Two new Asian otters make debut at zoo

In a small den on the west side of the Santa Fe College Teaching Zoo, there are now four Asian small-clawed otters, two more than there used to be.

First-time parents Jay and Lakena welcomed two otter pups to the zoo on April 30, but the pups did not come out of their den until recently, said Jonathan Miot, assistant director of the Teaching Zoo. The Zoo waited about three months to publicize their arrival, until the otter parents brought their pups out from the den.

In the wild, Asian small-clawed otters keep their young in a den until they are able to open their eyes, which can take six to eight weeks.

Miot said the Teaching Zoo wanted to do the same for Jay and Lakena.

Since being out of the den, the parents have been teaching the pups how to swim by dunking them in a small pool in their cage.

Miot said they did not appreciate the dunking at first but are now getting used to the water.

The pups have not been named because their gender isn't determined yet, said Emi Willows, a SFC student who works at the zoo.

Miot said the zoo is very pleased with the way the parents have been raising the pups and do not want to interfere to check their sex.

The best time to see the animals is around 9 a.m. when the zoo opens or when it is cloudy outside. They like cooler weather, said Miot.

The Santa Fe College Teaching Zoo, 3000 NW 83rd St., is open every day from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and costs $4.

Machen discusses safety

In the first of what will likely be many meetings, UF President Bernie Machen discussed student safety with the owner and general manager of The Jacksonville Landing on Friday.

Janice Lowe, general manager of the strip of shops and restaurants, said Friday's hour-long discussion was very general, with little mention of Machen's requested changes to festivities surrounding the game.

Last month, Machen, along with UF's Vice President for Student Affairs, Patricia Telles-

Irvin, sent a letter to Jacksonville Mayor John Peyton asking him to make a number of changes, many of which would affect the Landing.

The changes included limiting the occupancy to the fire marshal's standards to about 2,500 people on the outside patio and courtyard, banning the sale of liquor shots, halving the number of temporary alcohol vendors and increasing the presence of the Division of Alcoholic Bev-

Kone to receive $517K

Bruce Kone, former dean of UF's College of Medicine, will receive $517,000 over the next three years as part of a resignation settlement that went into effect this month.

UF officials sent a proposed dismissal notice to Kone in April after they determined he authored anonymous e-mails and a letter that disparaged UF officials. He allegedly sent them to applicants for the senior vice president for health affairs position.

Kone denied writing the e-mails or letter, according to the 49-page settlement.

Kone was removed as dean of the College of Medicine in May 2008, about a month after he decided to overrule a medical school's admissions committee and admit a student with political connections who had not taken the MCAT.

After a meeting with UF officials to explain his decision, Kone sent out a scathing e-mail to the officials.

"It's a small town. There are small minds," he wrote, according to Alligator archives. "But for crap's sakes, and speaking strictly as an alumnus, wake up. You are talented. Start leading."

UF Administration After being removed as dean, Kone stayed on as a professor in the college.

In the e-mails that led to his dismissal, Kone allegedly attempted to persuade candidates not to come to UF.

Man arrested after giving fake name to police officer

After giving a fake name to a Gainesville Police Department officer, a man was arrested when he was discovered to have marijuana and two outstanding arrest warrants.

Alphonso Baker, 31, was pulled over while driving on State Road 121 for an improper tag display.

Baker got out of the car, gave his name as Joseph Welch, his date of birth as Nov. 20, 2009, and stated that he had no form of ID on him, according to the arrest report.

After a short time, Baker told the officer he was not Welch and that he used a fake name because he had two outstanding arrest warrants and didn't want to go to jail.

While searching his car, the officer found seven plastic bags containing a total of five grams of marijuana. Baker was arrested and charged with giving a false name to a law enforcement officer and sale or possession with intent to sell a controlled substance.

New leader selected for Board of Governors

The Board of Governors, which oversees the state's 11 universities, chose a new leader Friday.

Frank T. Brogan, president of Florida Atlantic University, was selected unanimously as chancellor over Roderick G.W. Chu, chancellor emeritus of the Ohio Board of Regents.

Brogan is a former lieutenant governor, elected in 1998 and 2002. He was former Gov. Jeb Bush's running mate.

The two others being considered for the position dropped out of the running before Friday's interviews in Tampa.

Brogan succeeds Mark B. Rosenberg, who served as chancellor for about five years.

In a lawsuit filed in federal court in Tampa, DC Comics accuses John Stacks of committing copyright and trademark infringement, among other violations, with his resin composite figurines.

The characters in question include Batman, Robin, Catwoman, the Joker, Batgirl, the Penguin, the Riddler, Egghead and King Tut.

Minister charged with stealing from church

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — Authorities said a minister has been arrested for stealing more than $250,000 from a Lake City church.

The Columbia County Sheriff's Office said 61-year-old Samuel Darin Taylor was arrested Tuesday and charged with money laundering, mortgage fraud, racketeering, conspiracy to commit grand theft and scheming with intent to defraud.

Detectives first began investigating Taylor last month after the First Assembly of God board and bookkeeper noticed accounting discrepancies.

Authorities are also looking for another suspect they believe was working with Taylor.

The minister was being held on $50,000 bail.

from its chrysalis as part of the Amazing Butterflies exhibit running through Sept. 7 at the Florida Museum of Natural History. It is part of the Butterfly Rainforest, a permanent exhibit at the museum.

A story in Thursday's Alligator incorrectly reported that Mary Lou Miller knew she had cancer for a month before it spread to her brain. She believed she was cancer-free before finding out the cancer spread.

A story in Thursday's Alligator attributed a quote from Student Health Care Center director Phillip Barkley to Paul Myers, assistant director of the Alachua County Health Department. Barkley's quote reads, "The real question is gonna be what kind of flu season are we gonna have this fall."

CLARIFICATION

A story in Tuesday's Alligator incorrectly reported that College of Journalism and Communications Dean John Wright said Hailley Mac Arthur may be expelled from the College. Wright only stated that administrators would be meeting to discuss Mac Arthur's status in the college. Additionally, Mac Arthur was not directly contacted for the story. Tuesday's paper reported otherwise.

A quote in Thursday's Alligator was ambiguous about the time frame in which Geary "Whitey" Alleen Springer had done drugs. Springer said he had not done drugs since his service during the Vietnam War.

$7.7M center will move Infirmary to west campus

By THOMAS STEWARTAlligator Staff Writer
tstewart@alligator.org

Next summer, the Student Health Care Center at UF, known as the Infirmary, will move from the center of campus to Radio Road, near the Lakeside Residential Complex.

First, though, Student Mental Health Services and the Counseling Center will merge their services and relocate to the new center near Lakeside, with plans to open in the summer of 2010, said counseling center director Sherry Benton, who will be director of the new mental health services organization.

The new center will cost about $7.7 million.

The building will be funded by the Capital

Improvement Trust Fund, which is supported by student fees at state universities, according to project manager Scott Whiddon.

Funding for the building was secured four or five years ago, Whiddon said.

It is unclear when construction on the second phase of the project will begin, which will allow the rest of UF's health services to occupy the building, Whiddon said.

The decision to move health services out of its current location on Fletcher Drive, surrounded by the most-used classroom buildings in the core of campus, was made to alleviate high demand at the current health center.

Initially, UF sought to expand on the current site but found it would require too much restructuring, Whiddon said.

Benton said the move worries her because it'll mean a longer trip for some students seeking medical attention.

"On the other hand, many thousands make it to Southwest [Recreation Center] every week," she said.

"This is one case where budget cuts may result in positive outcomes."

Sherry Benton

Director of new mental health services organization

She said the new facility will have more parking and a covered bus stop.

"In some ways, it'll be more convenient, in some ways it'll be a little less convenient," she said, "depending on where you have your classes."

Combining the two this year was done as a result of budget cuts, with the merger expected to save UF about $520,000 a year, though the two will not merge into the single facility until 2010.

However, Benton said, UF has considered the move for about 25 years and has watched other universities do the same with positive results.

Benton said the merger will not involve any layoffs, though three already empty positions were left unfilled due to cuts.

Also, she said, students should still receive the same level of care, if not better.

"We have such an opportunity to reinvent ourselves," she said. "This is one case where budget cuts may result in positive outcomes."

10-member 'Macbeth' cast to perform 'hardcore' version

■ TICKETS FOR THE SHOW ARE $12 FOR STUDENTS.

By STEVE JOHNSON

Alligator Writer

The Shakespearean tragedy of a young man's quest for power will be transformed by the UF School of Theatre and Dance in its performance of "Macbeth."

Under the direction of UF graduate Matthew Gordon-Martin, the show will stray from the traditional performance written by William Shakespeare.

With a cast of 10 people playing multiple roles each, the show opens Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Nadine McGuire Black Box Theatre and will run through Sunday.

"It is very animalistic, raw and movement-oriented," said stage manager Breanna Stroud, adding that the severely cut script can be described as "nitty-gritty, hardcore Shakespeare."

With this new adaptation of the play, Gordon-Martin, 22, said he hopes to break away from traditional theater.

"I feel that commercializing theater tries to dumb it down and insults the intellectual capacity of our audiences," he said.

On Campus "My point is not for the audience to get 100 percent of 'Macbeth.' If they come away with something, I'll be happy."

This adaptation of "Macbeth" has presented many challenges for its actors.

"The movement component has been such a large obstacle to overcome," said Alex Hernandez, a senior acting major who will play the character of Macbeth. "It's almost like taking a step back to the cave-man days."

Gordon-Martin, who received his bachelor's degree in acting at UF in May, said this will be his first time directing a production at the university.

Although he said audience members will experience something they have never seen before, he said this performance will have a familiar theme.

"How we make choices and how they impact society is something we can all connect to," he said.

Tickets for the hour and a half performance are $12 for students and senior citizens and $16 for the general public. They are on sale at the University Box Office or at www.ticketmaster.com.

The blurry Century Tower is barely visible in the background at dusk beyond a close-up view of a campus bench.

An elderly man and his grandson stand together on a fall afternoon ready to cheer on the Gators.

These descriptions depict three of the 55 photos on display at PhotoUF, an exhibit on the second floor of the Reitz Union.

A reception was held Friday to commemorate the opening of the exhibit, which began July 10 and will remain on display until Aug. 20.

The photos reflect the perspectives and experiences of UF students and faculty on themes such as iconic local features, Gator pride and students' experiences abroad.

Jill Keezer, assistant director at the Center for Student Activities and Involvement, organized the exhibit to give students without professional photography experience a chance to display their work in a juried competition.

Keezer issued a call for submissions asking for entries "that capture the spirit and culture of the University of Florida."

More than 200 entries were received, and a jury selected 55 to put on display.

Gina Masi, a former intern at the gallery who was present at the reception, said the selection committee was made up of employees the Reitz Union and Student Affairs.

Vice President of Student Affairs Patricia Telles-Irvin will choose the top three entries to receive a $100 "purchase award" in August, Keezer said. The three photos will go on permanent display in the Office of Student Affairs.

The other entries will remain on display around the Union or other campus areas, Keezer said.

College of Liberal Arts and Sciences downsizes deans

Savings from restructuring may be used to hire staff

By THOMAS STEWART
Alligator Staff Writer
tstewart@alligator.org

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences will have fewer deans starting next month, saving the college money and making things more efficient, according to the college's dean, Paul D'Anieri.

The college will downsize from six associate deans to five.

Under the new structure, each department or center in the college will be assigned an associate dean, D'Anieri wrote in an e-mail.

As a result, each department or center will report to its associate dean as opposed to the current structure, in which faculty from all 40 units in the college report directly to D'Anieri.

D'Anieri

"[I]t's simply not possible for me to have the depth of knowledge about each unit or to respond as quickly as will be possible in the new model," D'Anieri wrote in the e-mail.

He wrote that the college may spend some of its savings from the restructuring on hiring more staff.

"One goal of the reorganization is [to] ensure that associate deans are not doing tasks that could be done more effectively and less expensively by professional staff," he wrote.

Three of the new associate dean positions are new hires, with one current associate dean remaining in place and one former associate dean returning to the position.

CLAS is currently UF's largest college, boasting 700 faculty members.

Tebow discusses love life in gossip site video

■ HE WAS IN L.A. FOR THE 2009 ESPY AWARDS.

Good news, ladies — Tim Tebow is single.

At least that's what the UF quarterback said in a video posted Wednesday on TMZ.com.

The video was filmed Tuesday at Los Angeles International Airport. Tebow was in town to attend the filming of the 2009 ESPY Awards, which aired Sunday night.

In the 30-second video, Tebow is asked while signing autographs for fans if he would be looking for a new girlfriend while in town and whether he would be partying.

But Tebow said in the video that he doesn't have a girlfriend and wouldn't be on the prowl in Los Angeles.

"We'll just be hanging out," he said.

Steve McClain, spokesman for the University Athletic Association, was at the airport with Tebow when the TMZ camera approached them.

"TMZ is certainly a media outlet that we're not used to having around or that we see quite often in our world," McClain said.

"They were pretty much camped out at the airport grabbing everyone who came through," he said of the reporters at the airport. "It was a pretty high-profile event."

The event was hosted by Samuel L. Jackson and attendees included Andy Samberg and Kobe Bryant.

McClain said Tebow has no problem dealing with that type of publicity, given all his experience with the media.

"Tim was pretty well-versed with dealing with the media before he got here," he said.

Shands ranks in top 50

By JESSICA CHAPMAN

U.S. News & World Report ranked Shands at UF among the top 50 hospitals in the country in its annual ranking.

The hospital was ranked in seven out of 16 specialties, including 24th for heart and heart surgery, by U.S. News' annual America's Best Hospitals list released Wednesday.

Out of the 4,861 hospitals considered, fewer than 0.4 percent were ranked in a specialty, according to the report.

The hospital placed 45th in cancer, 38th in diabetes and endocrine systems, 38th in ear, nose and throat, 27th in gynecology, 25th in geriatric care and 27th in urology.

"To be ranked in seven [specialties] really puts you in a small universe," said Avery Comarow, U.S. News' health rankings editor. "To appear at all in one specialty is a big deal. These are elite hospitals."

The magazine also named Shands at UF the best hospital in Florida for heart and heart surgery, urology and geriatric care, according to a Shands news release.

"We are proud to be named No. 1 in Florida," said Jamie Beth Conti, professor of medicine and interim chief for the UF's College of Medicine division of cardiovascular disease, which encompasses the heart and heart surgeries area. "The faculty is delighted to be recognized for our efforts to provide exceptional cardiovascular care."

Shands at UF received the same rankings in 2008.

"There's usually not an awful lot of change," Comarow said, referring to the fact that UF's ranking remained the same in all of the seven categories. "There's not a lot of movement near the top."

The rankings for the categories in which UF was listed were calculated based on reputation, death rate, patient safety and other care-related factors. Reputation was based on specialist surveys.

The magazine only considered teaching hospitals, hospitals that had 200 or more beds or hospitals that had 100 beds and four out of eight key technologies for its list.

John Hopkins Hospital was first on the list for the 18th consecutive year.

To view the complete list of ranked hospitals, visit www.usnews.com/besthospitals.

Top-ranked Shands Specialties:

Heart and Heart surgery: 24th

Geriatric care: 25th

Gynecology: 27th

Urology: 27th

Diabetes and Endocrine systems: 38th

Ear, Nose and Throat: 38th

Cancer: 45th

The Mayo Clinic in Jacksonville ranked in four specialties, and Tampa General Hospital, the primary teaching hospital for the University of South Florida, was ranked in seven specialties.

Two UF researchers create the world's largest synthetic diamond, packing 1,600 carats at a whopping 11 inches in diameter.

The feat was accomplished by injecting a solution of suspended diamond particles into a silicon disk. After chemical processing, the scientists were left with their record-breaking result.

"Making the world's largest diamond was just serendipity," said James Adair, one of the researchers involved. "It wasn't our goal."

Some scientists believe synthetic diamonds have many potential uses, such as wear coating on jet airplanes, or a smaller, faster replacement for silicon in computer circuitry.

Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) is announced as the main speaker for the Florida Blue Key Homecoming banquet.

The topic of his speech has yet to be determined, but it would be confirmed that Sen. Kennedy would be introduced by his close friend, Florida Sen. George Smathers.

Ironically, in the original article, the Alligator falsely reports the Senator's name as John S. Kennedy, marring the future-president's famous middle initial.

"(It) comes from his mother's side," said William Link, a UF American history professor. "(Her) father, 'Honey Fitz' (John Fitzgerald), was a Boston Irish politico."

With his parents' marriage, the Kennedy name was attached to a political family, becoming one of the most famous political lineages in U.S. history.

Drug Busted

Doctors shouldn't work for drug companies

Ritalin. Concerta. Vyvanse. Adderall. The Editorial Board is willing to bet that you know at least one person who has been prescribed one of them.

These drugs have been championed by well-known Harvard psychologist Joseph Biederman for decades. As a result, doctors have increasingly prescribed the medicines to those who may or may not need them.

Sen. Chuck Grassley, a Republican from Iowa, investigated Biederman's drug company affiliations. It turns out Biederman worked as a private consultant for some drug companies, earning at least $1.6 million in the past seven years for his "advice," according to The Boston Globe.

Grassley identified the conflict of interest that arises when the person who sets the precedent for how psychotropic drugs are dispensed is connected to drug companies. Both the companies and Biederman make bank as the drugs are dispersed.

We know there are cases when ADHD medications are necessary, but we are vindicated by this investigation, which shows that these drugs are often prescribed for the wrong reasons.

School systems push the drugs when young children are unable to keep still or concentrate for long periods. Those kids might be the next great ballet dancer, the next great novelist or just too damn smart to pay attention to "Dick and Jane" books.

The Editorial Board would like to assert that sedation is not the answer for those who might not fit into the paradigm of "eager student." Putting children who cannot understand the risks of drug addiction on drugs is a shame. Promoting drugs to these kids to make money is absolutely criminal.

We would like to note that intellectual might doesn't always make right. We urge parents who've thought about putting their children on drugs to think twice before damning them to a lifetime of pill-popping when they may not need it.

Disappearing Act

In George Orwell's "1984," the three slogans of the ruling party are "War is Peace," "Freedom is Slavery" and "Ignorance is Strength." Amazon.com might as well change its slogan to "Downloading is Deletion" after this weekend.

Copies of Orwell's "1984" and "Animal Farm" disappeared from e-books across the country after Amazon.com officials realized they didn't own the rights required to put the novels on Kindle, its e-book service. People who paid for the books are angry about the sudden electronic evaporation of their property.

More important than Amazon.com's customer service issues, however, is this: What happens when all of our information exists in bits and bytes? The fact that this involves those specific books is ironic, but the realization that companies could one day have the ability to "delete" information from our personal libraries, mirroring the idea of Orwell's dystopian vision, is nothing less than harrowing.

OK, so, we recognize that the invention of Kindle didn't cause the Library of Congress to go up in flames. Books don't seem to be going anywhere, even if they may be "obsolete," technically. But then again, is imagining a world in which people rely on e-readers any different than imagining a world in which most people get their news from electronic newspapers and blogs?

Besides the fact that Amazon.com isn't doing a good job of convincing people to jump on the Kindle bandwagon, they are not assuring us that our information and property will remain, well, ours, as we move toward an increasingly electronic future. And that is downright Orwellian.

America lacks vision after moonwalk

Walter Cronkite died Friday evening. He was 92. I think it's fitting that the 40th anniversary of the Apollo 11 moonwalk Monday is so close to Cronkite's death. Out of all the clips of Cronkite's broadcasts shown over the past few days, the veteran journalist seems least inhibited during the now famed broadcast of the lunar landing. Cronkite had even remarked that the Apollo 11 landing was the high point in his career because he was certain it would be the most important event of his lifetime. Unfortunately, it seems he was correct.

Before I go any further, I should mention that I am one of those jerks in every restaurant who mutters aloud, "We can put a man on the moon; you'd think they could make my chicken salad faster." It's true; I am an unrelenting Apollo program nut. I've always been enthralled by the whole romanticism of a nation's leader setting an ambitious goal and then actually starting the process of meeting the goal. There had to have been something comforting about knowing hundreds of thousands of people were working on a collective objective to not only better their country but humanity as a whole.

I'm not that naïve, though, and am aware that our reasons for going to the moon had more to do with beating the Soviets than inspiring a nation.

Still, we went to the moon! And we walked on it, too! We won the race to the moon, and in doing so we gained a more complete knowledge of the totality of our existence. I don't think we've accomplished anything close to what we did since then. We certainly haven't had a president since who's challenged the nation the way President John F. Kennedy did with his bold promise. Kennedy offered us a new frontier, and for too long we haven't searched the horizon for the next one.

Even now, when history has offered us yet another

Matthew Christ
letters@alligator.org

bold and young president, the chance to meet the line that divides a mediocre generation from a visionary generation is missed. Take for instance President Barack Obama's and the now Super Majority Democratic Congress' plan for combating global warming. Presently, a typical and hackneyed response has been thought up to fight what could very well be the most important threat of a generation.

Essentially, we've brought a knife to a gunfight. The knife? Cap and Trade policies, which according to the Copenhagen Consensus Center are promised to reduce 0.3 to 0.5 degrees by the year 2100 of what many believe will be a temperature increase from anywhere from 1 to 11.5 degrees. We've reveled in the mundane yet again and have failed to reach for a new frontier.

I am convinced, much as many of you are, that we desperately need another Apollo-like program to solve not just global warming but our dwindling energy supplies and broken health and education systems as well. So far, nothing proposed out of Washington could have ever made Cronkite speechless, much the same way man's journey into heaven's orbit more than 40 years ago did. Visionary thinking is missing. Even when bold policy is announced, such as Obama's health care and global warming directives, eventual legislation is watered down with tax cuts and pork barrel spending.

Maybe history will judge the moonwalk as an easier task than asking Congress to forget about running for reelection and pass meaningful legislation for once.

Machen's 'threat' ludicrous

UF President Bernie Machen has asked the city of Jacksonville to cut down the number of alcohol vendor licenses it issues, curb the ability of private businesses with legally obtained liquor licenses to serve and create more safety zones for students... and foot the bill for all of it.

The UF-Georgia football contract is up after the 2010 season, and Machen is saying that UF may not renew if his demands are not met.

Personally, I laugh at the suggestion.

I hope Machen realizes a few things. The majority of people drinking in Jacksonville are not UF or even University of Georgia students.

To most UF alumni, this is the most important rivalry game, and he risks alienating both them and their wallets by messing with a tradition that is older than he is. Urban Meyer has stated he is 100 percent behind keeping the game in Jacksonville.

Finally, UF makes more money when the game is hosted in Jacksonville than if it is hosted in the Swamp every other year.

Add it all up, and I'll be taking a shot in honor of the game in Jacksonville on Oct. 31 this year, at the Landing.

Moments of clarity make dreams fun

Dreams are probably one of my favorite things in the world. And, boy, have I had some doozies.

For example, it's now 1 o' clock Monday, and I just woke up from one of the strangest dreams I've had of late. I was sitting at a banquet table with various friends of mine, and we were eating dinner and cracking jokes. At a table a short distance away were all the great, dead Greek philosophers and writers, who I have so little affection for. There was Thucydides, Euripides, Antisthenes and a very fat and swarthy Epicurus. Well, they thought we were being loud; we thought they were being loud, and, for some reason, the two groups began to exchange harsh words. I recall loudly mocking Epicurus at one point. We then made fun of the ancient Greeks' relationships with young boys and, finally, taunted them because — after all — we know just when their civilization gets clobbered.

They ended up wanting to fight us in the parking lot of wherever we were, and we gladly accepted — only to realize that the ancient Greeks were on steroids. It suffices to say that I woke up before the battle could be joined.

I think something may be wrong with me. These dreams are just a touch odd.

Another staple in my repertoire is the dream wherein I realize that I'm dreaming. These are my favorites. They don't come along all too often or with any predictability, but when they do, it's fantastic. When I realize I'm dreaming, I tend to be able to do anything I like. Usually that results in me flying around.

If only such were life.

Let me tell you about one of my all time favorites, though.

Eric Chianese
letters@alligator.org

Those of you who know me will know that I fancy myself something of a writer and have, in fact, been writing stories for some time. Those of you who know me better will know that Jack Nicholson is one of my personal heroes.

Well, once, in what can only be called a gift from Morpheus, Lord of Dreams (it's a reference, Philistines),

I had one of my most absurd dreams.

It went a little something like this: For some reason, I was at a carnival, just walking along the boardwalk. Then I met none other but Mr. Nicholson himself. He imparted some inconsequential advice to me, and, next thing I knew, we were in a restaurant discussing life. He took a long drink of whiskey and did his "Indians" thing from the film "Easy Rider." He then read one of my stories, looked at me solemnly and said (imagine the Nicholson voice) "You can do it, kid. You can be a writer!" My spirits were lifted immediately, and I was filled, in Dreamland, with a vast reserve of confidence. Nicholson then stood up, said "follow me" and dashed out on the check, knocking a table out of his way as he fled.

Dreams are truly amazing. They allow us to type into the deepest realms of our psyches, and even if they don't make sense to us later, they do when we have them. And it's that moment of clarity that makes it all worthwhile. I suggest to all my readers that you make time for more sleeping.

Prof's book makes Oprah's list

By JESSICA CHAPMAN
Alligator Writer

It's a story about a dog and her family, and it's one of Oprah Winfrey's 25 favorite of the summer.

UF creative writing professor Jill Ciment's novel "Heroic Measures" is the second book on Winfrey's annual summer reading list, which highlights Winfrey's top suggestions for summer reading.

"Heroic Measures" is the first novel to be offered as a free download to Oprah.com members.

"It's the coolest thing around," Ciment said. "I'm so jazzed that it's being offered to the two million members of her book club."

Focusing on the media and the real estate industry, Ciment's 208-page novel tells the story of the elderly Cohen couple, whose 12-year-old dachshund, Dorothy, is suddenly paralyzed in her hind legs just as the couple decides to sell their East Village apartment.

At the same time, a gas tanker truck driven by a man named Abdul jackknives in a tunnel in what the media deem a terrorist attack.

As news of the tanker continues to grow and lower the value of their 45-year home, the Cohens must help Dorothy and face leaving their home amid a crisis.

The book, which is also on The Wall Street Journal's summer reading list, was inspired by a lost cat poster Ciment saw in New York City the day before the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, Ciment said.

"I'm so jazzed that it's being offered to the two million members of her book club."

Jill Ciment
UF creative writing professor

She said as the days went by, families posted pictures of missing loved ones near the cat poster, but they didn't cover it, she said.

"I've always been an animal lover," Ciment said, adding it took her three years to write the novel. "[Writing books is] the type of profession that you spend four or five years [on one]," she said.

Ciment said she is excited her book made Winfrey's list, and she believes Winfrey is one of the few people who can keep Americans reading.

"Oprah's doing an amazing thing," Ciment said. "She's one of the few people to keep book reading alive. [She] fills a void in a culture that doesn't really have any books."

Ciment said she is excited to be a part of a new electronic age, where electronic books could become the norm.

"I'm excited to be a part of that," she said. "It's every writer's dream."

"Heroic Measures" will be offered on Winfrey's Web site until 10:59 p.m. on Wednesday.

Ciment began her book tour earlier this month and hopes to finish by August.

UF English professor Mary Robison also has a book featured on Winfrey's list but could not be reached for comment.

Her book, "One D.O.A., One on the Way," was 18th on the list and is a story about a movie scout in post-Katrina New Orleans.

Chinese leaders learn from Fla. health clinics

By ROBERTA O. ROBERTS
Alligator Writer

Thirteen leaders from the People's Republic of China, a North Central Florida health clinic and the U.S. Department of State may seem like a mixed bunch, but the groups united Monday for a common purpose.

On Monday, 13 emerging Chinese leaders visited WellFlorida Council health clinic in Gainesville, the Alachua County Organization for Rural Needs clinic in Brooker, Fla., Trenton Medical Center in Trenton, Fla., and Suwannee River Health Education Center in Alachua.

They are participating in an international program to study rural economic development and poverty alleviation through health care.

The Chinese leaders were chosen by the U.S. Department of State's International Visitor Leadership Program, which has hosted emerging leaders from all over the world to observe American programs in a variety of categories since 1940, according to Monika Wilcox, program officer for the Academy for Educational Development.

The Academy is a nonprofit organization that planned the three-week trip lasting from July 13 to 31.

Other destinations include Washington, Syracuse, N.Y., New York City, Orlando, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco.

According to Wilcox, WellFlorida was chosen as a place of interest because of its diverse geography, culture and services provided to rural farmers.

WellFlorida is the largest of the 11 local health clinics in the state. It covers 16 counties, most of them rural communities, said Jeff Feller, chief operations officer.

WellFlorida partners with UF, Shands HealthCare, the Alachua County Health Department, North Florida Regional Hospital and CHOICES, Alachua County's health services program, to conduct a community health needs assessment.

"Outcomes are a lot worse for rural residents," Feller said. "Out of the 25 leading causes of death in Florida, 21 of them are worse for rural residents than urban residents. That gives you an idea of what they're up against."

WellFlorida's Rural Health Partnership program tries to help north central Florida rural residents gain more access to health care.

"We emphasize cooperation over competition," said Kendra Siler-Marsiglio, Rural Health Partnership program manager.

This theory of cooperation over competition is one the Chinese leaders said they will take with them back to their country.

"They also want to encourage public and private health care providers to work together instead of competing with each other, and they plan on encouraging their government to dedicate more money to rural health," Siler-Marsiglio said. "They really have an opportunity [to make a difference] because some of these areas in China are untouched, so they can do it the right way from scratch instead of trying to fix problems as they arrive like we have."

Feller said these visitors were a group of "heavy-hitters."

"As their brand of capitalism emerges, so too will their health care system," he said.

Professors reflect on anniversary of first moonwalk

By SHAY BRODERICK
Alligator Writer

July 19, 1969, was an ordinary Saturday. But the following day changed history.

It was 40 years ago Monday that Neil Armstrong first took his "giant leap for mankind," and still people remember the Apollo 11 moonwalk mission.

"To be able to look up in the night sky and know that, at that same moment, an ordinary man was looking back at Earth from the surface of the moon was a completely unreal experience," said Charles Telesco, a UF astronomy professor who watched coverage of the moonwalk from his Ohio apartment as a teenager.

Millions of people watched the moonwalk live as the grainy black-and-white images were beamed back to Earth and stored on giant reels of tape, according to a Fox-News.com report.

The original tapes have since been misplaced, but to celebrate the anniversary, NASA released restored footage of the mission Thursday that showed new details missing from first tapes, according to NASA's Web site.

Telesco said the restored footage consists of processed versions of transmitted images and that even though NASA worked hard to improve the degraded tapes, he is disappointed to know that the original videos may be lost forever.

"The restored video is important, but it is definitely not as historic as the original footage would have been," said Telesco, who worked for NASA for 12 years beginning in the early 1980s.

The video montage shows highlights of the iconic moonwalk, including improved images of Commander Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin taking their first footsteps on the moon's cratered surface and planting the American flag.

But Telesco said that the lost tapes don't dampen the achievement, especially knowing that scientists had very limited technology.

"It was like shooting an arrow up into the sky and hitting the smallest target possible," he said. "We did it fast, but we did it right."

Anthony Gonzalez, an associate professor in the UF astronomy department, was not alive when Armstrong first announced, "the Eagle has landed," but he said he hopes to see another astronaut return to the moon during his lifetime.

"Hopefully my lifetime will be a while," Gonzalez said. "But I definitely expect someone to be back on the moon within the next decade or two."

It has been 37 years since man last walked on the moon. Twelve astronauts from six Apollo missions have successfully completed the journey, but nobody has returned to the lunar surface since Eugene Cernan in 1972, according to an article on CNN.com.

Gonzalez credits this to the recent lack of motivation and competition from other countries, unlike in the '60s, when the U.S. was under pressure to put a man in space after the Soviet Union successfully sent Yuri Gagarin into orbit in 1961. Gonzalez said America learned a lot from the competition with Russia.

"The space race led to telecommunication satellites and had a huge impact on weather forecasts and GPS systems," he said. "Most importantly, it had a huge impact on the country psychologically."

Jessica Gordon, a UF business freshman, said she believes the advancement in technology has been one of the greatest benefits to come from the moonwalk exploration.

"It makes me wonder what is going to be accomplished during my lifetime," she said.

Even with the current lull in moon travel, Gonzalez said the first moonwalk mission will always be regarded as an iconic moment in history.

"It's incredible to think that the U.S. was able to undertake such a tremendous endeavor in such a short period of time," he said. "It just proves that America as a country can accomplish anything it sets its mind to."

Jewelry, art draw residents to psychic fair

By SHELBY NEICHOY
Alligator Writer

Clothing, jewelry and spiritual connections were all up for grabs at Saturday's psychic fair held at the Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Gainesville.

As about 150 onlookers wound their way around the white-walled worship center, bells chimed, crystals swayed and a constant hum of intimate conversations filled the chapel.

"It is a close-knit group of people here," Bill Kelley said.

Kelley and his artistic wife, Bonnie Barnes-Kelley, have attended the fair for 10 years. Barnes-Kelley said she asks the Goddess to guide her hands and bless her stones while crafting her jewelry.

At the top of the stage, 11 tables were continuously occupied with hopeful participants looking for intimate conversations with a psychic or a connection with a dead loved one.

"Even though we don't have as many merchants today, things are going pretty well."

the Rev. Marguerite Romeis Event organizer

"When someone participates in a reading, it may not always be what's going on here and now," said event organizer the Rev. Marguerite Romeis. "You have to go to the readers without expectations."

Besides readings, the fair also offered detox foot baths, ear candling, and aura photography. In ear candling, heat is used to clean ear canals and aura photographers take photos of human energy fields.

Romeis said this fair has been slower than those in the past.

"Even though we don't have as many merchants today, things are going pretty well," she said.

One exotic booth offered colorful clothing, bright jewelry and trinkets from Thailand and India.

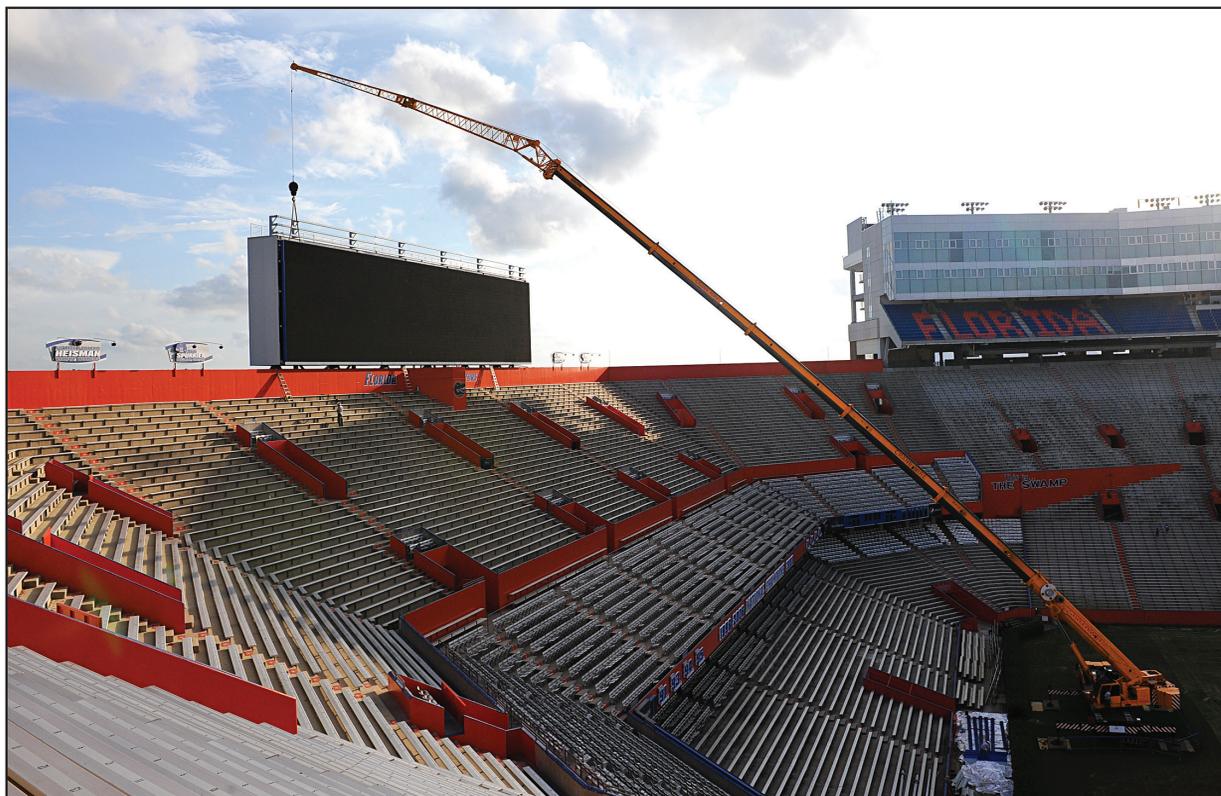

Merchant Sylvia Palacios has traveled to different countries for several years studying various cultures and religions.

Many of her pieces carry spiritual meanings, and she said some even serve as protection for the wearer.

One, a white shell known as gomuk, carries a special meaning, Palacios said.

"It represents the eyes of Shiva," she said, "who is the god of destruction."

The event will continue to be held three times a year, Romeis said.

Gville billboard ads may not help sales

■ THE FIVE BILLBOARDS COST $28,000 ANUALLY.

By SIMON PERSICO
Alligator Contributing Writer

In rustic, muted tones, they beckon weary travelers headed from Georgia to spend a night in Gainesville.

The five billboards, which line Interstate 75 southbound from the Georgia state line to Gainesville's city limits, were commissioned by VisitGainesville, a government agency founded in 1990 designed to increase tourism in the region. However, several hotel managers have found no business increase since the boards' placement.

The ads target weary travelers, often on their way to destinations deeper in Florida such as Naples, Sanibel or Miami, said Roland Loog, executive director of VisitGainesville.

VisitGainesville is funded by a 3 percent hotel room tax, and the billboards cost a total of $28,000 annually, Loog said. By placing signs far outside of Alachua, VisitGainesville hopes to lure lodgers and their money away from nearby Marion and Columbia counties.

Local News "We don't usually do billboards, but this year our walk-in industry took a huge hit," Loog said, referring to business gained from passing travelers.

Local artist Jim Harrison was commissioned by the organization to design the billboards, each tout-ing Gainesville's thousands of hotel rooms. The boards reflect Harrison's signature vintage fruit-crate label style.

According to Loog, motels and lodging directly on the interstate are expected to see the greatest increase in customers.

Currently, the Alachua County Hospitality Council is preparing a report on the effects of the billboards, but some Gainesville hoteliers are already pessimistic.

"No, I don't think it will help," said Mike Patel, manager of America's Best Value Inn. "They come because of our own advertising."

Of the four hotel managers interviewed, none reported an increase in walk-in guests, and two were not aware the campaign existed.

"We haven't had any more guests than usual, but that's just how the summers go," said Katie Johns-Hupp, a representative of the Sweetwater Branch Inn added.

Qi county residents prepare to return home from neighboring Sui county after fleeing their town in central China's Henan province following a radiation leak scare.

Chinese villagers flee from radiation scare

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIJING — They fled in droves, terrified by rumors of a radiation leak, with many jumping empty-handed into motorcycle taxis and farm trucks they hoped would take them out of harm's way.

While most of the residents of Henan province's Qi county had returned by Monday amid government assurances it was safe, last week's mass exodus — some residents estimated that hundreds of thousands of people left — illustrates how quickly rumors can spread and cause alarm in China.

The unease was sparked Friday, when bystanders saw government workers at a factory using robots to examine a malfunctioning cobalt-60 irradiator. The machine is used mainly for sterilizing pepper powder, flavoring used in instant noodles and garlic.

Within hours, alarm spread as people began hearing word that explosions occurred at the irradiation plant.

"There was chaos on the streets from about 2:30 p.m. until dark," said Zhu Zhihai, manager of a garlic-processing factory where all 30 employees rushed away. "All kinds of vehicles were going out of the county — farm vehicles, motorcycles and cars. People were in a hurry, and they didn't take anything with them."

International News

Zhu, who estimated that about a third of the county's 1 million people fled, said he didn't leave because his friends at the local environmental protection bureau told him there had not been a disaster.

An official at the Qi county government office said only "a small portion of people left" and refused to give his name or any other details.

Rumors can run rife in China, where many do not trust local officials and the government-controlled media because they downplay or in some cases boycott negative news fearing it will trigger social unrest.

UF ADMINISTRATION

Machen trip still scheduled

By THOMAS STEWART
Alligator Staff Writer

UF President Bernie Machen's trip to Indonesia later this month is still on the schedule despite Friday's attacks at two luxury hotels in the country's capital of Jakarta.

Eight people died and more than 50 were injured, including eight Americans, in the suicide bomb attacks at the JW Marriott and the Ritz-Carlton hotels, according to The New York Times, but it is unclear who is behind the attacks.

Machen and a delegation of officials from U.S. universities and colleges are scheduled to visit a handful of Indonesian cities, including the capital Jakarta, from Sunday to Aug. 1.

"We're monitoring the situation and waiting to hear from the organization planning the trip," UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes said Friday.

Terance Bigalke, director of education at the East-West Center, which organized the trip, said the trip will happen as planned, though one university official has dropped out.

He said the official's decision likely had something to do with Friday's attacks.

Machen

But officials from two other universities recently requested to be included in the delegation, he said.

Hotel arrangements are being made by the Indonesian government, and delegation members wouldn't stay at American hotels, he said. No lodging arrangements have been changed as a result of the attacks.

About 20 universities, university systems and colleges in the United States will be represented on the trip.

Turtle harvest ban begins

■ THE MISDEMEANOR'S FINES RANGE FROM $250 TO $750.

TALLAHASSEE — An historic ban on commercial harvesting and sale of Florida's freshwater turtles has begun.

It also prohibits the collection of turtle eggs. However, individuals will be permitted to take one turtle a day from the wild for most species.

The measure is considered the toughest rule on harvesting freshwater turtles in the nation and is a misdemeanor with fines ranging from $250 for a first violation to up to $750. Critics said the ban goes too far and gives turtles too much protection.

State spokeswoman Pat Behnke disagrees.

"We have some of the most precious and unique and abundant species in Florida, and anytime you're taking measures to conserve them, you're not going too far," Behnke said Monday.

Scientists were concerned the continued harvest of turtles at such a heavy rate would threaten their survival.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission approved the restrictions to protect more than two dozen species. Because worldwide demand for turtles has grown so much, a lot of hunters turned to Florida to get their supply.

Turtle meat is considered a delicacy in Asian markets, and the shell is used in traditional Chinese medicine.

UF 'optimistic' about Oct. game

erages and Tobacco.

Machen declined to comment on the meeting in an e-mail, but UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes issued this statement about the meeting: "We're optimistic our concerns will be addressed by the city of Jacksonville, and we're waiting to hear from Mayor Peyton."

Lowe also declined to discuss specifics, saying she can't yet reveal which of Machen's changes the Landing might put in place.

Student Life "We'll sit down with the city now and figure out what's best with everybody," she said.

She said she let Machen know the Landing already takes safety very seriously and has enacted many new security measures in the past few years, which a spokeswoman said in an interview earlier this month cost the Landing an additional $50,000 a year.

The spokeswoman also said implementing some of the changes, like limiting crowds, would be difficult, and others would impact the revenues of businesses at the venue.

Tonight, student senators will likely vote on a resolution that condemns Machen's attempts to restrict legal drinking in Jacksonville during the game.

Kone denied writing e-mails that led to his dismissal

KONE, from page 1

"There are some things you need to know about UF that they will never tell you on your visit," the e-mail said. "It has gone to hell in a hurry and is in a classic death spiral."

In one section, Kone allegedly took on top administrators one by one in a list titled "THE WINNING TEAM."

The e-mail calls one administrator an "Uncooperative prima dona," describes another as "So hyper, he vibrates" and "an imbecile" and says of another: "Needs lithium. Has built nothing."

Many of the insults in the e-mails and letter are directed at Machen. At one point, Machen is called the worst president in UF's history and is described as "among the top 10 most arrogant people on the planet."

Kone himself is also mentioned several times.

"The Kone execution was about the ugliest political assassination in the history of academic medicine and started the mass exodus of talent (what little there was) from the college of medicine," it read.

While at UF, he filed 12 complaints and made thousands of pages of records requests.

Kone agreed to drop all complaints he filed with UF and stop making public records requests as part of the settlement.

After investigating the complaints, UF found most of them to have no merit, according to university documents.

"A primary purpose of this Agreement is to cease all disputes and adverse interactions of the Parties, which have been extraordinarily time-consuming and distracting," the settlement reads.

Kone has agreed not to seek future employment with UF or its affiliates.

UF also agreed not to make any comments about the matter save for nine statements.

"Dr. Kone acknowledges that his concerns with the university have been resolved and that he is satisfied with the University's response to complaints he had made," one statement reads.

Another statement, dealing with Kone's payout, explains that it is just over a year's worth of total compensation and states that UF would have spent as much or more if the disputes between UF and Kone had continued and resulted in litigation.

Kone was paid a salary of $525,000 when he was dean and about $418,000 afterward, when he was a professor, according to UF records.

UF has also agreed to send potential employers a pre-written reference letter signed by the university president at the time.

The letter does not mention any of the controversies Kone was involved in.

Kone is now employed at the The University of Texas Medical School at Houston, his previous employer, as a visiting professor. He will be paid about $251,000 this year, according to the school's human resources department.

But Kone's impact on UF isn't over.

In an investigation into one of his complaints, the results of which were released Monday, UF determined that some hiring practices have violated the spirit of a memo sent out in September 2005. The memo prohibits UF from re-hiring employees who have entered the state's Deferred Retirement Option Program (DROP) before they have officially retired.

Under the DROP program, employees can retire in order to collect retirement checks but must wait a month before they can be re-hired, though the state Legislature changed that period to six months this year.

The investigation found that, out of five employees who were reviewed, two were offered jobs at UF again before they had officially retired. One employee would have been invited back, but the offer was rescinded.

None of the cases involved a breach of state law, the investigation concluded.

Nevertheless, Paula Fussell, UF's interim vice president of Human Resource Services, said UF is looking to put a new policy in place requiring a review of all cases in which UF is considering re-hiring an employee in DROP.

Fussell said that as of February, about 20 UF employees in the program had been re-hired and were potentially eligible to receive a regular paycheck in addition to a retirement paycheck, known as "double-dipping."

Vick wraps up confinement

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HAMPTON, Va. — Suspended NFL star Michael Vick ended his federal dogfighting sentence Monday, freeing him to lobby for a return to the field.

Vick's attorney Lawrence Woodward told The Associated Press outside Vick's suburban Virginia home that the former Atlanta Falcons quarterback had been released from federal custody as scheduled. That means Vick no longer has to wear the electronic monitor he's had while under home confinement for the last two months of his 23-month sentence.

Shortly before Woodward came out of the house, two men in a government car with a U.S.

National News

Probation Services folder on the dashboard paid a brief visit to the home. They carried a large case similar to the one that Vick's ankle monitor was delivered in when he started home confinement. The men declined to identify themselves or speak to waiting reporters.

Vick then drove to the federal courthouse in nearby Norfolk to meet federal probation officials to take care of paperwork. Vick declined to answer reporters' questions as he left the courthouse with Woodward about an hour and 45 minutes later. Vick hopes to soon meet with NFL commissioner Roger Goodell, who has said he would review Vick's status after Vick completed his sentence.

Obsessive fan culture led to video

There's a thin line between admiration and objectification.

That line was crossed a long time ago. It just took a disgusting invasion of privacy to make the sports world realize how far past the line we were.

Thursday, a video recorded through a peephole showing UF alum and ESPN reporter Erin Andrews naked in her hotel room was posted on the Internet. By Friday afternoon, popular sports blogs had all picked up on and written about the video. As things tend to do online, the video went viral and spread rapidly even after it was removed from the original location.

Andrews' attorney, Marshall B. Grossman of Bingham McCutchen LLP, issued the following statement Friday:

"While alone in the privacy of her hotel room, Erin Andrews was surreptitiously videotaped without her knowledge or consent. She was the victim of a crime and is taking action to protect herself and help ensure that others are not similarly violated in the future.

Although the perpetrator or perpetrators of this criminal act have not yet been identified, when they are identified she intends to bring both civil and criminal charges against them and against anyone who has published the material. We request respect of Erin's privacy at this time, while she and her representatives are working with the authorities."

Coming up: Top Burning Questions

We've looked back. Now, it's time to take a peek forward.

Over the last three weeks, we unveiled our alligatorSports Top 10 UF Athletes of 2008-09, counting down from No. 10 to No. 1.

We were praised and vilified. We would have it no other way.

Now, I'd like to introduce one final list to push through the summer doldrums, and take a look at some of the most intriguing questions that will be answered during the next nine months in Gainesville.

Starting Thursday, we will reveal what we think are the Top 10 Burning Questions for UF Athletics in 2009-10.

Once again, we went through a nomi-

World's longest golf course opening in Australia

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BRISBANE, Australia — Hit a few loose shots or three-putt the first green at Nullarbor Links and you'll have plenty of time to think about your errant ways before teeing off at the second.

That's because No. 2 is 42 miles down the highway.

Billed as the world's longest golf course, Nullarbor is set to open next month — an 842-mile trek through the desolate Outback of Australia's Nullarbor Plains, starting at Ceduna in the state of South Australia and finishing at the mining town of Kalgoorlie in Western Australia.

The course is a novelty, for sure, but its organizers reckon the par 71, which includes holes borrowed from existing golf courses and others built from scratch near motels and tourist attractions, is sure to bring out the adventurous player.

"I don't think there is any two ways about it, it will be unique," Alf Caputo, the course's project manager, said in a telephone interview from the western city of Perth, where he is organizing the finishing touches on the course for a planned Aug. 15 opening. "The scenery along this stretch of the Eyre Highway is unlike anywhere else in the world."

Same goes for the golf course. The seven holes taken from existing golf courses include some with sand greens that are raked, oiled and then rolled to maintain their smoothness.

The first two holes are among them, and they have natural grass fairways, but the 11 holes that are being built for Nullarbor Links will have synthetic tees and synthetic greens — the most workable plan from a maintenance standpoint due to the lack of rainfall in the flat, dry land of south-central Australia.

"In between the tees and green, we'll leave it as natural terrain, although we'll clear the debris," said Caputo, a former local council member. "We'll leave trees and natural hazards there, because we don't want to do anything to affect the beautiful scenery."

The cost of the course came in at a relatively reasonable $640,000, with about a third of the funding coming in a grant from an Australian government department which promotes tourism.

"It sounds like a bit of a pipe dream, but when we checked it all out, it was so basic," Caputo said. "It doesn't involve any million-dollar spending. We had the infrastructure at some of the holes already, and we'll pass along proceeds from the green fees to the roadhouses and motels to ensure that maintenance is kept up."

When the course opens, green fees will be a modest $40. A certificate will be issued from tourism centers at Ceduna in the east and Kalgoorlie in the west to those who have their scorecards stamped for all 18 holes.

Bob Bongiorno, a former roadhouse/motel manager at Balladonia, which will host one of the holes, came up with the idea for the course.

"I first thought about it nine or 10 years ago," Bongiorno told the AP from Kalgoorlie. "I had lived on the Nullarbor for 10 years, and I always felt that people just connected east and west along our highway, and traversed the distance quickly."

"They endured rather than enjoyed the trek. They missed what I called a lot of the 'self-find' stuff along the way. The whole idea was to try to create something to slow people down and make it part of the holiday."

So far, so good in that department. The golf course's Web site had more than 15,000 hits in the three days after word of it first appeared in local media.

The idea took shape when Caputo and Bongiorno, now good friends, sat in a bar and brainstormed "over a glass or two of red wine," Caputo said. "All good ideas come out of a glass of red, don't they?" Out of that session came the setup of the course and the thought of working with local motels and tourist attractions.

Caputo said the average group of golfers will take about four days to complete the course, which, at its most eastern point at Ceduna is 1,300 miles west of Sydney. More than 250,000 tourists annually make the trip across the hot, arid Nullarbor on the Eyre Highway, and there soon could be more: Caputo says a British travel promoter wants to put together a 10-day package which includes Nullarbor Links and top-flight courses in Adelaide and Perth.

Included on the Nullarbor journey is the longest stretch of straight road on any highway in Australia. After golfers leave the par-4, 340-yard hole at the Caiguna roadhouse, they won't have to turn their steering wheels for 90 miles.

When they arrive at the next hole at the Balladonia Motel, they can take a side trip to an area commemorating the July 1979 fall to earth of the NASA research laboratory Skylab, which landed in fiery chunks around Balladonia.

U.S. President Jimmy Carter is said by locals to have phoned the motel's manager to apologize, and the area's shire ranger, David Somerville, was photographed giving a NASA official a littering ticket, which the council later waived.

The next hole is a par-3, 155-yarder at the Fraser Range — home of the largest eucalyptus hardwood forest in Australia, some trees more than 100 feet tall. There's also a working sheep station nearby.

Since the holes are designed to be played from either direction, they are not numbered.

So the hole at Caiguna near the long stretch of road is called Ninety Mile Straight, followed by Skylab, and then Sheep's Back.

And don't forget Caputo's and Bongiorno's favorite hole — the 19th.

"We've got a great bar at either end in Ceduna or Kalgoorlie, but the beauty of this course is that every hole has a 19th hole," says Caputo, laughing. "Some just steps from the green. How good is that?"

Saturday, saying that Andrews had been "grievously wronged" by "this abhorrent act."

While everyone in their right mind realizes the perversion and horrible invasion of privacy involved in recording the video, it's not an isolated incident.

For sports blogs and news outlets alike, Andrews equals instant page views. No matter how mundane the topic, she brings readers to the site.

That's even true for us at the Alligator. A March 21, 2008, story about a speech Andrews gave at UF is still among the most-viewed stories on our site. As much as I'd like to think that's because readers were interested in the story, we all know that's not true. It's because of the corresponding photo of Andrews.

The popular sports blogs are largely being targeted as the villains in this case for promoting and encouraging this unreasonable fan adoration. While I don't think blogs are nearly the scourge on society many traditional journalists make them out to be, I agree in this case.

To defend their actions, many of the blogs have argued that their coverage of Andrews was tongue-in-cheek and that they only provided coverage of America's "Sideline Princess" in an ironic manner that their readers would appreciate.

While I can't claim to know the motives of each blog's editor, I do know that every joke of this kind begins with some element of truth. Andrews brought page views, and even if blogs were continually posting stories as a joke, they still reaped the benefits and fed into the somewhat creepy love fans have for her. The reasoning behind it doesn't matter in this case, because they gave the readers what they wanted to see: more Erin Andrews.

But the problem came, as we saw this weekend, when they saw all of Erin Andrews.

The joke, such as it was, has gone too far. It's not funny anymore. It's offensive.

By this point, the bloggers seem to be honestly remorseful for what Andrews is going through, but they have also realized that they created something they can't undo.

When stories about the video started to appear online, comments online ranged from enthused to outraged. Perhaps the most disgusting reaction, however, comes from those who joke that Andrews should not be upset about the video because she is physically flawless, as if the only problem with this incident is that Andrews was filmed while nude.

But that's not the real problem. It's just the culmination of months of fan worship and an online culture that promotes this type of obsessive behavior.

We tried to look at it like this — if you're a Gators fan, what are you most worried or curious about over the next nine months?

From a national exposure standpoint, obviously UF's upcoming 2009 football season promises to be closely watched and analyzed from coast to coast.

The team will be rightfully represented on our list for that fact — there are plenty of interesting storylines to ponder surrounding the gridiron action this fall.

But step outside the football bubble and you'll find plenty of intrigue.

Obviously there's the questions for Billy Donovan and the men's basketball team, but what about the volleyball team vying to return to the Final Four, which will be in Tampa this year?

The soccer team finished its season ranked in the top 10.

The softball team lost its best pitcher ever to graduation.

Women's lacrosse will play its first match this spring in a beautiful new stadium.

The baseball team made a surprising trip to Super Regionals but lost plenty of depth to Major League Baseball.

The gymnastics team will compete in its home gym if it qualifies for the Super Six, held in the O'Connell Center in 2010.

We're trying to look at the UF sports landscape as a whole, and it's hard to deny there's plenty of success to go around.

But what about the women's golf team hiring a new coach?

Does Donovan go on the hot seat if the men's basketball team struggles again?

What are your Top 10 Burning Questions for UF Athletics in 2009-10?

How will your list compare with ours?

You will have to wait until Thursday to find out.

Nash, Suns agree to extension

■ THE DEAL IS WORTH $22 MILLION OVER TWO YEARS.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHOENIX — Steve Nash and the Phoenix Suns have agreed on a two-year, $22 million contract extension, his agent said.

Bill Duffy confirmed the agreement Monday in an interview with The Associated Press.

The deal will keep the two-time MVP point guard under contract with the Suns through the 2011-12 season.

The 35-year-old Nash, entering his 13th NBA season, had one year left on his contract that would pay him $13 million next season.

The agreement first was reported by ESPN.

The Suns and Nash had been in negotiations for several weeks on a deal that would keep him in Phoenix. He will be 38 when the contract expires. He is expected to sign the agreement later this week.

Under the agreement, $6 million of the final two years of the contract will be deferred, with $3 million being paid in each of the two years following the expiration of the contract, Duffy said.

The deal was pushed closer to completion last Wednesday when owner Robert Sarver met with Duffy in Las Vegas to sweeten the team's earlier offer.

The Suns lured Nash to Phoenix in 2004 in a celebrated effort that included a flight to Dallas by then-owner Jerry Colangelo and a host of representatives of the team. When Mavericks owner Mark Cuban balked at re-signing Nash, at age 30, at the amount he wanted, the point guard signed a five-year, $65 million contract with Phoenix.

What followed were the best years of Nash's career as the maestro of the high-octane offense of then-coach Mike D'Antoni. He was named the league's MVP in 2005 and 2006 and was a first-team all-NBA selection in 2005, 2006 and 2007.

When D'Antoni left the Suns for the New York Knicks after the 2007-08 season, Nash struggled with the slower style of new coach Terry Porter.

When Porter was fired at the All-Star break and replaced by assistant Alvin Gentry, the Suns returned to the speed game, a factor that no doubt figured into Nash's decision to re-sign.

When Gentry was kept on as coach after the season, Nash made his feelings known on his Twitter account.

"Really happy that the Suns resigned Alvin Gentry," Nash wrote. "Great coach and great person."

Nash will stay with a team that faces an uncertain future after failing to make the playoffs for the first time since he rejoined the team.

All-Star Amar'e Stoudemire has one year left on his contract and wants the maximum in any new deal, something the budget-conscious Suns may not be willing to do.

Nash had to be convinced the team was willing to take steps to become a contender again, Duffy said.

He said the team has assured Nash he will be consulted as the Suns make future moves, the agent said.

If Stoudemire does leave, the Suns will have the money to be a player in the lucrative free-agent market after the coming season.

Nash, born in South Africa and raised in Victoria, British Columbia, was the Suns' first-round draft pick in 1996 and was traded to Dallas in 1998. He has averaged 14.4 points and eight assists in his pro career.

In the last five years with Phoenix, Nash has averaged 17.1 points and 10.8 assists per game. He has shot better than 50 percent from the field and 43 percent from 3-point range in all five seasons.
