The Senators seem to stand more in awe of Aldrich than of Taft.

Charles W. Fairbanks must be running for Vice-President of Japan.

We fear Mrs. Howard Gould is not a very good anti-prohibition argument.

Dr. Charles Eliot's praise has not yet put "Paradise Lost" among the six best sellers.

If President Taft doesn't get up some sort of scrap soon we shall fear he has forgotten those "policies."

Secretary Nagel finds that loafing for the Government is one of the leading occupations in Washington.

Every time the Democrats invent a new scheme that is any good the Republicans take it away from them.

What a power in life are the little kindnesses, courtesies and thoughtful considerations that people display in their social intercourse.

"Don't wed men; fight them," says Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. So many women prefer to do first the one, then the other, however.

When men decide what they will not do it clears the way in large measure for the proper performance of what they intended to do.

The Teddy-bear makers have become bankrupt. If this is all that is to happen to them the public is a long way from being even.

The Senate appropriated $10,000 in five minutes. But these attempts to break the spending record are not so popular with the country just now.

It is cautiously intimated that Peary has discovered the North Pole. If he has it will certainly save Mr. Wellman much trouble and inconvenience.

William T. Stead proposes opening a bureau to establish communications with spirits. If he will go to Georgia he'll find spirits in almost any sort of old bureau.

The moral delinquencies of the idle rich and the business delinquencies of the criminal rich now show that some good old-fashioned righteousness is sorely needed in some quarters.

With their suggestion of going up 25,000 feet in a balloon and other plans for signaling to Mars some college professors are getting talked about a good deal and in addition get their pictures in the papers. Perhaps that is what some of them have been seeking after.

Two tercentennial celebrations of more than passing interest will be witnessed this year—one of the discovery of Lake Champlain by Samuel Champlain, the other of the Hudson river by Henry Hudson. It is a peculiar coincidence that those two redoubtable and distinguished explorers, utterly unknown to each other, were the same summer exploring in the same region, that once they were within 60 miles of each other and that each independently reached the conclusion that the river, now called the Hudson, was not the northwest passage to China.

Army officers are greatly rejoiced over the first modification of the ninety-mile ride prescribed by President Roosevelt as a physical test for all field officers. The Secretary of War has determined to make exceptions in the case of certain senior officers of the ordnance department and the engineer corps, and all officers who have reached the age of sixty-two. These will be required to take the ride but surgeons making the subsequent physical examination will be instructed to be far more lenient with them than with the younger men and officers of the line.

Every once in a while we read of a wedding in connection with some show or entertainment, the bait offered to the couple usually being a purse of money or some pieces of furniture. The sensational character of the affair generally draws a crowd, and that is what the managers are after, therefore from their point of view the attraction is a success because it pays.

From the evidence given at the Gould trial it would seem that it takes about one hour to properly arrange the hair of a so-called society woman, and several more hours to dress her for company. Certainly fine feathers ought to make fine birds, yet we venture to say that a woman thus furnished and gowned with so much care does not present nearly as pleasing an appearance as the woman who with far less expenditure of time and money is becomingly dressed, for in her case there is a naturalness that attracts while with the other there is an artificialness that may dazzle but does not please.

A noted ecclesiastic recently said the world is getting worse instead of better. He is evidently a pessimist whose pessimism is not justified. To be sure if one looks at the question within narrow limits of time and space he may see no progress. To compare the moral condition of the world today with yesterday may reveal nothing, but the comparison of decade with decade and century with century does. That the millennium is still in the far distance most people will admit, but any average student of history can see that the world as compared with former ages has made a great advance.

It is often said that everyone is more or less superstitious. Probably that is so, but it is to be hoped that it is less rather than more. But the credulity of many people due to their superstition makes them the easy prey of clairvoyants, mediums and other charlatans without number. Not long ago a woman gave a promissory note for $30,000 to a medium who represented that with that amount in her possession she could avert a great danger threatening the woman and which danger had been supernaturally revealed to her.

Starved to Death Is what could truthfully be said of many children who die. They have worms, poor little things—they don't know it and you don't realize it. If your child is cross, fretful, pasty-complexioned and loses weight for no apparent reason, give it White's Cream Vermifuge—you will be surprised at the results and how quickly it picks up. Sold by W. M. Johnson.
