KENT FUCHS CHOSEN AS NEXT UF PRESIDENT

It's pronounced "fox"

It took less than three minutes for the Board of Trustees to unanimously determine UF's 12th president, Kent Fuchs (pronounced "fox"), on Wednesday.

After five months of searching and a $95,000 search committee fee, the provost of Cornell University will succeed President Bernie Machen's seat on Jan. 1.

"When I first met Dr. Fuchs, he clearly was outstanding," said Presidential Search Committee Chairman Steven Scott. "His integrity, his judgment – and the more I looked at other folks and considered other people, he clearly stood out. He's a true academic leader."

Fuchs, 59, has 20 years of leadership at land-grant universities like the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, Purdue University and Cornell. He said his immediate goal for the Spring is to learn about UF from the students, faculty and alumni.

"I have less than roughly two months to make the transition," he said. "I'm going to use the first 100 days in developing relationships — the first 100 days in listening and understanding aspirations individuals have."

Fuchs said he plans to set up specific three-year goals on building and implementing UF's preeminence in the summer and fall of 2015.

"I have endorsed those," he said. "I am enthusiastic about those, and I think it's really exciting."

Within his 12 years as the Joseph Silbert Dean of Engineering and as provost at Cornell, Fuchs developed a plan for preeminence to make Cornell one of the world's top 10 universities. Among his initiatives to enhance Cornell's academic standing, he led the effort in building a graduate school of applied sciences in New York City.

"Perhaps Kent's greatest legacy as provost will be the Cornell Tech campus on Roosevelt Island," Cornell University President David Skorton said in a statement. "More than any other individual, Kent's foresight and determination resulted in our successful bid to establish Cornell Tech."

Scott said the Board of Trustees felt like it needed a new leader to make UF a top 10 public university. UF is currently ranked No. 14 by the U.S. News & World Report.

"And he's that person," Scott said. "Now we're on our way."

Scott said Fuchs sees his transition to UF as coming back home.

Originally from Miami, Fuchs graduated from Miami Killian Se-

Man fatally shoots himself in City of Alachua hostage situation Woman held hostage with rifle was unharmed

MELISSA MIHM

A man armed with a rifle held a woman hostage before turning the gun on himself Tuesday night.

Alachua County deputies received a phone call at about 8:30 p.m. from a woman saying 49-year-old Timothy Loren Brower had a rifle and was threatening to kill himself.

Before police had the chance to arrive at 14114 NW 173rd St. in Alachua, the woman said she left the residence, got inside of a white GMC van and locked the doors for safety, according to a release.

But after the woman locked herself in the van, Brower smashed a window to get inside — still armed with a rifle — and drove away from the residence, Alachua County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Becky Butscher wrote in an email.

When police caught up to the vehicle traveling south on Interstate 75, they were able to confirm that the woman who called deputies was inside of the van with Brower.

Police believed the woman was being held hostage and began to pursue the car. Brower drove to a home at 211 SE Wacahoota Road in Micanopy.

When he stopped, he exited the car with the rifle, a release said.

Police witnessed him dragging the

RANKINGS

Gainesville ranks fifth-best small city for college students

PATRICK PINAK
Alligator Staff Writer ppinak@alligator.org

It's great to be a Florida Gator – and to live in Gainesville. Gainesville ranked No. 5 in the top 20 best small cities for college students, according to the ranking released Monday by The American Institute for Economic Research. Factors like student life, culture, economic health and opportunity were assessed from various small college cities nationwide.

UF spokesman Steve Orlando said one of the most important factors was how closely bound the university and community are.

"It's hard for anybody to think of Gainesville without thinking about the University of Florida," he said.

Orlando said the music scene and locally owned restaurants make for a vibrant and interesting city culture.

"Everything really centers around and caters to students," he said.

Orlando said county public schools will be closed Friday along with UF for the Homecoming Parade, which shows how invested the Gainesville and Alachua communities are in UF.

Tallahassee ranked No. 19 on the list of 20 cities. Orlando said this could be because Florida's capital has other major identifying factors, like state government.

Nicholas Smith, general manager of The Swamp Restaurant, said his business has been around for about 20 years.

"Gainesville has everything you need while still being a small town," he said, "and we're happy to be a part of it."

Smith, who attended UF in 1997, said he moved away after college but couldn't resist coming back. He said Gainesville is different from other small cities because it doesn't feel clustered.

"You have a mix of outdoor things to do like Paynes Prairie and Lake Wauburg, a great university, great arts scene and, of course, great sports," he said.

Simon Nash, a barista at Maude's Café, said Gainesville is like a big city but with half the cost of living.

"It has lots of affordable, interesting restaurants, beautiful women, a great school and a great art scene," he said.

Nash said Gainesville is different because it's so diverse, including downtown. He said his favorite part of Gainesville is its high concentration of intelligent, progressive-minded young people.

"University of Florida people tend to be more my cup of tea," he said.

Kelly Vidal, a 21-year-old UF political science senior, said she thinks Gainesville was ranked high because of the amount of students in the population. She said she also likes that everything she needs is by campus, unlike in Tallahassee.

"It makes sense that the best school in Florida is ranked so highly," Vidal said.

IFAS to receive $300,000 to help sustain growing world population

MAHOGANY BROWN
Alligator Contributing Writer

UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences has partnered with two global agricultural companies to help sustain the world's growing population by 2050.

Limagrain, an international agricultural group, will provide $200,000 to IFAS over a three-year period, while its daughter company HM. CLAUSE will provide $100,000 over a five-year period to the Challenge 2050 project.

Through the Challenge 2050 project, students take four courses on topics such as global food-system problems to earn a Global Leadership and Change certificate.

The IFAS and College of Liberal Arts and Sciences certification program helps students create solutions to global problems.

Teresa Balsler, the dean of IFAS, said HM. CLAUSE believed in the project when the idea was first brought to them.

"They got really excited about it, and they were the ones who initially invested money in it," she said.

The project, which started in 2013, will bring executives from agriculture companies on campus to mentor students in the certificate program. Students may also get offered internships from the companies, according to an IFAS news release.

"What's neat about this is it's all students from different majors," Balsler said. "We need everybody's perspective, we need everybody's ideas and we need everybody working together on this."

About 30 students are participating in each of the Fall courses for the project.

Balsler said the students form bonds when trying to solve these issues.

"It's the only class I've ever been in where on the last day of class they all asked for a class photo," she said.

Christine Adams, a biology senior, said the project is important for the future of the planet.

"I think it is something we need to focus on in the future to be able to feed everyone and have a sustainable world by 2050," Adams, 22, said. "Our population keeps on growing, so it is important to have the resources to sustain the population."

Balsler said the project has turned into something that will really make change in the world.

"For me, there's a validation in knowing that I could bring a crazy idea to this campus, and people would get behind it and they would want to make it happen," she said.

Police dog tracks down, captures local man after two-hour manhunt

CHABELI HERRERA
Alligator Staff Writer

cherrera@alligator.org

A Citra man accused of attempting to cash fraudulent checks evaded capture for two hours Wednesday as he led a force of police officers, helicopters and K-9 units on a manhunt through dense forests and swampy grounds.

A police dog, Argos, caught Deontae Demetris Kelly, 23, who went underwater to elude officers near Fred Bear Drive and Williston Road, according to a report.

The chase began at about 11:15 a.m. when Gainesville Police received a call from Gator's Dockside about suspicious checks.

Kelly had attempted to cash checks from Gator's Dockside at Publix on Southwest Archer Road. Publix alerted the sports bar and both confirmed to police that the checks were fraudulent.

GPD spokesman Officer Ben Tobias said Kelly did not work at Gator's Dockside, and it is believed that he was manufacturing the checks.

Kelly

Police said Kelly also attempted to cash other checks at a different Publix location Tuesday using his own ID.

But when police attempted to apprehend Kelly at Publix, he fled across Archer Road and into the woods behind WingHouse of Gainesville. GPD and helicopter units searched the area for Kelly. The Alachua County Sheriff's Office also joined the search when witnesses spotted Kelly outside of GPD jurisdiction.

After two hours, officers on foot captured Kelly in a swampy area of the woods.

"This incident is a perfect example of local law enforcement working as one team," Tobias said.

Kelly received treatment for a canine bite and other injuries. He will likely be charged with two counts of fraud, resisting arrest and potentially other probation-related charges. Tobias said Kelly also has a history in Marion County for fraud, battery on law enforcement and escape.

woman out of the car and walking toward the house, ignoring their commands to stop.

Making his way over to the residence, a deputy fired shots at Brower in an effort to protect the woman as well as potential residents inside the home and the deputies at the scene.

Brower then turned the gun on himself.

He was pronounced dead on scene.

A pending autopsy report will determine the official cause of Brower's death.

The deputy involved has not been identified and is on administrative leave until the investigations are complete, per standard procedure.

Including the Brower incident, there have been 11 officer-involved shootings by the sheriff's office in the last five years, Butscher said, the last one being July 21 in Gilchrist County.

In 2013, there were a total of 31 suicides in Alachua County – more than double the amount of homicides that year, according to the Florida Suicide Prevention Coalition.

Gilchrist County, where Don Spirit killed his daughter, six grandchildren and then himself on Sept. 18, had a total of two suicides and one homicide in 2013.

Brower had two traffic violations in 2009 – for operating a mobile vehicle with an expired registration and driving with a suspended license.

He is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Association for Computing Machinery.

His wife, Linda, holds three master's degrees and taught at The King's Academy in West Palm Beach earlier in her career.

The couple will move into the new 5,000-square-foot president's house on Village Drive at the start of his term.

UF spokeswoman Janine Sikes said the salary range of the new president was determined by an outside consultant and will range between $900,000 and $1.2 million.

"We have worked very, very hard — not near as hard as Dr. Scott — but certainly it's good to have the process behind us and be able to look forward to what happens in January," Sikes said.

Florida Congressman Ted Yoho gave a statement welcoming Fuchs and his wife to The Gator Nation.

"Dr. Fuchs proven leadership will help ensure that the proud heritage and reputation that has been earned at UF/IFAS — as one of the top leaders in the nation in higher academics and innovation — will not only remain intact but flourish," Yoho said.

Fuchs said interacting with students is a high priority because it is important for a president not to be aloof.

"I would love to get both face time as well as electronic interaction with the students and get to become a member of that community," Fuchs said. "With 50,000 students and just this wealth of graduates, it's important the president be visible and accessible."

Student Body President Cory Yeffet said he saw Fuchs as the best candidate.

"He's compassionate and cares about the students and really wants to get to know the student body and understand how he can work with students to accomplish the goal of becoming a top 10 public institution," Yeffet said.

Fuchs said he is enthusiastic and optimistic about the future of UF.

"It is an amazing place, and I'm so pleased we have this opportunity to be a part of this community," Fuchs said. "It's going to be a great privilege to Residents participated in an evening of live demonstrations, giveaways and tours at Gainesville Police headquarters Wednesday as a part of Celebrate Safe Communities.

The event was hosted by GPD in an effort to raise awareness for personal safety and crime reduction in the community.

"This is a chance for the community to come in and meet all the officers, see all the different resources and see some of the canines," said GPD spokesman Officer Ben Tobias.

Celebrate Safe Communities is an example of GPD's "community-oriented policing model," Tobias said, with local officers often working with residents to build trust between the department and the community.

Residents were able to walk around at the event and gather information from various organizations like Crime Prevention Security Systems, the Forensic Crime Unit and the Advanced Law Enforcement Rifle Team — all of which partner with GPD.

Every year, the department aims to bridge the gap between residents and officers, Tobias said.

Ericka Jackson, police crime analyst for the City of Gainesville, said when citizens, communities and law enforcement come together, "it helps better address crime and make the city a safer place to live."

This is the second year GPD has hosted the Celebrate Safe Communities event.

UF gets it right with Fuchs presidential selection

On Wednesday, the UF Board of Trustees selected Kent Fuchs to be the university's next president. Fuchs currently serves as the provost of Cornell University, one of the nation's premier institutions of higher learning.

Fuchs' academic credentials are impeccable, which makes him an ideal choice for the position. According to information provided by the UF Board of Trustees, Fuchs is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and numerous other academic and professional organizations.

As provost at Cornell, Fuchs oversaw a number of initiatives to help guide the university toward a top-10 ranking and to enhance its academic reputation. Fuchs has also demonstrated his commitment to diversity in academia through his leadership in Cornell's Toward New Destinations program. The board deserves credit for its decision making throughout the presidential selection process.

Hunter Rawlings, president of the Association of American Universities, effusively praised UF's choice of Fuchs, describing him as smart, highly organized, consultative yet also decisive; a person of high integrity and strong vision.

"He will be a superb leader for the University of Florida as well as a great colleague for his fellow AAU presidents and chancellors," Rawlings said.

In addition to stellar qualifications, Fuchs seemed enthusiastic about potentially becoming the next president of The Gator Nation. "It would be a real honor and privilege to be a member and a No. 1 fan of The Gator Nation," he said. Fuchs' response starkly contrasted his competitor, NYU Provost David McLaughlin's, apathetic response of: "I will be, at best, an honorary Gator."

UF's decision to select candidates with exceptional academic qualifications is especially relevant in the wake of Florida State University's selection of its own new president. FSU apparently chose its new leader, state Sen. John Thrasher, based on his extensive political and business connections and not on his academic credentials. In addition to serving as a Florida senator, Thrasher previously served as the chair of Gov. Rick Scott's re-election campaign.

Unlike the candidates selected by the board, Thrasher has no significant academic experience whatsoever. His supporters claimed he was selected based on his strong fundraising ability. However, Fuchs also has significant fundraising prowess, having raised $1 billion in gifts during his career at Cornell.

The selection of Fuchs demonstrates to the entire country that UF is serious about establishing itself as one of the nation's premier universities. The decision also shows that universities do not have to sacrifice a commitment to academics by hiring presidents who are little more than professional fundraisers.

UF students can be confident that their new president is firmly committed to making their school a better, stronger university. We look forward to a bold new era of growth and change at UF under Fuchs' leadership.

We can do more with modern technology

Last Wednesday, rockstar astrophysicist Neil deGrasse Tyson gave the keynote address at a conference for the information security industry. I refer to him as a rockstar because he's the only astrophysicist I know by name. I'd imagine I'm not alone.

The address was fairly lengthy and casual. Tyson wore jeans and joked about letters he got from ticked-off second graders after the revoking of Pluto's planetary status.

The most interesting portion of Tyson's spiel was when he called out the tech industry's startup culture, saying "society has bigger problems than what can be solved with your next app." Tyson was criticizing what he believes is a decline in American innovation.

We have an incredible amount of resources and potential, but we're using it to create goat simulators and new nude-picture-sharing technologies rather than things that actually benefit society.

The fact is, we're living in a period of incredible technological revolutions and innovations.

iPhones came out only seven years ago yet, for most of us, life without them is already wholly unimaginable.

This tremendous proliferation of information technology brings with it incredible potential, which we've mostly used so far to fulfill our desire for constant gratification and entertainment.

It makes sense that Tyson would give a speech lamenting the fact that technology isn't doing as much as it can to improve society before a group of people dedicated to promoting technologies that serve society's best interests.

Both Tyson and these technological innovators look at our advancements and see the capability to make even greater strides in health sciences, transportation and energy.

One thing Tyson didn't elaborate on is the effect our

Alec Carver
opinions@alligator.org

developments could have on broader social issues, which information technology isn't tackling at full capacity.

As any harping Journalism 2.0 advocate will eagerly tell you, social media is the biggest thing since the Gutenberg Bible.

Sure, social media was widely used to organize events from Ferguson to the Arab Spring to the Hong Kong protests. However, in none of these cases has real, lasting, positive change happened. Protests in St. Louis reignited last weekend, and the legacy of the Arab Spring so far has been a new crop of tyrants in Egypt and chaos in the Middle East so menacing that our military is getting involved yet again.

Even when technology is used this way, the goals are often superficial and anticlimactic. The truth campaign intends to use viral technology to mobilize our generation to stamp out cigarette smoking forever. It's a cool idea, but are there no other worthy causes? Smoking is horrible for you, but there isn't a single person over the age of 5 in this country who doesn't already know that. Surely we can set higher goals for ourselves.

With our vast resources and our ability to access and disseminate enormous amounts of information, we stand at an important point in history.

We are the ones who get to decide how these amazing technologies will be used. We get to help decide how today's kids and every generation after will interact with, understand and perceive their world.

With that, I'm going to go watch Netflix for the next dozen hours or so.

Christian musical acts to perform tonight at local church

Jason Gray, a Christian musician, is on a 21-city tour named after his No. 1 single on Billboard's AC Indicator chart, "With Every Act of Love." Gray, along with Unspoken, Lindsay McCaul and Carrollton, will be at Abundant Grace Community Church tonight.

Contemporary Christian artist Jason Gray's "With Every Act of Love Tour" will grace Gainesville tonight.

Gray is bringing his Centricity Music label-mates Unspoken, Lindsay McCaul and Carrollton to join in a soulful, infectious performance tonight at 7 p.m. at Abundant Grace Community Church, 12505 NW 39th Ave. Tickets can be purchased through iTickets.com for $15 today.

His latest album, "Love Will Have the Final Word," debuted on Billboard's Christian Albums at No. 10 and includes his first No. 1 single, which the tour is named after, on Billboard's Christian AC Indicator chart.

"I write from that place of wanting to tell my story authentically where people hear and say, 'Ah, me too,'" Gray said. "I usually write the songs that I want to hear and be true to my experience of grace, and do it in a way that's authentic."

He has a speech impediment, but it's lost when he starts to sing.

"What I'm the most interested in being a part of is healing," he said. "I care about music, it helps promote healing."

Mike Gilland, associate pastor of Abundant Grace Community Church and assistant program director for 106.9 The Pulse, said Gray is a man with a "mission and a message."

"The fact that he stutters, he's made that a part of his ministry, he uses it in his concerts, and he talks about serving a God who is able to overcome whatever people feel are their boundaries," Gilland said.

The 61-year-old Gainesville resident said he is humbled by the privilege of having such top-notch artists perform at his church.

"If you listen to any Christian radio station at all, the music is going to be very recognizable, very familiar," Gilland said.

Gray promises it will be a night to remember for his audience.

"The experience of the night will be a lot of joy and a lot of laughter," Gray said. "You'll be crying one moment and laughing the next, and it's something I'm grateful to be a part of."

Upcoming Events

Tonight: Catch Jason Aldean and Florida Georgia Line and at the Stephen C. O'Connell Center. The show starts at 7:30 p.m.

Tonight: Jason Gray and other Christian artists will be at Abundant Grace Community Church at 7 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday: At the Dudley Farm Paintout, artists will paint landscapes of the historic park and sell them afterward.

Sunday: Gainesville Community Playhouse's finale of "Les Miserables" will be at 2 p.m.

A whole latte fall-flavored love

KELSEY JORDAN

Avenue Writer

As the cool weather of autumn arrives, coffee drinkers are trading in their iced beverages for hot brews. Local cafe menus are filling up with flavors of the season, and while the pumpkin spice latte is a dead-set tradition, creative alternatives are emerging.

Put down the PSL and explore these original beverages local coffee shops created with fall in mind.

Maple latte at CYM Coffeehouse

5402 NW Eighth Ave.
Real maple syrup, cinnamon and nutmeg create a dense, buttery flavor that captures the essence of fall. One sip, and you'll be taken to fall festivals, pumpkin patches and campfires. With a white picket fence and a decorative fireplace, the shop makes you feel at home — all you need is a wool blanket and your favorite book to complete the picture.

Mexican hot chocolate at Karma Cream

1025 W. University Ave.
The zing of cayenne pepper instantly surprises your tongue in this unconventional translation of the traditional hot chocolate. Other ingredients include cinnamon, cocoa powder and a vanilla syrup that gives it sweetness. Every part of the well-crafted hot chocolate tastes intentional and is certifiably organic. For an extra treat, pair it with the shop's pumpkin spice donut that tastes like it just came out of your grandmother's kitchen.

S'mores latte at Patticakes

9124 SW 51st Road
Drizzled with Ghirardelli chocolate syrup and garnished with crushed graham crackers and brown sugar, this gourmet latte will satisfy any sweet tooth. It's as if the best s'more you have ever had melted into a warm, liquid latte. Take your coffee to the shop's outdoor tables that overlook the turning leaves on trees lining the brick pavement.

Zombie latte at Coffee Culture

2020 NW 13th St.
You'll instantly be flooded with memories of Halloween nights from the cinnamon aroma that coats the foam. The sweetness of the steamed milk blends together with hints of macadamia nut flavor and seeps into a deep espresso. The intensity of the cinnamon spice outweighs the cream, producing a refined aftertaste.

Make plans now: Netflix is releasing all 236 episodes of "Friends" on New Year's Day. Who else is pumped?

Check out the Hipp's Halloween show:

"Slasher" premieres for the first time in Florida on Friday, following the unfortunate tale of a B-list actress in a D-list horror flick.

Raven-Symoné's social media storm

RACHEL WELCH
Avenue Writer

Former "The Cosby Show" and "That's So Raven" child star "set the Twitter on fire" Sunday night, according to Oprah Winfrey.

Social media ignited in response to 28-year-old Raven-Symoné's sexual orientation and exhaustion with being labeled — she's not gay, she's a human who loves humans; she's not African-American, she's simply an American.

"Oh, my lord," Winfrey said, as she shifted uncomfortably in her chair. "What did you just say? You're going to get a lot of flak for saying you're not African-American. You know that, right?"

Raven said even though her ancestors are in Africa, she doesn't know which country. But she does know her family's roots are in Louisiana, which makes her an American — a colorless person.

"(Raven) has a right to define herself however she wants," said UF director of African-American Studies Sharon Austin. "But it's not so much the way she defines herself, it's the way society defines her."

During the Reconstruction Era, blacks were classified by the "one-drop rule," where regardless of pigmentation, if a person had just one African ancestor, he or she was considered to be black.

"That's kind of still in effect now," Austin said. "When people look at you, if you have even one distant relative that is black, you are black. It's not like that in other countries."

UF health education and behavior student Debra Gaskin said she doesn't personally feel categorized by the one-drop rule but instead from stereotypes associated with being black.

"People get so used to different negative stereotypes being associated with a certain label," the 19-year-old said. "That's what makes them shy away from being labeled that way in the first place."

Gaskin said she doesn't take offense to Raven's bold statement. She agrees that color lines are not gone. But unlike Raven, Gaskin doesn't have a preference of what word to use in reference to her skin tone. "Black, African-American, whatever people call it," Gaskin said. "It's all in the intent behind what the person is trying to say. If you call me African-American with the intent of demeaning me, then yeah, I'll be offended."

Gaskin said she believes it's human nature to label each other, and regardless of Raven's rebelliousness, labels aren't going anywhere anytime soon.

Melissa Davis, administrative assistant for the UF English department, agreed that societal labels aren't going to disappear.

"We call people gay, we call people old, we call people ugly," Davis said. "We, as humans, need to put a name to something."

Davis said the most powerful statement from Raven was simply "I'm an American," and that's the piece social media should spread like wildfire.

"She's saying 'this is who I am first.' Like standing up and saying, 'I'm a woman' or 'I'm a man.' It's a label, but it's a label we can all wear."

Dating website finds UF females more selective than UF males when dating

MAHOGANY BROWN
Avenue Writer

A dating platform that makes finding love easier for students recently looked through its users from colleges in Florida to find out who were the pickiest when it came to dating.

Coffee Meets Bagel, an interactive website that makes dating as simple as taking a trip to Starbucks, found that female students at UF are more selective than males when it comes to dating.

The free service, which was created in 2012, introduces members to singles close to their network by using their Facebook accounts. Members are matched with someone every day at noon, and they have up to 24 hours to "like" or "pass" their match. More than 117,000 members from the top colleges in Florida — Florida State University, University of Miami, University of Central Florida, University of South Florida and UF — are using Coffee Meets Bagel.

Although University of Miami students were the pickiest, at UF, 70.9 percent of females passed their picks compared to just more than half of male users.

Alexa Ruskai, a UF communication sciences and disorders freshman, said she is not surprised female students are picky when choosing someone to date. "I feel like UF girls are strong, independent and smart, and I think that makes us more pickier," Ruskai, 18, said. "We know what we want, and we don't want to settle for something less, and a lot of UF girls have career goals and we want to find someone that is compatible with that."

Dawoon Kang, a co-founder of Coffee Meets Bagel, said the company likes to put out research and statistics like this because it can be exciting for the users on the site.

"We want to make fun, yet informative content for our members and all singles out there," she said, "but also use our content to understand and improve their dating lives because let's face it, dating can be hard sometimes."

Elizabeth Buckley, a Gainesville clinical psychologist, said using dating websites can maximize your chances of connecting with someone, but there are some guidelines students should follow.

"Like most endeavors in life, it's a matter of responsibility, safety and control," she said. "This is a good time in life to begin practicing listening to your gut, if you haven't been already. If anything sounds weird in a profile or in your email communications, it probably is."

Toasting to the holidays ahead

KERI AND KELSI MATWICK

Avenue Writers

Now is the time to start preparing for the holidays ahead. No, we don't mean shopping or menu planning, which are good ideas by the way, but preparing for the social events ahead. Ways to fine-tune your social etiquette are to know how to give good toasts, a universal practice of honoring a person or occasion with an expression of goodwill and a drink. The holidays present many opportunities to give toasts with gatherings of friends and family ahead, including parties, winter weddings and graduations.

Toasts occur in specific contexts, typically in conjunction with eating and always with guests or friends. The shared activity of drinking alcohol tends to give the interaction informality and lowers inhibition, while toasting formalizes it and makes it a constructive social event. The toaster stands, lifts a filled glass, gives a toast to the guest of honor and ends with formulaic cheers. Guests signal their approval with the clinking of lifted glasses and a "hear, hear." The final act of drinking, whether of alcohol or not, seals the ritual and bonds the group.

A basic condition, or felicity condition, in toasting is that the toast should express a wish regarded favorably by everyone at the group. Wedding toast scenes from romantic comedy movies often break this condition to provide comedic relief in a potentially stressful and emotionally high situation. For instance in the movie "Four Weddings and a Funeral," a best man's toast offsets the seriousness of the occasion but is kept appropriate with its incorporation of praise and well-wishes to the couple.

The term toast also refers to the verbal expression accompanying the drink. There are short and long toasts, light-hearted and serious ones or explicit and implicit ones. Here are some, courtesy of Real Simple magazine:

Blood, a D-list film director, a drugged-up mom and more

JASMINE WILDFLOWER OSMOND

Avenue Writer

With a set that features bloody mannequins chained to walls and a bathtub full of bloody body parts and severed heads, the Hippodrome State Theatre's Halloween play isn't scared of getting a little messy this year.

The Florida premiere of "Slasher" opens Friday night at the Hippodrome for $18 a ticket or $15 for students. It gives its viewers a horrifying and fun behind-the-scenes look at the production of horror films.

The play centers on Texan girl Sheena McKinney, played by Marissa Toogood, a Hippodrome company actress. McKinney is cast as the "Last girl" in a B-style horror movie called "Blood Bath," directed by a D-list Hollywood director. It might have been her big break into show business if her crazy, drugged-up, activist mother didn't show up to try to stop the filming by any means necessary.

You never know what's going to happen, especially with the Halloween shows, Toogood said. The director, Lauren Caldwell, didn't impose too much on the actors and let them create their own character portrayal.

"You can't help but love it," Toogood said. Gainesville loves Halloween, Caldwell said, and the Hippodrome has made a commitment to producing a Halloween-themed play every year for the past decade.

Almost 95 percent of the Halloween plays that the theater puts on are fun or spoofs. "Slasher" spoofs horror movies by using every campy horror trope, Caldwell said, complete with punchy one-liners, light shows and special effects that fling blood like fruit at a Gallagher show.

Despite the light-hearted feel, the play is about the lengths people have to go to when in dire financial need or when they need a second chance, she said. Between the director, who desperately needs one last break, and a woman looking for revenge, it's not certain who's going to win.

There are also more subtle references to popular horror movies and punch lines in this play than in popular spoof-horror movies like "Cabin in the Woods" or "Scream," Caldwell said.

"You won't scream," she said. "But you'll die laughing."

For more information about the play or to buy tickets, go to thehipp.org, or call the box office at 352-375-4477.

Morrison leading UF defense

JORDAN MCPHERSON

Antonio Morrison is on a hot streak. The junior linebacker totaled a career-high 14 tackles during Florida's 30-27 loss to LSU.

Morrison's previous career-high tackle total was 12 set against LSU on Oct. 12, 2013.

Morrison

"He played well," redshirt senior linebacker Mike Taylor said. "He was flying around to the ball, hitting people, getting people to the ground."

Morrison leads the Gators with 46 total tackles and has racked up double digit tackles in every Southeastern Conference game this season.

"He is playing his best football since he's been here," defensive coordinator D.J. Durkin said.

"He's got to continue to do that. We're counting on him to do that. He's a guy that takes his job and what we do very seriously. He puts a lot of time into it and I think it shows how he plays. He spends time on football a bunch outside of when he has to be here in meetings and practice. I think it's showing."

UF gears up for season, replacing four seniors

Billy Donovan knows he has to rebuild.

After ending a history-making 2013-14 season at the NCAA Final Four tournament, Florida men's basketball program starts this season as a very different team — with a similar set of high expectations.

As he begins his 19th year coaching the Gators, Donovan looks to manage those high expectations and build a team that is strong enough to face the challenges ahead.

"I think they're hopeful they can get back to that point, but they haven't had to face a lot of adversity," Donovan said. "Personally, maybe at different points in time they did, but we never faced a lot of team adversity."

This season starts off with a heavier dose of adversity than last. Florida's greatest challenge will be replacing the presence of four starting seniors, on and off the court.

"We've talked a lot about this in the off-season, not to say we're going into the year hoping to lose or face adversity, how you respond to those things

After the match's first set, it appeared as if South Carolina would be the first Southeastern Conference team to hand Florida a loss this season.

But the Gators responded with three straight victories to extend their winning streak to eight games and keep their conference record unblemished.

No. 8 Florida (13-3, 7-0 SEC) defeated South Carolina (13-5, 3-3) 3-1 Wednesday, receiving help from a variety of players to secure the win.

Despite limited playing time before the match, junior Ziva Recek finished with a season-best 12 kills, two blocks and a .357 hitting percentage.

"The story of the match is Ziva," coach Mary Wise said. "She comes in off the bench.

... She raised her level, she did exactly what we asked our players to do. When your number is called, take advantage of it. (Wednesday) Ziva really answered the call."

The match was tied 9-9 in the first set before the Gamecocks scored four straight points. From there, South Carolina out blocked Florida and the Gators never regained the lead. UF dropped the first set 25-19 and fell into a 0-1 hole.

With the first set victory, South Carolina joined LSU as the only two SEC teams to win a set against Florida this season.

Neal making strides, Orr healthy

Neal embracing playmaker role: Keanu Neal needed some time to adjust.

The safety rarely played deep in the backfield during his time at Bushnell (Fla.) South Sumter High, so he never had as much responsibility in terms of coverage.

But after more than a year learning under coach Will Muschamp, Neal has made strides throughout his sophomore year.

Through five games, Neal has a team-high three interceptions and a fumble recovery for a touchdown in addition to 23 tackles and two pass breakups.

"He has been a guy that, it took him a little more time than it does others as far as scheme and to adjust and play the ball down the field," coach Will Muschamp said on Wednesday's SEC coaches' teleconference.

"But he has got really good ball judgment. He can finish on plays. He's a very good tackler. He has very good instincts in the box and in the deep part of the field. He has improved his communication skills tremendously.

"He is a very hard self-evaluator, as a matter of fact probably too hard on himself at times. But he is a guy that continues to improve, gets better every practice. He goes out and he's got a tremendous work ethic. I've coached a bunch of good safeties and he's going to be right up there with them at the end of the day."

Injury update: Leon Orr is set to return to Florida's lineup on Saturday against Missouri.

The redshirt senior defensive lineman has missed the Gators past two games since getting his knee scoped.

Despite his absence, UF's defensive line has progressed, racking up 10 sacks in the last two weeks.

"The guys that have been playing up front have been playing really well," Durkin said. "I'm really happy with our rotation up front and obviously bringing him back just adds one more healthy body to the rotation, which is always a good thing. We'll see how he does."

Chris Walker is suspended for first three games

is going to be really important," Donovan said. "There's no doubt in my mind Scottie (Wilbekin) had the year he had because he responded the right way to adversity. ... Same thing with Patric Young. Same thing with (Casey) Prather, Will (Yeguete). All those guys responded well to that."

Donovan is hopeful one of the younger leaders of his team will respond well to early adversity this season.

Sophomore Chris Walker is suspended from the team for the first three games due to a violation of team rules, Donovan confirmed Wednesday.

Walker will miss an exhibition game against Barry and two home games against William & Mary and Miami.

"It'll be tough, but I can get through it," Walker said.

Walker said he hasn't spoken to Wilbekin, who faced a similar suspension at the start of last season, but he plans on reaching out to him.

Regardless of the late start, Donovan believes Walker's greatest challenge this season will be managing the high expectations the Gators fanbase have placed on the young forward from Bonifay, Fla.

"Chris Walker played four minutes a game, all of a sudden everybody is expecting him to be a savior in the front court," Donovan said. "I can't really tell you he is ready to handle that or capable of handling that or is in a position to handle that."

Sophomore center John Egbunu has been a big addition to Florida's roster — literally and metaphorically. The Nigeria native is the tallest and heaviest player on the roster. At 6-foot-11 and 266 pounds with a wingspan of about 7-foot-4.

Egbunu is sure to make an impact — if he gets to play.

Egbunu is a transfer from the University of South Florida, so the Gators are in the process of petitioning the NCAA to grant him immediate eligibility.

"I would say that right now, if I had to guess, it's probably leaning more towards him having to sit out this year," Donovan said. "We're going to exhaust all of our avenues and see where it leads us."

As a freshman at USF, Egbunu started 31 of the Bulls' 32 games, averaging 6.2 rebounds and 7.4 points per game.

Donovan said freshman guard Brandone Francis has yet to be admitted to UF.

Francis will not compete in the 2014-2015 season.

"There's things he has to do academically while he's here to get himself eligible to play," Donovan said. "If he progresses in his first semester like we hope he will, he'll be allowed to come back to practice for the second semester."

DeVon Walker is out for the season with an ACL injury he suffered in July.

Junior forward Alex Murphy won't likely see any action on the court until the spring semester. Donovan expects the mid-year transfer from Duke in 2013-14 to sit out the first eight or 10 games until he's cleared from NCAA transfer regulations.

Donovan said he is pleased with the positive direction he has seen Eli Carter moving towards. He said the redshirt junior guard would be "much, much better in terms of his availability this year." Carter, who missed most of last season while he was rehabbing a leg injury, is recovering from a little bit of an ankle injury, Donovan said.

"He has a bone bruise right now that shouldn't slow him too much," Donovan said. "But he could be limited the first couple days of practice."

Sophomore Chris Walker poses during the 2014 men's basketball media day on Wednesday in the basketball practice facility. Walker is suspended for UF's first three games of the season due to a violation of team rules.

think we were just pressing too hard."

Florida turned the momentum in the second set, at one point going on a 9-2 run to take a 20-13 lead.

Soon after, the Gators tied the match at one with a 25-18 victory.

After hitting .395 in the first, South Carolina never got close to its initial hitting clip for the remainder of the match.

"The big difference in the match was when we started limiting (South Carolina's) offense," Wise said. "First set, they're hitting .395, and then from there they didn't hit over .100. We needed to make an adjustment... and that we did."

Florida jumped out to a 16-11 lead in the third set before cruising to a 25-13 win. After a back and forth final set, the Gators captured the victory with a 25-19 fourth set win.

Alex Holston was a large part of the victory and finished with 19 kills, eight digs and two service aces. Junior Mackenzie Dagostino contributed 48 assists and four total blocks.

"When you play a team that's playing that well, that low error, I mean there's no room for error," Wise said. "It's a win on the road against a team that played well. I'll take it."

Senior to play after injury-plagued start to 2014 season

GRAHAM HACK

Alligator Writer

@graham_hack24

If anyone deserves to have a great senior year, it's Karina Gutsche.

After playing in only one game during her freshman season at UF, Gutsche fought to get playing time in her sophomore year. She succeeded, ultimately appearing in 17 games.

By her junior season, she had earned the starting center back position. She started every match and averaged 85.5 minutes per game, the second most among her Gator teammates.

After three years of climbing the mountain, it was time to savor a sweet senior season.

No. 5 Florida (11-2, 6-0 Southeastern Conference) travels to Columbia, S.C., to face the Gamecocks (9-4-1, 2-3-1 SEC) tonight, and coach Becky Burleigh said she hopes Gutsche will be able to continue doing what the senior has wanted to do all season: contribute on the field.

Instead of leading the back line for the fifth-ranked Gators, Gutsche has seen more time on the bench this season than on the field.

She sprained her MCL during preseason and was forced to miss the first six games before returning in Florida's game against New Mexico as a substitute.

She continued to play in the team's next two games as a substitute before getting the start against Missouri.

Finally, she was about to regain her role at center and have the season everyone had expected — the swan song she had earned.

But after playing only 37 minutes, Gutsche suffered a head injury while going for a ball with a Missouri player and was taken off field.

She was back on the bench for two games.

For anyone else, the discouragement would almost be unbearable.

UF Soccer

"It's definitely been a battle, just getting through the fact that it's my senior year," Gutsche said. "But it's also been a fun journey, just because my role has changed, not only as a player but as a person."

Part of that role has been her leadership, and even though she hasn't been on the field, she's helped her teammates.

"I think I've definitely become more vocal. Just from being able to watch so many games, I can see the things that certain people need to work on," she said. "With my MCL injury, I focused mainly on Claire (Falknor) and Christen (Westphal), just trying to help them."

Gutsche was able to return to the starting lineup against Mississippi State on Oct. 10 - putting in 45 minutes - and she will be looking to see more minutes as the Gators try to finish the last five games of the regular season strong.

"It's so frustrating because obviously she spent the beginning of the season injured, came back, and as soon as she came back got injured again," Burleigh said, "but hopefully that's all behind us now and she'll be in the flow of things, because I think she's an important part of what we do."

Florida faces Kentucky tonight after Friday's win over LSU

FLORIDA IS 25-0 AGAINST KENTUCKY.

AARON FRIEDLAND

Alligator Writer

@aafriedland

For the first time this year the Florida men's and women's swimming and diving team (M: 1-0, 1-0 Southeastern Conference; W: 2-0, 2-0 SEC) will hit the road to face off against Kentucky (M: 0-1, 0-1 SEC; W: 1-0, 1-0 SEC) tonight at 7.

The Gators are coming off a win against LSU last Friday after claiming 23 of 32 total events.

The Wildcats have only had one meet so far this season against South Carolina with the men coming up short while the women came away victorious.

UF remained undefeated all-time against LSU at a combined 36-0 after last week's meet, and Florida looks to do the same against UK as it boasts a 25-0 all-time record (14-0 M, 11-0 W).

The last time Florida and Kentucky met was Nov. 8, 2007 when the men won 165-129 and the women 167-132.

Florida features three players coming off SEC weekly honors as Jessica Thielmann was named SEC Female Swimmer of the Week, the first of her career, while Kahlia Warner was awarded her third career SEC Female Diver of the Week accolade.

Men's freshman Caeleb Dressel earned the first honor of his college career after earning the SEC Male Freshman of the Week.

Dressel already has three individual victories this season and has been a part of five winning relay teams through two meets.

Coach Martyn Wilby has been pleased with what he has seen so far early into this season.

"The freshman men were very impressive can't single any one of them out," Wilby said. "But as a group, they are starting to understand what college dual meets are about and what college swimming is about. Anybody that was there (against LSU), the final event coach Troy set up the relays for the men by class and there was a lot of talk back and forth between the classes about who was going to win and the freshman men didn't back down. They certainly knew what racing was all about."

As for the first road meet of the season for this Gators team, it will be the first for the freshmen class, which means a learning experience.

"The freshmen have never traveled before...both sides," said Wilby. "So it's a matter of explaining to them what's expected...little things. You pack your swimsuit in your carry-on, don't put it underneath the plane, it might not get there. Just little things like that, that we now take for granted but the freshmen don't know how to do it."

While Florida will take its talented squads on the road for the first time, it will be the first test for the new class away from home and for coaches Gregg Troy and Martyn Wilby, how they respond and compete is how they will be evaluated.
