Flooding may persist

■ TWO CASUALTIES WERE CONFIRMED AS OF MONDAY MORNING.

By ALEX CHACHKEVITCH
 Alligator Writer

Historic flooding is forcing people to evacuate their houses in Alachua County and the rest of northern Florida.

Experts say that rainfall might cause water levels in rivers such as the Suwannee and Santa Fe to rise further after two weeks of flooding.

"You're not going to have water running down the streets of Gainesville," said Karen Parker, public information coordinator for the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission. "But folks living by the river will definitely be affected."

"You're not going to have water running down the streets of Gainesville."

Right now the water is receding, she said, but fallen tree branches and trash, combined with strong currents, could make boating dangerous.

Until conditions improve, the Suwannee and Santa Fe rivers are idle-speed zones.

Parker said the information on how much money will be spent on the recovery and the extent of the damage won't be completely assessed until the water recedes, and that may take days depending on the weather, temperature and evaporation speed.

There's also flooding in other parts of north Florida.

As of Monday morning, there were two confirmed casualties in Okaloosa County. About 125 homes were destroyed and about 100 severely damaged, said Mike Stone, spokesman for the Florida Di-

SG launches budget blog

By CHELSEA KEENAN
 Alligator Writer

Student Government joined the blogosphere on Monday.

The new SG budget-cut blog allows UF students to discuss topics and share concerns about the round of budget cuts affecting UF's colleges.

Jordan Johnson, who will be taking over as UF's Student Body president in May, said the blog was created to ensure that students' input on the matter is heard.

Johnson said he plans to take student concerns expressed in the posts to a meeting with UF President Bernie Machen, although the meeting has not been scheduled yet.

"It makes (Machen's) job easier when he understands the students' needs," Johnson said.

Johnson said he doesn't feel the Web site was launched too late because since the cut proposals were not announced until recently, students have been unaware of what programs were in danger of getting sliced.

Student Government

"This is the point where Student Government has to make sure students' voices are heard," he said.

However, Johnson said the blog still needs some improvements.

"We still have some kinks that aren't worked out," he said, adding that categories with sections for each college will make it more user-

UF uses budget to justify prof's increased courseload

An independent arbitrator has ruled that UF did not violate its contract with the faculty union when it increased the teaching load of Florence Babb, professor of women's studies at UF, according to insidehighered.com.

Babb, an endowed professor and graduate coordinator of UF's Center for Women's Studies and Gender Research, challenged the change to her schedule last April. An arbitration hearing was held in February.

According to Alligator archives, Babb received a letter in 2004 detailing the terms of her hire. It indicated she would teach one course per semester and would be given a research assistant.

John Biro, president of UF's chapter of the United Faculty of Florida, the faculty union, said the decision could diminish the confidence that faculty have in their agreements with UF.

Glover could not be reached by e-mail late Monday afternoon and Babb declined to comment. A copy of the arbitrator's decision could not be obtained on Monday from UF.

State seeks death penalty in Anthony case

ORLANDO (AP) — Florida prosecutors plan to seek to the death penalty against the mother of slain Florida toddler Caylee Anthony.

Prosecutors filed papers Monday of intent to seek to have 23-year-old Casey Anthony executed if she is convicted of first-degree murder in her daughter's death, said Danielle Tavernier, a spokeswoman for the State Attorney's Office in Orlando.

Anthony claims that Caylee, who was 2 years old when she disappeared in June, was kidnapped and has pleaded not guilty. Her trial has been tentatively set for October.

Anthony's legal team already has lawyers who are qualified to defend death penalty cases and are prepared "for a vigorous defense," said Marti Mackenzie, a spokeswoman for Anthony's attorney, Jose Baez.

"This is not a death penalty case," Mackenzie said. "We will do whatever is necessary to defend Casey Anthony from the state trying to take her life."

Mexico slams Burger King for 'whopper' of insult

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico is protesting what it says is a whopper of an insult.

An advertisement for Burger King's Texican Whopper burger that has run in Europe shows a small wrestler dressed in a cape resembling a Mexican flag. The wrestler teams up with a lanky American cowboy almost twice his height to illustrate the cross-border blend of flavors.

"The taste of Texas with a little spicy Mexican," a narrator's voice says.

The taller cowboy boosts the wrestler up to reach high shelves and helps clean tall windows, while the Mexican helps the cowboy open a jar.

Mexico's ambassador to Spain said Monday he has written a letter to Burger King's offices in that nation objecting to the ad and asking that it be removed. Jorge Zermeno told Radio Formula that the ads "improperly use the stereotyped image of a Mexican."

Press officials at Burger King Corp. offices in Miami, Florida, and Madrid, Spain, did not immediately respond to requests for comment. Burger King is known for its signature Whopper hamburger.

Policymaker discusses future of health care in U.S.

By TATIANA GONZALEZ
Alligator Contributing Writer

Future health care reform in the United States will emphasize cost-effective treatment, upping health insurance requirements and healthy habits for citizens, according to Kristine Blackwood.

Blackwood, chief counsel for the U.S. Senate special committee on aging, spoke to an audience of about 100 in the Pugh Hall Ocora Monday night about proposed health care reform initiatives being discussed in Congress.

"These reforms are going to touch your life, even if you're a student," Blackwood said, citing initiatives such as wellness programs and pushing generic drugs over brand-name counterparts.

According to Blackwood, Congress has created broad concepts for health care reform, such as requiring all Americans to have health insurance and requiring nearly all business owners to provide some sort of coverage, based on the size of their work force.

Congress, along with the Obama administration, is determined to succeed where the Clinton administration failed, she said. Unlike 1992, Blackwood said, today's health care reform process will be more transparent and already has private insurance companies in on the discussion.

"There's a sense of guarded optimism in Washington right now," she said, adding the legislation will likely be created this summer and fall.

In a 20-minute question-and-answer session following the 40-minute speech, one student pointed to the national debt and asked whether the administration was worried about rising inflation, and if citizens would have to bring "wheel-barrows of money" to see their doctor in the coming years.

Blackwood

In response, Blackwood said members of Congress have to invest money in the health care reforms in order to create a healthy economy in the future.

"We'll keep paying more if we don't fix it now," she said, "We have to take control of the cost monster."

UF sophomore Matthew Newman, who attended the event, said the talk was a little redundant given his personal political aptitude. "The stuff I didn't know was insightful and did give a unique perspective," he added.

Blackwood's speech was sponsored by the Bob Graham Center for Public Service and paid for by the U.S. Senate.

STUDENT LIFE

Student-run online mag works to put out print edition

By ASHLEY HEMMY
Alligator Contributing Writer

In an age when publications are struggling to make the switch from print to online, one online magazine is working on finally making it to print.

BlackListed, a student-run magazine released only on the Internet, hopes to have its first printed issue by the end of the spring semester.

The staff hopes the move to print will help increase readership on campus, said staff writer and UF freshman Alisa Valentin.

The magazine has been around since 2003 and serves as a voice for African-Americans and other minorities at UF. Every Tuesday, the staff adds at least five articles to the publication's Web site, said staff writer and UF freshman Ayana Flewellen.

All 11 staff writers also take photos and edit, said staff writer Brianti Downing, a UF journalism junior. They've tried to keep up with recent technology by introducing video

"[The site is] easy to update, get access to and reach a larger audience."

Cayla Williams

and sound to their Web site.

For now, readership mainly consists of Gainesville residents, but there are readers at local high schools, The Florida State University and Florida Agricultural and Mechanic University.

One article about college students' fascination with Greek life reached readers as far as the state of Washington.

"Being online is so useful," said staff writer Cayla Williams, a UF public relations freshman. "It's easy to update, get access to and reach a larger audience."

The transition to paper, however, has proven to be difficult, Flewellen said, because it's harder to find willing advertisers.

The staff must also learn to change from online writing to print writing. Their articles are not short stories written in Associated Press style, used by most news publications. Flewellen said their articles sometimes reach more than a thousand words.

"BlackListed is a way to be creative," Valentin said. "It's fun creating our own style."

The magazine can be viewed at www.blacklistedmag.com.

Potential builders say there's nothing sexy about zoning

■ STORE OWNERS HAVING TROUBLE FINDING BUSINESS LOCATIONS.

Sexually oriented businesses are having trouble finding legal places to open shop in Gainesville, which could pose problems for the city.

On Monday, the Gainesville City Commission consulted Eric Kelly, a land zoning expert, on how to meet the constitutional requirement to provide proper zoning for all types of businesses.

In the past six months, the prospective owners of an adult bookstore and a "gentleman's club" contacted the city with concerns about a lack of proper zoning, said Ralph Hilliard, the city's planning manager.

If a sexually oriented business were to challenge the constitutionality of Gainesville's zoning ordinances, they may be able to place a shop in areas undesirable to the Gainesville City Commission, Kelly said.

"Essentially, an unconstitutional zoning ordinance is like having no ordinance at all in Gainesville," Kelly said.

The Commission will likely not meet on the issue again for several months, said Commissioner Jeanna Mastrodicasa.

New ice cream shop serves up frozen vegan treats

By HUNTER SIZEMORE

Tripple Chocolate Threat, Dreamsicle, Fair Trade Green Tea and Peach Cobbler. Karma Kream, a locally owned ice cream shop, will be serving up these flavors of vegan ice cream along with seven others starting today. The shop also serves coffee, baked goods and dairy-based ice cream.

"Gainesville is a pretty progressive place. But it's hard to find a good vegan dessert place in this town," said Kyle Fick, co-owner of Karma Kream. "We just assessed a need and filled it."

Fick and co-owner Payal Patel, have been readying the shop for roughly a year. When they began renting, they had "watch this space" painted on the shop's window, six months later it was changed to "patience, we're still at it."

The shop is furnished with 100 percent reused or recycled material, much of which came from an old Baskin Robbins, Patel said.

A painting of a tree laden with ice-cream cones decorates one tabletop, and multi-colored lampshades hang from the ceiling, all hand-painted.

A small cup of ice cream costs $3.40, a medium is $4.20 and a large is $4.90.

"Gainesville is a pretty progressive place. But it's hard to find a good vegan dessert place in this town."

Co-owner of Karma Kream

"I can't even finish a small," Fick said.

Fick, a vegetarian, and Patel, a vegan, both say they have thoroughly researched foods for their own diets, which translates to an awareness of all the ingredients used in Karma Kream's products.

They are careful to make sure their organic milk does not come from factory farming, which is cruel to animals, Fick said.

Karma Kream is located at 1025 W. University Ave.

Navy SEALs save captain from Somali pirates

The most special Easter Sunday of Capt. Richard Phillips' life had nothing to do with the typical holiday fare of oversized chocolate bunnies or a plethora of purple Peeps.

He regained his freedom.

Thanks to the heroic efforts of three U.S. Navy SEALs, specially trained to deal with hostage situations, Phillips managed to escape from the control of three Somali pirates on Sunday evening.

With a shot to the head of each of the pirates, the SEALs were able to secure Phillips and bring to an end a particularly tenuous situation that had dragged on for the better part of a week.

According to an article on CNN.com, hostage negotiations had come to a standstill between the U.S. military and the pirates – forcing the hand of President Barack Obama to authorize lethal force if Phillips' safety became a major concern.

Since the pirates threatened Phillips' life on numerous occasions, even pointing an AK-47 assault rifle at him, the SEALs were forced to seize an opportunity in which the captors exposed parts of their body, making sniper fire a possibility.

The Editorial Board commends the U.S. military, specifically the U.S. Navy SEALs, for its impressive response to the hostage situation off the coast of Somalia.

Not only did the SEALs manage to save Phillips from a possible death—they were able to avoid a bloody massacre through three highly executed sniper shots to the head.

Lest we forget to applaud Phillips, whose mental resolve and determination to stay alive exhibited outstanding character during what we can only imagine was an extraordinarily horrific ordeal.

Flight of Fright

For the typical American, Easter Sunday means a rat race of extended church services, marathon meals with relatives and organizing an egg hunt – but hardly landing airplanes.

Unless, of course, you happen to be a passenger on a flight where your pilot just died.

What started out as a typical Sunday trek from Marco Island to Jackson, Miss., quickly turned into a nightmare once it became apparent Capt. Joe Cabuk was no longer in control of the plane.

Lucky for the passengers on board, one individual offered them a chance of survival.

While Doug White had basic flying experience with single-engine planes, he was forced to quickly learn on the job how to maneuver a much larger King Air plane with the only assistance coming from over a headset

Miraculously White, whose name was initially not made available to media, defied all logic by landing the plane on his first try at Southwest International Airport in Fort Myers.

The Editorial Board commends passenger-turned-pilot White for managing to escape disaster with his presence of mind in taking over the reins of the plane.

Not only does White deserve much due credit for his heroic efforts in the cockpit, but the air traffic controllers in Miami should be scored with a clutch assist.

Maybe it's just us, but we think White and his family will gladly deal with the misery of flying commercial on their next plane trip.

The prospects of one inch in knee space never sounded so enticing.

Somali pirates up to snuff with Web 2.0

The American media worked themselves into such a frenzied pirate orgy over the long Easter weekend that they forgot to check and see if the actual pirates had something to say.

During the press conference explaining just how the Navy SEALs rescued Capt. Richard Phillips, CNN and Fox spent valuable airtime reading user comments posted on their Web sites by random, excited idiots.

Other than the shadowy newsworthiness of highlighting the plague of grammatical abortions that make up a vast majority of Web 2.0 blogs and posts, this wasted TV time only confirmed my sneaking suspicion that absolutely nobody with an active wireless connection has any idea that the word "their" is not interchangeable with the word "they're."

Instead of reading about how prayerful and happy everybody was that the captain was rescued, the news stations could have been following the Web 2.0 trail left by one of the actual pirates.

Captured pirate Mohamed Abdi is a 16-year-old boy with a cell phone. You think he doesn't have a MySpace account?

Well, Abdi – who prefers to be called "Dirty Mo" or by his Twitter handle "pirate_eyes" – reportedly quit using MySpace a few months ago because the site took too long to load pages on his iPhone. His main communication outlet during the hostage standoff was on Twitter, where Mo apparently sent a bunch of Tweets both before and after his capture by U.S. military forces.

Since I was apparently one of the few American reporters who even knew about this invaluable line of communication representing the authentic voice of modern piracy, I thought that I would share with my readers some of the more interesting and potentially eye-opening

letters@alligator.org

Tweets Mo sent during this tense time.

jus ran up on sumthin... thought it was bigmoney Saudi boat...wtf... "al abama" sound like Arabic name...lol

@saYYidNOmAd gettin monney, son

@CaadiMaaha much love.... your songz helpin me in a mad serious standoff – american navy aint playin

@saYYidNOmAd sayyid, dis dude jus jumped off tha boat. wanna ask if he likes fishsticks....lol

jus got on what they say is "destroyer" boat but it got mad honeys onboard...u kno me, I got to holla @Mukh_tAAhr these boys jus showed me a funny-azz video.... u seen "I'm on a Boat"?

@saYYidNOmAd yo sy, I was sleepin an they shot Oumar an Nassi!! WTF!! Turn on da TV!!!!

@saYYidNOmAd I kno...I mean, we gots guns – but we from Somalia!! I stay strapped b4 I put on shoes

Quite obviously, 140 characters or less is all that one needs to sum up the myriad concerns surrounding the Somali pirate scourge just recently noticed by most Americans. Twitter and other Web 2.0 sites offer such insightful and essential inroads into the complex human issues that will come to define our times that they surely have a great deal of social import. However, I cannot stay and Tweet on this right now – I am chatting with Kim Jong-Il about how stupid a name "Bo" is for a Portuguese water dog.

Farmers must demand right to grow pot

Although I can understand the frustration felt by Matthew Vann in his letter to the editor and tobacco farmers in general, I also understand the reasoning behind taxing a dangerous product that creates a huge burden on the state's health care system.

Like every other industry, these tobacco farmers need to adapt to the changing political and economic climate.

Rather than dwell on the numerous negative effects of tobacco taxation, these farmers need to be looking at other profitable farming options.

Fortunately, Florida is ideal for growing hemp, and perhaps these struggling tobacco farmers should demand from our government that medical marijuana and hemp farming be legalized.

These farmers would be able to greatly profit from the sale of hemp, which can be used to make rope and paper products among many other things.

Also, the medicinal purposes of marijuana have proven to be highly effective, safe and could possibly benefit millions of Florida's elderly patients in need of care.

Furthermore, it costs about $20,000 per year to house an inmate in a Florida prison.

If marijuana were decriminalized, the state would be able to save countless millions of dollars in prison costs due to a decrease in nonviolent marijuana crimes.

Antiquated practice of hazing reveals dark side of Greek life

The comic featured last week—concerning the hazing incidents that brought the UF chapter of Sigma Lambda Gamma to its second suspension for hazing violations—legitimized and downplayed the crimes of which the organization has been found guilty.

As someone who was once a victim of hazing, I can attest that it is no joking matter. The rules commonly used by many of the organizations in the Multicultural Greek Council and National Pan-Hellenic Council include: bans on social interaction outside of the organization, sleep deprivation, excessive exercising, bans on accessing certain parts of campus

(such as Turlington Plaza or the Reitz Union) bans on online networking, bans on any form of interaction with other Greek members, bans on smoking, drinking and sexual intercourse and bans on “shortcuts,” which could be interpreted to be just about anything.

How do you think a group of similarly aged peers force new members to comply with these absurd rules? Fear. At the almost daily “education sessions” (which can happen at any time of the day or night and may last several hours) it is common for new members to be blindfolded, shouted at, pushed, shoved, humiliated, sometimes beaten and psychologically tormented. New members are also forced to perform excessive push-ups, standing exercises and other physical activities until they have reached muscular failure. New members caught breaking the rules will be “pledged” harder.

Anonymous Speaking Out

There may be certain benefits to this—you might build some brotherhood/sisterhood with the people with whom you were hazed, you might shed some pounds and you might even gain some muscle tone. But after this “process” you will undoubtedly have some psychological scars.

To the Greek organizations that are caught up in the ego competition to see which organization hazes the hardest: shame on you. Can't you find more innovative and less barbaric means of building brotherhood/sisterhood? It seems you have forgotten the definition of the terms that supposedly define your existence.

To any students considering joining a Greek organization: do your research. You can usually tell or find out if an organization hazes or not. Don't just ask them up front—any organization will deny it. Talk to people in the community, and you can usually tell. Ask yourself if you really want to be part of an organization that not only hazes but prides itself on it.

The bruises I gained from my time “on-line” (pledging) are gone, but the psychological damage is still there, even after a few semesters.

It is a shame that Sigma Lambda Gamma has been caught twice for hazing, but hopefully its punishment will not be in vain, and Greek organizations at UF can mature past such behavior.

Getting your ‘Earth Day’ groove on extends beyond just recycling

As Earth Day quickly approaches and students search for ways to become “green,” it should be stressed that recycling is not the answer.

Not the answer in the sense that it is unknown how many bottles and old newspapers in our recycling bins actually find their way to the recycling plant. Too many times your beloved disposables, hand-selected by you to be reborn into something new, are carried miles and miles away to the nearest landfill, leaving behind contaminating carbon footprints in the process. Not the answer in the sense that recycling still consumes energy.

Recycling alone does not benefit humanity as the plan intended. It is in need of its brother and sister, Reduce and Reuse, who have been left behind in this green frenzy.

With Earth Day on the horizon, help bring back the lost siblings. Give yourself a one-up over that I-recycle-but-still-drive-an-SUV neighbor. Make him cringe.

If you are the SUV-driving neighbor, you

Irene Vailikit Speaking Out

now at least have the opportunity to make up for it.

Invest in your very own worm composter. Yes, I said worm composter. With one of these babies, you'll be making your own nutrient-rich fertilizer in no time (and be bringing on the competition of the greener summertime lawn). More importantly, you will be reducing the amount of garbage that travels to landfills every year and your carbon footprint on the planet.

Worm composters manufactured by Worm Factory consist of about four square plastic bins stacked one on top of another. The top three bins are going to hold your leftover food waste, paper and red wiggler worms. As microbes eat away at your garbage, the red wigglers consume the microbes, producing nutrient-rich worm castings.

The worm manure can then be disposed of in your garden or yard.

The Worm Factory composter is compact, odor-free (if used correctly) and can be stored under your kitchen sink. It can be found online and is a no-brainer to assemble. The worms can consume about five to eight pounds of food a day, providing you with rich compost every month.

You would be reducing your waste and reusing it as fertilizer. Hopefully, you will continue to recycle all of your non-compostable packaging, making the family of “R”s complete and benefitting society to the best of its ability. Much more efficient than letting lonely brother Recycle do all the work, right?

If the idea of having a worm farm in your kitchen causes your stomach to churn, have no fear. Hop on the bandwagon; use reusable canvas totes instead of plastic bags for grocery shopping and Bio Bags (biodegradable, compostable garbage bags) to dispose your waste.

A big money saver? Stop drinking bottled water. America's tap water is strictly regulated and, unlike bottled water, tested multiple times a day.

The Gainesville 2008 Water Quality Report is available online.

Don't like the taste? Invest in a water purifying pitcher. It will save you hundreds if not thousands of dollars over a lifetime.

On your way to grab a cup o' Joe? Use a thermos or traveler's mug. Many coffee shops will offer about a 10 cent discount on your coffee if you are sporting a reusable mug. If you were to pay a visit to Starbucks every day for 10 months out of the year, that's an easy $28 back in your pocket to pay for the thermos you invested in.

Whatever way you choose to participate in Earth Day, make sure that you take all facets of the process into account. While recycling is a step toward a more ecologically friendly future, it does not work as well standing alone. Hopefully, cultivating creepy-crawlies for the production of fresh fertilizer will be at the top of your list.

Where to take the family when they're in Gainesville

ALLIGATOR FILE REPORT

You're getting ready to graduate. The family's coming. You need to show them what you've been up to for the past four (or five or six) years. So here are a few places to be sure to take the whole crew, or to check out if you never got around to it:

UNION STREET FARMERS' MARKET:

The market has offered an intimate, vibrant setting and a chance to buy goods from local farmers since 1996. Every Wednesday afternoon, you can browse the organic produce, baked goods and handmade pottery while listening to live acoustic music. Products include organic coffee, nuts, vegetables, fruits, soaps and jewelry.

HOMETOWN PIZZA JOINTS: When it comes to pizza in Gainesville, there are some classics that every student must sample before graduation. Leonardo's By The Slice and Mellow Mushroom are near campus and are great options for lunch in the middle of a day full of classes. Satchel's Pizza is a bit farther, and you might wait a bit for a table. But once you bite into that first slice, it will be well worth the wait.

HARE KRISHNA LUNCH: Even if vegetarianism isn't your thing, you may be surprised to find yourself going back for a free second serving of eggplant, rice and coconut cake. Dishes vary daily, but are always "karma-free." Pick up a $4 plate on the Plaza of the Americas weekday afternoons.

HIPPODROME THEATRE: Founded in 1973, the Hippodrome Theatre has been offering Gainesville residents exposure to artsy shows and films for decades. For an out-of-the-box entertainment experience, check out a play on the upstairs main stage, or a foreign flick in the intimate screening room.

STUBBIE'S SHIRT PUB: For international flavor and great service, head over to Stubbie's Shirt Pub on University Avenue. The pub features more than 150 types of beer from countries such as Brazil, Canada, Israel, Thailand and Namibia – not to mention dozens from across the United States.

OCALA POKER AND JAI-ALAI: Located about 30 miles south of Gainesville in Orange Lake, Ocala Poker and Jai-Alai offers a plethora of entertainment options in addition to the popular South Florida sport, from watching and wagering to drinking and eating to catching a sports game on one of more than 50 high-definition screens. The facility recently added poker. Jai-alai is played this spring from early April to April 30, and there are two performances – a matinee and an evening performance – every Tuesday through Saturday.

GINNIE SPRINGS: At Ginnie Springs, located about 30 miles northwest of Gainesville in High Springs, you can canoe, tube, snorkel and scuba dive in caves amid beautiful natural surroundings. A campground is also on site.

LAKE WAUBURG: At UF's Lake Wauburg – eight miles south of campus on State Road 441 – you can relax and enjoy outdoor activities, including boating, water skiing, volleyball, picnicking and climbing a 55-foot wall. UF faculty and staff have free access to the lake, and four guests are allowed per Gator 1 Card.

DEVIL'S MILLHOPPER GEOLOGICAL STATE PARK: At Devil's Millhopper Geological State Park, you can walk around the edge and down to the bottom of a 10,000-year-old, 120-foot deep sinkhole.

GATORS BASEBALL AND SOFTBALL: Though basketball season is over and football season is months off, UF's baseball and softball teams are still competing, so you can still show off your orange-and-blue pride to your family and friends.

The Gainesville Experience

The end of the school year is upon us – the time for all the soon-to-be graduates to make the most of their last few weeks in Gainesville. To help, here is a list of the top 10 things to do before leaving town.

10 Lake Wauburg
Lake Wauburg offers UF students fun – for free. Just bring your Gator 1 Card to Wauburg, and you and your friends can go fishing, canoeing, kayaking, sailing and swimming. It's the ultimate Gainesville outdoor experience. Head down Southwest 13th Street toward Micanopy and you'll see the sign for the lake.

9 Become a Globetrotter
Salty Dog Saloon on West University Avenue offers one of the best bar experiences in Gainesville, and becoming a Globetrotter is something you shouldn't miss. To become a Globetrotter you have to drink one beer from each country listed on the beer menu in 60 days – a total of 30 beers. Not only do you get a free T-shirt, but you also get to drink some good beer in a fun atmosphere.

8 Hare Krishna Lunch
It's not just for vegetarians and hippies. Everyone should try the Krishna lunch on the Plaza of the Americas. Not only is the food good, it's cheap. Krishna Lunch has been served on campus since 1971 and draws hundreds of students each day.

7 Gator Stompin'
This graduation tradition is a must-do for graduating seniors. For $25 you spend the night of April 30 cruising restaurants and barhopping to 32 different locations, including Gator City, Fat Tuesday, Dragonfly and Mellow Mushroom. At each bar you get one alcoholic or nonalcoholic drink, and at each restaurant you get a food item. And there's a free T-shirt.

6 Running of the Bulls
Each Fall, the women of the Panhellenic Council hand out bids for their sororities to excited hopefuls on Norman Field. And each year, hundreds of people show up to watch. Why the big turnout? It's pure entertainment. Nowhere else in Gainesville will you hear more screaming, witness more excitement and see more tears all in one place. Whether or not you're a part of the Greek community, sorority bid day, or "the running of the bulls" is something you can't miss. Note: This event takes place in the Fall, so if you're graduating, make it a reason to come back and visit next year.

5 Eat at The Swamp
If you didn't dine at The Swamp with your parents during your freshman year, it's something you should probably make happen before you leave town. It's not so much about the food as it is about the environment. So stop by with mom and dad, enjoy a pitcher of beer and some food, and enjoy one of Gainesville's most clichéd dining experiences.

4 Orange & Brew
The Orange & Brew may not be the No. 1 hot spot for drinking, but how can you pass it up? Other than sneaking a flask into a football game, this is really your only chance to drink on campus. And drinking here won't get you into trouble. With a wide range of available beers and late hours (it's open until 1 a.m. on Fridays), it's one place on campus you shouldn't pass up.

3 Celebrate at Marston
Marston Science Library – the library that isn't. Before leaving, graduates should try to celebrate something (a birthday, good exam grade, graduation, etc.) in the enormous library where no one pays attention to the fact that, yes, this is a library. You aren't supposed to answer your phone and talk with "outside" voices. People have already been seen celebrating birthdays there with friends and cupcakes, so you won't be the first obnoxious person to do it.

2 Ginnie Springs
Only 13 miles north of Gainesville, Ginnie Springs is one of the best swimming and diving spots around. There are seven different springs in which to snorkel or dive. It's also fairly cheap: $10 depending on what you want to do. There's also a river to tube down with your friends. This spot will make any hot Gainesville day a lot nicer.

1 Watch the Gators win a NCAA Championship
Soon-to-be graduates, you can check this off your list. Thanks to the UF football and men's basketball teams, we were all here for some of the greatest experiences of our college careers.

What does being a UF senior mean to YOU? BY SAMUEL DECUBELLIS

Being a senior at the University of Florida is hard to sum up in words. It's the culmination of a lot of hard work and dedication. It's the realization that I'm about to enter the real world and leave a lot of friends and memories behind. I remember when I first got here four years ago, it felt like graduation would never come, but now that it's staring me right in the face, I have a real sense of accomplishment. I've been a gator all of my life; my goal has always been to come here and get my degree. To have achieved that goal is an amazing feeling. I know though that with all great accomplishments, it wasn't solely because of me. I will always be thankful for the people in my life that helped push me and influence me to this point in my life. Whether it was my girlfriend making sure I didn't forget to sleep in on my early morning exam, or my cousin helping me with business finance when I was utterly confused. I've just been blessed with a great group of friends and loved ones. I know though that my parents will be the happiest of all though, because they won't have any more bills to pay! Of course, I also can't forget for a second all the wonderful memories I have from our football and basketball teams. When I got here freshman year, I was hoping to see just an SEC championship! The fact that I saw four national championships is ridiculous. My class has honestly been one of the luckiest classes of all time in that regards. Personally, I'm just glad I got to witness Georgia getting stomped by us in Jacksonville this year. I'll never forget seeing that stadium half full with only gators left cheering on the team. All in all, it has been a great ride. My professors have done a great job preparing me, and while I will always look back with a smile on the crazy nights in midtown or tailgating for a game, I'm ready to leave my mark on the world. One thing will always ring true for me however; it truly was great to be Florida Gator.

Make Mom Happy

Make the most of your graduation memories and take pictures of you wearing your cap and gown in different places on campus.

By the Albert and Alberta statue at Emerson Alumni Hall on University Avenue.

Inside of Ben Hill Griffin Stadium surrounded by the glory that is The Swamp, or outside the stadium next to the entrance-way to football greatness.

In front of the Baughman Center on Museum Road.

In front of the fountain near Tigert Hall on 13th Street.

In front of the sign of your freshman dorm, your college, or your fraternity or sorority.

On the Plaza of the Americas, with a closed Library West as your backdrop.

Outside of your favorite drinking establishment (actually, that one might not make mom very happy).

Use scenic Lake Alice as your backdrop.

Make sure you will graduate

ALLIGATOR STAFF REPORT

Before UF students planning on graduating in May send out those fancy graduation announcements, they should take a look at the university's checklist to make sure they actually get their diplomas:

- 1 Make sure you have met all of your degree requirements with your academic adviser.
- 2 If you haven't filled out a degree application form, you're late. But you can still get a late application form on ISIS.
- 3 Verify your local and home addresses so you're sure to get your diploma. Your diploma will be mailed to your home mailing address about 10 weeks after graduation.
- 4 Clear your academic record. Incomplete grades must be converted to satisfactory letter grades before you can graduate.
- 5 Satisfy all financial obligations (fines, tickets, fees, etc.) with University Financial Services in Criser Hall, Room 113. Outstanding debt will delay release of your diploma and transcript.
- 6 Complete an exit interview with the Office for Student Financial Affairs if you have received financial aid, student loans or scholarships.
- 7 Visit the Career Resource Center for help writing your resume and to consult other career-related materials. In other words, get a job.
- 8 Order your regalia at the UF Bookstore. There will be a $10 late fee if you order between today and April 16, and a $15 late fee after that.
- 9 Consider joining the UF Alumni Association. For recent graduates, a membership costs $25 a year or $600 for a lifetime membership. It gets more expensive down the road: $40 per year or $800 for a lifetime membership.

AROUND CAMPUS

EATING RIGHT IS HIGHLY LOGICAL

Recommendations: Eat high-fiber foods, such as fruits, vegetables, and whole grain products. Eat fewer high-fat foods. Maintain normal body weight. And live long and prosper.

Gators to play Seminoles in last of three-game series

Andrew Stanfill / Alligator Staff

UF right fielder Daniel Pigott waits for a pitch during the Gators' 16-3 win against Central Florida on Wednesday night at McKethan Stadium.

■ THE TEAMS HAVE SPLIT THEIR FIRST TWO GAMES.

By KYLE MAISTRI
Alligator Staff Writer
kmaistri@alligator.org

The Gators are hoping to avoid a case of déjà vu in Tallahassee tonight.

Just like last season, UF (23-12) is heading into the final leg of its three-game series with FSU (21-11) having split the first two contests. The two meetings this season resulted in a 5-4 win in Gainesville and a 3-2 defeat in Jacksonville for UF.

When the Gators traveled to Tallahassee last season for the third game of the series, they fell 4-2.

Over the weekend, the Gators notched their first road SEC series victory in Auburn, Ala., and UF coach Kevin O'Sullivan hopes the momentum will carry his team into the final regular-season meeting with the Seminoles without too much buildup from the coaching staff.

"I hope that I don't have to say a whole lot. I hope that they get fired up and ready to go," O'Sullivan said.

If momentum isn't enough to carry the Gators to a victory, O'Sullivan feels confident that his well-rested pitching staff will give UF an advantage.

In the final two games against the Tigers, the Gators used a combined four pitchers thanks in part to an eight-inning outing by starter

Baseball

Stephen Locke on Saturday and a 6 1/3-inning performance by freshman starter Anthony DeSclafani on Sunday.

"We certainly got the numbers. We just need to execute," O'Sullivan said.

Freshman Greg Larson, who has yet to start a game in his short college career, finished out Locke's effort on Saturday and is one of the options to start tonight at 6 p.m. in Dick Howser Stadium.

Senior Patrick Keating, who lost his spot in the weekend rotation,

UF FOOTBALL

Two more starters injured

By BRIAN STEELE
Alligator Staff Writer
bsteale@alligator.org

With all the injuries to his team, UF coach Urban Meyer joked that he doesn't know how the Gators will even play their spring game Saturday.

The Gators' injury list has seemingly grown by the day, and two more starters were added to that list Monday.

Freshman cornerback Janoris Jenkins will have finger surgery and is expected to be out for three weeks. Meyer said the injury was "real minor."

The news for sophomore offensive lineman Maurkice Pouncey is less fortunate. Pouncey had successful shoulder surgery Monday and is expected to be out for three months. While he'll be ready for the start of the fall season, he will miss a majority of the summer training program.

UF is already without defensive linemen, Justin Trattou (shoulder strain) and Carlos Dunlap (abdominal injury), tight end Desmond Parks (sprained knee) and receiver David Nelson (sprained right foot).

A slew of other players have also nursed injuries throughout the spring.

MEYER DEFENDS HARVIN: Meyer said he has received phone calls from NFL personnel asking about former receiver Percy Harvin, who is no longer a lock to be a first-round pick in the NFL Draft on April 25.

"We won two national championships around (Percy Harvin)."

Urban Meyer
UF football coach

Several reports have surfaced questioning Harvin's work ethic and coachability, and NFLDraftBible.com reported Harvin tested positive for marijuana at the NFL Scouting Combine, though that report has not been confirmed elsewhere.

While Meyer did not comment on Harvin's coachability, he quickly elaborated on

MLS great for summer lull

Summers have usually been a rough time for me as far as sports go.

There's no football, except for the NFL Draft, which doesn't get me all hot and bothered like it does for other people. College basketball is done, and the NBA doesn't really hold my attention. And I only follow MLB when the Atlanta Braves are doing well down the stretch (so I haven't watched in a while).

Tennis and golf provide distractions for a week or so at a time, and then I spend the next week trying to be Roger Federer or Tiger Woods. Still, I could never find anything strong enough to make up for the loss of football.

Until last summer, when I did the previously unthinkable.

I got into soccer.

Euro 2008 captivated me. I'll never forget Turkey's improbable run to the semifinals, capped by a thrilling shootout victory against Croatia, where the only goals were scored in the 119th and 122nd minutes in extra time.

Next, I dove into the English Premier League and got hooked on Arsenal, but I wanted to follow a club that I had a realistic chance of watching in person.

So I went ten steps past my sacrilegious decision to follow soccer and chose to give the MLS a chance.

The season started three weeks ago and runs through the summer to the MLS Cup on Nov. 22. It cov-and freshman Justin Poovey, who has made two starts this season, are the other two options.

Last season, O'Sullivan used six different pitchers to complete the third game, and he has shown a quick hook when his starters begin to struggle this season.

Having many options in relief will only help in that respect.

Larson and Poovey are just two of the many freshmen who have been producing for the Gators lately.

Preston Tucker was named SEC Freshman of the Week for the second time this season after his Ruthian performance against Central

O'Sullivan

Florida on Wednesday night, and right fielder Daniel Pigott has provided a versatile option in the No. 2 spot in the lineup.

Pigott, who laid down the suicide squeeze with two outs to cap UF's ninth-inning comeback against Alabama on March 28, hit his second home run of the season Sunday.

"He can run. He's got power," O'Sullivan said of Pigott. "We always thought he'd be an exciting offensive player for us."

Avoiding the same fate as last season may come down to the contributions of the freshmen who weren't on the roster a year ago.

O'Sullivan said growing pains are to be expected with a young squad, but he feels his team is starting to hit its stride.

Fullbacks show improvement during spring

all the former offensive star did while at UF.

"We won two national championships around him — some of the greatest years in the history of Florida football," Meyer said. "I was on the sideline with a guy that I know exactly the competitive nature of what we're dealing with. Percy's an extreme competitor. ... I think he'll be a great NFL football player."

FULLBACKS GET 'FUNCTIONAL': To say Meyer was disappointed with his fullbacks when spring practice started would be an understatement. Steven Wilks, Rick Burgess and T.J. Priemore did not please the coaching staff when the spring sessions began.

Now, the unit is making Meyer feel much more comfortable.

"I made the comment that the fullback position was bordering on embarrassing," Meyer said. "It's very functional right now."

Meyer has been especially appreciative of walk-on Christopher Scott, who has played running back and fullback. Meyer said Scott could play at either position.

"I have no idea (where he came from)," Meyer said.

"He showed up one day on the practice field."

Football

MIKE, from page 19

ers my summer dead period, and with most games on Saturdays, it fills the void of week-to-week excitement that football left behind.

Most importantly, it doesn't suck. If you enjoy watching soccer, MLS has enough talent and parity to hold your attention. The first step is picking a team to follow.

The Eastern Conference has been much tougher than the West in recent years — think SEC vs. Big East — but the wild card slots are awarded without regard to conference, so teams aren't punished for playing in a tough division. By this rule, New York won the West last year.

Compiled with my severely limited MLS knowledge and gut feeling, here are a few teams to start following this year, including their current records.

CHICAGO FIRE (2-2-0): Founded on the anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire (fun fact), the Fire has a solid developmental system and boasts former U.S. National Team forward Brian McBride. It's early, but Chicago figures to be one of the top teams in the East. Still, I wouldn't pick the Fire unless you're predisposed to Chicago teams.

LA GALAXY (0-2-1): If you like the Lakers, Yankees, Cowboys or any other franchise that picks up bandwagon fans by name and logo alone, these guys are for you. They get David Beckham back in June and also feature U.S. star Landon Donovan, so sell your soul and jump on board! Just don't expect a playoff run. If you're more of a Clippers-type person, check out cross-town rival Chivas U.S.A.

SEATTLE SOUNDERS (3-0-1): Simply put, the Sounders are awesome. Drew Carey is a part owner. Fans can vote to fire the general manager. They have a marching band. They've sold out season tickets, impressing the league enough to award Seattle the MLS Cup in its first season. Nearly 30,000 fans show up for each match, more than nine teams the English Premier League draw. They have former Arsenal great Freddie Ljungberg, rising star striker Fredy Montero and Nathan Sturgis, the brother of UF kicker Caleb Sturgis.

I'm sold. Alligator writer Mike DiFerdinando and I are flying out for their May 30 match against Columbus.

Maybe being a MLS fan will turn out to be a miserable existence, but the time I've spent learning the intricacies of the league and its different clubs has been very entertaining thus far. If nothing else, it'll give me something different to follow this summer.

Impeccably placed just off Archer Road and across the street from the University of Florida campus, life at The Bartram is an exciting blend of comfort and convenience ... location and luxury ... intelligent design and smart looks.
