UF launches anti-harassment Web page

By ROBERTA O. ROBERTS
Alligator Contributing Writer

UF took its stance against sexual harassment to the Internet with the launch of a new Web site Tuesday.

The page provides students with information on sexual harassment myths and facts, what to do if a student is harassed and a free on-line training program for students, said Jaquie Resnick, senior adviser to the vice president of Student Affairs.

"We wanted students to have a centralized place where they could get information," she said. "We want students to know that they shouldn't have to tolerate anything that is disrespectful or intimidating or offensive."

Jessica Warshaver, a UF journalism student, believes that the page was created in response to recent sexual harassment cases on campus.

"The Web page seems like a formality type of thing," said Warshaver, referencing an incident last semester with a graduate student who allegedly groped more than 30 women by telling them that they had a bug on their bodies.

"I feel the university was covering its ass," she said.

Resnick, however, said that the Web page was not made in response to the groping incident but has been in the works since last summer.

The Web page can be accessed through the vice president of Student Affairs Web site at www.ufsa.ufl.edu/students/sh/sexualharassment.shtml.

GRU to host local fair, focus on being green

By NATALIE ARRIETA

Gainesville Regional Utility is reminding residents that being green can be cost-efficient too.

GRU is holding an energy fair Saturday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the Martin Luther King Jr. Multipurpose Center.

The fair will feature energy exhibits, live demonstrations and workshops on how to lower utility bills.

"We're doing everything we can to empower customers to make decisions on how to manage their utility bill," said Nona Jones, a community relations director at GRU.

The energy fair hopes to capture the attention of college students, in addition to Gainesville's low-income residents, Jones said.

"We are going to have workshops throughout the day that I believe students will really benefit from," Jones said.

The energy fair will feature workshops such as how to set and clean an air-conditioning unit, how to lower utility bills and how to conduct energy audits.

Free lunch will be provided for the first 150 people in attendance.

Rutherford B. Hayes, Barack Obama and Bob Graham once walked the halls of Harvard Law School, and in September, seven University of Florida graduates will walk them too.

Toby Stock, former assistant dean of admissions for HLS, interviews thousands of applicants each year, but he only calls about 10 percent of them to offer them a spot at the most esteemed law school in the nation.

Only about 9 percent of the admitted students at HLS come from the southeast.

The admitted Gators include Krysten Rosen, Danielle D'Oyley, Jason Gross, Elizabeth Akerman, Freddy Williams, Hilary D'Angelo and a 2008 UF graduate, Keely O'Malley.

"I'm not surprised by the numbers," Stock said in an e-mail. "UF is a great school with some very talented kids."

Stock served as assistant dean of admissions for HLS for the past three years and personally welcomed the newly accepted class of 2012 — the last class he admitted — by phone call.

Man arrested after police find methadone, marijuana, crack in his car

A Gainesville man was arrested after police found marijuana, crack cocaine and methadone pills in his car during a traffic stop.

At 12:45 a.m. Tuesday, Irvin Lawrence, 62, was stopped by a Gainesville Police Department officer for an expired tag. The officer noticed Lawrence seemed to be hiding something. The officer searched Lawrence and his car and found a small bag of marijuana in his pocket and a bag of crack cocaine in his wallet, according to a GPD report.

The officer also found a prescription bottle with five methadone pills in the car. The bottle had the name Jerry Brunson on it, the report stated. Lawrence said he bought the marijuana but was holding the crack cocaine for his friend.

He told the officer the methadone pills also belonged to his friend, but could not identify his friend's name until he read the bottle. Lawrence was charged with two felonies of possession of a controlled substance and one misdemeanor possession of less than 20 grams of marijuana.

Bennett Brummer, have argued that heavy caseloads mean poor defendants don't get adequate representation, jeopardizing their constitutional rights. They said their office has gone through 12.6 percent budget cuts the past two years, while the caseload has risen by about 29 percent.

Miami-Dade Circuit Judge Stanford Blake agreed, ruling in September that thousands of felony cases would be handled by a new regional office set up to represent people when the public defender has a conflict. But the appeals court found otherwise, with Judge Frank Shepherd noting that the public defender's claims were better suited for the political realm.

"This action is nothing more than a political question masquerading as a lawsuit, and should be dispatched on that basis," Shepherd said in a concurring opinion.

Martinez said he would appeal the decision to the Florida Supreme Court, arguing that it is unethical for public defenders to fail in their duty to represent people because they are overworked.

"Unfortunately, this ruling is a setback," he said. "In essence, what we are doing is rationing justice for poor people. That can't be right."

Public defenders around the country are grappling with budget cuts and higher caseloads, but Miami's office went farther than most in seeking to refuse cases. Miami-Dade State Attorney Katherine Fernandez Rundle, whose office appealed the earlier decision, said now that the litigation is over, prosecutors, defense lawyers and judges should discuss solutions.

"My concern was that it could have created absolute chaos in the system," Rundle said in an interview. "We can now go about the business of being creative and supportive and collaborative as opposed to being distracted by litigation."

STATE

Panel OKs Fla. Hurricane Catastrophe Fund rule

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — A state board has approved an emergency rule designed to protect the state from up to $20 billion in losses if the state gets hit by a devastating hurricane.

The rule implements legislation passed by lawmakers and is awaiting Gov. Charlie Crist's signature. Crist chairs the State Board of Administration that voted Wednesday.

Quick action was needed because hurricane season begins on June 1. The bill protects the state by my making changes to the state's Hurricane Catastrophe Fund, which serves as a backup for insurance companies.

Appeals court says Miami defender can't shed cases

MIAMI (AP) — A state appeals court expressed sympathy with the crushing workload faced by Miami's public defender but ruled Wednesday that refusing to accept felony cases is not the way to fix the problem.

The Third District Court of Appeal's decision overturned a judge's ruling in September that would have permitted the office that represents Miami's poor defendants to stop accepting thousands of lesser third-degree felony cases, such as auto theft, forgery and battery. The appeals judges said there are alternatives to dealing with the public defender's budget dilemma.

"There is simply insufficient evidence to support such a drastic remedy," the court's opinion said. "We understand the difficulties."

Instead of turning to the courts, the appeals judges recommended that Public Defender Carlos Martinez seek out the Florida Legislature for budget help and also make administrative changes that could ease the workload on the office's 180-plus attorneys. Martinez has already enlisted the help of the Florida Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers to provide attorneys willing to handle some cases for free.

Martinez said he would appeal the decision to the Florida Supreme Court, arguing that it is unethical for public defenders to fail in their duty to represent people because they are overworked.

"Unfortunately, this ruling is a setback," he said. "In essence, what we are doing is rationing justice for poor people. That can't be right."

Flower laborers to share stories, hardships at event

By MICHAEL HERBERT
Alligator Contributing Writer

Some bouquets, like those given on Mother's Day, may lose their luster when buyers find out how the flowers were picked.

The Civic Media Center, 433 S. Main St., will host a panel tonight at 7:30 about the oppressed flower laborers of Columbia.

Speakers will include Amanda Camacho, President of Asopapagayo Flower Union in Bogota, Colombia and Carolina Delgado, South Florida Organizer for Fairness in Flowers Campaign.

"We're going to hear directly from the people on the ground, working in these plantations," said James Schmidt, a coordinator at the Center. "[The event] represents a movement to unite organizations for justice for flower workers in Latin America and the U.S."

In 2004, U.S. consumers bought $385 million of Colombian-grown flowers. Colombia is the second largest flower producer in the world. Most of the country's flower workers are women, many of whom are single mothers, who face sexual harassment, unsanitary working conditions, pesticide exposure, overwork, lack of maternity leave and unsafe work conditions.

The panel will focus on these and other issues, according to Delgado.

With most cut flowers bought in the U.S. being given to women, it is especially important for them to know where their flowers are coming from, Delgado said.

Camacho is one of thousands of flower laborers who works about 48 hours a week at $8 a day.

Near Valentine's Day and Mother's Day, this workload increases to a work week upward of 80 hours, without pay increase, Delgado said.

Camacho has toured the U.S. for two weeks to raise awareness about the working conditions, Delgado said.

She feels that developing the Fair Trade Certification, which ensures that workers worldwide receive proper pay, treatment and social aid, would help flower workers.

"We're going to hear directly from the people on the ground, working in these plantations."

James Schmidt

Civic Media Center coordinator

"There is no Fair Trade presence in Colombia currently," Delgado said. "Developing a Fair Trade label is difficult." Veriflora, a program that is in development, would fill that need, but it is in its infancy.

The main obstacle to Fair Trade in Colombia is the legitimacy of protective organizations and the social requirements of Fair Trade Certification, she said.

Delgado made the distinction between labels such as Fair Trade Certified, which are recognized as ensuring safe working environments and worker compensation, and labels that she and many organizations consider to be purely for marketing, such as the current Florverde label in use in Colombia by many flower companies.

In addition to attending the event and supporting the organizations pushing for fair treatment of farm workers, Schmidt also recommends people be conscious of the flowers they purchase.

"You can actually buy Fair Trade flowers online or from your florist," he said.

The National Farmworker Ministry, Central Florida Jobs with Justice and the Farmworker Association of Florida will host the event. All three organizations are working to support efforts for and spread knowledge about the fair treatment of farm workers, both locally and internationally.

Cabinet appointments divide senators, postpone vote

■ STUDENT SENATORS WALKED OUT DURING THE MEETING.

By SARA WATSON
Alligator Writer

Despite hopes for a united front, UF student senators proved a rift still exists between the majority and minority parties at the first summer session meeting Tuesday night, where several senators walked out to force early adjournment.

The meeting, which was held to vote on 48 appointees to Student Government agencies and SG Cabinet, began amicably.

"It doesn't matter what color shirt you wore back in the campaign; we're trying to get work done," said Sen. Jonathan Ossip, the new Orange and Blue party leader.

But the debate quickly turned to the issue of potential cabinet appointtees chosen by the executive branch and the differing sentiments on how the selection process was handled.

"The executive appointments, at least from the senate side of it, unfortunately was done in what at best could be called under the table and at worst could be called just blatantly wrong," Ossip said.

The senator and several supporters argued that resumes and information about potential candidates were e-mailed 15 minutes before Tuesday's meeting and that they needed more time to make informed choices.

Ossip, seconded by Sen. Alden Gillespy, moved to postpone the voting until May 19.

The senate majority, however, said the executive branch's Replacement and Agenda Committee spent four days finding and reviewing qualified candidates.

"To put all the work of the executive committee to shame is ludicrous," Sen. Audrey Schnell said.

Ossip's motion to postpone the vote failed, and about seven senators, including Gillespy and Sen. Neil Gundavda, walked out of the room. There weren't enough remaining senators to allow for a vote.

According to an Orange and Blue Party press release, the nominations will be heard at Tuesday's meeting after a one-week hold.

Seats empty in top journalism class

By RACHAEL PINO
Alligator Writer

Each semester, anxious students stalk ISIS for an open seat in Reporting, a make-or-break class in UF's College of Journalism and Communications.

But this summer there are plenty of empty seats.

While some attribute this to challenges in the journalism industry, others say the struggling economy is to blame.

The class is run by Master Lecturer Mike Foley, who said about 80 students registered for the 100 seats in the class.

Although the college is offering the traditional five Reporting sections, Helga Williams, an office assistant in the college, said enrollment is down this summer.

"I'm thinking students just don't have the money to be here," she said.

According to UF's Web site, the three-credit course costs $377.73 and an additional $18.67 for lab supplies.

April Shapiro, who advises freshmen and sophomores in the college, said she is surprised that the number of declared journalism majors is strong despite the struggling newspaper industry. "I would think they would be shying away from going into journalism, but we're still getting people coming out of high school who are interested," she said.

Shapiro added that many people are learning how to manage on-line news content instead of print.

"[News] is never going to go away," she said. "It's just changing and evolving."

Sandra Storr, a program assistant in the Office of Student Services, said that Applied Fact Finding and Newspaper Editing, courses for third-year journalism majors, were not being offered this summer. She said the fact that the college is offering Problems and Ethics in Journalism in Society may explain the change.

Like Shapiro, Storr said she hadn't seen a decrease in interest for a journalism degree, adding that students may have to apply the skills learned for print journalism elsewhere.

"Based on what I've seen, I don't see any panic," Storr said.

'Supreme' Seat Women dominate field for high court spot

Beyond resuscitating the economy, one of the most critical decisions on tap for President Barack Obama lies in finding a replacement for outgoing Supreme Court Justice David Souter. Obama's upcoming selection will mark his first nomination to the nation's highest court — a choice that will undoubtedly carry weight beyond the four to eight years of his presidency.

According to an article on CNN.com, the list of potential nominees has been narrowed down to approximately six serious contenders. Interestingly enough, out of the individuals with a viable shot of succeeding Souter, all but one are female. Ruth Bader Ginsburg, appointed by former President Bill Clinton in 1993, is currently the only woman serving on the Supreme Court.

Out of the group of women currently being considered by Obama, the confirmed names include federal appeals court judges Sonia Sotomayor and Diane Wood, and Solicitor General Elena Kagan.

Sotomayor, 54, who would become the first Hispanic justice if appointed, has bipartisan appeal but recently faced criticism on "The Late Show with David Letterman," where her intelligence and demeanor were called into question. Such accusations seem particularly baseless considering Sotomayor's strong academic background, which include degrees from Princeton and Yale. While her candidacy has garnered some negative attention from late night talk show types, most telling about her chances for a nomination stems from her support from both of New York's senators, who penned a letter of support to Obama on her behalf.

The other federal appeals court judge, Wood, 59, currently works as an instructor at the University of Chicago — the school where she first forged a friendship with Obama. What may be going against Wood, aside from her age, is the fact she did not attend an Ivy League school for either her undergraduate or law school studies. Even though a quick look at the academic backgrounds of the current Supreme Court justices reveals a heavy trend toward Ivy-based educations, Wood's decision to attend the University of Texas for the entirety of her collegiate career should not preclude her from serious consideration by Obama.

Beyond her current position, Kagan made a name for herself as a professor and then later while presiding as dean of Harvard Law School. Fortunately for Kagan, the 49-year-old attorney who serves as the administration's top attorney before the Supreme Court, a lack of judicial experience may not deter her chances of assuming Souter's seat. In addition to her strong academic background, Kagan exhibited political acumen while working under the Clinton administration as associate White House counsel.

For Obama, the criteria of youth has been made known as a highly desired attribute. Given the fact that a younger appointment could serve as many as 30 or more years on the Supreme Court, Obama has paid careful attention to the ages of all of the candidates as he prepares to make his decision. Such an emphasis on longevity of service could potentially bode well for Kagan, who has yet to celebrate her 50th birthday.

A quick glance at former President George W. Bush's administration would reveal the prior two appointments skewing more toward the young side. Both Chief Justice John Roberts and Justice Samuel Alito, appointed to the high court in 2005 by Bush, remain years away from receiving Social Security benefits. For Wood, 59, an appointment to the Supreme Court may have unfortunately passed her by.

Regardless of age, the quality of candidates appears quite impressive which will ultimately pay huge dividends for Obama's impact as a president — both now and beyond his time in office. The diversity of potential appointments, in terms of gender, ethnicity and career path, speaks volumes of the Obama Administration's willingness to be open-minded. What remains important, though, is delivering a nominee respected by both Republicans and Democrats alike, so that the confirmation process runs its course in a relatively timely manner.

Oprah's latest act not finger-lickin' good

Oprah Winfrey rose to power by capturing the hearts and minds of millions of devoted followers. According to industry estimates, her weekly television audience and magazine subscribers combine to form a bloc of over 50 million committed supporters.

In real terms, there are more people living in Oprahland than in Spain.

Her power over her devotees has brought her enormous wealth and worldwide fame, and for most of her career Oprah wielded this omnipotence in a benevolent manner. Last week, though, the KFC coupon fiasco laid bare an Oprah wholly unlike the one we thought we knew so well.

Oprah told the world last Friday that she bought everyone in America a grilled chicken meal at KFC. This seemed at first like a fun little stunt — Oprah always gives stuff away on her show, and everyone could use a free meal these days.

In a completely unsurprising chain of events, Oprah's free chicken meal was a huge success. So much so that KFC franchises across the country had to turn away the coupons after only a day of the weeklong promotion. People got angry because Oprah said she already paid for all this chicken.

KFC managed to win this media game — of course they planned for this to happen. Every news outlet in the country mentioned not only KFC but also the new grilled chicken. The stories all make it seem like this grilled chicken is better than heroin. Their CEO came out with a smarmy YouTube "apology" that played like another commercial for his greasy new chicken meals.

Oprah, though, is in a tough place now. She just got the PETA "Person of the Year" award for her recent exposure of sustainable food and agriculture, and now she

letters@alligator.org

whores herself out for a company that PETA calls "Kentucky Fried Cruelty." Naturally, PETA is pussyfooting around this fracas; their official line is that Oprah was "deliberately misled" about KFC.

Oprah never paid for any chicken — she got paid millions to pull this stunt.

The first sign of trouble came with the massive support on all of Oprah's media platforms for "The Secret." Oprah devoted months of exposure to the promotion of a pyramid scheme built of puerile thoughts and fake spirituality.

Here is how "The Secret" works. Step one, you need to desire material things. Step two, wish for them. Step three is being rich and getting on Oprah to promote your stupid book/movie about magic wishing power. Somewhere, the Underpants Gnomes are furious they didn't think of this first.

"The Secret" actually says that bad things only happen to people who think bad thoughts. Oprah has donated time and money to Rwandan genocide recovery, but it turns out that what she should have been doing all along is just getting the damned Hutus and Tutsis to read "The Secret."

Something is rotten in the state of Oprahland these last few years. Queen Oprah has enjoyed a long and prosperous reign atop the American media structure for more than 20 years. If absolute power corrupts absolutely, what exactly are we to make of the damning scope of Oprah power?

Obama considers six for judicial seat

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP) — President Barack Obama is considering six potential nominees for the U.S. Supreme Court, a source familiar with the president's plans said Wednesday.

The source said Obama is looking for a mix of ideological perspectives and geographic diversity. The president is expected to announce his nominees in the next few weeks, but the Senate will not vote on any of them until after the November elections.

Obama's list of potential nominees is expected to include Justice Brandenburg, a former federal judge from Ohio, and Justice Sotomayor, a federal judge from Puerto Rico. Other potential nominees include Justice Kagan, a federal judge from California, and Justice Alito, a federal judge from Pennsylvania.

The source said Obama is also considering Justice Stevens, a federal judge from Indiana, and Justice Breyer, a federal judge from Massachusetts. The source said Obama is looking for a nominee who is a strong supporter of the rule of law and who has a strong record of judicial service.

LOCAL GRU plans to provide Internet to rural, historic areas

By CHELSEA KEENAN
Alligator Writer

Andrew Stanfill / Alligator Staff

Gainesville Mayor Pegeen Hanrahan discusses the possibility of GRU expanding Internet access during a meeting on GRU services at the company's Fourth Avenue headquarters Wednesday afternoon.

Gainesville Regional Utility committee members and employees discussed Gainesville's accessibility to broadband Internet Wednesday afternoon.

Congress's Stimulus Bill allotted $7.2 billion in grants and loans, some of which will be used to bring broadband Internet to rural and underdeveloped areas.

During an April meeting, members of the Committee said that research should be done to work toward adding Internet into older neighborhoods in downtown and East Gainesville.

GRU's Internet service, GRUCom, provides access to many existing student apartment complexes near UF and Santa Fe College.

"I would want us to look for ways to make this economically feasible for other customers as well."

Craig Lowe
GRU committee chair

It's harder to add Internet into older, already established developments many times because of infrastructure or wiring, said committee member Lauren Poe.

"I would want us to look for ways to make this economically feasible for other customers as well," said Craig Lowe, the committee's chair. "We're essentially providing development potential to other areas. I'm looking to perhaps increase our focus to areas and businesses we're not reaching."

Mayor Pegeen Hanrahan, who also serves as a member of the committee, agreed with Lowe, adding she would like to offer incentives that the city could provide for land developers to use GRUCom as their Internet provider.

Student wins $25K on 'Millionaire' show

■ HE PLANS TO TRAVEL TO ITALY WITH HIS WINNINGS.

By JESSICA CHAPMAN
Alligator Contributing Writer

Diastema did him in.

Biting his lip while he stared at his options on the screen, Eric Gunther nervously made a guess as he sat in the Hot Seat. The seconds quickly ticked down.

Five. Four. Three. Two. One. Final answer.

Gunther, a UF advertising senior, walked away from the game show "Who Wants To Be a Millionaire," which aired Monday night on ABC, with $25,000.

"It's always been something I've wanted to do," said Gunther, who is graduating in fall 2009. "It's kind of cool. It'll be a great story to tell. It was so weird to see it on TV."

Gunther is paying his own way through school, but he said he is not too concerned with loans and bills right now.

"They have low interest," Gunther said. "They're not the biggest worry right now."

Some of the $25,000 Gunther won will go toward a trip to Italy he is planning, he said.

He said he looks forward to starting his life with a little financial freedom, but he does not plan on putting a majority of the money toward paying off loans.

The show was hosted by celebrity guest host Samantha Harris, the co-host for ABC's "Dancing with the Stars."

Harris said the show was a night of firsts, referring to her first time hosting a game show and Gunther's first time on a game show.

Gunther won the $25,000 after incorrectly guessing the answer to the $50,000 question:

A diastema is a type of problem commonly corrected by which of these medical professionals?

A: Dermatologist, B: Podiatrist, C: Orthodontist, D: Cardiologist.

"I'm not disappointed."

Eric Gunther
UF advertising senior

Gunther used the "Ask the Expert" lifeline, a new feature on the show that allows contestants to connect with a former contestant via Skype video, to answer the question. The "experts" are selected by "Millionaire" sponsors.

Howard Johnson, a former "Millionaire" contestant who won $250,000 when he appeared on the show in 2005, was the expert for this episode.

Johnson told Gunther to "definitely go with A (Dermatologist)," telling him he was 80 to 90 percent sure that he was correct.

Despite the fact that Gunther thought the answer was cardiologist, he went with Johnson's suggestion.

Both Gunther and Johnson were wrong. The answer was orthodontist.

"I'm not disappointed," Gunther said. "That's part of the game show. You don't know if he will know the answer or not."

Accepted UF grads maintained 3.9 GPA

as early as November, while most other law schools don't admit or reject students until spring, according to www.top-law-schools.com. But the early acceptance works as a way to hook students on the idea of Harvard and reel them in, according to Gross.

"I found out so early that by the time I got accepted to other really great schools, like Columbia, I was already pretty set on Harvard," Gross said.

But the accepted earned themselves spots at HLS by submitting focused personal statements, maintaining at least a 3.9 grade point average, staying involved on campus, receiving valued teacher recommendations and scoring a 172-177—out of 180—on the Law School Admissions Test, which fall within the top one percentile in the country.

D'Oyley, who served as a Student Government senator for district D at UF, was especially excited when HLS became a possibility.

"Harvard has always been my dream school, and I was rejected from there for undergrad," she said. "I still have to dig up that rejection letter."

Michael Heaney, UF assistant professor of political science, who has also taught at other well-respected schools like Yale, Northwestern and Georgetown, helped educate many of the accepted students on current controversies in public policy. Rosen, Gross and D'Oyley said his teachings inspired them for the future.

"I always had a strong sense that these students were going somewhere," Heaney said.

But these days, somewhere doesn't come cheap, as HLS tuition can add up to $120,000 over three years compared to in-state UF Levin College of Law of only about $30,000.

Akerman said her plan was always to go to UF for undergraduate school and then go to a private law school. Gross had the same idea.

In the current economic climate, the accepted students must take out loans—a stark contrast to being more or less paid to go to UF.

"It's such a long term investment that will allow me to do great things," Rosen said.

Harvard claims that the nearly six-figure salary each HLS graduate will earn in their first year out of law school should allow students to pay back loans in no time, according to the HLS Web site. Yet, even with the high tuition, freezing weather, the sleepless nights and the Socratic method lurking in the students' minds, the idea that other Gators will be by their side has somewhat calmed the storm, Akerman said.

National News Their varying involvement offers HLS a well-rounded part of the Gator Nation, too.

Rosen spent her time as an undergraduate researching with the Graham Center for Public Service, D'Oyley found her safe haven in SG, Gross spent his days as a member of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, D'Angelo invested her time in community service and Akerman was an involved member of Phi Mu Sorority.

"Some people joke that I'm the Elle Woods," Akerman said. "But I'm not blond, which is a very good thing."

UF pre-law adviser Sara Mock said between one and nine UF students are accepted to HLS each year.

Sarah Woodberry, a 2009 UF graduate and first year HLS student, said she finds time for social activities, and aside from more reading assignments, she doesn't find the workload frightening or overwhelming.

But the seven still have their doubts about law school's ease they said.

"I think we can all do it," Rosen said. "But I might be singing a very different song in August."

the A - LIST [health]

In honor of National Fitness Month (and maybe because all the best shows are reaching their season finales) here are some ways to make the rest of the month a little lighter.

- 1) Walk. Face it. Gainesville isn't that big. The farthest most of us ever get is 2 miles, and the time it takes to wait for the bus could have you where you need to be by foot.
- 2) Swim. While lying out, stop staring at the water, just jump in. Twenty minutes of water thrashing burns an average of 180 calories and is way better than trying to tune out the awful pool music.
- 3) Run. Even if just for 20 feet, when a slight pang of energy hits just take off. Every second of intense activity counts.
- 4) Love. Sex burns calories, tones muscles and releases feel-good chemicals. You win every way.
- 5) Play. Embrace your inner child. Crash the neighborhoods' kids' hopscotch round, toss a ball, chase the ice cream truck- you might not have the vigor kids do, but you're still young, if it works for them it could work for you.

Eloquence lost in time

DAVID LOW ♦ AVENUE WRITER

In an America where all you seem to hear about is our economy and our armed and civil conflicts, it is sometimes helpful to revisit grievous times of the past — to read the thoughts of those who have endured if only simply to endure. You do this to take in some perspective of human experience, some sense of nationality and it is good. But shouldn't we be able to find strength in our own time, in our own words?

I'm not saying there are no great writers today, it just seems like the general populations of the past had the ability to write well, which is something to be desired today if you've ever read a blog.

Take the Civil War. Thousands of men and women recorded their insights and emotions, with an eloquence and, if not flowery, stately candor in their correspondence.

Of course, the Union and the Confederacy's strife were of a magnitude far greater than ours by proximity and scale, thus involving more people in events out of the ordinary than our struggles do today. This perhaps gives us a leisurely disposition toward our expression in words.

The decline in writing must have come when everyone learned to type. Words now are common and often, holding no majesty. Words upon paper are blocks pressed on by a machine sitting next to a desk, not a flowing imprint of individuality.

Writing is a tradition we've allowed ourselves to relinquish. An unfortunate side effect is perpetually dumbing down our language.

In an introductory journalism course, I was told to "write as if you were writing for a third-grader." I understand the importance of clarity in journalism, but couldn't we at least pander to a grade where the kids have studied the language more complex than "the quick fox jumped over the lazy dog"?

Twitter and Facebook have not helped. These sites and others have given everyone the ability to share worthless bits of information that if kept to oneself, would never be considered worthy of repetition. It allows one to let everything out without a thought, which, perhaps, never comes. If it did, there would probably be less posts about what you had for lunch or how your nap was. In 140 characters or less.

Abbreviations and acronyms have never been so popular. Sure there were a lot of them for all the work programs during the FDR presidency, but now we have acronyms for commonly used phrases or actions. LOL. ROFL. BRB. OMG.

Have we become too connected for expressive speech to be useful? Too informed for sentiment? Too "on-the-go" to write complete sentences? Could it be that written and spoken word is slowly devolving until we reach the most efficient means of communication with chemical signals amplified from brain to brain, our final utterances low grunts?

Um, that would be pretty cool actually. Brain telepathy FTW.

Papier-mâché replica of Meyer's Tasering sells for $5K

Artist says public to blame

KATIE EMMETS ◆ AVENUE WRITER

Action-figure-sized Andrew Meyer thrashed on top of a 2-by-2 wooden box as police figurines held a Taser to him.

Arizona artist Tom Haddock, 48, created the model to show the public his concern about freedom of speech infringement.

The model shows four officers struggling to hold Meyer down and then shooting him with a Taser gun, a reenactment of the Sept. 17, 2007 incident at a John Kerry speech at UF.

The hand-cranked model, made mostly of wood and papier-mâché, sold for $5,000 to a private collector after it appeared in the Art Basel Miami Beach show in December.

Haddock said no matter what Meyer did, no one should be dragged away from a microphone and Tased for exercising freedom of speech.

"It's pretty egregious to Tase someone for asking a question at a place where a politician is speaking," he said. "It's not something that you would expect to happen in America, at least not in this time."

Haddock said he feels uneasy about living in a country that condones such behavior.

He doesn't have a background in politics, but much of Haddock's art reflects political matters that concern him.

Haddock said he has been creating these moving models called automaton for about a year and a half.

The model, taking four months to make, was part of a collection that included other political and social statements.

One of Haddock's models portrayed the rape and murder of a 14-year-old Iraqi girl by a U.S. soldier, and another showed the dead body of a prisoner who was killed after questioning in Abu Ghraib, a U.S. prison that closed in 2006 amidst torture allegations.

In Haddock's model of Meyer, a person must manually turn a crank on the side of the box to make Meyer thrash.

Haddock said the cranking suggests that the public is partially responsible.

"We as Americans were definitely turning the crank with the decisions that we made because we value security more than freedom of speech," he said.

Although he never contacted Meyer, Haddock said he views Meyer as a victim and a symbol for what is happening to the United States.

Although "don't Tase me, bro" was popularly displayed on T-shirts and bumper stickers, the issue is serious, Haddock said.

"When it becomes this catchphrase that people say over and over again, people kind of forget about how terrible it really is," he said.

UF SOFTBALL

Veteran Gators start title run at NCAA Regional

By ADAM BERRY
Alligator Staff Writer
aberry@alligator.org

Last season, the UF softball team enjoyed unprecedented success, losing only two regular-season games and reaching the Women's College World Series for the first time in program history.

At 55-3, the No. 1 Gators find themselves in almost the same position this year, but this time around, UF will enter the NCAA Tournament with a slightly different mindset.

This team has already made a run deep into the postseason, as it reached the semifinals of the WCWS last year, and the Gators started this season with a national championship as their ultimate goal.

"Last year, it was a different feel. This team's on a mission," UF coach Tim Walton said. "We want to get better — I'm not talking about wins and losses, just about getting better."

With the final objective in mind, UF will host NCAA Regional play in Gainesville starting Friday. Florida A&M (30-30), Lehigh (36-16-1) and Texas A&M (31-19), which ended UF's postseason run last year, round out the double-elimination bracket.

The Gators will first face the Rattlers at 6 p.m. on Friday, with the Aggies and Mountain Hawks kicking off the weekend at 3:30 p.m.

The winners of Friday's games will meet at 1 p.m. on Saturday, followed by the losing teams at 3:30 p.m. The losing team from the 1 p.m. game and the winning team from the 3:30 game will meet at 6 p.m. The championship game will take place at 1 p.m. on Sunday, and if necessary, a second game will be played at 3:30 p.m.

By putting up 19 runs during the final two games of the Southeastern Conference Tournament, the Gators have shown that their bats are as hot as they have been all season.

UF ready for home SEC meet

■ THE GATORS WILL HOST FOR THE SEVENTH TIME.

By JESSICA ETTER
Alligator Writer

For the first time since 1998, UF will host the Southeastern Conference Outdoor Championships beginning today at 2:30 p.m. and running until Sunday evening at Percy Beard Track inside James G. Pressly Stadium.

The Gators have hosted the SEC Outdoor Championships six previous times: 1960, 1970, 1974, 1981, 1989 and 1998.

The Seminole Twilight Invitational in Tallahassee this past weekend proved to be exactly what the Gators needed to continue making progress toward NCAA glory.

The Gators' objective going into Tallahassee was to gain momentum before the SEC meet.

They responded with four event victories and 11 NCAA regional-qualifying marks.

Freshmen Ben Davies and Michael Anderson won the javelin and steeplechase, respectively.

Natalie Moser took home her second pole vault title of the season, and junior Mariam Kevkhishvili won the women's shot put.

UF coach Mike Holloway stressed the importance of team success, rather than individual performance.

"We are doing what we have always done," Holloway said. "We aren't focused on one athlete, we are focused on Florida."

The men's outdoor team has been ranked in the nation's top 10 throughout the entire season and jumped to the No. 1 spot in the U.S. Track & Field and Cross Country Coaches Association poll on April 29.

"We don't put pressure on our athletes," Holloway said.

JU errors close non-conference slate with win

Mooney's second HR of season breaks tie

By ANTHONY CHIANG
Alligator Writer

At this point of the season, great teams take advantage of every mistake their opponents make, and UF did just that on Tuesday.

The Gators' first 5 runs of the game were unearned, and No. 13 UF (36-17) cruised to a 7-4 home victory against Jacksonville (33-18) in its final non-conference game of the season.

"Down the stretch that's pretty much what it boils down to," UF coach Kevin O'Sullivan said. "Any time you can force teams into errors, you have to take advantage of that."

The Dolphins scored 2 runs in the second inning to take an early 2-0 lead, but it didn't last long.

O'Sullivan

was made by Jacksonville's starting pitcher Garrett Dunlap.

After back-to-back singles by Josh Adams and Matt den Dekker to start the bottom of the second, the first costly error of the game

Dunlap fielded a sacrifice bunt attempt but threw the ball away, and Adams came into score UF's first run.

"We fell behind 2-0, and we wanted to make sure we got on the board," O'Sullivan said. "Dunlap's decision was right, but he just kind of threw the ball away down the third-base line."

Later in the inning, Teddy Foster drove in den Dekker on a

Panteliadis strikes out career-high six, picks up fifth victory

fielder's choice to tie the game at 2. However, the game was decided by an unlikely source of power.

After another error by Jacksonville in the fourth inning, shortstop Mike Mooney drilled a 3-run home run over the left-field fence, only his second homer of the season. The home run was not only the difference in the game but also a personal milestone.

"It's my first-ever season with more than one home run, so that's a change," Mooney said. "Even in high school, it was only one (home run)."

Hidden behind the advantageous hitting and Mooney's rare power was the good outing from freshman left-hander Alex Panteliadis (5-5, 4.11 ERA).

He was on a pitch count of 50, but he was able to notch his fifth win of the season anyway after giving up only 2 runs and striking out a career-high six batters in four innings of work. Both runs came in the second inning, but Panteliadis was able to settle down after that.

"It felt good, especially after I gave up that home run," Panteliadis said.

"I just went out there and started hitting my spots and just got into a little groove."

O'Sullivan believed it was the best his freshman has thrown the ball this season.

"His fastball was down and it had life," O'Sullivan said.

After two straight wins, the Gators will need solid pitching as they head into their final series of the season in position to accomplish all the goals they set for themselves before the season.

A pair of lefties will face off in tonight's opener against Kentucky (27-24, 11-16 SEC) at McKethan Stadium, as senior Stephen Locke (3-1, 5.08 ERA) will face Wildcats junior James Paxton. The Gators are 3-1 in SEC home series this year and have gone 10-3 at home, including sweeps of Tennessee, Alabama and South Carolina.

UF, 17-10 in the SEC, currently holds a two-game lead over Georgia in the race for the Southeastern Conference East Division crown entering the three-game set with Kentucky.

"Everything is in front of us," O'Sullivan said. "We control our own destiny."

Bruder named national player of the week

SOFT, from page 20

The only area of concern entering the postseason will be the team's performance in the field, as UF committed four errors during its last two games.

"We have to work on a little bit of defense — that's mainly what we need to focus on — but everything's going in the right direction," right fielder Kelsey Bruder said.

With the Gators currently on a 21-game winning streak, complacency would be an issue for many teams.

But even at the Southeastern Conference Tournament, where a loss would have had virtually no effect on its postseason destiny, UF remained focused on winning every game.

"It means that we finished out strong, that we beat every team that we stepped on the field to face," left fielder Francesca Enea said of the importance of winning the tournament title.

"It's more about pride and showing other teams who we are."

BRUDER NAMED NATIONAL PLAYER OF THE WEEK: The Amateur Softball Association named Bruder its USA Softball Player of the Week on Tuesday for her performance in the SEC

Tournament.

The sophomore right fielder, who was named to the All-Tournament Team as well as earning All-SEC First Team and SEC All-Defensive Team honors, led the Gators with a .571 batting average in Knoxville, Tenn.

Bruder

Bruder tallied four hits, 4 runs, two doubles, a home run and five RBIs at the tournament, putting up a 1.286 slugging percentage and .700 on-base percentage in the three-game tournament.

No. 1 men set sights on NCAA title

"All we ask is that they come out and perform at a high level."

During the Penn Relays in late April, the team of hurdlers consisting of Kallinka Pitt, Dennis Martin, William Wynne and Jarius Cooper set a school record of 54.30 seconds while defending UF's title in the Shuttle Hurdles Championships of America.

"We feel good about our team as a whole, and we are just going to go out and perform to the best of our ability," Holloway said.

After the SEC Championships, the Gators will participate in the NCAA Regionals on May 29-30 in Greensboro, N.C., and the NCAA Outdoor Championships from June 10-13 in Fayetteville, Ark.

"From the beginning of the season, our major goals were to be conference and national champions," Holloway said.

"At the end of the season, we have a goal of being the best in the country."

UF MEN'S GOLF

Gators seek NCAA Championships berth in Austin

By ANTHONY CHIANG
Alligator Writer

The veteran-filled UF men's golf team is ignoring the issue completely.

The possibility that the Austin Regional might end up being its last tournament together will not be brought up.

"This will not be our last tournament. We have nationals," senior Billy Horschel said.

Before the No. 8 Gators can advance to the NCAA Championships, they will have to finish in the top five of their regional beginning Thursday in Austin, Texas.

UF will enter the event as the No. 2 seed and will try to advance to nationals for the ninth consecutive year. However, advancing is not the sole goal for UF. The Gators have set their sights on a regional victory.

"We don't want to just make it to nationals, we want to win regionals and go into nationals with a lot of momentum," Horschel said.

Other than its annual home event, the Gator Invitational, UF has not won a tournament since October 2006. This puts pressure on Horschel and his teammates to notch a first-place finish before the end of their college careers.

Horschel

win," he said.

It has been 25 days since UF played its last tournament, but the team has used that pressure to stay motivated during the long layoff before the regional.

While the UF women's golf team was playing in the NCAA East Regional on Gainesville's Mark Bostick Golf Course last weekend, the men's team took a three-day trip to Tampa to practice a grueling three times a day.

"I wouldn't consider the long layoff a break," coach Buddy Alexander said.

The Gators will send out

Horschel, Tim McKenney, Tyson Alexander, Toby Ragland and Will Strickler to contend for a spot in the NCAA Championships.

"It's a veteran group of three seniors and two juniors, and they still have big stuff left to play for," Buddy Alexander said.

But those five will not bring up the inevitable end to a long and successful journey together — at least not yet.

"That will not be brought up until that night before the last round of nationals," Horschel said.

FORMER GATORS

LaPorta, Augenstein called up to MLB

By PHIL KEGLER
Alligator Staff Writer
pkegler@alligator.org

Two former Gators have recently been called up to the big leagues.

UF's all-time home runs leader Matt LaPorta was called up by the Indians on May 2, and the left fielder debuted May 3 against the Tigers. The 24-year-old went 0 for 4 night but hit his first major-league home run on May 4 against the Blue Jays.

UF's former first baseman was acquired by the Indians on July 7, 2008, from the Brewers as part of the CC Sabathia trade.

Including last night's matchup against the Chicago White Sox, LaPorta has played six games and has four hits in 18 at-bats (.222), one home run and two RBIs.

Right-handed pitcher Bryan Augenstein made his debut for the Diamondbacks on Wednesday at home against the Reds. Augenstein gave up four runs in 6.1 innings and was in line for the loss at press time.

MOVING ON: Forward Allan Chaney is transferring to Virginia Tech, and defensive tackle John Brown will attend Northeast Mississippi Community College, according to several published reports.

Chaney, who came to Gainesville from Baltimore, played in 23 games last season and averaged almost 10 minutes per game but saw his playing time steadily decline during conference play due to injury.

He played in only one of 13 games after Feb. 3 and was suspended during the National Invitation Tournament. He will have to sit out the 2009-10 season and will have three seasons of eligibility remaining.

Brown can play right away for the NMCC football team because he is going to the junior-college level. The Lakeland High graduate came to Gainesville in 2007 rated as the nation's fifth-best defensive tackle recruit according to Scout.com but never made much of an impact for the Gators due to numerous injuries.

Former UF first baseman Matt LaPorta made his MLB debut with the Cleveland Indians on May 2. The Gators' all-time home run leader has one homer and two RBIs in 18 major-league at-bats.

UF faces UGA in third showdown

By JOSEPH R. HOLZER
Alligator Writer

It's almost poetic how the No. 15 women's tennis team will be facing a bitter rival in No. 2 Georgia in the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tennis Championships on Friday. In a rubber match, no less.

Coming off their dramatic home win Sunday against Florida State, the Gators (16-9, 7-4 Southeastern Conference) advanced to third-round play at College Station, Texas.

The Gators split their first two meetings with the Bulldogs (25-2, 10-1 SEC), upsetting them in Gainesville 4-3 on March 13 and losing to them 4-2 in the semifinals of the SEC Tournament in Fayetteville, Ark., on April 25. Georgia went on to win the SEC Tournament title.

The third match will be on a neutral court, and UF coach Roland Thornqvist hopes it is played outdoors.

"We played them here and played them well," Thornqvist said. "Then we played them inside at the SEC Tournament, which might've been in favor of Georgia. (The wind) was blowing five miles per hour, and the committee decided to go in somehow. I'm hoping it's blowing, and I hope we play outside."

Women's Tennis

One of the most important factors for the Gators has been their home-court advantage, as the team has won 67 straight matches at Linder Stadium. Giving up that edge for a neutral site won't be easy for the team, but the women have a familiar foe in front of them.

While they stumbled in indoor matches this season, they have been stellar outside. Thornqvist attributes this to spectacular conditioning and heart.

And UF has fought tooth-and-nail all spring. Six of its nine losses were decided by a 4-3 score, despite losing veteran Megan Alexander for the season and playing freshmen on courts 3 through 5.

"There have been plenty of opportunities for this team to pack it up and go home," Thornqvist said. "We lost to LSU. We lost to Ole Miss. It's easy to feel sorry for yourself and just go away, but these guys refuse to do that."

Freshman Jo Mather, who clinched the win against the Seminoles, said she is nervous but excited for her first Sweet 16 appearance.

"Roland said that this was just the icing on the cake, however we did (in the regionals)," Mather said. "All of us were just playing with all our hearts. It's just a bonus to make it to the tournament."
