, up Northeast Waldo Road and north on Northeast 11th Street where Lee crashed his Mercury into the fence at 1102 NE Fifth Place.

Lee then got out of the car and ran into a nearby wooded area where he was caught by an Alachua County Sheriff's office dog.

During a search of Lee's car, officers found 0.5 grams of crack cocaine that was packaged for street sale.

Lee was charged with four felonies and two misdemeanors including attempted murder, possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell and flee or attempt to elude a police officer.

"This man attempted to drive over a police officer to avoid getting caught for such a small amount of narcotics," Kameg said.

Over 1,400 flood IHOP for free food

By KATHERINE BEIN
Alligator Contributing Writer

More than 1,400 people flocked to IHOP Tuesday to get their three free buttermilk pancakes in celebration of National Pancake Day.

The restaurant chain held the event for the fourth year in a row, encouraging customers to make a donation to the Children's Miracle Network at Shands Children's Hospital.

The waiting time reached a height of 20 minutes, with 15 to 20 parties listed at a time. Even during a midday slowdown, servers brought waters in Styrofoam to-go cups because clean glasses were unavailable.

Tony Pignone, one of two assistant managers on duty since 4 a.m., said he thought he saw lots of bills going into the giant, cardboard collection box by the entrance.

"We're trying to way outdo last year," he said. "I think we're going to well outdo $800."

Last year, the IHOP on Southwest 13th Street served more than 1,000 visitors and raised $781.

Scott Amerman and Troy Wolfer, both junior-level students at UF, said they came primarily to enjoy the giveaways.

"We heard about free pancakes," said Wolfer. "It's all about free pancakes."

Still, the two didn't hesitate to order more food.

"It's kind of cheap to go and just get nothing," Amerman said.

Students meet with Machen

By EMILY FUGGETTA
Alligator Writer

For students who wanted to know what's up with the economy's effect on UF, the Weaver Hall basement was the place to be Tuesday evening.

UF President Bernie Machen spoke to about 50 students at the third installment of a meet-and-greet trek across the UF campus.

In an interview before the question-and-answer session, Machen said his collaboration with the Inter-Residence Hall Association was formed during summer when both sides realized he wasn't in touch with students.

The meet-and-greets were created with the intent of reaching out to on-campus residents, though off-campus students are also encouraged to attend.

"On-campus students are special," Machen said. "They provide a unique part of campus life."

IRHA President Jonathan Sheffield said the forum was designed to be friendly and low-key.

"It really depends on both parties wanting to talk to each other," he said.

The forum lasted about 45 minutes, sandwiched between one-on-one time with Machen and students who wished to shake his hand, introduce themselves or pose for photos.

Machen suggested the forum's focus be on the economy, though he called the event "just a conversation about what's on students' minds."

Most of the questions were about how budget cuts would affect departments and programs.

While Machen referred students to the deans of their colleges for more specific information, he said the university would do everything in its power to keep scholarship money and individual college funding.

Josh Perry, a UF junior majoring in Chinese and English, said Tuesday was his second time attending a Machen forum, which was essentially more of the same.

Perry said while Machen did a good job of being interested in student concerns, many of his answers were vague and unhelpful.

"Am I satisfied? No," he said. "I'd still like to know what's going on next year."

Machen said UF will publish a report mid-April on the changes each college would make if its budget is slashed by 10 percent.

"At that point everyone is gonna weigh in, and that's what we want to happen," he said.

In May, UF will find out how much state funding the university will receive.

Optimistic Obama calls on nation to shoulder responsibility

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama promised a nation shuddering in economic crisis Tuesday night that he would lead it from a dire "day of reckoning" to a brighter future, summoning politicians and public alike to shoulder responsibility for hard choices and shared sacrifice.

"The time to take charge of our future is here," Obama declared, delivering his first address to a joint session of Congress.

Offering words of reassurance to an anxious nation, he said, "Tonight I want every American to know this: We will rebuild, we will recover, and the United States of America will emerge stronger than before."

"We are a nation that has seen promise and peril," he said. "Now we must be that nation again."

To deal with the current crisis, deepening each day, the president said more money will be needed to rescue troubled banks beyond the $700 billion already committed last year. He said he knows that bailout billions for banks are unpopular

— "I promise you, I get it," he said — but he also insisted that was the only way to get credit moving again to households and businesses, the lifeblood of the American economy. Along with aid for banks, he also called on Congress to move quickly to overhaul the nation's outdated financial market regulations.

"I ask this Congress to join me in doing whatever proves necessary,"

Obama said. "Because we cannot consign our nation to an open-ended recession."

Thinking longer-term, Obama said in a speech lacking many specifics and devoid of initiatives that both parties must give up favored programs while uniting behind his promises to build better schools, expand health care coverage and move the nation to "greener" fuel use.

SG fights for cut programs

By CHELSEA KEENAN
Alligator Writer

A resolution was passed unanimously by Student Senate on Tuesday night urging UF's administration to save the Korean and Vietnamese programs in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. The programs will be eliminated in May.

Seven students who will be personally affected by the program cuts stopped by to ask senators for their support.

Gator Party Sen. Megan Vu, the author of the resolution, said UF is currently the only university in Florida that offers these programs. She said the diversity of UF's Student Body and faculty will decrease once these classes are cut.

Two professors will lose their jobs as a result, she said.

Vu said UF first decided to cut the programs in June after a $47 million budget cut was made across Florida's state universities, adding that students and teachers protested in response to the programs' eliminations.

She said Joe Glover, then-interim dean of CLAS, was unresponsive to their complaints.

Vu said she met with current CLAS Dean Paul D'Anieri during fall to discuss other options that could be taken and to ask why the programs were cut.

"The answer he gave me was vague and unclear," she said.

Vu said she does not expect the resolution to produce magic results.

"It's highly unlikely they'll overturn their decision and there will suddenly be money," she said. "I just hope there will be open discussion and they will take students seriously."

Still, Vu said she was encouraged by senators' enthusiastic support of the resolution.

"It's been a long day of campaigning, but we still have the heart to come and work toward important issues," she said.

NATIONAL Cancer, alcohol use linked

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — A study of nearly 1.3 million British women offers yet more evidence that moderate alcohol consumption increases the risk of a handful of cancers.

British researchers surveyed middle-aged women at breast cancer screening clinics about their drinking habits and tracked their health for seven years.

A quarter of the women reported no alcohol use. Nearly all the rest reported fewer than three drinks a day; the average was one drink a day. Researchers compared the lightest drinkers — two or fewer drinks a week — with people who drank more.

Each extra drink per day increased the risk of breast, rectal and liver cancer, University of Oxford researchers reported Tuesday in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute. The type of alcohol — wine, beer or liquor — didn't matter.

That supports earlier research, but the new wrinkle: Alcohol consumption was linked to esophageal and oral cancers only when smokers drank.

Also, moderate drinkers actually had a lower risk of thyroid cancer, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and renal cell cancer.

For an individual woman, the overall alcohol risk is small.

In developed countries, about 118 of every 1,000 women develop any of these cancers, and each extra daily drink added 11 breast cancers and four of the other types to that rate, the study found.

But population-wide, 13 percent of those cancers in Britain may be attributable to alcohol, the researchers concluded.

Moderate alcohol use has long been thought to be heart-healthy, something the new research doesn't address but that prompts repeated debate about safe levels. U.S. health guidelines already recommend that women consume no more than one drink a day; two a day for men, who metabolize alcohol differently

No Quitters

Obama's speech calls on Americans for change

While the path will not be easy, President Barack Obama outlined a clear-cut plan seeking to remedy the current ills affecting America.

In his powerful State of the Nation speech to Congress, Obama stated early on that his policies will mark a clear separation from the past, as both the government and the citizens of the United States must be more responsible as they move forward.

In outlining his recovery plan, Obama remarked that he does not believe in bigger government, but rather in acting boldly and wisely to ensure the long-term success of the country. He stood firmly behind his first major course of action in the passage of the stimulus package, adding that the failure to act would have cost countless citizens jobs and prohibited 95 percent of Americans from receiving a tax cut. Additionally, he spoke of a tax credit for college students — enabling millions to pay for four years of higher education without accumulating endless debt.

The key focus under Obama's direction to right the economy was directed to the everyday hardworking Americans. Stating, "Slowly but surely, confidence will return and our economy will recover," Obama offered the nation a look at the harsh uphill battle that America will face, but with hope of a chance to once again thrive. Simply put, there is no overnight quick fix but rather a series of long-term investments that will lead to new jobs and increased competition on the global market.

Obama went on to tout the importance of Recovery.gov — a Web site that shows Americans where stimulus money is being spent, allowing for a sense of transparency that rarely exists in the federal government. Making sure to hit on the credit crisis, Obama stated that it affects everyone, but that Americans can rest assured that their money and insurance are safe. In his mind, credit acts as the lifeblood of the economy — enabling citizens to purchase vehicles and homes and start businesses with the loans. While Obama admitted that the stimulus package is just the first step in correcting the economy, he was more than prepared to provide Congress with a laundry list calling attention the need to focus on energy, health care and education.

With energy, he emphasized a dedication to finding a fuel source that is not only clean and renewable but also profitable. Calling for legislation to focus attention on increased research in the field, Obama announced a commitment of $15 billion to double renewable energy sources.

Obama addressed the importance of health care by talking about how many small businesses were forced to close and big corporations left no choice but to lay off workers due to rising costs of insurance. Speaking with conviction, Obama proudly proclaimed that more had been accomplished in the past 30 days than the past decade to create important changes to health care. Much to the enthusiasm of the audience, Obama concluded his discussion on the subject by demanding a cure for cancer as well as ensuring health care for all.

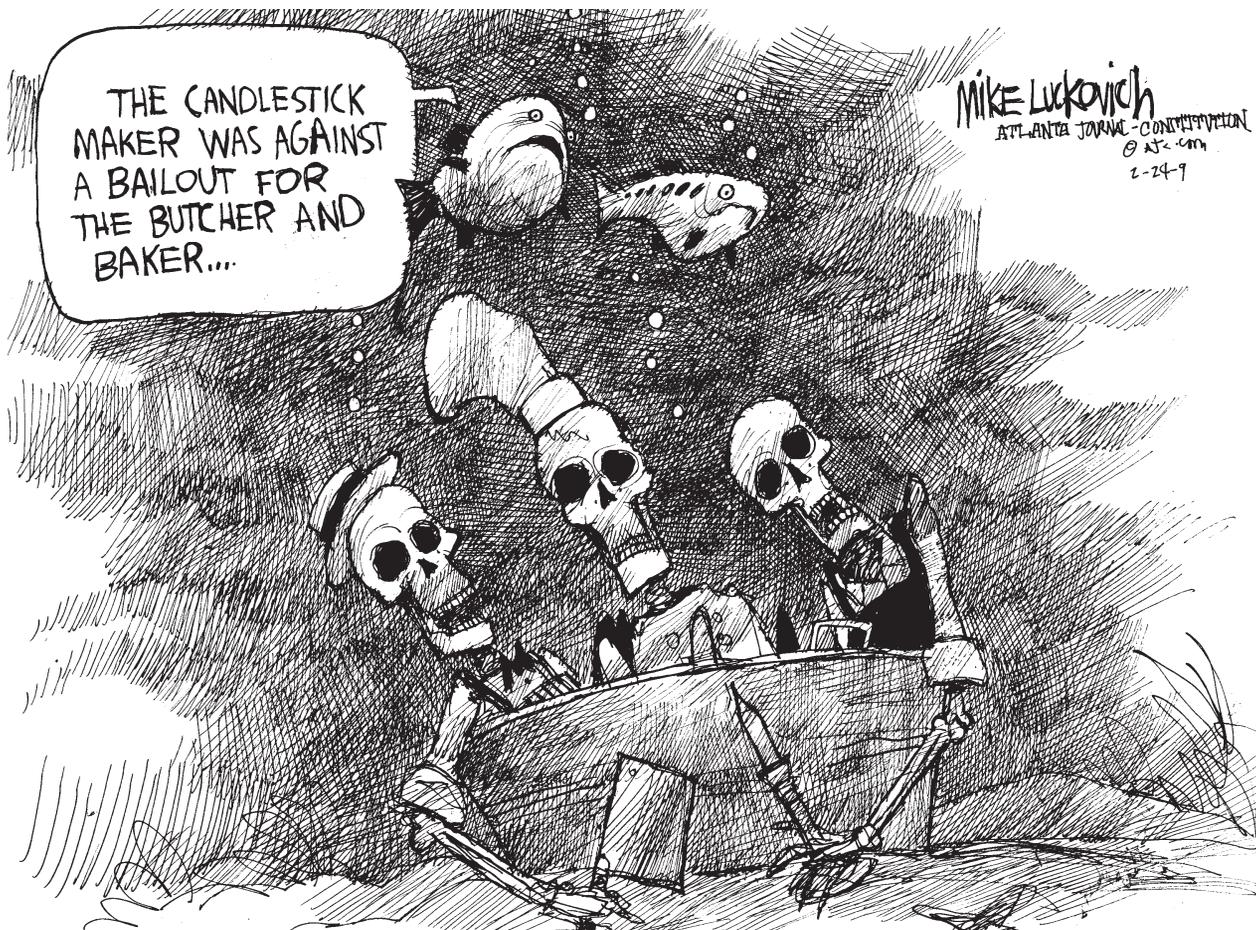

The final major focus area of his speech dealt with education — stating that a lack of knowledge is a prescription for economic decline. Under his direction, Obama wants to ensure that every child in America has access to the best education possible. In perhaps his most poignant remark of the evening, Obama spoke candidly to the many students across the country who dropped out of school.

"It's not just quitting on yourself; you're quitting on your country."

A stoic, if not sobering, account of the realities of the state of America, Obama's speech provided a semblance of hope for the masses desperately seeking any hint at economic upturn.

Conan's move will shake up late-night

Conan O'Brien hung up his invisible strings Friday after a 16-year-long run of "Late Night with Conan O'Brien." This is a part of NBC's move to shake up its late-night lineup to save some dough.

The game of television show host musical chairs will involve O'Brien taking over "The Tonight Show," Jimmy Fallon hosting "Late Night," and Jay Leno moving to his own 10 p.m. talk show. In pushing late night talk shows into the territory of prime-time programming, NBC can cut back on its dramas, which cost the network millions more to make per episode.

Even if it is to decrease the bottom line, this shuffle of hosts is a clear sign that the era of late-night television isn't ending any time soon. People need comedians willing to be humorous for the simple sake of humor more than ever, but what does this mean for America's favorite sloop-haired Tarja Halonen lookalike?

O'Brien has amassed his very own cult following. He's just such an awkward buffoon that some can't help but adore his absurdist humor. He has come full circle: O'Brien is so uncool that he has redefined the meaning of the word "cool." Honestly, how many people can pull on a lever and have clips from "Walker, Texas Ranger" magically appear?

With his endearing self-deprecation, O'Brien constantly announced to his audience that "Late Night" just wasn't that good. They obviously begged to differ, some of them waiting hours just to get standby tickets to the final taping of his show. That shows true commitment to the "humor-tastical wonderment" of the Cone Bone.

Does this mean that with a new time slot, Conan O'Brien will be forced to mature? The world caught a glimpse of a more humbled, thankful, almost — dare I say it — grown-

letters@alligator.org

up Consie at the end of his last show. Could this indicate a shift in his television personality as he makes the move to "The Tonight Show?"

Say it ain't so, Conando!

O'Brien's shift to a more mainstream time slot is leading some to speculate that he will have to give up certain characters that made "Late Night" unmistakably his.

"Late Night" was groundbreaking in that over the course of 2,725 episodes, it featured a crying Nazi in the audience, O'Brien zip lining across the studio while donning a steam-spouting helmet to save our sixteenth president from being assassinated by John Wilkes Booth, and a bear that... well, you know.

While O'Brien takes his house band, the Max Weinberg 7, along to its new home in Burbank, it may just be that the only change in the show's dynamic will be that the censors will not take as kindly to a crotch-fondling bear or the racist, misogynist ghost from the heyday of radio who was murdered by the League of Women Voters.

In that case, let us welcome a new era of ridiculous characters that make up O'Brien's entourage. Whether O'Brien changes or not, he will indeed be judged for it, and the judgment will come swiftly.

Good luck, you long-limbed, Irish wag. And stay true to the slightly creepy, beady-eyed fool you are. We'll see you in June.

Ocala 'Rainbow Gathering' proves hippies no longer exist

It took me one 5-mile walk in 20-degree weather in the pitch black through the Ocala National Forest for me to kill my idols, or for them to nearly kill me.

My newspaper adviser in high school would often regale me with stories of transcendentalists and "The Rainbow People," as they're called, who would retreat into national parks for national and regional gatherings for periods of peace, reflection and an escape from consumerism and corporatism. When I heard they were doing a long stint only an hour or so away, I decided, after much deliberation, to experience it first hand.

With thoughts of "On the Road" in mind, I expected to see people truly living outside of the status quo. Intellectuals who thought the "real world" was not for them and made a conscious effort to live outside or above it.

What I found was both disillusioning and frightening.

Hippies do not exist anymore. In their stead, I found an array of felons in hiding, psychologically disturbed youth, feral children and homeless teenagers with nowhere else to be but in the forest.

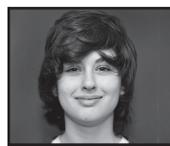

I had experiences with some of them previously. I had met a band of train hoppers about a month before who had told me more about Rainbow gatherings. When I met them, I was filled with the romantic notion of responsibility-free traveling. I thought that I was talking to people like Kerouac, who had the gumption to set foot across the country and discover the spoils of America for themselves.

As that night progressed, my illusions about who I was talking to disappeared. I was not talking to a bunch of kids from square-shaped states who decided that suburban life was fraught with disappointment. I was talking to misfits who, even if they tried their very best to stick out a normal life, would never meet the cut. They were compulsive liars, thieves, vagabonds and winos.

Wasn't the point of hippies supposed to be of merit? Weren't they striving for something, whether it be the end to Vietnam, a revolt against the confinement of the 1950s or god, anything else?

There were some upsides of the excursion (I was able to trade "shiny rocks" for drugs, there were free pancakes and I got some exercise) but there were mostly downsides (I got called a yuppie upward of 20 times for "having parents," I almost got hypothermia

letters@alligator.org

and heat stroke in the same 12-hour span, and I was almost raped and dismembered by a boy who insisted that I go out to his "ninja camp" with him deep into the prairie). But the biggest downside of all was that I realized that hippies, or beats, or whatever, no longer exist.

No one once tried to talk to me about world issues. No one considered what they were doing revolutionary. No one wrote or made art (I did not meet a single person who had heard of "journalism."). They were there out of necessity. I could leave at any time, and I did the next afternoon.

Maybe I am a yuppie (as soon as I came home I took a long shower, took an extreme amount of Flintstones vitamins, and gorged myself on sushi), but at least I have a sense of who I am and where I belong. That one night destroyed my qualms with living inside of a system. What is the alternative? In today's world there is none. The best we can do is to try to change the system from inside. There is no hope in overturning anything if we just ignore it by living deep inside the woods.

I will always wonder what became of the train-hopper kids I spent a long night with and about the kids I met at the Rainbow gathering. I hope they get out of that system because it is far worse than the one of which I am a part. But I know they won't. Living in that system is a drain. Once you're in it for more than a month, you can never assimilate yourself in what is called "the real world." Once you have nothing but shiny rocks and nothing more than an elementary school education, you're pretty much fucked.

But then again, what do they know of the world they abandoned? The world that they perceived as unbendingly cruel? Nothing. And for the most part, I wish to know nothing more of the world they call their own. And that's where I'll leave it, until I meet another group of kids who can temporarily make me abandon my own set of values and make me question my own self worth.

Because really, what else is there?

Graduate students should be rewarded for dedication to UF

This past Friday, President Bernie Machen declared that UF needs to transform itself in order to become one of the nation's top public universities. Machen said that the plan is to "focus more on graduate education and research." As co-president of Graduate Assistants United (GAU), our graduate employee labor union, I welcome the president's new vision if — and only if — his focus on graduate education includes support for all departments, students and graduate assistants. Indeed, graduate assistants need additional help and focus these days, especially in this difficult economic climate.

As workers for the university, graduate assistants do the bulk of the teaching and research labor. Studies have shown that across the board, graduate instructors at UF score even higher on annual undergraduate student evaluations than tenure and term faculty when it comes to availability, respect, stimulation and overall performance. Graduate students work hard for UF; they believe in quality education and share in the president's desire to create a better university.

If Machen is serious about turning some of the university's focus on graduate students, we also expect him to respect the value we provide for the university. This means helping graduate assistants during these tough times. GAU has been bargaining with the administration since last May. While we were able to negotiate some important new additions to the contract for grads, the administration has been intractable when it comes to providing additional economic assistance to us when we need it the most.

Aaron Cerny

Most graduate assistants have not received a stipend increase since 2006. As we are all aware, the cost of living has increased fairly dramatically since then. In addition to the increased cost of food, utilities and rent, employment fees, which graduate assistants must pay every semester in order to work, have also risen. Over the past 10 months, we have compromised again and again with administration regarding our stipends and have offered, as our final proposal, a modest one-time $400 bonus for this semester and an additional $400 bonus in the fall. This offer would cost the university less than 1 percent of the money it has on hand.

As a non-recurring expense to the university, our proposal is more than an appropriate request. While we understand that the national economic situation is troubling, we also know UF has the money to help graduate students. Last year, a report from Florida's Auditor General revealed that the university has hundreds of millions of dollars in unrestricted funds, which continue to grow each year. Additionally, Machen recently received a $275,000 bonus, and hiring continues in many areas of the university. Finally, the passage of the recent federal stimulus package, along with the approved tuition increases, will bring even more funds to the university. Clearly, the money is available to help us out.

In the face of 100 frustrated graduate students who showed up to our last bargaining session, the administration made it clear that, despite Machen's recent rhetoric, UF does not prioritize graduate student labor. I want to offer President Machen the opportunity to make good on his word. Please, Mr. President, help us out. We are not asking for much. Over the years, we have helped pave the way for UF's future success. By helping us out now when we need it the most, we will help you build UF into a sterling school for decades to come.

HOW TO: Have a spring getaway

Adventure in your own backyard or around the world!

Gainesville is famous for our winning Gator sports teams and well-known for our cultural centers. But when the Gators aren't playing and nothing is being performed at the Phillips Center, what do Gainesville residents do? Most people have no idea the extent of recreational activities available to them just around the corner.

The region is plentiful with scenic state parks, beautiful rivers, and sparkling clear natural springs all offering opportunities for local adventure. No experience is necessary to enjoy the unique local features, nor do you need to be Scuba certified to enjoy the area springs.

Aquatic Center in Gainesville and Extreme Exposure in High Springs offer a range of exciting local tours, showcasing Florida's most beautiful natural environments. Our specially designed adventures are tailored to your personal needs and include your choice of snorkeling, canoe classes/trips, hiking trips, casual walking tours, and educational field trips. Enjoy a part of Gainesville you never knew existed while learning about local treasures and unique wildlife.

If you are Scuba certified, join us for free local Dive Days giving divers the opportunity to try new gear and techniques, network with other local divers, and to "warm up" for monthly dive vacations offered at our two locations. If you're looking to find adventure outside of Gainesville, we can help with that too! We offer plenty of affordable dive trips to locations as close as Key West, as far as the Red Sea and everything in between.

Acupuncture: the answer to your exam woes?

Exactly how awake do you need to be for your next exam?

Oriental Medicine is practiced throughout the world to maintain and restore health, fight disease, and bring relaxation to millions of people. A complete medicine, its origins can be traced back three thousand years. It has stood the test of time. But did you know that when you are studying long hours and not getting the rest and exercise you need to be your best, having an acupuncture treatment can make all the difference?

By restoring balance to the energy channels of the body, acupuncture practitioners are able to relieve stress, increase memory retention, promote mental clarity and boost the immune system. All this without the use of drugs! They use Chinese herb prescriptions, the hair-thin acupuncture needles, Oriental bodywork (massage techniques), and cupping (to draw out toxins or get energy moving).

Students at Dragon Rises College have cause to take advantage of their own medicine! They have 3230 hours of coursework to earn their Master of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine degree, and a national licensing exam. As part of this training, a student intern sees 350 patients, under the supervision of licensed acupuncture practitioners.

In Gainesville, Dragon Rises College of Oriental Medicine offers the public low-cost treatments in the student clinic. Discounts for UF students are available. The college also has speakers available for community education. Interested? Call 352-371-2833 or visit www.dragonrises.edu

HEALTH QUESTIONS:

Get informed about your health-related issues

Skin Health

1. Why should I be concerned about skin cancer?

Skin cancer is the most common type of cancer in the United State, which can affect anyone regardless of skin color. About one million Americans get it each year. Considering that we live in Florida, always remember to use sunscreen so that you are protected. The Student Health Care Center also has regular mole screenings. To learn more or to sign up for the next mole screening, call GatorWell Health Promotion Services at 392-1161 ext 4281.

Nutrition

2. Why is breakfast so important?

A healthy breakfast is extremely important. It refuels your body and gives you the necessary energy in order to start the day, which will ultimately allow you to perform better at school or work. Your breakfast should typically consist of a variety of foods including fruits and vegetables, grains, dairy, and protein. Try grabbing a cup of yogurt and some fruit as you head out the door.

3. Are dietary supplements better than food?

All the necessary vitamins and minerals you need are found in the foods you eat, if you obtain a balanced diet. If you are concerned that you aren't getting all the nutrients you need, a nutritionist at GatorWell would be a great resource for you.

4. What are some healthy snacks to eat "on the go?"

As a student, it is hard to always find time to cook or even eat a decent meal. Here are some healthy snacks you can eat when you are in a rush, whether it is for breakfast or a snack. Remember that snacks high in fiber and protein will keep you feeling full for a longer period of time. Trail mix, yogurt, chopped fruit, string cheese, granola bars, peanut butter sandwiches, nuts, whole grain cereals, carrots, bananas and apples.

Five tips for a safe and healthy spring break

What are you planning to do for spring break?

Spring break is less than 2 weeks away! Students are finalizing plans and getting ready to relax from the long semester with breaks that include beaches, bikinis, and beverages. The Student Health Care Center at UF recommends these 5 tips to keep you safe so you can have a fun and memorable break with your friends:

The Student Health Care Center at UF is building a healthy foundation for the Gator Nation. For more information about how to access services and physicians 24/7, call 352-392-1161 to make an appointment or go online to www.shcc.ufl.edu.

1. Prevent getting sick before your break...by receiving your flu shot and remembering to wash hands frequently. These are the 2 best ways to prevent the cold or flu.

2. Protect yourself from sun damage...and wrinkly, pre-aged skin or looking like a lobster! Make sure to check the UV Index outside and wear sunscreen with at least 15 SPF. If you have an abnormal skin growth, contact the SHCC for a screening.

3. Get bathing suit ready...Put away bulky sweaters and pants and slip into that bikini or swim trunks through healthy diet and exercise! The SHCC offers nutritional counseling and education services to students interested in learning about ways to eat healthy and exercise safely.

4. Have fun, be safe...and always wear a condom if you engage in sexual intercourse. Free condoms are available at the SHCC. In addition, you can get tested for STD's at the SHCC - it is important to know your sexual health status!

5. Let off some steam...but make sure to drink alcohol in moderation. If you choose to drink, pace your drinking to one drink or less an hour. Remember, it is illegal to drink alcohol if you are under 21 years of age. Also, do not put your drink down - you never know how which sketchy person is in arm's reach!

FAQ: health and fitness for the college lifestyle

Exercise

5. Do you have any tips on how to make exercise more fun?

There are various ways that you can have more fun while exercising. Dancing is one way to spice up your mundane exercise routine. You can also try bicycling, basketball, and swimming. The best part is you will be burning plenty of calories without actually noticing it. You also have the option of attending group fitness classes at either the Student Recreation Center or Southwest Recreation Center.

6. Is it better to eat before or after exercise?

Eating before or after exercising are both great strategies for performance, fitness, and health, but the decision lies in how you eat since it depends on your duration and rigor of exercise. Remember that eating is very important because it fuels your muscles before you exercise or refuels them after you exercise.

Sexual Health

7. Can I get tested for HIV without health insurance?

The Alachua County Health Department (334-7960, ext. 79621) and the Student Health Care Center (392-1161) are great resources to get tested. At the health department, there is a sliding scale fee system, and there is an optional $20 fee for anonymous testing. The Student Health Care Center has a $30 fee. A rapid test is available with results in 30 minutes, but may require confirmatory testing. Planned Parenthood (377-0881) also administers free, confidential HIV testing on Wednesdays 9am-12pm.

8. What are some benefits of Gardasil, the HPV vaccine?

Gardasil is a vaccine that prevents women from getting cervical cancer and the four most common HPV types; two cause genital warts and two are the precursors to cervical cancer. The shot is taken in three increments and is considered ideal if taken before engaging in any type of sexual activity, but you can still take it afterwards. However, the vaccine will not cure an existing infection.

Mental Health

9. How many hours of sleep are enough?

For most adults, seven to eight hours of sleep is sufficient for academic productivity. Remember, that it is important to get enough sleep because it helps you perform better the following day, reduce stress, and boost your immune system. For more information, visit the sleep podcast at HealthyGators.hhp.ufl.edu.

10. I've been feeling really depressed lately. Where can I go to talk to someone?

The Mental Health Services Department at the Student Health Care Center and the UF Counseling Center at Peabody Hall are great resources. Some of the services include individual and group counseling as well as biofeedback. These services can help you address personal problems in addition to school related issues.

ATOD

11. Is it safer to smoke hookah than cigarettes?

It is a myth that smoking hookah or a water pipe is safer than cigarettes. It is just as dangerous. Actually, hookah smokers may inhale more tobacco than cigarette smokers in one sitting due to the massive volumes of smoke they inhale. A typical hookah session lasts about 45 minutes, which is much longer than a cigarette break. You also get more nicotine from hookah, which leads to increased risk of addiction. Remember that hookah still has numerous toxins within it that can lead to health complications such as lung cancer, heart disease, and other health complications.

12. What do I do if I think my friend has alcohol poisoning?

Alcohol poisoning is a serious consequence of consuming large amounts of alcohol in a short period of time. It is extremely important to know the signs and symptoms since it can happen to anyone. A person's blood alcohol concentration (BAC) can continue to rise even after passing out or sleeping. It is important not to assume that the person will be fine by going to sleep. Some of the signs and symptoms of alcohol poisoning include: Mental confusion, stupor, or coma, vomiting, seizures, slow breathing (fewer than eight breaths per minute), irregular breathing (10 seconds or more between breaths), hypothermia (low body temperature), bluish skin color, and paleness.

Call 911 if someone is showing these signs and don't leave the person alone!

Safety

13. I get out of class late at night. What are some tips to stay safe?

You should always try to be aware of your surroundings. For example, you should avoid the use of earphones. Walk briskly but confidently, and always keep your car keys ready to avoid digging through your bag to find them. Another alternative to walking is calling 392-SNAP for a ride anywhere on campus. Always remember to stay safe by wearing something reflective so you are readily seen by others. For more information on how to stay safe on campus go to the Healthy Gators 2010 website.

Cold and Flu Prevention

14. I got the flu shot. Can I still catch the flu?

The flu shot cannot give you the flu. Instead, it reduces your chances of getting the illness. Other ways to reduce your chances are to wash your hands regularly, cover your cough, and if possible, avoid close contact with other individuals who may be sick. Remember that it is important to get vaccinated every year.

15. How do I know the difference between a cold and the flu?

It can be hard to tell the difference between a cold and the flu since both have similar symptoms, but flu symptoms are worse than a cold. You usually have higher fevers with flu that can last 3-4 days, and the flu affects your whole body. You may feel extreme fatigue, achy muscles, dry cough and sore throat.

16. I seem to get sick often. Is there something wrong with my immune system?

There are various ways to boost your immune system. Believe it or not, getting a full night's sleep can increase your immunity since it is connected to the balance of hormone levels. In addition, you can drink more water, eat a variety of nutritious foods like fruits and vegetables, and exercise more. Taking a basic daily multivitamin/mineral supplement, avoiding excess sugar, alcohol, and cigarettes are also ways to give your immune system a boost.

Final three games of season pose test for team without secure Tourney spot

HOOPS, from page 19

Whether it was Thornton, Temple or Tasmin Mitchell (12 points), UF didn't have the ammunition to keep up.

"We didn't execute our offense well toward the end," freshman guard Erving Walker said. "I don't think we were tired. They just outplayed us toward the end."

At the half, the Tigers knew they were in for a ballgame with the unranked Gators.

The teams went back and forth for the first 10 minutes of the second half.

Walker hit a three only to have Temple follow it up with a mid-range jump shot.

But then LSU took over in the final 10 minutes, and those are 10 minutes the Gators would rather forget.

"In the second half, they came with more energy," Hodge said.

"We just have to execute at the end and play hard."

With the win, LSU clinched at least a share of the SEC regular-season title.

As for the Gators, this loss makes Selection Sunday a whole lot more interesting than they would like, as they are not a lock for the NCAA Tournament just yet.

It's not going to get any easier either, as two of UF's final three regular-season games are against SEC East contenders Tennessee and Kentucky.

The third is a trip to Mississippi State, the second place team in the West.

EVAN, from page 19

Walsh, after claiming three Super Bowls in eight years with the San Francisco 49ers, retired from the NFL after the third.

But Pittsburgh Steelers great Chuck Knoll coached his team to four Super Bowl victories from 1974-79 and then stayed on to coach the team until 1991.

Maybe Meyer is more in Knoll's breed than Walsh's, but we won't know for years.

There's a great video on The Onion called "Tom Coughlin Retires From Family To Spend More Time With Team" that really highlights the ludicrous amount of time coaches spend with their teams. As the title implies, the video jokes about New York Giants coach Tom Coughlin "retiring" from home to spend even more time on the football field.

The video includes this gem from a fictional press release written by Coughlin: "The time constraints imposed by his family were distracting from his responsibilities as a football coach."

And that's really how it is in some places — coaches are expected to go team first, family second, sleep if they can squeeze it in.

Meyer strikes me as the kind of man who loves his family too much to keep this up for 20 years, or even 10 more, as Machen thinks.

After every game, he's on the field with his wife, Shelley, his arm around her as they sing the UF fight song.

His son, Nate, sat on his lap during the press conference after the Southeastern Conference Championship Game win in December.

And during a press conference in Miami before the national title game this year, Meyer had something to say about coaches who are in this business forever like Penn State's Joe Paterno.

"There will be no chance I'll be doing this into my 70s or 80s," Meyer said. "Zero. None."

Don't be shocked if, six years from now, Meyer decides he won't even be doing this into his 50s.

ence for as many people as possible in his bullpen so they will be ready when needed in more pressure-filled situations.

"There is nothing a coach can do for a player that experience will give them," O'Sullivan said. "Until they get out here when it means something, there really is no way a coach can teach that."

While the pitchers needed only 1 run of support, the batters did not want to be shown up. Five Gators came through with at least two hits each, and another five had two RBIs each. Senior left fielder Avery Barnes led the way with three hits and two RBIs in just five innings.

UF has now totaled 31 runs in its first four games, but the Gators have yet to record a home run this season.

"There is nothing a coach can do for a player that experience will give them."

Kevin O'Sullivan
UF baseball coach

Just like the pitching staff, young hitters got a chance to see the field for an extended period of time. Freshmen Tyler Thompson, Jerico Weitzel, Daniel Pigott and Ben McMahan took the field for the Gators late in the game.

Pigott and Weitzel both notched their first hits, and Pigott finished with two RBIs to add to his two hits.

UF will finish its two-game series against Eastern Michigan tonight at 6:30. Freshman Anthony DeSclafani will get the nod on the mound, and he will also be limited to 50-60 pitches in his first start.

KEATING BRINGS HOME HONOR: UF senior pitcher Patrick Keating was named the Southeastern Conference Pitcher of the Week by the league office Tuesday.

Keating took home the award after pitching seven innings against then-No. 23 Louisville on Friday night in the team's season-opening 6-3 win.

Thornton's 32 lead Tigers over Gators

By BRIAN STEELE

Alligator Staff Writer
bsteale@alligator.org

BATON ROUGE, La. — Maybe Marcus Thornton had an extra helping of Wheaties on Tuesday morning.

Whether it was Wheaties, an extra nap or maybe just a feeling that he had to step up against a conference rival, it wasn't helpful for the Gators.

While Nick Calathes was good, scoring 12 points and dishing out six assists, Thornton was better, as he scored 32 points while sinking six 3-pointers. The senior guard led the No. 18 Tigers (24-4, 12-1 Southeastern Conference) to an 81-75 win against the Gators at the Pete Maravich Assembly Center on Tuesday night.

The Gators (21-7, 8-5 SEC) had four players score in double figures (Calathes, Chandler Parsons, Walter Hodge and Alex Tyus), but it was the big shots and consistent scoring of Thornton and Garrett Temple (21 points) that made the difference.

"We just played the best team in the league — on the road," UF coach Billy Donovan said. "LSU tonight was better than us."

While UF kept it close for the vast majority of the game — and even had a 41-37 halftime lead — LSU decided it had enough with 9:07 left in the game.

That's when the Tigers went up by 7, and they never looked back.

The closest the Gators would get was within 3 points, but the game was never in doubt as Thornton then came back with two free throws to make it 69-64.

"We could never really get over the hump," Donovan said.

UF played one of its more complete games of the year, but LSU simply had too many guns for the Gators to handle.

Poovey makes impression in UF win

By BOBBY CALLOVI

Alligator Writer
bcallovi@alligator.org

For someone who had not pitched in a game in close to two years, Justin Poovey showed very little rust.

The redshirt freshman threw four shutout innings and allowed only two hits in No. 24 UF's 12-0 win at home against Eastern Michigan on Tuesday, and he only left the game early due to the pitch limit UF coach Kevin O'Sullivan set before the game — Poovey tossed 57 pitches.

Poovey's success came from relying more on his defense to get the outs rather than on overpowering hitters.

"I pitch to contact, and our defense played great," Poovey said. "We've had good defense all year, so I just kept pouring in strikes and let our defense work behind me."

O'Sullivan

Although he had reached his limit, Poovey felt he still had at least another inning of work in him.

O'Sullivan expects Poovey's pitch count to go up for his next outing and is willing to use him this weekend, but O'Sullivan was pleased with Poovey's short debut.

"They all want to go one more, but that is a good sign of a competitor," O'Sullivan said. "As a coach, you want someone who wants to go one more."

Poovey exited the game with a 9-run advantage, and O'Sullivan used the large lead to get other young arms experience.

Freshman Will Jolin got two innings of work in his second appearance of the season, and fellow freshman Greg Larson made his season debut in the ninth.

Junior lefty Tony Davis, who O'Sullivan expects to be a go-to guy in his bullpen, pitched the seventh inning, and junior Chas Spottswood threw in a game for the first time in his UF career.

The UF (4-0) bullpen combined for no runs over five innings and allowed just two hits. Only one hit all game for the Eagles made it to the outfield.

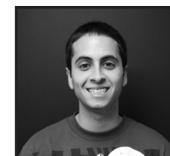

O'Sullivan wants to get game experi-

Burnout from Meyer would not surprise

In an interview with The Orlando Sentinel earlier this week, UF president Bernie Machen said he fears football coach Urban Meyer will burn out eventually.

"I think what will happen to Urban is he won't go somewhere else, he'll just burn out and quit," Machen told the Sentinel.

Evan Drexler
The Drex Factor
edrexler@alligator.org

He'll reach the point he can't do it any longer at the level he demands of himself. Hopefully it's not for 10 years."

After thinking about it for a few days, it seems incredibly plausible that Meyer could burn out trying to sustain the high level of performance he expects from himself and his players every day.

Spending an entire season merely interviewing and writing about Meyer and the players each day was time consuming enough. But to be in the locker room, on the practice field, staying up late every night watching film?

There has to be a breaking point.

There are horror stories from around the NCAA and the NFL of coaches sleeping in their offices, working 100-plus-hour weeks and seeing their families one day out of seven.

The recruiting trail is as intense as it has ever been, and Meyer and his staff rarely get time off.

Sure, the thrill of victory and the feeling of winning a national championship have to be exhilarating, but after so many years, Meyer could question if it's all worth it.

There are examples of coaches quitting on top, for sure. Bill
