Sidewalks, street lights approved for Old Dixie Hwy.

The Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) has approved a $328,000 grant for Taylor County to construct a sidewalk along Old Dixie Highway from Jefferson Street to Southside Park at Plantation Road, although work is not expected to begin until 2019 or 2020.

County Grants Coordinator Melody Cox announced the award last week at the Taylor County Commission's meeting, adding that FDOT also approved extra funding on top of the $328,000 to install street lights along with the 1.53-mile sidewalk.

According to Cox, design work is expected to begin in 2018. There is no local match required for the funding.

"FDOT Transportation Alternative Program applications are submitted five to six years in advance," she said.

The commission held two public hearings in October on the grant request, unanimously approving the project.

Last year, the county was awarded funding in the 2019 cycle for the construction of a 0.79 mile sidewalk along Green Street from Arena Street to Howard Street for foot traffic arriving at and leaving Taylor County Elementary School.

Additionally, the county is set to receive funding for a trailhead at the Keaton Beach Coastal Park, as well as a multi-use trail/

It's official: Taylor needs a new primary school

The Taylor County School District has crossed another hurdle in its efforts to secure state funding to replace Perry Primary School (PPS) after receiving word that the Florida Department of Education (DOE) site

Superintendent Paul Dyal

confirmed Thursday that his office received a letter from DOE stating that the committee has signed off on Old Bead was as familiar a site around Shady Grove as his owner, Alderman (Auley) Carlton Hendry.

The mule was Hendry's main way of getting around and, together, they were a distinctive pair between Bead's rather round shape and Hendry's trademark shock of hair and long beard.

The story goes that, one day, two of his older children saw Old Bead coming up to their house but didn't recognize the man riding him.

One said to the other, "That's Pa's mule, but that ain't Pa!"

"And that was the one and only time I ever knew of Daddy shaving his beard," Hendry's youngest daughter, Lydia Hendry Andrews, said.

"My sister (Nelda) and I helped him take care of his beard. Every Saturday we would trim his hair and wash and comb his beard. When bleach came out, we would bleach it--because he chewed tobacco or smoked a pipe--and cleaned him up so he would be ready for church on Sunday."

The church, still in faithful service today, was named for Andrews' grandfather, Robert McFail Hendry.

That Robert McFail Hendry--the well-known Hendry patriarch whose roots run deep in Taylor County soil.

The Hendry whose sons fought in the Civil War and returned home to establish families whose ties stretch far and wide.

"My father was the youngest son of Robert McFail Hendry and Martha (Carlton) Hendry. Martha was the daughter of John Carlton and Nancy Ann Alderman. Daddy was named for his grandparents on his mother's side. Daddy was born in 1861, the year the Civil War started. He had four brothers who served during the war: Sharp, Wright, Wesley and Thomas."

Andrews was her father's 18th and youngest child; she is the 100th (and only surviving) grandchild of Robert M. and Martha Hendry.

She knows her family history is unique in many ways, the least of which being the age of her father when she was born.

"My father was 69 when I was born. He was 85 when I graduated high school. He was always an old man. At least, that's the way I remember him."

"Daddy--everybody called him Auley or Uncle Auley--was first married to Mosea Baker (nicknamed Hon) Dec. 7, 1882. They had 11 children: Mary, Wesley, Eugenia, Sallie, Lovette Pearce (known as Doc), Leona, Ward, Ruby, Marvin, Chicken Pileau benefit dinner is a sell-out Thurs.

Happy tears were shed Thursday when Deputy Robert Lundy, who has been moved out of ICU and into a regular room, was able to give his daughters birthday hugs.

The girls, who share a birthday, turned eight and three.

Lundy, who has seen several key improvements in the past week—including eating a "Baconator" from Wendy's and requesting a glass of "Roy's" sweet tea—continues on what doctors say will be a long road to recovery at Shands Hospital in Gainesville.

The Taylor County deputy is also able to speak now and is more alert, his wife, Kelly, reported.

Thursday was also the day of a chicken pileau dinner hosted by the Leon County Sheriff's Office on the Lundy family's behalf.

Hundreds gathered for the event and dinners were sold out in less than two hours.

CITY LOOKS TOWARD A FACELIFT?

City Clerk Clarence Giddens presented proposals for a downtown facelift to a group of 30 businessmen. The proposal recognized the value of the tourist trade to the state of Florida and suggested improvements in the downtown area creating a "mall" area to lure tourists. The proposal also called for signage promoting U.S. 19 as a better choice than I-75 and I-10 for travelers headed to Tampa and St. Pete. Those tourists, in turn, would be directed to the downtown area for shopping and restaurants.

Railroad reached county in 1902

Editor's Note: The following is the final installement of a history of Taylor County written by the late June Parker McLeod, an educator and avid local historian. It is featured on a web site highlighting Perry and Taylor County history (<https://sites.google.com/site/taylorcountyhistory/>).

In 1902, The Suwannee and San Pedro Railroad from Live Oak reached the county and in early 1903 made connections with Perry. In 1900 Perry had about 100 people and 4 businesses but increased by probably 500 percent in population and 1000 percent in business development in the next five years.

Soon other railroads came and the growth of business and industry increased.

The South Georgia and West Coast was built to Perry in 1904, the Live Oak, Perry and Gulf came early in 1906 and a branch of the Atlantic Coast Line built from Newberry in Alachua County was running trains into Perry before the end of 1907.

The coming of these railroad lines helped turpentine farms and sawmills to prosper.

This is all that June was able to get done before she got sick. I am sure she would have gone back and added additional information to what she had completed. ~Henry McLeod

Remember when...

Goody two-shoes

By ANTHONY L. WHITE
anthonylamarwhite@yahoo.com

It has taken me a long time to do this, but I'm finally ready to confess that I was not the goody two-shoes everyone thought I was growing up.

This confession is sure to take a few people by surprise.

My cousin, Cheryl, who still thinks that I can do no wrong, is probably reaching for her smelling salts right now.

My brother, Tony, is probably saying, "Quiet as it's kept, we already knew this."

And Damion, the new-kid-on-the-block who taught all of us that there was truth to the cliché, keep your friends close and your enemies closer, is surely shouting, "I tried to tell y'all!"

The day Damion moved to Perry and into our neighborhood, he began making a name for himself. The grown-ups in the neighborhood called him names like, "The Smart Boy," "The Nice Boy," and "The Boy We Should Try To Be Like." The names the kids had for him, I dare not repeat.

Damion came here on a mission: to show us up and to bring us down. And I was his primary target. When Damion first walked in the classroom at the junior high school, he immediately set out to show me up academically. And because everyone thought I was a goody two-shoes, his mission was to tarnish that perception.

Damion was a prankster, which meant we had to walk around on egg shells. We had to always look ahead, behind, and around us whenever he was in the vicinity. If he told us something, we always had to gauge its validity. And if we were pranked, we knew better than to try to retaliate. I learned that part the hard way.

This is also part of my confession. And because the statute of limitation should have expired after 34 years, the grade I made that nine-weeks should not be changed.

One day in eleventh grade, I just happened to stumble across a copy of a test a few days before we were to take it. Because I believed in sharing, I gave my friends the answers. And, because I kept Damion closer than I kept my friends, I gave him a special copy of the answers. The problem was, they weren't the right answers.

My friends and I all scored above 95 on the test. Damion made a 35. I had out-pranked the prankster. Or so I thought.

The next day, when we walked in class, Damion was giving the teacher the list of answers I had given him and suggesting that he make me and my group of friends retake the test. Since the list was written in Damion's handwriting, there was no proof that I had given him the answers. And, since my friends and I studied anyway, when we were quizzed about the chapters covered on the tests, we were on point.

Damion didn't get the satisfaction he wanted, which meant he wasn't through.

He beat me to my house that afternoon. When I stepped in the door, he was telling my grandmother what I had done.

"Ant, is Damion telling the truth?" my grandmother asked.

Because I couldn't lie, or at least I knew better than to try to lie my way out, I confessed, "Yes m'am."

"Thank you for telling the truth," she replied.

Damion gloated as he waited for the hammer to come down on me.

"Well Damion, he'll see you tomorrow," my grandmother said and ushered Damion out the door.

Now for the last part of my confession.

That was one of the few times that my grandmother spared the rod. Although Damion probably still thinks I got it that day, my grandmother saw through his telling and through him.

She knew he was no goody two-shoes either.

Julia and an infant (who died). Mosea died in 1923. It was believed she died from heartbreak. Their daughter, Ruby, was murdered in 1922 and her mother was heartbroken and apparently never recovered."

Ruby's murder marked a grim time in Taylor County's history. The schoolteacher, who had red hair, was walking to town one Saturday afternoon when she was attacked.

"The train came by and discovered her body along the tracks."

Several innocent men lost their lives as the search for the killers swept across the town.

When the two men believed to be guilty were found, private citizens took the law into their own hands.

special facilities committee in August to request the funding.

Dyal said he will speak with the Taylor County School Board at their next meeting to discuss what steps the district will need to take prior to August.

He previously has said that if the site review team signed off on the need for a new school, the next step in the process would be to hire an architect to develop plans and determine its cost.

To move to that step, however, the district must either own the intended property or have a binder on a prospective property for the new school site, he added.

In January, the school board agreed to allow Dyal to contact local real estate agents about potential properties, beginning his search near Taylor County Elementary School (TCES), which is the district's newest school and was also funded through the special facilities construction program.

The site review committee visited PPS on Friday, Feb. 21, after listening to a presentation from Dyal on maintenance and safety concerns the district has with PPS, which was built in 1975.

Included in the presentation were photographs of the current condition of the school's roof, such as leaks and indoor water damage.

Additional issues raised by Dyal included the fact that the district has "outgrown" the school and there are nine portable classrooms at the site; the lack of a onsite kitchen, which necessitates food being cooked at Taylor County Middle School; the school's open design, which he called "not conducive" for learning; traffic concerns at the parent pick-up lot; and safety concerns over the school having "too many" entrances and exits.

The district first approached DOE's special facilities construction program for funding for a new school to replace PPS in 2009 and was told the school would be good for another four years.

For TCES, the district received $8.5 million from the state in 2001-02 and contributed $4.4 million of its own funds. According to Dyal, the program requires districts to allocate revenues from their 1.5 mill capital improvement property tax for three years to a funded project.

The district also received $10.2 million in state funding in 1991-92 through this program for the construction of Taylor County High School, providing $3.9 million in local funds.

where Daddy rode to town and stood on the courthouse steps and told everybody to go home and be peaceful.

"Daddy was very protective of all his girls, especially Nelda and me. We could not go anywhere alone or without an adult. That's why I didn't go to college.

"He had already lost one daughter and wasn't going to lose another. We understood why he was so protective."

Hendry married a second time in 1927, becoming stepfather to Arie Bailey McLeod's five children: Thomas, Elmer, Annie Mae, Pershing and Virginia.

"At the time Daddy was selling tombstones, and had gone all the way to Mosley Hall where my mom was living with granddaddy Bailey. I don't know if he was successful at selling the tombstones, but he was successful in getting a good wife."

McLeod's first husband, the Rev. Andrew McLeod, had died at an early age.

"Daddy not only married my mom, he married a family. She had five young children between the ages of five and 15. Two more surprises—my sister Nelda and myself, were added to the family, making a total of 18. Of those 18, only two survive...my sister, Virginia, who is 91 years young and myself."

By then, Hendry's children from his first family were grown and had families of their own.

"Some of my older sisters (from Daddy's first marriage) were actually a little older than my mother. My daddy and my (maternal) grandfather were about the same age and got along very well.

"I know that sounds different now, but that is just how it was then. My father's older children always joked he married my mom so he would have children to work the farm. And there might be something to that, a little.

"Daddy went out to the fields everyday. We were all always busy."

In addition to selling tombstones, Hendry was also a notary public.

"I remember people coming to our house to get married or to get him to witness legal documents. He always spoke to a lady in private to make sure she understood what she was signing. He also sold eyeglasses.

"But his primary occupation was farmer/cattleman. The only farm equipment he owned was a horse, a mule, a plow and a hoe. The horse was for plowing, the mule was for plowing and riding.

Daddy never went to the field without his hoe on his shoulder. And when we went, we had a hoe or a bucket. There was always something to do in the field. Plant and replant the corn after the crows helped themselves. Hoe corn, peanuts—whatever needed to be hoed. When the crops were ready for harvesting, it was time to gather and can and save everything we could for winter—peas, beans, corn, tomatoes, onions, okra, potatoes, peanuts and sugar cane for making syrup. Our nightly entertainment during the winter was shelling peanuts for seeds and planting.

"And of course, we had animals to care for—chickens, hogs, the horse and Old Bead.

"We didn't have indoor plumbing or electricity, so we cooked on a wood stove and washed everything by hand."

While it could be said Andrews' mother lived an ordinary life as a mother and wife, she was an extraordinary woman with a seemingly endless well of know-how.

"She as a very good cook and taught us how to cook, really how to do everything from farming and gardening to nursing.

"She was the neighborhood nurse, if anybody needed help with sickness they came to her.

When people died, she would help prepare them for burial. They called it 'lay'em out' back then. She also helped deliver babies.

"I think we had biscuits with every meal. There was no such thing as leftovers, which was good because we didn't have a refrigerator. I think we had an ice box maybe at one time, but that was it.

"While my parents never held any titles like doctor, lawyer or preacher, they were godly people.

My mother was Primitive Baptist before marrying my father and would attend what they called the 'Big Meeting' held every fourth Sunday in August. We would go with her and I remember that men and women did not sit together, and the meetings were long, which was okay for adults, but children get hungry!

"Daddy was a faithful member of the Robert M. Memorial Church and, at one time, held the record of being a member for more years than anyone. I believe Sara Helen Steen may now hold that record.

"I can't talk about Daddy without saying a few things about the church and how it was when I was growing up.

"Shady Grove was part of what the conference referred to as a 'charge,' which meant one pastor was assigned to a charge. Our charge included seven churches: Fen holloway, Pine level, Boyd, Lake Bird, Shaw, Sirmans and Shady Grove. We would have preaching once a month, sometimes a morning service, sometimes an afternoon service. If it was a morning service, Daddy never failed to invite the preacher for dinner. Mama knew to always be prepared. Daddy didn't have a car—never owned one in his life—so we walked to church. If the preacher went home with us, we had a ride home. Our only transportation was a mule and wagon.

"Daddy was a generous man. The Bible tells us to take care of orphans and widows. He did a good job of taking care of my Mama, a widow, with five young children.

"Daddy was a righteous person. He believed in justice, treating everyone with respect and honesty. Especially to honor your elders. He taught us to say yes sir or yes ma'm and that children were to be seen, not heard. Therefore, I grew up to be quiet and timid.

"As Daddy aged and his health declined, Mama felt the need to have someone stay with her at night. They had no telephone, no car, no means of transportation or communication.

"In his later years, he would be found sitting in the rocking chair on the front porch, saying, 'I'm ready to be dismissed.'

Donaldson Bridge Meeting

Citizens met with the Florida Department of Transportation (FDOT) and county officials on Feb. 26 to discuss widening of the Donaldson Bridge that crosses the Econfina River on Ira L. Smith Road (County Rd. 14-A).

Citizens were unanimously against widening the bridge but asked that the bridge be repaired or replaced and kept as a one-way rather than changed to a new two-lane bridge. County Manager Jack Brown said he will go to Jacksonville and discuss the community's desires with FDOT. Once he has done that, another community meeting will be set.

Garden Club goes batty

The Garden Club of Steinhatchee took a field trip to the Lubee Bat Conservancy in Gainesville. "This was an interesting and informative trip, as we learned about fruit bats and their habitats," said Sue Guilbeau for the group. "We were shown a power point presentation that gave us insight into these lovable animals."

Yes, lovable, Guilbeau said.

"Healthy ecosystems depend on fruit and nectar bats that pollinate flowers and disperse seeds. These bats are among the least studied and most threatened in the world."

"We were taken to the cages where the bats are housed and given a wonderful tour. We also had the opportunity to enter the cages to take pictures and see the animals up close. They were as curious of us as we were of them," she added.

Following the tour, the group enjoyed lunch and shopping in the Gainesville area.

Punxsutawney Phil was right!

Punxsutawney Phil was right!

It's good to see the grass turning green, and flowers and plants beginning to make their appearance. I am spending these nice days in the yard pulling weeds and raking. Hopefully, the extreme cold days are past for this year. My pecan tree has no buds yet, and I have been told that when the pecan tree begins to bud, winter is officially over.

I must confess that Punxsutawney Phil's Feb. 2 prediction for six more weeks of winter was right on. One more for the famous groundhog, zero for me.

Tobacco farming

Farming has long been a part of the lives of many in Shady Grove. In the past, most families grew tobacco. From the preparation of the land, planting the tobacco, to taking it to sell, it was a family affair. Many times the family could not do it alone and others were hired to get the job done.

When the tobacco was ready to harvest, a crew would be hired to "crop" the tobacco which would be brought to the barn in a sled pulled by a mule or a tractor and there we tied it on a tobacco stick. I never graduated to "stringer," the one who actually tied the tobacco onto the stick. I was a "hander." I remember picking up three leaves of tobacco, and making sure all the ends were fairly even before handing it to the stringer. We would start early in the morning and work all day long. I remember late in the day when we were growing tired, my Grandpa Tedder would come and stand beside us encouraging us to continue.

After the tobacco was cured in a barn, it was taken off the sticks and neatly tied in a burlap sack. I remember going to the tobacco sale with my family. Our tobacco would be in a room and the buyers would come by. Sometimes the price was barely enough to have made it worthwhile

As a teenager, I would work for local farmers. The pay for handing was $3 to $3.50 per day.

The money earned was used to by my school clothes. Many times after working all day, we were rewarded by a trip to the "Big Log," our swimming hole.

I am not aware of any tobacco farmers around here anymore. It may be because of the knowledge of the harmful effects of smoking and chewing tobacco. I know there are a lot of hay farmers in the area. There are a lot of horses and cows in the Shady Grove community and thus a great need for the hay.

That's it for now, see you back here in two weeks, Lord willing!

TIDBITS: Church ladies cooking today!

By SARAH HALL

Waiting...

Spring is bursting out all over! What a beauty to see the budding of the trees and the flowers blooming, a signal or sign that winter is almost over. Almost, I said. Don't put those sweaters and jackets away, yet.

St. Patrick's Day is just ahead with a glow of green, and Irish Eyes are smiling! These wintery showers are still around to give us plenty afternoons to sneak a nap. However Lord, I need you to help me repair my broken dreams and expectations, and re-establish my broken down and forgotten goals. I am very aware that all things come to thee and in your time. It refreshes my dull spirit to know that you have not forgotten me. I want to be renewed. I thank you, Dear God for Jesus Christ, the Good Shepherd, who still cares for me and will lead me through this valley of life. Amen.

Hungry today?

New Brooklyn M. B. Church will serve dinners today (Friday) with a choice of meatloaf or fried chicken with yellow rice, mashed potatoes, cabbage, green beans, macaroni and cheese, accompanied by a dessert and beverage. An $8 donation is requested. Please call 584-5723 for more information.

Special Prayer List

Pray for William Alexander, Willie Mae Jackson, Wayne Dunwoody and Mary Lee Williams, all at home; Shawanda Massey, Kevin Britt and Carl Williams, surgery;

Theodore "Pete" Ingram, Tyrone Miller, Linda Upshaw, Gabriel Finn, Lovett and LaDoris Brasby; and Leroy Johnson, VA-Gainesville. Also remember the families of the late Horace Brown and the late John Franklin in their bereavement.

Tea cakes

Since I'm on this cookie (teacakes) trend, I want to thank all those people who responded by calling me. I had a ball with people calling and sharing stories of their "teacakes" experience. One lady even made some teacakes and shared her recipe with me. Another brought me some of her homemade (teacakes) "cookies." I thank all of you so very much. Thank God somebody still reads the paper! Call me (850-584-5314) if you are interested in another teacake recipe.

'Mr. Peabody & Sherman' prove history can be fun...and funny

As Hollywood continues to mine its way through our collective childhoods for material for new movies based on old characters, it's not a surprise that many of its targets are cartoons.

What does surprise me is how often studios attempt to convert them into live action. Animation should not be something to avoid. Two of the top four grossing films of 2013 were animated: "Despicable Me 2" and "Frozen."

On the other hand, with the exception of the "Transformers" and "Alvin & the Chipmunks" franchises, most attempts to convert existing animated series into live action movies have been box office disasters.

For example, in 1999 and 2000, Hollywood tried convert "Rocky and Bullwinkle" and one of their friends, "Dudley Do-Right" into live action products. The two films, which had a combined budget of $146 million, grossed only $34 million during their entire theatrical runs.

Compare that to "Mr. Peabody & Sherman," more of Rocky and Bullwinkle's original friends from their 1950s and 60s television series. The duo have now received their own animated film adaptation, which opened last weekend to a very solid $32 million in just its first three days.

Mr. Peabody and Sherman starred in "Peabody's Improbable History" segments alongside Bullwinkle and the rest. The shorts, usually five or six minutes long, followed the world's smartest dog and his adopted boy as they traveled through time in his WABAC machine, providing a fun and somewhat educational trip into the past.

Brought into the present by Dreamworks Animation, "Mr. Peabody & Sherman" provides just the right mix of humor and heart that is the hallmark of great animated films and great family films in general. Following on the heels of the spectacular "The Lego Movie," this film proves 2014 is shaping up to be a great year for animation.

Directed by Rob Minkoff ("The Lion King"), "Mr. Peabody & Sherman" starts out just like the original series did, with Peabody (Ty Burrell, "Modern Family") introducing himself to the audience, giving a brief list of his accomplishments, which are numerous and varied, from graduating valedictorian to inventing Zumba. Spurred by memories of his own childhood, Peabody battles the courts to adopt a human boy, Sherman (Max Charles, "The Neighbors"). He then creates the WABAC, a time machine he uses to educate Sherman by showing him history's greatest moments and figures.

We join the pair as Sherman is preparing for his first day of school, where he quickly gets on the bad side of Penny Peterson (Ariel Winter, "Modern Family"), who bullies him, leading to an altercation which could jeopardize Peabody's adoption.

Trying to smooth over matters, Peabody invites the Petersons over for dinner, and soon Sherman and Penny are taking an unsupervised trip through time, leading them to Ancient Egypt, the Battle of Troy and even a visit with Leonardo DaVinci, but their travels may unravel time itself, putting the entire world, past and present, in danger.

"Mr. Peabody & Sherman" honors the original series, pulling many elements of the cartoon and updating them as needed for a full-length movie. The film is genuinely funny, whether it's Peabody's many groan-worthy puns to the fun the story has with history. It helps that the cast, children and adult, have varied careers in comedic television. A highlight among the secondary characters is Patrick Warburton ("Rules of Engagement") as Agamemnon, who is about to lead the Greeks in the Battle of Troy.

But where the movie really succeeds is in the story of Peabody and Sherman as adopted father and son. It is clear that Peabody cares for Sherman, but isn't 100 percent sure how to be a father. As Sherman rebels against his father during the course of the story, with some not-so-gentle coercion from Penny, he never comes off as a brat, and it's easy to see both sides of the relationship. Although there is plenty of peril and action facing our heroes, it is the emotional stakes that really cement the story and elevate the film from very good to great.

"Mr. Peabody & Sherman" is the second best film of 2014 I've seen, following "The Lego Movie" by a hair. Like that film, this one has a wonderful message about family coupled with great humor, solid action and beautiful animation.

The film is rated PG for some mild action and brief rude humor.

Tallahassee celebrates its new park, St. Patrick's Day

The much anticipated grand opening of Cascades Park in Tallahassee, coupled with the fifth annual St. Patrick's Festival and Parade, mark a festive weekend in downtown Tallahassee March 14-15.

Grand opening festivities at Cascades Park begin at 10 a.m. today (Friday). This historic, 24-acre oasis sits on the cusp of downtown Tallahassee, catty-corner to Capitol Plaza and will once again be a gathering spot for residents and visitors, organizers said. The park features an entertainment venue, a family-oriented playscape, fitness trails and tributes to its history that spans four centuries.

Completed attractions include:

- Meridian Plaza: situated behind the Capital City Amphitheater, this plaza includes a marker designating the spot from which all surveys in Florida are calculated;

- Imagination Fountain: fun for all ages, an interactive fountain that is synchronized to music;

- Boca Chuba Pond;

- Capital City

Amphitheater: Tallahassee's newest entertainment venue featuring 1,500 permanent seats and more than 2,000 festival/lawn seats;

- Capital Cascades Trail: pedestrian and bike friendly trails looping throughout the park.

Following the dedication ceremony and special announcements, activities include live entertainment in the amphitheater, park tours and a family-friendly

this weekend at the movies

This weekend we get two new movies, including the video game adaptation "Need for Speed." With the "Fast & Furious" franchise currently on hiatus after the death of actor Paul Walker, the time may be ripe for a new racing franchise to be born. The video game series, which started in 1994, has spawned more than 20 installments and sold more than 140 million copies, making it the most successful video game racing franchise in history. The film, directed by Scott Waugh ("Act of Valor"), attempts to inject some plot into the racing franchise, following Tobey Marshall (Aaron Paul, "Breaking Bad"), a former street racer who was framed and sent to prison by his former partner. Now out and bent on revenge, Tobey recruits a group to enter a cross-country race and settle the score. The trailers look promising, but it remains to be seen if there's still an appetite for street racing movies after Walker's very public and very real death in a November car crash. My bet is yes.

The film is rated PG-13 for sequences of reckless street racing, disturbing crash scenes, nudity and crude language.

Tyler Perry is back with "The Single Mom's Club" about a group of single mothers who are forced to work together on a fundraiser after their children get in trouble at their school. Finding they are facing many of the same problems, they create a support group for each other as they struggle with children, men and life. The ensemble cast includes Nia Long, Amy Smart, Cocoa Brown, Terry Crews, William Levy, Wendi McLendon-Covey, Ryan Eggold and Zulay Henao. Perry's non-Madea films have been hit and miss at the box office, but female-oriented comedies don't come around that often, so this one could find an audience.

The movie is rated PG-13 for some sexual material and thematic elements.

FEB. 19 - MARCH 16

The Hippodrome Theatre in Gainesville continues its mainstage season with "Leveling Up." Award-winning playwright Deborah Zoe Laufer ("End Days," "Sirens") is back. This time she explores the addictive world of online gaming. Three roommates and a girlfriend spend hours with their Xbox in the quest to level up, avoid things "IRL" (in real life) and engage in "RPG" (role playing games). To get paid to play games would be a dream come true. But when the government comes offering a seemingly dream job to one of the gamers, the line between reality and virtual reality gets rather fuzzy. Ticket prices vary on showtime and seat location. For more information, visit thehipp.org or call 352-375-4477.

MARCH 6-23

Theatre Tallahassee presents "La Cage aux Folles." Cultures collide with comedic results when Georges and Albin, a happily unwedded gay couple, are introduced to Georges' son's fiancée and her ultra-conservative parents. Further complicating matters is the "family business," a St. Tropez drag nightclub where Albin is the star performer, "Zaza." This musical comedy served as the basis for the film "The Birdcage." Theatre Tallahassee will be performing the 2010 Tony Award-winning version of this show. Remaining showtimes are March 14-15 and 21-22 at 8 p.m. with 2 p.m. matinees on March 16 and 23. Tickets are $10 to $20 and can be purchased online at theatretallahassee.org. The theatre is located at 1861 Thomasville Road.

MARCH 7-22

The Opera Stage Company presents a dinner theatre production of "Dearly Departed" at the Monticello Opera House. Remaining showdates are March 14-16 and 21-22. Tickets for the show only are $12 for Monticello Opera House members and $15 for non-members. Dinner and show tickets are $32 for members and $35 for non-members. For Friday and Saturday productions, doors open for dinner at 6:30 p.m. with dinner beginning at 7 p.m. Doors open for the show at 7:30 p.m. with the play beginning at 8 p.m. For more information or to purchase tickets, visit www.monticellocrafts.com.

MARCH 27 - APRIL 5

Theatre TCC presents "Urinetown: The Musical" in

Turner Auditorium on the Tallahassee Community College campus. The winner of three Tony Awards, "Urinetown: The Musical" is a wickedly funny tale of a future society where a 20-year drought has forced private toilets to be outlawed. By satirizing musicals such as "Les Misérables," "West Side Story" and "The Wizard of Oz," it's a show that not only pokes fun at itself but allows the audience to laugh at the follies of the characters it portrays. With jabs at the legal system, corrupt corporations, environmental waste and our sense of entitlement, "Urinetown" has been praised for reinvigorating the very notion of what a musical could be. Showtimes are March 27-29 and April 3-5 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $15 for adults, $10 for seniors, and $7 for students and children. Tickets can be purchased by calling (850) 644-6500 or visiting online at tickets.tcc.edu. For more information, visit theatre.tcc.edu.

MARCH 28 - APRIL 6

The FSU School of Theatre presents "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" at the Lab Theatre in Tallahassee. "Secret lovers, cynical schemes and sinfully delicious encounters are on display in this dark tale with high costs. When encountering those who deceive their relationships and even themselves, the fine line between lust and love is shattered." The production contains material that may be inappropriate for audiences under the age of 16.

Showtimes are March 28-29 and April 2-5 at 8 p.m. with 2 p.m. matinees on March 30 and April 6. Tickets are $20 for adults, $18 for seniors (62+) and $10 for students.

Tickets can be purchased by calling (850) 644-6500 or visiting online at tickets.tcc.edu.

For more information, visit theatre.tcc.edu.

APRIL 4-6

Young Actors Theatre presents the stage version of the popular children's book, "Junie B. Jones and a Little Monkey Business" as part of its Second Stage Productions. With energy and vitality to spare, this romp is the perfect thing to show-and-tell the whole family. Junie B. is a feisty kindergartner anxious for attention. When Junie discovers her Mother is pregnant, she fears a life in the shadows. As the deadline for show-and-tell looms, Junie struggles to find the perfect object to impress her friends. She takes her Grandma's declaration that the newborn baby is "a little monkey" literally, and begins to take bribes for the first look at her simian brother. Showtimes are April 4 at 7 p.m., April 5 at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., and April 6 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $10 for children, $12 for students and senior citizens, and $14 for adults. CONCERTS

MARCH 14

The North Florida Community College 2013-14 Artist Series continues with a concert featuring Shannon and Heather Slaughter & County Clare at 7 p.m. in Van H. Priest Auditorium in Madison. With powerful singing and ultra-tight harmony, award-winning songwriter Shannon Slaughter and his band, County Clare bring a fresh sound to the stage. They mix fresh, original songs with recognizable bluegrass and traditional country music, and throw in some "good ole' doses" of humor for a night to remember. The band focuses on innovative instrumentation and arrangements, while paying homage to tradition. Tickets are $15 for adults and $8 for children (17 and under) and NFCC students. For more information, call (850) 973-1653.

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

FWC offers hunter safety class April 12

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission (FWC) is offering a free hunter safety Internet-completion course in Taylor County.

The class is April 12 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Students who have taken the online course and wish to complete this classroom portion must bring the online-completion report with them.

The locations for this class will be given to those who register in advance by calling the regional FWC office at 386-758-0525 or going to MyFWC.com/HunterSafety.

All firearms, ammunition and materials are provided free of charge. Students should bring a pen or pencil and paper. An adult must accompany children younger than 16 at all times.

Anyone born on or after June 1, 1975, must pass an approved hunter safety course and have a hunting license to hunt alone (unsupervised). The FWC course satisfies hunter-safety training requirements for all other states and Canadian provinces. Those interested in attending a course can register online and obtain information about future hunter safety classes at MyFWC.com/HunterSafety or by calling the FWC's regional office in Lake City at 386-758-0525.

Class will allow students to take RN licensure examination

Student applications will be accepted through

Tuesday, April 1, for classes beginning May 12 (Summer Term 2014).

that prohibit horses in residential city zones (the property must be zoned agricultural use).

The current city council reaffirmed its position on the regulations by a unanimous vote.

However, in subsequent discussions, Hampton stated she would like to see the language in the ordinance changed and she herself filed code enforcement violation complaints against city residents who have horses on their property.

Hampton said she took the action because "I want it to be fair to all."

Her filings cited (Tonya Holton's uncle, county administrator, Jack Brown, Griffin Colson, Percy Jacobs and Barbara Jackson.

Brown and Jackson have filed a joint request to have the zoning on their adjoining properties changed; Colson did not appear at last Monday's magistrate hearing and Jacobs has retained private counsel (former city attorney Mike Smith).

Three council members—Mike Deming, Mayor Darryl Gunter and Don Cook—stated they did not wish to change the ordinance and said they felt those who are not in compliance must take the necessary steps to become compliant.

"It is no different from any other of code enforcement complaints that are investigated and, if found to be in violation, cited," Deming said.
