Bucking for Bucks

Lauren Baldwin, a UF student and member of Sigma Kappa Sorority, rides a mechanical bull at Alpha Gamma Rho's 15th annual Buck-Off philanthropy event at :08 downtown Wednesday night. The event raised money for the Gainesville Winn Dixie Hope Lodge, which provides cancer patients with lodging when they need to travel for treatment.

Florida Prepaid College Plans are not dealing with the deficits that other state prepaid plans are facing, according to a recent New York Times article.

Tom Wallace, the executive director of the Florida Prepaid College Board, said in an e-mail that the plan's trust fund has managed to hold its own despite the turbulent stock market.

Wallace said he credited the plan's stability to its conservative investment strategy. The plan chooses to invest most of its money in fixed-income securities, which allow funds to safely weather changing markets and the passage of time.

Susan James, the director of external affairs for the Florida Prepaid College Board, said the plan allows parents to pay the cost of tuition, fees and dorm housing at the time they buy the plan, rather than at the time their children attend college.

She said more than 1.4 million Florida Prepaid plans have been purchased by families since 1988.

Rebecca Weiss, a sophomore journalism major, said she has the Florida Prepaid College Plan and also receives a full Bright Futures scholarship.

As Bright Futures faces changes, the secure state of the Florida Prepaid College Plan is reassuring, Weiss said.

"Honestly, college students need as much help as we can get money-wise," Weiss said.

According to University Financial Services, 9,302 UF students used Florida Prepaid plans in Fall 2008, and about $12.5 million was disbursed to UF students by Florida Prepaid.

Two arrested in gun ring

■ THE MEN ARE ACCUSED OF STEALING TWO FIREARMS.

By KATHERINE BEIN

kbein@alligator.org

Two men were arrested Wednesday after police say they stole firearms last week to sell in a weapons ring.

Keegan Campbell, 19, and Jesse Renfro, 22, were named by their accomplice, Bud Williams, during an interview with police on Oct. 1, according to police reports.

On the night of the robbery, which took place at Brandywine Apartments, 2811 SW Archer Road, Williams said he drove Campbell and Renfro to the residence and helped them steal a large metal safe, as well as a laptop, TV and other items valued at about $2,500.

The men returned to Williams' apartment, where Renfro opened a safe with a power saw and found two handguns inside, valued at $750, according to the report.

Williams, a two-time felon, was arrested after police received a tip that he was selling weapons from his apartment.

Campbell

After catching Williams selling a shotgun, police searched his apartment and discovered nine other firearms: one handgun and a mix of shotguns, hunting rifles and a full rifle magazine, the report stated.

Williams was charged with 11 counts of possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, one count of armed burglary and two counts of grand theft from a dwelling.

Campbell was charged with one count of armed burglary and one count of possession of a weapon by a convicted felon. Renfro was charged with one count of grand theft of a firearm.

Obama honors retired UF professor with science award

He created a procedure used by NASA

A retired UF professor was presented with the National Medal of Science by President Barack Obama Wednesday, according to a White House press release.

Rudolf Kalman, a UF graduate research professor emeritus, developed a problem-solving procedure that was used during the Apollo missions to navigate and control the vehicles, said Pramod Khargonekar, former dean of the College of Engineering.

The procedure, an algorithm known as the Kalman Filter, also has applications in engineering and the social sciences, Khargonekar said.

He said in an e-mail that Kalman also laid the foundations of control theory, which relates to technologies such as anti-lock brakes and GPS.

"The impact of his work just keeps on growing with the passage of time," he said.

Khargonekar said he met Kalman in 1978 when he came to study under him as a Ph.D. student.

Kalman now works at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology in Zurich, according to the release.

Labels etched on fruits

■ LASER ETCHING WOULD COST LESS THAN USING STICKER LABELS.

By JILLIAN KREMER

Alligator Contributing Writer

It won't be long until purchasing fruit at the grocery store is far from a sticky situation.

UF researchers are in the final stages of testing a new system, called laser etching, which uses light energy to place traceback information directly on fruit as an alternative to the sticky adhesive labels usually used.

Traceback information includes where the fruit was packaged and sometimes where it was grown.

Greg Drouillard, a former senior engineering research scientist for the center, was in Ben Hill Griffin Hall at the center in 1994 when he overheard discussion about an alternative to the problem of expensive adhesive labels.

"It gave me something to think about," he said. "So I started to come up with ideas on my own."

One of those ideas became the laser-etching system. With laser etching, the wavelength of a laser is set specifically to remove a fruit or vegetable's pigment, located a few cell layers deep on the surface of the produce, as it passes by.

Ed Etxeberria, a professor in the department of horticultural sciences at UF, is on the testing team at the Citrus Research and Education Center in Lake Alfred, Fla. He said they are testing the new system on a variety of fruits to see how it affects appearance, rates of decay and water loss.

The results so far have led Etxeberria to determine that the light actually sterilizes the treated area, thus eliminating the growth of decay organisms, yet it allows for increased dehydration of the fruit.

"At the packinghouse, the label is placed after the fruit has been washed and waxed," he said. "If packers place a second layer of wax on just the labeled area, now it's sealed and we avoid all problems."

Etxeberria, along with U.S. Department of Agriculture microbiologist Jan Narciso and graduate student Preeti Sood, is now testing for the potential infiltration of human pathogens. Etxeberria said the tests are critical, as laser etching is the only non-removable way to label fruit.

"This system is the only one with permanent traceback," he said. "Before, the stickers could fall off or be switched."

The process also could provide new advertising methods, allowing companies to create their unique logos to be placed directly on the fruit, said Steven Sargent, a professor of post-harvest pathology at UF.

Drouillard, now the director of laser research and technology for Sunkist Growers and owner of Laser Applications Technologies, first released his system in 2005.

Drouillard said the testing should be completed by the end of October. Once the FDA approves laser etching, he said it wouldn't take long before the system is widely used.

Students protest Afghanistan war on 8th anniversary

■ ABOUT 30 PEOPLE ATTENDED.

By MORGAN WATKINS
Alligator Contributing Writer

A crowd of about 30 people rallied on UF's Plaza of the Americas Wednesday afternoon to call for an end to the war in Afghanistan.

Students stood in the heat and held signs scrawled with messages about the war, which had its eighth anniversary Wednesday. The messages included phrases like "books not bombs" and "fund schools not war."

The demonstration was set up by several organizations, including UF Amnesty International, UF's chapter of Students for a Democratic Society, Campus CodePINK for Peace at UF, Human Rights Awareness on Campus and Islam on Campus at UF.

After the speeches, several students led a march from the Plaza of the Americas to Turlington Plaza. As they walked with their signs held high, they shouted in unison, "Fund education, not occupation."

Emily Flynn, president of UF Amnesty International, said in an interview before the rally that it was important to get the word out about the harmful effects of militarization, especially in light of recent talk about sending more troops to Afghanistan.

Justin Wooten, a member of Students for a Democratic Society who helped organize the demonstration, said the UF protest was one of many taking place across dozens of U.S. campuses Wednesday.

He hoped the rally would make people think more seriously about Afghanistan, especially as the conflict in Iraq seems to be fading in prominence.

"People are still focusing mainly on the economic crisis right now, and this has everything to do with that," Wooten said of the war.

He said the money spent on war costs would be better spent on education, especially in light of the current economic crisis at the national and state levels.

Paul Ortiz, a UF professor and veteran of the U.S. military, spoke at the event about his experiences and the war's impact on people across the world. He said it was his moral responsibility to attend the rally.

He also added that it was a personal issue for him because of his military background and the experiences of his family members who have served in Iraq.

"I don't want my family to continue to be under the constant threat of being killed and in harm's way," Ortiz said.

Cross Critics

Desert religious symbol doesn't cross the line

The U.S. Supreme Court is debating the constitutionality of a cross erected in the Mojave National Preserve as a memorial honoring fallen soldiers.

Those who object to the presence of the cross, which is on government-owned land, say that it violates the first line of the First Amendment: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion."

The cross was built by a local Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter in 1934.

The fact that the cross is the predominant symbol of Christianity should not mean that it can't be used as a memorial. It does not represent the government's endorsement of one religion over others. It's meant to serve as a symbol for those who died in foreign wars.

However, people of different faiths should be allowed to construct their own memorials as well. According to a CNN article, officials denied a Buddhist group's request to build a "stupa," or shrine. If officials allow one religious symbol to stand in the sand, then other groups should have the same privilege.

Thousands of crosses stand in Arlington National Cemetery in honor of soldiers of the Christian faith. Stars of David honor Jewish veterans. This case should be no different.

If people want to use religious symbols to honor the dead, then more power to them.

The purpose of the establishment clause is to prevent the government from being partial to any particular religion. It doesn't mean that the government should hide religion from the public eye.

Nasty Nurse

A Fort Lauderdale nurse resigned after she was caught reusing IV tubing and saline bags while giving cardiac stress tests to patients over the past five years.

It's possible that Qui Lan, 59, exposed the 1,851 patients she saw to communicable diseases such as HIV and hepatitis by not following standard hospital procedure and using the one-time use items as intended, according to an article by The Associated Press.

We cannot think of a reason why Lan, who worked as a nurse for 37 years before her resignation, would fail to consider the safety of her patients when using an item labeled as "sterile" more than once.

Plus, the items she re-used are inexpensive and very easy to come by in any medical facility, especially a hospital. Saline is nothing more than a mixture of salt and water in a plastic bag, and a 50-pack of 60-inch IV tubing costs less than $70 online. And a hospital like Broward General likely buys in bulk.

When getting care at a hospital, there's an assumption of safety and a level of trust that patients expect. Lan violated this trust.

Hospital officials reacted appropriately by contacting by certified mail the 1,851 patients who came under Lan's "care" since 2004.

Hopefully, none of the patients find that they contracted a disease because of Lan's carelessness. If someone did, police should prosecute her to the fullest extent of the law.

Philly no friend of man's best friend

In a strange twist of fate, a single city has clumsily tripped into the epicenter of the debate over animal cruelty in America. This city has taken a bold stand in favor of dog fighting on legal and social levels, voluntarily placing itself in the line of fire against existing federal law and overwhelming public opinion.

That this city is Philadelphia should surprise virtually no one who has ever had the intense pleasure of traversing the urine-soaked sidewalks of the cheez whiz capital of the world.

Most commonly called "Filthadelphia," Philly has taken steps in recent years to make the city even less hospitable to decent human life. The culmination of these moves toward cornering the market in disaster tourism is a pair of anti-dog moves the city finalized just a few weeks ago.

The Philadelphia Eagles signed quasi-reformed dog killer Michael Vick to be their third-string quarterback last month, but not until long after the 3rd District Court in Philadelphia ruled against federal guidelines banning the sale and distribution of dog-fighting videos. The U.S. Supreme Court has just agreed to hear the appeal to this ruling in its current session, placing the judgment of the Philadelphia-based 3rd District under our highest judicial review.

Those of you unfamiliar with the city of Philadelphia may wonder why a metropolis would freely associate itself so strongly with such a reprehensible pastime as pit bull fighting. Those asking such a question probably have a working knowledge of Philadelphia that centers on the Liberty Bell and people wearing powdered wigs to stuffy constitutional conventions. Philly was probably a great place to live back then, back in the time

letters@alligator.org

before cars and industrialization and modern medicine.

In order to live in the Philadelphia of today, one must have either an intense self-hatred or a crippling heroin addiction. Other possible reasons to live in or around Philly include being under the age of 12 or over the age of 70, having a particular affinity for human suffering and/or running a large drug dealing operation. The requirements of living in South Philly additionally include at least two severe emotional and psychological disabilities.

Fans of the Philadelphia Eagles are renowned for having booed Santa Claus in a December 1968 game and pegging him with snowballs, but the wanton destruction of childhood icons in Philly did not end with St. Nick. A little-known 1987 incident saw the Easter Bunny beaten and tossed into the lion exhibit at the Philadelphia Zoo and rumors have spread since late 2006 that the Tooth Fairy barely fought off a carjacking near Independence Hall.

The Supreme Court will soon rule one way or another on the relative social value of the images associated with dog fighting, and Michael Vick will at some point in the near future run for a touchdown on a snowy Philadelphia evening.

Each of us will have to sort out how we feel about these inevitabilities, but some things are ironclad certainties — your dog wants steak, and it hates Philadelphia with a burning passion.

Tommy Maple is a graduate student in international communications. His column appears on Thursdays.

Drivers must become more aware of cyclists

I awoke bloody and in sharp pain at 2:25 a.m. on Sept. 4. I couldn't tell you what city I lived in, what my name was or what happened.

What I do remember is shoving my jaw back into place, spitting blood into the street and watching all the sparkling headlights flying past me without hesitating to see if I was OK. My concussion made the truth blurry, but from my bruises and broken bones, it seemed I was clipped by a vehicle on my bicycle.

My face planted into the asphalt, resulting in five mandible and cheek fractures, a handful of broken ribs and a broken toe. Luckily, friends saw my zombie-like self pushing my bike on University Avenue and rushed me to the North Florida Regional Medical Center to be told the obvious: "Sir, your body is quite mangled."

The result: Six weeks of a wired jaw and enough road rash to make "28 Days Later" look like a B-list movie.

I moved to Gainesville last fall from Indianapolis and was quite excited to be submerged in such a vibrant outdoor community. What I found was a very knowledgeable bike scene with a completely ignorant motorized community. We have the Gainesville Cycling Club, more bike shops than one can count, bike messengers, races and a plethora of bicycle listings on Craigslist. But there is no awareness about cyclists when it comes to motorists.

John Phoebus

I've been hit a total of three times. Vehicles have run me into the sidewalk five or six times and have run me off the road more than I can count in the past year. In all the close calls and accidents, only one person stopped — a drunken driver on St. Patrick's Day who tried to pay me off so I wouldn't get her arrested.

Most cyclists have been hit: bones broken, skin raw with road rash and frames destroyed. Any cyclist will tell you it's a rare week to not escape death in a town that prides itself on being open-minded and environmentally friendly.

Yes, we have bicycle lanes on lots of roads. But we still need to raise awareness for cyclists. There is no excuse to have cyclists hit, harassed and yelled at, pushed off their bikes or have beer bottles thrown at them while cycling; all have happened to me more than once.

It seems we have forgotten what happened in 2006. According to police reports, Welch McNair Bostick III, a UF grad student, was struck by a vehicle and killed on Aug. 28. The driver dozed off and ended Bostick's life. There was an increase in cycling awareness after Bostick passed, but it seems we forget too easily. I don't want to see another death or to have Bostick's death be in vain.

I want my accident to have some benefit to the cyclists in Gainesville and across the state. If I have to drink all my meals for six weeks, the community should be learning from this.

Simple actions from motorists like using turn signals, looking before turning and not texting while driving will save cyclists' lives. We aren't like motorcyclists who boast loud horns that 'save lives.' We can't yell over your stereo system. We can't just use our bumpers to keep us safe or our seatbelts to keep us from flying over your windshield. Most of us are doing this for health, for the environment, for logical transport. Motorists, watch out for cyclists. You never know — that cyclist could be the guy bringing you your sub "freaky fast," or the environmentalist who's saving our planet, or your economics professor. Be grateful for us.

John Thaddeus Phoebus is a Gainesville resident.

Letter to the Editor

Burger King should keep it tacky

As I read the editorial about Burger King's imminent extreme makeover, I became considerably miffed. When I go into B, the last words I want to cross my mind are "upscale, hip, and edgy."

Burger King, let me save you some time and money here. Stop with the fancy interior designing and lavish chandeliers. We're already in the place, and we know full well what we're getting into.

If I wanted to go to a trendy restaurant, I'd go to whatever chic eatery was featured on the latest episode of "The Hills."

Not to mention Starbucks has had the pseudo-sophisticated crowd covered for a while now.

Embrace your tackiness, Burger King. It's grown charming over the years. I think your biggest competitor shops the Pottery Barn dollar menu for its decor anyway.

That being said, you can take your ambience and fry me a river, Burger King. Just lettuce know when you've mustered the sense to get back to your roots, so we can relish in familiarity and ketchup with an old friend.

Phones collected for abuse victims

By JOEY FLECHAS

Alligator Contributing Writer

UF's Family Law Society is trying to make sure that every call for help can be heard.

October is National Domestic Violence Awareness Month, and the organization is collecting cell phones and chargers to donate to victims of domestic violence so they can call 911 during an emergency.

The "Call Out Against Domestic Violence" drive will run until Oct. 29, and the collection box is in the lobby of the Levin College of Law Library.

Family Law Society President Kelly Damerow, a second-year law student at the Levin College of Law, said the drive is part of an effort to get the organization involved in the community.

It is the first time the group has held a cell phone drive.

"We hope to make it annual," she said.

According to rules set by the Federal Communications Commission, all wireless service providers must transmit 911 calls regardless of whether the caller is a subscriber or not.

This way, even if an old cell phone is disconnected, it can still call 911.

The idea for the project came from second-year law student Jennifer Marks, secretary of the Family Law Society.

"It was something I was passionate about," she said.

"Whatever you can donate will help."

Jennifer Marks

Secretary, UF Family Law Society

While taking a summer class dedicated to domestic violence, she learned that victims often don't have ways to call for help because of financial reasons or controlling partners.

"We're really just trying to educate," she said.

All of the donated cell phones and chargers will go to Peaceful Paths, an organization that provides shelter and other services for domestic abuse victims in Alachua, Bradford and Union counties.

The collection started Monday, and as of Wednesday afternoon, Marks said they had received five cell phones and seven chargers.

"Whatever you can donate will help," she said.

Domestic partners eligible for spouse Gators tickets

By KATIE KLOSS

Alligator Contributing Writer

Thanks to a change in policy, the domestic partners of UF students will now be able to get spouse tickets for Gator games.

Spouse tickets cost the same as student tickets, which are usually cheaper than general admission.

The University Athletic Association changed its policy last week, according to UAA spokesman Steve McClain.

The UAA's old policy required students who wanted to purchase spouse tickets to submit a valid marriage certificate to the Gator Ticket Office, according to GatorZone.com.

Under the new policy, UF Student Legal Services determines spouse eligibility.

Gator 1 Central then issues the spouse cards used to purchase tickets.

McClain wrote in an e-mail that anyone with a valid Gator 1 spouse card "shall be eligible to purchase single-game and post-season football tickets and men's basketball single-game tickets in accordance with standard UF student ticket policies for those events."

McClain

Whitney Blake, Pride Student Union's vice president of outreach, wrote in an e-mail that the old policy was "discriminatory and unacceptable." "We are as much a part of the Gator Nation as any other student, faculty, or staff here at the University of Florida," Blake wrote.

McClain stated the policy change occurred after the UAA consulted with Student Legal Services but did not answer questions about what prompted the change.

The policy change goes into effect immediately, according to McClain.

Blake wrote that Pride Student Union is happy about the change but believes "it should not have been an issue in the first place."

Ryan Johnson-Travis, a UF grad student studying acting, is also happy about the change.

"I think this is an incredible opportunity for the university to show the world at large that love is love, regardless of what it looks like," Johnson-Travis said.

New Santa Fe College concert band to debut tonight

■ ABOUT 30 STUDENTS WILL PERFORM IN THE BAND.

By ALEX CHACHKEVITCH

Alligator Staff Writer

Santa Fe College's new concert band, the Santa Fe Winds, will kick off its debut season tonight with its first performance.

About 30 Santa Fe students will premiere with eight instrumental pieces, said Chris Sharp, Santa Fe's director of instrumental music and conductor for the band.

The program will include works by Ralph Vaughan Williams, Cecile Chaminade and James Vincent, as well as two pieces written by Sharp.

Santa Fe first-year music student Dylan King, who will be performing "Flute Concertino" by Chaminade, said he is excited about the debut.

King said he enjoys playing for an audience and that he is not nervous because he performed the same piece when he was in his high school band.

"They're going to be terrific for their first time," Sharp said, adding that band has been practicing since the beginning of Fall semester.

The performance will also feature guest conductor Johnny Egan, an SFC sophomore, who will direct "Lyric Overture" by Frank Erickson.

Santa Fe College

Ensemble members get college credit for their work. Santa Fe offers the concert band class to anyone who is interested and has previous experience with instruments.

But this will be the first time Santa Fe will have its own performing band — Santa Fe Winds.

"We now have enough students to have our own ensemble," Sharp said, adding that the class previously collaborated with the Gainesville Community Band.

He said SFC is just starting its music program, but it is already offering a range of music classes.

Students could not pursue degrees in music previously at Santa Fe.

Admission to the concert is free and will be held in the college's E Auditorium. The group's second performance is scheduled for Dec. 1.

"DREW BARRYMORE HAS DIRECTED A WORK OF PURE GENIUS."

‘Nano’ course examines technology’s impact on jobs

By KATHERINE BEIN

Alligator Staff Writer
kbein@alligator.org

What futuristic discovery could create about two million jobs and is smaller than the dust collecting on your textbooks?

The answer is nanoparticles, and UF is working to educate people on their importance with a new one-credit class.

Nano for the Rest of Us — EMA 4935 for undergraduates and EMA 6938 for graduate students — is designed to put students and faculty from different disciplines together to learn from one another and figure out how nanotechnology is going to change the world for the better.

“It has potential that is unthinkable today,” said Brij Moudgil, the engineering professor who started the class last summer with co-creators Bill Appleton and Rodney Guico.

Moudgil said he got the idea during his years of research at UF.

Once he began to understand the scope of the technology, which has applications from biomedicine to the environment, he decided there should be a class aimed at non-engineering students.

He said it doesn’t matter what stage of study a student is in because the point is communication.

The class meets once a week, and each meeting features a professor from a different college who talks about how nanotechnology relates to his or her field of work, its opportunities and the questions being raised with each discovery.

The questions include ethical issues that must be faced when doctors are able to send nanobots into a patient’s bloodstream to fight viruses or infections and how the media will inform the public about advancements and color the way society views these achievements.

Although the issues are important and can’t be faced by researchers alone, Moudgil said, students shouldn’t be intimidated.

“You don’t have to be a mad scientist or even know anything about nanotechnology to do well and appreciate this course,” he said.

“We want students to have fun,” he said. “If you have fun, hard work is really not hard work, and you must have hard work to reach excellence.”

Lisa Ferrera, a third-year materials engineering student, is taking the course and said she found the class when she was looking for a one-credit course.

Thomas Plevik / Alligator

Visiting nanoresearch scholar Yong-Woo Heo, right, and UF chemical engineering student Byung Hwan Chu, left, prep supplies inside the gowning room at the UF Nanofabrication Facility.

Nano for the Rest of Us was the perfect solution, she said, with no homework, no tests and the opportunity to learn about something making a difference in our lives.

“I look forward to (the rest of the class),” she said. “It’s very interesting, really relaxed...It encompasses what is really going on right now, and it takes everyone to do it.”

Moudgil said he hopes the class can evolve and that more students, faculty and people from different backgrounds will take the course and apply themselves and their specific skills to the subject.

“We want to do our small part,” he said. “It’s a teaser — probably the first course like it. We’re having fun.”

Badgley branches out with new role in horror flick

By LANE NIESET
avenue editor

Dan Humphrey and Michael Harding have one thing in common: They are both outcasts.

Penn Badgley, who plays Dan Humphrey in the hit series "Gossip Girl," is branching out with his role in the movie "The Stepfather," which opens in theaters Oct. 16.

In the film, Badgley plays the role of Michael, who returns home from military school and finds his mother living with her new boyfriend. Michael is suspicious of his mother's boyfriend, who he thinks might have appeared on "America's Most Wanted."

Badgley said the film is different from other horror movies because it is obvious who the killer is from the first scene, unlike a game of Clue when the audience is guessing who the killer could be.

"This is a broader thriller," he said during a Monday conference call with college media outlets. "I think there's more of a story that will draw you in and keep you invested as opposed to relying on gimmicks."

Because the audience already knows who the killer is, the film has to end in a battle between the stepson and stepfather, he said.

"The Stepfather" is a remake of a 1987 thriller that featured a stepdaughter instead of a stepson.

"I think they changed that to make the relationship between the stepfather and my character to be one where you can only see one of two ways for it to end, and that's probably one of them dying," he said during the conference call.

To prepare for the role, Badgley did push ups, pull ups, practiced screaming and anything to let the "blood rush to his head," he said. Badgley would try to "exhaust himself to make it seem real" during scenes when the killer is chasing him through the house, he said.

"In order to make it [real] you have to really amp yourself up," he said.

He also did some of his own stunts, which he has never had to do in his previous roles.

"I have the bruises and scrapes to prove it," he said.

Badgley was attracted to the part of the stepson because it was a different type of role and experience, he said.

One of Badgley's most memorable experiences on the set was when the actors shot a sequence that takes place outside on a rooftop with movie rain, which is really heavy so it will show up on camera.

The three days they shot it were the only three days the temperature was below 50 degrees in L.A. He was wearing a thin cotton T-shirt and jeans and was soaked the whole time.

Although he said it was close to "unbearable" at the time, he said he learned a lot throughout the process of filming a big picture.

Badgley said making the transition from television to film branching was "seamless."

Badgley

"It was a very natural progression," he said. "It wasn't so much that I was really conscious of changing from one role to another."

He said one of the main differences is that in a television series you have many chances to get the moment right, but in a film there is only one chance.

After his role as Dan in "Gossip Girl," he said this film was an "interesting next step."

"I think Michael, who is the kid in 'The Stepfather,' comes from a very different place I think mentally, emotionally than Dan," Badgley said. Michael's character is "less confident in his own skin," whereas, Dan is comfortable being alienated.

He said he identifies with Michael more because Michael has problems, unlike Dan who is "pretty ordinary in most ways."

To prepare for the role as Michael, he had to act like he's never seen a horror film and "find something real" to compel him, he said.

"I think it was a surprising task doing this movie," Badgley said. "It was difficult."

Exhibit sheds light on banned books

By KARINA GALVEZ
avenue writer

Imagine growing up without being able to find Waldo or wishing you had Matilda's magic powers. In some places, avid child readers could have faced this childhood without imagination because these books have been contested and removed from library shelves. UF's Baldwin Library of Historical Children's Literature exhibit, Banned and Controversial Books from 1990 to 2008, features titles that parents and school officials have deemed taboo, making them forbidden material for some young eyes.

"I really don't think there's a valid reason to take a book off a shelf," said Rita Smith, curator of the Baldwin Library. "All books should be freely accessible." Smith said although children's books have always been contested, parents started contesting more books in the 1980s as the content began dealing with difficult issues. Books like "Go Ask Alice," the 1971 cult classic and one of the first novels to come out of the drug era, and Mark Twain's "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn," a popular high school reading requirement, are still contested even after years on the market. The display, which runs through Nov. 4, offers students an understanding of issues that go on behind the scenes at libraries that can take a book off the shelf and into the dark.

September's celebrity, politician interruptions

By ALEX ORLANDO
avenue writer

It appears the month of September was one of interruptions with celebrities and politicians both acting like 6-year-olds in the grocery store. He got rid of his emo bangs - good for him. Maybe now he can expand his fan base to women instead of seventh-grade girls. Seriously, I wish everyone got this much attention for making the transition to look like a normal human being.

And just when we thought Hollywood was becoming boring again with the death of Michael Jackson - surprise! Roman Polanski is keeping it the same deranged place we all know and love. It seems like everyone in Hollywood has come to his defense with a flimsy petition.

What about raping a 13-year-old do these people not understand? More importantly, why do they think anyone is going to give a crap about their petition? I guess they think President Obama is going to look at the petition and say, "Oh, well Woody Allen doesn't approve. I guess we shouldn't go through with it." Hollywood stars thinking they know what's best in politics: Ridiculous. What happened to the good old days when people just shut up and read their lines?

Blogging helps career, creates networking opportunities

By MOLLY BRUCE

avenue contributing writer

Jenny Demartini will intern at the national nonprofit March of Dimes in the spring, and it is partially thanks to her blog.

She said the women who hired her said her blog proved she can write so that people would be interested.

"I've only written about 10 posts, and it's already made such an impact," she said.

Demartini, a journalism student at UF, is just one example of how blogging can help your career.

Blog expert Susan Gunelius started blogging to create a platform for her first book, "Harry Potter: The Story of a Global Business Phenomenon."

"I think a blog can really help anyone," Gunelius said.

If you're interested in starting your own blog to further your career, check out these easy tips from experts:

Get the Right Site

The amount of blogging Web sites can be daunting. Fortunately, experts recommend one site more than any other: WordPress.com.

"If you want to do big things, you should use WordPress," Gunelius said.

With its customizable features, widely used widgets, thousands of theme options and easy-to-follow guides, WordPress is great for beginners and experts, Gunelius said.

It is also free.

Write Something Interesting - Correctly

Gunelius suggested picking something you are interested in that you also have authority in.

"You need to establish that you're the expert," she said.

Niche blogging is good, she said. For example, blogging about food is general, but blogging about baking cookies is a niche blog.

Mindy McAdams, an online journalism professor at UF, said to decide whether you want the blog to be more personal or professional in the beginning.

"(College students) could mix them gracefully, or they could control themselves and stick to one topic," McAdams said.

Keep a clear focus in mind, she said, and you should end up with good content.

"You want a blog that you could show to someone who's going to give you a job or an internship," she said.

Both experts agree that posts should stick to 300 words with a few updates a week.

"That's easy enough for anyone to read without getting bored," McAdams said.

When in doubt, go shorter, she said, because "it will always be better if you cut stuff out."

McAdams cautioned students about grammar, spelling and punctuation mistakes. Blogs are clearly your own writing, it's important to show potential employers that you can write correctly, she said.

Writing in a Microsoft Word document and using the spell check feature is a great way to avoid making mistakes.

"(It could) hurt you more than help you if there are careless errors," she said.

Extend Your Network

To promote your blog, you first have to support other blogs.

"Do a lot of reading," Gunelius said.

Google.com/trends, a free site, shows the most searched words that day.

"You should always blog with keywords in mind," she said.

Commenting on blogs with your URL is another way to bring in new readers, McAdams said.

Include hyperlinks in your blog posts to create more traffic, too, she said.

You Can Make Money, Too!

Once your blog gets rolling, it will move up the search lists. A popular blog is more impressive to employers, and the more hits your site gets, the more advertisers will be interested in your site.

Google AdSense, a free program, allows bloggers to display ads relating to their content. Google will send you a check for the revenue your blog generates, McAdams said.

The free WordPress site cannot have advertising as of now, according to WordPress.com, but it will be available in the future.

Another money-maker is Tip Jar, a free service done through PayPal, which allows readers to donate money by clicking a button.

Blogging can create all kinds of networking opportunities. Don't be afraid to start, even if you write about your socks at first. As McAdams said, "It's your blog."

BLOGGING TIPS

- 1 Register for a blogging Web site like WordPress.com.
- 2 Pick a topic you are familiar with and update a few times a week.
- 3 Pay attention to grammar and spelling.
- 4 Read other blogs and comment with your URL.
- 5 Earn money by displaying ads with Google AdSense or using Tip Jar.

Tokio Hotel

"Humanoid"

German glam-rock heroes Tokio Hotel have made a name for themselves writing emo-infused choruses dubbed over pop-rock-ish guitar riffs. The English version of their latest release, "Humanoid," is no different. The record's first single, "Automatic," will have teens around the globe bouncing to its infectious choral hook.

pop

Backstreet Boys

"This Is Us"

Yes, that's right. Backstreet's back, again. This time around they've given in to the phenomenon that is Auto-tune and peppered their gushy love lyrics with drum machines that sound like they were pulled straight from Lady Gaga's beat lab. When all is said and done, "This Is Us" is more nostalgic than anything else.

dance

Air

"Love 2"

Fully electronic and fully eclectic from beginning to end, "Love 2" is by far this week's funkier release. Throw on some headphones and see if you can catch the ambient rainforest sounds creeping their way into a track or two. The refreshingly down-tempo stylings of the French electro-duo's ninth release are as soothing as they are entertaining. "Love 2" is definitely worth a listen.

country

Brandi Carlile

"Give Up the Ghost"

Brandi Carlile's third release mixes soulful acoustic ballads with alt-rock tracks that make it a well-balanced album overall. From past to present, "Give Up the Ghost" will appeal to fans of Johnny Cash, Sara Bareilles and The Killers alike.

Sex in a different city offers welcome relief, adventure

By BRANDT WILLIAMS

avenue writer

Despite the fact that we attend a university with nearly 50,000 students, Gainesville is not a metropolitan haven that you can have anonymous sex with a stranger who you'll never see again. Rather, I'd argue that you might have difficulty swinging a weight at Southwest Recreation Center without knocking over two people you've previously "exercised" with. The solution? Pack, make for the border (of another state) and indulge in a weekend vacation.

Uncharted cities offer an abundance of well-heeled and well-groomed 20-somethings, all in their sexual prime and refreshingly unaware of your previous sexual conquests. When you're as unfamiliar with a city's population as you are its geography, you'll never have the displeasure of saving someone's phone number only to realize that it was already stored in your contact list.

Regarding the magnitude of the city you wish to stay in, size always matters - New York or Chicago will surely measure up. Singles in these cities have a mysteriously attractive air about them, from the dressed-for-sexcess executive to the 40-year-old cougar strutting down the street (sans wedding ring). Emboldened by the reality that you don't know these people, it's easy to approach them without fear of rejection.

Stopping at Dior, you search for though you don't leave with the perfect apparel, you do leave with the sales associate's phone number. After all, that particular associate seemed very eager to service you, and he or she could be more fun out during the mid-night hours.

Brandt Williams
Columnist

Waiting for the subway, you spy a cute urbanite. Flirtatiously ask him something to wear out for the night's depravity. You strike up a conversation with the sales associate about the city's trendiest bars, and alor her for directions since "you don't know where you are," and pretty soon he or she is escorting you home (caution: there's a very fine line between acting lost and acting stupid. Never attempt the latter).

Finding a potential hookup buddy at a club is even easier. It's like shooting fish in a barrel or getting an A in Wildlife Issues in a Changing World. You step out with confidence to the new hot spot and notice a stud whose hungry eyes are giving you the thrice-over. Before you can point and say "Mine!" Studly is already parting the crowd to introduce himself.

After a couple Blow Job shots, your sticky bodies are melting together on the dance floor, and you're passionate about tonight's prey. Since you're not in Gainesville, you haven't heard rumors as to the measurements of his disco stick or whether she spits or swallows, but you'll be damned if you don't find out by night's end. You hail a taxi, go back to his or her place and engage in the wildest sex of your life with a lover who you simply don't have to love.

Your only concerns should be about not getting attached and the possibility of another go-round if you visit the city again. But just remember, when taking candy from strangers, they're exactly that - strangers. You can never trust a ho, so wrap it up. As long as you avoid the tourist traps of an STD or stolen kidney, one can practically write these foreign escapades off as a necessary "travel expense."

Stylish, affordable ways to decorate

By SARA HORN
avenue contributing writer

Stylishly decorating your home doesn't have to be expensive, confusing or stressful. Snag a few of the following ideas from professional interior decorators to create a snazzy abode without emptying your wallet.

Where to begin:

Discover your style. Take time to brainstorm which colors and patterns interest you, said Nancy Hyer, interior decorator at Stage-works Home Staging & Redesign. Feel free to explore. Whether it's modern, contemporary, vintage or feng shui, expose yourself to the many mediums of expression. You can draw from these when creating your own individual style. This will open your eyes to the choices that are available, she said.

Find a focal point:

After deciding on a vision for your space, find a piece of furniture (typically a sofa) to be the main focal point or place where the eye is drawn to first.

Don't start by painting the walls, said Sara Freeborn, an interior decorator at Interior Associates of Gainesville. Painting will limit the variety of colors that can be added to the room.

Be thrifty:

Visit thrift stores, antique shops, garage sales or Goodwill to find eccentric, unique or quirky features to add to your home.

"I think it adds a lot of character to a room," Hyer said.

Fancy up those floors:

To cover up ugly flooring and add interest to a room, take a large canvas or any kind of fabric and hem or finish the edges. Paint it or decorate it to your liking and add non-slip material or padding to give it a cushy feel, Freeborn said.

Homemade headboards:

Cut a pattern out of a large piece of plywood and hang it behind a bed. You can also use folding screens to create a pattern to add distinction and texture. Hang four or five window shutters vertically in a row to create a more dramatic effect. Paint and decorate them to match your color scheme.

Furniture with color and class:

Keeping base furniture (couches, armchairs, love seats, recliners) neutral and simple will allow you to have freedom when changing décor in the future, Hyer said. Neutral colors are versatile and will save you from buying new furniture later.

But adding color to other pieces such as coffee tables, dressers or end tables can update a room. Use spray paint to give a piece a new look. Any color will work, but you can't go wrong with dark browns and blacks because they hide imperfections, Hyer said.

To add a little character to a piece, try applying sandpaper to the surface and edges.

For a coffee table in a league of its own, you can glue mirror tiles to the surface or arrange pressed leaves or flowers on the top and then cover it with a glass top. With these techniques, the possibilities are endless, Hyer said.

Not your typical wall art:

Large hollow-core doors are reasonably priced, and they're perfect for decorating and hanging as a pleasing addition to a room, Hyer said. Glue on mirror tiles, paint it or staple fabric to it to create a wall hanging that is sure to catch the eye.

For cost-savvy alternatives to buying an expensive premade painting in a frame, buy a ready-made canvas and staple fabric to it. If your creative juices are flowing, try painting your own work of art. It doesn't have to be fancy. A simple abstract design will do just fine.

An even more cost-effective option is obtaining wood, any size or shape, to paint and hang on your wall. This strategy is one that UF interior design graduate Sereen Gualtieri uses in her own home. "I like the way the acrylic paint looks on it," she said.

The wood is already a natural brown color, which Gualtieri says makes the paint colors richer than they would be on canvas. She scouts out free wood that people are throwing away, either on the side of the road or at a recycling center. When she wants wood pieces that are the same size, she goes to Lowe's because they cut the wood for free.

Resourceful accessories:

Sereen Gualtieri, a UF interior design graduate, uses wood as a canvas to create artwork for her home.

Unleash your creativity! Add unique touches with homemade rugs, pillows and art. Instead of buying silk flowers, make arrangements out of branches or flowers from right outside your home. The nature around you can be great inspiration, Freeborn said.

For inexpensive, trendy pillows, buy fabric by the yard and create a simple pillow case by sewing two pieces of fabric together and leaving one side open. It's easy and quick, Gualtieri said.

Remember, different textures add interest to a space. Don't be afraid to include a variety.

Use velvet, shag or silk and contrast them with rough wood pieces or a smooth vase. Start mixing!

OL Patchan will miss rest of season after torn ACL

By PHIL KEGLER
Alligator Staff Writer
pkegler@alligator.org

Offensive lineman Matt Patchan tore his right ACL and will miss the rest of the season.

Florida coach Urban Meyer revealed Wednesday that the injury occurred in non-contact individual drills during Tuesday's practice.

The sophomore had been a key part of the offensive line rotation, appearing in all four games this season behind starting left tackle Carl Johnson.

Offensive line coach Steve Addazio said Mike and Maurkice Pouncey could step in at the position if needed.

"It hurts. That's a tough deal, especially for Matt," Meyer said. "Matt's been injury-prone. He was coming into his own a little bit, playing and starting and getting a lot of action."

Patchan came to Gainesville as five-star recruit on the offensive line, but he played 11 games at defensive tackle in 2008 to help Florida's depth. He missed the final three games of last season due to a torn MCL in his left knee. In the spring, Patchan moved back to offense but missed the early part of practice due to a left leg injury sustained in a scooter accident.

Meyer said Florida will apply for a medical redshirt for Patchan. If granted, he would have three years of eligibility remaining.

"Our prayers are with Matt," Meyer said. "That was a tough deal."

INJURY UPDATE: Junior cornerback Moses Jenkins (concussion) will miss Saturday's game. Defensive tackle Lawrence Marsh (ankle) practiced Wednesday, and Meyer said he is probable to play. He has only played in one game so far this season (Tennessee).

Tebow likely game-time call

■ MEYER SAID UF IS PREPARING TO PLAY WITH AND WITHOUT HIM.

By MIKE DiFERDINANDO
Alligator Staff Writer
mdiferdinando@alligator.org

Whether or not Florida quarterback Tim Tebow is cleared to play against No. 4 LSU on Saturday could be a game-day decision.

UF coach Urban Meyer said Wednesday that a decision would likely not be made "until the foot hits the ball", but the Gators' medical staff has advised him to prepare as if Tebow will play.

"I think that this will be a decision not made today," Meyer said. "After yesterday's practice, I was told to game plan with the intent that there's a chance that Tim could play. That's all I know. All the other stuff ... we'll make a decision as we get closer."

LSU's Tiger Stadium, also known as Death Valley, is one of the loudest home environments in college football, and the noise inside Tiger Stadium might be a determining factor in whether the Heisman Trophy winner plays.

"If the noise bothers Tim, he won't be in the game. It means he's still symptomatic (from the concussion)," Meyer said.

Tebow underwent further testing and practiced again Wednesday but has still not been medically cleared to play in a game.

Meyer dispelled the notion that waiting to announce Tebow's status would give the Gators a competitive advantage because the Tigers would have to prepare for two different quarterbacks.

"Is it an advantage, us not telling?" Meyer said. "I'm not worried about that right now. We're game-planning as if there's a chance Tim could play. There's a chance he won't play."

Football

Tebow practiced for the first time Tuesday since suffering the first concussion of his career Sept. 26 against Kentucky.

Experts have advised Meyer to slowly reintroduce Tebow to contact starting with a few light shots to his chest in a test-like procedure.

Meyer said Tebow played against the defense for the first time Wednesday and was "pushed around a little bit," but Meyer does not plan to subject him to any more intense contact before Saturday's game.

Meyer should start Brantley

Sometime during the next few days, Urban Meyer will stop for a second and realize something.

He is about to make one of the biggest decisions of his nine-year head coaching career.

When Florida takes the field for its first offensive possession Saturday night at LSU in loud and raucous Tiger Stadium, who will run onto the field as quarterback?

Medical officials will have the first call to make, but it appears as if Tim Tebow is doing well on the road to recovery after his concussion in the Kentucky game. He has practiced the last two days.

Any decision about Tebow's status for the LSU game isn't expected to come until just before kickoff, and Meyer has said a medical clearance will not automatically equate to Tebow playing.

pkegler@alligator.org

On Wednesday's Southeastern Conference teleconference, Meyer said he would "absolutely" err on the side of caution.

"I've never seen the attention to detail. I guess you'd expect that here at Florida," Meyer said. "It's many, many people involved with the evaluation phase of Tim. [Tuesday] was a perfect example. I think there were 12 people in the meeting that we had at 1 p.m. to clear him to practice."

"That will be an ongoing communication and evaluation up until

SOUTHEASTERN CONFERENCE

Vandy's Johnson knows impact of celebration penalties

By MIKE MCCALL
Alligator Staff Writer
mmccall@alligator.org

When Vanderbilt coach Bobby Johnson read about the excessive celebration penalty that led to Georgia's late loss against LSU last week, he felt the Bulldogs' pain.

In 2005 at Florida, VU receiver Earl Bennett was penalized after a touchdown catch with less than a minute left, a flag that kept the Commodores from attempting a two-point conversion to take the lead.

Forced to kick an extra point to tie the score, Johnson's squad went on to lose to the Gators in double overtime, and the experience has left him wanting a change in how the penalty is handled.

"We have to have that rule," Johnson said. "It will get beyond control if we don't have it. I think a way we could control it is to have the referee have the ability to veto it. If the back judge or side judge throws the flag and [the referee] disagrees, have him veto the call."

The call against Georgia came after receiver A.J. Green's go-ahead touchdown catch with just over a minute to go.

Green was mobbed by teammates in the end zone and was penalized under the NCAA's unsportsmanlike conduct rule, which forbids players from "attempts to focus attention upon himself (or themselves)," meaning choreographed celebrations, taunting, jumping into the stands and spiking, throwing, kicking or spinning the ball.

Except Green didn't do any of the above. In fact, Rogers Redding, the Southeastern Conference's coordinator of football officials, apologized for the call Monday.

The apology was too little, too late, as the yardage gave LSU great field position on the ensuing kickoff, and the Tigers notched the winning score with 46 seconds to play.

There's no doubt that the penalty changed the dynamics of the game, and it has led to calls for the NCAA to revise the rule and make it easier to enforce.

"I'm like these other coaches saying rewrite the thing to take the judgment out of it," UF coach Urban Meyer said. "I do believe there should be a penalty for excessive celebration or you do something that's not good for college football, but that kid from Georgia made one of the greatest catches I have ever seen to take the lead against LSU, and he went crazy celebrating with his teammates. I don't understand that call."

Georgia wide receiver A.J. Green (8) celebrates with teammates after catching a touchdown pass late in the fourth quarter against LSU on Oct. 3.

SPURRIER WEIGHS IN ON BOWDEN: After a 2-3 start to the season and an 0-2 mark in conference play, FSU coach Bobby Bowden has faced heat from boosters urging him to retire, but university president T.K. Wetherell said Wednesday that Bowden's job is not in jeopardy.

South Carolina coach Steve Spurrier took verbal jabs at the Seminoles pretty frequently when he was at Florida, but he's not going to kick Bowden while he's down.

"It's a tough thing, it really is," Spurrier said. "We wish it didn't happen to coaches near the end of their careers. But if you look at the history of coaching, it happens all the time to coaches that have had tremendous wonderful careers, and if they are still there later on and not winning, this is what happens."

Spurrier added that all is not lost for FSU just yet.

"They could still turn it around," he said. "They've got great players there at FSU. I think they could turn it around and still have a wonderful season."

CHIZIK SEES MALZAHN AS FUTURE HEAD COACH: No. 17 Auburn has gotten off to a shockingly good 5-0 start, and the Tigers are in the nation's top five for rushing, total and scoring offense per game, as well as turnover margin and sacks allowed.

First-year head coach Gene Chizik credits offensive coordinator Gus Malzahn, formerly at Arkansas and Tulsa, for playing a big role in the turnaround.

"Gus is really good at what he does," Chizik said. "(Head coaching) is certainly down the path for him, and it's something he aspires to."

Will, Embree win to advance to ITA All-American main draw

■ THE DUO QUALIFIED TO PLAY IN DOUBLES DRAW AS WELL.

By GREG LUCA
Alligator Writer

Three days ago, only one of the 48 available spots in the ITA All-American singles tournament was held by a UF player. Now, after going a combined 11-1 in two days of qualifying, that number is up to three.

In singles play, Allie Will and Lauren Embree will be joining No. 3 seed Marrit Boonstra in the main draw after each cruised to their third victory in two days.

Embree's 7-6 (4), 6-0 victory over No. 46 Catherine Newman of Vanderbilt was Embree's fifth straight victory over a ranked opponent. Embree went down 5-3, but a quick change enabled her to take the first set before coasting through the second.

"She's always looking to attack, but the kid she was playing is such a great counter puncher so it wasn't working and she had to change it up," associate head coach Dave Balogh said.

Will blew out No. 37 Andrea Remyne of UCLA 6-2, 6-4. This win brings Will to 10-1 this season, with eight wins against ranked foes.

Embree and Will also made it into the main doubles draw with an 8-3 victory over

Amanda Craddock and Krista Damico of Texas and an 8-5 victory over Shinann Featherston and Katrina Tsang of North Carolina.

The only loss on the day belonged to the team of Boonstra and Joanna Mather, who were upset 8-5 by Joyce Ardies and Denise Dy of Washington.

Still, UF's three players in the singles draw ties USC for the most of any school.

"It's awesome any time you can get three players in the main draw of the All-American," Balogh said. "As long as we keep getting better and keep doing the right things the upside for this team is really promising."

Murphy's triple-double leads UF

■ THE SOPHOMORE LOGGED HER FOURTH OF THE YEAR IN A FOUR-SET WIN.

By ADAM BERRY
Alligator Staff Writer
aberry@alligator.org

Playing on national TV for the first time this year, Kelly Murphy didn't shy away from the spotlight.

The sophomore setter notched her NCAA-best fourth triple-double of the season as No. 6 Florida (12-2, 6-1 Southeastern Conference) took down South Carolina 3-1 (24-26, 25-19, 25-23, 25-15) in Columbia on Wednesday night in a match shown on ESPNU.

"In some ways with Kelly, we just don't get her enough balls," UF coach Mary Wise said. "She had it going tonight."

Murphy recorded her 10th career triple-double with 12 kills, 25 assists and 17 digs while logging a .375 hitting percentage and adding five block assists.

With Murphy and junior setter Brynja Rodgers (28 assists) distributing the ball, sophomore outside hitters Kristy Jaeckel and Colleen Ward racked up a combined 36 kills.

But Wise said the difference in the match was Florida's blocking, which was the Gators' biggest flaw earlier in the year. UF outblocked South Carolina by its largest margin of the season, 12-5, and has now won the blocking battle in three of its last four matches.

UF took a 22-19 lead in a back-and-forth first set, but South Carolina scored three straight points to tie it up. With the score knotted at 24, Florida gave the set away with two attack errors.

After committing eight hitting errors in the first set, Florida cut that number in half in the second frame. The Gators took a 5-4 lead and never relented, riding a five-to-one blocking advantage and a .268 hitting percentage, up from .209 in the first set.

After calling her young team's maturity and volleyball IQ into question after its loss to Kentucky on Friday, Wise was impressed with the Gators' ability to put the errors in Wednesday's first-set loss behind them.

"The difference is, could last year's team have been down 0-1 and still come back?" Wise said. "Last year's team had to go to five [sets], and I would argue that South Carolina is better this year."

A radio broadcast contributed to this report.

game time."

If Meyer is to stick by his word, third-year sophomore John Brantley will be the Gators' quarterback Saturday.

That is the right call. That is the definition of erring on the side of caution.

It's not throwing in the towel. It's being realistic.

Saturday will mark two weeks since Tebow suffered the first concussion of his career. A second concussion can be more damaging than the first, but Meyer said Wednesday that if Tebow is OK, then he faces no additional risk based on his first concussion.

"If you're healed, you're healed, whether it's next week or the week after," Meyer said. "If you're not healed, you're not healed."

"I asked that question. Is it the same next Tuesday as opposed to this Thursday? Once the symptoms are cleared, he's cleared."

Is two weeks enough? No one will know. Not with certainty.

Meyer and UF have done all the right things, assembling an all-star cast of doctors to evaluate one of the best college football players of all time. They have brought in professionals from out-of-state including Dr. Mickey Collins, assistant director of the Sports Medicine Concussion Program at the University of Pittsburgh Medical Center.

Meyer has and will obtain the most accurate professional opinion from elite doctors, but he still faces a losing proposition.

No matter the medical answer, Tebow must sit Saturday.

Because if he does not stay on the sidelines, he will play the same brand of football that has made him famous. He will keep more options than he should, run at defenders rather than sliding and throw caution to the wind if the game requires it.

And if No. 15 suffers a concussion, blame will rest on Meyer's shoulders, medical clearance be damned.

Ironically, Meyer will face one of the biggest risk takers in the sport on the opposite sideline, LSU coach Les Miles. Miles has rolled the dice more than anyone in recent history, winning more than he loses.

This gamble isn't worth it. Let Brantley start and lean on the rushing game. Give one of the best defenses in the country a chance to keep Florida in the game and vindicate memories of two years.

If the Gators lose Saturday without Tebow, and proceed to run the table (including the SEC Championship), what poll voter would keep a 12-1 UF team out of the BCS National Championship Game, if the only loss was at Tiger Stadium with Tebow not playing?

Bring No. 15 and throw him on the sidelines. Let him inspire his teammates to try and win the game for him.

This one isn't on Tim's shoulders. This one is on Meyer.

Team not releasing grade of concussion

Since returning to practice, Tebow has split reps with backup John Brantley.

In limited time this season Brantley has completed 73.3 percent of his passes (22-of-30), for 232 yards and four touchdowns.

Meyer played down the thought that all of the back and forth about Tebow's condition has affected Brantley's preparation.

"John will be fine," Meyer said. "John has done good. He's had a heck of a week at practice, and he's preparing to go play the game."

Evaluation of Tebow will be ongoing and if the senior is not able to play against the Tigers, Brantley will get his first career start under the lights in Baton Rouge.

Meyer said he has been told the grade of Tebow's concussion, but declined to release it publicly.

Harrison Diamond / Alligator Staff

UF quarterback Tim Tebow's status for Saturday's game at No. 4 LSU is still unknown. Tebow practiced again Wednesday but didn't participate in contact drills.
