Florida wide receiver Frankie Hammond Jr. was arrested on campus early Sunday and charged with DUI and underage possession of alcohol after his beige

Mercury sedan was stopped for speeding. Shortly after 2 a.m., University Police Department officer Samuel Delucca clocked Hammond's vehicle going about 45 miles per hour while headed south on Gale Lemerand Drive, where the speed limit is 20 mph.

Along with speeding, Delucca said he noticed Hammond's vehicle swerving down the road.

Campus Crime

After Delucca stopped the sedan at the commuter lot on Gale Lemerand Drive, he said Hammond's eyes were "glassy and bloodshot," according to the police report, and his speech was "slurred and he appeared to be uncoordinated."

The report said Delucca sensed alcohol on Hammond's breath and asked him to step out of the vehicle where Delucca administered field sobriety tests.

Bars appeal city's restriction of underage patrons

The bars are fighting back. The Swamp Restaurant, 101 Cantina and Rum Runners (formerly Fat Tuesday) are appealing recent court decisions that would prohibit them from serving those under 21 after 9 p.m.

Under a city ordinance designed to curb underage drinking, bars and restaurants that incur a certain number of infractions each business quarter are subject to the prohibition. Venues with a capacity under 201 can have up to five offenses per quarter, while larger venues can have 10, according to attorney Elizabeth Waratuke, who is representing the city in these appeals.

Subsequent infractions incur longer prohibition periods. A first offense gets 90 days, second-time offenders get 180, and a third strike makes a venue 21 and up for a full year, Waratuke said.

101 Cantina's appeal hearing was rescheduled from Monday to July 1, the Swamp for July 20, and Rum Runners for July 22.

Employees at 101 Cantina are not commenting on the restaurant's numerous infractions. The small venue faces the harshest penalty, having surpassed the limit three quarters in a row, with 56 incidents since the beginning of this year, according to Gainesville police statistics.

Dog-sitting business may be shut down

By ALEXANDER KLAUSNER

Brittany Lee first took her dog, Griffin, to Bruce Baber's Mydogspace in May 2009.

Over the course of the year, Baber regularly saw that Griffin and other dogs enlisted in his care were fed, walked two to three times per day and were free to roam.

On June 23, Griffin and the 63-year-old Baber will likely see each other for the last time.

Due to a city code violation, the dog-sitting service, based out of Baber's home at 1713 NW 7th Ave., will be forced to close down.

Baber, who started the business in 2006, said he was extremely disappointed by the news.

"It's like having your legs knocked out from under you," he said. "It's been very hard on me. But I'm keeping a positive attitude as best I can. I'm gonna focus all my energy on resolving it as long as I can, even after the dogs are gone."

Baber was first approached by a code enforcement officer in April. He was told that running a business out of his home violates Gainesville city code. He was also told he would have to apply for a permit to continue Maurice Alfred Belmore faces charges of criminal mischief and trespass. He was jailed in Collier County on $3,000 bond. It is unclear if Belmore has an attorney.

According to deputies, a manager of a local Sonic Drive-In told investigators that an employee threw away wine that Belmore had left in the restaurant's parking lot.

Burglar with sweet tooth targets Ocala store

OCALA — Police in Ocala are searching for a burglar who stole a box of cookies from a north Florida discount store.

Police say the thief took a box of Oreo Cakesters from the Dollar General store early Friday morning. The cookies are valued at $2.50.

Surveillance footage shows a man entering the store after breaking a glass door.

According to the Ocala Star-Banner, the same store was targeted by a burglar in February. In that incident, the suspect made off with snack cakes and other items.

Romney is Florida-bound to help GOP raise money

TALLAHASSEE — Mitt Romney's headed to Florida to help support some of the state's elected Republican officials.

An unsuccessful candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 2008, Romney is scheduled to appear at a fundraiser Tuesday in Jacksonville on behalf of state Sen. John Thrasher.

Thrasher is seeking reelection to the seat he won last October in a special election to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. Jim King.

And Attorney General Bill McCollum's campaign announced Monday that they've picked up Romney's backing in Florida's Republican gubernatorial primary. McCollum trails Naples businessman Rick Scott, a political newcomer who had a 13-point lead in a Quinnipiac (Conn.) University poll released last week.

FHP: Boy caused fatal bicycle crash at Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA — Investigators have found that a 9-year-old boy killed in a collision with a Walt Disney World bus while riding his bicycle was "solely responsible" for the accident.

The Florida Highway Patrol report released Monday shows Chase Brubaker's bicycle also had a flat rear tire and an under-inflated front tire that could have contributed to the April 1 crash.

FHP says bus driver David Rich was not at fault, and no charges will be filed.

The report shows that bus was traveling in the same direction as Brubaker when he crossed into the road and hit the middle of the bus. He was pulled under the right rear tire.

Brubaker was riding with an 11-year-old girl at the time. She was not injured. Both were wearing helmets.

FHP says its investigation is complete.

Magazine hosts auction for three charity groups

■ A SIGNED TIM TEBOW JERSEY SOLD FOR $800. SHELLEY MEYER CO-HOSTED THE EVENT.

By ANDREW PANTAZI
Alligator Writer

Nearly 400 people ate for charity Sunday night at the Hilton UF Conference Center.

Taste of Home, a charity event hosted by Home: Living in the Heart of Florida magazine, brought food, auctions and music to the Hilton.

Tickets cost $75.

Money from the fundraiser went to three children's charities: Child Advocacy Center, Children's Home Society of Florida and Leadership Gainesville. Leadership Gainesville will donate its portion to the Take Stock in Children program, March of Dimes and Girls to Young Ladies.

The donated food came from about 25 local restaurants, according to Emily Davis, public relations director for the magazine's publishing company.

Shelley Meyer, wife of UF football coach Urban Meyer, and Lewis Stokes, a disc jockey for 93.7 K Country radio, hosted the event.

Of the more than 175 silent auction items, all but four were bid on, according to Scott Costello, the owner and publisher of Home magazine.

The first item in the live auction, a framed, autographed Tim Tebow Gator jersey, was valued at about $1,450, and went for $800.

This year, although Costello hasn't finished counting proceeds from the auction, his plan is to donate $10,000 to each of the three charities.

"When I talked to people, they were shocked this was a first-year event," he said. "People were happy with the results. They want to participate next year."

Andrew Pantazi / Alligator

Jack and Lori Willis browse auction items Sunday night at the Taste of Home silent auction at the Hilton UF Conference Center.

Celeste Rubanick, a volunteer for the Children's Home Society, said she donates her time to the event so she can do something for the community.

"I don't have money to donate," she said, "so I donate time."

Next year, Costello said he wants the event to run more efficiently and have more sponsors and donations.

He also said he wants to double the size of next year's event.

The fundraiser received about $60,000 in donations prior to the event, and could not have run without donated services, he said.

101 Cantina, The Swamp, Rum Runners violated the city ordinance

"We kind of feel like we're being singled out," said Swamp manager Brian Behling.

The Swamp is facing a 180-day prohibition after surpassing the limit twice since January.

He said police often stop by without warning and arrest employees for things like not using mechanical customer counters.

"To me, it feels like the city's hurting for money," he said. "So they're going after small businesses for petty things."

Behling said the prohibition, if effected, would hurt the Swamp's business because it caters mostly to the student population. He said not allowing younger patrons would force the restaurant to raise prices.

Around Gainesville

Behling said the Swamp is doing everything it can to make sure the number of underage drinking infractions stays below the ordinance level.

"I'm constantly walking through the crowd," Behling said. "We're hiring more security staff. We're really tightening the screws."

Hub will be meeting place between UF, downtown

KATIE EVANS

Alligator Contributing Writer

If you build it, they will come. At least that's UF's intent for the Florida Innovation Hub.

About 250 people attended the groundbreaking ceremony on Monday afternoon for the 45,000-square-foot building that will contain space for UF startup technology companies.

The facility, scheduled to be completed by fall 2011, will be located on the corner of Southwest Second Avenue and Southwest Seventh Terrace.

The project was funded in part by an $8.2 million grant from the federal Economic Development Administration. UF gave another $5 million, according to a press release.

Officials expect programs and activities at the Florida Innovation Hub to bring together entrepreneurs, investors, students and service providers to commercialize more UF research.

"The hub will serve as a catalyst to get innovation from university laboratories into the marketplace, where it can have an impact on the world while creating jobs in Florida," UF President Bernie Machen said.

Machen

The architecture of the hub will allow the building to serve as a meeting place between downtown Gainesville and UF's campus, Machen said.

The facility will provide office space, laboratories, conference rooms and will house the main commercialization offices for the university.

According to Gainesville Mayor Craig Lowe, the facility is sensible because it creates a meeting place with all of the capabilities that the hub will have.

"What can we do to bring the university and the community closer together?" Lowe said. "This project, this innovation hub, is the answer."

Professor hopes to win Pepsi grant to find herpes cure

■ THE GRANT IS $50,000.

By MICHAELA TRIMBLE

Alligator Contributing Writer

Pepsi could help a UF professor cure herpes.

David C. Bloom, a professor in the department of molecular genetics and microbiology, is competing in the Pepsi Refresh Project for a $50,000 grant to fund a treatment for herpes.

Bloom and his research team invented a new ribozyme therapy that could be used to treat herpes infections that are resistant to conventional drug treatments. The ribozyme, a molecule in genetic material, is intended to make the virus lose its ability to infect and be transmitted to others.

About 1 million new cases of herpes occur annually, according to Bloom's page on the Pepsi Refresh Project's website.

If Bloom gets the grant and his experiments succeed, he would be able to stop the recurrence of herpes and fund human clinical trials for the herpes simplex virus type 1 (HSV-1).

"Our project is at a critical phase right now," Bloom said. "We have exciting data that shows our therapy can block the HSV infection in vivo, but we need additional data on the ability of this treatment to block recurrent disease."

The grant could help Bloom complete his studies. If the experiments are successful, Bloom and his team will be able to apply for more funding from the National Institutes of Health to begin human clinical trials.

"We are trying to get as many people to vote for this project each day as possible," Bloom said.

Bloom's team is currently ranked as No. 25 on the project's website. He will win the $50,000 prize if he's voted into the project's top 10.

Voting will end June 30.

Voters can register and vote for Bloom's grant at refresheverything.com/herpestreatment.

Football Fail

DUI reminds all Gators to drive responsibly

Another UF football player was arrested and charged with a DUI and liquor possession early Sunday morning. Go Gators.

Frankie Hammond Jr., a 20-year-old wide receiver for the Gators, was pulled over on campus for going 45 miles per hour in a 20-mph zone. A field sobriety test put him at more than double the legal limit of 0.08. He had two empty 750-ml bottles of Crown Royal in his car.

When will our football players realize that when they drink and drive, we all lose? When Carlos Dunlap was arrested on DUI charges last year, it was a major factor in our loss against Alabama in the SEC championship game. Without our key players on the field we cannot be expected to be champions, so instead of suspending players for getting DUIs, the coaches at Ben Hill Griffin should consider alternative punishments.

We propose that from now on any football player who is arrested on alcohol charges should have to be a starter at a 12:30 p.m. game with no less than a fifth of whiskey coursing through his veins.

Any player who thinks he can drive a car after a few drinks should not have a problem catching a football or two in 90 degree weather on a Saturday afternoon.

To be fair, not letting a player play in a game is a pretty big punishment, but it only prevents repeat problems because it is a simple form of negative reinforcement. Players, and non-campus celebrities too, need to realize that driving drunk is wrong not just because it is illegal, but because when you drive under the influence you are not physically capable of driving safely.

The Good Class?

Of the many topics covered at UF's Board of Trustees meeting last week, the one that piqued our interest was a class called "The Good Life."

The class was tested on a group of students in the spring, and if things go well enough UF hopes to massively expand enrollment in the course. According to Provost Joe Glover, this class will give incoming freshmen a chance to bond over coursework instead of off-campus activities or university athletics.

While the intentions seem pure enough, we wonder how the bond between two students who take an easy class together would be any stronger than a friendship developed by any other means. When we look back on our first year at UF, we try not to remember the awkward group assignments and the people we hung around with while we were still adjusting to being college students—opting instead to remember the fun things we did with friends outside of class.

Changing up the entire UF experience seems to be en vogue these days, but we hope that when we come back to campus for tailgates every fall we will not be greeted by some bizarro-world Student Body that really enjoys going to class together every day. That would just be too weird.

We would like to know what UF's idea of the "good life" is, though the more we think about it, the more we're convinced it would be a boring class. But here's hoping they teach kids that "whether you broke or rich you gotta get biz" and that "having money's not everything, not having it is."

Sunscreen is a pool party must-have

My friend and I ventured to one of those notorious apartment pool parties last Saturday. We're not exactly regulars, but we wanted to check out the festivities and meet new people. As soon as we arrived, a guy gravitated toward — our sunscreen. Before even introducing himself, he asked to borrow the spray-on sunscreen we were covering ourselves with.

"You're the first girls I've found here with an SPF of more than five," he said with relief as he slathered his sun-baked chest in a liquid UV-shield. "Everyone I asked had tanning oil." This clearly wasn't a pick-up line. He was desperate for some sunscreen. It made me laugh to realize what a rare find it was at a summer pool party. The two seem to go hand in hand to me. At least they always did when I was growing up.

Remember the days when your mom would bring a vat of viscous, white sun lotion to the pool and make you hold off on your cannonball until she finished wiping thick layers of paste onto your face and shoulders? A lot goes wrong when moms aren't there anymore to keep their kids in order.

The sunscreen scavenger offered my of-age friend a whiskey ginger in gratitude for the apparently rare and highly coveted source of skin salvation, which she gladly accepted. That's a pretty decent trade, I said, although sunscreen is probably more expensive per ounce than alcohol. So what's with the sunscreen shortage? No one had forgotten sunglasses, towels or 64-ounce beverage cups, so I'm guessing no one forgot sunscreen or accidentally grabbed tanning oil.

I suppose price is a major turnoff for sunscreen — it rings in at about $8 a bottle depending on the brand. But that would be an easy purchase for many college kids if it was a bottle of alcohol. And GatorWell gives out free packets all year.

We all know the answer rests in vanity. Some people think they look better tan, so they seek an instant tan. Not only do they avoid sunscreen, they baste in tanning oil to make them darken quicker.

But ironically, if you were really concerned about your

The views expressed here are not necessarily those of the Alligator.

looks, you would use sunscreen. Because afternoons drenched in frying oil leads to wrinkles and sun spots and dry, scaly skin that no one wants to sport in their 30s and 40s. And pretty soon people will look at you and guess you are 10 or 15 years older than you are.

While I'll admit there is something attractive about having a bit of a sun-kissed, golden glow, I find it gross to see someone's crackling red skin flaking off onto the lounge chair next to me, exposing a tender layer of ghostly white. And certain shades of orange just don't look natural. It's healthy to catch some rays and get a nice dose of Vitamin D, but I've never had a problem achieving either of those things with sunscreen on. People have this misperception that you can't tan if you wear sunscreen. You can tan, you just don't bake and boil as quickly. And when you're 20 shades into the red spectrum on the color wheel, I can't help but look at you and think of a crispy lobster. It's only June. If you haven't achieved your desired tan yet, you have plenty of time to left to acquire some healthy color. And I believe pale is gorgeous too. Look at Anne Hathaway, Scarlett Johansson, Taylor Swift, James Franco, Cory Monteith from "Glee," and all those vampires in the movies.

If only there were as much sunscreen at pool parties as there was alcohol. Then our new acquaintance might have saved himself a couple shades of burn before we arrived to the rescue. Did I mention that skin cancer is the most common cancer in the U.S.? One in five Americans will get it, according to the Skin Cancer Foundation.

So, for the price of a few beers, go buy yourself a bottle of the good stuff and let your skin drink in some protection from cancer, wrinkles, peeling and sunspots. You don't want to be scrounging for sunblock after your skin has already started to burn, and you could attract some hottie who offers you a drink if you lend him your block.

Pro-life reader responds to Gov. Crist's veto of House Bill 1143.

As a realistic pro-life Catholic, I expected Gov. Charlie Crist's veto. Regardless of the throngs of national callers, obviously he'd opt for the majority opinion of Florida residents.

This effort now seems to meet the definition of insanity. Not for Crist, but for pro-lifers.

Same tactics, same failed outcome as before. I've suggested to many Catholic parishes and groups that we break out of the broken mold, but to no avail.

Perhaps if we first wholeheartedly advocate for those guilty of horrors against humanity on Death Row (and as we know there are innocents there too, 27 plus Florida exonerees thus far) maybe then society would seriously consider our concern for the pre-born.

Writer used ad hominem attacks in retort to Griffin's column.

It is a sign of intellectual vacuity when a writer has to resort to ad hominem attacks.

This is what Frederic Spielier did when he wrote "Conservative Arguments In Griffin's Column Not True."

He goes so far as to wish Bryan Griffin ill in his job prospects once he completes his graduate studies. What's next, hoping Griffin's mother gets hit by the cross-town bus?

He also uses a common vulgarity in his attempt to summarize Griffin's column. Spielier's tone is hostile because his substance is weak. He admits ignorance of what happened with the Spikedance fish in Arizona, an example which illustrates the unintended consequences and self-defeating effects of so many environmental regulations.

Spielier claims conventional light bulbs release more mercury than CFL bulbs. (They don't. The claim is that power plants release mercury.) You've been living around conventional light bulbs all your life. Are you suffering from mercury poisoning? Of course not. But drop a CFL bulb and now you've got a mercury spill right at your feet. Good luck with the cleanup.

Spielier's tone is argumentative, but in terms of real arguments he ends up conceding much to Griffin. Towards the end of his column, Spielier admits it's a debatable question as to whether environmental restrictions hurt the poor in the Third World. And in his last paragraph he admits "there are actual flaws with liberalism as well as our government." Which was Bryan Griffin's point all along. Score one for Griffin, zip for Spielier.

Reader says that smoking Gainesville Green Sense is unsafe.

Responsible reporting carries the weight of presenting all facts concerned with the subject matter.

Your article neglects to report the process used to make the JWH018 synthetic cannaboid active.

One gram of JWH018 is dissolved in 1 gallon of acetone (nail polish remover). Different herbs are then soaked in the mixture "allowed to dry" and then packaged for sale. Guess you might as well be sniffing glue.

Just thought your readers who are thinking about trying this product should be informed.

Government should handle alcohol and marijuana the same way.

Our government's attempt to prevent people from getting high is a dangerous and futile exercise.

Americans got the message on alcohol, and some day we will get the message on marijuana also.

Democracy failed when Board of Trustees approved fees

The Board of Trustees did its job. Instructed by President Machen to (as quoted in the Alligator) "wrassle" with the new student fees, the board did just that. What is "wrassle," you say?

According to Urban Dictionary, "wrassle" is one of three things (though the first I find out of context in this scenario): 1. To wrestle in a sexual way; 2. To nail or hammer down; to get done or to smack down; and (my personal favorite) 3. To wrestle your opponent into submission and penetrate his/her colon with the thumb of your free hand.

Now, I understand if the president was referring to wrestling with the new fee, i.e., considering, debating, having deep thought over. But wrestling it into submission? I've only been studying political science for three years, but that doesn't sound like a characteristic of democracy to me.

It begs the question: Is UF a representative democracy or simply a tyrannical autocracy? Or is it an oligarchy run by the Board of Trustees? I understand that in every government, coercion is usually implemented to get things done. And I also understand that money makes the world go 'round, and we're in a budget crisis, and SG money doesn't grow on trees, and students like cushy services.

Brittany Fox Speaking Out

But what happens when the representatives elected by 25 percent of the Student Body, including our Student Body president, disagree with the severity of the new fees, and the Board of Trustees passes them all anyway? If we are truly in control of our government we should have a mechanism for relief.

America has the court system, the right to peacefully assemble and the right to petition our government. The UF equivalent would be the legislature (SG) passing a bill, the president (Bernie Machen) vetoing it, and the Supreme Court (Board of Trustees) writing and passing a new bill regardless of what the people say. Definitely not democratic or very polite.

There is a term in economics for the price fluctuation of goods and services. It's either an elastic or inelastic demand, the latter meaning that, regardless of the price, people will still pay it because they have to, like the cost of a life-saving drug.

Apparently, we here at UF are facing an inelastic demand when it comes to student fees. The number of courses we take determines the price we pay in fees—which is, in itself, an irony, because a larger course load makes someone less likely to have free time to be spent on services provided by student fees.

Our only other option is to transfer, drop out or take fewer courses. Taking fewer courses means spending more on living expenses and tuition during the extra years tacked onto undergrad.

If I were an administrator, I would hope for the quickest turnaround rate possible—get the freshmen in, get them out in four years or less and move on to bigger and better things. But then again, I'm not an administrator.

I'm not saying there isn't a need for increased student fees. But isn't passing it without student approval akin to forcibly "wrassling" us to the ground until we pay up?

What's the point of parading around as a democracy if the important decisions are left to an independent board? I would just as rather be told up front what I was dealing with, because if it looks like a dictator, smells like a dictator, acts like a dictator...well, my bet is on it being a dictator. But that's just me.

A final word to the administration: Go easy on our colons. Please.

The Road to Womankind

By LIDIA DINKOVA
alligator writer

In December, in the midst of Alexia's fifth year as a UF botany student, it was finally time to begin peeling off every layer that made her a man.

"It was like an itch I couldn't scratch," she said, attempting to describe what it felt like growing up as a boy when she so strongly felt like a girl.

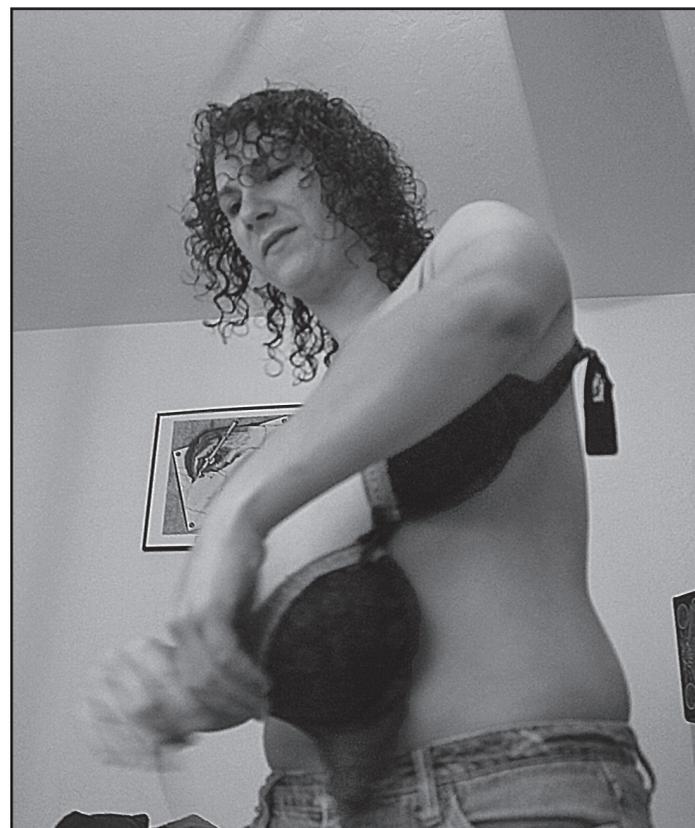

One pill of estrogen and one pill of testosterone suppressant every morning and evening, several laser hair-removal treatments and an entirely new closet slowly take her closer to what she is meant to be: a woman.

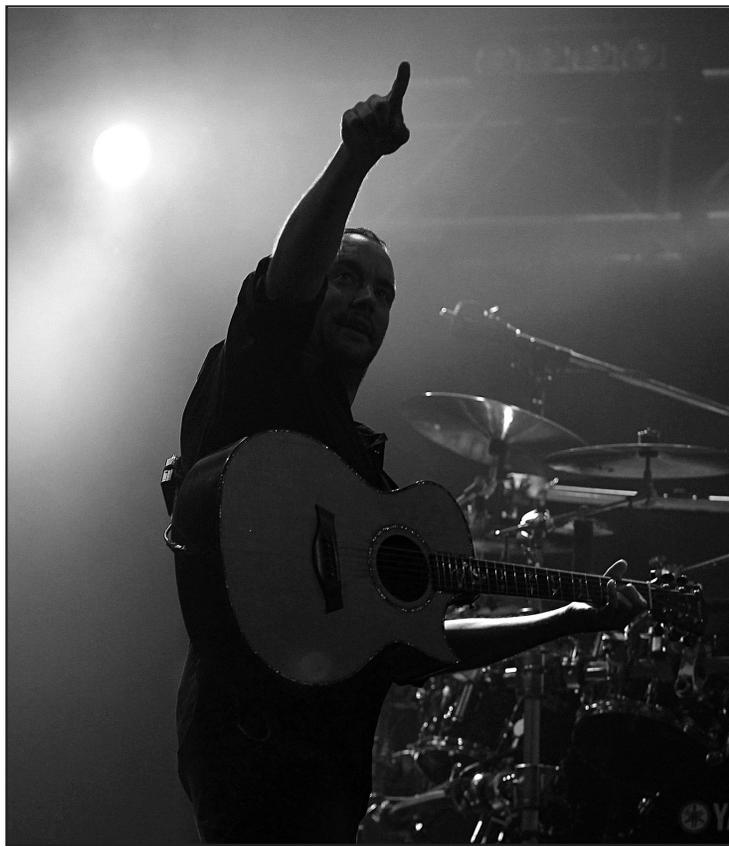

Life is much better now, and she is filled with hope and excitement for her future at Oregon State University.

Lidia Dinkova / Alligator

Clockwise from top: Alexia started her sex transformation in December; Alexia quickly puts on some mascara before she rushes out to class; Thinking of her chest as a part of her body that has to be covered all the time in public is still a relatively new concept for her; Spending time with a friend to pick the right outfit before a night out is one of Alexia's new-found joys; Before leaving for a concert, Alexia takes a few minutes in her apartment to settle in her new dress.

UF ADMINISTRATION

Machen raises faculty pay

By ANDREW PANTAZI
and AMANDA RODRIGUEZ
Alligator Writers

UF's Board of Trustees met Thursday and Friday to make several changes for next year.

Among the topics were faculty raises, a common freshman course and enrollment.

"Nobody else in this economy is thinking of raises, and if they are, they're very small," said Mary Ann Ferguson, Faculty Senate chairwoman.

UF President Bernie Machen's announcement to raise faculty and staff's pay is a sign of great leadership, Ferguson said.

The raises will increase faculty salaries up to 4 percent and staff salaries up to 3 percent based on performance.

Performance evaluations will be determined by department chairs, UF spokesman Steve Orlando said.

Graduate assistants' pay will increase 3 percent, regardless of performance, and minimum wages for some UF jobs will increase from $9.02 per hour to $9.75 per hour.

The raises were made possible by the federal stimulus package, Orlando said. However, increased tuition will help cover the slack after stimulus money runs out.

Provost Joe Glover also outlined a plan to encourage a common, in-class experience for incoming freshmen through a new course. Honors students had the chance to take the humanities course, tentatively titled "The Good Life," in the spring semester.

In the board meeting's agenda, the course was described as reading and writing intensive.

Glover said the course is important because students identify with UF's athletics and out-of-classroom activities, and he is concerned that they aren't connecting with the university in the classroom.

The course, which will have three sections under the tag IDH3931, is also intended to be interdisciplinary, which means course objectives will apply to all majors.

The university expects 600 freshmen to take the course in the fall. If it is successful, then Glover said the university plans to "scale it up to a huge proportion of the freshman class."

The course, however, will not be required. Glover also wants to stabilize declining enrollment levels.

Glover's plan is to raise graduate enrollment between half a percent and 1 percent each year.

"We are probably at, or near, capacity at the university," he said. "If our four-year graduation rate went up, then we could increase our freshman and transfer classes."

Student Body President Ashton Charles said she thinks the board needs to respect the educational paths of all students, even those who take longer than four years.

"Some degrees do take longer to achieve," she said.

Additionally, Machen wants undergraduate recruitment to focus more on out-of-state prospects. While the university enrolls many international students at the graduate level, 93 percent of undergraduates are from Florida.

Already, the university has begun sending advisers to interested students in the Washington, D.C. and New York areas, Glover said.

"[Alumni] have children who want to come back to the University of Florida," Glover said.

UF wide receiver Frankie Hammond Jr. fights for extra yardage after catching a pass from John Brantley against Charleston Southern in 2009. Hammond was arrested early Sunday morning on campus.

was subsequently arrested for DUI.

Police found two open 750-ml bottles of Crown Royal whiskey in Hammond's vehicle — one in the back seat and the other in the trunk.

According to the report provided by UPD, one bottle was about one quarter full and the other was less than a quarter full.

Hammond, 20, was arrested and taken to the UPD police station where another officer collected breath samples with Hammond's consent.

According to the report, Hammond blew a .188 and a .191, making his blood-alcohol content more than twice the legal limit of .08.

According to team spokesman Steve McClain, Hammond, who will be a red-shirt sophomore in the fall, has been suspended from all team activities.

Hammond

After catching just four passes for 57 yards and a touchdown last season, Hammond was expected to play a larger role in the Gators' revamped receiving corps headed into the 2010 season.

The arrest is at least the 28th for a UF football player during coach Urban Meyer's tenure at Florida.

City code would need to be amended for dog service to remain open

He applied for a permit the next day. One month later, city officials denied him a permit due to another code violation: Baber was keeping animals in his home for non-pet purposes.

Section 5.3 of the Gainesville city code states, "No person shall harbor any animal for use other than as a pet within any residential district."

Though he will be forced to close on June 23, Baber does not plan on letting his business die. Instead, he and his lawyer, Sondra Randon, plan to challenge the city.

First they will request that the city commission reinterpret the code for Baber's case. If that fails, an alternative would be to appeal to the city to revise the code.

"It's gonna be an uphill battle," Randon said. "We're really gonna need local support, because I think we're gonna need to have the code amended."

Local News

However, even if Baber is able to overcome the code barring animals from being in a residential area for non-pet purposes, Randon said he still has yet another obstacle to overcome.

While the city of Gainesville requires that home-based businesses not spill outside the boundaries of the house itself, one of Mydog-space's attractions is the dogs' ability to move freely from the house to the backyard.

Randon said she is not entirely optimistic that the business will be able to find a way around the regulations placed on home businesses by the city. Baber said he doesn't want to think about what he will do if the business must close down.

Texas, three others to remain in Big 12 Conference

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AUSTIN, Texas — The Big 12 is alive and kicking.

The University of Texas on Monday said it was staying in the Big 12, followed moments later by pledges from Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and Texas A&M to remain in a league that seemed to be falling apart last week when Nebraska (Big Ten) and Colorado (Pac-10) decided to leave over the next two years.

The Texas announcement came shortly after Pac-10 commissioner Larry Scott confirmed to The Associated Press in an e-mail that Texas had declined an invitation to become the 12th member of his conference. Scott said Texas president William Powers Jr. told him "the 10 remaining schools in the Big 12 Conference intend to stay together."

Powers wouldn't give any details about why the school decided to stay put when asked by the AP. Texas scheduled a news conference for Tuesday morning.

A person with direct knowledge of discussions among the Big 12's remaining members said Texas is clear to set up its own TV network

"Obviously, we're very excited and pleased about the 10 schools staying together. It will be great to continue the rivalries and traditions."

and keep all proceeds in exchange for remaining in the Big 12.

The Pac-10 courted Texas and other Big 12 South Division schools, while Texas A&M reportedly expressed interest in going to the Southeastern Conference.

"Texas A&M is a proud member of the Big 12 Conference and will continue to be affiliated with the conference in the future," school president R. Bowen Loftin said in a statement.

The news that the Big 12 survived spread quickly.

"That's great news," said Scott Drew, whose Baylor men's basketball team advanced to the South regional final in the NCAA Tournament a few months ago. "Obviously, we're very excited and pleased about the 10 schools staying together. It will be great to continue the rivalries and traditions."

Texas A&M regent Gene Stallings said Monday he wants the Big 12 to survive and would vote to keep the Aggies in the league.

"I know how hard all the Big 12 coaches have worked to make our conference the No. 1 conference in the country," Baylor's Drew said. "When you achieve that status, you obviously don't want to see it disappear."

with a 2010 American-leading leap of 17.09 meters.

Mariam Kevkhishvili won her fifth NCAA shot put title (indoors and outdoors), becoming just the second athlete in NCAA history to claim five women's shot put championships.

The senior thrower completed her amazing career by going undefeated as a collegiate competitor in her final two seasons at UF.

"For our women to come in here with seven athletes and place third is a great accomplishment," Holloway said.

In all, the Gators won six individual NCAA titles during the meet.

While several other Gators didn't score points for their team, that didn't mean they didn't perform up to standards.

Track

Freshman distance runner Josh Izewski ran a lifetime personal-best time of 29:37.85 in the men's 10,000-meter race, the eighth-fastest time in school history.

Senior distance runner Julie Northrup, a runner in the women's steeplechase, ran the second-fastest time in UF history at 10:20.58.

The Gators concluded the 2009-2010 campaign winning the men's NCAA Indoor Championship, men's Southeastern Conference Outdoor Championship, women's SEC Cross Country Championship, women's SEC Indoor Championship and finishing second and third, respectively, at the NCAA Outdoor Championships.

Gators sweep 'Canes to earn CWS berth

■ UF SCORED EIGHT UNEARNED RUNS IN THE TWO-GAME SWEEP OF MIAMI.

By ANTHONY CHIANG
Alligator Staff Writer
achiang@alligator.org

The Gators' hopes of clinching a berth to the College World Series seemed dead.

But Miami's defense revived them.

Down by just one run in the ninth, No. 4 Florida loaded the bases with two outs.

But the Gators didn't need a hit to get the job done — all they needed was Miami's sixth error of the game on a routine ground ball off the bat of junior Josh Adams.

UF took advantage of the Hurricanes' lackluster defense on Saturday to punch its ticket to Omaha, Neb., for the sixth time in school history with a 4-3 victory over No. 20 Miami in front of a record 5,783 people in McKethan Stadium. The Gators will begin the CWS this weekend with a matchup against No. 8 UCLA.

"It's tough when you are dealing with 18- and 19 year-old young men," coach Kevin O'Sullivan said. "When so much is at stake at this time of the year, little

Men's team places second

By JESSE SIMONTON
Alligator Writer

If history is any indication, the Gators men's track and field team could find itself with an NCAA Outdoor Championship next season.

A year after finishing in second place, two points behind the eventual champions, Florida came that much closer to immortality, finishing second, just one point behind the NCAA Outdoor Champions Texas A&M at the 2010 NCAA Outdoor Championships in Eugene, Ore.

"We were within two points last year and one point this year, so we're getting closer," UF coach Mike Holloway said. "Now, we have 365 days from this point to get ready to come back and fight for the NCAA title."

While the UF men fell just short, the women's team used a remarkable final day to also finish in the top-three of the outdoor championships.

Florida's men placed second overall with 54 team points, while the women's team — behind just seven athletes — finished in third place with 40 team points.

"I am extremely proud of our team today," Holloway said. "For both our programs to finish in the top three is a great accomplishment. I have to give credit to my staff for their hard work and diligence."

While Texas A&M claimed both the men's and women's national titles, several Gators still put on a show.

Charlotte Browning won the women's 1,500-meter run with a time of 4:15.84, and Evelien Dekkers won the women's javelin with a school-record toss of 59 meters. Dekkers shattered her own personal-record throw and became the first women's javelin champion in school history.

The men's 4x100-meter relay team successfully defended its NCAA title, winning the race behind a strong quartet anchored by 100-meter champion Jeff Demps. The 4x100-meter relay team won with a time of 39.04.

Earlier in the week, the Gators claimed three other individual championships including Demps' blazing win in the 100-meter dash (9.69).

Christian Taylor capped off an impressive campaign by winning the men's triple jump

2010 World Cup brings soccer fever to America

They say Americans don't care about soccer. They say Americans will never embrace the sport the way they embrace football, basketball, baseball and even hockey.

And while they may have been right before, the 2010 FIFA World Cup might have them altering their stance.

When the United States took the pitch Saturday afternoon to face England in the teams' World Cup openers, it seemed as though people around here had a new attitude toward soccer.

It may have just been because the Yanks were taking on their big brother to kick off the festivities, or it could be that Americans are starting to catch soccer fever.

ABC, the network that carried the game's broadcast, scored big with the opening-round match between the U.S. and England as roughly 13 million viewers tuned into the 1-1 draw.

According to data from Nielsen, 8.39 million households in America were watching the U.S. debut in South Africa.

That made it the most-watched opening-round World Cup game since 1994 when the Americans played Romania. It also made it the highest-rated U.S. game since it took on Brazil in the quarterfinals 16 years ago.

Overall, the match was the fifth highest-rated World Cup match in the things like that can come back to either help you or haunt you."

Adams reached base in the ninth because of a weak throw from Miami shortstop Stephen Perez, which allowed the ball to bounce in the dirt before it reached the first baseman.

The critical error allowed sophomore Preston Tucker to score and tie the game at three. The Gators eventually won the game on a go-ahead double from Austin Maddox in the 10th inning to bring freshman Nolan Fontana home.

"I've been seeing the ball well all weekend," Maddox said. "I got a good pitch to hit and put a good swing on it and came up big time. I'll remember that hit for the rest of my life."

Fontana's run was also unearned as he reached base on a fielding error.

Miami's seven errors in the second game of the series didn't help pitcher Chris Hernandez, who threw a gem Saturday. He lasted 8.1 innings while giving up just three hits.

The Gators scored eight unearned runs on nine errors by the Hurricanes in the two super regional games.

However, UF's defense didn't give its starting pitcher Hudson Randall those same problems.

Randall used two double plays and a stellar diving catch from UF center fielder Matt den Dekker to throw 6.2 innings and allow just two runs. The freshman struck out five to continue his recent success.

Randall is sporting a 2.14 ERA in his last 11 starts.

"I was coming in trying to give our team the same chance we had yesterday," he said. "Our offense has been on a roll now, so I knew they were going to get some runs for me."

Florida's bullpen was just as good. Four relievers combined to pitch 3.1 innings of one-run baseball.

"Our offense has been on a roll now, so I knew they were going to get some runs for me."

UF pitcher

The UF pitching staff limited Miami's offense, which came into the super regional averaging more than 11 runs per game in its last seven contests, to just five total runs in the super regional.

UF has a team ERA of 2.00 in the two rounds preceding the CWS.

Sophomore Greg Larson recorded the final two outs for the Gators to close out the game and begin the celebration.

"This is what I came back for," den Dekker said. "This is definitely the best moment of my career."

Keep in mind, of course, the numbers from Saturday are just estimates and don't take into account the national viewers who watched the match online on ESPN3 or the 4.1 million people that caught the Spanish broadcast on Univision.

The numbers also don't reflect the number of people who went to bars or restaurants to tune in, so the actual numbers are likely much higher. I know I went to a bar to catch the match and people were packed in there shoulder-to-shoulder.

More than just being there to watch the match and have drinks, people were getting into what was unfolding before their eyes on the television screens. It was like watching the Super Bowl or an NBA Finals game - except this was for an opening-round match in a sport Americans have been known to not embrace.

In the past, people may not have cared about soccer as much, but the current U.S. men's national team has more recognizable names and faces than I can ever remember. Landon Donovan has been the most well-known figure in American soccer for years now, but this time he is joined by Tim Howard, Clint Dempsey, Jozy Altidore and Carlos Bocanegra.

Following America's silver medal-showing in Olympic hockey earlier this year, the NHL received a ratings boost. Game 6 of the Stanley Cup Finals was the highest-rated NHL game in more than three decades.

I can see the same thing happening with soccer.

Not to say that it's going to jump into the American forefront after the World Cup ends, but I believe the World Cup will increase the sport's livelihood in America and the young faces of the U.S. team are going to bring about a new interest in the sport that we haven't seen in the past, and more Americans than ever will start to embrace soccer.
