Live 'active shooter' drill planned Monday at TCHS

The Taylor County School District and local emergency responders will hold a "live active shooter drill" Monday, Sept. 17, at the Taylor County High School from 7 a.m. to noon. All roads near and around the school will be blocked off, and the campus will be closed to the public.

"This is a teacher's planning day, so no students will be on campus," Superintendent of Schools Dr. Danny Glover Jr. said.

"The main thing we would like to say to parents and all residents -- this is just a drill. Please do not be alarmed, or come to the school," he said.

Record drug bust

2 pounds of heroin, meth seized along with 17 pounds of synthetic cannabis

The Perry Police Department (PPD) announced Thursday one of the largest illegal drug seizures in the county's history – nearly two pounds each of heroin and crystal methamphetamine (also known as "ice"), as well as two pounds of cannabis and 17 pounds of synthetic cannabis.

The methamphetamine seizure is now the largest in the county's history, coming less than a month after a 1.2-pound seizure of "ice" with a street value of $40,000 by the Taylor County Sheriff's Office (TCSO) on Aug. 23.

The latest seizure occurred during the execution of a search warrant Aug. 28 at 505 West Leon Street.

The estimated street value of the drugs is more than $200,000.

Oscar Ray Thomley II, 27, was arrested at the home and charged with capital trafficking of methamphetamine, capital trafficking in heroin, possession of cannabis with intent to sell and possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell (synthetic). He is being held without bond.

If convicted, he could face a mandatory minimum 25-year prison sentence on the heroin possession alone.

"I have never seen this much heroin in this county. Until this seizure, the most we've encountered was one arrest where the suspect had 14 grams of the drug and that was unusual on its own. Typically we'd see maybe a gram," PPD Capt. Gene

County dips into reserves to avoid tax hike

At a special Monday afternoon meeting attended by just five members of the public, county commissioners quickly and quietly adopted a tentative 2018-19 budget – with a 1.4% increase in expenditures – and a millage rate that assesses property owners the same tax rate as the current year.

Instead of requiring 5% "across-the-board" cuts from all departments and each constitutional officer's budget, county commissioners opted to balance the budget by requesting all departments cut their budgets by 2.5% and pulling the remaining $342,517 from cash reserves.

Because the county's recurring expenditures will once again exceed recurring revenues, commissioners were forced to make up the difference by either

Commissioners late with Lakey evaluations

County commissioners have not yet finalized their annual performance evaluations for County Administrator Ted Lakey, despite the fact more than seven months have passed since his one-year work anniversary.

As of Thursday, Sept. 13, County Human Resources Director Marsha Durden was still awaiting two final evaluations before compiling results to present to the full board.

The ongoing delay has prompted the board to recently adopt a new policy specifying when commissioners should complete the annual evaluation.

Commission Chairwoman Pam Feagle has repeatedly requested fellow board members conduct their annual performance reviews of the county's top administrator – as required in his employment contract – at three consecutive county commission meetings over the past two months.

The pioneer families of Cabbage Grove

Alive in memory

Amanda "Mandy" Hale was left with a brood of children still in their tender years when her husband, Henry, died in a Union prison camp.

Like so many before her, the young widow stood strong and carved out a life for herself and her family by working the farm she and her husband had established in the Cabbage Grove area in the 1850s.

When it came time for her final rest at the age of 70, Hale was buried in the cemetery that sheltered so many other farming pioneers who were her neighbors and friends.

Using a mobile penetration radar, Brandon Ackermann, a technical specialist with the Florida Bureau of Archaeological Research, detected at least 11 casket signals and gathered evidence that suggested many more remains at the Cabbage Grove Cemetery site. The cemetery was located near Cabbage Grove Church. Documented members of the long-ago congregation include: Agner, Ayers, Bennett, Blue, Boatright, Chestnut, Clark, Crews, Decausey, Edwards, English, Fletcher, French, Hale, Heartsfield, Henry, Holcomb, Johnson, Kelly, King, Lawrence, Lee, Leggett, Lynn, Mandy, Meinhardt, Messer, Moody, Morse, Page, Poppell, Sapp, Sheffield, Stanaland, Strickland, Tedder, Turlington, Walker, Wentworth, Whiddon, Wilson and Young.

raising property tax rates or balancing the budget using a combination of budget cuts and cash reserves set aside for future capital improvements.

While the majority of all county departments and constitutional officers did trim their budget by 2.5% to help the county avoid raising taxes, commissioners still had to dip into cash reserves to fund a budget shortfall, caused in part by a 3% salary increase approved for all county employees last November and an 11.7% increase in health insurance premiums.

A second – and final – budget hearing is set for Monday, Sept. 17 at 5:01 p.m. A budget summary, and “notice of proposed tax increase” is included on page A-8.

Commissioners did not discuss any specific budget line items and had very few questions for County Finance Director Danielle Welch, who presented an overview of the county’s budget, which includes:

- If the proposed millage rate (tax) remains the same, the county expects to see a slight 1.49% increase in general fund ad valorem (property) tax revenues -- including $142,999 in the county’s General Fund and $19,224 in the MSTU Fund -- due to the small increase in the county’s gross taxable values.

- However, that $162,223 (1.49%) increase in tax revenues will be more than offset by a $602,553 increase in budgeted expenditures, as the county’s total proposed budget -- across all funds -- is projected to increase 1.4% from $44.3 million to $44.9 million.

- Most of the budgeted increase can be attributed to the county receiving additional state and federal grant funds -- reimbursements for projects scheduled this coming year -- including: RESTORE Act canal dredging ($1,061,500), Perry-Foley Airport improvements ($905,707) and additional state-funded (SCOP and SCRAP) paving projects ($823,240).

Several other notable increases include an 11.7% jump in county employee health insurance premiums (which will total $1,047,735 this coming year) and the Taylor County Sheriff’s Office (TCSO) budget increasing by $458,117 over the current year budget.

While the total amount budgeted for insurance premiums for county departments (not including constitutional officers) actually decreased $94,254 due to a change in enrollments, personnel changes or cuts, the cost of providing insurance for employees in constitutional offices (Clerk, Sheriff, Tax Collector, Property Appraiser, Supervisor of Elections) increased $188,610.

Like most county departments and constitutional officers, the TCSO did reduce its proposed budget by 2.5% ($159,548) below the current year budgeted amount ($6,381,937).

However, even after making those cuts, the TCSO budget will actually increase by $458,117 -- from $6.38 million to $6.84 million -- in the coming year.

That increase is due in part to:

- An additional $476,000 to cover the cost of additional School Resource Deputies (SRD), which will be paid for by the state through the Taylor County School District,

- An additional $113,550 to help cover the cost of paying a larger portion of employee health insurance premiums and

- $28,115 in family medical insurance premiums for Deputy Robert Lundy, who was injured in a service-related shooting several years ago.

The county’s budget is also being impacted by a 3% salary increase (and the cost of associated benefits) approved in November 2017 (after the current budget was finalized) which resulted in increases totaling $280,000 spread out over the many individual county departments and constitutional offices.

“I’m ready to go ahead and adopt this. We’ve talked and talked and had workshop after workshop,” Commissioner Malcolm Page said prior to offering a motion to adopt the same tentative millage rate of 7.2426 in the county’s general fund as in the current budget year.

Commissioner Jim Moody seconded the motion and Chairwoman Pam Feagle opened the floor for discussion.

Only five people were in attendance -- including Taylor County Development Authority (TCDA) Director Scott Frederick and county commission candidates Michael Newman and Ursula Miller -- and two offered comment.

Perry First Assembly of God Pastor Mason Callaway addressed the board, stating, “I am more conservative than most. I support smaller government, but we are facing a significant crisis in our community. Families are being torn apart by drugs. This has a very real cost that may not be as obvious as a broken levee in Louisiana, but if we don’t begin to address it, we will be on the news just as they were when the hurricane hit -- and end up as one of those dead, little towns where no one wants to live.”

“This is an issue that is near and dear to me,” Feagle replied. “What can we do?”

“We, as local pastors, are trying to address this epidemic in our local schools with mentorships, working with the superintendent of schools on programs to reach the kids. We are also discipling people within our own congregations to practice what we preach,” Callaway added.

Cedar Island resident Ursula Miller took to the podium next to state that she had reviewed a Taylor County Vision 2010 survey conducted by the local Chamber of Commerce in 1992 and found “some of the things identified in it still needs to be addressed.”

“Drugs, increasing crime, fire and police protection, city parks, roads, building codes, preservation of historical sites...this survey was done 30 years ago and Taylor County is still sitting in the same situation,” Miller said.

“We need to fund our sheriff and our public employees who are breaking their backs. I recommend we increase the budget to support them,” Miller said. “People are still complaining about the same problems from 30 years ago.”

The board voted 5-0 to adopt the same 7.2426 tentative millage rate in the general fund, and then voted 5-0 to tentatively adopt the same 1.1677 millage rate in the MSTU

(Municipal Service Taxing Unit) -- the special taxing district covering just the unincorporated area of the county (outside of the city limits) to fund county services that are also provided by the city (fire department, building department, animal control and code enforcement).

Another 5-0 vote tentatively adopted the county’s proposed 2018-19 budget, which includes a small increase in tax revenues ($162,223) due to normal increases and improvements in property values.

While commissioners ultimately decided not to raise the ad valorem tax (millage) rate, the county is required to advertise that same rate as a “proposed tax increase,” because the exact same millage rate is projected to generate an additional $162,223 in tax revenues due to a small increase (1.49%) in the overall taxable value of property in the county.

Alan Hall noted.

Councilman Mike Deming asked how tight the budget for the coming year was and City Finance Director Penny Staffney stated bluntly, “Zero contingency left. I feel the revenue estimates are achievable and the expenses, we can live with.”

Later in the same meeting, council members asked Staffney to take another look at the budget to accommodate a request for funding from the Taylor County Leadership Council (TCLC).

Representatives from the group, which is working to establish a community learning center at Jerkins Community Center, asked for a $6,300 donation to assist with those efforts.

The money would be used to assist with replacing doors, windows and other improvements at the community center.

“Twenty-five percent of the $25,000 estimate (for the improvements) will go a long way. All of the services we provide at Jerkins are free of charge,” TCLC’s Ernestine Mitchell said.

“I wish you had come in April or May when we were in budget talks. I’d like Penny to take another look at the budget and see if there is something we can do,” Hall said.

“This is a need,” Councilwoman Venita Woodfaulk said.

Councilwoman Shirlee Hampton suggested taking $5,000 from the city’s “entertainment” fund, which is used to sponsor community events like the fireworks shows on New Year’s Eve and the Fourth of July.

By consensus, council members agreed to look at helping the leadership council with the donation and said they would revisit it at an upcoming meeting.

Commission adopts new review policy

According to Section 14 of Lakey's contract, "The county administrator is subject to an annual performance review, with the format to be agreed upon by the board and the county administrator."

Lakey's one-year work anniversary was Jan. 30, 2018 – more than seven months ago.

Commissioners have slowly submitted their evaluations over the past several weeks after being prodded by Feagle.

Near the conclusion of the county's Aug. 6 meeting, Feagle asked board members, "Has everyone turned in their annual evaluation of our county administrator?"

"I have," Commissioner Malcolm Page responded.

"No. Not yet," Commissioner Jim Moody replied.

"I have," Feagle stated. "Please find time to do that if at all possible before the next meeting," Feagle said, adding that Demps was unable to attend the meeting due to having just recently being released from the hospital following a medical procedure.

"I don't feel I have been in this position long enough," Commissioner Steve Spradley said at the Aug. 6 meeting.

The following week Spradley elaborated, "My time on the commission has been so short that anything I say -- good or bad -- wouldn't be fair, so I'll let the other four members who have dealt with him as commissioners evaluate (his performance). Much of my experience has been as an employee."

Perry Newspapers filed a public records request for copies of each commissioner's evaluation on Aug. 14.

On week later, on Aug. 20, only one evaluation had been provided to Durden, who responded, "I have only received one performance evaluation at this time. It is my understanding that the rest are still in progress."

The only evaluation available for release on Aug. 20 was completed by Page.

When asked about Feagle's evaluation, Durden responded, "An evaluation is not considered complete until the meeting takes place where the evaluation is discussed and signed by both the employer and the employee. Although I think it's possible that she (Feagle) has a draft of the performance evaluation, the process has not been completed, and I have not received the completed evaluation at this time. I did check with Mr. Lakey this morning to make sure that I was not mistaken."

Feagle brought the issue up again at the commission's Aug. 21 meeting, asking Durden to explain to the board what the county's current policy is on employee evaluations.

Durden said that evaluations for employees are conducted on the anniversary date of the position.

"I provided the department directors with the starting dates of their employees," she said. "I haven't had a problem getting them back."

"If there is nothing in (the policy) concerning the (county) administrator's annual evaluation, then as a policy-making board, I'd like that included so that the HR department can present that evaluation form to the board," Feagle said. "I'd say just prior to the anniversary date. I don't know what the magic number is. Maybe a week or two weeks. And, then a time frame for when it would be finished and signed off on."

"I have not heard of any problems with any employee evaluations. I just want to make that clear. I'm just trying to understand what our policy is and make sure we include the administrator's evaluation in that. The reason is because we're very busy, and we may not remember the date of that evaluation. It would just be helpful to us if you would kindly give us the form so it's a reminder to us, just like you do for department heads," Feagle stated to Durden.

Durden said she did not have a copy of the administrator's evaluation form, adding that she did not know how previous HR directors handled the administrator's evaluation.

"It would be good, so that we're reminded and there are no delays," Feagle said. "I think that an annual evaluation for anybody is an important document and should be done in a timely fashion."

"Do you want an actual policy created or do you just want me to do that generally?" Durden asked.

"I think it should be policy, but I'll hear from anybody else," Feagle answered.

Demps asked about what the commission had done previously concerning administrator evaluations.

"I don't know," Feagle said. "It just ended up with us. I think the administrator might have given it to us or we asked. I don't know. There hasn't been a real formal way of getting it and doing it."

"I think it's in the contract," Clerk of Court Annie Mae Murphy said.

"What I'm saying is, we're here and times goes by, a week and a month and a month, and we're taking care of other issues, and we're not thinking of an evaluation," Feagle said. "Probably the same as any department manager within any organization unless HR forwards that to them. They may not remember either."

"I've been here a long time," Page said. "Historically, the administrator comes before us with an instrument. Sometimes it's the same from one administrator to another. They would distribute it to us, and we -- at least, I did -- filled out the evaluation. (The board) then had one-on-one meetings with the administrator and talked about the good things and the bad things -- if there were any bad things. Then it was filed somewhere, and it becomes part of the personnel record."

"Now, this is supposed to occur annually," Page said. "So, I think your point is well taken that in policy it needs to state that annually you will notify us it is time for us to do this evaluation."

"As far as the instrument, it doesn't make any difference to me because it's always placed down there with the right context. So, the instrument is sort of immaterial. Now, once you do the evaluations, then I think it should go back to HR, and you can compile the results. You came out all 'average,' 'meets' expectations, 'above expectations,' and share the final results with the board. That's my thinking," Page added.

"I don't want us to do any evaluation -- the five of us -- up here in public," Page continued. "We have an opportunity one-on-one to talk to the person we're evaluating. And then I'd like to see the results."

"That's exactly what I was thinking," Feagle said.

Durden asked whether Page was asking for the average to be presented to the board.

"I know what my evaluation of Mr. Lakey is," Page said. "I don't know what anybody else's is. Just give us the average. Now, if we look at it, and the average is 'below expectations,' then we might go a step further. I'm not expecting that, but that gives us some basis."

Durden."

As of Aug. 27 (and again on Thursday, Sept. 6), Durden reported that she had received four of the five evaluations, explaining that Demps had not yet submitted his performance review.

However, when asked for a copy of all the evaluations on Thursday, Sept. 13, Durden reported Feagle had stopped by that morning to pick up her completed evaluation to review it for possible changes, leaving two (Feagle and Demps) evaluations needed in order to complete a "composite assessment" of the county administrator.

At the county's most recent Sept. 4 meeting, commissioners approved a new "County Administrator Annual Evaluation and Official Composite Assessment Policy," as well as revised forms and an amended personnel policy for annual evaluations submitted by Durden.

In a memo to the board, Durden stated "an older version of the County Administrator Annual Evaluation was located and modified."

"The only change is that the responsibility to provide and record the composite assessment changed from the county administrator to human resources," Durden said.

The county's policy now calls for the "County Administrator Assessment" forms to be distributed to each commissioner by Human Resources two months prior to the administrator's anniversary date.

"Within one month, each commissioner will assess and evaluate the county administrator's performance and turn in the completed assessment to the HR director in a sealed envelope two weeks prior to the anniversary date," the policy states.

County policy states the HR director will make copies of all evaluations and compile a composite performance assessment score for each area. The HR director will then provide each commissioner with a copy of all evaluations, along with a copy of the composite evaluation.

"The county administrator will meet individually with each commissioner to discuss and review their individual assessment of the administrator as well as the composite assessment," the policy states.

"This evaluation process shall occur at least once per year. The board may use this form as a counseling tool or may perform additional evaluations at any time during the year," the county policy reads.

Durden provided the three completed evaluations (submitted by Page, Spradley and Moody) to the newspaper Thursday, adding that the composite assessment would be completed once Feagle and Demps submitted their final completed forms.

The methamphetamine seizure was also one of the largest in the county's history and comes of the heels of a 1.20-pound seizure made by the Taylor County Sheriff's Office (TCSO).

The PPD seizure was the result of a joint investigation between the police

"This is a great example of cooperation between the officers of the Perry Police Department and our federal partners of the ATF, to effectively remove dangerous drugs

This investigation follows the mission of the Perry Police Department to protect life, individual rights and the property of all members and visitors to our community. INTENSIVE CARE RE-OPENED

Because of what was called a "temporary shortage of qualified nurses," the format of the intensive care unit at Doctor's Memorial Hospital changed the week of Sept. 5, 1983.

However, hospital spokesmen stressed that everything would be back to normal at the Perry hospital's intensive care unit as soon as more qualified nurses were found. The intensive care unit at the hospital did, however, continue to operate.

But, because of the lack of registered nurses on staff, the patients were monitored from a nurses' station. Joint Committee on Hospital Accreditation regulations called for 24-hour, round-the-clock monitoring by RNs inside the second-floor rooms.

As there were not enough RNs to go around, the status of the DMH intensive care unit changed, and the patients were monitored round the clock by nurses at a nurses' station down the hall.

STEINHATCHEE CLINIC CLOSED

As one of the long-term effects of county budget cuts, the Taylor County Health Department was forced to close the Steinhatchee Health Clinic, according to Health Department Supervisor Pat Winburn.

Health department nurses operated the Steinhatchee clinic the first Monday of every month in an old facility near the bridge.

Winburn said that health department officials needed to spend their Steinhatchee time at the school where 100 students needed regular state-supported check-ups.

"With only two nurses, we simply need to spend our time at the school," Winburn said. The nurse said that only 10-15 Steinhatchee residents regularly utilized the clinic, and that those people usually wanted blood pressure checks.

Remember when...

By ANTHONY L. WHITE
anthonylamarwhite@yahoo.com

Drafted by the Redskins

I had a choice – play for the Redskins or whip my Uncle Charles.

Normally, I could avoid making choices I didn't want to make with the universally accepted response, "Momma said I couldn't."

Momma was my Grandma Doris and, around our house, what Momma said went without questioning. My relatives knew this as well as I did. My friends -- the ones I'd known longer than a day -- knew it too.

Every now and then my mother would challenge my grandmother's "last say so" when it came to me and my two brothers. That challenge usually lasted until my grandmother put her foot down and let my mother know who had the last word.

The only other challenge to my grandmother's "last word" came from my Uncle Charles. Being the oldest child of my grandparents' children naturally gave Charles some authority. After my grandfather passed when I was 11, Charles became the "head man in charge."

So, when my Uncle Charles showed up at my grandmother's house one afternoon and told me I was going to be playing Little League football with the Redskins, he figured it was a done deal.

I enjoyed playing football on the dirt roads and fields in my neighborhood, but I wasn't keen on playing organized football, so I responded with the universally accepted, "Momma said I couldn't."

"Well, I'm going to be an assistant coach for the Redskins and I said you are," Charles responded. "Momma, will you come in here?"

"What do you want?" my grandmother asked as she walked into the living room.

"Did you say Antmar couldn't play Little League football?" Charles asked.

Since my grandmother didn't believe in telling "untruths," she responded, "No, I didn't tell him that. But he doesn't have to play if he doesn't want to."

"He wants to," Charles diagnosed how I felt. Then to make sure I knew how I felt, he asked, "Don't you?"

"Yes," was the only word I could fix my mouth to say.

That night, I turned to the only other option I had. I told my momma, Lois, what my Uncle Charles had said. The next day, she was waiting at the front door when he pulled in the yard.

"Antmar's not playing on the Redskins," she informed him as he walked up on the porch.

"Oh yes he is," Charles responded. "Where is he?"

Since I had been listening from the living room, I walked out on the porch.

"So, you're not going to play for the Redskins?" he asked me.

"I don't want to," I answered.

"Well, you have a choice," Charles responded. "You're going to play for the Redskins or whip my behind. Which is it going to be?"

I looked at my mother.

"He's not playing," she said.

"Ant!" Charles raised his voice. "What's it going to be? You playing for the Redskins or me whipping you and your momma's behind?"

I could live with a good whipping from my uncle, but I couldn't have my momma fighting my uncle (which she was prepared to do). So two days later, I suited up for my first day of practice as a receiver and halfback for the Redskins.

Gamble installed as Perry Women's Club president

The Perry Women's Club kicked off its 2018-19 program year Wednesday with an installation ceremony for its new slate of officers.

Longtime member Virginia Sessions presided over the swearing-in.

"This club is a service club for Taylor County, organized in 1914. The first meeting held in this building was Jan. 1, 1915, with 18 charter members. Today starts a new year with a new president, some new officers and some who have agreed to continue serving," Sessions said.

She then recognized outgoing president, Barbara Burns.

"You have guided this club over the past year. Your knowledge and experience will be an important part of the success of the newly-elected officers. We thank you for your dedication," she said.

Sessions presented Burns a measuring spoon, "so you can measure the support for our members to our club."

She stated that Burns would be assuming a new role in the club, that of treasurer.

"This is an important office, for you must accept the responsibility of receiving, recording and distributing funds using your gift of organization and administration. It will be your duty to keep an accurate record of all monies paid into the club treasury, pay all bills promptly and furnish a financial statement to the club each month. I give you this spatula so you can flip the pages of our checkbook and scrape when funds are necessary," Sessions said.

Nancy Hendry was the next officer recognized, with Sessions stating, "Your role as secretary requires that you use your gifts of communication and wisdom to maintain accurate written records for the club. You will take minutes of executive board meetings and general assembly. Read the minutes at the meeting so all members can add to. I give you this slotted spoon -- drain out what's unimportant; put in what's needed."

Sessions then recognized Dorothy Davis as the incoming corresponding secretary.

"Your committee will notify each member of the meeting and two members of the committee will greet the members and visitors to the club meeting and receive any money for the luncheon or dues and give each member their name tags. I give you this bowl as you have a bowl full of duties," she said.

Glenda Hamby was sworn in as first president, joined by Nancy Joyal as second vice president.

"Vice president your role is to assist the president. At times, you may be asked to fill in for any office that has a temporary vacancy. I give you this ladle to fill in when needed," Sessions said in her presentation.

President Margie Gamble was the final officer recognized.

"You carry on the dedicated role of all the presidents who have served before you. It will be your duty to preside over all meetings, fill all appointive offices, appoint all committee heads, order drafts on the treasury to undertake unknown challenges. You must uphold the bylaws and principles of club, yet be sensitive and concerned about the ideas and feelings of all members. I give you this serving spoon so you can dish up orders and blend members together," Sessions said.

In closing, she charged the membership to "support, encourage and provide assistance when needed to the newly-elected officers."

In accepting the gavel, Gamble said she looked forward "to shaking things up -- but not too much. Please reach out to our members and encourage them to attend our meetings -- and bring a friend."

Friendship is important

The ol' folks prayer (back in the day)

Our father, my Lord and savior Jesus Christ. Lord, I thank you for letting me see another day. Thank you, Lawdy, that "I'm clothed in my right mind and got a reasonable portion of health." You have been good to me. Better than I've been to myself. You put food on the table, clothes on my back and a roof over my head. The seniors' prayer, same things today, 80-plus years later!

Always remember

You are braver than you believe, stronger than you seem, smarter than you think and twice as beautiful as you'd ever imagined.

Women's Day celebration

Antioch M.B. Church will be celebrating annual Women's Day, Sunday, Sept. 16, at 11 a.m. The Rev. Tony O. Graham is pastor.

The guest speaker will be Talmyra Williams with St. Stevens M.B. Church in Tallahassee, where the Rev. Arthus Stevens is pastor. The event will be hosted by Deaconess Laura Jenkins.

Love out loud and on purpose:

That's what friends are for Fortitude is a good word. It means something good in every era. Fortitude is about strength and a "stick-to-it" attitude.

It's the quality of a true friend who will hold on tight and refuse to let go, even when situations between you are unfavorable.

Fortitude is about hanging around and hanging on when friendship has failed. It's about the unselfish way a friend will be there for support when a friend's strength has failed or is weakened.

Remember the Old Testament story of Moses and the Israelites fighting the Amalekites?

As long as Moses held up his hands, the Israelites would win; but if he let his hands drop, they'd lose.

It didn't take long for Moses to get tired. So two of his friends – his brother Aaron and his friend Hur – held up Moses' hand when he no longer had the strength. That's what true friends do!

They hold up our hands when the battles of life get too difficult, and they stay beside us if we allow them to, giving us their unwavering support, love and encouragement.

The truth is, we all do some pretty silly things, say things that don't make sense, say things that shouldn't be said and make some bad choices in our lives -- every single one of us.

No one is exempt, but it's relevant that we remember how important friendship is! Whatever it is that we do, it's not worth losing friendship over!

We all need forgiveness at one time or another. That's why we need friends with fortitude. Give a friend a hug today.

Birthday shout-outs for September

Happy birthday wishes to: Judy Bethea, Sept. 3; Hazel Sheffield, Sept. 6; Lessie Gent, Sept. 5; Josephine Coach, Sept. 15; William Rollins and Danny Lastinger, Sept. 9; Irving Bailey, Sept. 15; Gregory Lynn, Sept. 16; Sarah Petty, Sept. 17; Loisell Coleman, Sept. 18; Sam Stockton, Sept. 25; and Joe Ann Hugger, Sept. 25.

Uplifting things to do today

Smile at a stranger.
Drop a coin where a child can find it.
Learn something new and teach it to someone.

Tell someone you love them.
Hug someone.
Forgive someone who has wronged you.

Try saying "I'm sorry" when you ought to.

Tell a child how great they are.
Sing a song about Jesus to yourself.
Keep a promise.

Call someone just to say hello.
Try listening more than talking.
Stand up for what you believe in.

Thank God for His beautiful creation.
Encourage someone who is feeling down.

Cherish today as if it were your last one.
Tell someone about Jesus.

'Dogs will travel to Fort White tonight

Taylor County's varsity football team looks to get their season back on track tonight (Friday) as they travel to Fort White to take on the Indians, who are 1-1 so far this season.

Fort White fell in their season opener against Suwannee County (35-19), but bounced back to beat Alachua-Santa Fe last week, 43-6. The Indians went 7-4 last season, but were edged out, 28-27 in overtime by Florida High in their first-round playoff game.

Florida High advanced to defeat the Taylor County Bulldogs, 56-43 in the second round of the 2017 playoffs.

Stanley Maxwell

returns as the Indians' top runningback after rushing for almost 500 yards last season.

Dylan Blair will give the Indians another dimension of their offense at quarterback after transferring in from Columbia County.

Blair passed for 1,597 yards last year at Columbia, giving Fort White the ability to attack through the air more consistently and balance out what is typically a strong rushing team.

Taylor County hosted Fort White last season and defeated the Indians, 27-16 in Perry.

The Bulldogs come into the game with a 1-2 record on the regular season with a season-opening win against Bradford, 10-0 before dropping the past two games to Clearwater Academy (35-14) and Wakulla County (26-6).

"Fort White is a well-coached team with a new quarterback who can really hurt you through the air," said Bulldogs' Head Coach Tanner Jones.

The Bulldogs will attempt to get their record back to .500 (2-2) tonight with a win in Fort White at 7:30 p.m.

TCMS fields 2 volleyball teams

Taylor County Middle School had a large number of athletes to choose from when it came time to field a volleyball team this year.

In fact, so many players tried out that the Lady Bulldogs decided to field two squads and split the 22 girls into "A" and "B" teams this season.

Representing the Lady Bulldogs' volleyball teams this year are: Kiersten Carter, Brooke Chaney, Assyria Lewis, Lilly McCall, Claire Parker, Mallory Folsom, Ella Goodman, Alana Hall, Emma Kirkland, Hannah Shiver, Hayden Durham, Natalie Salmens, Jaskya

Upshaw, Na'Khiya Britt, Journey Brown, Addison Carter, Adrianna Carter, Sarah Couey, Arabia Lewis, Delaney Loyde, Riley Mathis and Nauandra Washington

The TCMS "A" team is 2-2 in the regular season so far, with both of their victories coming against conference opponents.

The Lady Bulldogs' "A" team lost the first two matches of the season to Riversprings and Wakulla before winning back-to-back matches against conference opponents Suwannee County and Madison County.

The TCMS "B" team is 1-1 so far this season, with a win against Riversprings in their second match after losing to Wakulla County in their first match.

The Lady Bulldogs' side of the conference consists of: Suwannee County, Madison County and Hamilton County.

The Bulldogs are undefeated throughout conference play so far this season and they looked to avenge their loss to Riversprings from earlier in the season last night (Thursday), but results were not available as of press time.

After splitting time between running back and receiver in the first two games, Robert Glanton (left) moved to quarterback last week against Wakulla and shared the backfield with Dacorian Bellamy, who moved from quarterback to tailback.

JV team loses to Wakulla

Taylor County Bulldogs' Jayce Calhoun and three teammates are shown making a tackle against Madison County. Taylor County's JV football team faced off against Suwannee County Thursday night in pursuit of their first victory of the season. Results were not available as of presstime. The JV Bulldogs have come up short against Madison (34-0) and Wakulla County (26-8) in their first two games of the season, but are showing steady improvement. "Last week's game against Wakulla showed us that this group of guys is improving. They are starting to grasp both offensive and defensive concepts and are looking forward to their game against Suwannee," said Taylor County Head Coach Tanner Jones.

TCHS volleyball falls to 2-3

The Taylor County High School (TCHS) Lady Bulldogs varsity volleyball team began their season 2-1, but have dropped their past two matches to fall to 2-3.

Taylor County's two most recent losses have come against Marianna and Florida High, both of which happen to be district foes.

TCHS fell to Marianna last week in three sets, losing 25-11, 25-23 and 25-13.

The Lady Bulldogs were led by Ceven Kidd with eight points, five assists and one service ace, while Harmony Glanton recorded four points to go along with seven kills.

Taylor County dropped another match to Florida High this past Tuesday in similar fashion, falling in three sets 25-12, 25-15 and 25-13.

Trista Knowles led Taylor County with 12 serves, nine points, as well as five aces, while Mackenzie Nowlin gathered up six serves, one point and three kills.

The Lady Bulldogs were hoping to get back on track last night (Thursday) as they played host to Hamilton County while trying to even their record at .500 on the season.

Stephens catches first TD of his Gator career

A wide-open Moral Stephens easily hauled in an 18-yard touchdown pass in the second quarter against Kentucky this past weekend, to record his first touchdown reception as a University of Florida Gator.

Despite the easy score, the Gators dropped to 1-1 following a 27-16 loss to Kentucky.

Gator tight ends have not been utilized as much as expected through the first two games under new Florida Head Coach Dan Mullen, who has incorporated the position into his offensive passing attack at previous coaching jobs.

Out of 65 completed passes through their first two games, only five have gone to the tight end position.

Lucas Krull has two receptions on the year for 33 yards, while fellow tight end Kemore Gamble has two receptions on the year for 19 yards.

Stephens has just one catch on the year for an 18-yard touchdown, and is the only tight end with a touchdown reception so far this season.

Stephens now has eight receptions for 173 yards and one touchdown during his career with the Gators.

He looks to add to those statistics this Saturday when Florida hosts Colorado State at "The Swamp" in Gainesville.

Teammates celebrate with Moral Stephens. The former Taylor County Bulldog caught a touchdown pass from Gators quarterback Feleipe Franks.

Mock and Wilson reel in largest fish in 'Fishing for Zack' tourney

A "Fishing for Zack" Benefit Fishing Tournament was held this past Saturday, Sept. 8 off the Taylor County coast, with many big-hearted anglers donating their time and entry fees toward a good cause while in pursuit of the largest trout and redfish.

All proceeds from the tournament went to benefit Zack Knowles and his family after the 7-year-old was diagnosed with leukemia on Mother's Day this year. He continues to undergo treatment at Shands in Gainesville.

Weigh-in was held at Rocky's and awarded the anglers with the three largest trout and redfish a plaque and some cash to carry home.

Ashley Mock bagged the largest trout (3.18 lbs.), while Steve Taylor was a close second with a 2.83-pound trout, followed by Arthur Wilson with a 2.18-pound trout.

In addition to his third-place trout catch, Wilson also won first place for catching the largest redfish (5.6 lbs.).

Jordan Tyler had the second-largest redfish, weighing in at 5.44 pounds, followed by Phillip Shiver in third place with a 4.7-pound redfish.

Keaton Beach Fishing Report

Trout are biting with the breeze

By PAT MCGRIFF onemorecast@tcom.net

Trout were biting this past week - when the breeze would carry you - but they would shut down when the lack of wind would cause you to hover, which is pretty much a common problem while drift fishing the grass flats.

We managed eight trout for the Mike Sugar trip on Saturday and did a kind of "bus stop" style of fishing -- picking up one here and one there on the next stop before finally getting three fish on the final drift of the day.

We missed a few, but generally it was slow fishing with only the breeze to blame, because we had great folks and great bait. The trout just weren't that interested in us.

Jimmy Douglas went out Tuesday with Curtis Johnson and Jimmy Benefield, all from Homerville, Ga. and they brought in a limit of good trout measuring up to 19 inches fishing with live pinfish under Back Bays and Cajun Thunders from 5-6 feet of water.

Cemetery to be dedicated, turned over Sunday

whose name is still known today.

The church and cemetery were on the threshold of being lost to the past except for the interest of a one Hale descendant -- James Lee.

Quite by chance, Lee connected with a long-lost cousin -- also a great-great-grandson of Henry Hale. Family lore held that Hale's final wish as he lay dying in the Civil War prison camp was that his personal belongings, including a pocketknife and change purse, be sent back to his family in Cabbage Grove.

Lee said he was overcome with emotion when his cousin, John Hale, revealed that he had been entrusted with their grandfather's pocketknife and change purse. Lee said the experience of being able to hold the items that once belonged to his distant ancestor evoked feelings he will never forget.

It was also at this time Lee discovered that Hale's widow, Amanda, was buried in the cemetery of the Cabbage Grove Church.

Armed with this piece of history about his great-great-grandmother, Lee began a journey that eventually led to the "rediscovery" of the cemetery.

On Sunday, the restored Cabbage Grove Cemetery will be formally dedicated and handed over to Oakland Baptist Church for perpetuity.

The dedication will be part of Oakland's 143rd Homecoming celebration, which will start with morning services at 11:30, followed by dinner on the grounds featuring the traditional mullet and swamp cabbage staples.

The dedication will take place at 1:45 p.m.

Cabbage Grove Cemetery's new dawn began in November 2017 when the Taylor County Commission appointed Lee, Robert Lynn and Rodney Lee (James Lee's nephew) to locate and restore the historic cemetery.

Maps, photos and personal interviews with former Cabbage Grove residents helped the men close in on their search.

In early March of this year, Dr. Mary Glowacki, state archaeologist and chief of the Florida Bureau of Archaeological Research and members of her staff met with the committee, helping them secure the assistance of the Department of State in locating and reestablishing the recognition of the Cabbage Grove Cemetery.

On a brisk morning a few weeks later, the Lees and Lynn were at the cemetery site with Suzi Goodhope and her two Belgian Malinois cadaver dogs, Shiraz and Fletch.

Over the next several hours, Goodhope searched the area and placed pink markers where the K9s "hit" on possible gravesites.

Further investigation with a mobile ground penetration radar confirmed the presence of 11 casket signals.

A fence has been placed around the borders of the cemetery and a granite slab will soon be set at the site to mark the final resting place of Taylor County's earliest pioneers.

"Cemeteries are poignant memorials that commemorate the existence and heritage of past communities. No effort should be spared in protecting the sacred burial grounds of our forefathers, wherever they may be found," committee members said.

Suzie Goodhope is an experienced human remains detection dog handler who has participated in more than 75 searches for human remains. Above, she prepares her senior K-9 "Shiraz" for a search at Cabbage Grove Cemetery.

Garner is out for bloody vengeance in the action-packed 'Peppermint'

Back in 2008, director Pierre Morel gave us "Taken," a film that turned Liam Neeson into an action star and made parents around the world afraid to let their daughters out of their sight.

After a few less successful outings, Morel is now back with "Peppermint," which replaces Neeson with Jennifer Garner ("Miracles from Heaven"), a missing daughter with a murdered family and Paris, France with a big city in California. Otherwise it is essentially the same movie, in which our main character mows through countless bad guys in brutal, bloody fashion.

While Neeson's Bryan Mills was searching for his daughter, Garner's Riley North is simply out for blood, determined to deliver vengeance on not only those she holds responsible for her family's death, but also those who allowed them to go free. The resulting film, which is steadfastly single-minded in its black-and-white moral landscape, is decent popcorn action despite the script's numerous problems.

At the beginning of "Peppermint," we are introduced to the North family, consisting of the mother, Riley, father Chris, (Jeff Hephner, "Chicago Med"), and cute daughter Carly (Cailey Fleming, "Star Wars: The Force Awakens"). Unfortunately, the family isn't in the best financial situation, which tempts Chris to make a pretty stupid decision. Pretty soon a local drug gang is involved, and Chris and Carly are dead. Making matters worse, the drug gang has connections inside the criminal justice system, allowing the killers to walk, leading Riley to disappear off the map.

Five years later, everyone involved in the North family killings start showing up dead, and police detectives Moises Beltran (John Ortiz, "Kong: Skull Island") and Stan Carmichael (John Gallagher Jr., "10 Cloverfield Lane") begin to suspect Riley may be involved. Of course, she is, having spent the previous five years training and preparing for the day she could extract her pound of flesh.

I've said this before in reviews of certain movies, but it bears repeating. Most films today love to live in the moral gray area, and to be completely honest, those stories tend to be deeper and more fulfilling to watch. But, the dearth of simple, straight-forward good-guys-versus-bad-guys flicks means it can be refreshing when we actually get one. "Peppermint" is never once interested in the morality of its characters' actions or revenge in general. In many stories today, revenge is shown as resulting in a cycle of violence, tacking on a moral lesson about why we should avoid it. There is a point in "Peppermint" where I thought it might be heading do the same, but I was wrong. And I don't mind being wrong in this case.

There is a moment early in the film, when the North family is still alive and well, in which Riley tries to teach her daughter a lesson about violence not being the answer. That moment is revisited later in the movie in a way you might not expect, further showing the film is relishing in this new version of Riley. In the real life, that would be a horrible choice, but this movie isn't about the real world.

While most of us don't want to admit it, there is no small level of satisfaction in watching someone (on screen) unapologetically ending their enemies in bloody fashion. I've never been one to subscribe to the idea that movie violence begets actual violence. If anything, I think such movies allow a release that prevents some violence. But, that's a conversation for another day, and frankly, with a better movie than "Peppermint."

The biggest issues with "Peppermint" revolve around its script. It is about as threadbare as it can be while still providing enough reason for Riley to go on her revenge spree. Even then, there are several plot threads that don't seem to get any sort of resolution. Additionally, the characters have no depth whatsoever outside of Riley. The only one the script even tries to develop is Carmichael, whose character could have been interesting, but instead simply serves as the film's lone attempt at a surprise that somehow manages to be both nonsensical and completely telegraphed at the same time.

The best thing the movie has going for it is Garner, who despite not starring in an action movie since leaving "Alias" in 2005, delivers the same scary, determined parent that Neeson gave us in "Taken." Her performance, both from an acting standpoint as well as the physicality involved, is the main reason to see this movie. Helping her out is the fact that Morel knows how to direct a good action movie.

"Peppermint" is a straightforward revenge flick, and never once tries to be anything more. It still manages to provide a decent level of popcorn entertainment due to Garner's performance and the film's single-minded pursuit of vengeance.

The movie is rated R for strong violence and language throughout.

Mystery, dinner and '40s radio meet in 'The Sound of Murder'

The Monticello Opera House has opened its 2018-19 season with "The Sound of Murder," a murder mystery set in a 1940s radio studio.

The owner of the station is desperately trying to keep it on the air, but times are tough. His son, the manager, wants the station to fail so that he can get involved with the wonderful new technology -- television.

There is a murder, and everyone has motive and opportunity.

The wacky cast of characters includes Freddy (or Frieda), the harried stage manager; Robert, the station manager and the owner's son; Shelly, a young and inexperienced actress, girlfriend of Robert and ex-sweetheart of Foley; Sir Gilbert, former Shakespearian star, down on his luck; Vivian, leading lady, never far from her next martini; and Foley, a shy farm boy and Shelly's ex-boyfriend.

The murder mystery dinner theatre is presented by the Opera House Stage Company.

Dinner will be catered by Cruton & Company. The menu includes chicken piccata served on angel hair pasta, green beans, salad and bread pudding with whiskey sauce.

Remaining showtimes are Sept. 21 and 22 at 7:30 p.m. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Reservations are required and must be made before 9 a.m. two days before the show date.

Tickets are $35 for dinner and show (a $2 service fee will be assessed on online orders. For more information or to purchase tickets, visit www.monticellooperahouse.org

Featured musicians are the Bryan James Band and Andy Pursell. Other activities include food vendors and a beer garden hosted by the Perry Rotary Club. Admission is $5 – but donations will also be accepted at the gate. Proceeds from the seafood vendor will also go toward the fund ($1 per plate and $1 for every funnel cake sold). Tickets are available at the Perry-Taylor County Chamber of Commerce office located at 428 N Jefferson St.

THIS WEEKEND AT THE MOVIES

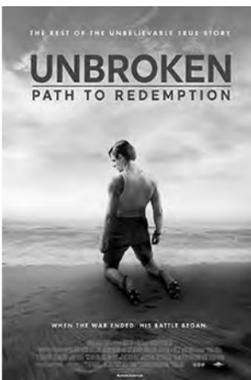

As I said last week, you never know what September will bring week to week, and this time we have four new films to consider.

Up first is "The Predator," the fourth film to feature the universe's most deadly hunters (if you don't count the "Alien vs. Predator" movies). Directed by Shane Black ("Iron Man 3"), this one follows the Predators' return to Earth after a young boy (Jacob Tremblay, "Room") accidentally signals them. Smarter, stronger and more evolved than ever before, they are ready for a new hunt. Standing in their way is a rag-tag group of soldiers and misfits. The cast includes Sterling K. Brown ("This Is Us"), Olivia Munn ("Six"), Keegan-Michael Key ("Key and Peele"), Thomas Janes ("A-X-L") and Yvonne Strahovski ("Chuck"). "Iron Man 3" divided Marvel fans, but Black has made several solid movies, so this one has a chance of righting the Predator ship.

The movie is rated R for strong bloody violence, language throughout and crude sexual references.

"A Simple Favor" is the latest film from director Paul Feig ("Bridesmaids," "Ghostbusters") and represents a darker direction than his usual works, with a screenplay written by Jessica Sharzer ("Nerve", "American Horror Story") and based on the book by Darcy Bell. The story follows mommy blogger Stephanie Smothers (Anna Kendrick, "Pitch Perfect"), who one day befriends the sophisticated and mysterious Emily (Blake Lively, "Gossip Girl"). When Emily disappears, Stephanie is plunged into a maelstrom of secrets, mysteries and intrigue. Feig can be rather hit or miss with me, but the trailers are interesting, making "A Simple Favor" one of the most intriguing movies of September.

The film is rated R for sexual content and language throughout, some graphic nude images, drug use and violence.

"Unbroken: Path to Redemption" is essentially a sequel to 2014's "Unbroken," which told the true story of Louis Zamperini, a U.S. soldier captured by the Japanese during World War II. He suffered through horrible treatment while their prisoner. That film ended with his rescue near the end of the war, which was essentially the first half of Laura Hillenbrand's book about Zamperini's life. The rest of his story, as told in this film, shows Louis' struggle to find balance after such horrific treatment, coming close to ruining his life and his family before finding the faith following a chance encounter with Evangelist Billy Graham. While the films tell two parts of the same story, everyone involved with "Path to Redemption" is new, including director (Harold Cronk, "God's Not Dead"), the screenwriters and even the studio. Additionally, Samuel Hunt ("Chicago P.D.") replaces Jack O'Connell as Louis, while Will Graham plays his grandfather, Bill Graham.

The movie is rated PG-13 for thematic content and related disturbing images.

Finally, we have "White Boy Rick," another film based on a true story, this time about Richard Wershe Jr. (newcomer Richie Merritt), who became a drug kingpin in Detroit, Michigan in the 1980s and eventually turned FBI informant, all before the age of 16. The cast also includes Matthew McConaughey ("Interstellar") as Rick's father as well as Rory Cochrane ("Hostiles"), Eddie Marsan ("Deadpool 2") and Bruce Dern ("Chappaquiddick"). The film is directed by Yann Demange ("71"), and based on the trailers, it will have a very '80s look. This is not a story I knew anything about prior to seeing the trailers, but it does look interesting if you like true-crime flicks.

The film is rated R for language throughout, drug content, violence, some sexual references and brief nudity.
