

Skimmer victims turn to banks for advice

■ WOMAN USED CREDIT CARD AT GAS STATION WHERE SKIMMERS WERE DISCOVERED.

By ALEXANDER KLAUSNER
Alligator Contributing Writer

Liz woke up one morning to a voicemail on her phone. The call was from her bank, USAA, notifying her that her account had suspicious charges on it and was flagged for fraud. She checked her statements and discovered two fraudulent purchases, each for more than $100 at a gas station in Tampa. But Liz hadn't been in Tampa. She was asleep in her Gainesville residence when the charges were made. Liz, who requested her last name not be used, is just one of the unknown number of Gainesville residents who had their credit card information saved onto a gas-pump skimmer and downloaded via Bluetooth by identity bandits. The 25-year-old said she frequently bought gas from the Kangaroo station at 3424 SW Williston Road, where two skimmers were found on the weekend of July 24. Before the charges appeared, the last purchase made with her card was gas from that station, she said. She responded by calling the bank and discussing the problem with USAA's fraud department. After about a week, she was able to

More than 165,000 credit hours. That's about how many credits were taken by the undergraduate students expected to attend their graduations Saturday. The recommended study time for that many credits would be 7.5 million hours, or 860 years, according to Martin Simpson, director of the Reading and Writing Center. About 1,400 undergraduate students plan to attend the graduation ceremony Saturday, according to Donna Stricker, director of the commencement. She said she's unsure how many students will receive their degrees without attending the ceremony. The number of students expected to attend the graduation was determined by the number of students who ordered caps and gowns. The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences has the most students graduating, "by far," Stricker said. The college expects about 268 graduates. In addition to the undergraduates, there will be more than 1,500 graduate and professional students graduating Saturday. Some professional schools, SEE GRAD, PAGE 5

Laid-off professor officially reinstated

By LIDIA DINKOVA
Alligator Contributing Writer

UF educational psychology assistant professor David Therriault was officially reinstated to his position Monday after he received a layoff notice in July 2009. In a hearing held June 28 at Emerson Alumni Hall, arbitrator Tom Young decided Therriault was unjustly laid off because university administration did not attempt to find him an alternative position within the department of educational psychology or the College of Education and deemed him ineligible to apply for tenure. Both are violations of the Collective Bargaining Agreement. "The university is supposed to make an active effort to find him another position, but instead they chose to ignore this part of the agreement," said Candi Churchill, service unit director at the United Faculty of Florida. United Faculty of Florida, an organization that represents graduate employees and faculty throughout Florida universities, spoke on behalf of Therriault at the hearing. "There's no good way to make the cuts that we made, and unfortunately there were some decisions to make layoffs." Janine Sikes UF spokeswoman

The university cited adverse financial circumstances as the reason he was laid off. Between 2008 and 2009, $100 million was cut from UF's budget, said UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes. "There are thousands and thousands of faculty on this campus and the university was facing a severe budget deficit," she said. "There's no good way to make the cuts that we made, and unfortunately there were some decisions

Washington teen finds $650 under couch cushions SNOHOMISH, Wash. (AP) — A 16-year-old boy searching for his cell phone in the cushions of his friend's couch found a wallet with $650 inside. Jack Wagster and friend Nick Gorman told Nick's mother, who bought the couch from a couple in Kirkland, Wash. A Facebook search found the wallet's owner — 28-year-old Alanna Jensen, who now lives in Arizona. She lost her billfold in 2005 at a party. She told The Daily Herald of Everett she was excited and grateful to get it back. She gave the boys $25 rewards and the mother, Tracee Gorman, a $20 gift card for coffee.

Halliburton has developed a way to get more natural gas out of the ground – a hydraulic drilling process called hydraulic fracturing, or "fracking" for short. Energy companies across rural America are attempting to lease property from residents in order to drill for natural gas. Filmmaker Josh Fox received a lucrative offer from an energy company wanting to lease his property to tap into a reservoir of natural gas. Fox decided to take his camera and meet other rural residents on the front lines of fracking. He traveled to 32 states and discovered toxic streams, ruined aquifers, dying livestock, brutal illnesses and kitchen sinks that burst into flames. He learns that all water is connected, and perhaps some things are more valuable than money.

New bus route to service Santa Fe students

Starting this fall, a new bus route, 23, will be running from the Oaks Mall to Santa Fe College's northwest campus.

RTS spokesman Chip Skinner said RTS has been trying to get additional routes to Santa Fe for at least five years, and he's happy that it was finally able to expand the service to SFC.

"A lot of Santa Fe students are not from Gainesville," Santa Fe College student Khalil Quinan said. "We don't have the dorms like UF students, so most of us live in these all-inclusive apartments."

Meals, phone bills spared

■ SG SPENDS $16,000 FOR OFFICIALS' PHONE BILLS, MEAL CARDS ANNUALLY.

By ELIZABETH BEHRMAN
Alligator Writer

Senators voted against a bill that would limit funds given to Student Government officials for meals and cell phone bills during Tuesday's meeting.

Members of the Student Alliance party authored the Student Government Fiscal Responsibility Act, that would have, if passed, put a cap on the money given to SG officials for cell phone usage and meal cards.

According to the bill, the Student Body president, vice president and treasurer each receive between $1,200 and $1,500 a year for cell phone usage and up to $3,000 for meal cards. All of this money comes from the SG budget.

This money, combined with money given to other SG officials, costs SG more than $16,000 per year. This number excludes salaries and travel costs, according to the bill.

In the bill, the Student Alliance party proposed giving the officials only $65 a month for their cell phone bills, and $500 a year toward their meal cards, which can be used at any Gator Dining location.

Jonathan Ossip, Senate leader for the Student Alliance party, said he doesn't want to see their compensations cut completely, nor is he against them receiving a salary, but he doesn't think so much money for SG officials should be taken from the Student Body when the funds could be used for something else.

Putting a cap on these reimbursements is an obvious solution, Ossip said.

"This could be going back to regular students, and that's what this bill is trying to do," he said.

Ossip

Ben Meyers, who represents the Unite Party, said the money is given to these officials because they cannot have a part-time job while serving in SG.

He said these members of SG spend most of their time in the Reitz Union, so they typically eat there, and they spend a lot of time on the phone working with people such as the SG lobbyists in Tallahassee.

"These so-called perks are necessary to help them do their jobs," Meyers said. "We're lucky that we still even have leaders that are willing to serve."

UF employee, student arrested for auto theft

By KAT BEIN
Alligator Writer

A UF employee and an electrical engineering student were arrested Wednesday for grand theft auto after they admitted to stealing two scooters.

At about 4 p.m., Gainesville Police officers spotted UF student Jared Wolffis, 24, and Bryan Urban, 22, suspiciously driving a truck around various apartment complexes off of Southwest 20th Avenue, according to the arrest reports.

When the officers followed the truck into Canopy Apartments, the pair stopped suddenly and made a U-turn in the parking lot, the report stated.

Police followed their truck until the officers pulled them over in Rockwood Villas Apartments, the report stated.

As police approached, Wolffis, who was in the passenger seat, got out of the truck and ran away, despite officers' demands to stop, the report stated.

After being read his rights, Urban admitted to stealing the scooter in the bed of the truck from Canopy Apartments, the report stated.

A police dog, Justice, was brought to search for the student in the area around the apartment complex. Within minutes, Justice found Wolffis and bit him, according to a GPD statement.

The pair were also connected to the theft of another scooter from near 200 SE Second Ave., the report stated.

Wolffis is charged with grand theft auto, resisting arrest without violence, and loitering and prowling. Urban is charged with grand theft auto and loitering and prowling, the report stated.

FSU alumni bring version of ZipCarts to Gainesville

Carts are electrically run, paid for by advertising

By KAT BEIN
Alligator Writer

Most taxis charge their customers, but there will soon be five new electric carts roaming the streets of downtown Gainesville looking to give people a free ride.

Next week, the first three electric carts will be arriving from the Gotcha Media Group, an Atlanta-based company started by two Florida State University alumni.

The carts should be in service in just a couple weeks, according to company co-founder Drew Sfugaras.

The carts seat five passengers, besides the employed driver who works for tips, and are 100 percent electrically run, Sfugaras said.

The carts, specially designed with college students in mind, will be fitted with CD, DVD and MP3 players, as well as flat-screen TVs, he said.

"If the Jetsons' car had wheels, that's kinda what they look like," he said. "We want them to be fun."

The drivers will also act as concierges, offering up-to-date information on local events and hot spots, he said.

The carts can run two to three hours on one charge, and use a rapid-charge system that fully energizes the battery in 30 minutes.

The company is currently discussing with UF the best places to set up charging stations, Sfugaras said.

The carts can be hailed like paying taxis, or called in through a dispatch number. They will run from 7:30 a.m. until noon, he said. They will then start back up sometime in the evening and run until 3 a.m., so they will be available for students who have been out drinking, he said.

"The goal is that everyone gets home safely and we get everyone who needs a ride," he said.

Gotcha, which stands for Green Operated Transit Carrying Humanity Around, can afford offering free rides because the carts will be "wrapped in advertisements," he said.

The idea for the company came from trying to solve the pan-collegiate problem of difficult student parking while also giving advertisers the chance to make an impression on college students, Sfugaras said.

"It's really the best way to get in front of these people," he said. "We love the model of providing a free service to students while marketing."

Other late-night transportation will still be available for students. ZipCarts, a nightly shuttle service, and a formerly free ride, now charges $3 per person and will compete with Gotcha taxis.

Student Government also offers Student Nighttime Auxiliary Patrol, the free campus transportation service, until 3 a.m.

A boat motors near an oil sheen in the Gulf between the Deepwater Horizon Oil Spill site and the Louisiana coast. A government report said much of the spilled oil is gone.

NATIONAL

Some researchers say oil in Gulf is 70 percent gone

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — With a startling report that some researchers call more spin than science, the government said Wednesday that the mess made by the BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico is mostly gone already.

On the same day they trumpeted success in plugging up the leaking well with drilling mud, federal officials announced that nearly 70 percent of the oil spilled dissolved naturally, or was burned, skimmed, dispersed or captured, with almost nothing left to see — at least on top of the water.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and the U.S. Geological Survey announced in the five-page report that only 52.7 million gallons of oil are left in the Gulf. That is about 31 percent of the 172 million gallons that spewed into the water from the broken BP well.

Just because the oil is out of sight doesn't mean the Gulf is out of harm's way, federal scientists emphasized. And what's left in the water is still almost five times the amount spilled by the Exxon Valdez in 1989.

Nevertheless, Wednesday was a day of cautious celebration by a White House that has had little to cheer about from the oil spill.

"I think it is fairly safe to say ... that many of the doomsday scenarios that we talked about and repeated a lot have not and will not come to fruition," White House spokesman Robert Gibbs said at a briefing with NOAA's top scientist.

Tell it again.

Fraud victims may pay up to $50

recover her money.

Bob Page, Alachua County president for Alarion Bank, said that under Federal Regulation E, consumers who have been victimized only need to pay up to $50. Of course, that depends on whether or not the bank deems the claim legitimate.

The skimmers haven't just been affecting consumers, but local businesses as well.

Patrick Daniel, co-owner of Go Video, a small video rental shop located inside the Chevron at 5221 NW 43rd St., said that he has been losing business because people are refusing to leave their credit card information with him.

Go Video rents videos to customers by the day. To charge its customers, Go Video must keep credit card information on file in order to prevent people from absconding with its movies.

To accommodate worried customers, Daniel has had to take cash deposits on his rentals.

"I couldn't explain to them that the skimmers, they get you at the pumps," he said.

Around Gainesville

Daniel also said that he has noticed a major increase in people who walk inside to pay.

Though she does not buy gas at the Chevron where Go Video is located, Liz is included in the multitude of people who now pay inside with cash.

"I've gotten yelled at [by my husband Dustin] for not paying inside," she said. "If I just swipe at the gas pump, I get talked to."

to make layoffs."

Therriault, however, had an almost $1 million external grant from the National Science Foundation.

Furthermore, a briefing filed by Churchill reads that the College of Education continued to hire tenure-track faculty and post open positions after Therriault was laid off.

"From my position, if this is a budgetary issue, the university should have a hiring freeze," Churchill said.

Therriault continued working during the past year.

Sikes

"My responsibility is to my students and to my research and I take those things pretty seriously," he said. "I am very happy with the results and to be able to get back to work and not be distracted by all this."

He plans to apply for tenure, and the university has already stated it will comply.

like the Levin College of Law, won't have a ceremony. About 15 students are expected to get their law degrees, but they won't walk until spring, Stricker said.

The College of Education is graduating the most graduate students Saturday with 136 master's degrees and 20 doctoral degrees.

A former Gators football team captain and leading tackler in 2006, Earl Everett, came back to UF to earn his degree. He completed two courses in Summer A to graduate, according to an interview with OnlyGators.com, and he's expected to attend Saturday, UF spokesman Steve Orlando said.

Graduate and professional students will attend a morning ceremony at 10 a.m. at the O'Connell Center, and pharmacy doctoral students will attend at 10 a.m. at the College of Pharmacy's auditorium.

The undergraduate student ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. at the O'Connell Center.

The two O'Connell Center ceremonies will be broadcast live online at www.registrar.ufl.edu/commencement/.

FUN FACTS FOR GRADS

■ Four years ago, the Student Body was headed by the Swamp Party, with John Boyles as president and Lydia Washington as vice president.

■ The deadline for students to turn in F Books, which are handbooks published by the UF Alumni Association that document student traditions, is Friday.

■ The total number of study hours recommended for the 1,400 undergraduates while at UF by the Reading & Writing Center equals 860 years or 7.5 million hours.

■ The undergraduates witnessed UF win two football national championships, in 2006 and 2008, under coach Urban Meyer and saw former quarterback Tim Tebow win the Heisman Trophy.

Evil Event

Burn Quran Day

deserves no attention

Gainesville Mayor Craig Lowe hasn't wasted any time coming out in protest of Dove World Outreach Center's plans for a Quran burning on Sept. 11.

The event, "International Burn a Quran Day," has gotten a lot of national press for its hate-mongering, anti-Islamic message. We just would have used words a little stronger than "fringe" to categorize the group.

This group is an evil twist on the kind of high-cost, high-commitment Christianity that televangelists like Peter Popoff have been flooding the airwaves with for years, except instead of a $20 bottle of holy spring water and a prayer mat, adherents get brainwashed into having intense, unjustifiable hatred for their neighbors.

Sure, they have their right to freedom of speech, but we really can't figure out how an event like this could possibly further their movement. Burning a Quran is something that anyone outside the fold of their cult would view as an act to incite a confrontation.

Unfortunately, people like this interpret any sort of attention – be it positive or negative – as affirmation that they are doing the right thing. That said, we are against protesting the group's book burning since it would only push Dove World to turn up their zeal to 11 and plan more events like this in the future.

We don't have any misconceptions that ignoring them will force them to stop, but we do have high hopes that a lack of attention will make them move to a place that feeds the fire – hopefully somewhere far away from Gainesville.

So long, summer

This long, hot and boring summer is finally coming to a close, and after all the dreadfully boring news that came out in the past few months, we think it should have come a lot sooner.

We had the BP oil spill, with scores of stories about "Top Kill" underwater currents bringing oil to Florida shores – if the topic was a horse, we'd shoot it. We had a new Supreme Court nominee, coupled with a confirmation process as predictable as the "Twilight" plot. And who could forget the Lindsay Lohan trial? Nothing says "slow news season" like giving her hours of screen time on everything from TMZ to the evening news.

It could have been worse, though. We could have had a repeat of last summer's painfully-overdrawn coverage of Michael Jackson's death. Although we can't think of another pop star who could draw that much unwarranted attention. Maybe Madonna? Or Bono? Who cares, anyway?

We just hope none of these stories carry into the fall. It might be wishful thinking for the oil spill, but we could do without hearing another word about Lindsay Lohan for the rest of our lives. What has she ever done except star in needless remakes of campy Disney films? Oh yeah, she helped cap off Michael Keaton's career of classic '80s movies with an embarrassingly bad summer movie about a Volkswagen.

But now isn't the time to focus on the past. After summer exams we get a couple well-deserved weeks of relaxation before college football is back in full swing. At least by then there will be something a little more worthwhile on TV than what we've had to deal with for the past few months.

Paint the roses whatever color you like

We have about 80 years to live, and about one-third of that we spend unconscious. And I don't mean because of an accumulation of hard nights at Midtown. Throw in work, education, eating, daily household and personal hygiene chores, and the roughly five years everyone spends in a line of some sort just waiting for something like a red light to turn green.

Unlike Dorian Gray, we have no portrait of immortality, so why do we allow ourselves to live within our own "Truman" shows? Because our society glamorizes the standard.

I turn on the TV. Hmm. It's HGTV. For the fourth time in two hours, "House Hunters" is on. It's an entire show about normal people buying houses in a particularly unexciting way. Great. *Click*

MTV, "The Real World," season – I don't know – 241. So, 20 people in an unreasonably luxurious house are living there ... I'm waiting for an actual plot ... any reason to actually continue watching this show ...

*Click*

Lindsay Lohan is in jail, again, and, for some reason, this dominates every news channel. And for some reason they want our opinions on the situation via Twitter.

*CLICK*

Sure, that's just television. But what does society consider a fulfilled life? Well, you go to school to get a job, and then you get a job to pay for school. Then you work until you can afford to not have to worry about anything, just like life was before school. It sounds cruel, but this is the necessary cycle of life in modern society.

Stay with me, I am certainly not advocating people quit their jobs and drop out of school. In fact, one of society's major problems is that we allow people to simply throw their hands up and quit the cycle, and then we allow them to live off of everyone else for free in the form of government entitlements. Instead, we as a society should be advocating individual greatness.

Where is the cultivation of greatness and competition?

The views expressed here are not necessarily those of the Alligator.

Bryan Griffin
letters@alligator.org

When do we start to refocus on living life uniquely, independently and creatively? Why do we allow ourselves to conform to stereotypes so easily?

I'm a frat guy who doesn't own a polo shirt. I like that. I'm a Republican who enjoys indie music and concerts. I like that, too. But I want more than to just break stereotypes. I want to make this one shot at life everything it is potentially capable of being. And as much as I desire this, I also like to encourage this in others.

I don't want the occasional dinner at Bennigan's with friends who grow farther apart the older I get. I want Great Gatsby parties and dialogues worthy of the ancient Greeks and Romans.

I don't want to live in the suburban house with hardwood floors and granite counter tops. I want to live in a castle with a secret bookcase and a conservatory.

I am not talking about being rich. I am talking about being different – not for the sake of being different but for the sake of the inherent fact that we are all different. Yet we allow each other to set our own standards of living and normalcy.

That's simply how I define my "greatness." It is worth it to ask yourself what constitutes yours.

Don't let life go by you without throwing in a jab. Some cannot appreciate serendipity; but it deserves more legitimacy than it is currently given.

Everyone I spoke to about this summer's big blockbuster, "Inception," loved it, especially because the concept of constructing a unique world as one chooses is broadly appealing. Well, why do we have to be dreaming to make the world our own?

On a note of encouragement, a simple message: It doesn't have to be black and white; paint the roses whatever color you like.

Competition should extend to other services as well

In Tuesday's Alligator, the Editorial Board took a strong stance in favor of adding more Gainesville utility providers, finally bringing the free market to our power and water and working to stop the city-controlled socialists at GRU. Frankly, I couldn't agree more.

We should be asking members of the left-wing city commission why they won't let the free market work. They might say that adding another set of utilities would require tearing up the roads and building new power lines, or that the cost would be enormous, or that public utilities just don't work that way. But I say they are dead wrong.

This is America. No task is too bold, and their naysaying is in the way of private industry.

While we're tearing up the roads, why not build a second set of private, free market streets as well? The Florida Department of Transportation has held a monopoly on our roads ever since I was born, and it's high time we let competition prevail.

The invisible hand of the free market needs to run its course, and creating competition for GRU is just the first step.

Personally, I think we need competition in the fire department, as well. With their communist, state-owned services, it makes perfect sense why their trucks are all painted red.

Limiting freedoms is justifiable at times

Freedom is an addictive thing, isn't it? Each time we get a little bit more freedom to do anything, regardless of the positive or negative impacts, we cling to it like a mother clinging to her newly born baby. It is our baby. It is our everything. But why is this so? Why do we find it so difficult to let go of any kind of freedom? I would put my hard-earned Monopoly money on the reason being a human tendency, to grasp onto anything that enables us to express ourselves. Since expression can be quasi-defined as life, the opportunity to live to one's fullest potential, which I believe is infinite, can be equated as freedom.

Normally when we speak about potential, we tend to be biased toward the positive possibilities. We have heard discussions of raw athletes reaching their true potential in quickness and strength through hard work and preparation. This doesn't accurately portray potentiality because it could either be directed toward the best or the worst. Potentiality refers to a future state. This can either be positive or negative depending on how you act in the present. And guess what, how you act in the present is always limited by the societal limits to your freedom.

So why would society decide to limit your freedom? Is this ever justifiable? Or is it a ruse to dominate the masses? In some cases it is, and in some cases it is not. In fact, in UF's

Chinedu O. Ikpechukwu

case, as in many advanced societies, there are both logical and moral reasons to limit an individual's freedom. It makes logical sense, when living as a self-sustaining group of individuals that each person's freedoms do not pose a justifiable threat to the goal of the society that is self-sustenance. Laws that punish for murder and theft have not only a moral basis but a logical push behind it. Since a majority of societies are formed to self-sustain and continue, it is reasonable for most societies to attempt to curb the apparently destructive potentialities of its citizens. Now, before dictators and oppressors rub their palms with glee, there is another dimension in this argument, and this involves the equality of each individual in the society, not in rank or intelligence or wealth but in human dignity or humanity. It is ironic that societies with the best basis of self-sustenance are actually those that allow the most individual freedoms tolerable to successful self-sustenance for obvious reasons such as greater expression of its members, leading to more creativity and risk taking.

A moral argument for the justification of curbing individuals' freedoms in a society is that, since potentialities can be good or bad, and morally we would like what is in the best interest of ourselves for others, it is taken as a general norm that such leaders of societies take steps to curb the negative or bad freedoms, which are in the best interest of all. At the crux of this argument is the unity of individuals as human beings. In essence, the judgments of what are good or bad for you, which would normally be controversial, in this instance are not up for debate. If we can agree that what is harmful to you is bad, then society can make clear and decisive actions to curb your freedom.

UF recently passed a smoking ban earlier this month prohibiting students from using tobacco products on its main campus. If my writing has been persuasive enough, you would take the logical and moral view that this is one step in the right direction for the institution. We all are aware of the dangers of smoking, not only to smokers, but to non-smokers who arguably have their own freedoms (to clean air) infringed upon.

The fact is, yes, your freedoms have been curbed, and yes, there are logical and moral reasons that could be made for it. It may be unenforceable, but it sends a positive message to its students. Freedom is a beautiful thing, but the craving to hang onto the decisions to ultimately do us harm is not only immoral but silly. Let's try not to be silly.

Shed your predispositions, enjoy diversity

Many wondered Barack Obama's election could signal an end to racism. To some this could have been an overall sign of the end of racism, but surely anyone who is in touch with the outside world would find this to be false during their daily routines.

The fact of the matter is that racism exists in every culture and cannot be eradicated without unification between them. There must be a willingness to practice empathy with everyone, including those with major differences. Understanding racism also requires an emotional understanding to the feelings one feels through racial prejudice.

Many feel racism and the behaviors that further racist mindsets are a cultural phenomenon. Oppression, neglect and a lack of expressed love, however, transcend cultures and race.

The circumstances and make-up of one's surrounding through the crucial development years are where minds and hearts are led astray.

The link between culture and racism comes from the belief that culture precedes racist mentalities.

The fact that communities are not usually uniform in race or culture is one thing that contrasts this. Also, the combination of neglected communities, low socioeconomic status and poor education contribute to the hardships that can breed racism.

History provides us with evidence that oppressed people have often led to racism that progresses over time.

So as fall begins, embrace the diversity around you at school and be proud that you walk the hallways of one of the most diverse campuses in America.

Dave's final summer column: A whole season in review LeBron James in Miami, Lohan in jail

And so, dear readers, here we are. Another summer in Gainesville has come and gone, and it's time we all look back and reflect on how much we've gone through. There have been plenty of things to remember over this past pseudo-semester, like that time ... where ... um ...

OK, confession time. I really don't remember much about this summer.

I remember it getting so hot that my roommate melted and made a mess all over the rug, and then LeBron taking his talents to South Beach.

Since then I've been listening to a loop of Eddie Murphy's hit single "Party All the Time" for weeks, while partying all the time.

Unfortunately, it's the aforementioned partying that has rendered me completely unable to do a "Summer in Review" column without making most of this stuff up as I go.

I'll start with something I've already mentioned. LeBron James, basketball player and monarch extraordinaire, will be playing for my hometown Miami Heat from now on.

This is merely the next chapter in the ongoing saga of Florida sports teams seal-clubbing the state of Ohio.

Actually, now that I think about it, the people of Ohio are much like seals: blubbery, helpless and terrible at sports.

Thanks to the ongoing events in the Gulf of Mexico, we have achieved our dream of being able to run our cars off seawater, like Elisabeth Shue said we could in that movie "The Saint" with Val Kilmer.

Dave Johnson
Columnist

Sadly, Lindsay Lohan was sent to jail for the murder of Val Kilmer, after her lawyers couldn't prove that the movie "MacGruber" already murdered him, or that Val Kilmer is actually still alive.

Collectively, the world watched in horror as an alien race known as the "vuvuzela" descended on South Africa, and overtook the populace.

The only thing that stopped them from taking over the world was their fascination with soccer.

Obviously, the aliens do not have sports where they come from and were able to find soccer interesting for a whole month.

Luckily, a psychic octopus was able to drive them off.

"Toy Story 3" came out this summer, ending an 11 year wait for those kids who watched the original two and were young enough to truly appreciate it.

Unfortunately, Pixar realized all those kids grew up and decided to make them feel like total jerks about ever giving a toy away.

Also, my roommate Paul was reduced to a blubbery mass by the end credits, sputtering "Andy loves Woody, but knows it's time to let go!"

He asked me not to mention that, but he's late on the rent.

Gainesville and the rest of the East Coast had one of the hottest summers on record.

I, and everyone else who bought Starcraft 2, didn't notice.

Beyond that, literally nothing at all happened this summer.

If anyone tries to tell you something that didn't show up in this column, then they're lying to you for the purposes of humor because he or she isn't able to think of anything else to come up with before deadline.

And so, readers, there it is. The whole summer, laid out for you in probably accurate fashion.

I hope you know how much fun it has been entertaining you guys this summer, as I'm uncertain as to my future in this position, and whether it will be available for me when fall rolls around.

To improve my chances, voice your support by saying nothing at all to the higher-ups at the Alligator (to the higher-ups: hope you guys are ready for the overwhelming silence). See you next fall, kids.

Editor's note: Dave Johnson is a great columnist but notoriously hard to reach.

You can express your gratitude (or lack thereof) to him personally at djohnson338@gmail.com. See you in the fall, Dave.

Colorful sunglasses trend is just clever marketing ploy

By ANGELA FLATLAND
avenue contributing writer

Members of UF's Greek community are responsible for the thousands of walking billboards for apartments, insurance companies and its own events on campus and around Gainesville.

Liz Chrisco, 22, a UF architecture senior, was one of the mobile advertisements, trekking through the Plaza of the Americas with a pair of neon pink sunglasses displaying "GEICO" by her left ear.

Chrisco is an example of an easy advertising trend this summer. Local businesses and organizations are taking advantage of the sunny weather by handing out plastic, brightly colored sunglasses with screen-printed logos for free to passersby.

Premier Corp., a local marketing firm, makes the plastic eye wear, as well as other promotional items available for custom screen-printing.

Stacey Todd, Premier's office manager since January 2009, said the popularity of sunglasses orders this year has significantly increased compared to last year, and she has seen a lot more people sporting the new shades.

Greek organizations that have ordered sunglasses for its formals and socials, are responsible for the increase, she said.

Premier Corp. has done promotions for Greek organizations like Kappa Delta, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Epsilon Pi, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Tau Delta and the Jewish Student Union.

They also have screen-printed sunglasses for apartment complexes like Cottage Grove.

UF's Tau Epsilon Phi got its sunglasses printed with "TEP Formal '10" from MRL Promotions, a promotional advertising firm based in Fort Lauderdale.

Lindsey Boyle, an employee of MRL since February, said that during spring and the beginning of summer a lot of Greek organizations were seeking these sunglasses.

Boyle attributes the fashion industry's preference for neon colors as another reason for the trend's success.

"Our formal was on the beach and we had previously done beach towels as our giveaway, so we thought sunglasses were ideal," said Justin Vines, who ordered the sunglasses from MRL for his fraternity, TEP.

Chrisco said she will continue to wear her sunglasses even though she knows she is advertising for free.

"I'm a broke college student," Chrisco said. "Why would I say no to free sunglasses?"

Nerd-core hip hop movement combines nerds and rap

By BRITTANY DAVIS
avenue contributing writer

If Eminem and Luke Skywalker got into a shouting match over a rap beat, and they referenced Halo, Harry Potter and hard drives, the result might sound like nerdcore.

Simply put, nerdcore is rap music written by nerds and gamers for nerds and gamers, and according to Drew Love, who is organizing two Gainesville shows, the quirky and often goofy genre is picking up steam.

In mid-July, about 700 people attended Nerdapalooza, an annual nerdcore music festival.

Love, who works as a waiter and grew up playing Pokemon and Street Fighter, is trying to help nerdcore gain momentum in Gainesville, where he says nerds are plentiful.

Rob Tobias, a UF computer sciences graduate who is friends with Love, said nerdcore is about being true to oneself.

"People would rather hear a nerd rap about being a nerd than someone who is not gangster trying to rap about being a gangster," he said while sipping on a PBR. "There's the traditional jocks versus geeks stereotype, he said, but even some jocks are nerds deep down, whether they collect Magic The Gathering cards or baseball cards."

"Everyone has got something they geek out over," Tobias said.

Like traditional hip-hop, nerdcore has its share of controversy and feuds, most of which play out online.

Artists have publicly argued over women, and there were feuds over control of the music sharing website, Rhyme Torrents.

Some nerdcore artists have made fun of traditional hip-hop in their songs, prompting accusations that the genre is racist.

"I'm not going to say that none of it is insensitive to racial barriers," Tobias said. "But it's more of a rookie mistake ... a poorly executed attempt to pay respect to something that's not completely understood."

At its base, nerdcore is about having fun, and the shows reflect that, Tobias said.

An Aug. 14 show will feature HDNinja, Magi-Tek and Emergency Pizza Party.

KronDor Krew, a group in which all the band members dress up like ninjas, and Epic-1 will perform Sep. 18.

Both shows will be at The Laboratory and will offer a friendly introduction to nerdcore, Tobias said.

"There's no pressure. There are just nerds."

Humans vs. Zombies: Inside the campus infection

By KAT BEIN
avenue writer

Editor's note: Kat Bein followed a group of humans around this weekend and wrote about her experiences.

It was 9 p.m. Friday night when I found myself at the Reitz Union Colonnade. UF was dark and mostly deserted, but I wasn't alone. Inside the Reitz Union lobby, about 30 students stood huddled in groups, waiting anxiously for information from their leaders outside.

Just beyond the colonnade steps waited the enemy, the scourge of the undead, the zombies.

It was a couple of days after the infection broke out, the third time in UF campus history, and already more than 40 people had changed. I was glad to be a human, and though I wasn't armed, I was safe among these weathered warriors. Or at least, that's what I hoped.

At about 9:15 p.m., the humans were called to muster. Dr. Muriel, the one woman who knew how to cook-up a cure for the virus had been injured the night before and rescued by some brave young band of humans calling themselves the Basterds.

Dr. Muriel told everyone she needed samples of the virus in order to recreate the cure in her lab, but the only samples she knew of were lost somewhere on campus, and we humans would need to scour the area for clues as to their whereabouts.

I was nervous. We were safe where we were, but the humans would all be leaving soon and I didn't want to get left behind. I found the group with the most guns and followed them. I was a Basterd tonight.

Led by Nick LoCastro, a fourth-year microbiology student, the Basterds are a tough looking band of badasses. LoCastro was armed with three guns. Another Basterd, Cameron Conrad, was strapped to the nines with modified guns and a slew of sock-grenades draped across his chest.

The Basterds, about 10 in all that night, headed toward the Infirmary. We'd gotten a hint that some clues could be found "where sick students go." LoCastro ordered us all to hush ourselves as we hustled through the shadows, guns cocked and ready in case of ambush.

We snuck around the back way and came through the Florida Gym. We met a game moderator, third-year computer engineering major T.J. Boyd, on the steps of the clinic, and he told us to look for something blue.

While the Basterds checked around, I stared at the body looming in front of us. I found out that was Derek Jones, the Original Zombie. I gulped.

Someone found the clue - it was a hazmat suit and mask and a clue reading something about having only two minutes to be somewhere. There wasn't time to think what that meant because more zombies were rapidly gathering around.

LoCastro ordered the Basterds to huddle, AKA I tried my best to get in the middle. The air was tense, and there was an uncomfortable calm before the storm as the zombies circled around us, then, suddenly-

AAHHHHHHHHH!!!! The zombies roared and rushed our group. I screamed and put my hands on my ears as Nerf bullets shot past my head. I was confused. I thought I felt a zombie's hand brush my face. But when the noise deadened and reality set in, I was still alive.

I was lucky. The zombies were only stunned for the next 10 minutes. There was no time to grieve.

We took cover inside the Florida Gym before regrouping in McCarty Hall. One of the Basterds told me the chilling tale of how, last year, about 40 students were infected where we stood in a bloodbath referred to as the McCarty Feast.

We met with Dr. Muriel. She told us it wasn't looking good. Since we left the Reitz Union Colonnade about an hour and a half ago, the zombies had taken the lead and we Basterds, along with another group of maybe three or four somewhere else, were the only humans left.

On top of that, some humans had discovered the coolers hidden in McCarty woods that contained the cure, but they had gone in before realizing the woods were "poisoned," and technically they should have been dead for going in without the hazmat suits.

The mission was pretty much a failure for the humans, and so plans were scrapped. The zombies were declared winners. But there was hope for tomorrow, and Dr. Muriel promised lots of cure cards to even the playing field the next morning.

Three times running and humans vs. zombies is still working out the kinks. But hey, it's just a game.

Humans vs. Zombies just finished its third run on UF campus. Zombie Loic Robertson, 22, tries to figure out what to eat now that brains are off the menu. The game ran from Wednesday, July 28, to Saturday, July 31.

Hot Water Music frontman struggles to find balance

By ALEX ORLANDO
avenue writer

He steps up to the microphone – eyes shut, sweat streaming down his face and guitar – as the raspy sound of his voice cuts through the twangy, bluegrass sound of his band.

His thick, brownish-red beard almost touches the microphone as he sings and bangs out chords on his worn acoustic guitar, the pickguard long gone.

He may not look like it, but even now, as he entertains screams of “Chuck yeah!” from the audience between sets while casting a serene look on the crowd – the kind you give your family after you’ve just finished Thanksgiving dinner – Chuck Ragan is fighting for balance.

That’s because he’s headed out on the road again, a road that offered him thousands of screaming fans when he started as the frontman for punk band Hot Water Music. It was also a road that he hated coming back from – back to the reality of eviction notices tacked to the doors of empty houses that he used to call home.

Back to hauling his belongings from trash cans in the front yards of those houses. Back to donating blood to make rent payments.

That was the life Ragan had called normal until 2006, when the band went on an indefinite hiatus to deal with the exhaustion, relationships and personal lives of its members after a run of touring between 1997 and 2005.

“You can only run a machine for so long before it needs maintenance,” he said.

Since then, aside from some touring and writing music independently, Ragan said he has been focusing on life in Gainesville.

He said he’s been spending time with his wife, fishing with friends on Orange Lake and around Shell Mound near Cedar Key and bringing back the fish to throw on the grill and sit in his lawn chair.

“You have to find a balance between doing what you love, making a living and running yourself into the dirt,” he said. Since the band reunited and revamped itself in 2008, Ragan said he’s gotten better about that balance between music and the rest of his life. He said he realized that last week when he was sitting on his porch in Gainesville, writing songs with the rest of the band, just like before his rigorous and costly tour schedule.

But, he said, some things still haven’t changed.

Brantley begins new chapter

By ANTHONY CHIANG
Alligator Staff Writer
achiang@alligator.org

A new era is about to begin.

Former Gators quarterback Tim Tebow, who is in Denver participating in practices as a member of the Denver Broncos, is gone.

In steps redshirt junior John Brantley – Florida's new signal caller.

"Well, you can't replace (Tebow)," senior safety Ahmad Black said. "You only hope to keep up the tradition, and keep up what he's done."

But as UF begins its training camp today, Brantley will look to create his own legacy.

The Ocala native is more of a pocket passer than Tebow was, but will provide less with his legs.

Last season, Brantley threw for 410 yards and seven touchdowns to go along with zero interceptions in seven games, mostly in mop-up duty for Tebow.

"Well, you can't replace (Tebow). You only hope to keep up the tradition, and keep up what he's done."

Ahmad Black
UF senior safety

"We're not going to run our quarterback as much," center Mike Pouncey said. "He's not as big as Superman was."

However, UF coach Urban Meyer does not expect that dynamic to change the offensive scheme very much if there are other weapons that can spread the field.

"(Our offensive scheme) is not going to be dictated as much by the quarterback," Meyer said. "I know what he can do. It's the people around him."

Even though the two primary offensive targets from last season, wide receiver Riley Cooper and tight end Aaron Hernandez, are now in the NFL – the Gators expect even more playmakers to step up this year.

Wide receiver Deonte Thompson, who struggled at times and accumulated just 343 yards through the air last season, is expected to be the deep threat and the leader of this year's receiving core.

But the players that could end up benefitting the most from Meyer's decision to stick with the spread offense are speedy wide receivers Andre Debose and Chris Rainey, who made the move to the position from running back in the offseason.

Debose, who Pouncey said would be the offensive player to emerge this year, came into UF last season as the No. 2 wide receiver recruit, according to Rivals.com. But he never had the chance to play because of a hamstring injury. Debose has received comparisons to Percy Harvin and could play the same role in this offense.

Other potential passing targets for Brantley are redshirt senior Carl Moore and redshirt sophomore Omarius Hines.

Brantley will be able to spread the ball around. But the biggest benefit he may have is the experience he has gained from watching Tebow handle the position for the last three seasons.

"John Brantley, he's had a great run at Florida," Pouncey said. "He's been there three years, learning from one of the best quarterbacks that played the game. He's ready to lead this team to a championship."

UF redshirt junior John Brantley (12) threw for seven touchdowns as a backup in 2009. He takes over for Tim Tebow at quarterback this year.

Gators fans should leave lofty expectations at the door

The Gators open up their preseason training camp today, and that can only mean one thing around these parts: UF fans already have their eyes on a trip to Glendale, Ariz., in January.

But before they get their hopes up too much, I think now would be the best time to warn fans to curb their expectations for this year's football team, because there are sure to be a few bumps in the road.

Now, I know many of you have been spoiled the last four years, with two Southeastern Conference titles, two BCS titles and a Heisman-winning quarterback who just so happened to be one of the greatest – if not the greatest – college football players of all time.

But that was the past. Tim Tebow is gone, as are his two favorite receiving targets from last season in Riley Cooper and Aaron Hernandez.

Add in the losses of Joe Haden, who was arguably the best shutdown cornerback in the nation, linebackers Brandon Spikes and Ryan Stamper, safety Major Wright and defensive ends

Tom Green

The Tom Green Show
tgreen@alligator.org

Carlos Dunlap and Jermaine Cunningham, and it adds up to a lot of voids to fill from a team that went 13-1 and didn't even win its conference championship.

Those losses leave many questions surrounding this team – questions that fans won't find out the answer to until at least Sept. 11 against South Florida in the Gators' only real test before they begin their SEC schedule.

The biggest questions remain on offense, where John Brantley will take over for Tebow. Brantley has been highly touted coming into the season, and by all accounts, he has the tools to be a great player by the time he leaves UF. But he has yet to prove anything as a starter.

More uncertainty revolves around the pieces surrounding Brantley on offense. Who will emerge as the team's go-to receivers?

"We have a lot of talent," coach Urban Meyer said at SEC Media Days last month. "I can't list you the top six or seven playmakers in order. I know we have them."

Meyer can't list them in order because it's clearly an unknown commodity. The potential is there for Brantley and the playmakers, but it's just a matter of turning that potential into production during games.

The Gators also bring in the No. 2 recruiting class, according to Rivals.com, and some of those freshmen are sure to have positive impacts this season. But they won't all pan out immediately – if at all.

So before you go booking a trip to Glendale in January, Gators fans, take off the orange-and-blue-tinted shades and look at this team for what it really is – talented, but unproven.

No. 1 Alabama: Crimson Tide look to defend title

■ THEY LOSE 11 STARTERS COMBINED ON OFFENSE AND DEFENSE.

By TOM GREEN

Alligator Writer
tgreen@alligator.org

Alabama finished last season atop the college football world, and that's exactly where it begins this season, coming in as the unanimous No. 1 in the alligatorSports' preseason college football poll.

But coach Nick Saban, who has won national championships at both LSU and Alabama, knows that was last season and in order to get back to the top this year, his team will have to stay hungry and stay focused. And that will be no easy feat.

"You really can't look in the rearview mirror and be able to accomplish these things," Saban said at Southeastern Conference Media Days last month. "You have to look forward and stay focused on the present moment in terms of what it takes to be successful."

As if repeating as national champions in college football isn't difficult enough – Nebraska was the last school to win back-to-back titles in 1994 and 1995 (both Associated Press titles) – Alabama will have to replace a lot of components of last year's title-winning team. The Tide lose 11 starters combined on offense and defense, plus their kicker and punter.

Of the losses, Alabama's defense takes the biggest hit, losing eight of 11 starters from last year. Out of those eight defensive players, six were drafted in April's NFL Draft, including linebacker Rolando McClain (105 total tackles, four sacks, two interceptions), cornerbacks Kareem Jackson (49 tackles, 13 passes broken up) and Javier Arenas (71 tackles, five interceptions, five sacks), and behemoth defensive tackle/gap-plugger Terrence Cody (28 tackles, six tackles for a loss).

Despite those losses, Alabama does return a starter at each level of the defense. In the secondary, defensive back Mark Barron returns to lead the defense. He led the team with seven interceptions – including one for a touchdown – and was second in tackles with 76.

At linebacker, Dont'a Hightower returns after an injury that kept him out of all but four games in 2009. Saban has said Hightower could move around on defense and play multiple roles.

On the line, Alabama returns BCS title game MVP Marcell Dareus, who led the team with six and a half sacks last year. However, his status is up in the air, as he is the subject of an ongoing NCAA investigation.

While the defense is going through quite a makeover, the offense should look familiar. The Tide return eight starters, including running back Mark Ingram, who rushed for 1,658 yards and 17 touchdowns en route to becoming the first player in school history to win the Heisman.

Joining Ingram in the backfield is Trent Richardson, who rushed for 751 yards and eight scores as a freshman behind Ingram. The two will combine to form arguably the best one-two punch in college football.

Quarterback Greg McElroy, who hasn't lost a game as a starter since the eighth grade and did an ample job of managing the offense in his first year as a starter for Alabama, also returns, as does his favorite target, wide receiver Julio Jones.

To make things even easier for those skill players on offense, three starters return on the offensive line, so the offense shouldn't lose a step. And if Saban can get the newcomers on defense to buy into his scheme, Alabama is a real threat to repeat as national champions.

Harrison Diamond / Alligator Staff

Alabama Heisman-winning running back Mark Ingram returns this season, along with sophomore Trent Richardson, to give the Crimson Tide a dangerous rushing duo.

MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL

A-Rod becomes youngest ever to hit 600 career homers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez added his own memento to Monument Park, even though retirement remains years off.

After struggling to hit his 600th home run, A-Rod reached the milestone with his usual dramatic flair. He became the youngest player to attain the mighty mark and did it by driving a pitch over Yankee Stadium's center-field fence and into the area where the pinstriped greats are remembered. And remarkably, he did it exactly three years to the day after his 500th homer.

"That's amazing," Rodriguez said. "To the day."

His two-run, first-inning drive off Toronto's Shaun Marcum put New York ahead, and the Yankees coasted to a 5-1 victory over the Blue Jays on a sweltering Wednesday afternoon. The win ended the Yankees' three-game losing streak.

Rodriguez went 9 for 46 after homering on July 22, the longest stretch between Nos. 599 and 600 for any of the seven to reach the mark. He was hitless in his last 17 at-bats.

"It was a relief just to put it past me," he said. "There's no question I was pressing 'cause I wanted to get it out of the way."

Rodriguez

A-Rod reached the milestone after a 12-game drought, connecting with a 2-0 pitch over the middle of the plate for his 17th home run of the season.

Frankie Babilonia, a 23-year-old in his second year as a Yankee Stadium security guard, retrieved the ball and gave it to his supervisor, who had it passed on to Rodriguez. Babilonia got to the ball because another security guard in the area was on break, and he was rewarded with an autographed A-Rod bat.

Babilonia said it was his job to turn in the ball, and he never thought about trying to keep it. In January, the ball a fan caught for A-Rod's 500th homer was auctioned for $103,579.

Babilonia called the day "at the top" of his life experiences.

"Later on in the years, if I ever have children, I'll let them know I was the one who caught the 600th ball," he said.
