Broader picture of Swindle's firing captured in hearing officer's report

In the past decade, Charles Swindle has donned a variety of uniforms that seem to reflect a dedication to duty and service—volunteer firefighter, emergency medical responder and Florida Highway Patrol (FHP) trooper.

It is that latter role which has garnered Swindle attention not only statewide but across the nation in the passing months.

On March 15, Swindle was fired because he wrote false $10 uniform traffic citations (UTC) to two legislators and another driver instead of ticketing them for speeding.

One of the legislators, who accepted the UTC and later paid it, filed a complaint with Swindle's department, which led to his eventual dismissal.

Early this week, a hearing officer with the Public Employees Relations Commission (PERC) recommended that Swindle be reinstated.

The officer, Gregg Riley Morton, also recommended that Swindle's discipline be reduced from a dismissal to a three-week suspension. The commission has 15 days in which to act upon Morton's recommendation.

A closer look at Morton's "Findings of Fact" paints a broader picture of what happened that day, Nov. 19, 2012, on the Madison County span of Intestate 10 Swindle was patrolling when all three stops were made within a short period of time: "Troopers have the discretion to issue a

Prologue: A Man and His Trains

Long before Historical Perry Station became a business incubator and home to several up-and-coming local establishments, before it was a target for restoration by the city and other organizations, before the building itself had fallen into disrepair and neglect, the train depot was not only a major hub of the local economy but the region's as well.

At one time, it was even predicted that Perry would someday become the Jacksonville of Florida's west coast, sporting rail lines diverging in all directions, bearing people and freight to countless destinations.

Before the interstates were built, everyone owned a car and people flew through the air in sleek jetliners, just about everything and everybody arrived by train. But times change, national economies crash and traffic patterns shift and flow to other pathways.

Although the path of history is not easy to predict, the tracks left behind provide a glimpse of times and people gone by. From 1951 to 1966--minus a stint in the military--Russell Tedder worked at the station, becoming its agent at the age of 19. He witnessed a significant portion of Perry's railroad history and has since become a student of the rest.

Now retired after a five-decade career that took him across the Southeast, Tedder holds a wealth of knowledge about the various rail lines which counted Perry among their stops. Although his work with full-sized trains

Russell Tedder, 78, donated four historically-accurate train models to the city which are now on display in Java Depot at the Historic Perry Station.

Storm prep for Andrea 'good trial run' for residents

Tropical Storm Andrea, the first named storm of the 2013 Atlantic Hurricane Season, made landfall Thursday, June 6, along the Dixie County coast about 10 miles south of Steinhatchee bringing with it rain and wind, but sparing Taylor County much of its punch.

Only hours before Andrea hit the coast, forecasters were calling for the storm to hit much further west, in the vicinity of St. Marks. Such a landfall would have put Taylor County on the eastern and more powerful side of the storm.

Instead, Andrea moved eastward before making landfall around 5:40 p.m. with maximum sustained winds of 65 mph.

According to Taylor County Emergency Management Director Dustin Hinkel, the county did not receive reports of damage aside from several downed trees and power lines. The largest reported power outage occurred in the Beaches area where about 300 people lost electricity for about an hour after a tree fell on a power line between Steinhatchee and Keaton Beach.

There was little in the way storm surge reported as well.

Florida Division of Forestry rain guages in the county reported about three inches of rain from the storm, which was at the low end of the range forecasted by the National Weather Service.

The Taylor County Commission held an emergency meeting June

Order up, at Holmes Grill

Countless diners can remember the hamburgers served hot and fresh at Holmes Grill. The former restaurant was part of a roadside motel complex built along U.S. 19 North. But like many of the motels of its day, time took a toll on the buildings, which were torn down one by one. This past Friday, the last remaining building from the complex, the restaurant itself, was bulldozed. Owners said the building was "simply too far gone to save."

Probation officer attacked

A local probation officer was attacked and beaten by two individuals while conducting a routine home visit.

The officer, whose identity was not released, was hit in the face with a fist by one suspect and manhandled by a second.

The suspects--Barbara Doss, 72, and Tony Marvin Barker, 47--were arrested and booked at the Taylor County Jail Wednesday, May 29.

They were both charged with battery on a law enforcement officer.

According to the arrest affidavit, the probation officer was attempting to make contact with two other individuals at the 165 Oakland Drive address when the attack occurred.

Swamp cabbage for dinner

Remember when...

Impending impeachment

By ANTHONY L. WHITE
anthonylamarwhite@yahoo.com

She did it again.

I didn't ask for the position.

I didn't campaign for it.

I didn't even know the position existed.

But, once again, without bothering to ask me, my cousin Elaine appointed me to yet another elected position.

Tuesday morning, after sending me 19 text messages telling me to call her because she had a project tailor-made for me, Elaine sent message number 20 stating, "Why haven't you called me? I can't depend on you for anything."

My first instinct after reading the message was to speed dial Elaine's number and straighten her about the second part of her message. Usually, I stop myself from following my first instinct, but not this time. I followed my first mind.

Elaine was waiting for my call. "I know how to make you call, don't I?" she laughed.

I was not amused. "What do you mean you can't depend on me?" I snapped.

"I can't," Elaine said unfazed. "The only reason you're calling now is because I said you can't be depended on. The truth hurts, doesn't it? Isn't that why you called?"

Elaine was right. Being told that I wasn't dependable hurt, and that's exactly why I called. But, I knew better than to admit that she was right, because Elaine has a way of never forgetting when she's right or letting me forget it. So, I told a half truth. "I called because you said you had something important to talk to me about."

"Yeah, but I said that in three voice mails yesterday and in 10 text messages today," Elaine reminded me.

"Well, Jackie's already told me that you're organizing a Campbell Hill Neighborhood Reunion," I said trying to move the conversation forward.

"I am, but the reason I wanted you to call me was so I can tell you that you're going to be the reunion's chairperson and I'm going to be the vice-chairperson," Elaine said in her most serious tone.

And that's when I laughed out loud. I remembered the last time Elaine appointed me to an elected office without having a vote. We were seniors in high school and we had organized a club to plan parties and dances throughout our senior year. Again, without a vote, Elaine appointed herself president of the club then appointed me as her vice-president. A week or so later, Elaine led the impeachment hearings that threw me out of office.

That wasn't the only time she's self-elected me to a position. When we were children, she was our school bus monitor and she appointed me her assistant monitor. It was always like that. "I, Elaine Johnson, appoint me president and appoint Anthony Flowers (I was Flowers then) as my vice-president."

Not wanting to be pulled into another office and then impeached, I decided to call the only two people I know who could get me out of this job without Elaine throwing a tantrum: her sisters Cynthia and Brenda.

Before I could hang up the phone and call Cynthia, Elaine announced, "I just told Cynthia she was on the committee. I still need to talk to Brenda."

And there went my plan. I have no choice but to be chairperson of the Campbell Hill Reunion. But only for a little while. You can expect Elaine to hold an impeachment hearing by the second week of July.

RIDING THE RAILS

has come to a close, he has become a model train enthusiast and boasts a large collection of models and a layout which includes, among other elements, a scale model of the Perry station.

Tedder, who was guest of honor at the station's grand opening in 2009, recently returned to Perry to donate four model trains to the city which are now displayed at Java Depot. The four trains represents three of the rail lines, built with a keen eye for detail to be accurate both to the time period and the actual trains which stopped here.

But the detail doesn't stop there.

"Every car represents a commodity or product that was used in the commerce and business, some in Perry and some just coming through Perry enroute to other destinations," Tedder said.

On one side, there are three trains stacked along the wall. The bottom two trains represent the Live Oak, Perry & Gulf Railroad, one steam and one diesel, while the top train is from the South Georgia Railway. The final and longest train, in the center of the wall, is the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad's Southland. The trains represent the actual trains which came through Perry circa the early 1950s.

Two of the four model trains now on display at Java Depot in the Historical Perry Station represent the Live Oak, Perry & Gulf Railroad, including the diesel-powered one shown in the top photo. Each car on the trains represents goods and commodities which would have passed through Perry during the early 1950s, such as the two gas cars in the bottom photo. "There were five bulk gasoline distribution plants here in Perry and this represents two of them, Gulf and Texaco," historian and train enthusiast Russell Tedder said. "These tank cars brought gasoline in; probably 40,000 to 50,000 gallons of gas a day were pumped at those service stations."

'If a merchant from Perry called Jacksonville this afternoon, they'd get their shipment in that car and it'd be here the next morning around 8 or 8:30. The delivery truck would deliver to merchants around town.'

Speaking with Tedder during a reception welcoming him and the models, he provided a perspective of the historical significance of the trains and their varied cargo.

Chapter 1: Live Oak, Perry & Gulf Railroad

"The trains ran from Live Oak and returned to Live Oak," Tedder said of the Live Oak, Perry & Gulf Railroad. "This is their station right here," he added, gesturing to the station around him.

"The diesel train is coming from Live Oak and the steam train is going to Live Oak. That is a typical train of cars that they handled. The train from Live Oak has a car on the front, after those tank cars, and the engine in the middle, that came from Jacksonville.

"It came overnight to Perry. Like truck freight today, it came overnight. If a merchant from Perry called Jacksonville this afternoon, they'd get their shipment in that car and it'd be here the next morning around 8 or 8:30. The delivery truck would deliver to merchants around town.

"The next two cars have gasoline. There were five bulk gasoline distribution plants here in Perry and this represents two of them, Gulf and Texaco. But that was back when Perry was a big tourist stop, before Interstate 75. Perry had 500 motel rooms and had about 25 service stations out on 19. Perry was the last overnight stop whether you were going to Tampa, the west coast or the east coast. Perry had the biggest hotel accommodations along the line. But, of course, when Interstate 75 came, that all disappeared. These tank cars brought gasoline in; probably 40,000 to 50,000 gallons of gas a day were pumped at those service stations.

"The next cars are just various merchandise: lumber cars, tobacco cars, shipments from Live Oak that came to Perry and then went over to South Georgia Railroad up north.

"I tried to supply the trains with the kinds of stuff that was used in Perry and shipped through Perry on the railroad. It was a big part of the economy. That was in the latter years before the interstate highways were built and trucks were running everywhere and the train was pretty much the main mode of transportation.

"These represent the early 50s. It was in the 50s and 60s when it changed, when the railroads dropped back and the trucks and highway industries came up. It was pretty much the end of the railroad times.

"There's a carload of sand from over at the Suwannee River. There was a sand mine there. It came to the concrete plant east of town.

"There's also a carload of gravel that came from Live Oak, which originally started over at the Chattahoochee River. River gravel used to make concrete came over the railroad.

"It also has a carload of creosote. There was a creosoting plant in Live Oak and they creosoted poles and lumber, and they'd take the peeled poles and the creosote and ship them way off to Salsbury, Md., and places. On the other hand, they were bringing peeled poles into Live Oak from the north to be creosoted. So they kind of passed each other on the way.

"One car on there has peeled poles, the third car from the rear on the bottom," Tedder said, adding with a smile that the model's versions are barbecue skewers. "They look like peeled pine poles, telephone poles, utility poles. It would have been going up to several places to be creosoted and sold to the utility industry.

"The railroad was a busy place. It was like that here in the early 50s, which this represents. It was the transition between the steam and diesel eras. The steam train would represent back in the 40s because they got their first diesel in 1946."

Chapter 2: South Georgia Railway

"The top train is South Georgia Railway than ran from Adel to Perry; the same track that comes into Perry now, except it didn't have a connecting track here like it does now to go straight through to Foley," Tedder said.

"It used to go down toward the Tom's plant back toward 19 and then they had to switch and come back this way. That was in 1953.

"The first car there on that car is carload of construction material that was used in the building the Buckeye mill at Foley in 1953. In the real world there were hundreds of carloads that came; that's just one example of the stuff on the train. It has some LP gas tank cars for the gas plants, for gas-fired stoves and all that stuff.

"There used to be a saying about the trains: they bring everything from LCL to Aunt Mill. LCL is less than carload freight--small shipments. Just about everything that came to town arrived on the railroad."

A story and a tribute...

It was not an easy job for a lad just 5 years old. Every day he was to fill the watering trough for the two mules. The water was pumped by hand from a pitcher pump into a pail that a child could carry down the long path to the mules' lot. The reason it was not easy was that the mules would drink the water as fast as he could pour it into the trough. When he returned with the second, third, fourth, buckets of water, the trough was dry. It must have seemed an impossible chore to one so young as the end product was to completely fill the trough before he could stop. The mules had to drink until they were satisfied and then he had to keep putting water until the trough was full.

Now this young boy lived with his grandmother and an uncle. One morning, the lad decided he was much too tired to take water to the mules. So his uncle told him, "That's fine, you just sit right there in that chair and rest all day." The boy was obviously overjoyed that he had escaped the chore and gladly settled into the designated chair and his uncle went out to water the mules. It wasn't long, however, before the lad decided he wanted to get up. His grandmother said, "Now you just sit right there and rest, you better not let your uncle see you out of that chair." So down he went and sat there all day long. He squirmed so much that he thought surely he must have worn a hole in that chair.

I am sure you can follow the moral of this story. The next morning he was up and out early, glad to fill the mules' water trough. And he never complained about the chore again.

That story was told to me by my dear husband, Joe Burroughs. He was the child in the story and the uncle was his Uncle Chester Watson. And I saw the evidence of being well-trained throughout his life. He never did a job halfway. If he took something out, he always put it away. In work, he worked hard and in play he played hard. He gave 20 years of his life to the United States Navy, spending years away from his family. He gave another 20 years of dedicated and honorable service to law enforcement. I have never met another man quite like him, and I don't think I ever will.

Joe Burroughs

As to the lesson he learned, I don't know if I would have given my 5-year-old such a chore. It would seem unfair or unkind. But in reality it was not unfair and it was not unkind. It was a lesson learned from a loving uncle that helped this young boy become a great man.

That's all for now, see ya'll in a couple of weeks, Lord willing.

speeding ticket or warning if the motorist is speeding. They can also issue a uniform traffic citation (UTC) if the driver is unable to show proof of insurance or vehicle registration. A speeding ticket costs significantly more than a UTC.

"On Nov. 19, Swindle and his supervisor, Sgt. Gary Dawson, were conducting traffic stops… at approximately 10:15 a.m., Swindle clocked two motorists driving 87 miles per hour on a stretch of I-10 where the speed limit is 70. Swindle proceeded to pull them both over simultaneously. The drivers of the vehicles were Steven Caristi and Charles McBurney. McBurney is a member of the Florida House of Representatives.

"Swindle first approached Caristi's vehicle and informed him that he was speeding. After speaking with Caristi, Swindle approached McBurney's vehicle. McBurney argued with Swindle about whether he was speeding. During their initial contact, the fact that McBurney was a legislator was discussed. McBurney showed Swindle a card identifying him as a member of the legislature. McBurney did not initially show Swindle any proof of insurance and Swindle did not remember asking for it.

"Swindle radioed Dawson for assistance because he had stopped a legislator and wanted to discuss it with his supervisor. Swindle told Dawson that McBurney was a legislator and that he wanted Dawson to know. He also told Dawson that McBurney was 'swearing up and down' that he was not speeding. Dawson joked that they were 'not getting a pay raise anyway.' Swindle told Dawson he intended to serve McBurney with a warning on speeding to 'be nice' and instead issue a UTC for no proof of insurance because he had not seen McBurney's insurance card. Swindle told Dawson he was also going to give Caristi a warning for the more serious speeding violation and issue him a UTC for no proof of registration. Swindle felt this was equitable treatment of both drivers, stating McBurney was 'no better' than Caristi. Swindle told Dawson that he wanted him to know what was going on 'just in case.'

"Swindle told Caristi that the other driver he had stopped was a member of the legislature and that Swindle intended to cut them both a break…Swindle then turned his attention to McBurney. He told McBurney that he was not going to give him a citation for speeding, but because he had not seen his proof of insurance, he was giving him a $10 UTC. McBurney responded, 'I have it right there' and said that he had not heard Swindle request it originally. Swindle acknowledged that McBurney told him that he had his proof of insurance. Swindle told McBurney he had already issued the citation and if he saw McBurney's proof of insurance he could not give McBurney the UTC and would instead give him the speeding ticket. Swindle told McBurney he was giving him the same break he had given Carisit (the other driver). McBurney accepted the UTC and later paid it.

"McBurney complained to the agency about Swindle, which prompted the investigation that led to Swindle's dismissal."

Later that same day, Swindled stopped a second legislator for speeding (Michael Clelland, who was on his way to Tallahassee to be sworn into the legislature).

In his report, Morton related during Swindle's initial conversation with Clelland they discussed the fact that they were both former firefighters (Swindle served as a volunteer firefighter with Taylor Fire-Rescue).

"Swindle hold him he was cutting him a break one firefighter to another" and issued Clelland two UTCs (for not seeing his vehicle registration or proof of insurance) instead of a speeding ticket.

The hearing officer found that while the agency (FHP) proved their case charging that Swindle had violated its policy by issuing the false UTCs, "Considered in a vacuum, Swindle's violations may sound serious. The agency cannot allow troopers to issue UTCs and submit them to court where there is no basis for them having been issued. However, when viewed through the facts present in this particular case, the seriousness of the violations is significantly diminished.

"First, in the short amount of time that each traffic stop took, Swindle made a quick decision. His decision, while erroneous, was motivated by his desire to give Caristi, McBurney and Clelland a break on the more serious violation of speeding, which he could have legitimately ticketed them for. I credit Swindle's testimony that he forgot to ask Clelland for the documentation, and even though the UTCs constitute a 'false accusation,' I do not believe Swindle had any dishonest intent in issuing the two UTCs he gave to Clelland. With regard to McBurney, while Swindle's approach was questionable, he did explain that if he saw McBurney's insurance he would issue the speeding ticket. Even though he complained later, McBurney did not show Swindle his insurance and elected to take the UTC."

In his findings, Morton also noted, "Swindle's particular actions in this case were heavily influenced by the agency's (FHP) unwritten policy toward traffic stops involving legislators… Swindle and other troopers were taught and were told by supervisors that they should be lenient toward legislators…Under these circumstances, the agency bears some responsibility for Swindle's actions and, therefore, I regard his violations as less severe than they might otherwise be viewed."

Horton related that he also took into account Swindle's employment history with FHP. Swindle's last two performance evaluations reflected "overall commendable" (one point below the top rating of outstanding).

"While he was at the agency, he was 'Trooper of the Month' on more than one occasion. He was also a frequent leader in DUI arrests and was recognized both in testimony and his personnel file for his work in this area and in making the roads he patrolled safer.

"Finally, Swindle's personnel file has a number of letters from the public and other law enforcement praising him for his performance. These facts weigh significantly in form of mitigating the penalty," Horton said in his order.

Storm's landfall hit east of county

6, declaring a local state of emergency and passing a resolution encouraging the voluntary evacuation of the coastal and low-lying areas of the county.

Taylor County government offices, including the courthouse, as well as Taylor County schools closed early for the day due to the storm. North Florida Community College also closed its campus.

Hinkel credited several factors for Taylor County being spared by the storm, including the fact that the storm made landfall to the east instead of the west of the county, unfavorable weather conditions which kept the storm from "reaching its full potential" and the storm arriving at low tide, which helped alleviate the possibility of storm surge.

"This was a very good warm-up for something that will hopefully never happen," Hinkel said.

The Suwannee River Water Management District is not expecting any river flooding here as a result of Andrea's rains.

Levels are expected to improve along the Aucilla, while levels on the Steinhatchee and Econfina rivers are now above normal for this time of year, officials said.

Etta Frances Hamby

March 16, 1929 – May 31, 2013

We the family are so grateful and thankful for the outpouring of love we have received from friends, family and acquaintances through this time of great loss. Our mother, was such a blessing to not only her family but to many others.

We appreciate the cards, flowers, food and kind words that everyone shared with us. Although we miss her greatly and the separation is most difficult, we know it's only temporary. For we know the angels are rejoicing as the Lord has truly welcomed her home. What a wonderful reunion that is taking place in Heaven where we will be reunited. Till then… we love you momma.

Keaton Beach Fishing Report

Limits two days in a row for grandson, grandfather

BY PAT MCGRIFF
onemorecast@gtcom.net

We had some great fishing over the weekend for Jim Wilson, Bruce Watford and Jason "Stump" of Albany, Ga. This trio landed 20 trout with two over 20 inches.

All the fish were taken on live pinfish under Back Bay Thunders from 4.5 - 5.5 feet of water on Saturday.

Sunday and Monday, I took Gene Harper and his grandson Jake Harper, both of Memphis, Tenn., out and we had limits both days fishing with live pinfish and pigfish under Back Bay Thunders in 4.5 - 5.5 feet of water.

We had 15 trout weighing 28.8 pounds on Monday with three over 21 inches long. We also had a couple of black sea bass.

Here are some reports from Keaton Beach Marina:

Bill Knight of Bushnell had his limit of trout both days last Thursday and Friday using live pinfish under Cajuns in 4 feet of water.

On Saturday, Mark and Cathy Moore of Dublin, Ga., had 5 trout with one 20 inches long using pinfish under popping corks.

On Sunday, Davis and Tucky Brown of Tifton, Ga., had their limit of trout, with a 21-incher to top off the stringer. They were bouncing Gulp in 7-8 feet of water.

Big Congrats to Ashley Mock, Junior Dice, Pat Irwin and Casey Cook who won Top Trout, the trout Calcutta and the Inshore Slam at the Doug Johnson Reeling For Kids tourney last weekend. Sorry, I don't have the other results/winners.

Jake Harper of Memphis, Tenn., shows off a nice 22-inch trout taken on a 7-inch pigfish under a Back Bay Thunder. He was fishing with Pat McGriff of One More Cast Guide Service.

Hollywood favorites face the apocalypse in 'This Is the End'

Actors playing "fictional" versions of themselves is not terribly uncommon, with Larry David, on "Curb Your Enthusiam," and Louis C.K., in "Louis," making careers out of the concept. Often, the actors will play themselves as jerks or dumb (or both), whether its "Star Trek" star Will Wheaton on "The Big Bang Theory" or James Van Der Beek on "Don't Trust the B in Apartment 23." Then there's Neil Patrick Harris in the "Harold and Kumar" movies.

Sometimes actors take it further, like Jean-Claude Van Damme did in an episode of "Las Vegas," during which he was killed. Of course, I doubt anyone will be able to top the surprise cameo in "Zombieland" in that regard.

Needless to say, it's fun to see these Hollywood types, often portrayed as rich snobs in the media, capable of having a laugh at their own expense.

Well, consider the message received with the apocalyptic comedy "This Is the End," which follows a group of well-known Hollywood celebrities, led by Seth Rogen ("The Green Hornet") and Jay Baruchel ("The Sorcerer's Apprentice") partying at James Franco's house when the end begins in fiery earnest.

Based on the never released short film "Jay and Seth vs. The Apocalypse"--the trailer for which is available on YouTube--"This Is the End" was co-written by Rogen and Evan Goldberg ("Superbad," "Pineapple Express"), who makes his directorial debut here.

The movie is exceedingly vulgar, but its breakneck pace provides plenty of laughs and little time to put much thought into what you're watching. Which is a good thing, because there really isn't much of a story here, but that's honestly beside the point.

The "point," if there is one, is to watch a bunch of actors make complete fools of themselves and then see most of them get killed off in either gruesome or hilariously cavalier ways.

The story follows best friends Seth and Jay, the latter of whom seemingly hates Hollywood and most of its famous residents, but is in town to spend a weekend smoking pot and playing video games.

Seth has other plans and drags Jay to a housewarming party at James Franco's ("Oz the Great and Powerful") new place. The attendees include everyone from Michael Cera ("Scott Pilgrim vs. the World") and Mindy Kaling ("The Mindy Project") to Aziz Anasi ("Parks and Recreation") and Emma Watson ("Harry Potter").

The party doesn't last long, however, when what they first think is an earthquake turns out to be a major disaster and the celebrities begin dying by the dozen.

Soon all who remain are Seth and Jay, along with James Franco, Jonah Hill ("Moneyball"), Craig Robinson ("Hot Tub Time Machine") and Danny McBride ("Your Highness"). Together they must figure out a way to survive with limited resources inside the house while the situation is only getting worse outside where strange creatures are going around killing anyone caught in the open.

But rescue may not be on the agenda when they realize that this could actually be not only the end, but The End, as in the Book of Revelations. But that can't be it, right? Why would have a group of well-to-do actors be left behind?

As I said before, the movie works because the actors are so willing to put everything out there for a laugh, cheap or not.

After seeing these "fictional" versions of the actors we've watched on the big screen, here's a few things I learned about them:

• Michael Cera, who almost always plays the unassuming, too-nice-for-his-own-good guy, is actually a coke-snorting womanizer;

• Jonah Hill, who often plays the unassuming, too-nice-for-his-own-good guy, is actually someone who will say anything to get people to like him...and he secretly hates Jay Baruchel;

• Danny McBride, who almost always plays a loud-mouthed jerk, is actually a loud-mouthed jerk;

• James Franco, who will play just about anyone, has a somewhat unhealthy affection toward Seth Rogen after starring with him in "Pineapple Express"; and

• Emma Watson can really handle an axe.

I do need to note that "This Is the End" is exceptionally vulgar, with foul language and situations thrown around like confetti on New Year's, so consider yourself fair warned.

That being said, I think the reason "This Is the End" works as well as it does is the fact that while many of the actors are not portrayed in the best light, it still feels like friends ribbing friends, without the viciousness we've seen in so many parodies over the past several years. This isn't about spite; it's is about them having fun and us getting to watch.

The movie is rated R for crude and sexual content throughout, brief graphic nudity, pervasive language, drug use and some violence.

Three preliminaries scheduled

Texaco Showdown begins next week at music park

The first two preliminaries in the 32nd annual Texaco Country Showdown's North Florida competition will be held Friday, June 21, and Friday, June 28, at the Spirit of the Suwannee Music Park in Live Oak.

The final preliminary events will be held July 19.

Winners from the three competitions will then compete Aug. 2 at the park in the North Florida final. One North Florida winner will compete statewide at the park on Sept. 14 for a chance to win $1,000 and go to regional competition, just one step away from the grand finale.

Country artists wishing to enter the contest are asked to call 386-364-1683 or email spirit@musicliveshere.com.

The Texaco Country Showdown, America's Largest Country Music Talent Search, is designed "to find the most promising country music talent in America and give these performers a chance to launch their professional music careers," organizers said.

Contests are held in every state. Each state winner goes to one of five regional contests across the nation. One winner from each region is chosen to compete in the national finals at Nashville's Ryman Auditorium in January 2014. The national winner will be named best new act in country music in January 2014 on the Grand Ole Opry stage and receive a check for $100,000.

Visit www.CountryShowdown.com for more information and to sign up for the song writing contest that has a $5,000 prize for the winner.

The SOSMP hosted the statewide competition in 2008 and the winner, Orlando's Johnny Bulford, went on to win the national and $100,000 in cash.

The showdown begins each spring with more than 450 talent contests sponsored by country music radio stations throughout the US. A uniform judging system is used at all levels of competition to ensure fairness.

'Snitch' pits a father against drug cartels to save his son

Father's Day is Sunday and there are plenty of films out there which look at the relationship between a father and son. There's probably no better father/son movie than "Field of Dreams," although "Frequency" is also up there on my own personal list.

One of the most recent films that delves into the idea of just what lengths a father will go to save his son is "Snitch," which arrived on DVD and Blu-Ray this week. The movie stars Dwayne Johnson ("Fast & Furious 6") as a father who goes undercover to help bust drug dealers in order to reduce his own son's sentence.

There are reasoned arguments for and against the War on Drugs, but I think we can all admit that something has gone seriously wrong when first-time drug offenders (picked up on federal charges) get longer sentences than many rapists and other violent criminals.

Typically films with a "message" collapse under the weight of their own self-importance, but writer/director Ric Roman Waugh ("Felon") keeps "Snitch" loose enough that while it's not a great movie, it is indeed an entertaining one which just happens to have a point to make.

The story follows John Matthews (Johnson), who runs a small construction company. His peaceful life is shattered when his estranged son Jason (Rafi Gavron, "Nick and Norah's Infinite Playlist") is arrested on federal drug charges after a friend mails him a package of ecstasy pills. John soon learns that not only did Jason's friend set him up to lessen his own sentence, if Jason doesn't in turn snitch on somebody else, he's facing at least 10 years in prison due to federal mandatory minimum laws.

John is at a loss about what to do since the state attorney (Susan Sarandon, "Cloud Atlas") is not concerned by the fact that Jason doesn't know anyone else to turn in and he refuses to set up one of his friends to save himself.

When John learns that his new employee Daniel (Jon Bernthal, "The Walking Dead") has drug connections, however, he makes a deal with the state attorney to do Jason's snitching for him.

As John slips deeper and deeper into the violent drug world of gangs and cartels, he discovers that he may have put his entire family in even more danger than before.

Based on this and Waugh's other works, it's pretty obvious he does not have a high impression of the justice system. Although he ventures close to the preaching level, he overall manages to mix his story with the message quite well. Where the movie suffers is in the film's incomplete portrayal of Daniel's struggles, and a bit more time fleshing out his world could have really helped the overall product.

The solution to the War on Drugs is not an easy one, but it has been a common theme in movies of late, between "Snitch" and last year's "End of Watch" and "The Savages." It's a trend I don't see stopping anytime soon, as the body count here in the U.S. and especially in Mexico continues to rise.

As for the actor formerly known as the Rock, this is definitely one of his best performances to date. He has long since proven himself a capable action star, and his stock has never been higher with now two highly successful "Fast and Furious" films on his resume.

Here, he manages to pull off the everyman-over-his-head role much better than you would expect someone built like him, making John a determined father, not a determined former professional wrestler.

"Snitch" somehow manages to be a pretty straight-forward action movie, but also a thought-provoking one, if only for the real world implications its story holds.

The movie is rated PG-13 for drug content and sequences of violence.

The DVD and Blu-ray releases feature deleted scenes, audio commentary with Director Ric Roman Waugh and Editor Jonathan Chibnall, and "Privileged Information: The Making of Snitch," a multi-part documentary.

The summer blockbuster season continues with yet another big-budget comic book adaptation arriving this weekend.

But first, we have "This Is the End," an ensemble comedy which opened on Wednesday, featuring a "who's who" of the new generation of comedic actors, including Seth Rogan, Jay Baruchel, Jonah Hill, James Franco, Michael Cera, Craig Robinson and Danny McBride--all portraying themselves as they face the impending apocalypse. (See the full review above.)

The movie is rated R for crude and sexual content throughout, brief graphic nudity, pervasive language, drug use and some violence.

The weekend's most anticipated film, however, is "Man of Steel," a reboot of DC Comics' Superman franchise from director Zack Synder ("300," "Watchmen") and produced by Christopher Nolan ("The Dark Knight," "Inception"). After the less than spectatular "Superman Returns," DC and Warner Bros. are hoping that this new version of their most famous superhero--played this time by Henry Cavill ("The Tudors")--will be able to discover even half the success rival Marvel Comics has had over the past five years. Featuring an all-star cast which includes Amy Adams as Lois Lane, Michael Shannon as the villainous General Zod, Kevin Costner and Diane Lane as Ma and Pa Kent, Russell Crowe as Superman's Kryptonian father Jor-El and Laurance Fishburne as Perry White, this one has everything going for it. Hopefully it will indeed take flight.

The film is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of sci-fi violence, action and destruction, and for some language.

Horoscopes for the third week of June

ARIES - Mar 21/Apr 20
This is a good time to overhaul your approach to fitness, Aries. If you have been thinking about scheduling a physical or getting a gym membership, do so this week.

TAURUS - Apr 21/May 21
Taurus, you may have a difficult time taking sides when friends ask for your help in settling a dispute. Let your friends know you prefer to stay out of the squabble.

GEMINI - May 22/Jun 21
Gemini, you are in need of some down time, so plan a weekend jaunt or a brief vacation to relax and recharge your batteries this week.

CANCER - Jun 22/Jul 22
It would normally be quite an effort to pull the wool over your eyes, Cancer. However, in the next few days you will be so distracted with other things that fooling you is possible.

LEO - Jul 23/Aug 23
Leo, take a few days to act foolish, throw caution to the wind and have a good time. If you don't, there may not be another such opportunity anytime soon.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
Virgo, the only way to get through a bumpy week is to keep your head down and your focus intense. Concentrate on the tasks at hand, and the week will be over before you know it.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Libra, sometimes practicality gets in the way of your imagination. Though this can sometimes be stifling, you have to find a balance between whimsy and reality.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
No one can put your plan into action better than you, Scorpio. Stop making excuses and really get started this week. Don't expect immediate results.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
Sagittarius, you may not feel that something you did is funny, but others are bowled over with laughter. Play along so you don't come across as a spoil sport.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Expect your schedule to become quite hectic in the next few days, Capricorn. You may want to tie up any loose ends now and use any free time to rest.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Aquarius, a burst of energy has you flying through all of those little projects that you have been putting off. Once you are done, you may have to create a new list.

PISCES - Feb 19/Mar 20
Pisces, though you feel like you have just been going through the motions, others are far more impressed than you think.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
