Dove to world: Burn will go on

By EMILY FUGGETTA
Alligator Staff Writer

Despite death threats and attempted bribes, the Rev. Terry Jones of the Dove World Outreach Center has a message for Gainesville: The burn is on — for now.

Jones made the announcement at an afternoon press conference Thursday as a crowd of sweaty reporters jostled for camera angles outside the church.

A handful of the church's pastors plan to burn about 200 copies of the Islamic holy book, the Quran, on the property at 5805 Northwest 37th St. on Sept. 11.

"As of right now," he said, "we are not convinced that backing down is the right thing."

Imam Muhammad Munri, president of the Islamic Society of Central Florida, spoke with Jones for about 20 minutes. Afterward, he said Jones didn't agree to cancel the burn but said he would pray about it.

"The pastor was listening, attentive, extremely courteous and said he would consider it," Munri said. "I think the pastor, as a Christian, will follow in the footsteps of Christ and will do the right thing." Luke Jones, Terry Jones' son and a pastor at Dove World Outreach Center, said the church has received hundreds of violent threats and even some offers of money in exchange for canceling the event. But for now, he said, aside from the use of force, the only way the burn will be canceled is if plans for the mosque at Ground Zero are halted.

Nancy Harvell, a 50-year-old Gainesville resident, brought her two young children to the property today to give them a chance to experience history in the making.

"This is history in the making," she said. "It's incredible to me that something like this can happen."

Denise Gridley, a Gainesville resident, protests at the Dove World Outreach Center on Wednesday afternoon. She brought the Rev. Terry Jones a sign because she said Jones just needed a sign in order to not burn the Quran. He plans to burn the Quran on Sept. 11.

Police find body in Gainesville park

Shotgun, cane also found at scene

By JOEY FLECHAS

A male body, estimated to be decaying for five to seven days, was found in northwest Gainesville on Wednesday evening.

A shotgun and a walking cane were found next to the body in Alfred A. Ring Park in an area off of the boardwalk half-way down the trail.

"We want to be as thorough possible."

head of GPD forensic unit

Authorities said at around 6:30 p.m., they received a call from a man who said he found the body after his wife noticed an unusual odor while walking through the park.

Gainesville Police Department Sgt. Martin Krpan, who heads the Forensic Unit, said the body would not be removed until morning, when it is safer and visibility is better.

"We want to be as thorough possible," he said.

He said the body could not yet be identified, nor could the man's age, and it will take DNA records and dental records to do so.

Krpan said the cause of death could not be determined.

Debate at UF canceled

■ RICK SCOTT ANNOUNCED THAT HE WILL ONLY DO TWO DEBATES.

By PAUL RUNNESTRAND
Alligator Staff Writer

A proposed gubernatorial debate at UF, scheduled for Oct. 4, has been canceled due to scheduling conflicts.

"Unfortunately, the timing did not work out," debate co-chairman Jon Philipson said in a press release.

Democratic candidate Alex Sink accepted an invitation to the debate, as well as four others throughout the state, on Aug. 30.

But Republican nominee Rick Scott announced Wednesday he would agree to only two debates, Oct. 20 at Nova Southeastern University in Davie and Oct. 25 at the University of South Florida in Tampa.

The Sink campaign is still pushing for five debates and wants UF on the schedule.

"Alex Sink wants to have five statewide televised debates, including kicking off the debate schedule at the University of Florida in early October," said Kyra Jennings, Sink's press secretary.

Jennings said Scott declining to debate is proof that he is ducking Florida voters.

"Scott would rather talk about national issues through 30-second negative ads than talk directly with UF students and Florida voters about Florida issues," she said.

Representatives from Scott's campaign did not respond by press time.

■ Florida defensive end Justin Trattou and the rest of the unit will be asked to contain dual-threat South Florida quarterback B.J. Daniels when the teams meet Saturday. See Story, Page 17.

Counseling center hosts grand opening

Directors of the Counseling and Wellness Center welcomed visitors to the grand opening of the new building Wednesday afternoon.

The opening ceremony featured speeches from center directors, Student Body President Ashton Charles and UF President Bernie Machen. Staff gave tours afterward, introducing guests to the different departments and showcasing the many spacious therapy rooms.

"Islam is of the Heart" wristbands are offered at UF, countering the "Islam is of the Devil" message of the Dove World Outreach Center.

Bracelets counter Dove message

■ THE BRACELETS READ "ISLAM IS OF THE HEART"

By MINA RADMAN
Alligator Contributing Writer

While Dove World Outreach Center is gaining national attention for its planned Quran burning, one UF student is quietly working to promote peace in Gainesville.

Janice Dees is handing out red and white bracelets on Turlington Plaza to garner support for UF's Muslim community.

The bracelets, which read "Islam is of the Heart," are intended to counter Dove World Outreach Center's anti-Islamic messages.

"Right now the eyes of the world are on Gainesville," Dees said. "If we can, we should show as much support as possible for the Muslim community."

Dees, a 22-year-old UF English senior, has been motivated to take action since spring, when a confrontation with a woman from the small Gainesville church left her outraged.

"I said to her that 'Jesus preached a message of peace, don't you realize this isn't creating peace in your community?' and she replied, 'I don't want peace; I want war,'" Dees said.

When biking past church members one day, a frustrated Dees exclaimed, "Islam is of the heart!"

On Campus She later found the message appropriate for the Livestrong-esque bracelets.

Her slogan is intended to counter the church's message, "Islam is of the Devil."

The controversial message is displayed on a series of signs on the church's property in northwest Gainesville.

Church members have also printed T-shirts with the slogan on them.

Dees spent $60 to order 200 wristbands, hoping to provide students with a convenient and free way to refute the church.

"I feel like by passing these out, I'm taking away [the church's] power and creating a positive atmosphere of love and acceptance," Dees said. "Muslim students shouldn't have to step on campus or in Gainesville and feel like they're an object of hatred. No one should feel that way."

Dees plans to remain on Turlington through Friday and has also collected donations.

Half of the proceeds will go toward the purchase of additional wristbands, and the other half will be sent to flood victims in Pakistan.

She hopes her efforts will turn attention away from the Dove World Outreach Center's actions.

"People who say such things shouldn't have a strong media spotlight," Dees said. "Religion doesn't kill people. People do."

Hough Hall namesake has long history as a Gator

By BRITTANY ALANA DAVIS
Alligator Contributing Writer

When Bill and Hazel Hough donated the self-portrait that hangs in the new William R. Hough Hall, they chose a modern, multidimensional piece from their home in Aspen, Colo.

The Houghs, who donated $30 million, the largest private gift in UF history, to the graduate business programs, said the picture was one of many personal touches they wanted in the building.

"It's much better than a still photo of me in a suit, glowering at the students," Bill Hough said to about 200 people at a Wednesday dedication ceremony.

Hough Hall, on Southwest 13th Street and Hull Road, blends with the surrounding decades-old buildings on UF's campus.

But closer inspection reveals important details: state-of-the-art technology, ultra-modern design and the touch of passionate benefactors. The Houghs helped choose the building's artwork, including four purple and turquoise boats that hang high over the common area and are worth $90,000.

Bill Hough also insisted that the rooms be flexible enough to adjust to new technologies, said Sara Brazda, director of development for the business college.

"They're the perfect partners on something like this," Brazda said. "They've given their input and resources, and they've stayed committed to the project from start to finish. But they also allowed room for the professionals to carry out their own visions." For generations, students will ponder investments and stock prices as they walk through the business graduate building, and many students won't give a passing thought to the donors who made the building a reality.

But who are the people who donated so much time and money to Hough Hall? And what inspired them to give?

Meet Bill and Hazel

Sitting with the Houghs in their sunny, modest apartment, it's immediately easy to like them. Both 83 years old, Bill and Hazel Hough are not snobby or stuffy but curious and cordial. They talk openly about the donations they've made to UF's graduate business program, athletic programs and the Harn Museum. But they aren't bragging.

"I learned a lot at UF, and I feel like it's my duty to give back," said

Courtesy to the Alligator From Ben Simmons, UF News Bureau

Bill Hough speaks Wednesday during the dedication ceremony for William R. Hough Hall. Hough's $30 million gift provided the lead gift for a new building to house graduate business programs.

Bill Hough, who earned a master of business administration.

Every day, he walks two blocks to his office from his downtown St. Petersburg apartment to work as a consultant at the investment company he founded and then operated for 38 years before selling it in 2004.

He loves bonds. And he loves his wife. So at 4:30 p.m. on a Monday when she doesn't feel well, he's anxious to leave work to take care of her.

In the elevator on the way out of the building, the self-described financial conservative fumbles with a can of powdered Gatorade, and then he unwittingly reveals a secret to his financial success.

"My wife is making me take this back to the store," he says with a chuckle. "It has a dent."

Hazel Hough is as warm and worldly as the colorful paintings and sculptures she's fit into every nook of their apartment.

When her husband walks in late, she teasingly scolds him. He gives her a kiss. She lights up when she talks about her travels, recalling her meetings with people in countries such as Thailand and Georgia.

Because of her admiration for the arts, her husband named a wing of St. Petersburg's Museum of Fine Arts after her, she said.

The Houghs and the Gators

Bill Hough attended UF from 1947-1948 as one of two people in the first class of UF's MBA program. He studied hard, but he also socialized with his Kappa Sigma fraternity brothers.

Life at his fraternity house, which was on Southwest 13th Street and Second Avenue, required that he sometimes stay up late playing bridge, he said.

"We slept about 140 men, and I stayed on the back porch," he said with a laugh. "It was cold on that back porch."

On Campus On football game days, Hough and his fraternity brothers walked to the stadium. "The campus was small back then, and few people had cars or bicycles," he said.

The Gator football team didn't win a single SEC game in 1947, but Hough's support for the team was unconditional.

"It was a bad time for Florida football, but we still rooted for them," he said.

Hazel Hough became a Gator later than her husband.

Despite graduating from Florida State University, she's long considered herself a Gator, a title made official in 2007 when the faculty senate named her an honorary alumna.

Hough found out about the honor when she was up reading the St. Petersburg Times one Sunday morning.

"I had to read it twice," she laughed. "I couldn't wait for Bill to wake up so I could tell him."

Bill and Hazel fall in love

Bill and Hazel Hough, then Hazel Clarkson, met in Fort Myers. Her mother and his aunt, who were best friends, were hoping the recent college graduates would hit it off.

"Her mother wanted her to come to my aunt's house for a Coke, and she had just gotten home from the beach, so she didn't feel like it," Bill Hough said. "But she came over anyway. We were both on our guard."

On their third date, Bill Hough picked up his future wife in his blue 1941 Dodge Coupe and took her to see the Harry James Band, a popular swing-era orchestra.

"I fell in love with her at that concert," he said, smiling at the memory.

Bill Hough started an investment company in St. Petersburg, and Hazel Hough worked in merchandising at Burdines department store in Miami.

Tired of the distance, Bill Hough cooked up a conservative proposal. "What would you say if I asked you to marry me?"

She replied, "I don't know, you'll have to ask me first!"

They married in April of 1951, and they have three children.

Success in business

Bill Hough started his investment business, William R. Hough and Co., three years out of graduate school, something he said was possible because of what he learned about stocks, bonds and good investments at UF. In his early twenties, he had to convince clients that he could invest their money well.

"He always looked younger than he was," Hazel said. "But people saw that he was an earnest young man."

Stocks were low when he got into business in the early 1950s, Bill said.

"There was not that much competition and there were very few people entering the investment business at that time. Most investments went up," he said.

But it was his hard work that transformed his small investment company into a powerhouse. To illustrate, he told a story.

One Friday before Christmas, he was supposed to fly from St. Petersburg to Atlanta and then drive to Crestview, in the Florida panhandle, to bid on a bond issue. A blizzard in Atlanta rerouted his flight to Chicago. From Chicago he flew to Memphis, Tenn., where he landed at midnight. He rented a car and drove eight hours to Crestview, arriving only an hour before his 9 a.m. meeting.

"We made the only bid, so we got the deal," he said. "It was worth the journey."

Bill and Hazel today

These days, Bill and Hazel Hough attend UF's major football and basketball games, but health problems prevent them from making it to every home game like they used to.

Even so, they've been to Gainesville often in the past two years to decide on art for Hough Hall, visit their granddaughter who attends UF and go to the Harn Museum.

In St. Petersburg, they've donated to many of the museums and schools visible from the glass wall of their 10th floor apartment, including the Salvador Dali Museum, Eckerd College and St. Petersburg College. "Some people prefer the apartments that are much higher up," Hazel said. "But me, I prefer to be a part of what's happening down on the ground."

'Pike' fraternity to start new chapter after suspension

By ALEXANDER KLAUSNER
Alligator Writer

After a four-year hiatus, the Alpha Eta chapter of Pi Kappa Alpha Fraternity is returning to UF.

The fraternity was suspended following an alcohol-related incident in 2006. The "Pikes" appealed the suspension and won the right to return to campus in 2008.

Now, the fraternity is looking to regroup and revamp its tarnished image.

Over the next six weeks, representatives from the fraternity's international headquarters will be talking with a number of UF officials and Greek community leaders seeking input and recommendations for recruitment.

The recruitment will be entirely recommendation-based. The fraternity will not participate in rush week.

"We're not looking for the typical frat guy. We're looking for a well-rounded individual," said Matt Collette, one of the two men who will be helping rebuild the fraternity. "We're

"We're looking for the most motivated, involved men at the University of Florida."

Matt Collette
UF student

looking for the most motivated, involved men at the University of Florida."

Those interested in joining the fraternity still can but will be subjected to a professional-style interview process, Collette said.

Since the fraternity currently has almost no senior members, it is a unique opportunity for men to help start the new chapter and get in on the ground floor, chapter president Marcus Kraft said.

"We have over 240,000 lifetime initiates of Pi Kappa Alpha," Collette said. "Less than 1 percent of those guys can be considered founding fathers. It's one of the coolest things you can do in the Greek world is to start your own fraternity."

Missing UF alum turns up in hospital in Brazil

■ HE HAD LAST BEEN SEEN ON THE MORNING OF SEPT. 2.

By ELIZABETH BEHRMAN
Alligator Staff Writer

A recent UF graduate who was missing in Rio de Janeiro was found alive in a hospital Wednesday morning.

Horica Ionescu, who graduated from UF in May, was last seen on the morning of Sept. 2 by his host family.

Ionescu was taking classes to become certified to teach English as a second language. When he missed two days of classes, his teacher notified the local police and the U.S. Embassy.

Ionescu's sister, Georgeta, said she and her family knew something was wrong when he skipped class because that was unlike him.

She said they did not think he had been kidnapped because they did not receive a ransom note.

Georgeta said her brother was not injured, but he had been in a Brazilian hospital the entire time he was missing.

UF Alumni She said the hospital staff had trouble determining who he was because he had no identification with him.

She said Horica is talking, but he does not know where he is or what happened to him. Their mother is flying to Rio de Janeiro tomorrow to be with him.

"Something happened to him," Georgeta said.

County fair canceled

By GENNARO SCIBELLI
Alligator Contributing Writer

For the first time in 40 years, the fair won't come to town.

Due to unpaid debts in 2009, the Alachua County Fair Association was denied the opportunity to renew the lease to manage the fairgrounds by the Alachua County Commission.

The nonprofit fair association also failed to submit a required application to the Florida Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services, spokesman Terry McElroy said.

The fair association has been dealing with financial problems since 2008.

In December, the Alachua County government put the fair association on notice, according to Assistant County Manager Rick Drummond.

"It became clear that they lost money on last year's fair, and some vendors were not paid," Drummond said.

In order for the fair association to use the fairgrounds, it needed a payment plan. One of the primary creditors was Gainesville Regional Utilities, who, according to Drummond, was owed more than $30,000. The debt with Gainesville Regional Utilities was settled, but others remain outstanding.

Scott drops planned UF debate

Ouch, Rick. Gators, we just got snubbed. Republican governor candidate Rick Scott announced Wednesday he would agree to only two debates rather than the five Democratic candidate Alex Sink suggested. And the planned debate at UF is off the table thanks to Scott.

Scott is no stranger to snubbing his debate opponents, as he refused to debate Florida Attorney General Bill McCollum Aug. 11 before the Aug. 24 primary, turning the "debate" into a one-man show for McCollum.

Saying this is just another example of Scott trying to hide the truth from Florida voters, Sink's campaign stresses it still wants to hold five public debates within the next two months.

And what does Scott have to hide?

Not much. Just a teensy tiny situation in which he was ousted as the CEO of Columbia/HCA when it committed the largest Medicare fraud in U.S. history, resulting in the company repaying the U.S. government a whopping total of $1.7 billion.

But that's just chunk change for Scott, who one might say (of course, we would never say this), but one might say is trying to buy his ticket to the governor's mansion through nonstop 30-second mudslinging commercials that plague our efforts to watch "Jeopardy!" in peace.

We're glad Scott hasn't completely snubbed Florida voters and his opponent by agreeing to two debates, but Gators, we have to ask ourselves an important question.

Do we really want to elect a governor who is hesitant to speak with us just five times?

But, perhaps more importantly, do we really want to elect a governor who is hesitant to speak with us just five times and who was also the CEO of the company involved in the largest Medicare fraud in U.S. history?

Blame Game

The blame game takes on a different meaning when the stakes suddenly involve more than 200 million gallons of oil, a four-month investigation, 11 lives, ecological calamity and billions of dollars in retribution.

The oil behemoth BP PLC released a 193-page report Wednesday, a report based on its own findings of whose fingers are and should be pointing at whom.

And what did the report find as a major cause of the oil rig's April 20 explosion, which just so happened to become the nation's worst environmental disaster? A sequence of failures.

Really, BP? That's the best you've got? A sequence of failures? Euphemizing an environmental biohazard that has resulted in irreparable harm to our waters, marine life, tourism and ability to fill up our tanks at your overpriced gas stations without feeling like a horrible person who is essentially burning sea turtles alive by stopping there as a "sequence of failures" is like labeling the attack on Pearl Harbor "a bad day."

And after waiting for oil to stop spewing into our Gulf of Mexico for four months, we realize another company actually owned Deepwater Horizon and, yes, we realize certain other companies built parts of the exploding rig that caused these "sequence of failures," but we all know who's ultimately responsible for this "bad day."

It's time to step up and accept responsibility for the mess you've made, BP. The name-calling and blame game is so last year.

As the reggae godfather Bob Marley said, "Before you start pointing fingers, make sure your hands are clean."

Stick it to 'em, Bob.

Concept of justice extremely important

My fraternity, Delta Upsilon, holds justice as its founding and most important principle. It is my sincerest belief that this is the reason the fraternity has persisted since it was founded in 1834.

As president of my fraternity, it is often my duty to convey the meaning of justice to potential new members of my organization during rush week. Fraternity rush recently ended, and I can truly attest that conveying such a strong intangible is no easy feat.

Thus, the idea of justice is both extremely important and personal to me.

The concept of justice is both interpretive and intangible. Of life's virtues, justice often can be one of the most difficult to describe or adhere to. Justice is an integral part of life, and I encourage others to reflect more closely on what justice means and how it can be implemented into action and abidance.

A mere definition of the word justice does little justice to its true meaning. Justice must be experienced and felt as much as, if not more than, its meaning must be understood.

My favorite definition of justice is "truth in action." Truth in action is conduct designed to actively promote what is good, self-consistent and righteous. Justice is not a passive quality; it must be pursued actively and vigilantly.

This concept of justice is particularly personal. Pursuing a just course of action is both interpretive and never readily discernible. Often what is right is not what is necessarily easy or clear. One must recognize tendencies to confuse justice with vengeance or self-gratification.

Justice is more than a lofty moral webbing to live by; it is necessary to the successful continuity of society and to preserve natural, unalienable rights for all humans.

Aristotle identified greed and unlawfulness as the opposite of justice. Plato wrote frequently of the Athenian democracy being on the verge of ruin due to excessive individualism and self-service, to which he said justice is the required remedy. Plato goes on to describe justice as a social virtue necessary to maintain an inherently harmonious and good society.

Bryan Griffin
letters@alligator.org

As the ancient thinkers considered justice a necessary component of a functioning, good society, so must we turn to justice to approach the defining issues of our time.

In many circumstances, our country now faces tumultuous and greatly influential decisions to be made. It is essential that both the citizens and the leaders of this country resort to justice when determining the path our country is to follow.

We must pursue justice at home. Our country must work to maintain the integrity of our justice system. It is one of the most uncorrupted and independent in the world.

We must pursue justice abroad and recognize our responsibility to correct the gravest of atrocities committed against human beings.

We must aggressively work with international efforts to end the most egregious acts of human abuse and take a strong stand as a country against others, such as Iran, that knowingly allow such acts to persist.

We must pursue justice within ourselves and strive to be good to one another.

In the words of Albert Einstein, "In matters of truth and justice, there is no difference between large and small problems, for issues concerning the treatment of people are all the same."

Attention only fuels fanatics' fire

Until Sept. 11, we saw terrorists as nothing but extremists who had taken their violent turn in history. After Sept. 11, it became a public religious battle where extremists have now taken to the streets and to legislation.

This year, a mosque is fighting for its natural right to exist in New York City as many opponents are claiming it's a victory lap for the Muslim community.

This extremism has been seeping into our beloved town. The group, whose name I refuse to have in this letter based on principle, is planning a "Burn a Quran Day" as another way for the group to get the attention their parents probably neglected to give them.

Now, of course, we have many religiously tolerant groups making petitions to stop it and planning rallies against it, but are we approaching it the right way?

The point is that, when a child throws a fit, you don't justify it by acknowledging him or her. Ignore the child and don't give him or her attention. These people are only doing this because their message is heard further by word of mouth, and not by theirs, but ours. The more we let them offend us, the more they win.

Inaction similar to support of Dove

As a former Gainesville resident, I'm displeased with the reaction to the Dove World Outreach Center's planned "Burn a Quran Day." Students need to use their education and make sure these people know they do not represent Gainesville.

Not only is this a slap in the face to those working for understanding in this country, but to all residents of Gainesville who do not share the same sentiments as these people. This is exactly the type of situation that warrants a gigantic protest and perhaps huge bottles of water and dozens of fire extinguishers.

This story is awful, but imagine how empowering it would be to show up to their burn fest and stop it dead in its tracks? Students need to assume their rightful place in the world as mediators of idiocy. This is happening in your backyard. Students need to take back their town from these dumb hicks. The number of students definitely beats out a few dozen people who need to crawl back under the rock from which they came. If students can protest the UF police for using a Taser, they can certainly protest a group of dummies who will bring physical harm to themselves and our countrymen serving overseas.

Let's demonstrate to the world that there are still some people in this country who give a crap about free exercise of religion, not just using purchasing power to shut down their couch-selling business they have going on the side. The U.S. won't regain its reputation for standing up for religious and social freedoms in the world unless the world can see that this is only a small part of what makes us whole.

Inaction is the same as participating in this atrocity. Just going about your day and not making a stand against ignorance is a waste of time and money. What good is an education if you keep it to yourself?

your guide to going out — for fashion

“Fashion is disposable,” said Matthew Turner, Wolfgang owner and organizer of Gainesville’s Fashion’s Night Out. “It’s not necessary the way that eating is or maintaining your car is. Fashion is lower on the totem pole. The fashion industry has definitely suffered.”

Tell that to these ladies (illustrated above)! Calling all Gainesville fashionistas: Friday night is your night. As Gainesville celebrates in the spirit of the global Fashion’s Night Out event, we have your guide to going out in the name of couture. And ease up on the jorts jokes, please.

Gainesville Goes All Out for Fashion's Night Out

By ALLISON BANKO
Avenue Writer

Seldom does the Devil do interviews. When she does, you better bet that she's got a damned good reason — and that she'll be dripping in designer. Earlier this month, Vogue magazine's editor Anna Wintour was seen in a rare interview on NBC's "Late Night with Jimmy Fallon." For September is when she thrives. This month's famed September issue of Vogue is bound with 532 astounding pages of fashion. Mercedes-Benz Fashion Week kicks off today. Yet Wintour was seated on Fallon's scarlet couch cushions to, instead, promote the largest fashion party in history — and everyone is invited.

Friday marks the second annual Fashion's Night Out, an event that stores across the world — including our very own Gainesville — will be participating in by keeping their doors open until 11 p.m.

"We started it about 18 months ago when everybody was really in retail doldrums," Wintour told Fallon. "The idea was just to, really, have the world inspired by fashion again and understand how much fun it was and get them back into the stores."

The spirit of Fashion's Night Out is sweeping stores across the world, from the hangers of the United States to the shelves of the United Kingdom to the dressing rooms of Greece. Not surprisingly, Alachua County is not an official participant for this year's Fashion's Night Out — it's holding one of its own.

The second annual Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out: A Local Celebration of Fashion, will take place Friday from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Yet, while the global Fashion's Night Out includes specialty stores, department stores and boutiques alike, Gainesville's take is more focused to give attention to locally owned businesses — a realm that has taken a huge blow in respect to the recession.

"Fashion is disposable," said Matthew Turner, organizer of Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out and Wolfgang owner. "It's not necessary the way that eating is or maintaining your car is. Fashion is lower on the totem pole. The fashion industry has definitely suffered."

Shoppers instead have been opting to strap their cash for inexpensive duds at specialty stores in malls, where clothing is cheap, plentiful and there's no guarantee that you won't see your outfit on 30 others around campus.

"There's definitely a difference in shopping in a [local] boutique than there is shopping in [a specialty store]," Turner said. "There's something a little more unique about shopping at a [boutique]."

"Customers get more special attention and unique items. We remember your name and hook you up with deals whenever we can. It's about shopping locally and keeping your money in the city."

And while Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out isn't necessarily the real deal, Turner is making sure the event stays true to its roots.

The original event was birthed in New York City last year, with a slew of celebrities making appearances in stores throughout the Big Apple to celebrate the fashion industry in the midst of an economic downturn. Mary-Kate and Ashley Olsen tended bar at Bergdorf Goodman, Gwen Stefani appeared at Bloomingdales and Justin Timberlake appeared at Saks Fifth Avenue — and that's just skimming the surface.

But don't be mistaken. This is an event of sophistication and need not be confused for something like Black Friday.

Mothers will not be trampling over one another in efforts of snagging a Tickle Me Elmo.

Wintour makes it very clear that this is not a humongous "sale" event. Rather, Fashion's Night Out is a celebration of fashion with featured specialties at each store, such as cocktails, live music or store raffles for designer goodies.

On this side of town, each location will have offers similar to the global event, with cocktails, freebies, raffles and — shh...don't tell Wintour — sales and discounts.

Keeping it focal on the local, Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out will be held not only amongst boutiques, but locally owned salons, clubs and bars as well.

"It's a good opportunity to stimulate businesses across the board," Turner said. "Salons you've never been to, clubs you've never been to. It's a way to give cool businesses around the area a boost."

Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out also makes a game out of the event.

Participants will purchase a "FNO" card for $5, which will serve as a pass to exclusive deals and goodies to be punched at all participating businesses.

The first shopper to return to Wolfgang — the home base for the evening — with their card fully punched will receive a grand prize of gifts from all participating Fashion's Night Out boutiques (last year's included T-shirts, purses, gift cards and salon products).

The next 10 shoppers to finish their card will also receive goodie bags filled with treats from the boutiques as well.

It's a race to the fashion finish, so you better be able to run in your heels.

Gear up for Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out

1. Purchase a $5 FNO Card at Wolfgang, starting at 6 p.m.
2. Join the Facebook group: "2nd Annual Gainesville's Fashion's Night Out!!" for updates.
3. Dress to impress: The key word in the event title is "fashion," so plan accordingly if you're heading out straight from class.
4. And on that note, wear comfy shoes — unless you don't mind running in heels.
5. Bring a posse: Some friendly competition can't hurt (although all is fair in love and shopping when someone else takes that last pair of strappy sandals).

I wish I had my roomie's girl

Dear Jared,
My roommate's girlfriend is really hot. Like really hot. Lately, she's been kind of throwing me some hints that she thinks I'm kind of hot too (we're talking eye contact, intense flirting, striking up random convos on Facebook chat). I obviously wouldn't want to piss off my roommate, or ruin our friendship, but am I a horrible person for pursuing his girl? Does she sound for real?
-Hot for Roommate's Girl

Jared Misner
Columnist

Whoa, random Facebook chat and eye contact? Maybe soon, if you play your girlfriend-stealing cards right, she'll "like" your keg stand default picture, you big Casanova, you!

And, to answer your other question, yes, you are a horrible person and probably a worse friend. I certainly wouldn't want to be in that all-too-familiar hypothetical situation where we somehow find ourselves on a deserted island in the middle of the Pacific, and you're given the choice between gnawing my arm off or calling for help. Clearly, as a hypothetical roommate, and fellow castaway, I'd come out looking real funny in a one-sleeved T-shirt.

Nonverbal and, as in your case, ambiguous digital cues mean different things to different people. Perhaps your roommate's girlfriend really is just interested in your social media musings or your affinity for bonsai gardening.

Or, then again, perhaps she really does want to rummage through your artfully landscaped front lawn. There's a fine line between flirting and seducing, and sometimes the line involves nothing more than a good (gardening) hoe. But, you've put yourself in a sticky situation in more ways than one.

First, how long is your apartment lease? Because if it turns out your roommate's girlfriend actually wants to sample the flavorings of your entire apartment, rather than sticking to her own entrée, dinner time at your apartment might get a bit awkward when no one passes the potatoes to you.

Then again, if you decide to step up your A-game and move past bonsai gardening into unknown territory, you might find yourself soliciting a woman who has no interest in you pulling out the old wheelbarrow.

But in reality, we've all found ourselves in the taboo world of the apple in Eve's Garden where we lust for that luscious Red Delicious.

It's a difficult position, and no, you aren't actually a horrible person. We've all been there, and it's natural to want to do what they do on the Discovery Channel with your roommate's girlfriend. Because she's something you can't have.

Then again, time changes people. Cravings change. Flavors mix. And you ain't nothing but mammals, right? Keep playing your cards right.

THE A LIST

By Melinda Carstensen

Each Thursday, the Avenue is serving up the best in entertainment, pop culture and everything in between. From the big screen to the radio waves, check out this week's picks.

see Resident Evil: Afterlife (in 3-D)

Seems like everything's in 3-D these days, including the video game adaptation of "Resident Evil: Afterlife," which hits theaters Friday. The film's heroine, Alice (Milla Jovovich), continues her quest to save the suffering innocent, but this time they seek refuge in Los Angeles. Expect to be knocked dead (no pun intended) by the special effects - we're talking about 3-D zombies, after all.

listen Monster

"Monster" sure is a monster of a song, including not only some of rap's most familiar faces but also indie folk band Bon Iver. But some things never change: On the track, West stays true to his self-lauding swagger, rapping, "Everybody knows I'm a mother[expletive] monster." The track is one of five due out on "Watch the Throne," a Jay-Z/Kanye West collaboration EP that doesn't yet have a release date.

click Dancing Dog

This furry friend would definitely land a spot on "Dancing with the Dogs" - if that were a real show. Try not to smile when you watch this golden retriever in a sparkly green skirt hop and twirl around on its hind legs, doing the meringue. Sure, videos of dancing dogs on YouTube aren't exactly hard to find, but what makes this one so impressive is the canine's stamina and apparent joy for doing the Haitian-Creole dance. We admit it: This pup could totally out-do us on the dance floor.

watch 2010 MTV Video Music Awards

It's music's big night, and viewers can expect a whole new brand of shenanigans at this year's award show because comedienne Chelsea Handler is the host. Enough said. Lady Gaga leads in nominations with 13, although the pop queen won't be taking the stage again with another gory interpretation of one of her hit anthems. Not to worry, though: MTV's got a wealthy lineup of stars to fill that void, including Justin Bieber, Usher, Paramore and Kanye West, whose unforgettable interruption of Taylor Swift's speech last year will likely be mocked at this year's presentation. Watch the awards show on MTV, Sunday at 9 p.m. (EST).

At least once during your educational career at UF, you've had one or will have one of those dreaded three-hour classes. Being trapped in those walls for longer than 50 minutes can put the mind into a zoned-out coma.

Luckily for you, there are some awesomely distracting websites to get you through. Here's a few:

Stumbleupon.com

This site is the daddy of all time wasters. You tell it your interests, and it finds cool stuff from everywhere. Warning: You may not be able to stop stumbling once you start.

Gainesvillemugs.com

For the voyeur in all of us. This site shows mugshots of everyone arrested in Alachua County in the past month or so AND the crimes they committed. You may even have friends on the site right now and not even know it. What are you waiting for?

Supermariobrosrossover.com

Have you ever wanted to play the original Super Mario Bros. game with Mega Man, Simon from Castlevania or Ryu from Shinobi? Super Mario Bros. crossover is the original 8-bit game, but you can use other characters from the Nintendo era. Just remember to minimize your windows when appropriate.

Gators defense focuses on containing QB Daniels

Steven H. Keys / Alligator Staff

UF's Justin Trattou, along with the rest of the team's defensive linemen, will need to stay in their gaps against USF quarterback B.J. Daniels on Saturday.

By TYLER JETT
Alligator Staff Writer
tjett@alligator.org

Gators defensive line coach Dan McCarney was proud of his front four after the group held Miami (Ohio) to four rushing yards last Saturday. But he knows the Florida defense faces a much tougher ground attack this week against South Florida.

The Gators will face a dual-threat quarterback in B.J. Daniels, who led the Bulls with 772 yards and nine touchdowns on the ground last season.

Coaches have told their players to keep an eye on Daniels throughout every play this week, and the line will be charged with keeping him in the pocket.

"B.J. Daniels is a great player," linebacker Jelani Jenkins said. "We'll definitely have our hands full. We're watching him on tape, trying to figure out ways we can stop him."

McCarney, who coached at USF when Daniels signed, compared him to former Iowa State quarterback Seneca Wallace, who played for McCarney from 2001-2002.

"(Daniels) can turn a bad play into a good one, a good one into a great one, a no-play into a heck of a play," McCarney said. "If you're just going to tee-off and just collapse the pocket and run up the field, he'll pull it up and run."

Offense opening up: After managing just 25 yards through the first three quarters last weekend, the Gators gained 187 yards and scored two touchdowns in the fourth quarter. The team made a conscious effort at halftime to open up the offense, coach Urban Meyer said.

Four of quarterback John Brantley's first five passes to start the game were thrown near the line of scrimmage, which he said was part of the team's game plan.

Meyer blamed the team's conservative play calling on the now-infamous 13 botched snaps.

"When you get out of rhythm as many times as we did in the first half, it's tough," he said.

Football

The Gators will be more explosive if their quarterback-center exchange becomes consistent, Meyer said.

D-Line Rotation: Defensive coordinator Teryl Austin said the Gators played defensive linemen Jaye Howard and Justin Trattou too much last week. He said the team needs to keep its biggest players fresh and give inexperienced players a chance to improve.

"We've got to try to get some rotation, especially when it's as hot as it is," Austin said. "They're taking on double teams and getting cut every play, so it's really important to develop some depth."

Receivers blocking: Omaris Hines said the team has yet to find a receiver who blocks as well as Riley Cooper, who exhausted his eligibility last fall.

Meyer criticized his receivers last weekend for poor blocking, and the group has focused on that area all week in practice, including a long session Tuesday, Hines said.

"We got to be able to block on the perimeter in order for us to be successful and have big plays," he said.

Injuries, Suspensions: Left tackle Xavier Nixon (knee) has practiced with the team this week and he could be back in the lineup Saturday, Meyer said.

He also expects defensive tackle Terron Sanders (knee) and guard Carl Johnson (suspension) to be available to play Saturday.

Left tackle Matt Patchan (wrist), however, is still in a long cast and will miss "a few weeks."

iTebow: Former quarterback Tim Tebow went viral Wednesday, launching an official Twitter account, a Facebook page and his own website, www.timtebow.com.

These moves were handled by his company, XV Enterprises, to increase Tebow's marketability.

Game not a rivalry for UF, but USF has a chance to make it one

You've got space cleared on your floor for a blow-up mattress, maybe even a neatly folded towel ready if you take pride in being a host.

The plan goes like this: show your Tampa buddies some fun on Friday, putting up with their chatter about the Rays, how USF is a budding college football superpower and how, "Dude, you seriously have to come check out Mons Venus. You can touch them!"

You let them talk all they want because, in your mind, you're just giving them rope to hang themselves after your Gators make mincemeat out of their Bulls on Saturday.

This has been your idea ever since the game came onto the schedule. USF fans want to act big and bad? OK, Florida will provide the wake-up call.

For students — especially those with friends in Tampa — it's a big deal.

For players? Well, listen to this slip of the tongue from UF cornerback Janoris Jenkins on Wednesday.

"We're looking forward to UCF."

Ouch.

Jenkins didn't mean it as a slight; it just slipped out. And for what it's worth, he said "Of course" when asked if the Bulls' program belongs among UF, Miami and FSU as the state's elite.

But Jenkins would never accidentally call the Seminoles or Hurricanes by the wrong name, and that shows how much of a "rivalry" this truly is.

It sounds like they're proudly talking about their little brother, and the sibling down I-75 hasn't come out with much trash talk either.

A Lane Kiffin-esque leader would kick start a rivalry, but USF coach Skip Holtz and UF coaches and players have had nothing but positive comments about USF this week, raving about quarterback B.J. Daniels and how far the program has come in the past few years.

But there's no underlying fear or disdain

UF's Urban Meyer are far from that.

Holtz helped land Meyer his first job at Notre Dame, and they've gushed about each other in interviews.

And really, who wouldn't love Skip? Holtz and I have a strained relationship since he bailed on my beloved East Carolina Pirates, but deep down, he's a hero of mine because he wins and seems like a genuinely good guy while doing it.

But Holtz isn't driving up to Gainesville to smile at his ol' pal Urban and take a whooping.

He knows this role, and he plays it well.

TEERING OFF WITH TYLER JETT

■ A certain Gators running back recently sent the following e-mail to his Facebook friends: "Chris Rainey suggested you like Chris Rainey..." I do now! ... Mike Tyson recently said his biggest regret in life was not smoking weed with Tupac. A surprising proclamation from the man who claimed to be "burning up" from gonorrhea during that Trevor Berbick title fight.

Doo attitude, he was always trying to get his school on the map.

Like the Bulls, Pirates fans have long considered themselves on par with the best teams in their state, and they've largely been ignored because those other teams' fans have bigger fish to fry.

Holtz thrived in that position, taking down West Virginia and Virginia Tech to open the 2008 season, then winning back-to-back Conference USA titles.

He's in the same spot at USEF, where the Bulls are trying to earn everyone's respect.

They don't have it yet, but things could change in the course of a few hours in The Swamp.

Conquering Florida would give the Bulls road wins against the Gators and 'Noles in two years, and that's the only way to make this a real rivalry.

If that happens, you can bet UF players would remember the school's name.

NCAA FOOTBALL

Green suspended for next three games

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia star receiver A.J. Green was suspended by the NCAA for four games Wednesday for selling a jersey for $1,000 to someone who qualifies as an agent.

Green sold his jersey from last season's Independence Bowl. The junior, who sat out the season opener against Louisiana-Lafayette, must miss three more games before regaining his eligibility, according to the ruling from the NCAA.

No. 22 Georgia plays at No. 24 South Carolina on Saturday.

The ruling comes after much speculation that Green was involved in the NCAA's probe into improper benefits given by agents to athletes at several schools, including North Carolina.

Part of the probe was a party at Miami Beach. Green insisted he didn't attend the party, but Wednesday's announcement showed the NCAA was looking at other benefits received by the player.

Georgia says Green has repaid the $1,000 to a charity.

Green issued an apology to Georgia coaches, his teammates and fans "for the mistake in judgment" in a statement released by the school.

"I very much regret all that has taken place and the distraction that's been caused," Green said. "I've learned a valuable lesson and hope others can learn from my mistake. I can only focus my attention now on practicing and looking ahead to getting back with my teammates as quickly as possible."

The 6-foot-4 Green is rated as one of the top receivers in the nation. He is projected as a possible top-five pick in the 2011 NFL draft.

Green recorded 53 catches for 808 yards and six touchdowns in 2009 despite missing all or part of five games due to injuries.

The loss of Green is a blow to Georgia's hopes in the Southeastern Conference's Eastern Division before the crucial game at South Carolina.

"Certainly I'm disappointed with the outcome," coach Mark Richt said. "However, we have games to play and that's where our focus needs to be in the coming days and weeks. Other players will have to step forward and I'm confident they will do that."

Receiver Tavarres King, who was charged with underaged possession of alcohol this summer, served a one-game suspension against Louisiana-Lafayette and returns this week.

RECRUITING

Prized Florida recruit plays multiple skill positions

Mike Blakely doesn't know yet where he wants to play next season, but the Bradenton Manatee High running back has an idea of how coaches would like to utilize him at the college level.

"Basically all the schools I've talked to have talked to me about the wildcat," Blakely said after his team's preseason 48-10 dismantling of Tampa Plant High on Aug. 27.

In a rematch of last season's Class 5A State Championship, Blakely showed why college coaches have approached him about taking snaps in the wildcat formation.

The four-star running back, according to Rivals.com, rushed for 156 yards on five carries and scored four touchdowns against Plant's defense, which is anchored by five-star FSU oral commit James Wilder Jr.

And while many eyes were on Wilder, the No. 3 recruit in the nation, it was Blakely who drew attention in the preseason matchup.

Of his four touchdowns, three came on the ground, including a six-yard scamper that displayed his ability to beat the defense around the edge.

Blakely's fourth score came through the air on a play that looked familiar to anyone who watched the Gators during the Tim Tebow era. Blakely took a direct snap and tossed a two-yard jump pass over the defense.

His most notable highlight, though, came on a 90-yard run in which he gashed Plant's defense and overcame a facemask grab by Wilder before sprinting to the end zone.

"He's multitalented," Manatee coach Joe

Kinnan said. "He can run. He can throw. He's got speed. He's got power. He's got moves and he can catch."

Blakely again displayed his versatility Saturday when Manatee traveled to Pennsylvania for its season opener against Woodland Hills (Pa.) High. He rushed for 86 yards and gained 30 receiving yards.

He also scored a 13-yard touchdown off a direct snap from the shotgun formation.

Kinnan compared Blakely to former Manatee greats Shevin Wiggins and Tyrone Williams, who both went to Nebraska. Wiggins was Florida's Mr. Football in 1993 before playing wingback in college, and Williams was an NFL cornerback for nine seasons.

At 5-foot-9, 195 pounds, Blakely is bigger than those two were in high school, Kinnan said. But he is just as versatile and fast as they were, running a 4.4 40-yard dash.

"Since the ninth grade, [Blakely] has been our backup quarterback, too," Kinnan said. "He's good enough to win with, but that's not his position in college."

Unlike Wiggins and Williams, though, Blakely doesn't have Nebraska on his radar. Florida, Auburn and South Carolina are his leading choices and he plans to visit all three schools this season. He has already set up a visit to Auburn when it hosts South Carolina on Sept. 25.

While most coaches have talked to Blakely about running the wildcat, he said Florida has discussed using him as its slot receiver, also known as the "Percy Position."

"They see me as a very versatile person because I can throw the ball, I can run the ball, I can catch the ball, return, anything," Blakely said after the Plant game. "That's like what Percy Harvin did there — he just had a little more speed than me."

UF VOLLEYBALL

Jaeckel, Rivers filling up stat sheets for Gators

By GREG LUCA

It really isn't surprising when a team's starting outside hitters are two of its top-three kill producers. In fact, it's expected.

But when those same two players also rank in the top three in aces, digs and service receptions, it can be a shocking indicator of just how great a role they play in the squad's success.

For No. 4 Florida, those players are Kristy Jaeckel and Callie Rivers, who have played major parts in each of UF's five opening wins.

"(Rivers and Jaeckel) do so much more for us besides just attacking," coach Mary Wise said. "They anchor the serve receive, they are a big part of our blocking scheme, they play back-row defense ... we ask so much of those two."

Outside hitters are invariably called upon to carry the brunt of a team's offensive load, and Rivers and Jaeckel are no different.

To this point in the young season, the duo ranks first and second on the team in total attacks, with Jaeckel leading at 129 and Rivers checking in right behind at 111.

But even when attacks and kills aren't coming with their normal consistency, Jaeckel and Rivers have proven they are still valuable assets.

In Saturday's match against Colorado State, the outside hitters combined for a .001 hitting percentage but teamed up for 27 digs and 2.5 blocks.

"When the hitting is not there, we're still going to do everything that we can to contribute to the team's success," Jaeckel said. "We're going to have off matches and we know that, and even though it's not ideal, it's going to happen. The encouraging thing is how well our team still played even with us not playing our 'A' game."

Despite enduring a poor offensive performance, the pair of upperclassmen have yet to disappoint defensively.

Rivers and Jaeckel currently rank in the team's top three in both service receptions and digs, trailing only libero Erin Fleming in each category.

The outside hitters are typically targeted by the other team's servers, as the tall attackers are expected to struggle defensively.

"You have to know every single match that every [ball] is going to come after you," Jaeckel said. "You just have to embrace it."

And embrace it they have, as Rivers (.961) and Jaeckel (.951) check in just behind Fleming (.966) in reception percentage.

Rivers and Jaeckel have also performed admirably on the opposite side of the service equation. Rivers leads the team with nine aces, and Jaeckel currently ranks third with five.

Those figures are just one product of the Gators' aggressive serving scheme, which is designed to pick up uncontested points and keep the opposition's offense in check.

"Serving aggressively is a huge asset of ours," Rivers said. "Especially against really big and powerful teams. You have to serve hard or else they're going to have four attack options and be really hard to defend."

Because a strong service game can keep an offense from establishing a flow and getting into rhythm, Florida knows sharp serves will be more important than ever this Friday, when it takes on No. 1 Penn State.

"Serving hard against anyone is going to help," Rivers said, "but of course serving hard against a team that has three All-American hitters in the front row is going to be a huge key for us."
