A second suspect prosecutors say is responsible for the 2012 murder of a 78-year-old disabled Gainesville man could face the death penalty in a trial that started this week.

Austin M. Jones of Mulberry, Fla., is facing several charges including first-degree murder, kidnapping and robbery, according to court records. Jones, 24, and his cousin broke into the home of Paul Quandt, who later died in the hospital after he was beaten, stabbed and shocked with a Taser.

Jones' cousin, 25-year-old Maranda J. Martin, was convicted last year on similar charges.

the Taser, according to Alligator archives.

Police said the pair took a safe with more than $20,000 in gold, silver, cash, guns and electronics then sped away in Quandt's white Cadillac, according to archives.

They left Quandt at the house with his hands taped together. He was able to slip out of the tape using cooking oil, and he crawled to a neighbor's house to ask for help before slipping into a coma, according to archives. He died eight days later at UF Health Shands Hospital.

State Attorney's Office spokesman Darry Lloyd said the trial is expected to last three weeks, which includes a phase to determine whether Jones should receive the death penalty.

Sen. Bill Nelson and former Gov. Charlie Crist spoke at UF this week after the state denied use of the Reitz Union as an early voting site.

The politicians came to voice their opinions about the state legislature's exclusion of educational facilities from its list of possible early voting centers, which was expanded in 2013.

Crist, who visited the campus briefly on Wednesday at a rally on Turlington Plaza, called on the crowd of roughly 100 to contact Gov. Rick Scott and Florida's Secretary of State Ken Detzner.

"The last thing they ought to do to you is keep you from voting," he said.

Lauren Nickoloff, the president of the UF College Democrats, said the club is already planning to send letters and call state legislators.

"We want to make sure that they know we are not happy with what they are doing," said Nickoloff, a 20-year-old UF political science and

If you thought the SEC rivalry ended with football, think again.

The conference's latest competition leaves the field and enters the kitchen for an epic pizza-making showdown, and Gainesville's own Satchel's has recently decided to accept its invitation to represent The Gator Nation.

The first South Eastern Pizza Classic will take place April 19 in Oxford, Miss., during the Oxford Beer Festival, and will involve small artisan pizza shops representing their SEC football teams.

The winner of the competition will receive a trip to Italy and an invitation to join a group of competitive pizza makers called the U.S. Pizza Team.

Festival coordinator Darryl Parker said the rivalry should help increase event participation — even from far-away places like Florida.

RESEARCH

Grant to fund creation of FOSSIL network

SONIA PORTALUPPI

Alligator Contributing Writer

Amateur paleontologists are hoping to bring ancient history to the 21st century.

UF researchers will use a four-year, $1.97 million National Science Foundation grant to create a national network of amateur and professional paleontologists.

"Here's an opportunity where we can get people from different parts of the country that have like interests to communicate," said Bruce MacFadden, the vertebrate paleontology curator at the Florida Museum of Natural History.

The FOSSIL Project — Fostering Opportunities for Synergistic STEM with Informal Learners — will create connections with fossil clubs and societies around the country to educate amateurs and help digitalize fossils for collections.

The project's long-term goals include an interactive website where users can input data, submit requests for information and connect with other paleontologists.

"It creates an interface between researchers and amateur collectors, which can be used as an outreach opportunity for the general public," said Arianna

Harrington, a UF biology graduate student and research assistant.

To begin building the relationship, amateur paleontologists have been invited to participate in the North American Paleontological Convention on Saturday at the Florida Museum of Natural History.

Harrington said the community seems excited about the potential.

"Now with social networking and information being so permeable from one region to another ... the digitalization of fossils can be considered a direct result of how global things are getting," she said.

A capella semi-finals coming

▶ IT WILL BE AT THE PHILLIPS CENTER.

For the second year in a row, voices from across the state will sing sans instruments at UF for the International Championship of Collegiate A Cappella 2014 Tournament.

The competition will be held Saturday at noon at the Curtis M. Phillips Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets can be purchased at the UFPA box office for $10 or online.

The event is the ICCA South Quarterfinal No. 4, which is traditionally scheduled at a university central to the participating groups.

Spencer Jordan, a 19-year-old UF family, youth and community sciences and English sophomore, is a part of No Southern Accent, the a cappella group at UF that is hosting the event.

"We really, really enjoy having the home-field advantage, which doesn't really mean too much in a cappella," Jordan said. "It just means that your friends and family get to be in the audience more so than if we went to Georgia."

He said there's UF camaraderie while performing on campus but also a healthy competitive spirit.

No Southern Accent hosted the competition last year when it sold out University Auditorium, which is why it was moved to the Phillips Center.

A cappella groups from UF, the University of Miami, the University of Central Florida, Florida State University and Nova Southeastern University will be included in the lineup.

Alexa Gedigian, a 22-year-old UF public relations senior, will be competing at the ICCA for the second time.

Gedigian is the business manager for the Sedoctaves, the all-female a cappella group at UF, which hasn't competed since 2011.

"Competition is really fun, but at the end of the day ... we all represent the University of Florida, and we're so proud to have it here," she said.

Man arrested for carrying revolver, 100 ammo rounds

JENNA LYONS

Alligator Staff Writer

jlyons@alligator.org

Gainesville Police arrested a local man Tuesday after police reported he was carrying a gun and 100 rounds of ammunition in his backpack with no permit.

Ciano

Officers arrested 27-year-old Philip Beaven Ciano on charges of carrying concealed weapons, according to an arrest report.

At about midnight, an officer noticed Ciano riding his bicycle without proper lights on Northwest 23rd Terrace.

When asked for ID, Ciano put his bag on the ground and started looking for his ID when the officer spotted the grip of a .22 caliber revolver in the backpack, according to the report. The officer tackled him to the ground. The gun was fully loaded.

During questioning, Ciano said he had been shooting in the woods earlier and forgot to take the gun out of his backpack. He said his mother was with him and could confirm his story.

When officers contacted her, she said the events never happened and told police her son is "mentally unstable and severely depressed," according to the report.

Ciano told officers he bought the ammunition earlier at Wal-Mart. Officers asked Ciano if a surveillance video would show him buying the ammunition, and he changed his story, saying he actually bought it a week ago at M&C Army Surplus.

Ciano was booked into the Alachua County Jail at about 1:30 a.m. Wednesday, where he remained as of press time in lieu of a $40,000 bond.

Phillips Center ranks 'amazing'

It brings diverse acts

EMILY JULSON

Alligator Contributing Writer

UF's Curtis M. Phillips Center for the Performing Arts was ranked 20th overall in a national ranking of college campus theaters.

The center was ranked in "The 25 Most Amazing College Campus Theaters" by the Best College Reviews this week.

It was the only Florida school to make the list.

The center hosts national and international artists from around the world as well as student productions.

It's one of the largest college theaters in the nation, with seating for about 1,700 in the main hall and an additional 200 seats in the Black Box Theatre.

Some other highlights in the review include the center's fountain and all-glass window exterior.

Michael Blachly, the director of UF Performing Arts, attributed the center's value to its staff and audience. He said the center has an exceptional professional crew that is highly skilled in production and publicity.

"We have a strong base of audience support."

Michael Blachly

"Our programs reach a broad, diverse audience," Blachly said. "We have a strong base of audience support."

Todd Taylor, the public relations associate for the UF Performing Arts, said the variety of multicultural performances attract a wide audience.

"Artists come from all corners of the globe," Taylor said. "We have dancers coming in from India, orchestras coming in from Russia, and students are able to see these types of performances right on campus."

However, Alejandra Nash, a 21-year-old UF marketing and event management junior and former intern at the Samuel P. Harn Museum of Art, said the UF Cultural Plaza, where the center is located, has one main problem: parking.

"One time, there was an event at the Harn Museum and the Phillips Center at the same time, and there wasn't enough parking, even with the garage," Nash said. "Old people had to park by the lacrosse fields. They shouldn't have to do that."

UF Bookstore parent company to manage stadium stores

BEATRICE DUPUY

Alligator Staff Writer

Follett, the corporation in charge of the UF Bookstore, will soon manage all UF stadium sports stores and stands.

Starting Feb. 27, Follett will run all stores formerly managed by the LIDS Sports Group, because the contract was discontinued.

UF's contract with the bookstore will be a separate contract from the sports stores on campus. Mike Spiegler, senior associate athletics director, said Follett will sell all current inventories in the stores.

"If they're taking over, I won't be buying as much UF stuff on campus."

Nicole Neugebauer

UF business freshman

"We reached out to Follett since they were already here on campus," he said. "They do a great job at the bookstore. It's a good fit for everyone at UF."

Follett, like LIDS Sports Group, will pay UF a percentage of what they sell from the merchandise.

Nicole Neugebauer, a 19-year-old UF business freshman, said she's concerned the prices will be expensive like the UF Bookstore merchandise.

"The stuff in the bookstore is a little overpriced," she said. "If they're taking over, I won't be buying as much UF stuff on campus."

But Lynne Vaughan, director of UF Bookstores, said prices will mostly remain the same.

"We are working to bring in new inventory for the stores as well," she said.

Stadium store and stand employees will retain their current positions for the change.

Mayor Braddy said it's a campaign ploy

Gainesville city attorney Nicolle Shalley sent an inquiry to Scott's administration regarding whether the Reitz Union could be used as an early voting center. In an advisory opinion responding to Gainesville's request, Maria Matthews of the Florida Division of Elections stated educational facilities are not covered under the terms "convention center" and "government-owned community center."

Nelson, at Monday's press conference in the Reitz Union, said Scott's administration is trying to suppress UF's student voters to influence democratic votes for the upcoming November election.

"The statute allows early voting to occur in government-owned community centers," Nelson said. "The last time I checked, the university is part of the public sector, which is a community facility that is not just used by students."

However, Gainesville Mayor Ed Braddy has a different opinion on the subject. Braddy said Nelson and Crist are using Gainesville's early voting issue to bring attention to their campaigns.

"The magic of an election year transforms the status quo into an act of voter suppression," he said.

While Gainesville had requested the Reitz as a municipal early voting site, dates for early voting correspond with UF's Spring Break when most students aren't on campus, Braddy said.

Early voting locations include the Supervisor of Elections Office and the Millhopper Branch Library.

Although the current locations might be out of some students' reach, UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes said the university's hands are tied.

"The University of Florida is not opposed to holding early voting on campus," Sikes said. "Unfortunately, we are precluded by state law from doing so."

Jordan McPherson / Alligator Staff

Former Florida Gov. Charlie Crist spoke to UF students Wednesday on Turlington Plaza about his support of the Reitz Union as an early voting center.

Satchel isn't nervous

"People take pride in being part of the SEC," Parker said. "I'm sure it will be a heated competition."

Satchel Raye, chef and owner of Satchel's, said he has never been interested in competition when it comes to pizza.

But Raye said his mind changed when the Facebook status he made about this one received more likes and comments than any of the restaurant's past social media posts.

"What makes it interesting is now they make it an SEC competition," he said. "So then all of a sudden it's like, 'Well, how can you not?'"

Raye said he would be excited to see how the competition plays out because Satchel's was built not only around pizza, but music, art and community as well.

"This is an interesting test because it takes our pizza out of that atmosphere," he said.

However, Raye said he has never been nervous making pizza, and he doesn't expect to see that change any time soon, even with a majority of the schools in the conference having already confirmed their participation.

"If there was any way I thought I could improve my pizza, I would have done it by now," he said. "I think it can stand up."

Dante Fowler, a 19-year-old UF telecommunication sophomore and outside linebacker for the Gators, said he has as much faith in Satchel's as he does in the team.

"They're two hardworking companies that just want to get to the top and be the best at what they do," he said. "If we win I'm gonna ... throw a little party."

Raye said he'd try to bring home the title for himself and UF.

"If we win," he said, "we win for the Gators."

cated in the newly renovated Depot Station, Gainesville's oldest train depot, located at 201 SE Depot Ave.

Trish Riley, the director and founder of Cinema Verde, said the festival creates a support system for people like business owners

"Our goal is to connect those folks with an audience of customers so everyone can strengthen each other, and there can be more forward motion towards sustainability," Riley said.

Don Hardy, co-director of the Human Experiment, said he submitted his film to the festival because of its solid reputation.

"Hopefully it's eye-opening," Hardy said of his film. Produced by Sean Penn, it highlights harmful chemicals in everyday products.

Bill Zhou, a 20-year-old UF marketing sophomore who interns for the festival, said his first year interning has been positive because of the company culture.

"We're trying to work towards a greener world," Zhou said.

Along with the films, the festival will feature several food trucks and an outdoor bar.

"People do appreciate it," Riley said, "and it makes me feel like what I'm doing is worthwhile."

Gainesville's largest CPR certification event to be held Saturday

ANNALEIGH BONDS

Alligator Contributing Writer

In 2009, 15-year-old Claire Dunlap went into cardiac arrest while playing varsity softball for her high school. If it hadn't been for the CPR equipment on site, the incident could have killed her.

"It can happen to anyone at anytime," Dunlap said.

Now a 20-year-old UF advertising junior, Dunlap will speak at GatorSavers' mass CPR certification at the Reitz Union Grand Ballroom on Saturday.

The event will certify 800 people in American Heart Association's Adult CPR and Automated External Defibrillator, or AED, during three different sessions — 9:30 a.m., noon and 2:30 p.m. It will be Gainesville's largest CPR certification, according to the American Heart Association.

There is a $5 cost to attend the event, said Clay Gibbons, director of sales and marketing for GatorCPR.

"Any money raised will be used to provide an AED to the community," he said.

He said GatorCPR is trying to reduce the "bystander effect" by training people in CPR and making them feel comfortable with it. He said he hopes the event will influence people to take action and increase the survival rate of cardiac arrest, which is an estimated 7 percent in the state of Florida, he said.

"The goal of this event is to try to get people to take CPR class who would otherwise not take CPR class," Gibbons said.

There will be 57 volunteer instructors at the event who will train participants on Adult CPR, saving people from choking and how to use the AED.

Chrissy Hankin, a 19-year-old UF elementary education sophomore, said she is attending because it is a good opportunity for a low price.

"I have always wanted to get CPR certified," she said. "It's something that I'm going to need."

Florida man executed in Starke for Miami 9-year-old's murder

Victim Jimmy Ryce died in 1995

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STARKE — A man was executed Wednesday night for raping and killing a 9-year-old boy 18 years ago, a death that spurred the victim's parents to press nationwide for stronger sexual predator confinement laws and better handling of child abduction cases.

Juan Carlos Chavez, 46, was pronounced dead at 8:17 p.m. Wednesday after a lethal injection at Florida State Prison, according to Gov. Rick Scott's office.

Chavez made no final statement in the death chamber but did submit a statement laced with religious references in writing.

Chavez abducted Jimmy Ryce at gunpoint after the boy got off a school bus on

Don Ryce

victim's father

Sept. 11, 1995, in rural Miami-Dade County. Ryce's parents turned the tragedy's pain into a push for stronger U.S. laws regarding confinement of sexual predators and improved police procedures in missing child cases. Their foundation gave hundreds of free dogs to law enforcement agencies to aid in searches for children.

The boy's father, 70-year-old Don Ryce, witnessed the execution along with his son Ted, 37. They told reporters the execution closes a long, painful chapter and hopefully sends a powerful message to other would-be child abductors.

"Don't kill the child. Because if you do, people will not forget, they will not forgive. We will hunt you down, and we will put you to death," Ryce said.

Museum to open bat barn livestream

LAUREN TRONCOSO

Alligator Contributing Writer

Gotham isn't the only city with a soft spot for bats.

Bat fanatics will be able to see the thousands of foraging, furry free-tails living in the UF Bat Barn without enduring the musky smell. By the end of the month, a camera inside the barn will be live streaming on the Florida Museum of Natural History's website.

Sarah Fazenbaker, the museum's webmaster, said a camera was mounted inside the barn last week and is fully functional. However, she said there isn't a set date for when the stream will be online because it takes "a little tinkering" to get the power, Internet connectivity, camera angle and lighting right.

Fazenbaker said there used to be a camera in the next-door Bat House, but it was shut off last year because the environment inside was too hostile for the equipment, and it made maintenance problematic.

The barn is structured in a way that will keep the camera cleaner than it was in the Bat House, she said, and the equipment will hopefully last longer.

Fazenbaker said the camera is not being used for scientific study. Staff decided to install it for the public's benefit because of high interest in the nightly bat viewing.

"What I didn't know until we did this whole project was that they actually move around quite a bit during the day."

Sarah Fazenbaker

webmaster

"What I didn't know until we did this whole project was that they actually move around quite a bit during the day," she said. "They do fly around in there, so there is actually something to look at — if there's enough living in the barn."

Candace McCaffery, the museum's mammals collection manager, said bats are picky about where they live.

It took years for the bats to warm up to the barn, she said, even though it was primed with bat feces to make it smell attractive to the animals.

The Bat House was built to relocate the bats living in the stadiums and old buildings on campus. When the internal structure of the house collapsed in 2009 because of too many bats, it was remodeled, and the additional barn was built in 2010.

"I think we're really fortunate, though, that it actually worked and that we have this big colony here," McCaffery said. "It's great for us for some insect control, and it's a great viewing thing for campus."

The museum currently has a camera installed on an exterior pole, which is already streaming live on its website. Observers anywhere can watch about 300,000 bats emerge at dusk with just a click of a button.

UF veterinary first-year graduate student Jared Baum, 22, said he's seen the bats fly from the structures two or three times, and he said he thinks the new technology is a good idea.

"It's pretty interactive," he said. "It unveils the unknown behind the barns."

'Sketchy but do it': The Swamp Party is the Unite Party

UF's Student Government has become a one-party system, and you should know where that party came from.

With the failed attempts of the Taco Libre Party to qualify and the Students Party to organize, the Swamp Party is essentially running unopposed — which some may say they've been doing for years. But the domination is worse than ever.

Facebook events encouraging people to vote Swamp tout accomplishments like 24/5 Library West hours and refillable water-bottle stations. But don't be fooled. Those additions date back to before Swamp's creation in Fall 2012. How is that possible?

The Swamp Party is the Unite Party. Swamp rose out of Unite's ashes after a series of unfortunate events forced the party's organizers to rebrand.

In 2010, the Unite Tapes leaked. They revealed party officials discussing intimidation tactics to increase voter turnout. Sororities were implicated for giving members alcohol in exchange for votes and refusing to let pledges eat until they voted.

Then, in Spring 2012, after football coach Will Muschamp endorsed Gator walk-on and Students Party VP candidate Jesse Schmitt, Unite Party volunteer and then-Senate president pro tempore Jason Tiemeier threw away 268 copies of the Alligator from bins at Weimer Hall.

Soon after, Tj Villamil, who would later be elected Student Body president, appeared in a YouTube video criticizing the Alligator and falsely claiming it had refused SG's request that it cut expenses to help UF. (SG doesn't support the Alligator. That's why it's called The Independent Florida Alligator).

That election, the Unite Party's president and VP beat the Students Party nominees by 114 votes. It was the highest voter turnout since 1983. It was clear something had to change.

So Unite became Swamp. To keep voters from remembering Unite's shady history, Swamp tried to disassociate itself, even filing an elections violation complaint against the Students Party for claiming Unite had been replaced by Swamp. Swamp maintained that only 10 candidates had been involved with Unite.

If Swamp and Unite are so different, why are Swamp candidates on Facebook right now taking credit for Unite successes?

To be fair, most of the Swamp candidates in next week's elections never ran under Unite. Also, it's undeniable that services like 24/5 Library West and refillable water-bottle stations are great. They benefit students, and we love them. But if Swamp is going to acknowledge Unite's accomplishments, why won't it acknowledge Unite's oversights?

In any case, Swamp doesn't have a squeaky clean past, either.

Last year, the Alligator published an email sent by Leah Miller, a liaison between the Swamp Party and its fraternity house representatives, which asked them to collect "I Voted" stickers and supply the party with a $250 check.

It ended with a request for readers to "DELETE THIS AFTER YOU GET THE INFORMATION!! WE CANT HAVE ANYTHING ON RECORD!!"

Miller's final words seem representative of Unite/Swamp/whatever tactics: "Sketchy, but do it! Thanks!"

Lessons about love rise out of tragedy

A bipolar man and reformed alcoholic kidnapped his son while his wife was at work one day. He didn't get too far, though.

Driving home, his wife saw their car parked on the side of the road. In the passenger seat was their 2-year-old son. Underneath the driver's seat was a bottle of bourbon, empty.

Finally waking him from an alcohol-induced slumber, she tersely told him to clean up his act and took her son to her mother's.

Sometime later, the phone rang. He was on the other end — a pay phone. He told her he could turn right, go home and continue attending Alcoholics Anonymous, or he could turn left and be gone from her life forever.

Love supersedes reason. She told him to go home; they could work it out.

He went home but never made it to another AA meeting. The last thing he knew was the taste of cold metal and the click of a firing pin against a bullet.

It's been 19 years since my father killed himself. My mom still has the gun in her closet; I've seen it. I never understood why she kept it but remain as unsure of how she could throw it out in the first place.

Love supersedes reason.

For a long time, I harbored hatred toward my coward father. With time, I've realized he was no coward, and I have no hate left to give. In fact, his actions taught me everything I know about love.

My mom lost her dad to cancer a week later. She lost her job not long after that. They tried to force her to work overnight, even though that was impossible for a single mother with a toddler. Even when she was losing so much, she still gave me everything. She bought a house in a nice area with good schools, she read to me every day and loved me more than I can fathom. She still does.

Mom taught me love is giving.

A couple of years went by, and my mom found a new

Justin Jones
opinions@alligator.org

man.

He stuck around a while and moved in after a couple of years. By the time I was 7, I was calling him dad.

My dad, not my father, taught me about being a man. He played catch with me. He taught me how to fish. He loved me. By the time I was 7, he was calling me son. I was not a responsibility or burden or anyone else's.

Dad taught me love is accepting.

My dad wasn't to remain childless for long. My brother was born when I was 8 and a half. I didn't know what to do. Then, I realized he didn't either, so I went to work. I read to him, played with him and helped him learn to talk.

As he got older, he got a little more annoying, as siblings do. I'd get frustrated with his persistent insistence on playing with me 24 hours a day. I hated that I was stuck with chores he was too young to do.

One day, it hit me. He read all the same books I did when I was his age and played the same games as me. He would steal my too-big-for-him clothes to look like me. I was his role model. That helped me look at who I was to make sure I was becoming the person I wanted to be and someone he could look up to at the same time.

My brother taught me that love is teaching and learning.

Rationality and evolution dictate humans to act in self-interest. And yet, parents often sacrifice everything for their children, resulting in a lower quality of life for themselves. When you love someone, you won't stand outside a burning building while they burn. You go in and save them.

Love supersedes reason.

Mischievous Madams to host singles' auction after Valentine's Day

SAMANTHA BLEND
Avenue Writer

Thongs. Sparkles. Lace. Strip. Tease. Art. That's burlesque done by the Mischievous Madams, Gainesville's first burlesque troupe, which will host a singles' auction Saturday in an effort to give back to the community.

Made up of seven performers, the Madams make their own costumes, which they shimmy out of piece by piece until only a thong and pasties are left.

The troupe's assistant manager, whose stage name is Lolita Lopez, said a challenge of doing burlesque is that it is often thought of as just stripping.

But she said she thinks of it as more of an art form.

"It's incredibly body-positive and feminist," she said. "And I love it. I really love it."

Lopez also said she likes the amount of freedom she has with her performances, which allows her to incorporate her classical ballet training into her performances.

Another troupe member, whose stage name is Sally Sucre, said what's beautiful about burlesque is that there is a different story behind every act.

"I like being naked," she said. "It's very liberating. But I like that it's also art."

On Saturday, the troupe will take a break from the stage to host its singles' auction.

The proceeds will go to organizations in the community, which Lopez said is a major source of support for the troupe.

Bachelors and bachelorettes will be auctioned off on a date at the event.

It will take place at 10:30 p.m. at The Backyard at Boca Fiesta & Palomino, at 232

SE First St.

All the proceeds will go to the Civic Media Center, a local alternative library, and Peaceful Paths, a certified domestic abuse network that helps survivors of domestic violence, said Stephen Tierney, the troupe's manager.

If anyone 18 or older is interested in being auctioned off, he or she can sign up at The Backyard, he said.

Those who sign up before the event will get in free before midnight, Lopez said. For everybody else, the cover is $5.

People who sign up to be auctioned off will put down their names, turn-ons and turn-offs and if they would like men, women or both to bid on them.

This is the Madams' second singles auction, Tierney said. Last year the group raised more than $1,200 for the Lynnae Hottinger Foundation for Ovarian Cancer Research.

Tierney isn't sure if any couples who met at the auction last year are still together, but he said people seemed happy with the pairings.

"I've seen people get up there and kiss right when they get on stage," he said.

Lopez compared the event to karaoke. It starts off a little slow, but as people drink more, everybody wants to join in.

Lopez said if anyone doesn't feel a spark with his or her bidder, he or she can opt out of the date. Bid money won't be accepted, and the date doesn't have to happen.

"We don't want people feeling uncomfortable, but we do want people to broaden their horizons and meet new friends," she said.

Amber Riccinto / Alligator

A burlesque dancer, whose stage name is Stella O'Hare, practices for the group's Friday show, which will be held at the Atlantic, 15 N. Main St. Doors open at 10 p.m., and the show starts at 11:30 p.m. Tickets cost $5. The show is Valentine's Day-themed, but performers have personalized their acts.

Disney introduces first same-sex couple on 'Good Luck Charlie'

Actor received death threats after episode

EMILY COCHRANE
Avenue Writer

Hollywood is coming out, one small step at a time.

As thousands watched the widely publicized marriage of same-sex couples during the 2014 Grammy award ceremony on Jan. 26, the same night TV viewers were introduced to Disney's first lesbian couple on the show "Good Luck Charlie."

Disney received mixed reactions to the brief appearance of Susan and Cheryl, the first same-sex couple, when they dropped off their daughter for a play date with the main character.

The company has also received attention for the alleged inclusion of same-sex parents in its blockbuster movie "Frozen," a theory that has not been confirmed or denied.

"I think it has to do with the increased mobilization of queer politics, where a queer family structure can be just as normal as heterosexual," said Justin Grant, a UF feminist and queer studies graduate assistant. "We're seeing a translation in mainstream media where a queer family structure isn't necessarily risqué or threatening."

their adopted daughter, and Coca-Cola and Chevrolet have received attention for featuring same-sex families in their respective Super Bowl and Olympics commercials.

Though the first gay television character appeared on CBS's "All in the Family" in 1971, only recently have companies started to feature LGBT identified people in shows and commercials. Fox's "Glee" saw the engagement of Kurt and Blaine, two gay teenagers. ABC's Emmy-winning "Modern Family" focuses on a gay couple and "I think that it's great, that it shows that television is getting more diverse," said Liliana Bello, a 19-year-old UF chemical engineering freshman. "I'm honestly surprised that this hasn't happened sooner."

Despite receiving support from Miley Cyrus, Harry Styles and fans of the show, Disney was attacked by conservative groups such as One Million Moms for "pushing an agenda" of "controversial topics that children are far too young to comprehend." Five-year-old Mia Talerico, who plays Charlie on Disney's "Good Luck Charlie," also received defaced pictures of herself and death threats on Instagram after the episode aired.

It's unlikely that the couple will appear on the show again since the show's last episode airs Sunday, but many see this as the first of many LGBT Disney characters to come.

"I think we're slowly starting to see Disney make that turn that other broadcasting companies are doing," Grant said. "Within the next 10 to 15 years, I believe there will be a LGBT main character in a Disney movie or show."

Sex is a simple and seriously awesome act if you're doing it for the right reasons. I'm always going to tell people to try new things in bed with their significant others — but only if they're comfortable with it. If you're scared to bring another person into the bedroom, figure out why. Do you think you'll be jealous and compare yourself to the other person? Do you think it will f*** up your relationship after that night? Are you weirded out about asking someone to be that other person? If you can answer no to all of these and you're ready to get out of the missionary-only sex desert you two have been in, I say go for it. Just bring your freakin' A-game. If you thought pleasing one person to the fullest extent was tiresome, get ready to double it.

A Great Big World's new album disappoints

RACHEL CROSBY

Avenue Writer

This winter, a soft, humble plea for closure came on the radio.

A Great Big World's "Say Something" captivated hopeless romantics and troubled teens — its vocals shaky but stern, its melody light but haunting.

But if you're looking for the slow build and soft power that the chart-topper hashed out, you won't find it on the duo's album "Is There Anybody Out There?"

Whereas "Say Something" serves as a theme song for the broken, "Is There Anybody Out There?" is fast-paced and happy-go-lucky, stuffed with condescendingly cliché verses about the stars, the sea and life getting better (they promise!).

As I heard the album beginning to end, I tried to picture when I would listen to it — on the bus? No. Studying? Nope.

It's so cheesy, it probably only plays while couples cook Sunday breakfast together, reaching over each other to flip eggs and laughing while they do it.

The two singers consistently alternate — sometimes Ian Axel's nerdy-folk voice will take lead, like in "Say Something."

Then Chad Vaccarino — the guy you didn't even know was in the band — rings in, his voice deeper, more boring.

Neither of them have much range — you can tell when they squeak at higher notes and squawk at lower ones. But there's a comfort in that. They aren't the powerhouse pop group they never promised to be. Instead, the duo's awkward harmony boasts a talk-singing Broadway vibe coupled with the hopefulness of a Santa Monica street band — think fun. meets One Direction.

The "Everyone is Gay" track, for instance, starts and ends with a bumpy back track that makes it feel childish. Even the lyrics made me roll my eyes — "If you're gay then you're gay ... If you're straight well that's great." This is only repeated in songs like "I Really Want It" with lines like "I'm not giving up" and "All you need is inside yourself."

I tried hard to relate to "Is There Anybody Out There?" but the whole album felt like two dudes sat down and tried to write what they thought music should be instead of pouring out their personal experiences like "Say Something" suggested they would.

The album is available for $9.99 on iTunes.

Turquoise Jeep rocks High Dive with jams

► YIP DECEIVER OPENED THE SHOW.

SILVIA RUEDA

Avenue Writer

The question everyone was waiting for was finally asked: "How you like your eggs?" "Fried or fertilized!" responded the crowd.

Yung Humma, Flynt Flossy and Whatchyamacallit of the independent record label Turquoise Jeep performed their YouTube hit, "Fried or Fertilized," and several other songs for fans Tuesday night at High Dive.

The label, known for its humorous sex-lathered lyrics and equally titillating YouTube videos, gave spectators a show to remember and sweat for.

"By the end of the show, we want you to be sweating just as much as we are," said Pretty Raheem, another artist on the label.

And sweat they did.

During the group's performance of "Licky Sticky," single women were called to the stage to receive lap dances.

Gabriel Allen, a 22-year-old Ocala resident, became an instant "Jeep Rider" — as fans of the label call themselves — when his friend showed him videos on YouTube.

Allen said the label is all about good vibes and having fun.

Yung Humma and Flynt Flossy performed what is perhaps the label's greatest hit, "Lemme Smang It," which has almost 12 million views on YouTube.

The audience went crazy, reciting lyrics like, "Ima have you looking like a Wild Thornberry."

Will Baldock, a 21-year-old UF microbiology senior, has been a Turquoise Jeep fan since his freshman year.

"I think their songs are really funny and provide a resound amount of entertainment," he said.

Baldock said the concert was everything he hoped for and more.

"It blew my mind," he said.

Yip Deceiver, a duo formed by Davey Pierce and Nicolas "Dobby" Dobbtratz, formerly in the band of Montreal, opened for Turquoise Jeep.

The duo's energetic and pop-tastic sound had even those who weren't familiar with them bobbing along almost instantly.

After their time in of Montreal, Pierce and Dobby formed Yip Deceiver because they desired to finally do their own thing, Pierce said.

"We've been making music ourselves for God knows how long and just kind of got tired of doing other people's stuff," he said. "It's good doing your own thing."

Each Thursday, the Avenue will dish out the best in entertainment. From the silver screen to hidden Internet gems, check out this week's top picks.

UF dominates JU in first home game of season

EDEN OTERO

Alligator Writer

@edenotero_1

If Florida was looking for redemption after its 20-8 loss at No. 1 North Carolina on Saturday, the team's 21-5 win over Jacksonville was just that.

Opening the game, JU took the draw and proceeded down the field taking the first goal of the game. However, UF countered with a 7-0 run until 17:05 when JU took its second goal.

UF Lacrosse

By the end of the half, the Gators outshot the Dolphins 21-5 and held a 14-3 lead.

For the game, juniors Shannon Gilroy and Nora Barry made big plays that resulted in a combined eight points and five ground balls to help lead the team to its first win of the season.

The big issue coming into Wednesday's match against Jacksonville was whether Florida could turn around a 24-12 loss on ground balls and an 18-11 loss on draw controls.

Winning 16-10 on ground balls and 14-4 on draw controls in the first half alone, the Gators (1-1) came out looking like a team that had already decided the Dolphins' fate.

Gilroy, who was the standout player of the night scoring seven points on eight shots on goal and winning six draw controls, credited the team's work in practice to the win against JU (0-2).

Coach Amanda O'Leary felt that Gilroy did a good job leading the team after the loss at UNC, but she also said that her effort on ground balls and draws made a big difference in overall game play.

"I thought Shannon did a phenomenal job on

BASEBALL

Gators look for small ball to carry them

ADAM PINCUS

Alligator Staff Writer

@adamDpincus

Time heals all wounds, and the Gators are hoping several have been patched up since last season.

A mass exodus to professional baseball left Florida searching for innings and at-bats. The departure of 69 percent of its home runs and 81 percent of its RBIs shifted Florida's focus to small ball on offense.

Florida scored 107 fewer runs last season. It is no secret the little things at the plate caused the Gators issues. Florida had a 7-11 record in one-run and extra-inning games — a trend No. 23 Florida hopes to reverse when it opens its season against Maryland on Friday at 7.

"We lost a lot of one-run games (and a lot of close games)," junior first baseman Zack Powers said. "It all comes down to little details."

Seventh-year coach Kevin O'Sullivan has harped on those little details since he arrived at Florida. There was more room for error in 2012 with a starting lineup that featured five hitters who are now in professional leagues at some level.

That caliber of veteran college baseball talent is few and far between. A lack of depth made its absence hurt even more. Now with a restocked freshman class and underclassmen who experienced the sting of a sub-.500 record, the Gators can move past a frustrating season.

"We had a tough time doing all of that little stuff, but that season is done

GYMNASTICS

Senior seeking impact on floor despite nagging injuries

ERICA A. HERNANDEZ

Alligator Writer

@EricaAlyssa

Senior all-arounder Alaina Johnson took to the floor for the first time in more than a year on Feb. 7 in Florida's (5-0, 3-0 Southeastern Conference) win against Kentucky. Johnson's 2014 debut floor score (9.825) tied with two others for fourth overall in the meet.

"I thought she competed aggressively, which is what we were looking for," coach Rhonda Faehn said.

The last time the Tyler, Texas, native competed on floor, she had a similar result. On Jan. 18, 2013, Johnson scored a 9.875 in a home win against Missouri.

"It had been a while, but I wasn't anymore nervous than other times," Johnson said.

Johnson competed on vault, uneven bars and balance beam at every meet so far this season, but Kentucky was her first all-around meet of the year.

"For Alaina coming in and doing all four events for the very first time in a year, it's really exceptional that she was confident and just very consistent across the board," Faehn said.

She joined sophomore Bridget Sloan and junior Kytra Hunter in the all-around lineup for the meet.

"Whereas Kytra and Bridget have had five meets up to this point doing all-around and competed all-around all last year, as well, so it's a little smoother of a transition I'm sure for those athletes than Alaina is really kind of a new start," Faehn said.

In 2013, Johnson competed in the first three meets of the season, but a stress reaction and fracture in her lower back forced her to sit out for eight of the next meets in the year. Johnson eventually returned to compete vault and uneven bars in NCAA postseason meets.

But Johnson, the defending NCAA uneven bars champion, maintains she hasn't been overworking her fragile body even in practice.

"The coaches are very smart," Johnson said.

Florida's going everywhere, man

Florida has agreed to join Michigan State, UNC and Texas in a four-team traveling tournament in December 2018 that will make stops in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

Janowicz wins weekly award

UF tennis player Olivia Janowicz was named Southeastern Conference Player of the Week on Wednesday. She is 4-1 this season.

the draw," O'Leary said. "She dominated."

Freshman Mollie Stevens, who made her first career start and scored her first goal against UNC on Saturday, was the highest scoring freshman on the team, putting up three points against JU and scooping one ground ball.

"I am so pleased with Mollie," O'Leary said.

"She is typically an attacker and we've thrown her into the midfield, which is a huge transition for an attacker, so I think she has taken on that defensive role with a smile."

Stevens is one of three freshmen to start for the Gators. She has four points in Florida's first two games.

Her first goal against JU came 30 seconds after freshman Sammi Burgess scored UF's second point of the night.

Florida faces High Point on Saturday, a team known for having a unique, but difficult defense. Florida spent most of its time on offense against JU, putting little pressure on the defense that North Carolina eviscerated.

O'Leary said that even though the crowd did not get to see how the defense would play after the loss against UNC, she believes that if the team manages the game well and communicates properly on the field, then the defense should have no issue on Saturday.

Amanda O'Leary
UF coach

While Stevens and Gilroy put up a combined total of 10 points, Devon Schneider (four points) and Sam Darcangelo (three points) also bolstered Florida's offense.

"We knew we had the potential to be really good," Darcangelo said.

"We just need to work together like we have been, get ground balls, play hard on defense, 1-v-1 and then go hard on the cage every single time."

Junior left-hander starting on opening day

with," second baseman Casey Turgeon said. "We're looking at this [season]. We come out and practice that stuff all the time. Like Sully always said, little stuff wins games."

This will be the second-straight year of Sully Small Ball. If the Gators struggle offensively in 2014, another cliché, albeit Valentines' Day appropriate, might fit better: "Absence makes the heart grow fonder."

Weekend rotation announced: Junior left-hander Bobby Poyner will take the hill as Florida's opening night starter against Maryland. He posted a 3.41 ERA in 14 appearances last season.

Poyner registered an out against South Carolina in the College World Series two years ago. Joining the Wellington native will be freshman Brett Morales on Saturday and senior right-hander Karsten Whitson for the series finale.

The Cincinnati Reds selected Morales in the 24th round in June. Whitson will make his first start since March 26, 2012, after missing 2013 with season-ending right shoulder surgery.

Gators filling outfield spot: After sophomore outfielder Harrison Bader crashed his scooter and Gainesville Police began an investigation regarding his blood-alcohol level at the time, Florida has been left without a starting outfielder.

Freshman Ryan Larson is the favorite to replace Bader, whom Florida suspended indefinitely on Feb. 4.

Larson has the ability to move runners and get on base — not too different from the human energizer bunny that Bader often was in his freshman year.

"He's just a smart baseball player. He knows what he's doing," sophomore right-hander Eric Hanhold said. "He doesn't make mistakes. He's a solid all-around player."

Martin eyeing shortstop return: A fractured right index finger suffered while attempting a sacrifice bunt in the series against Miami on March 3 forced shortstop Richie Martin to wear a cast, miss 12 games and move to center field upon his return. His absence in the infield meant second baseman Casey Turgeon platooned with Cody Dent up the middle.

"To tell you the truth, I thought it was pretty fun," Martin said of center field. "Shortstop is my natural position ... But I had no problem going to the outfield and helping the team out."

Senior's floor routine similar to last year's

"I have — I guess you could say — a fragile body, and so they're very smart with when to put me in all around and when to put in on floor or on vault."

"I focus on what I need to correct from the previous meet and, of course having fun; it's my last year."

UF gymnast

For her 2014 floor routine, Johnson uses the same passes as the 2013 routine she competed only two times, but she uses different dance moves.

Johnson even uses the same song from her 2013 floor routine, "Diva Song" from the Fifth Element, in her 2014 floor routine.

Johnson's 9.825 on floor Friday was not far behind her career best of 9.925, which she set against Penn State and NC State on Jan. 28, 2011. With five meets still left in the regular season and a likely long run in the postseason, Johnson has a chance to break the record she set in her freshman year.

But Johnson said Tuesday that she still was not sure if she would compete on floor or all-around in UF's home meet against Arkansas on Friday.

"I focus on what I need to correct from the previous meet and of course having fun; it's my last year," Johnson said. "So I don't really focus on the scores or trying to beat the score from the previous competition. I just focus on the corrections that the coaches give me and having a good time."

Young's rebound ensures UF victory

Key play helped Gators late

As teammate Dorian Finney-Smith and Tennessee forward Jarnell Stokes battled for a rebound off a missed jumper, Patric Young put his body on the line late in Tuesday night's game.

Taking a move out of Dennis Rodman's repertoire, Young bolted for the offensive board and dove head-first for the ball before Stokes or Antonio Barton could come up with it.

Before he slid out of bounds on the right baseline, the senior center gained possession and threw the ball to Kasey Hill as Florida wasted time on a fresh shot clock with a 61-55 lead and just more than a minute left in regulation.

Young's grit down the stretch helped No. 3 Florida shake its recent woes in Knoxville, Tenn., and knock off Tennessee 67-58.

The full-out dive by Young, who had four fouls at the time, was perhaps the most impactful play of the game and one of his best in his career at Florida.

To coach Billy Donovan, Young's offensive rebound was the "play of the year."

"He sold out," Donovan said. "Two guys were in front of him. He ran past and made an incredible save and helped us come up with the loose basketball."

"It was an incredible play by him effort-wise with four fouls."

What proved to be the gem of the game happened after a series of missed shots by the Gators. After point guard Scottie Wilbekin drove down the lane and came up empty after wasting 31 seconds of clock with 1:40 left, Tennessee forward Jeronne Maymon kept the ball in bounds by chucking it over his head.

Young then came up with possession.

With the shot clock about to expire, Young quickly pulled up for a jumper — a shot he rarely takes — on the elbow. The attempt clanked off the rim, and then the senior center chased for it to make his hustle play.

In 23 minutes of action, Young finished with six points on 3-of-7 shooting and six boards — with five coming on the offensive end. The senior's offensive rebounding success Tuesday night helped Florida out-rebound a physical Tennessee team 39-32 and win the battle on the offensive glass 18-9.

"Jarnell and Maymon, they're the best rebounders probably in our league," Young said. "We knew we had to go in there and bleed and battle and fight and bite and scratch and scar and come up with some loose balls."

That type of desperation was embodied by Young's loose-ball dive.

Although it was not a play flashy enough to crack SportsCenter's Top 10, it proved to be the dagger in Tuesday night's contest.
