RecSports gets infusion of cash, will add classes

ALEX HARRIS

Alligator Staff Writer

aharris@alligator.org

RecSports will be busier than ever in the coming year, thanks to an extra $100,000 allocation from UF's Student Senate.

This money will bring UF students 15 more group exercise classes a week, with five in the morning, five in "prime time" and five classes devoted to cycling.

For gym rats who hate waiting, RecSports will now staff the previously closed O'Connell center weight room.

The new weight room will also come equipped with finger scanners to ensure that only authorized users can pump iron, said UF Student Senator Davis Bean, chair of the budget and allocations committee.

With the additional funding, RecSports can now open basketball courts on the weekends, according to a letter from David Bowles, director of RecSports.

Club volleyball will also move to the Florida Gym on weekdays, and a fitness coordinator position will be added, he wrote.

"You always hear the Southwest Rec is crowded, that student rec is crowded," Bean said. "Hopefully this will lessen wait times."

Additionally, some of the funds will go toward RecSports' club sports, which allows the organization to remove the current sports club cap, Bean said.

This extra funding comes from a rise in the student Activity and Service fee that is built into credit hour prices. The 5-percent raise in fees, an additional 84 cents that begins Summer B, was instituted by UF's Board of Trustees in January, according to Alligator archives.

Students remember Maya Angelou

After 86 years of poetry and civil resistance, Maya Angelou died Wednesday morning in her home, leaving UF students appreciative of their opportunity to hear her speak last year.

Angelou was best known for her 1969 poem, "I Know Why The Caged Bird Sings," which recounts her upbringing as an African-American woman in the American South during the Jim Crow era.

UF students and professors reacted to the news of her death Wednesday by remembering her work, as well as her visit to campus, when students packed the Phillips Center for the Performing Arts in 2013 to hear her speak.

"Her presence was just so incredible," said 22-year-old UF psychology alumna Somi Aggarwal, who attended the performance hosted by UF Accent Speaker's Bureau last year.

Angelou spoke frankly about her past and her passion for civil and human rights. She ended by reading honest and uncensored poetry, Aggarwal said.

"The way that she carries herself and spreads her story is really inspirational," she said. "When she talked, like, you just felt it. Everyone was so drawn in."

Aggarwal said Angelou was one of the

UF Information Technology to fully replace Sakai with Canvas

HANNAH FELL

Alligator Writer

hfell@alligator.org

UF will begin the gradual process of switching from Sakai to the new course management system Canvas this summer.

UF Information Technology announced last week that the transition is scheduled to be complete by Summer 2016.

However, UF may be sacrificing a few things in the switch, said Douglas Johnson, the assistant director for learning services at UFIT.

Students who were annoyed with the Sakai's two separate grading tabs can breathe easy, Canvas will only have one. But because Sakai is open-source software and Canvas is not entirely open-source, UF will have to go through the course management company to fix any bugs. The company can choose to make these changes based on its business needs.

"This is a huge experiment to see what Canvas brings out," Johnson said, "but many people are convinced the benefits of Canvas will outweigh the benefits of Sakai."

Bahar Pourshariati, a 21-year-old recent UF psychology alumna, said that it's tough to know if Canvas will be better than Sakai.

"They are constantly trying to improve their technology and stay on top of the trends," Pourshariati said, "but newer isn't always better."

Trial underway of man accused of plotting attack

TAMPA — Opening statements were given in the trial of a man accused of plotting a terrorist attack in Tampa.

The trial of 27-year-old Sami Osmakac began in federal court in Tampa on Wednesday.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Sara Sweeney said Osmakac planned to wreak havoc in Tampa by blowing up a car bomb outside an Irish pub and then using grenades and an AK-47 assault rifle to take hostages at the Seminole Hard Rock Casino and demand the release of Muslim prisoners. But defense attorney George Tragos said Osmakac never intended to hurt anyone on American soil. Osmakac espoused "radical" beliefs, Tragos said, but he wanted to go overseas and fight against NATO troops. Tragos said Osmakac couldn't afford to buy a sandwich, never mind weapons and explosives.

Bulgaria set for bumper rose oil harvest

SOFIA, Bulgaria — Luxury perfume makers around the world can expect a bumper yield of rose oil from Bulgaria this year.

Distillery owner Filip Lissicharov said yields have recovered following a bad few years when production was laid low by unfavorable weather conditions. Rose oil is a key ingredient in luxury perfumes.

Lissicharov said prices are likely to be lower this year because of the high yield. Last year, rose oil prices edged up to 7,000 euros ($9,520) per kilogram.

Lissicharov's company, Enio Bonchev Production, runs the oldest rose oil extraction facility in the Balkan country.

Bulgaria produces 1,500 kilogram (3,300 pounds) of rose oil a year and is one of the world's largest exporters along with Turkey and Morocco. The main buyers are France, Germany, Switzerland, the United States, Japan and China.

Boat accident kills US woman in Bahamas

NASSAU, Bahamas — Authorities in the Bahamas are investigating a boating accident that left a U.S. citizen dead, officials said Tuesday.

The woman was killed when the boat she was riding in struck a reef known as Turtle Rock off South Bimini on Sunday night, according to the Royal Bahamas Police Force.

Paloma de Mazieres, a 25-year-old from Key Biscayne, Florida, was ejected from the vessel. She was taken to Alice Town Clinic in Bimini, where she was pronounced dead.

The circumstances of the accident are under investigation, and an autopsy was planned for later this week, said Inspector Jeff Adderley. No arrests have been made. The accident occurred off Bimini, a small cluster of islands about 50 miles east of Florida.

Online town hall provides new outlet for citizen comment

STEVEN KATONA

Alligator Staff Writer skatona@alligator.org

The City of Gainesville's communications entered the 21st century last week with a new online forum called engageGNV.

Tacked on to cityofgainesville.org, this forum will allow citizens to comment on selected topics the city posts for discussion and vote on options for city projects. These projects are given a time limit for discussion, and the results are compiled and sent to the City Commission.

EngageGNV is part two of Gainesville's Gov. 2.0 Initiative, which seeks to improve access on the city's data and communication. The city signed a 1-year, $9,000 contract with Peak Democracy, a public engagement company, to provide this forum service, said Lila Stewart, the senior strategic planner for the City of Gainesville.

Launched May 21, engageGNV has one topic up for discussion, and more than 90 people have submitted their opinions to the website — the equivalent to nearly five hours of public discourse. The current topic up for discussion is the renovation of Southeast Fourth Street from Depot Avenue to Southeast Williston Road, which is scheduled to take place over summer of 2015. Citizens can voice their opinions, ranging from right-of-way width to how much the city should spend for the project, until June 18. The comments will then be shared by staff members at the June 19 City Commission meeting.

Gainesville Public Works stormwater engineer Andrew Roberts, who suggested the .7-mile project be a part of the engageGNV launch, said the forum will be a great way for him to collect citizen input.

"It's only been up for a week or so, and we've already got input," said Roberts, who is heading the rebuilding project. "Internet forums are a little easier for people to attend."

Students liked her poetry

only Accent speakers she has seen receive roaring applause and a standing ovation.

"She was so powerful for such a tiny person," she said.

Justin Dunnivant, a 25-year-old UF anthropology graduate student, said he has read multiple letters written by Angelou. She often wrote by herself in a hotel room, he said, because she believed that unique ideas could only come to those who spent time alone.

"She could do things gracefully and artistically with paper and pen," Dunnivant said.

UF history professor Paul Ortiz said it is hard to sum up the life of a person who did so much good.

Angelou worked with many prominent figures of the civil rights era, including Malcolm X, Richard Wright and James Baldwin, he said. She was like their interpreter.

"She was one of the last people who could tell you what they were thinking," he said. "She was able to get at the personal psyche of African-American society."

Ortiz said he often uses her memoirs and interviews in his classroom. Her powerful work pushes people beyond their comfort zones, he said.

O'Dome weight room will reopen

The bill, SB 2014 10-37, was approved unanimously during Tuesday night's senate meeting. The legislation explained how UF's Student Senate divided the $18,735,300 raised from the student A & S Fee.

Other major changes include an about $80,000 increase in Student Government staff salaries. Bean attributes this to minimum wage increases, state-mandated 3-percent salary increases and the creation of a new professional marketing position to be shared by SG and student activities and involvement. The position has been in the works for years, he said.

"Now we have a formal position to get the word out about these services that are sometimes underused," Bean said.

The academic budget for groups dipped almost $75,000 to better fit how the organization was spending their budget, he said.

"It's just like what we're doing with Accent," Bean said. "They weren't using all their money, they were hovering right around that $450,000 rate, so we just bumped them down to that."

Accent lost about $46,000, only about half as much as the Reitz Equipment Fee, which went from $96,400 to zero.

These cuts, Bean said, went toward staving off more drastic measures, like the earlier committee consideration to cut gym hours. Instead, SG asked that the Reitz reuse and repair older equipment.

Sen. Anthony Sorrentino spoke in favor of the bill, especially the increases for student salaries on campus.

"The more that we can employ students, the better," he said. "That's something I like to see in the midst of this construction."

Woman arrested with a medley of drugs, some found in her crotch

KYLE FOLLANSBEE

Alligator Staff Writer

Gainesville Police arrested a local woman carrying a bag of meth and seven oxycodone pills after she tried to destroy 0.2 grams of crack cocaine in her pants.

Officers arrested 32-year-old Juanita Bass on charges of tampering with evidence, possession of cocaine, possession of a controlled substance without a prescription and possession of marijuana, according to a police report.

GPD stopped a car early Wednesday morning with Bass in the front passenger seat. As the officer approached, the smell of weed wafted from the car, according to the report.

The officer then searched Bass and felt an object wedged in her crotch, according to the report. The officer allowed Bass to get the item but noticed she started to move the object inside her pants. Bass then pulled out an Elmer's Glue tube containing cocaine residue.

The officer continued to search Bass' pants and found several large pieces of a rock-like substance, according to the report.

The officer recovered two crack rocks, weighing about 0.2 grams, after they fell out of the bottom of Bass' pant leg, as well as oxycodone pills in her purse.

The officer also noticed Bass clenching a plastic bag containing a yellowish substance, which was later found to be 1 gram of meth, according to the report.

After questioning, Bass said the meth and cocaine was not hers, according to the report.

Officers booked Bass into the Alachua County Jail at about 2:30 a.m. As of press time, her bond is set at $50,000.

Online Learning Institute gets first program director

HANNAH FELL

Alligator Writer hfell@alligator.org

UF has chosen the head of its new Online Learning Institute.

Carole Beal, who will also serve as a professor of Education Technology, is leaving the University of Arizona to lead the new education research program this August.

This institute is different from UF Online. This program is funded by the university's grant money and includes the colleges of education, engineering, journalism and communications, and fine arts.

"These colleges will hire faculty that are experienced in those fields to pursue research that will benefit UF Online and the rest of the university," said Andrew McCollough, a UF associate provost.

In addition to Beal's appointment as head of the Online Learning Institute, she will also be a professor of education technology with a salary of $140,000.

"It was sudden," she said. "But having the opportunity to work with groups on campus and lead the online learning program was something I couldn't pass up."

Beal currently works at the University of Arizona in the School of Information Resources and Library Science as a professor of science, technology and the arts. She will start at UF on Aug. 16 in the College of Education's School of Teaching and Learning.

McCollough said having Beal as the head of UF Online Learning Institute is a step toward UF's goal of becoming a top 10 public research institute.

"She will be more of a coordinator as opposed to a primary researcher."

Pavlo Antonenko

UF College of Education assistant professor

This institute will allow UF to explore adaptive learning, such as combining different fields like arts and technology, he said.

Pavlo Antonenko, assistant professor in the College of Education, said Beal would be a good addition to the four-department program.

"The hope is that she will have competence and expertise," he said. "She will be more of a coordinator as opposed to a primary researcher."

She said she's most looking forward to spotting UF's scaly mascot in the wild.

"They drove me around campus and said, 'Watch out for the alligators!'" she said. "I didn't know if they were being serious."

The battle between the press and the Obama administration to release the 41-page memo ordering a drone strike on Yemen in 2010, which resulted in the September 2011 targeted killing of an American citizen who was accused of plotting terrorist attacks, rages on this week. The New York Times and the American Civil Liberties Union has been pressuring the administration for years to disclose the memo to the public, as per the Freedom of Information Act. Though the Obama administration claimed they had complied with a federal appeals court ordering the disclosure of portions of the memo, The New York Times reported yesterday that the administration is appealing to censor additional parts of the memo.

This tug-of-war between the press and the president is keeping the media from performing its watchdog function. For going back on its word and attempting to keep important documents out of the hands of journalists, we're tossing a that's-not-how-you-democracy DART at the Obama administration.

Ladies: Are you tired of Tinder photo after Tinder photo of frat daddies on fishing boats holding dead snappers? Guys: Are you sick of reading the same "Live, Laugh, Love <3" or a random, inaccurate Marilyn Monroe quote on girls' online dating site bios? Then you may be ready for BarkBuddy, a new app with a user interface similar to Tinder that matches users with adoptable dogs in the area. Let's face it, cute pups are a much more worthwhile endeavor than trying to get coffee with a potential Internet murderer. BarkBuddy, we're awarding you a yes-I'd-like-to-meet-local-fluffy-singles-in-my-area LAUREL.

In other media news, a German tabloid called Bild has attracted criticism for publishing photos of Duchess of Cambridge Kate Middleton when wind caused her skirt to reveal her bare behind. Even the Daily Mail commented, which shows you how tasteless the decision to run the photos was.

An Australian newspaper defended Bild, saying "If the Duchess can't be bothered protecting herself by having hem weights sewn into her garments, why should the media protect her?"

Ugh, what a gross attitude. The members of the royal family are public figures, yes, but Kate Middleton's butt shouldn't be news, and furthermore, lumping a tabloid that would publish the photos with "the media" is unsettling. We're tossing a duchesses-have-a-right-to-privacy-and-the-right-to-wear-thongs DART to the German and Australian news organizations who ran the Middleton photos.

We close on our final LAUREL to the late Maya Angelou, who died this week at 86 in her home in North Carolina, according to CNN. It's truly a tragedy to say goodbye to a woman — a legend — who forever influenced American literature with her description of the brutality of a Jim Crow South in "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings."

We leave you with a passage from her poem "Phenomenally": "It's the fire in my eyes/And the flash of my teeth/The swing in my waist/The joy in my feet./I'm a woman,/Phenomenally./Phenomenal woman,/That's me."

Prepare for a worst-case climate scenario

When a meteorologist warns Floridians of an impending hurricane and the catastrophic damage that could result from such a storm, most people heed the warnings and batten down the hatches. Recently, scientists discovered that a massive ice sheet in Antarctica melted past the point of return, and in the coming decades could seriously threaten coastal cities, especially those in Florida.

Many will scream that it's a conspiracy perpetuated by the left in order to force more government into our lives. Others will shrug at the news as they sip a cool drink in Miami Beach, enjoying the waves crashing into shore. Never mind the increased flooding that's already plaguing parts of Miami, or the point-blank warnings that cities such as Miami will cease to exist if the oceans rise as expected.

Florida Sen. Marco Rubio doubts the existence of global warming, claiming that temperatures on earth have stabilized. The popular political fact-checking group PolitiFact rated Rubio's claim "mostly false," yet that ranking will probably do little to change Rubio's rhetoric. As a son of south Florida, how could a man vying for the White House ignore what could very well be the defining humanitarian and planetary crisis of the 21st century?

Sure, you could write off that previous sentence as leftist hyperbole — and there's no doubt many of you will — but when 97 percent of scientists agree that the world is changing for the worse, perhaps we should not cry conspiracy so soon.

Maybe our lack of belief in global warming has something to do with the enormous challenge it is to actually prevent the catastrophic consequences we face. The small changes are starting with severe droughts devastating the western U.S., leading to sizable increases in food prices and the terrifying report that some in Texas are resorting to drinking from the toilet, because water is so scarce.

Rubio and others can ignore or placate their base in order to win an election, but what kind of country does Rubio want to lead? One that let its cities drown and farmland turn to desert, or one that admits we have a serious problem and takes action?

The U.S. used to be a country that set goals and took action. We built the Panama Canal, defeated fascism in Europe, won the Cold War and remain the only nation on Earth that put men on the moon. Hell, now we can't even get into space without hitching a ride from our former Cold War adversaries, the Russians.

It's time we stopped screwing around, kicking dirt, waiting for the next generation to take action, and it's well past time for politicians — our supposed leaders — to ignore the warnings, unless Marco Rubio wants to visit his grandchildren in this century's Lost City of Atlantis: Miami Beach.

Defeating climate change is not something that the government can accomplish on its own. Instead, it takes all of us admitting that there's a problem and that we need to do something before it's too late. Cutting back on our energy consumption, driving less and pressuring our leaders to act are just some of the ways we can try to prevent a cataclysmic shift on earth.

If we listen to the meteorologist — a scientist — before a hurricane hits, let's listen to the scientists about climate change. It just might save our lives and the lives of future generations, along with humanity. Sometimes the meteorologists are wrong about the hurricanes, and we boarded up our houses and evacuated for nothing, but we are better to be prepared than dead.

Best case, the scientists are wrong, and at least we'll be living on a cleaner planet that understands the symbiotic relationship we have with the Earth and all the living things gracing our big blue marble in space. Worst case, we'll be prepared for whatever comes our way.

Florida women seek governor's veto

Our legislature is attacking women's rights in Florida. House Bill 1047/Senate Bill 918, which vaguely claims to revise circumstances under which a pregnancy in the third trimester may be terminated, permits doctors to place the potential life of a fetus above the life of a woman.

This bill reduces women to walking incubators and lays bare the Florida Legislature's belief that a woman's true value is in her ability to birth and raise children. With HB 1047/ SB 918, the legislature asserts license to control women's reproductive decisions about when or if we have a child. Gov. Rick Scott has a choice: He can either side with the legislators who strip women of control over our bodies, or he can stand with the powerful constituency of women voters in Florida and veto the bill.

The U.S. Supreme Court has made clear that even when states prohibit third-trimester abortions, there must be an exception when a woman's life or health is in danger. Florida's new law prohibits doctors from considering whether the mental health and well-being of a woman seeking such an abortion is in danger.

The law also permits doctors to prioritize the health of the fetus over that of the pregnant mother. This bill is not about "protecting" anyone. Only the woman can truly know her situation or circumstances; therefore, the decision needs to be made by the woman and her medical provider without restrictions. The legislature is attempting to force labor on women but is not passing laws that would support the mother and child once he or she is born. If the legislature is really concerned about Florida's children, it should focus on providing access to health care, public education and creating options for affordable child care. Instead they choose to focus on taking away a woman's right to self-determination.

This bill will increase the already high barrier to a woman accessing a third-trimester abortion by prohibiting abortions once a fetus is viable — when it can survive outside of a woman's body. Focusing on the potential fetus rather than the woman who carries it is anti-woman. Narrowing the window of time a woman can seek an abortion is just another move to weaken Roe v. Wade. This focus creates a questionable time period and will erode women's rights even further with future changes in medical technology.

We will not stand by silently and allow yet another obstacle to be placed between women and our right to medical care. We demand self-determination for all women and girls, which includes the ability to terminate a pregnancy that we don't want.

If Scott ignores Florida women now and does not veto this bill, he will face the anger of women across the state and at the ballot box as he attempts re-election. Scott needs to hear from you. Call and email him to demand he vetoes HB 1047/ SB 918. To find out more or to get involved contact us at nwl@womensliberation.org or 352-575-0495.

Acronyms become the norm in society

Genrick Curtom
UWire

Urban Outfitters recently added "Totes Ridictionary" to the stack of funny books in its stores. This book offers a scope of the modern English language and where it seems to be heading. While the book intended to be humorous, it is shockingly accurate.

This shortening of words derives from the increasing use of social media and character limits such as the well-noted 140 character limit of Twitter. What also seems to be changing the landscape of the English language is the way we speak.

When abbreviated words and new definitions work their way into popular media — such as Twitter, books and television shows — their usage becomes widespread.

"If enough people use a word in a particular way and it becomes widespread, it will find its way into the dictionary," said Fiona MacPherson, the senior Oxford English Dictionary editor.

There's no doubt that people will disagree with current trends becoming more mainstream, but because of the globalization of technology and social trends, new words will come into play as the public sees fit.

I believe we're the front-runners of a new wave of words that will become the latest addition to the English language. It's remarkable how something that seems small can turn into a movement requiring the acceptance of a new word or phrase. English is just another example of how quickly and viral what people say and feel can be globalized and reach audiences across the world.

Tampa's Sunset Music Festival garners 45,000 attendees UF students show up and turn up

CODY SMITH
Avenue Writer

Memorial Day weekend marked Sunset Music Festival's third invasion of the North Lot of the Raymond James Stadium in Tampa, Florida.

Held over two days and organized by Disco Donnie Presents, Sunset Events and Committee Events, Sunset hosted a diverse lineup, immaculate production and efficient organization.

The student community, notably the Gator Nation, had a strong showing among the festival's estimated 45,000 guests.

Students championed the university by holding flags and totems above the crowds and performed the Chomp when encountering fellow Gators.

Bridget Wlosek, a 21-year-old UF environmental engineering senior, commended the connection she felt to her fellow students.

"I saw lots of hats and shirts with gators on them, my friend even brought his UF banner" she said.

"Overall, I saw more UF students than any other students" she said.

Connor Ward, a 20-year-old UF computer science junior, praised the positive vibes felt among the attendees.

"It's a chance to dress up ridiculously, meet new people and bond with old friends in ways we never could in the real world," he said.

Sharing the love with new and old friends is easy at festivals like Sunset thanks to "kandi."

Kandi are the colorful wristbands decorated with praises designed to be traded among fellow festival-goers.

"Trading kandi with someone really is a meaningful experience," he said.

"This is my first time playing in Tampa but the Florida crowds are always so full of energy and really show their love for the artists."

DJ Deorro
artist

"It makes it so easy to walk up to random people and instantly have a connection."

The performers, thrilled to be playing the largest EDM event in Florida since Miami Music Week (which includes Ultra Music Festival) in late March, appropriately tuned their sets to appease the ever-present hunger for high-energy sets.

"I haven't been back to Florida since Miami Music Week in March but it's amazing to be back" said prolific producer and DJ Deorro, who announced his planned retirement before the festival.

"This is my first time playing in Tampa but the Florida crowds are always so full of energy and really show their love for the artists."

The bigger festival this year featured new additions: a cool-down maze adorned with psychedelic artwork, cooling stations equipped with fans and sprinklers and gates and walls that expedited traffic flow and alleviated sound bleed across stages.

The start of the second day was unfortunately delayed due to a severe thunderstorm.

Despite the brief bout of wind and rain, festivalgoers emerged from their shelters at the Raymond James Stadium to virtually no damages. Festival organizers shaved some time from all performers' sets in order to give all of the artists proper sets.

While the festival largely succeeded in achieving its lofty ambitions, some areas could still use improvement.

There were only four water stations across the grounds and placed next to the field facing the main stage. Lines quickly grew to staggering lengths and caused massive traffic build-ups.

As the central Florida music scene grows, festivals such as Sunset will naturally expand to satisfy the growing demand for live music.

If Sunset continues its streak, expect Tampa to soon be home to one of the largest festivals in the country.

The Sunset Music Festival, Florida's second largest EDM event after Ultra, attracted acts like Zedd.

New 'X-Men' a formulaic fallback onto action movie clichés

JACKSON HART
Avenue Writer

I went into "X-Men: Days of Future Past" with high hopes. After a string of disappointing superhero movies – the latest Spider-Man, "Captain America: Winter Soldier," the last stupid Thor — I was ready to get back to the glory days of the Batman trilogy.

I thought that this film had the best chance to revive that awesome combination of amazing action, intelligence and emotional impact that Nolan brought to Gotham. After all, 2011's X-Men: First Class was great and unique among superhero movies in that we got an origin story without pretension and clichéd character development. So those were my expectations heading into the theater. They weren't met.

"X-Men: Days of Future Past" is a good movie, but not a great one. I wasn't reminded of Batman. In fact, I would say the most apt movie comparison would be 2012's "The Avengers."

It was a film where a lot of superheroes got together and had some fights, showed off their powers and developed as characters or displayed very little intelligence. Any fans of that first Marvel blockbuster buddy movie will likely find no objection with this one.

X-Men aficionados will also probably enjoy the film — if just for the sake of some more obscure comic mutants making an appearance.

Wolverine goes back in time in order to motivate the younger versions of Charles Xavier (James McAvoy), Magneto (Michael Fassbender) and Mystique (Jennifer Lawrence) to change the course of events in history.

Hugh Jackman's Wolverine is transported through the power of the mutant Kitty Pryde (Ellen Page). Apparently he's the only one who can make the journey to the past due to his healing powers, which will let him heal his mind after the long journey through time.

Thus comes the excuse to make Hugh Jackman's Wolverine the star of the film. How convenient! Of course, the real reason is that the X-Men franchise has spent three main films and two spinoffs building Jackman up as the main protagonist. According to the law of the superhero movie he must be the star of this one as well.

Days of Future Past is based on a 1980s comic arc where Kitty Pryde, from a dystopian future where mutants are hunted and killed, transfers her consciousness back to her 1970s body to change an event that would trigger the mass fear of mutants. Page has proven herself to be a sympathetic and engaging lead ("Inception," "Juno"). A film starring Page would have been original, showing off a complex female superhero at a time when the genre is dominated by white, male heroes. It would be fresh, unique and probably powerful.

I wish that were the movie that had been made.

Class-Consciousness and Potato Chips: How bougie are yours?

Chips packages are written to appeal to your wealth, according to our columnists Keri and Kelsi Matwick in this week's Matwicks' Musings and Munchings. Pg 9.

What your preferred package of potato chips says about you

How much money you make, say linguists

KERI AND KELSIE MATWICK

Avenue Writers

Picture this: You and your friends are hanging out in the backyard, playing Frisbee or cornhole, waiting for the hamburgers to grill on the barbecue.

It's a summer evening and the sun is beginning to set, and the heat is subsiding. The smell of the barbecue wafts through the air and your grill-master friend hollers that the burgers are ready. You settle into a lawn chair with a cool beverage in one hand and a plate of food in the other. You reach into the potato chip bag for a perfect, salty crunch to counter the juicy meat, tomatoes, ketchup and bun. Stop a minute and look at the potato chip bag.

What does the advertising say on the bag? What are the descriptions? All natural? Kettle cooked? Since 1955? These descriptions indicate more than just the kind of chip or how it is made. Rather, the advertising language gives insight to one's identity, particularly socioeconomic class and values.

You probably could guess that the language on a Cheetos bag targets the lower class, budget conscious and perhaps college students (hey, it's cheap and cheesy), while a bag of Boulder Canyon chips or Kettle Brand appeals to the upper class. But wait, beyond the price and social class matchup, there's more that is revealed in the advertising language on the chip bag.

A study by linguists at Stanford University found that more expensive chip brands use more words, more complex language, longer sentences and uncommon words than inexpensive chips. Compare "flair," "savory" and "culinary" on expensive chip bags with the more common words "fresh," "light," "basic," and "extra" on inexpensive bags.

Inexpensive: "What gives our chips their exceptional great taste? It's no secret.

It's the way they're made!"

Expensive: "We use totally natural ingredients, hand rake every batch, and test chips at every stage of preparation to ensure quality and taste."

Yet prevalent in both types of chips (expensive and inexpensive) is the appeal for authenticity. Americans want the real deal, but what this means depends on social class.

Advertising language conveys in different ways how a chip bag is authentic, ultimately hoping to convince consumers that "If you buy our chip bag, you're buying into authenticity."

Advertising language aimed at the upper class emphasizes health and natural living (all natural, sea salt, only real food ingredients, kettle cooked, totally natural and never fried). Advertising toward the working class makes references to tradition and historicity with an emphasis on the company's early founding and long histories (since 1986, an old family recipe, Bill and Sally Utz believed, classic American snacks).

So what kind of potato chip you had for lunch or dinner says a lot about your identity, socioeconomic class and notion of authenticity.

According to Adam Drewnowski, an epidemiologist at the University of Washington, "In America, food has become the premier marker of social distinctions, that is to say—social class. It used to be clothing and fashion, but no longer, now that 'luxury' has become affordable and available to all."

This week's 'the nibble'... Do you think chocolate bars would show similar results? Or is another value besides authenticity promoted? And in a different way?

For a non rom-com look at long-term lovers, see 'Le Week-End'

JACKSON HART

Avenue Writer

"Le Week-End," playing at the Hippodrome State Theatre until June 5, is a small marvel of a film. Though it deals with a subject that (on the surface) is hard for college students to relate to — the boredom that grows in a long relationship — "Le Week-End" is still full of small, often devastating truths about the human condition we can all relate to.

This is the story of Meg and Nick Burrows — a couple celebrating their anniversary in the city of love. Meg (Lindsay Duncan) is impulsive and seeks adventure and excitement, while her husband, Nick (Jim Broadbent), is fussy and anxious. The opening scene of her pointedly reading a book, while he frets over where the maps and euros are, perfectly describes their marriage.

Her ultimate goal in Paris is great food, excellent wine and a spark of romance: His is to find time to discuss retiling their bathroom.

Director Roger Michell ("Notting Hill") does an admirable job of not letting the Burrows become caricatures.

I have seen all too often a movie make its leads one-dimensional — in less talented hands, Nick could have been pathetic and Meg cruel. But these two are never less than nuanced, complex human beings.

Meg publicly accuses Nick of being too clingy yet panics like a small child when she wakes and cannot find him. He seems complacent but admits to considering starting everything over. The film accurately depicts a long-term relationship, familiar to anyone who has parents or grandparents who have been together for a long time — often barbed and insufferable but never unloving.

Their relationship is summed up brilliantly about halfway through the film, when Meg tells Nick, "You make blood boil more than anybody else."

"The sign of a deep connection," is his reply.

Even at the climax of the film, when Meg is considering leaving with another man, the audience knows it won't really happen. They are too devoted to each other. She just wants to make him say it.

"Le Week-End," though mainly drama, can also be very witty, and the main source of amusement is their sex life (or lack of it).

"Your vagina has been something of a closed book for 20 years now," Nick tells Meg after getting a dismissive "What for?" when he asks if he can touch her.

He suggests taking their love-making "into another dimension" by pretending they're other people, a suggestion to which she disdainfully replies, "if you stay awake." In one of the films funniest lines Meg complains — after being accused of adultery — "What a waste, to be accused of being a whore and to be so innocent."

Each of the film's leads has received some award for acting, and they richly deserve it. The film would be much less without their emotional vulnerability and dry wit.

It is unusual to see a screen relationship so brutally honest yet intensely romantic and that has much to do with Duncan and Broadbent's chemistry on screen. I give "Le Week-End" four stars out of five.

Mac Miller's New 'Faces'

PATRICK GLYNN
Avenue Writer

Mac Miller, also known as "Easy Mac with the Cheesy Raps," capitalized in his teenage years as a party rapper with chorus-driven songs of low lyrical depth like "Nikes on my Feet" and "Donald Trump."

On his latest free-for-download effort, "Faces," released on Mother's Day, Miller continued his development as a musician and self-conscious rapper, highlighted by mature production and lyrical content, where he delves more into his struggle with drug addiction, personal relationships and depression.

The 24-track mixtape is like an introduction to the new chapter in Miller's career, one that has him producing his own music with a wide range of sounds, from ambient jazz samples ("Here We Go," "Rain") to mellow, bass-heavy drums ("Polo Jeans," "Diablo") to church organ heavy beats ("What Do You Do," "New Faces"). Through all the faces Miller shows of himself, from boasting how cool it is to hang out with him ("Therapy") to revealing his heavy dependence on drugs and his depression ("Rain," "New Faces"), Miller shows he's in the music industry to make the music he wants and feels, a pleasure an independent artist like Miller has.

"Faces" continues the growth of his second studio album, "Watching Movies With the Sound Off," where he talked about depression and his stance in the music industry as an independent artist. He also started producing his own music, which helped him stray from the party-rap sound he rose to prominence with.

"Faces" is a long project to endure at more than an hour-and-a-half long, but you are bound to find a face of the 22-year-old you will enjoy looking at.

Softball set to square off in Women's College World Series

JORDAN MCPHERSON

Alligator Staff Writer @J_McPherson1126

They're back.

For the sixth time in coach Tim Walton's tenure, the Gators are heading to the Women's College World Series.

And with play starting today at noon against Baylor, Walton has no doubt Florida can end up on top in Oklahoma City.

"We've established that culture that we want to end our season at the College World Series," the ninth-year coach said. "This team is no different than any other."

In order to reach Oklahoma City, Florida had to take out a hot-hitting Washington team in the Super Regionals.

And coming off a Seattle regional where they blanked their three opponents by a combined score of 26-0, the Huskies were not going down without a fight.

"I had a gut feeling this was going to go to a three-game series just by the nature of the stuff that I saw on film," Walton said.

Florida took an easy 9-0 win on Saturday, needing just one win against Washington on Sunday to punch its ticket to Oklahoma City.

After Washington took the 4-3 win in Game 2, the tiebreaker that immediately followed experienced weather delays — nearly six hours worth.

But after the rain cleared on two different occasions, the Gators were victorious, pulling out an 8-0 victory in five innings of work.

"I thought they really could've easily hung their heads after playing the first game well and just getting beat," Walton said. "At the end of the day I believe we left no doubt that we deserve to move on to the College World Series."

• • •

Fresh off the first rain delay in the winner-take-all match against Washington, Kelsey Stewart made a hit that symbolized her role in Florida's offense.

Facing a 1-1 count with two outs in the bottom of the fourth, the sophomore struck a three-run home run to right field to give Florida a 4-0 lead right after a crack of lightning lit up the sky.

But Stewart didn't see the bolt that brightened the grey-filled sky over Katie Seashole Pressly Stadium.

She didn't need to.

"I heard everybody with their oohs and ahhs," she said.

Even without seeing the lightning crack, Stewart's seventh home run lit up Florida's offense just like she has done all season.

The Wichita, Kan., native leads

UF in batting average (.435), doubles (14), triples (6), stolen bases (34) and multi-hit games (29) good enough for first-team All-American status.

And after making it to the Super Regional for the second time in her career, Stewart knew Florida wasn't going to lie down.

"Our hype number was super high at that point," Stewart said. "I knew there was no losing for my team. I knew my senior pitcher was going to go out there and wasn't going to let us lose, and I knew all of the girls were still going to be up and fight until the end."

• • •

Now that they're one of the final eight teams competing in Division I softball, the Gators look to continue their success.

For Florida, that success starts in the pitching circle.

And with the circle comes ace Hannah Rogers.

The senior has three complete-game shutouts in her career — including two last weekend against Washington — to tie her with Stephanie Brombacher for the second-most in program history with games still to play. She is Florida's first four-time All-American — with one first-team selection (2013), two second-team nominations (2011 and 2012) and one third-team nod (2014).

But her performance in the deciding game against Washington is one that Walton will never forget.

"I could see it in her eyes when she was throwing the ball," Walton said. "I saw something in Hannah (on Sunday) that I hadn't seen in four years."

In that final game — through the delays, the waiting and the pressure — Rogers struck out six batters, allowing just one hit and three walks. She needed just 83 pitches to get the win.

"I think it's more just of a mental game," Rogers said. "That's just when you really have to keep your focus and make sure that you're not letting anything get in the way of you whenever you do have a long delay like that."

And even with all she's accomplished, Rogers has one more goal

Allegations read in Hernandez double-murder case

@RagjUF

Former Florida football player Aaron Hernandez pleaded not guilty on seven charges — including two counts of first-degree murder — during his arraignment Wednesday in a Boston courtroom.

The list of allegations, rattled off by Patrick Haggan, the Suffolk County (Mass.) First Assistant District Attorney, paints a vivid picture of the night Daniel de Abreu and Safiro Furtado were fatally wounded in a car in the early-morning hours of July 16, 2012.

The championship taper has come again as Florida has a grand opportunity at redeeming itself on why it deserves to be No. 1.

After faltering at the NCAA Indoor Championships earlier in the season with third-place finishes on the men's and women's side, the Gators enter the Outdoor Championship ranked first.

What better way for Florida to get redemption when you have arguably the most elite triple jumper in the nation in Ciarra Brewer?

Brewer has demonstrated what it takes to be consistent in her time at Florida — capturing three consecutive Southeastern Conference titles — and was recognized as SEC Co-Women's Field Athlete of the Year.

She looks to lead her top-ranked

Local business capitalizes on 'Famous Jameis' crabgate

RICHARD JOHNSON

Alligator Staff Writer

@RagJUF

As you walk past "Gator Mania" in the Oaks Mall, you take in a storefront that vomits orange and blue. But hanging on a mannequin in a display window is an orange shirt with a blue crab on it that has the No. 5 right in the middle, inviting you to visit 'Jameis' famous crab shack emporium."

It's poking fun at Florida State's two-sport athlete Jameis Winston, and it's a hot seller.

"Our crabs are always at a five finger discount," the $18.99 shirt reads on the back, taking a sardonic play at the FSU athlete's recent shoplifting fiasco from the seafood department of a Tallahassee Publix.

20-year-old Taylor Macdonald has worked at the Oaks Mall Gator Mania for more than a year as a sales associate. She says people will come in to the store just because they see the shirt.

The shirt is made by Smack Apparel, a popular clothing line that makes colorful shirts that takes shots at many of the rivalries in college sports, and isn't exclusive to just UF and its blood-feuds.

Macdonald is a big Gators fan who said Winston is "a good quarterback" but "not exactly the brightest bulb." She says Florida State fans often come in the store and actually laugh at the shirt.

"The shirt does bring in people because they see it and they're 'oh, that's so funny,'" Macdonald said. "I mean I think it's hilarious. I actually have the shirt."

"It's the first one where people that are FSU fans have come and been like 'I disagree with that, but that's funny. In the past we've gotten stuff for FSU, gotten stuff for Georgia, gotten stuff for Miami ... but even FSU fans see that one and they're like 'OK, that's funny.'"

Justin Burger

Gator Mania employee

Richard Johnson / Alligator Staff

Shirts on display at Gator Mania in the Oaks Mall making fun of Jameis Winston shoplifting crabs have been popular among Florida fans.

22-year-old Justin Burger has it too. He works the floor at the Archer Rd. Gator Mania location which features the shirt less prominently than its mall counterpart. He's not a fan of Winston as a person but thinks it's "outrageous" not to think he's a great player.

Burger says his store got the shirts two days after Winston's incident happened April 29, and there was shock from many shoppers at how quickly Gator Mania was able to get it.

"It's the first one where people that are FSU fans have come and been like 'I disagree with that, but that's funny,'" Burger said. "In the past we've gotten stuff for FSU, gotten stuff for Georgia, gotten stuff for Miami ... but even FSU fans see that one and they're like 'OK, that's funny.'"

So whether your quarterback is lifting crabs or your linebacker is barking at a police dog, there will always be humorous cannon fodder for one side to lob jokes at toward the other.

It gives the rivalry a 365-day-a-year feel to it, and that can be further illustrated by what sits outside the Archer Rd. Gator Mania in the parking lot: a black Chrysler 300, with a Florida State Seminoles logo on its license plate.

Lacrosse signees tapped for Under Armour All-American team

THE FIVE PLAYERS WILL ARRIVE IN THE FALL OF 2014.

EDEN OTERO

Alligator Writer

@edenotero_1

As the season ended for Florida in a devastating 12-11 loss against then-No.5 seed Northwestern (14-7) on May 17, the Gators are already working toward boosting their roster for 2015.

On May 19, five Florida signees were named Under Armour All-Americans.

Under Armour All-Americans include the nation's top 90 high school senior lacrosse players and are selected by a panel of lacrosse experts. The list takes about a year to put together, and players are placed based on how good they are at their positions.

The players that have been selected for this year's Under Armour All-American team will play in the ninth-annual Under Armour All-American Lacrosse Classic on July 12 at Towson University's Johnny Unitas Stadium.

The five players — Olivia Cole, CeCe Finney, Isabella O'Connor, Allie Pavinelli and Shayna Pirreca — will be entering Florida in the fall to begin their freshman seasons with the Gators.

Cole will be coming in, most likely, as a second string keeper. Sophomore Mary-Sean Wilcox will be going into her junior year at the time of Cole's arrival and has more than proved her strengths in the cage after making a season-high 77 saves for 2014.

Finney is the only midfielder of the signees on the Under Armour All-American list. However, Finney will be well received next season. During the 2014 season, one of the Gators biggest issues was dealing with a depleted midfield after losing 11 seniors to graduation in 2013.

Players like juniors Nora Barry and Shannon Gilroy made up for the depletion on the midfield, but coach Amanda O'Leary was constantly working to rest midfield by relying heavily on the defense.

O'Connor, Pavinelli and Pirreca are all attackers. Most likely, the three players will become a combination of attackers and midfielders since Florida has seven attackers already.

If the three are used only as attackers, they will be facing off against some of the biggest offensive playmakers for the 2014 season, aside from Gilroy and Barry.

Some of the players include freshman Sammi Burgess, who had the second-highest point total for the Gators in 2014, and sophomores Lauren Lea, who has been instrumental around the crease on ground balls and passing, and Devon Schneider, who is known for using her height to score easy points over shorter keepers.

With the loss of only two players this season — keeper Cara Canington and defender Krista Grabher — Florida won't have as much to prove, but that won't stop it from looking for a national title.

Breaking down the Women's College World Series field

JORDAN MCPHERSON

Alligator Staff Writer @J_McPherson1126

Eight teams remain in the hunt for the title as the top softball team in the country. Each team took different paths to make it, but in the end, they all made it to Oklahoma City. With action beginning today, alligatorSports took a look at each opening-round matchup.

Game 1: No. 5 seed Florida (50-12) vs. No. 13 Seed Baylor (47-14)
RPI: 1 (UF) vs. 12 (BU)
Batting Average: .312 (UF) vs. .305 (BU)
Team ERA: 2.02 (UF) vs. 1.55 (BU)
Fielding Percentage: .978 (UF) vs. .965 (BU)

Florida analysis: The Gators have come a long way since Tim Walton became head coach in 2006.

They are competing in their sixth Women's College World Series in seven years, but this time around, they hope to win it all.

Florida is led on offense by sophomore Kelsey Stewart and junior Lauren Haeger, while everyone who's stepped into the batter's box this season has at least a .303 on base percentage. In the circle, UF has a three-headed rotation, with senior Hannah Rogers, Haeger and freshman Delanie Gourley being able to step in the starting lineup during any given game.

Baylor analysis: After finishing second in the Big 12 and hosting its first NCAA Regional since 2009, Baylor had a tough draw in the Super Regionals — No. 4 seed Georgia. But the Bears made quick work of the Bulldogs, sweeping UGA on its home field by an aggregate 15-4 score.

Baylor has one of the best pitchers in the country in Whitney Canion. A sixth-year senior, Canion has a career 1.40 ERA and has fanned 1,463 batters in 1,107.1 innings.

At the plate, redshirt sophomore Linsey Hays paces the Bears with 13 home runs and a .643 slugging mark.

Game 2: No. 1 seed Oregon (54-7-1) vs. No. 8 seed Florida State (55-7)
RPI: 5 (OU) vs. 7 (FSU)
Batting Average: .349 (OU) vs. .309 (FSU)
Team ERA: 1.81 (OU) vs. 1.44 (FSU)
Fielding Percentage: .971 (OU) vs. .968 (FSU)

Oregon analysis: The Ducks have one of the best hitters in the country in Courtney Ceo. The senior shortstop leads the country with a .492 clip at the plate and is 18th in the nation with a .532 on base percentage. In NCAA play, the Meadow Vista, Calif., native has a .611 batting average with two home runs and three stolen bases.

Oregon also has a valuable arm in Cheridan Hawkins. The sophomore southpaw has a 33-4 record on the year with 11 solo shutouts and 313 strikeouts in just 230 innings en route to first team All-Pac-12 and first team All-Pacific Region.

Florida State analysis: Since NCAA action began, FSU has a .247 batting average — the second worst clip of the eight remaining teams. The Seminoles need to see more output from Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year Maddie O'Brien — who is just 2 for 13 in six NCAA contests after posting a .440 batting average in the regular season.

FSU also needs Lacey Waldrop — the USA Softball National Player of the Year — to continue her dominance in the circle. The junior pitched 39 of FSU's 45 innings in NCAA action, allowing just nine earned runs and striking out 26 batters in the process.

Game 3: No. 6 seed Louisiana-Lafayette (49-8-1) vs. No. 14 seed Kentucky (49-17)
RPI: 6 (ULL) vs. 15 (UK)
Batting Average: .307 (ULL) vs. .264 (UK)
Team ERA: 2.77 (ULL) vs. 2.23 (UK)
Fielding Percentage: .960 (ULL) vs. .972 (UK)

Louisiana-Lafayette analysis: The Ragin' Cajuns have power throughout their lineup. In 2014, Louisiana-Lafayette has four batters with double-digit home run totals and five with at least 37 RBIs. In five NCAA contests, ULL hit nine home runs, with catcher Lexie Elkins hitting four of them.

In the circle, Christina Hamilton takes the bulk of the load. The junior right-handed pitcher has pitched 224.1 of the Ragin' Cajuns 400 frames, accruing a 29-2 record, a 1.53 ERA and a 2.95:1 strikeout-to-walk ratio in the process.

Kentucky analysis: UK is the other team that had to win on the road in the Super Regionals to clinch a berth in the Women's College World Series, topping No. 3 seed UCLA in three games to advance. On paper, the Wildcats — with the lowest batting average and the third-worst ERA of the field — have a tough hill to climb in their first WCWS appearance.

But behind sophomore right-handed pitcher Kelsey Nunley (29-9, 1.85 ERA, 261.1 IP, 209 H, 202 K, 87 BB) in the circle, Kentucky looks to continue its best season in program history.

Game 4: No. 2 seed Alabama (50-11) vs. No. 7 seed Oklahoma (50-11)
RPI: 3 (UA) vs. 8 (OU)
Batting Average: .320 (UA) vs. .327 (OU)
Team ERA: 2.20 (UA) vs. 2.74 (OU)
Fielding Percentage: .971 (UA) vs. .978 (OU)

Alabama analysis: Alabama looks to win its second national title in three years. To do so, the Crimson Tide will look to outfielder Haylie McCleney and pitcher Jaelyn Traina to roll over the competition.

McCleney paces 'Bama with a .451 batting average — good for the 10th-best mark in the country. The Morris, Ala., sophomore also boasts the country's fourth-best on base percentage (.567).

Traina, the Southeastern Conference Pitcher of the Year, has a 23-3 record in the circle. In NCAA play, the Naples senior boasts a 1.96 ERA, allowing seven earned runs in 25 innings.

Oklahoma analysis: The Sooners enter their ninth Women's College World Series after a decisive three-game series against 10th-seeded Tennessee in the Super Regionals. By advancing, Oklahoma looks to win its second title in as many years, and looks to its offense to carry the load.

felt he was being unfairly targeted.

They then went into a separate nightclub across the street, where Hernandez pointed out to his friend a group that entered 15 minutes later. He identified one of the individuals as the person that had spilled a drink on him earlier. Haggan said surveillance footage proves this claim as false, as de Abreu and his group did not leave the Cure Lounge until "after 2 a.m."

Shortly after that exchange, Hernandez and his friend left to go back to the parking garage where his SUV and — coincidentally — de Abreu's BMW were both parked. Hernandez and his friend left the garage, drove around the area, then parked on a nearby street. Once parked, Hernandez allegedly popped the hood and retrieved a .38 caliber revolver he had stashed away. At "approximately 2:10 a.m.," de Abreu and the four people accompanying him left the Cure Lounge.

At 2:17 a.m., de Abreu, Furtado and a third person walked to the BMW. Hernandez's SUV drove past the parking garage, slowing down as they passed the group. Three minutes later, Hernandez's SUV passed by again as the other two people with de Abreu waited outside the parking garage to be picked up.

As the BMW left the garage, Hernandez allegedly said "there they go" and followed it. He allegedly stopped at a red light, then ran through it to catch up with the BMW. When Hernandez caught up, Haggan alleges that Hernandez leaned out of his driver's side window, said "yo, what's up now?" followed by a racial slur, and then fired multiple times into the car.

Haggan said a witness claimed they heard a clicking noise after at least five rounds were fired, pointing to the fact that Hernandez kept pulling the trigger after the gun was empty. De Abreu suffered a fatal chest wound, Furtado, a fatal head wound and both died at the scene. A passenger traveling in the middle seat in the back of the car suffered an arm wound but survived.

"I think I got one in the head and one in the chest."

Aaron Hernandez

Former Florida football player

Hernandez and his friend then drove to Hartford, Conn., where Hernandez searched online for news about the shooting. They arrived there at 5 a.m. and on the way, Hernandez allegedly told his friend, "I think I got one in the head and one in the chest."

He then phoned his cousin Tonya Singleton who drove up from Hernandez's hometown of Bristol, Conn. She came and switched her car for the SUV they were initially driving in.

The SUV was stored in Singleton's garage in Bristol until it was found by police while searching the home on June 26, 2013. Authorities were investigating the June 16, 2013 murder of Odin Lloyd — another case Hernandez is connected to.

The alleged murder weapon was found on June 21, 2013 after inventory was taken of the items in a vehicle involved in a collision that was driven by a Bristol resident with ties to Hernandez.

Hernandez will next appear in court in relation to the de Abreu-Furtado double-murder on June 24.

she wants to check off her list: hoisting the NCAA Championship trophy at ASA Hall of Fame Stadium.

And if she plays anywhere close to how she did against Washington, Walton won't be concerned.

"She was impressive. She just one-hit one of the best hitting teams in the country," Walton said. "I think that's overshadowed by the score, but she was dynamite."

• • •

Rogers wasn't the only Florida player whose performance may have been overshadowed during the Super Regionals.

Lauren Haeger could claim that title as well.

Haeger was Florida's starting pitcher during its Game 2 loss, but she still had a solid outing. The junior right-hander surrendered six hits and gave up four runs — only three of which were earned — while striking out seven batters and not drawing a walk.

But her contributions in that game went further than the circle. Haeger drove in two of Florida's three runs when she belted a two-run home run — her team-leading 20th of the season and fourth since NCAA play began — that bounced off the center field scoreboard.

But outside of her homer, the UF offense failed to provide Haeger any wiggle room, with the rest of the team going 1-10 at the plate with runners in scoring position and leaving seven runners on base.

"Lauren pitched her butt off (in the first game Sunday),"

Walton said, "and we didn't give her any help."

Haeger is used to producing at the plate when she's also in the circle.

The junior leads Florida with a .674 slugging mark this season. However, in the 23 games where she made an appearance in the circle, that number jumps to .764. When looking at just the 15 games where she pitched at least four innings, her slugging mark soars to .843.

"When I pitch a game, I feel like I can help myself more," Haeger said earlier in the season. "It's just something that I've always done. If you hit for yourself, you kind of feel like you can contribute both ways."

• • •

The Gators are ready. After fighting for more than 11 hours against Washington on Sunday to reach the Women's College World Series, Florida is prepared for whatever challenges will come its way in Oklahoma City.

The first one is Baylor.

The fifth-seeded Gators (50-12) square off against the No. 13 seed Bears (47-14) today at noon to begin the final leg of their journey.

Baylor pulled off an upset to advance to its third Women's College World Series appearance, sweeping No. 4 seed Georgia by a combined 15-4 in Athens, Ga.

But regardless of the opponents, regardless of the situation, the Gators are ready to play in Oklahoma City — and they know they should be there.

"It is an expectation," Walton said. "I think ultimately we've created that."

women's team to earning more than just a podium finish.

"I don't really care about rankings. It's cool to see where you are at that time, but when it comes to championships or certain meets, it's who decides to perform that day," Brewer said.

Preaching words that come from coach Mike Holloway's state of mind, Brewer has incorporated what her mentor has instilled on the entire team.

Brewer said when Holloway gives his team a pep-talk about rankings not meaning anything, he helps the athletes bring the pressure down and gets everyone to not worry about the ranks.

There is only one mission for the Gators, and that is being outdoor champions.

The three-day event beginning today requires the Gator athletes to finish in the top 12 in their respective events in order to proceed to Oregon for the national finals.

Top-ranked Florida qualified 37 athletes (20 women, 17 men) for prelims, and one athlete (Brittany Harrell) has already punched a ticket for finals in Eugene, Ore., that begin on June 11.

UF will take multiple star athletes from Arman Hall, Najee Glass, Dedric Dukes and Hugh Graham Jr., to throwers like Kyle Starwn on the men's side.

For the women, mid-distance runners like Cory McGee, Agata Strausa, Ebony Eutsey and Kyra Jefferson guide both top squads.

And who can forget about the triple jump titleholder Marquis Dendy — a national champion on his own.

Two of Florida's five national championships come from outdoor titles and the men's team looks back at their repeat championships in 2012 and 2013 to aid for a three-peat.

But before the Gators jump ahead to the Historic Hayward Field in Oregon, they must first qualify in prelims and leave their top ranking behind them.

"Once the meet is done (nationals) that will tell you how your progress was," Brewer said.
