NAS Jax passes VPP inspection with flying colors

By Reggie Jarrett
Editor, Jax Air News

Naval Air Station (NAS) Jacksonville underwent inspection for the Voluntary Protection Program (VPP) last week and passed with no violations enabling the base to maintain the “Star” status it has held since 2010.

“VPP is a certification of your safety program,” said Ron Williamson, safety manager for NAS Jacksonville. “You get a Star certification if your program meets all of the elements that the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has for the Voluntary Protection Program.”

Williamson stated that less than one-tenth of one percent of all industries in America are Star certified.

NAS Jacksonville Commanding Officer Capt. Mike Connor expressed his gratitude after hearing the news the base was recertified.

“Thank you is not enough to express my appreciation for your focus, attention to detail, and ownership of spaces,” he wrote in a message to the base. “The OSHA team was very impressed with your compliance with safety directives, attitudes, performance and condition of the spaces. As I told the OSHA team, the executive officer, command master chief, department heads and I know we have an outstanding team. It is nice to hear that sentiment validated by an outside agency.” Connor also stressed to his Sailors that now the certification process is over, the focus on safety doesn’t stop. “Even though the VPP inspection is behind us, continue and improve upon our safety processes and adhere to our safety policy so we can become an even better model of safety compliance within the Department of Defense (DoD), Department of the Navy and private sector.”

OSHA created VPP in 1982 to promote effective worksite-based safety and health.

NAS Jax Sailor wins gold, bronze medals in Warrior Games

By MC1 Brian G. Reynolds
NAS Jax Assistant Public Affairs Officer

A U.S. Navy Sailor stationed aboard Naval Air Station (NAS) Jacksonville brought home two gold and one bronze medal in the 2018 Department of Defense Warrior Games in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

CS2 Mario Ingram won a gold medals in track and field and seated volleyball; and won a bronze medal in wheelchair basketball.

“It feels awesome,” Ingram said. “It still feels surreal. I’m still kind of bummed about powerlifting though. I wish I would have won powerlifting. [Ingram chuckled].”

The games, hosted this year by the U.S. Air Force at the Air Force Academy, were open to ill and wounded service members.

In 2016 Ingram was diagnosed with Stage 2 Non-Hodgkins Lymphoma. After much treatment and surgery, the cancer is now in remission. Because of his illness, Ingram was asked to compete in the Warrior Games in 2017.

“I just wanted to be alone at the time,” Ingram said.

“I didn’t want to be bothered by anything. I didn’t want to be around people or any of that stuff. After a while, though, I was like ‘what the heck?’ So, I gave it a shot.”

Ingram ended up winning a gold and bronze medal in the 2017 Warrior Games.

Because of his success, Ingram, along with eight other athletes were asked to meet with one of the coordinators of the Warrior games after a training in California.

“I walked into the room and the coordinator told us, ‘We had you all come here because we want you to compete in the Invictus Games,’” Ingram said.

“I was like, ‘Cool, I’ll enjoy my 15 min-

A new rating modernization initiative will provide active duty, senior enlisted Sailors looking for their next billet the opportunity to get a jump on the process thanks to a new selection board pilot program, the Navy announced June 14.

Patrol Squadron (VP) 26, completed the operational readiness evaluation (ORE), qualifying 12 combat aircrews, June 15.

“The completion of ORE is a major milestone for the squadron as a whole,” said Lt. Cmdr. Travis Ream, VP-26 training officer. “It marks the culmination of the Fleet Readiness Training Program (FRTTP), for the crews, and qualifies them to operate in a deployed status.”

Though it is normally broken up over the course of a few months, as a whole, ORE is roughly two weeks long and evaluates the aircrews through graded flights and simulations as well as written tests.

ORE also evaluated the readiness of the “Trident” Intelligence Department.

Sailors assigned to Combat Air Crew 4 of Patrol Squadron (VP) 26 fly a P-8A Poseidon aircraft during a demonstration flight for Maritime Training Activity Sama Sama 2017 in Cebu, Philippines in June 2017. The squadron recently completed their operational readiness evaluation qualifying 12 combat aircrews.

“Intel is evaluated on all of the tasks they will be required to perform on an actual deployment,” said Lt. Shaun Lillard, VP-26 intelligence officer. “They conduct graded pre-mission briefs and Intel updates and are also evaluated on their ability to interpret post mission products.”

With the completions of ORE, Trident aircrew has now completed FRTTP, which also consisted of the Advanced Readiness Program, which evaluated the crew’s abilities to operate as a crew, and an inspection from the Fleet NATOPS Evaluation Team, which tested the Trident instructor cadre as well as the squadron’s NATOPS program.

The Tridents are homeported at Naval Air Station Jacksonville and are currently undergoing FRTTP in preparation for their upcoming deployment.

Commissary savings remain at mandated levels

By Kevin L. Robinson, DeCA Public Affairs Specialist

Commissary savings remain at more than 23 percent, according to price comparisons of fiscal 2016 and 2017 sales.

"When you do the math, the value of the commissary benefit continues to add up for our patrons when compared to commercial retailers outside the gate," said Robert Bianchi, the interim director and CEO of the Defense Commissary Agency.

Congress requires that DeCA maintain savings at levels that are reasonably consistent with the fiscal 2016 baseline savings level, even as commissaries look to improve the patron shopping experience by integrating commercial business practices such as variable pricing and private label brands. The current savings methodology helps DeCA and Congress better monitor and protect patron savings, Bianchi said.

"Since 2016, we've used this calculation to take a deeper dive into what those numbers represent," Bianchi said. "Now we have a clearer picture of the benefit's value, reflecting savings as they apply to the products our patrons buy most and the regional cost of living where they shop."

From the latest commissary market basket comparisons, DeCA's annual global savings for fiscal 2017 is 23.32 percent, down slightly from the 23.65 percent reported for 2016. The overall percentage is a sales-weighted average of U.S. and overseas savings.

The savings decline was attributed to a combination of lower savings in certain U.S. regions and a drop in overseas savings linked to a lower average cost of living Allowance (COLA) in fiscal 2017; COLA fluctuations have a direct impact on DeCA's level of overseas savings.

Historically, DeCA measured savings globally, by comparing national prices at commissaries against average market prices for the whole country. However, the cost of living varies by region. To account for these geographic differences, Congress now requires DeCA to report on savings regionally, comparing prices with two-to-three commercial grocers, including super centers, in the local area of each commissary in the United States.

Commissaries also expanded the range of items in its savings comparisons. In addition to measuring 38,000 items at a national level, DeCA is comparing local prices on about 1,000 products, which are representative of a shopper's typical market basket.

"Sustaining the overall level of patron savings for our valued customers is a top priority and monitored very closely by the DeCA team," said Chris Burns, the agency's executive director for Business Transformation. "I am very pleased that DeCA continues to offer significant savings on items that our patrons purchase - savings that can help them stretch their budget."

"Although market fluctuations will cause prices of grocery products to increase and decrease," Burns added, "our patrons can rely on the fact that the value of their commissary benefit will not change."

NAS Jax YAC Summer Camp offers good time

By Staff

Naval Air Station Jacksonville (NAS Jax) Youth Activities Center (YAC) 2018 Summer Camp is hosting nearly 200 youths daily to enjoy the center's services and programming throughout the summer.

The camp offers numerous daily programs at the facility, with highlights including a trip to the Museum of Science and History, Jacksonville Zoo and Gardens, Adventure Landing, movie trips, and water activities at the NAS Jax Outdoor Pool and Mulberry Cove Marina.

YAC Director Jason McKenzie has managed this summer camp for several years.

"The purpose of this camp is to provide educational and fun events, so learning can continue throughout the summer," he said.

"Of course, safety is our number one concern by our staff, which we incorporate all year long."

The camp hosts daily programs for different age groups of kids every day and each featuring a wide variety of activities. Some include life science learning, coloring and painting in the art room, educational computer games in the computer room and learning in the Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics room.

The camp also offers other activities outside of these rooms to keep all of the kids entertained and active throughout the day.

Recently the camp hosted a fun run for the children and they spent the week preparing for the competition. Preparation activities included running drills, as well as stretching and running short distances. The distances increased each day of the week. The fun run offered three different distances based on age groups. The five to eight-year-old children ran a half-mile, nine to 10-year-olds ran a mile, and the 11 to 12-year-olds ran two miles. Parents were invited to join in the event.

The camp also takes regular trips to the NAS Jax Outdoor Pool. Tuesdays are for the younger kids to play in the splash pad, while others swim in the pool. On Thursdays, the older children use the pool and are separated by age, arriving at different times. All the kids who use the pool must pass a swimming test at the beginning of the summer or wear a life vest.

"I'm enjoying meeting new people and having so much fun," said first-time camper Amber Roberts.

One of the big events the summer camp offers each year is a trip to the Jacksonville Zoo and Gardens. The children are divided into groups and spend the day viewing the animals. Lunch is provided to give them a break from touring.

Some of the other excursions planned for the summer campers include a trip to the St. Augustine Alligator Farm, kayak and paddleboarding, as well as a day at Adventure Landing.

They also have a theater production coordinated by Missoula Children's Theatre. The traveling group will work with the children on acting and teach them about make-up. Everyone is encouraged to attend their show, "Robin Hood" on July 20 and the annual YAC Talent Show July 21.

FRCSE Command Master Chief honored by former Jacksonville Jaguars player

By Clifford Davis
FRCSE Public Affairs

Former Jacksonville Jaguars great Donovan Darius honored Fleet Readiness Center Southeast (FRCSE) Command Master Chief Donald Henderson June 9 with his All-Pro Service Award.

The Donovan Darius Foundation's 2018 Father's Day Celebration Event was held at Daily's Place, and honored more than 3,000 fathers and father figures for their roles in the community.

"I truly believe this, and I shared this with him, the legacy you leave is the life that you lived," Darius said in a phone call to FRCSE. "He's done a tremendous job of leaving a legacy with the people he's led, the people he's served with and the people he's protected and fought for."

"He'll forever be remembered because of what he did."

Henderson is wrapping up a 30-year naval career in July that has seen nearly every corner of the globe. In an aviation maintenance career mostly spent aboard carriers, he's transited the Suez Canal six times.

He took part in carrier deployments in support of operations Desert Storm, Southern Watch, Iraqi Freedom, Enduring Freedom and Inherent Resolve.

However, he was nominated for excellence in his current role as command master chief - a role that emphasizes training, caring for and promoting the careers of his Sailors.

"To me, he is the perfect master chief. He takes care of his Sailors, and wants to see them promoted, which improves their quality of life," said the person who nominated him, Greater Jacksonville USO Operations Director and retired master chief Bob Ross.

"Whenever we get donations, like tickets and stuff like that, his number one thought is always the junior military personnel who otherwise could not afford to attend these events."

For Henderson, who is used to nominating his Sailors for awards, the whole ordeal came as a shock. FRCSE Executive Officer Col. Fred Schenk told him they were attending as representatives of the command.

"We were seated at a table in front of the stage when a woman comes and gets me and escorts me on the stage," he said. "Next thing you know, I'm standing there with Donovan Darius, holding a trophy and thinking, 'What just happened?'"

For Henderson, though he was honored, the moment came with a sense of introspection.

"I really didn't feel like I deserved it."

As it is with most men and women who serve in our nation's military, Henderson's distinguished career came with sacrifice. Serving as a father figure to his Sailors came at a cost.

"I've always thought of myself as a good example to my sons, given my work ethic and being a provider, serving my country, loving my country and loving my family," he said.

"If I have any regrets, I'd say I truly missed a lot of time with my kids."

"I find that I'm making a lot of it up now, and I'm going to embark on my next chapter of being a better father and a better husband."

Darius said he wanted to make sure Henderson knew those sacrifices were appreciated.

"At this next chapter of his life, a chapter that may be unknown to him because he's spent so much of his life in one area, I wanted him to know that I honor and appreciate what he did," Darius said.

"As he moves forward, the positive impact he's made on so many lives will never be forgotten, but the next chapter will be even greater than his last."

For Ross, there's no doubt Henderson has made a tremendous impact.

"The only thing he ever wanted was to see them excel, contribute to the mission and let them know how important they were - no matter if they were an E1 or an E9, they're part of the team," Ross said.

"I wish I'd had a master chief like him when I was coming up through the ranks."

duty senior enlisted Sailors apply for specific priority leadership billets listed in the NAVADMIN and, if selected, are temporarily advanced to the billet pay-grade.

To be permanently advanced, Sailors must be selected for advancement by the senior chief or master chief petty officer selection boards.

"This program will give motivated Sailors an opportunity to take on positions of greater responsibility, while at the same time helping the Navy to better align our senior enlisted leaders to the places we need them to be," said Capt. Rick Cheeseman, director, Career Management Department, Navy Personnel Command.

The selection board is scheduled to convene Aug. 13; applications to the board must be postmarked no later than July 9. For Sailors to be eligible, they must meet the following criteria:

- Must meet all eligibility requirements for the regularly scheduled FY-19 active-duty SCPO or MCPO advancement selection boards.

- Applicants must receive a favorable endorsement from their commanding officer (CO) via a NAVPERS 1306/7.

- Applicants must sign, and have their CO witness, a NAVPERS 1070/613 with the following statement: "I understand that by submitting an application for consideration by the FY-19 Senior Enlisted Advancement-to-Vacancy Pilot Selection Board I am certifying that I am assignable to any billets for which I applied and will execute orders to those billets if directed."

- Applicants must possess any required Navy Enlisted Classification (NEC) codes for the billets advertised or have the experience to obtain the NEC en-route to the billet. Specific prerequisites for each billet are outlined in the NAVADMIN.

Sailors who have submitted voluntary Fleet Reserve/retirement requests are not eligible.

A full list of available billets, board application and communication procedures can be found in the NAVADMIN at <https://www.public.navy.mil/bupersnpc/reference/messages/Documents/NAVADMINS/NAV2018/NAV18144.txt>.

NAS Jacksonville first qualified as a Star site in 2010. The base was re-certified in 2013. After the initial recertification after three years, the process calls for an inspection every five years to maintain the Star status.

The inspection was carried out June 11-14 by an OSHA lead and four inspectors. The inspectors are safety managers from VPP Star certified corporations, such as NASA and Delta Airlines.

"Everyone has to perform to the OSHA regulations for any business, anywhere in the United States, but under VPP, you have to go above and beyond that standard," said Tom Dwyer, safety program manager for NASA Kennedy Space Center since 1991.

"You have to set a higher standard for your business to be a Star site."

The inspection team toured 16 facilities aboard NAS Jacksonville chosen at random. They interviewed personnel and pored over base safety records.

"We look for improvement," Dwyer said.

"We look for the company to be better than it was the last time we were here. And that they constantly find ways to make it a safer environment for all their employees and management."

One of the NAS Jacksonville facilities inspected by the VPP team was the First Coast Navy Fire and Emergency Services.

"We are always prepared for VPP," said Fire Chief Mark Brusoe. "It is a way of life on NAS Jacksonville."

Brusoe was the fire chief when during the last VPP inspection in 2013 and praised the program for increasing safety awareness.

"VPP is key in reducing injuries and workplace incidents and educating the public on the safety program," he said.

The DoD came out with a directive in 2015 that every shore installation has to have a safety management system. VPP is one of the safety management systems the DoD has approved for use to meet that requirement.

"We were already way ahead of the requirement because we've been doing this since 2010," Williamson said.

Commander, Naval Region Southeast Rear Adm. Bette Bolivar also ordered earlier this year, that all 17 bases under her command will be certified by VPP as a Star site.

Right now, the only three bases meeting that requirement are NAS Jacksonville, Naval Station Mayport, Williamson said the VPP inspection team had "glowing comments" for the NAS Jacksonville Safety program in the 44-page evaluation they sent to the OSHA office in Atlanta.

"We have no deficiencies in our records and no field violations that we have to fix," Williamson said.

"It was an amazing inspection. We have a great workforce here at NAS Jax that embraces the safety culture. They said very clearly that they saw that everywhere they went."

'Tridents' host family picnic

From VP-26 Public Affairs

Patrol Squadron (VP) 26 hosted its annual command picnic June 8, aboard Naval Air Station (NAS) Jacksonville.

The picnic, which was open to all family and friends of the "Tridents," was held in Patriot's Grove Park and included bounce houses and an inflatable obstacle course for the children and a dunk tank sponsored by the Trident First Class Petty Officer Association.

Members of the squadron voted to dunk their favorite squadron-mate. CWO4 Joseph Doyle 'won' the voting with the backing of the Ordnance shop. He said, "The dunk tank is a great way to raise morale and funds to benefit the squadron and future events."

"The annual picnic is a great opportunity for the Trident family to take a pause from our busy schedule," said Cmdr. Michael Haymon, VP-26 commanding officer. "It gives us a chance to get everyone together and enjoy a relaxing afternoon away from work."

Comedian presents comedy with message

By Staff

Resiliency, safety, risk reduction, substance abuse, sexual assault and other topics were presented in a humorous format to Sailors aboard Naval Air Station Jacksonville during a destructive behavior workshop June 12.

Comedian Bernie McGrenahan uses stand-up comedy, with a powerful message.

"How many of you have to be here?" McGrenahan asked as he opened his presentation at Dewey's. As the hands went up, he said, "A mandatory comedy show - that makes me feel good."

McGrenahan shared his experiences and joked about bad decisions, while engaging the audience. He spoke about using fake IDs and friends, which are high-risk factors and getting a DUI arrest.

"What I spent at the bar that night - $35 was nothing compared to what I paid with my reputation being damaged, my a family member's suicide and discusses how to assist when you have concerns with a possibly suicidal person.

"Suicide should never be an option for you. You are important to your family and if you ever see a fellow Sailor down, ask if they are ok," he said.

Two of the show's main underlying messages were that asking for help is a sign of courage not of weakness, and that asking for help should never be stigmatized.

utes in the spotlight."

The Invictus Games, created by Prince Harry, Duke of Sussex, spotlight injured or ill armed services personnel from militaries all over the world to compete in a myriad of sports. This year's Invictus Games will be held in Sydney, Australia.

"The Invictus Games are comprised of teams from 18 nations," Ingram said.

"I'll be doing powerlifting and track and field."

Ingram has undoubtedly risen above his illness to become a true competitor and advises people who have similar setbacks in their lives to stay positive and keep their eyes on the future.

"Grab at something positive and keep at it," Ingram said. "You have to do stuff that will keep you moving on to the next day. My motto is that if there is something bad, it's not going to always be bad. Everything heals with time. Someone always has it worse than you."

School's out, but future docs are in at Naval Hospital Jacksonville

By Yan Kennon
Public Affairs Senior Writer, Naval Hospital Jacksonville

Naval Hospital (NH) Jacksonville hosted its annual Science, Service, Medicine and Mentoring (S2M2) internship at the hospital June 11-15 with 13 high school students from Darnell-Cookman School of the Medical Arts.

"S2M2 helps us grow the next generation of health care professionals," said Capt. Matthew Case, NH Jacksonville commanding officer. "And it allows students the opportunity to witness Navy Medicine first-hand, where we get to care for the most deserving patients in the world."

The goal of NH Jacksonville's S2M2 program is to nurture high school students' commitment to science and medicine in a welcoming and intellectually stimulating environment. The S2M2 partnership with Darnell-Cookman complements the school's focus on equipping high-performing students with the skills to pursue advanced medical degrees.

"My S2M2 internship this week has been eye-opening," said Ricardo Stewart, a rising twelfth grader. "The hands-on experiences with the doctors, nurses and corpsmen helped me learn from the experts and narrow down my decision to be a cardiologist. It was an honor to witness the harmony and precision as the physicians and surgical team worked together to perform an actual knee-replacement on a patient."

In addition to clinical rotations through the operating suites, outpatient clinics, and inpatient units, students participated in hospital corpsman skills training and Trauma Combat Casualty Care's obstacle course. They witnessed how Navy first responders conduct combat trauma care. Students also performed medical procedures on life-like mannequins in the hospital's simulation laboratory, and performed orthopedic procedures on artificial bone and joints.

S2M2 was developed in 2004 by the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, and launched in 2010 at NH Jacksonville. It includes two activities each academic year: a kick-off event in the fall at Darnell-Cookman for about 80 ninth and tenth graders, and a week-long immersion program the next summer at NH Jacksonville for a select group. To date, the hospital has hosted 72 Darnell-Cookman students at its summer internship, and looks forward to working with future students.

like to wear the uniform," he said, "but I pray that you never hurt yourselves because you don't want to ask for help. Secrets keep us sick."

Numerous Sailors in attendance said they appreciated a different kind of approach for the training.

"This was a very meaningful message and it was so much better than just looking at a bunch of slides," said OS2 Noal White of Naval Air Station

Jacksonville's 1st Lieutenant Division.

McGrenahan gave away copies of a book during the show titled, "I Killed," which is a collection of stories from comedians with true road stories. His personal story is about performing in Bosnia in 1998 on a hilltop with 20 men.

McGrenahan is now 29 years sober and has been doing comedy since 1988. His comedy show, "With a Message" has been presented to more than 300 military bases worldwide the last 11 years.
